ECCLESIASTICAL LAW.

PART IV.

DISCIPLINE OF THE CHURCH.

CHAPTER I.

DISCIPLINE OVER THE LAITY.

IN England the authority and power of the ecclesiastical courts as to the laity is founded on a principle, recognized by the unwritten common law, and in part by the statute law, that the ordinary ought in certain matters to administer justice over all persons pro salute animæ. The sentence pronounced by such courts could be enforced only by excommunication, that is, by depriving the person sentenced—according to the greater or less severity of the sentence—of the benefit and use of all or of certain rites of the church. The common and the statute law at different epochs of our history further enforced the sentence by temporal punishments of different kinds.

Sources of the authority of the ecclesiastical courts.

It is unnecessary now to mention how much jurisdiction over really secular matters the ecclesiastical courts under colour of this principle obtained. Indeed, as every act of a Christian man may be said to have some reference to his duty towards God, it is difficult to say why, upon this principle, jurisdiction upon every subject should not be exercised by the spiritual court. The canon law founds the authority of the pope upon this principle, aided by passages of holy writ torn from their context, and misconstrued wilfully or misunderstood grossly (a).

Extent of former jurisdiction.

The jurisdiction over testaments was, perhaps, the most striking example of the application of this principle in England.

Civil jurisdiction.

The office of Lord High Chancellor has long ceased to be holden by an ecclesiastic; and the important jurisdiction over questions of marriage and testamentary law, retained by the

(a) Phil. Intern. Law, vol. ii. pt. 8, chaps. iii., iv.

Criminal

spiritual courts in England longer, I believe, than in any other European country, was transferred to a purely lay tribunal in 1857 (b). And, practically speaking, all civil jurisdiction as to the laity, except such as relates to the fabric and ornaments of the church, the churchyard, and churchwardens, has ceased to be exercised by the spiritual courts. They retain, however, their criminal jurisdiction over the laity within certain limits.

Every religious body must have some means of excluding from its membership those who transgress its rules and set at naught the terms of their communion with it. It must have the power of pronouncing that such persons are, partially or entirely, for a season or for ever, placed out of its communion, that is, excommunicated.

No Christian church can be lawfully compelled to admit to her rites and sacraments those who are by rightful authority pronounced unworthy of them.

The spiritual court in England exercises a jurisdiction in this matter founded, as it has been said, both on common and statute law.

Before the passing of any statute, criminal proceedings might be taken in the spiritual court against a layman for certain offences against religion or morality.

The Canons of 1603 dealt somewhat largely with the discipline of the laity. After the decision of Lord Hardwicke in Middleton v. Crofts (c), it may perhaps be doubted whether all these canons could be enforced; though those which are declaratory of law received in this country, as well as those fortified by statute, are certainly in force, more especially with respect to churchwardens and other ecclesiastical officers. It is unnecessary to say that where these canons are in conflict with any statute, they are clearly inoperative.

The laity whom these canons affect may be classed under three heads.

- I. Impugners of the law relating to the church.
- II. Schismatics.
- III. Offenders generally against religion, morality, and good order in church (d).

Impugners of the law relating to the Church.

I. With respect to the first category, the Canons of 1603 are as follows:—

Canon 2.

Can. 2. "Impugners of the King's Supremacy censured" (e).

[This Canon is set out, supra, pp. 7—8.]

(b) By 20 & 21 Vict. c. 77, as to testamentary cases; and by 20 & 21 Vict. c. 85, as to matrimonial cases.

pp. 69, 75.

(d) These canons, of course, also affect the clergy guilty of the offences condemned by them.

(e) Vide supra, pp. 6—9.

Can. 3. "The Church of England, a true and Apostolical Church. Canon 3.

"Whosoever shall hereafter affirm, That the Church of England, by law established under the king's majesty, is not a true and apostolical church, teaching and maintaining the doctrine of the apostles; let him be excommunicated ipso facto, and not restored, but only by the archbishop, after his repentance, and public revocation of this his wicked error."

Can. 4. "Impugners of the Public Worship of God, established in the Church of England, censured." Canon 4.

Can. 5. "Impugners of the Articles of Religion, established in the Church of England, censured." Canon 5.

"Whosoever shall hereafter affirm, That any of the nine and thirty articles agreed upon by the archbishops and bishops of both provinces, and the whole clergy, in the convocation holden at London, in the year of our Lord God one thousand five hundred sixty-two, for avoiding diversities of opinions, and for the establishing of consent touching true religion, are in any part superstitious or erroneous, or such as he may not with a good conscience subscribe unto; let him be excommunicated ipso facto, and not restored, but only by the archbishop, after his repentance, and public revocation of such his wicked errors."

Can. 6. "Impugners of the Rites and Ceremonies, established in the Church of England, censured." Canon 6.

"Whosoever shall hereafter affirm, That the rites and ceremonies of the Church of England by law established are wicked, antichristian, or superstitious, or such as, being commanded by lawful authority, men, who are zealously and godly affected, may not with any good conscience approve them, use them, or, as occasion requireth, subscribe unto them; let him be excommunicated ipso facto, and not restored until he repent, and publicly revoke such his wicked errors."

Can. 7. "Impugners of the Government of the Church of England by Archbishops, Bishops, &c., censured." Canon 7.

"Whosoever shall hereafter affirm, That the government of the Church of England under his majesty by archbishops, bishops, deans, archdeacons, and the rest that bear office in the same, is antichristian, or repugnant to the Word of God; let him be excommunicated ipso facto, and so continue until he repent, and publicly revoke such his wicked errors."

- Canon 8. Can. 8. "Impugners of the Form of Consecrating and Ordering Archbishops, Bishops, &c., in the Church of England, censured."
 [This Canon is set out, supra, pp. 49 and 91.]

Sc'ismatics. II. With respect to the second category, those Canons are as follows :—

- Canon 9. Can. 9. "Authors of Schism in the Church of England censured."
 "Whosoever shall hereafter separate themselves from the communion of saints, as it is approved by the apostles' rules, in the Church of England, and combine themselves together in a new brotherhood, accounting the Christians, who are conformable to the doctrine, government, rites, and ceremonies of the Church of England, to be profane, and unmeet for them to join with in Christian profession; let them be excommunicated ipso facto, and not restored, but by the archbishop, after their repentance, and public revocation of such their wicked errors."

- Canon 10. Can. 10. "Maintainers of Schismatics in the Church of England censured."
 "Whosoever shall hereafter affirm, That such ministers as refuse to subscribe to the form and manner of God's worship in the Church of England, prescribed in the Communion Book, and their adherents, may truly take unto them the name of another church not established by law, and dare presume to publish it, That this their pretended church hath of long time groaned under the burden of certain grievances imposed upon it, and upon the members thereof before mentioned, by the Church of England, and the orders and constitutions therein by law established; let them be excommunicated, and not restored until they repent, and publicly revoke such their wicked errors."

- Canon 11. Can. 11. "Maintainers of Conventicles censured."
 "Whosoever shall hereafter affirm or maintain, That there are within this realm other meetings, assemblies, or congregations of the king's born subjects than such as by the laws of this land are held and allowed, which may rightly challenge to themselves the name of true and lawful churches; let him be excommunicated, and not restored but by the archbishop, after his repentance and public revocation of such his wicked errors."

- Canon 12. Can. 12. "Maintainers of Constitutions made in Conventicles censured."
 "Whosoever shall hereafter affirm That it is lawful for any sort of ministers and lay persons, or of either of them, to join together and make rules, orders, or constitutions in causes ecclesiastical, without the king's authority, and shall submit themselves to be ruled and governed by them; let them be excommunicated ipso facto, and not be restored until they repent and publicly revoke those their wicked and anabaptistical errors."

Can. 110. "Schismatics to be presented."

Canon 110.

"If the church-wardens, or quest-men, or assistants, do or shall know any man within their parish, or elsewhere, that is a hinderer of the word of God to be read or sincerely preached, or of the execution of these our Constitutions, or a fautor of any usurped or foreign power, by the laws of this realm justly rejected and taken away, or a defender of Popish and erroneous doctrine; they shall detect and present the same to the bishop of the diocese, or ordinary of the place, to be censured and punished according to such ecclesiastical laws as are prescribed in that behalf."

Can. 65. "Ministers solemnly to denounce Recusants and Excommunicates."

"All ordinaries shall, in their several jurisdictions, carefully see and give order that as well those who for obstinate refusing to frequent divine service established by public authority within this realm of England, as those also (especially of the better sort and condition) who for notorious contumacy or other notable crimes stand lawfully excommunicate (unless within three months immediately after the said sentence of excommunication pronounced against them they reform themselves and obtain the benefit of absolution), be every six months ensuing, as well in the parish church as in the cathedral church of the diocese in which they remain, by the minister openly, in time of divine service upon some Sunday, denounced and declared excommunicate (h), that others may be thereby both admonished to refrain their company and society, and excited the rather to procure out a writ De excommunicato capiendo, thereby to bring and reduce them into due order and obedience. Likewise the registrar of every ecclesiastical court shall yearly between Michaelmas and Christmas duly certify the archbishop of the province of all and singular the premises aforesaid."

Can. 66. "Ministers to confer with Recusants."

Canon 66.

"Every minister being a preacher, and having any popish recusant or recusants in his parish, and thought fit by the bishop of the diocese, shall labour diligently with them from time to time, thereby to reclaim them from their errors. And if he be no preacher, or not such a preacher, then he shall procure, if he can possibly, some that are preachers so qualified, to take pains with them for that purpose. If he can procure none, then he shall inform the bishop of the diocese thereof, who shall not only appoint some neighbour preacher or preachers adjoining to take that labour upon them, but himself also, as his important affairs will permit him, shall use his best endeavour by instruction, (h) All publications, however, of this kind are now forbidden by 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 45: vide supra, p. 793.

persuasion, and all good means he can devise, to reclaim both them and all other within his diocese so affected."

These Canons, so far as they respect recusants, are so affected by subsequent legislation as to be inoperative.

Offenders

Canon 109.
Sins punishable by ordinary.

III. With respect to the third category, the Canons, partly supported by the statute law, are as follows:—

By Can. 109, "If any offend their brethren either by adultery, whoredom, incest or drunkenness, or by swearing (i), ribaldry, usury, and any other uncleanness and wickedness of life, the church-wardens or quest-men and side-men in their next presentment to their ordinaries, shall faithfully present all and every of the said offenders to the intent that they and every of them may be punished by the severity of the laws, according to their deserts; and such notorious offenders shall not be admitted to the holy communion, till they be reformed."

Certain offences
anciently punishable in the court
leet.

In ancient times (according to Lord Coke) the king's courts, and especially the leets, had power to inquire of and punish fornication and adultery; and it appears often in the book of Domesday that the king had the fines assessed for those offences which were assessed in the king's courts, and could not be inflicted in the court christian (k).

13 Ed. 1. st. 4.
No prohibition to the spiritual court in cases of penance for deadly sin.

By 13 Edw. 1, st. 4, called the statute of Circumspectè agatis, it is enacted as follows: "The king to his judges sendeth greeting. Use yourselves circumspectly in all matters concerning the Bishop of Norwich and his clergy; not punishing them if they hold plea in court christian of such things as be meer spiritual, that is to wit, of penance enjoined by prelates for deadly sin; as fornication, adultery and such like; for the which sometimes corporeal penance, and sometimes pecuniary is enjoined, specially if a freeman be convict of such things. . . . In all cases afore rehearsed the spiritual judge shall have power to take knowledge, notwithstanding the king's prohibition."

The Bishop of Norwich.]—The Bishop of Norwich is put here only for example; for the statute extends to all the bishops within this realm (l).

Fornication,
&c.

Fornication, Adultery, and such like.]—Here are two examples in particular of matters merely spiritual, which have no mixtures of the temporalities, for the correction of these offences pro salute animæ (n).

And such like.]—These are to be taken for offences of like nature as the two offences here particularly expressed be; as solicitation of any woman's chastity, which is lesser than these, and for incest, which is greater (n).

Solicitation of

court that solicitation of chastity was of ecclesiastical cognizance, but yet it was thought that the prohibition to the ecclesiastical court ought to stand, because the person had been convicted on an indictment for an assault upon the woman with intent to ravish her, and after that, the woman had sued an action of assault and battery against him for the same offence, which action was depending at the same time that the prosecution was in the spiritual court: for the force added to it, which is temporal, makes it cognizable by the temporal courts (o). The court, however, proposed to hear the civilians upon the question: but afterwards, upon an apparent fault in the pleadings, gave judgment for the prohibition without hearing them. It is, however, at least doubtful whether the ecclesiastical court might not have punished for the incontinence.

Incontinence.

In the case of Wheatley v. Fowler, in 1757 (p), Sir Geo. Lee enjoined penance on a methodist preacher for incontinence.

In the case of Harris v. Hicks, a prohibition was moved for to the ecclesiastical court, where a suit was for incest, in marrying his first wife's sister, suggesting that the said second wife was dead, and by his said wife he had a son, to whom an estate was descended as heir to his mother, and that notwithstanding that he had pleaded this matter, they went on to annul the marriage and bastardize the issue. And by the court: A prohibition shall go as to annulling the marriage or bastardizing the issue, but they may proceed to punish the incest (q).

Incest.

In Burgess v. Burgess (r), and in Randall v. Fowles (s), cases of incest were adjudicated upon in the ecclesiastical courts.

By 27 Geo. 3, c. 44, "no suit shall be commenced in any ecclesiastical court for fornication or incontinence . . . after the expiration of eight calendar months from the time when such offence shall have been committed; nor . . . for fornication at any time after the parties offending shall have lawfully inter-married" (t).

27 Geo. 3,
c. 44.Limitation of suits.

Canons 112 of 1603, directing "non-communicants at Easter to be presented," has already been set out (u); and Canon 111, directing disturbers of Divine Service to be presented, has also been given (x).

and 111.

The jurisdiction of the Ecclesiastical Courts of England and Wales in suits for defamation was taken away by the Act of 18 & 19 Vict. c. 41, brought in by Sir Robert Phillimore, the author of this work; the preamble reciting that "the jurisdiction of the ecclesiastical courts in suits for defamation has ceased to

In Ireland.

The jurisdiction of the Irish ecclesiastical courts in suits for defamation was taken away in 1860 by the 23 & 24 Vict. c. 32.

23 & 24 Vict.
c. 32.

Brawling.

The last-mentioned act also took away the jurisdiction of the ecclesiastical courts in England and Ireland in suits against laymen for brawling (z).

29 Car. 2, c. 9.
Blasphemy.

By 29 Car. 2, c. 9, the act for taking away the writ de hæretico comburendo, it is provided that (sect. 2) nothing in the act shall be construed to take away the jurisdiction of the ecclesiastical courts in cases of atheism, blasphemy, heresy or schism, but that they may proceed to punish the same by excommunication, &c. It may be doubtful how far their power in this respect has been taken away by the various toleration acts. Blasphemy is an offence punishable at common law and by statute, 9 Will. 3, c. 35, repealed in part by 53 Geo. 3, c. 160, s. 2 (a). On this subject the following cases may be referred to: The case of James Nailer (b), Rex v. Curl (c), Rex v. Worlston (d), Rex v. Anart (e), Richard Bulton's case in 1794, Moxon's case in the Queen's Bench, Trinity Term, 1841, Gathercole's case (f), The case of a Mr. Jones at Paramatta, in New South Wales (g), and Cowan v. Milbourn (h), where a contract for blasphemous purposes was holden illegal and void.

Perjury.

If perjury be committed in a temporal cause, it is punishable only in the temporal courts; but where it is committed in a spiritual cause, the spiritual judge has authority to inflict canonical punishment, and prohibition will not go (i).

13 Ed. 1, st. 4.

For by the statute of Circumspectè agatis, 13 Edw. 1, st. 4, just cited, “For breaking an oath, it hath been granted that it shall be tried in a spiritual court, when money is not demanded, but a thing done for the punishment of sin; in which case the spiritual judge shall have power to take knowledge, notwithstanding the king's prohibition.”

For although the case be spiritual, and the perjury is committed in the spiritual court, yet the judge there can only punish pro salute animæ; but the party grieved by such perjury must recover his damages at the common law (k).

nation of perjury, shall and may be punished by such usual and ordinary laws as heretofore has been, and yet is used and frequented in the said ecclesiastical court.

In the statute 5 Eliz. c. 23, concerning the writ De excommunicato capiendo, perjury in the ecclesiastical court is specified as an offence (amongst others) for which a person may be excommunicated. 5 Eliz. c. 23.

In the case of The Bishop of St. David's v. Lucy (l), it was said by Holt, C. J., It has been a question whether perjury in the spiritual court can be tried in the temporal; and in all the cases where it has been, the persons have been acquitted, and so it has been ended, but it is not yet settled. Perjury in an ecclesiastical cause.

In Rex v. Lewis (m), an information was moved for against a clergyman, for perjury at his admission to a living, upon an affidavit that the presentation was simoniacal. But the court refused to grant it till he had been convicted of the simony.

There are, however, authorities to show that perjury in any court, not excepting courts ecclesiastical, may be punished by indictment or information in the temporal courts (n), but it must be at common law as it is aided by 2 Geo. 2, c. 25, and not upon the statute 5 Eliz. c. 9.

In Phillimore v. Machon (1876), (o) Lord Penzance said: Speaking generally . . . it cannot, I think, be doubted that a recurrence to the punishment of the laity for the good of their souls by the ecclesiastical courts would not be in harmony with modern ideas, or the position which ecclesiastical authority now occupies in this country. Nor do I think that the enforcement of such powers where they still exist, if they do exist, is likely to benefit the community. But in Mordaunt v. Monereiffe (p), in 1874, Kelly, C. B., reasoned upon the continuance of criminal jurisdiction for adultery in the ecclesiastical court; and in Martin v. Mackonochie (q) (1879), Lord Coleridge, C. J., reasoned upon the continuance and exercise of this jurisdiction in cases of incest. Modern view of this jurisdiction, over laity.

CHAPTER II.

DISCIPLINE OVER THE CLERGY.

Introductory.

Divisions of subject.

THE important subject of the discipline of the clergy may be properly treated of under the following heads:—

- I. The offences which are the subject of ecclesiastical discipline.
- II. The tribunals which exercise the jurisdiction.
- III. The general mode of procedure in courts ecclesiastical.
- IV. The nature of the censures inflicted by ecclesiastical discipline.

Offences.

I. The offences which are the subject of ecclesiastical discipline in the clergy are partly those which are also the subject of ecclesiastical discipline in the laity, partly other offences. They may be classified as follows:—

- (1.) Offences against morality—including offences against the criminal law of the land:
- (2.) Offences against religion—such as blasphemy, heresy, contravening the Thirty-nine Articles of Religion and depraving the Book of Common Prayer:
- (3.) Offences against particular laws of the church in this country—more or less carrying into effect the general law of the church—such as (A) non-residence, plurality of benefices and simony, or (B) such as regard the performance of public worship, both as to the place and as to the manner, as to matters of ritual, and the Statutes of Uniformity:
- (4.) Offences bringing scandal on the condition of the clerical status—(A) by the pursuit of certain secular employments, such as farming beyond the fixed limitation—trading and the like; (B) generally by conduct unbecoming a clerk in holy orders, either in or out of church:
- (5.) Offences against the authority of the ordinary—such as contumacy or disobedience to the lawful commands of the ordinary or of his court:

- (6.) Offences relating to injuries done to the fabric or ornaments of the church, or to alterations of them without a faculty or proper licence from the ordinary :
- (7.) Offences relating to the dilapidation of the house or buildings belonging to the benefice.

II. The tribunals which exercise the jurisdiction over the clergy.

These, except in cases where the law is administered by the bishop and archbishop in person, are at the present time the following :—

- (1.) A preliminary commission of inquiry issued by the bishop :
- (2.) The bishop himself with certain assessors, or a judge delegated by the bishop with certain assessors :
- (3.) The court of the archbishop, which exercises jurisdiction either in the first instance by letters of request, or as a court of appeal :
- (4.) The judge under the Public Worship Act, 1874.
- (5.) The consistory court of the diocese, under the Clergy Discipline Act, 1892.
- (6.) The last court of appeal, the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, whose advice to the crown is usually enforced as a regular sentence by the means of an order in council :
- (7.) The jurisdiction exercised by the ordinary in his visitation :
- (8.) The jurisdiction of convocation (a) over persons, though apparently not without authority from statutes, may be considered as practically incapable of being put in force.

III. The general mode of procedure in courts ecclesiastical. Procedure.

In every ecclesiastical court there are two modes of procedure—the civil and the criminal.

In criminal proceedings the office of the judge is promoted, the meaning of which is that inasmuch as all spiritual criminal jurisdiction is in the hands of the bishop or ordinary (judez ordinarius), his office or function is set in motion, whenever these proceedings are instituted. His permission must therefore be obtained, as will be seen, before the criminal suit can be commenced. The form of proceeding is by a recital of the offence charged, and the law violated by such offence, in a series of articles or counts. The object of all punishment inflicted by the ordinary—a term which is applicable to the bishop or his court—is the promotion of the soul's health by the reformation of the life and moral conduct, or the irreligious and heretical opinion, of the guilty person. It is not unimportant to bear this object in mind, because it has laid in this country the foundation and furnished the limits of all coercive jurisdiction exercised by spiritual authority, as recognized, aided and enforced by the common law.

Censures.

IV. The nature of the censures.

These are various in their degrees of severity, but the same in kind.

- (1.) Simple admonition to abstain for the future from the act or conduct censured. Disobedience, however, to this admonition assumes the grave character of contempt or contumacy, and is visited by a graver punishment :
- (2.) Penance :
- (3.) Suspension—ab ingressu ecclesie :
- (4.) Inhibition under the Public Worship Act, 1874 :
- (5.) Suspension ; relatively to cure of souls :
 - (a) Limited or not as to its subject,—as suspension from office alone, or from office and benefice, that is, from the discharge of spiritual functions alone, or from this discharge and from receiving the fruits or emoluments appertaining to it :
 - (b) Limited as to its duration from a short to a long period :
 - (c) Accompanied or not by an order that after the period of suspension has expired the offender be not re-admitted to his office or benefice until he produce a certificate signed by three clerks in holy orders of the diocese, that he is reformed in his moral conduct, emendatus moribus, such certificate to be approved of by his ordinary :
- (6.) Sequestration of the profits of the benefice, either in some instances as a punishment per se, or as incidental to suspension from office and benefice :
- (7.) Deprivation—that is necessarily from office and benefice—and often, according to the practice in this country, accompanied by a prohibition to officiate within the limits of the depriving authority :
- (8.) Deposition from holy orders.
- (9.) Excommunication :
 - (1) Attended with civil penalties :
 - (2) Spiritual only :
- (10.) Degradation—which consists in a formal removal of the insignia of dress and ornament which mark the office of a clerk—a sentence practically disused in this country since the Reformation ; deprivation, as usually pronounced, or deposition, having in fact attained the same end :

- (11.) The withdrawal by the ordinary of his licence to officiate in his diocese, previously granted to a curate or a person having no benefice therein :
- (12.) The benefice becoming ipso facto void on the committal of certain offences.

In this Part the exercise of criminal jurisdiction over priests and deacons only is considered, the mode of proceeding against accused bishops having been already treated of (b). Subjects of this Part.

It may be that the offence committed is punishable by statute and by general ecclesiastical law, and is cognizable both by courts of common and ecclesiastical law, though diverso intuitu.

Detailed exposition of offences against the law.

Offences against morality and the criminal law.

Canon 75.

Shunning vicious excesses.

THE different heads under which the criminal offences of the clergy may be generally ranged have been already adverted to. It remains to make some more detailed mention of the law applicable to such offences.

First, as to offences against morality generally, and against the criminal law of the land in particular.

Besides the law contained in the general Canon Law and the English provincial constitutions, the 75th Canon of 1603 enacts that—

“No ecclesiastical persons shall at any time, other than for their honest necessities, resort to any tavern or alehouses, neither shall they board or lodge in any such places. Furthermore, they shall not give themselves to any base or servile labour, or to drinking, or riot, spending their time idly by day or by night, playing at dice, cards, or tables, or any other unlawful game. But at all times convenient, they shall hear or read somewhat of the holy Scriptures, or shall occupy themselves with some other honest study or exercise, always doing the things which shall appertain to honesty, and endeavouring to profit the Church of God, having always in mind, that they ought to excel all others in purity of life, and should be examples to the people to live well and christianly, under pain of ecclesiastical censures to be inflicted with severity, according to the qualities of their offences.”

creations.

Nevertheless, Lord Coke says, by the common law of the land, clergymen may use reasonable recreations, in order to make them fitter for the performance of their duty and office. And albeit spiritual persons (he says) are prohibited, by the canon law, to hunt; yet by the common law they may use the recreation of hunting. And after the decease of every archbishop and bishop (amongst other things) the king, time out of mind, has had his kennel of hounds, or a composition for the same (a).

Since the passing of the Clergy Discipline Act, 1840 (3 & 4 Vict. c. 86), various cases of clerks charged with immorality, including brawling (b) and drunkenness, have been tried. The number is not large, having regard to the increase of the clergy in modern times; but it is large relatively to cases of the same kind which happened during the interval between the reigns of Elizabeth and our present Queen. This result is also in great measure to be ascribed to the increased energy of discipline under the improved state of the ecclesiastical courts, and the introduction of vivâ voce evidence (c).

It is said that to charge an unbeneficed clergyman with (d) incontinency is not per se an actionable slander.

Cases since

Act, 1840.

(a) 4 Inst. 309. The 74th Canon and a constitution of Abp. Stratford in 1343 (Lind. 122), on the decent apparel of the clergy, may be here noticed; but they are now obsolete.

(b) The act 23 & 24 Vict. c. 32, which has taken away the jurisdiction of the ecclesiastical courts over the laity for the offence of brawling, retains it for the discipline of the clergy.

SECT. 2.—Offences against Religion.

29 Car. 2,
c. 9.

Blasphemy.

Heresy.

1 Eliz. c. 1.

The second head of offences relate to blasphemy, heresy, contravention of the Thirty-nine Articles of Religion, and depraving the Book of Common Prayer.

1. With respect to Blasphemy.

The statute of 29 Car. 2, c. 9, which abolished the writ de hæretico comburendo, provides that the archbishop, bishops and judges of ecclesiastical courts may still inflict excommunication, deprivation, degradation, and other ecclesiastical censures for the offence of blasphemy (e).

2. As to Heresy.

Dr. Burn says, "Heresy is taken to be a false opinion repugnant to some point of doctrine clearly revealed in Scripture, and either absolutely essential to the Christian faith, or at least of most high importance. But it is impossible to set down all the particular errors which may properly be called heretical, concerning which there are and always have been so many intricate disputes; however the following statute of 1 Eliz. c. 1, which erected the High Commission Court, having restrained the same from adjudging any points to be heretical, but such as are therein expressed; it hath been since generally holden, that although the High Commission Court was abolished by the statute of 16 Car. 1, c. 11, yet those rules will be good directions to ecclesiastical courts in relation to heresy" (f).

This statute, by sect. 17 (sect. 36 in one edition), provided as follows: "Such person or persons to whom your Highness, your heirs and successors, shall hereafter by letters patent, under the great seal of England give authority to have or execute any jurisdiction, power, or authority spiritual . . . shall not in any wise have authority or power to adjudge any matter or cause to be heresy, but only such as heretofore have been determined, ordered, or adjudged to be heresy by the authority of the canonical Scriptures, or by the first four General Councils, or any of them, or by any other General Council wherein the same was declared heresy by the express and plain words of the said canonical Scriptures, or such as hereafter shall be ordered, judged, or determined to be heresy by the high court of parliament of this realm, with the assent of the clergy in their Convocation."

And this is the first boundary that was set to the extent of heresy as to the matter thereof, what only shall be adjudged heresy (g).

The ground of making which limitation was a retrospect to the times in which everything was adjudged heresy, that the Church of Rome thought fit to call by that name, how far soever in its own nature from being fundamental, or from being contrary to the Gospel and the ancient doctrine of the Catholic Church; such as speaking against pilgrimages, against the worship of images, against the necessity of auricular confessions, and the like (h).

Insomuch that the canon law reckons up eighty-eight different sorts of heresy (i).

The act indeed is not so particular and certain as might have been wished; for according to the inclination of the judge, possibly some would determine that to be heresy by the canonical Scriptures which is not at all heresy, nor contrary to the canonical Scriptures; but howsoever it brought heresy to a greater certainty than before (k).

The diocesan, as to ecclesiastical censures, may doubtless proceed to sentence heresy (l). Power of the ordinary.

And so might he have done at common law, before any statute for heresy was made (m).

But it is said that no spiritual judge, who is not a bishop, has this power (n).

And it has been questioned, whether a conviction before the ordinary were a sufficient foundation whereon to ground the writ de hæretico comburendo, as it is agreed that a conviction before the convocation was (o).

For, before the time of Henry 4, the temporal courts would not usually burn the offender without a sentence from a provincial synod (p).

It is certain that a man cannot be proceeded against at the common law in a temporal court merely for heresy; yet if in maintenance of his errors he set up conventicles and raise factions, which may tend to the disturbance of the public peace, it seems that he might have been fined and imprisoned upon an indictment at the common law (q). Power of the temporal courts.

Also a temporal judge may incidentally take knowledge whether a tenet be heretical or not: as where one was committed by force of the statute of 2 Hen. 4, c. 15 (which is now repealed), for saying that he was not bound by the law of God to pay tithes to the curate; and another, for saying that though he was excommunicate before men, yet he was not so before God; the temporal courts, on an habeas corpus in the first case, and an action of false imprisonment in the other, adjudged neither of the points to be heresy within that statute; for the king's courts will examine all things which are ordained by statute (r).

But if a person be proceeded against as a heretic in the spiritual court pro salute animæ, and think himself aggrieved, his proper remedy seems to be, to bring his appeal to a higher ecclesiastical court, and not to move for a prohibition from a temporal one, which, as it seems to be agreed, cannot regularly determine or discuss what shall be called heresy (s).

able.

There is no doubt but that, at the common law, one convicted of heresy, and refusing to abjure it, or falling into it again after he had abjured it, might be burned by force of the writ de hæretico comburendo, which was grantable out of chancery upon a certificate of such conviction; but it is said that he forfeited neither lands nor goods, because the proceedings against him were only pro salute animæ. But at this day, the said writ de hæretico comburendo is abolished by the statute 29 Car. 2, c. 9; and all the old statutes which gave a power to arrest or imprison persons for heresy, or introduced any forfeiture on that account, are repealed.

hæretico com-
away.

By 29 Car. 2, c. 9, s. 1, it is enacted that "the writ commonly called breve de hæretico comburendo, with all process and proceedings thereupon in order to the executing such writ, or following or depending thereupon, and all punishment by death, in pursuance of any ecclesiastical censures, be from henceforth utterly taken away and abolished."

Ecclesiastical
censures

By sect. 2, it is provided, that "nothing in this act shall extend to take away or abridge the jurisdiction of protestant archbishops or bishops, or any other judges of any ecclesiastical courts, in case of atheism, blasphemy, heresy or schism, and other damnable doctrines and opinions; but that they may proceed to punish the same according to his Majesty's ecclesiastical laws, by excommunication, deprivation, degradation, and other ecclesiastical censures not extending to death in such sort and no other, as they might have done before the making of this act."

As they might have done before the making of this Act.]—Upon the abrogating of all the ancient statutes made against heretics, the cognizance of heresy and punishment of heretics returned into its ancient channel and bounds; and now belongs to the archbishop, as metropolitan of the province, and to every bishop within his own proper diocese, who are to punish only by ecclesiastical censures. And so (says Lord Coke) it was put in ure in all Queen Elizabeth's reign; and so it was resolved by the chief justice, chief baron, and two other of the judges upon consultation, in 9 Jac. 1, in the case of Legate, the heretic (t).

But as no person can be indicted or impeached for heresy before any temporal judge, or other that has temporal jurisdiction, so if a heretic be convicted of heresy, and recant, he may not be punished by the ecclesiastical law, as was resolved in 9 Jac. 1, in the case of Nicholas Fuller (u).

3. As to contravention of the Thirty-nine Articles.

By 13 Eliz. c. 12, s. 2, it is enacted that "If any person ecclesiastical, or which shall have ecclesiastical living, shall advisedly maintain or affirm any doctrine directly contrary or repugnant to any of the said articles, and being convented before the bishop of the diocese or the ordinary or before the Queen's Highness commissioners in causes ecclesiastical shall persist therein, or not revoke his error, or after such revocation eftsoons affirm such untrue doctrine, such maintaining or affirming and persisting or such eftsoons affirming shall be just cause to deprive such person of his ecclesiastical promotions; and it shall be lawful to the bishop of the diocese or the ordinary, or the said commissioners to deprive such person so persisting, or lawfully convicted of such eftsoons affirming, and upon such sentence of deprivation pronounced, he shall be indeed deprived."

13 Eliz. c. 12, s. 2.

Ecclesiastics maintaining doctrines contrary to the Articles shall be deprived.

The case of Pelling v. Whiston (x), in 1712, is one of the most remarkable cases of proceedings for contravention of the Thirty-nine Articles in the last century.

Pelling v. Whiston.

Since that time there has been the case of The King's Proctor v. Stone (y); and since that numerous other cases.

The King's Proctor v. Stone.

In the case of The King's Proctor v. Stone, Lord Stowell said as follows:—

"This offence is laid under the statute 13 Eliz. c. 12, 'for 'advisedly maintaining or affirming doctrines directly contrary 'or repugnant to the articles of religion.' These articles are not the work of a dark age (as it has been represented); they are the production of men eminent for their erudition, and attachment to the purity of true religion. They were framed by the chief luminaries of the reformed church, with great care, in convocation, as containing fundamental truths deducible, in their judgment, from Scripture; and the legislature has adopted and established them, as the doctrines of our church, down to the present time.

"The purpose for which these articles were designed, is stated to be 'the avoiding the diversities of opinions, and the establishing of consent touching true religion.' It is quite repugnant, therefore, to this intention, and to all rational interpretation to contend, as we have heard this day, that the construction of the articles should be left to the private persuasion of individuals, and that every one should be at liberty to preach doctrines contrary to those, which the wisdom of the state, aided and instructed by the wisdom of the church, had adopted. It is the idlest of all conceits, that this is an obsolete act; it is in daily use, 'viridi observantiâ,' and as much in force as any in the whole statute book, and repeatedly recommended to our attention by the injunctions of almost every Sovereign who has held the sceptre of these Realms. It is no business of mine, in this place, to vindicate the policy of any legislative act, but to enforce the observance of it. I cannot omit, however, to observe, that it is essential to the nature of every establishment, and necessary for the preservation of the interests of the Laity, as well as of the Clergy, that the preaching diversity of opinions shall not be fed out of the appointments of the Established Church; since the Church itself would otherwise be overwhelmed with the variety of opinion, which must, in the great mass of human character, arise out of the infirmity of our common nature. For this purpose, it has been deemed expedient to the best interests of christianity, that there should be an appointed liturgy, to which the offices of public worship should conform; and as to preaching, that it should be according to those doctrines which the State has adopted, as the rational expositions of the Christian faith. It is of the utmost importance that this system should be maintained. For what would be the state and condition of public worship, if every man was at liberty to preach, from the pulpit of the Church, whatever doctrines he may think proper to hold? Miserable would be the condition of the laity if any such pretension could be maintained by the clergy.

“It is said, that Scripture alone is sufficient. But though the clergy of the Church of England have been always eminently distinguished for their learning and piety, there may yet be, in such a number of persons, weak and imprudent and fanciful individuals. And what would be the condition of the Church, if such person might preach whatever doctrine he thinks proper to maintain? As the law now is, every one goes to his parochial Church, with a certainty of not feeling any of his solemn opinions offended. If any person dissents, a remedy is provided by the mild and wise spirit of toleration which has prevailed in modern times, and which allows that he should join himself to persons of persuasions similar to his own. But that any Clergyman should assume the liberty of inculcating his own private opinions, in direct opposition to the doctrines of the Established Church, in a place set apart for its own public worship, is not more contrary to the nature of a National Church than to all honest and rational conduct. Nor is this restraint inconsistent with Christian liberty; for to what purpose is it directed, but to ensure, in the Established Church, that uniformity which tends to edification; leaving individuals to go elsewhere according to the private persuasions they may entertain? It is, therefore, a restraint essential to the security of the Church, and it would be a gross contradiction to its fundamental purpose to say, that it is liable to the reproach of persecution, if it does not pay its ministers for maintaining doctrines contrary to its own. I think myself bound at the same time to declare, that it is not the duty nor inclination of this court to be minute and rigid in applying proceedings of this nature, and that if any article is really a subject of dubious interpretation, it would be highly improper, that this court should fix on one meaning, and prosecute all those who hold a contrary opinion regarding its interpretation. It is a very different thing, where the authority of the articles is totally eluded, and the party deliberately declares the intention of teaching doctrines contrary to them."

In the case of Hodgson v. Oakeley, in 1845 (z), an unbeneficed clergyman being proceeded against under the general ecclesiastical law for "maintaining and affirming, contrary to the true usual literal meaning of the Articles of the Established Church, all Roman doctrine," and being convicted thereof, was inhibited from performing any ministerial duty whatever, within the province of Canterbury, until he should retract his errors. It was holden, as the offence charged was for maintaining and affirming all Roman doctrine, not to be necessary to specify in the articles any doctrine in particular.

In the case of Heath v. Burder, in 1862 (a), it was holden by the Privy Council, affirming the decision of the Court of Arches, as follows:—

That the statute 13 Eliz. c. 12, s. 2, being eminently a penal statute, in proceeding under it against a beneficed clergyman by articles for maintaining and affirming doctrines contrary and repugnant to the Thirty-nine Articles, and in derogation and depraving of the Book of Common Prayer, it is not sufficient to plead various passages extracted from the defendant's work as separately, or collectively, containing doctrines contrary to the Thirty-nine Articles; but such of the Thirty-nine Articles as it is alleged are contravened must be specifically pleaded, together with a specification of the unsound doctrine or heresy which the passages extracted are alleged to maintain.

That, however, if a single distinct passage complained of contains a plain meaning which can admit of no doubt, it may perhaps be sufficient to set it out and state that it is directly contrary or repugnant to such one or more of the Thirty-nine Articles as are conceived to be opposed to it.

That the statute is positive in its prohibition, and forbids the promulgation of any doctrine contradicting the Articles.

That it is immaterial for the purposes of the statute, whether the unsound doctrines are preached or published in a book.

That in that case, articles being exhibited against a clergyman by his diocesan for "advisedly maintaining or affirming any doctrines contrary or repugnant to the Articles of Religion," it was the duty of the court to ascertain first, on the ordinary principles of construction, what is the true meaning of the Articles alleged to be infringed; secondly, what was the fair interpretation of the language used by the accused; and, lastly, whether by his language he has or has not put forward doctrine which contradicts the Thirty-nine Articles.

p. 180.

That the word "advisedly" in the statute is not limited in its operation to those who avowedly reject the Articles, but is used simply to show that the act complained of is the deliberate act of the accused, and not a casual expression dropped inadvertently.

That it is not necessary, in order to bring a beneficed clergyman within the operation of the statute, that he should have propounded any intelligible heterodox doctrine. It is sufficient if what he has propounded be directly repugnant to the doctrine laid down in the Articles.

That, unless a clergyman convicted under the statute expressly and unreservedly revoke his errors, the court has no discretion, but must pronounce sentence of deprivation; and it would seem that it is no part of the duty of either the promoter's counsel, or the court itself, to formulate the revocation; such revocation must be expressly and unreservedly made by the party proceeded against.

And Mr. Heath was deprived under the statute.

"Essays and Reviews"
cases.

In the cases of Williams v. The Bishop of Salisbury and Wilson v. Fendall (b), the "Essays and Reviews" cases, in 1863, the Privy Council held,—

That the proceedings being of a criminal nature, it is necessary that the accusation should be stated with precision and distinctness in the pleadings.

The articles of charge must (1) distinctly state the opinions which the clerk has advisedly maintained, and must set forth the passages of the work in which those opinions are stated; and (2) such articles must specify the doctrines of the church which the opinions of the clerk are alleged to contravene, and the particular Articles of Religion and the Formularies which contain such doctrines.

The accuser is for the purpose of the charge confined to the charges which are included and set out in the articles of charge, as the matter of accusation; but it is competent to the accused party to explain from the rest of his work, from whence the passages libelled are extracted, the sense or meaning of any passage or word that is challenged by the accuser.

With respect to the legal tests of doctrine of the Church of England, by the application of which the court is to try the soundness of the passages libelled, it is the province of that court, on the one hand, to ascertain the true construction of the Articles of Religion and Formularies referred to in each charge, according to the legal rules for the interpretation of statutes and written instruments; and, on the other hand, to ascertain the plain grammatical meaning of the passages which are charged as being contrary to, or inconsistent with, the doctrines of the church.

Matters of doctrine, in which the church has prescribed no rule, may be discussed without penal consequences; and no rule is to be ascribed to the church which is not found expressly and distinctly stated, or which is not plainly involved in, or to be collected from the written law of the church.

In the eleventh Article of Religion, it is laid down, that "we are accounted righteous before God only for the merits of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ by faith, and not for our own works or deservings;" but as the article is wholly silent as to the merits of Jesus Christ being transferred to us, and asserts only that we are justified for the merits of Jesus our Saviour by faith, and by faith alone, it is not penal in a clergyman to speak of merit by transfer as a "fiction," however unseemly that word may be when used in connection with such a subject.

In one of the articles it was charged that it was a contradiction of the Church of England, as laid down in the sixth and twentieth Articles of Religion, the Nicene Creed, and in the Ordination Service of Priests, to affirm that any part of the Canonical Books of the Old or New Testament, upon any subject whatever, however unconnected with religious faith or moral duty, was not written under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit; and the Privy Council held (dissentientibus the Archbishops of Canterbury and York), that the charge that every part of the Scriptures was written under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit was not established, as it was not to be found either in the sixth or twentieth Articles of Religion, the Formularies of the Church, the Service for the Ordering of Priests, or the Nicene Creed.

It is not competent to a clergyman of the Church of England to teach or suggest that a hope may be entertained of a state of things contrary to what the church expressly teaches or declares will be the case.

An article setting forth extracts of a review of a work that a clergyman of the Church of England had reviewed, charging that he had therein advisedly declared, that after this life there would be no judgment of God, awarding either eternal happiness or eternal misery, contrary to the three creeds, the absolution, the catechism, and the burial and commination service, was not established by the passages of the work pleaded.

It is not penal for a clergyman to express a hope of the ultimate pardon of the wicked.

And the Privy Council, reversing the judgment of the Court of Arches, dismissed the suits.

In the case of Noble v. Voysey (c), in 1871, it was holden that in charges against a clergyman for maintaining and promulgating doctrines contrary to, and inconsistent with, divers of the Thirty-nine Articles of Religion, the Judicial Committee is not compelled, as in cases affecting the right to property, to affix a definite meaning to any given Article, where such Article is really a subject of dubious interpretation. It is, however, very different where the authority of the Articles is totally eluded, and the party deliberately declares the intention of teaching doctrines contrary to them. It is not requisite in such case that the contradiction of the Articles should be a contradiction totidem verbis; it is sufficient if the opinions published or promulgated be repugnant to, or inconsistent with, their clear construction.

In the same case it was laid down that it is not competent for any clergyman, of his own mere will, not founding himself upon any critical inquiry, but simply upon his own taste and judgment, to assert that whole passages of some of the canonical books are without any authority whatever, as being contrary to the teaching of Christ as contained in others of the canonical books.

The articles of charge were for having printed, published, and set forth certain volumes of sermons, in which the defendant advisedly maintained and affirmed doctrines directly contrary or repugnant to, and inconsistent with divers of the Thirty-nine Articles of Religion and Formularies of the Church of England, the alleged errors being: (1) Concerning the reconciliation of God to man by the sacrifice or propitiation of our Lord Jesus Christ, and as to the necessity of such reconciliation; (2) As to the incarnate Godhead of our Lord, and the doctrine of the Holy Trinity; (3) As to the authority of the Scriptures or Holy Writ. These articles were admitted and sustained. And the several errors and doctrines so charged to have been maintained and affirmed were holden to be sufficiently proved by the incriminated passages extracted from the said sermons, and set forth in the articles of charge as being respectively repugnant to and inconsistent with the several Articles of Religion to which they were pleaded as contrary to and opposed, without reference to the Formularies of the Church to which they were also pleaded to be repugnant and inconsistent.

Sentence of deprivation was pronounced against the defendant unless, within a week from the delivery of the judgment, he should expressly and unreservedly retract the several errors in which he had so offended; which he refused to do.

*Ditcher v.
Denison;
Sheppard v.
Bennett.*

The cases of Ditcher v. Denison and Sheppard v. Bennett were cases in which heresy was charged in respect of doctrines held as to the Holy Eucharist. They have, in this connection, been already mentioned (c).

Value of previous writers as authorities.

Upon the important topic of the use of authorities in a criminal suit for heresy as evidence of the liberty previously exercised without ecclesiastical censure of holding the doctrine complained of, the following passages are cited:—

*The King's Proctor v.
Stone.*

In the first reported case, that of The King's Proctor v. Stone, Lord Stowell, in the passage already quoted (d), said:

"I think myself bound at the same time to declare, that it is not the duty nor inclination of this Court to be minute and rigid in applying proceedings of this nature; and that if any Article is really a subject of dubious interpretation, it would be highly improper, that this Court should fix on one meaning, and prosecute all those who hold a contrary opinion regarding its interpretation. It is a very different thing where the authority of the Articles is totally eluded, and the party deliberately declares the intention of teaching doctrines contrary to them" (e).

(c) Vide supra, pp. 532—537.

And in the case of Mr. Gorham the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council said :

Gorham v. The Bp. of Exeter.

"There are other points of doctrine respecting the sacrament of baptism which we are of opinion are, by the Rubrics and Formularies (as well as the Articles), capable of being honestly understood in different senses; and consequently we think that, as to them, the points which were left undetermined by the Articles are not decided by the Rubrics and Formularies, and that upon these points all ministers of the Church, having duly made the subscriptions required by law (and taking Holy Scripture for their guide), are at liberty honestly to exercise their private judgment without offence or censure.

"Upright and conscientious men cannot in all respects agree upon subjects so difficult; and it must be carefully borne in mind that the question, and the only question, for us to decide, is, whether Mr. Gorham's doctrine is contrary or repugnant to the doctrine of the Church of England as by law established. Mr. Gorham's doctrine may be contrary to the opinions entertained by many learned and pious persons, contrary to the opinion which such persons have, by their own particular studies, deduced from Holy Scripture, contrary to the opinion which they have deduced from the usages and doctrines of the Primitive Church, or contrary to the opinion which they have deduced from uncertain and ambiguous expressions in the Formularies; still, if the doctrine of Mr. Gorham is not contrary or repugnant to the doctrine of the Church of England as by law established, it cannot afford a legal ground for refusing him institution to the living to which he has been lawfully presented (f). In the examination of this case, we have not relied upon the doctrinal opinions of any of the eminent writers, by whose piety, learning and ability the Church of England has been distinguished; but it appears that opinions, which we cannot in any important particular distinguish from those entertained by Mr. Gorham, have been propounded and maintained, without censure or reproach, by many eminent and illustrious prelates and divines who have adorned the Church from the time when the Articles were first established. We do not affirm that the doctrines and opinions of Jewel, Hooker, Usher, Jeremy Taylor, Whitgift, Pearson, Carlton, Prideaux, and many others, can be received as evidence of the doctrine of the Church of England, but their conduct, unblamed and unquestioned as it was, proves, at least, the liberty which has been allowed of maintaining such doctrine (g). We express no opinion on the theological accuracy of these opinions or any of them. The writers whom we have cited are not always consistent with themselves, nor are the reasons upon which they found their positions always valid; and other writers of great eminence, and worthy of great respect, have expressed very different opinions. But the mere fact that such opinions have been propounded and maintained by persons so eminent, and so much respected, as well as by very many others, appears to us sufficiently to prove that the liberty which was left by the Articles and Formularies has been actually enjoyed and exercised by the members and ministers of the Church of England" (h).

(f) Moore's Special Report, p. 471.

Heath.*

And in the case of Burder v. Heath, Dr. Lushington, who had been one of the Lords of the Privy Council in the Gorham case, sitting as judge of the Court of Arches, observed:—

"I apprehend that the course to be followed is, first, to endeavour to ascertain the plain grammatical sense of the Article of Religion said to be contravened, and if that Article admit of several meanings, without any violation of the ordinary rules of construction or the plain grammatical sense, then I conceive that the Court ought to hold that any such opinion might be lawfully avowed and maintained.

"If, indeed, any controversy arise whether any given meaning is within the plain grammatical construction, the Court must form the best judgment it can, with this assistance, as I have already said, that if the doctrine in question has been held without offence by eminent divines of the Church, then, though perhaps difficult to be reconciled with the plain meaning of the Articles of Religion, still a judge in my position ought not to impute blame to those who hold it. That which has been allowed or tolerated in the Church ought not to be questioned by this Court" (i).

And again in the same case the same learned judge says:—

"Before concluding, I think it right to explain why I do not advert to the many authorities which the zeal and learning of counsel have produced. My reason is this: that, in my judgment, not one of these authorities does that which was required in this case, namely, show that some Divine of eminence has held, without reproach from ecclesiastical authority, doctrines in substance the same as those Mr. Heath has promulgated; whatever opinions may have been held in the vast field of polemical divinity, I find none which support Mr. Heath or justify him. In the Gorham case the Judicial Committee had the advantage of being able to quote, in support of their judgment, and in justification of Mr. Gorham, passages from the writings of Divines of the highest authority."

And again (k):—

No explanation has been offered which in any way shows that Mr. Heath's opinions can be reconciled with the Articles, nor has any eminent Divine been shown to have shared his views. Mr. Heath therefore must be condemned by the Articles imposed by law, and which the law alone can change.

It seems, however, difficult to reconcile the law as laid down in these passages with that laid down by the Privy Council in the case of Sheppard v. Bennett, which is as follows:—

Sheppard v. Bennett.

"Citations from established Authors may be of use to show that 'the liberty which was left by the Articles and Formularies has been actually enjoyed and exercised by the members and Ministers of the Church of England.' But, to say the least, very few of the quotations in the judgment exhibit the same freedom of language as do the extracts from Mr. Bennett. And after every authority had been examined, there would still remain the question that is before this Committee, whether the licence or liberty is really allowed by the Articles and Formularies—whether anything has been said by the respondent which plainly contradicts them. If the respondent had made statements contradicting the Articles or Formularies, the citation of great names would not have protected him; if he has not done so, he is safe without their protection" (l).

4. As to depraving the Book of Common Prayer.

The various enactments against this offence are to be found in 2 & 3 Edw. 6, c. 1, ss. 2, 3; 1 Eliz. c. 2, ss. 2, 3; Canon 6 of 1603, already set forth (m); and Canon 73, as follows:—

Depraving the Prayer Book.

"Forasmuch as all Conventicles and secret Meetings of Priests and Ministers, have been ever justly accounted very hurtful to the State of the Church wherein they live: We do now ordain and constitute, That no Priests or Ministers of the Word of God, nor any other persons, shall meet together in any Private House or elsewhere, to consult upon any matter or course to be taken by them, or upon their motion or direction by any other, which may any way tend to the impeaching or depraving of the Doctrine of the Church of England, or of the Book of Common Prayer, or of any part of the Government and Discipline now established in the Church of England, under pain of Excommunication ipso facto."

Canon 73.

The case of Sanders v. Head (n), in 1843, was one where articles against a clergyman for openly affirming and maintaining positions in derogation of and depraving the Book of Common Prayer were sustained. Caudrey's Case (o), so often referred to in this book, was of this kind.

The Dean of York's case.

The following sketch of the origin of simony and of the penalties incident to it under the canon law, is taken from Dr. Phillimore's judgment in the case of The Dean of York (q).

"It deduced its appellation from the rebuke given by the Apostle St. Peter to the individual whose name it has stamped with infamy, and rendered execrable to posterity, for his attempt to barter money for spiritual gifts. 'Let thy money perish with thee, because thou hast thought that the gift of God might be purchased with money' (r).

"Accordingly, from the very commencement of the Christian era, simony has been stigmatized as the greatest of offences, denounced as such by all the memorable councils of the church, and treated in the body of the canon law as a crime in comparison of which all other crimes sink into insignificance,—pro nihilo æstimanda sunt.

"Simony was prohibited in one shape by the second canon of the Council of Chalcedon, in another by the third Council of Lateran (1179), and by all the expounders of the canon law who flourished between these periods, which I mention the rather because these councils and the fourth Council of Lateran (1215) have frequently been recognized by the temporal courts as forming an integral part of the ecclesiastical laws of England.

"It is very true, that by the Council of Chalcedon the sale of holy orders and of inferior offices is specified as the object of condemnation and punishment; in the early period of Christianity simony was necessarily limited to these objects—the teachers of the Gospel were poor and incapable of possessing benefices; for it was not till a much later period that the Church of Christ was admitted to have a place in the Collegia licita of the empire.

“But it by no means follows that, because, by the ancient canons of the church, simony is more especially designated in connection with the purchase and sale of holy orders, whereas in the canons of the later ages little mention is heard of this, and they are wholly directed against simony in the collation and provision of benefices:—that therefore the church attaches a different notion to simony now from that which the canons applied to it, or thought the crime of simony more odious than she does at this day. The view of the ancients and moderns has been invariably the same, and that the former have principally inveighed against simony of the one description, the latter against simony of the other description, arises not from any different view taken by the church as to the nature of the offence, but from the change of discipline which change of times and manners has rendered necessary.

“Alexander II., who occupied the papal chair in the middle of the eleventh century, applied the provisions of the second canon of the Council of Chalcedon to those who trafficked in the purchase and sale of benefices, and his epistle to the clergy and people of Lucca is to be found in the body of the canon law in the Epistles of Gratian (s).

“Celestus II., who was pope in the twelfth century, lays down the law in these words: ‘Si quis in ecclesia ordinationem vel promotionem per pecuniam acquisiverit, acquisitâ prorsus careat dignitate.’

“And in the Extravagantes we find: ‘Qui dignitates ecclesiasticas simoniace acquisiverit—illis sit ipso jure privatus et in futurum inhabilis ad eas et quamvis alias obtinendas.’

“And again: ‘Qui quomodolibet dando vel recipiendo simoniam commiserint . . . sententiam excommunicationis incurrant’ (t).

"The eighth article of the third (u) Council of Lateran forbids even the gift or promise of the next presentation to any ecclesiastical benefice. It is headed thus: 'Ne ecclesiastica beneficia alicui promittantur antequam vacent.' And then proceeds to enact: 'Nulla ecclesiastica ministeria seu etiam beneficia, vel ecclesiæ, alicui tribuantur seu promittantur antequam vacent.'—Words express against any promise whatsoever connected with the expectation of a vacancy.

"The third (x) title of the fifth book of the Decretals is devoted to the subject of simony. The commentator in the gloss introduces the subject by stating, that having dealt with accusers and calumniators, it remains to look at the crimes with which persons may be charged, amongst which simony obtains the first place. The first chapter is headed, 'De simoniâ, et ne aliquid pro spiritualibus exigatur vel promittatur.'

"And Lancelottus, the most concise and perspicuous of commentators, in discussing the text, gives this definition: 'Simonia nihil aliud est quam studiosa voluntas sive cupiditas emendi vel vendendi spiritualia vel spiritualibus annexa' (y).

"And again: 'Contrahitur ergo simonia cum quis sacra quodammodo in commercium deducit.' And in another passage: 'Simonia est dare pecuniam pro vicariatu vel alia administratione rerum spiritualium.'

"The principles which have governed these decisions of the Catholic Church (I mean the Church of Christ) have always been 'Gratis accepistis, gratis date.' And the only point to be ascertained has been 'num quovis modo per temporalia ad canonicatum perveniatur, id solum sufficere judicans ut non gratis et per consequens simoniacè pervenire censeatur.' And again: 'Impudentissimum proinde prætextum detestamur, qui de solo proventu reque temporariâ canonicatûs se pacisci, cum ea spiritualia tam arcto sit annexa vinculo ut non magis ab eâ develli queat quam in homine vivo manente corpus a suâ animâ.'

"It is clear that the purchase or sale of the reversion of a benefice—for whether a benefice or a dignity is immaterial—was simoniacal; because, to use the language of an eminent canonist, 'cum enim execranda simonia sit episcopatum vendi, similiter æstimandum de ceteris beneficiis, quæ veluti membra et portiones quædam sunt episcopatûs.'

"It may be proved, also, by abundant citations from the canon law, that even the purchase of the reversion of a benefice by a father, though the son was kept in ignorance of it, was simoniacal on the part of the son (z).

(z) An anecdote is related of Manguin, Bishop of Nismes, who appeared at the Council of Rheims, in 1094, at which Leo IX. presided in person, and confessed that his bishopric had been purchased for him by his parents se tamen ignorante, and stated that he was ready to resign it in the hands of the pope and council, as he preferred surrendering the functions to retaining it at the hazard of his soul, and laid his crozier at the feet of the pope: but as the simony had been committed without his privity or con-

“Authorities upon this subject might be multiplied ad infinitum; but I would especially refer to the Commentaries of Van Espen (a) on this head, which will be found in his seven chapters De simoniâ circa beneficia, as well on account of the deservedly high reputation of the author as of the learned industry with which he has discussed and exhausted all that can be brought to bear on this subject. I would refer also to the Vetus et Nova Ecclesie Disciplina of Thomassin (b).

“The question of simony, and the opinions of the Gallican Church respecting it, are also ably treated in the excellent and useful work of Durand de Maillane (c), and in the well known Dictionary of Denisart (d): both the one and the other establish and confirm the doctrine which I have laid down.

“Throughout the whole body of the canon law, whether we look to the text or to the commentators, the technical distinctions between immediate and reversionary possession are unknown. The prohibition is distinct and explicit, and is unequivocally opposed to all traffic of any description concerning ‘spiritualia, vel spiritualibus annexa.’

“No fact can be better established than that the Church of England, in her transition from the errors of Popery to the purer doctrines of the reformed religion, retained much of the discipline of the Roman Catholic Church, and above all, that she retained inviolate all the laws which had been so long inculcated by the Gregorian Code and the canonical jurists against simony. Simony abounded in the middle ages, and laws were accumulated on laws to repress and coerce it; happily with us the crime has been less prevalent: but still the ancient laws are the same, they have undergone no change, they are still a part and parcel of the ecclesiastical jurisprudence of England. The third Council of Lateran (e) is clear and express, and this Council of Lateran, as well as the fourth (f), is embodied in our laws.

sent, he was required to take his oath of the fact; another crozier was put into his hands, and he was reinstated in his episcopal functions.

So where a prebendary discovered that his father had purchased his stall for him when in his minority, he being ignorant of the fact, on arriving at years of discretion he resigned it into the hands of the superior of the convent. The chapter re-elected him, but placed him last in the choir: he appealed to the pontiff (Clement III.) to be reinstated in his old place, who enjoined him to be content, adding, ratione primæ receptionis nihil audeas in ipsâ ecclesiâ vindicare.

Quod si quis fecerit, et in jure convictus vel confessus fuerit, ipsum, tam Regiâ quam Nostrâ freti auctoritate, patronatu ejusdem ecclesiæ in perpetuum privari statuimus.’

“And Ayliffe thus defines simony:—‘Simony, according to the canonists, is defined to be a deliberate act, or a premeditated will and desire of selling such things as are spiritual, or of anything annexed unto spirituals, by giving something of a temporal nature for the purchase thereof; or in other terms it is defined to be a commutation of a thing spiritual or annexed unto spirituals, by giving something that is temporal’ (h).

“By the Injunctions (i) published successively by Edw. VI. in 1547, and by Elizabeth in 1559, it is thus provided: ‘To avoid the detestable sin of simony, because buying and selling of benefices is execrable before God, therefore all such persons as buy any benefices or come to them by fraud and deceit shall be deprived of such benefices and made incapable at any time after to receive any other spiritual preferment, and such as do sell them or by any colour do bestow them for their own gain and profit shall lose their right and title of patronage and presentment for that time’ (k).

“Afterwards in the Constitutions and Canons Ecclesiastical, agreed upon in the Synod of London in 1603, and confirmed by the king’s authority under the great seal of England—canons not in any way binding on the laity, but obligatory on the clergy—the fortieth of these canons has an essential and immediate bearing on the point at issue. No one who is at all conversant with the legal writings and commentaries of the canonists, can read this fortieth canon without being convinced that it is deeply imbued with the soundest principles of the canon law on the subject of simony; and as it is universally binding on the clergy, and professes to expound the discipline of the Church of England on this point, it becomes the bounden duty of every ecclesiastical jurisdiction, however constituted, to give force to the due execution of this law to the fullest effect.”

Canon 40.

Can. 40 of 1603 provided for an oath against simony, which lasted unchanged till 28 & 29 Vict. c. 122, and the new Canons of 1865. This oath was in these words:—

“I, N. N., do swear, that I have made no simoniacal payment, contract, or promise, directly or indirectly, by myself, or by any other to my knowledge or with my consent, to any person or persons whatsoever, for or concerning the procuring and obtaining of this ecclesiastical dignity, place, preferment, office, or living [respectively and particularly naming the same, whereunto he is to be admitted, instituted, collated, installed or confirmed], nor will at any time hereafter perform or satisfy any such kind of payment, contract or promise made by any other without my knowledge or consent : So help me God through Jesus Christ."

Bishop Gibson says : This oath, whether interpreted by the plain tenour of it, or according to the language of former oaths, or the notions of the catholic church concerning simony, is against all promises whatsoever. Therefore, though a person comes not within the statute of 31 Eliz. c. 6, hereafter following, by promising money, reward, gift, profit, or benefit, yet he becomes guilty of perjury if he takes this oath after any promise of what kind soever (l).

By 28 & 29 Vict. c. 122, s. 2, a declaration against simony was substituted for this oath, and a new Canon was passed by Convocation substantially the same as the old one, save as to the declaration in lieu of the oath (m).

Rex v. Lewis.

In the case of Rex v. Lewis (n), an information was moved for against a clergyman for perjury at his admission to a living, upon an affidavit that the presentation was simoniacal. But the court refused to grant it till he had been convicted of the simony.

To a declaration by A., an incoming, against B., an outgoing, incumbent, for dilapidations to the rectory house and premises, B. pleaded that A., being rector of C., and B. incumbent of D., it was agreed between them, with the consent of their respective patrons and diocesans, that they should exchange their respective livings, and "that A. should not call upon B. to pay for the repairs in the declaration mentioned, or for any or either of them :"—the court held, upon motion for judgment non obstante veredicto on this plea, that it did not necessarily disclose a simoniacal contract : and that the court was bound to put the same construction upon the plea when brought before it on demurrer (o). This case seems to have set at rest the doubt expressed by the court in the earlier case of Downes v. Craig (p).

In the later case of *Wright v. The Common Pleas Division and the Court of Appeal held that such an agreement was not simoniacal nor illegal. This case arose since The Ecclesiastical Dilapidations Act, 1871.

Simony is in fact mentioned in this act.

For avoiding of Simony.]—Almost all the authors who have treated of this subject, and even the learned judges in delivering their resolutions in cases of simony, have asserted that there is no word of simony in this act; and from thence a conclusion had been drawn in favour of the ecclesiastical jurisdiction, that the temporal courts have nothing to do with simony as such, or to define what shall be deemed simony and what not, but only to take cognizance of the particular corrupt contracts therein specified. Which consequence, although deducible perhaps from other premises, yet does not follow from the aforesaid observation; for it is plain here is the word simony; and the mistake seems to have happened from this short preamble being inadvertently printed at the end of the foregoing section, treating entirely of a different subject, so as to have been overlooked by the first person who made the observation, whom others have followed without examination.

Donatives.

Donations.]—For the like reason only (as it seems) a doubt was made in the case of Bawderock v. Mackallar (y), in 2 Car. 1, whether this statute extends to donatives.

Usurpations.

If any Person or Persons.]—If one who has no right, present by usurpation, and does it by reason of any corrupt contract or agreement, that presentation and the induction thereupon are hereby void; for this statute extends to all patrons, as well by wrong as by right. In like manner, if when a church is void, the void turn is purchased, although the grant of a void turn, as being a thing in action, is of itself void, and the purchaser's presentee comes in quasi per usurpationem; yet because it is by means of a simoniacal contract, it is as much simony as if the grant had not been void (z).

Sale of next presentation or of advow.

That the sale of a next presentation, the church being void, is simoniacal, is a confirmed maxim of the common law (a). If a benefice be sold while an action is pending for removing the clerk of a person who has usurped the right of patronage, and such action be successful, the sale is simoniacal, for the church was never full of the clerk of the usurper (b). And it was holden by the Exchequer Chamber, reversing the decision of the Court of Queen's Bench, that the sale of the advowson of a living, the incumbency whereof was then voidable under the old law against pluralities, did not pass that presentation (c). But it is always now holden, that the sale of the next presentation of a living, the church being full, is valid, except where a clergyman is the purchaser (d).

It was formerly supposed that if the incumbent be in a dying state, the sale was simoniacal (e); but the decision of the House of Lords in the case of For v. The Bishop of Chester (f) (reversing that of the Court of King's Bench (g)), established that such sale is valid while the incumbent is alive and the church full. Chief Justice Best delivered the opinion of the judges in this important case, and the following extracts are made from the opinion:—

“My lords, the question which your lordships have been pleased to put to the judges in this case is, ‘Whether, upon the whole of the matters stated or referred to in the special verdict, the right to present to the rectory or parish church of Wilmslow, upon the death of the Reverend Joseph Bradshaw, was by law vested in Edward Vigor Fox, the plaintiff in error.’ The judges who heard the argument at your lordships’ bar are unanimously of opinion, that upon the whole matters stated or referred to in the special verdict, the right to present to the rectory or parish church of Wilmslow, upon the death of the Reverend Joseph Bradshaw, was by law vested in Edward Vigor Fox, the plaintiff in error. . . .

“ . . . The church, in the present case, was full; no clergyman was privy to the agreement; and the living was not intended by the plaintiff in error, at the time he bought the presentation, for the clerk that he afterwards presented. But I would observe, that persons have recovered who appeared to be dying. The special verdict only states that the incumbent, at the time of the sale, was afflicted with a mortal disease, so that he was then in extreme danger of his life; and his life was thereby greatly dispaired of; and that he was so afflicted with such mortal disease, and in extreme danger of his life, and his life was and continued to be greatly dispaired of until his death, which happened at half-past eleven at night of the day on which the sale was completed. Many who are afflicted with mortal diseases, and are from such diseases thought to be in imminent danger of dying, live for a considerable time; and the effect of the diseases are sometimes so far suspended, that the persons so afflicted become again capable of performing the duties belonging to their stations in life.

"If this conveyance was void, it must have been void at the time it was executed, and would remain void into whatever hands and under whatever circumstances the right of presentation might have passed. Now, if this incumbent had been restored to apparent health, and the vendee had sold the presentation to another person, ignorant of the circumstances under which the first sale was made, it would be most unjust to hold that the second sale was void; and yet this would be the necessary consequence of a decision that the sale was simoniacal. Whilst the law permits the next presentation of livings to be sold during the lives of the incumbents, as long as the incumbent is alive the sale is good. Every one who purchases a next presentation contemplates the death of the incumbent. If this contemplation made the sale void, no sale of a next avoidance could be good. If the death of the incumbent, and the prospect of using the presentation may be contemplated, the time when the death is to happen cannot be material. . . .

" The affairs of men are best regulated by broad rules, such as exclude all subtle disputes, all doubtful, unsatisfactory inquiries. It would be difficult to establish a rule that should settle what degree of probability of the approaching death of an incumbent should prevent the sale of the avoidance of a benefice, and more difficult to ascertain by evidence when an incumbent was within that degree. I submit to your lordships that the most convenient rule is that which I conceive the law has already established, namely, that the right to sell the presentation continues as long as the incumbent is in existence.

"The judgment of the court below is, according to the words of the chief justice, 'founded on the language of the 31 Eliz. c. 6, and the well-known principle of law, that the provisions of an act of parliament shall not be evaded by shift or contrivance.' The words of the fifth section of the act are, 'If any person shall, for any sum of money, reward, gift, profit, or benefit, directly or indirectly, or for or by reason of any promise, agreement, grant, bond, covenant, or other assurance of or for any sum of money, reward, gift, profit, or benefit whatsoever, directly or indirectly present or collate any person to any benefice, or give or bestow the same for or in respect of any such corrupt cause or consideration.' This clause applies only to the person presenting to the living. If he has received no reward or promise of reward, the presentation is not affected by the terms of the act. The plaintiff in error, who made the presentation, received no reward, nor had any expectation of reward, for making this presentation. I agree, that if some other person had received a reward for the plaintiff in error, and was to account to him for it—if the plaintiff in error was not the real purchaser of the avoidance, but the person presented, or some one in his behalf, these and many other things might be considered as frauds on the act, and have avoided the contract. But such things should have been shown by the pleadings, and found by the jury. All that appears on this record is, that the plaintiff in error bought the next avoidance of a living that was full; and that, without any corrupt consideration, he used the right of presentation which he had purchased. All this he had a right to do. There is no circumstance found that shows this is a fraud on the act, unless it be a fraud on the act to buy the presentation to a living which the seller and buyer expect will soon become vacant. Presentations are bought and sold every day with this expectation.”

Returning to the words, “if any person or persons,” in sect. 4 of the act, it is to be observed that the phrase is general, and makes no allowance in the case of father and son, more than in the case of other persons; and that, therefore, the notion that a purchase of the next avoidance when the incumbent is sick and ready to die, and the son’s privity to that purchase, is less simony in the case of a son than it would be in the case of any other person, has no foundation in the act. Neither is the reason, that a father is bound by nature to provide for his son, good to the aforesaid purpose; for a man is bound by nature also to provide for himself, and so might as well purchase for himself (h).

Purchase for son may be simoniacal.

So if a father, in consideration of a clerk’s marrying his daughter, covenants with the clerk’s father, that he will procure the clerk to be presented, admitted, instituted, and inducted into such a church upon the next avoidance thereof; this is a simoniacal contract (i); otherwise, if the covenant is independent of the consideration (k).

So may be contract with future son-in-law,

Directly or indirectly.]—Simony (Dr. Watson says) may be committed, and yet neither the patron nor the incumbent be privy to it, or knowing of it. Thus in a writ of error to reverse a judgment, whereby the king had recovered in a quare impedit, upon a title of simony, which was, that a friend of the patron had agreed to give so much money to one (who was not the patron), to procure the said person to be presented, who was presented according to that agreement; it was assigned for error, that it did not appear that either patron or parson were knowing of this agreement. But by the court, the parson was simoniacally promoted; and a case was mentioned, where the parson of St. Clement’s was ousted, by reason that a friend had given money to a page belonging to the Earl of Exeter, to endeavour to procure the presentation, and neither the earl nor the parson knew anything of it (l).

What profit or benefit is within the act.

It has been seen that 31 Eliz. c. 6, s. 4, renders void the presentation or collation to a living for any "bond, covenant or other assurance of or for any sum of money, reward, gift, profit, or benefit whatsoever." The bond and assurance here mentioned is for money, reward, gift, profit or benefit; for instance, a promise of the presentee to his patron to forbear trying a suit for tithes (m); so also a covenant to marry a particular person (n); any transaction of this kind constitutes a corrupt and simoniacal bargain, the nature of which cannot be altered by the intention of the contracting party to make an innocent or praiseworthy use of a contract in its essence illegal (o).

Resignation bonds.

But a way was found very early to defeat the intention of this act, by general bonds of resignation, whereby the presentee obliged himself to resign and void the benefice, within a certain time after warning to be given to him, or else indefinitely, whenever the patron should require it (p).

Peele v. The Earl of Carlisle.

And these bonds were at one time allowed both in law and equity: thus in the case of Peele v. The Earl of Carlisle, in 6 Geo. 1, in the King's Bench (q), in an action of debt upon a bond, conditioned to resign a benefice, the court refused to let the defendant's counsel argue the validity of such bonds, they having been so often established even in a court of equity; and that also, where the condition is general, and not barely to resign to a particular person.

Peele v. Capel.

So in 9 Geo. 1, in Chancery, Peele v. Capel (r). Capel on presenting Peele to a living, took a bond from him to resign when the patron's nephew came of age, for whom the living was designed. When the nephew was of age, instead of requiring a resignation, it was agreed between them all, that Peele should continue to hold the living, paying 30*l.* a year to the nephew. Peele makes the payment for seven years, but refusing to pay any more, the patron puts the bond in suit; and then Peele comes into this court for an injunction, and to have back his 30*l.* a year. On hearing, the Lord Chancellor granted the injunction, not (as he said) upon account of any defect in the bond itself, which he held good, but on account of the ill use that had been made of it; and as to the money, it being paid upon a simoniacal contract, he left the plaintiff to go to law for it.

Bp. of Norwich*, 3 Lev. p. 337; quere aliter as to advowsons in fee, Barret v. Glubb, 2 Black. W. p. 1052. But it is doubtful whether such simony is cause for deprivation in the ecclesiastical court. Vide infra, pp. 876, 879.

So in the case of Durston v. Sandys, in 1686 (s), the defendant, upon his presenting the plaintiff to a parsonage, took a bond of him to resign: which (as the reporter says) though in itself lawful, yet the patron making an ill use of it, viz. to prevent the incumbent from demanding tithes in kind, the court awarded a perpetual injunction against the bond.

Sandys.*

And in the case of Hesketh v. Grey, in the King's Bench, in 28 Geo. 2, where action was brought upon a bond; it appeared that the obligor had been presented to the living of Staining [or Steyning] by the obligee, and had agreed to deliver it up into the hands of the ordinary, within three months after the expiration of five years, at the request of the plaintiff, his heirs or assigns, or upon proper notice in writing, so that a new presentation might be made. And after this recital of the agreement, the condition was, that if the defendant did deliver up into the hands of the ordinary the said living, so as that the same might become void, then the obligation to be void. The defendant pleaded, that he did offer to resign absolutely the living, and that he delivered the resignation to the ordinary that he might accept the same, and the plaintiff make a new presentation, but that the ordinary refused to accept it. He pleaded further, that the agreement was corrupt; and that the bond was taken to keep the defendant in awe, and therefore also corrupt and void. Ryder, Chief Justice, delivered the resolution of the court: "The averring in the plea, that the agreement was corrupt, will not make it so; but it should set forth what sort of corruption, that the court may judge whether simoniacal or not. As to the point, whether a general bond of resignation is good, we are all of opinion it is. It was determined in the case of Lord Carlisle v. Peele. But every simoniacal contract is void, where it is secured only by promise. Otherwise it is when a bond is given for the performance of such a contract, when the condition does not express the agreement, but is only a condition for payment of money, because we cannot go out of the written condition to vacate the obligation, and also because a specialty does not want a consideration to support it, as a promise depending only upon simple contract does. It has been objected, that these kinds of bonds, when the contract appears upon the face of the condition to be for a general resignation upon request, are void: indeed, it does look so; but the law is otherwise. And as to the other objection, we are all of opinion that the plea in bar is bad, because it is not averred that the bishop has accepted this resignation, and for these reasons: 1. Because, without the acceptance of the ordinary, the resignation is not complete, and the patron can have no benefit of such a resignation. 2. Because the defendant has undertaken for the acceptance of the bishop, as that is necessary to make a complete resignation, which he has by the condition of his bond agreed to do. 3. Because the plea does not contain a sufficient excuse for the bishop's non-acceptance of the resignation; for the defendant has undertaken that the bishop shall do it, or if he does not he will make a satisfaction by paying money or the like to the party who is injured thereby; and this is reasonable, and is the law in such cases, when the obligor undertakes for the act of a stranger. The ordinary is a judicial officer, and is entrusted with a judicial power to accept or refuse resignations as he thinks proper." And judgment was given for the plaintiff.

Grey afterwards applied to the Court of Chancery for an injunction. The proceedings are thus reported (t): Plaintiff was presented to the living of Steyning by the defendant, and previous thereto gave a general bond of resignation after the end of six years, on three months' request: action sued at law, and judgment recovered on the bond. Bill by plaintiff for an injunction, and inter alia for a discovery whether defendant had not sold the advowson since the end of the six years, with a promise of procuring an immediate resignation. Defendant demurred to the discovery, as tending to subject him to the penalties of the statute against simony. Lord Hardwicke, C., was of opinion that the sale of an advowson during a vacancy is not within the statute of simony as sale of the next presentation is; but it is void by the common law (u). These sorts of bonds are held good at law, and so they are in equity, unless an ill use is attempted to be made of them, in which case this court will interfere. The question then is, whether the sale of his advowson under these circumstances, attended with an immediate resignation, is an abuse? It seems to be an evasion of the statute: perhaps if more money had been given by reason of the vacancy, it might be within the statute. It desires discovery; and he overruled the demurrer. It was suggested in the bill, and made a defence at law, that the bishop had refused to accept the resignation. His lordship approved the conduct of the bishop in case he was informed the advowson was sold to be attended with an immediate resignation. And he also expressed himself of the same opinion with the judges in the King's Bench, that the bishop's refusal to accept the resignation was no excuse for the incumbent's not resigning; for that he had undertaken to resign, which implies both resignation and acceptance, without which the resignation is not complete (x).

*The Bishop of London v.
Ffytche.*

In the case of The Bishop of London v. Ffytche, in 1780, the rectory of the parish church of Woodham Walter in Essex, in the diocese of London, becoming vacant, Mr. Ffytche presented his clerk, the Reverend John Eyre, to the bishop for institution. The bishop being informed that the said John Eyre had given his patron a bond in a large penalty to resign the said rectory at any time upon his request, and the said John Eyre acknowledging that he had given such a bond, the bishop refused to institute him to the living.

Whereupon Mr. Ffytche brought a quare impedit (y) against the bishop in the Court of Common Pleas, and obtained judgment against him. Upon which the bishop appealed to the Court of King's Bench, and that court also gave judgment in affirmance of the judgment in the Court of Common Pleas. Upon this the bishop appealed to the House of Lords; where, upon debate, the lords ordered several questions to be put to the judges; who differing in opinion, they were directed to deliver their opinions seriatim, with their reasons. The questions were twelve in number; but divers of them going only to matter of form, the true substantial inquiry was, whether an agreement made between an incumbent and patron, whereby the incumbent undertakes to avoid the benefice at the request of the patron, be not an agreement for a benefit to the said patron within the statute of 31 Eliz. c. 6, so as by reason of such agreement such presentation shall be void?

The case is memorable, both in a historical and a legal point of view. It was the last time in which the bishops spoke and voted as judges in the House of Peers; and their votes, with the aid of Lord Thurlow, reversed by a bare majority the sentences of the Courts in Westminster Hall. Nevertheless this judgment has been approved of by all lawyers of repute since it was delivered.

Lord Thurlow (speaking last) argued at large against the validity of these bonds, and among other particulars observed, that one thing which struck him was, that ever since the establishment of the Church of England, this ecclesiastical office was an office for life. It is not competent to the bishop to give it for any less time than for life. And it never was competent to a bishop of any European Church that ever he heard of (and he had made inquiries) to give it for any less estate than an estate for life. The incumbent therefore derives entirely under and from the bishop an estate for life, grounded upon the original constitution of the office, and consequently invariable by law. If that be the constitution of the office, by what rule or principle can it be justified at common law, that such an officer should give a bond to his patron in order to hold the living for a less term than for life? In the argument of this cause, a question was asked, with respect to a bond given by a judge to resign his office of judge: what was the answer? The bond would be given to the king; and if given to the king, it would be void, because it would render the judges dependent upon the king, instead of being independent, as the statute of King William expresses it, quandiu se bene gesserint. A Master in Chancery is an officer appointed for life: suppose the Chancellor has the appointment of it; suppose such Master gives a bond to resign when called upon, would that bond be good at common law? No; because it is not only contrary to the constitution of his office, but because the public has an interest in the independence of that officer, as being appointed for life, and a public law officer; his place is independent, it is whilst he behaves himself well in that office; if he is an officer for life, how can any private man whatsoever, because it is his province to appoint him, take upon him to render that officer's situation such as the law said it should not be? And in the conclusion he moved, that the judgments of the Courts of Common Pleas and King's Bench in this cause be reversed. Which was determined accordingly, upon a division, nineteen against eighteen (z).

him institution. To this bill the defendant demurred; 1st, on account of the legality of such bond; 2nd, that the discovery was immaterial; but the demurrer was overruled. Bp. of London v. Ffytche, 1 Bro. C. C. p. 96.

Resignation
bonds holden good in special circumstances.

Since this case, a bond given to the patron by an incumbent on presentation to reside on the living, or to resign to the ordinary, if he did not return to it within one month after notice, and also not to commit waste, was adjudged to be good; for the condition was not, as in Ffytche's case, to secure an unqualified resignation, but to enforce the performance of moral, legal, and religious duties (a). And in a subsequent case, the condition of a bond appearing to be to reside, to keep the buildings on the living in repair, and to resign after one month's notice, in order that the patron's son, a youth of fourteen years of age, might be presented to the benefice, it was declared by the Court of King's Bench to be legal, without argument; this case not being precisely similar to Ffytche's, and the court understanding that both parties intended to appeal to the House of Lords (b). But the case does not appear to have gone further.

Particular resignation
bonds.

Fletcher v.
Lord Sondes.

The decision in Ffytche's case was however only considered to have established the illegality of general resignation bonds, and it was still supposed that bonds in favour of specified persons were legal. This doctrine was however completely overthrown by the decision of the House of Lords in Fletcher v. Lord Sondes, which reversed that of the Court of Queen's Bench (c). All the judges, with the exception of Bayley, J., Holroyd, J., and Littledale, J., delivered their opinions at length: three (Best, C. J., Burrough and Gaselee, JJ.) held the bond legal; six (Abbott, C. J., Alexander, C. B., Graham, B., Parke, J., Garrow, B., Hullock, B.) and the Lord Chancellor (Eldon) held a contrary opinion. The decision of the House of Lords was delivered by the Lord Chancellor on April 9th, 1827, as follows (d) :

“Having gone through all the circumstances of the case, he said, the question now for the consideration of their lordships was, whether this was a bond on which the party was entitled to sue; and in coming to a conclusion on this subject their lordships should consider themselves as judges in a court of justice, and his duty was not to state the case on any other ground than that which was warranted by law. He had not the slightest hesitation in saying, that before the decision given in the case of The Bishop of London v. Ffytche, this bond would have been held legal, but he was of opinion that it came within the principle which governed that decision. It had been argued by counsel at the bar that this bond could not be considered simoniacal, as the condition of the resignation was the presentation of a particular person, and that the obligee might see, and the bishop take care that on the resignation, no other person should be presented but the Rev. Henry Watson, the brother of Lord Sondes. Now, if the resignation were conditional, it would cease to be a resignation at all, and after an incumbent had resigned, was there any law upon earth which could compel a patron to present any particular person? It had already been decided in several instances, that a resignation, to be good, must be purè et absque conditione, otherwise the law said it was no resignation, or it was void. True it was, that two or three eminent persons were adverse to the decision in the case of The Bishop of London v. Ffytche, among whom was Lord Kenyon, to whose opinion in legal matters he paid the highest respect, and it was consequently urged, that that decision should govern no other case except such as was strictly in point, but his lordship thought that there was nothing in the present case which should take it out of the rule by which that decision was governed. The Bishop of London v. Ffytche, was a bond of general resignation, and if the incumbent resigned in the present case, could not the patron present whom he pleased? How then did it differ from a bond of general resignation? It had been urged, that if this bond should be judged simoniacal, the incumbent and the patron would be subject to heavy penalties, but it was their lordships’ business not to attend to anything but to the subject proposed for their consideration. How could they with propriety pronounce against the law to avoid the consequences of an illegal act? When he looked to the cases in the books, which were advanced in support of this judgment, he should say they were not well considered. One of them said, that a bond of resignation might be made in favour of a brother; another said in favour of a cousin or a near relation. But he would ask, what had the condition or relationship of the person in whose favour the bond was made to do with the question? That ought to be left out of consideration. Could a patron take a bond in favour of himself? If not, he could not take it in favour of any man on account of relationship, for no man is more nearly related to a patron than himself; and, if he could take such a bond, it would in construction of law be the same as a general bond of resignation, for it was evident he could present whom he pleased after. But, again, it was said, that it could not be held simoniacal, unless it appeared that some benefit could be derived from it. Might not such a bond be made covertly in consideration of money in this manner;—when the time for resignation arrived, the patron might say to the clergyman, ‘If you pay me a certain sum of money, I will allow you to hold your living longer.’ Could not such a thing be easily effected? He had no doubt but that this decision would come by surprise, and bear harshly on many patrons and clergymen, but he was not one of those who would hesitate to indemnify those who had hitherto committed themselves by such bonds, whether patrons or incumbents, provided that were done without touching on the general principles of the ecclesiastical laws of the country, some of which, it should be admitted, were severe. On the grounds before mentioned, he did not see how he could do otherwise than adjudge this a simoniacal contract: now, therefore, after the most profound consideration, he would move their lordships, that the judgment in the court below be reversed.”

The reporter proceeds to note that “the Archbishop of Canterbury entirely concurred in the opinion of the lord chancellor, which was agreeable to that of the majority of the judges; but he had to implore their lordships’ attention to this circumstance, that a large number, both of patrons and incumbents, had exposed themselves to severe penalties. His grace trusted, that however erroneously they had thus committed themselves, that House would afford them protection. He held in his hands a bill containing such restrictions as would protect bonds of this nature heretofore made, and exempt the parties from the penalties above alluded to; with their lordships’ permission he would move that it should be now read pro formâ, and on the second reading he would explain its provisions.”

c. 25.

This bill became 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 25, which enacted, that no presentation to any spiritual office made before 9th of April, 1827, should be void on account of any agreement to resign when another person specially named shall become qualified to take the same; that persons making such agreements should not be subject to any penalty on account thereof, and that all such made before 9th April, 1827, should be valid and effectual in law.

9 Geo. 4,
c. 94.

The object of this act was strictly retrospective, but in the following year the statute of 9 Geo. 4, c. 94, was passed, to govern all future transactions of this description:—

After reciting that “it is expedient that certain bonds, covenants, and other assurances for the resignation of ecclesiastical preferments, should be rendered valid in the cases and subject to the limitations hereinafter specified;” it enacts as follows:—

Sect. 1. “Every engagement by promise, grant, agreement, or covenant, which shall be really and bonâ fide made, given, or entered into at any time after the passing of this act, for the resignation of any spiritual office, being a benefice with cure of souls, dignity, prebend, or living ecclesiastical, to the intent or purpose, to be manifested by the terms of such engagement, that any one person whosoever, to be specially named and described therein, or one of two persons to be specially named and described therein, being such persons as are hereinafter mentioned, shall be presented, collated, nominated, or appointed to such spiritual office, or that the same shall be given or bestowed to or upon him, shall be good, valid, and effectual in the law to all intents and purposes whatsoever, and the performance of the same may also be enforced in equity: provided always, that such engagement shall be so entered into before the presentation, nomination, collation, or appointment of the party so entering into the same as aforesaid.”

Engagements to resign benefices in favour of a person named or in certain cases of one of two persons named to be valid.

Proviso.

Sect. 2. . . . “where two persons shall be so specially named and described in such engagement, each of them shall be, either by blood or marriage, an uncle, son, grandson, brother, nephew, or grand nephew of the patron or of one of the patrons of such spiritual office, not being merely a trustee or trustees of the patronage of the same, or of the person or one of the persons for whom the patron or patrons shall be a trustee or trustees, or of the person or one of the persons by whose direction such presentation, collation, gift, or bestowing shall be intended to be made, or of any married woman whose husband in her right shall be the patron or one of the patrons of such spiritual office, or of any other person in whose right such presentation, collation, gift, or bestowing shall be intended to be made.”

Relationship of such persons.

Sect. 3. “No presentation, collation, gift, or bestowing to or of any such spiritual office of or upon any spiritual person, to be made after the passing of this act, nor any admission, institution, investiture, or induction thereupon, shall be void, frustrate, or of no effect in law for or by reason of any such engagement so to be made, given, or entered into by such spiritual person, or any other person or persons, to or with the patron or patrons of such spiritual office, or to or with any other person or persons, for the resignation of the same as aforesaid; and it shall not be lawful for the King’s most excellent majesty, his heir or successors, for or by reason of any such engagements as aforesaid, to present or collate unto, or give or bestow such spiritual office; and such spiritual person, and patron or patrons, or other person or persons respectively, shall not be liable to any pains, penalty, forfeitures, loss, or disability, nor to any prosecution or other proceeding, civil, criminal or penal, in any court, ecclesiastical or temporal, for or by reason of his, her or their having made,

No presentation to any spiritual office shall be void by reason of such agreement to resign.

Persons making such agreement not to be liable to penalty, &c.

Such presentations to be valid.

Statute not to extend to any engagements, unless the deed be deposited within two months with the registrar of the diocese or peculiar jurisdiction wherein the benefice is situated.

Deed to be open to inspection; certified copy thereof to be evidence.

Fees.

Resignation to state the engagement, and name of person for whom made.

Resignation to be void unless the person be presented within six months.

Nothing herein to extend to presentations made by the king, &c.

given, or entered into, or accepted or taken such engagement as aforesaid; and every such presentation or collation, or gift or bestowing, to be made after the passing of this act, and every admission, institution, investiture, and induction thereupon, shall be as valid and effectual in the law to all intents and purposes whatsoever as if such engagement had not been made, given, or entered into, or accepted or taken; anything in the act 31 Eliz. c. 6 to the contrary in anywise notwithstanding."

Sect. 4. . . "nothing in this act shall extend to the case of any such engagement as aforesaid, unless one part of the deed, instrument, or writing by which such engagement shall be made, given, or entered into, shall, within the space of two calendar months next after the date thereof, be deposited in the office of the registrar of the diocese wherein the benefice with cure of souls, dignity, prebend, or living ecclesiastical, for the resignation whereof such engagement shall be made, given, or entered into as aforesaid, shall be locally situate, except as to such benefices with cure of souls, dignities, prebends, or livings ecclesiastical, as are under the peculiar jurisdiction of any archbishop or bishop, in which case such document as aforesaid shall be deposited in the office of the registrar of that peculiar jurisdiction to which any such benefice with cure of souls, dignity, prebend, or living ecclesiastical, shall be subject."

The registrar is to preserve the deed, and to give a certificate of deposit. The deed is to be produced to any one applying to inspect it; certified office copies are to be evidence; the registrar is to have a fee of 2s. for the deposit and certificate, 1s. for every search, and 6d. a folio for every copy.

Sect. 5. "Every resignation to be made in pursuance of any such engagement as aforesaid shall refer to the engagement in pursuance of which it is made, and state the name of the person for whose benefit it is made; and it shall not be lawful for the ordinary to refuse such resignation, unless upon good and sufficient cause to be shown for that purpose; and such resignation shall not be valid or effectual, except for the purpose of allowing the person for whose benefit it shall be so made to be presented, collated, nominated or appointed to the spiritual office thereby resigned, and shall be absolutely null and void unless such person shall be presented, collated, nominated, or appointed as aforesaid within six calendar months next after notice of such resignation shall have been given to the patron or patrons of such spiritual office."

Sect. 6. . . "nothing in this act shall extend to any case where the presentation, collation, gift, or bestowing to or of any such spiritual office as aforesaid shall be made by the king's most excellent majesty, his heirs or successors, in right of his crown or of his duchy of Lancaster; or by any archbishop, bishop, or other ecclesiastical person, in right of his archbishopric, bishopric, or other ecclesiastical living, office, or dignity; or by any other body politic or corporate, whether aggregate or sole, or by any other person or persons, in right of any office or dignity ; or by any company, or any feoffees or trustees for charitable or other public purposes ; or by any other person or persons not entitled to the patronage of such spiritual office as private property."

To return to the statute 31 Eliz. c. 6. It enacts, as has been set forth, that all presentations, &c.—

Shall be utterly void, frustrate, and of none effect in Law.— Before that act, they were only voidable by deprivation ; but hereby they are made void without any deprivation, or sentence declaratory in the ecclesiastical court, as was adjudged in the case of Hickcock v. Hickcock ; so as the parishioners may deny their tithes, and allege in the spiritual court that the tithe-owner came in by simony. But Hutton said, there was no remedy for the tithes which a simoniacal incumbent had actually received (e). Parishioners, in an action for treble damages, might plead him no parson, because of the simony (f). The incumbent presented by the crown upon an act of simony can maintain ejectment against the simoniacal incumbent, without waiting for his deprivation (g). But in an action for use and occupation, by an incumbent against a tenant of the glebe lands, the defendant cannot give evidence of a simoniacal presentation of the plaintiff in order to avoid his title, because having occupied by the licence of his landlord, he cannot afterwards, in such an action, dispute his title (h).

Simoniacal presentation void, not voidable.

But here is to be observed a diversity between a presentation or collation, made by a rightful patron and an usurper. For in case of the rightful patron, who corruptly presents or collates, by the express letter of this act the king shall present ; but when one usurps, and corruptly presents or collates, there the king shall not present, but the rightful patron ; for the branch of the act that gives the king power to present, is only intended where the rightful patron is in fault ; but where he is in no fault, there the corrupt act and wrong of the usurper shall not prejudice his title (i).

And it shall be lawful for the Queen to present for that one Time or Turn only.—In this particular the penalty of simony which was by the canon law, with regard to the patron, is somewhat mitigated, the canons which had been made both at home and abroad (when they speak of this loss of patronage) making it perpetual (k). But because patronage in England is accounted a temporal matter, and corrupt patrons were not to be reached by the ecclesiastical laws (which could only touch the incumbent) ; therefore for the more effectual discouragement of simony, by affecting the patron also, this statute was made (l).

And the Person so corruptly taking, procuring, seeking or accepting.]—According to Bishop Gibson, it was said by Tanfield, Chief Baron, in Calvert and Kitchin's case, that if a clerk seeks to obtain a presentation by money, although afterwards the patron present him gratis, yet this simoniacal attempt has disabled him to take that benefice (o).

Penalties.

Be adjudged a disabled Person in Law, to have or enjoy the same Benefice.]—Many of the ancient canons of the church make deposition the punishment of simony, whether in bishops or presbyters; others make it deprivation. But the civil and canon law observe a difference in point of penalty between a person guilty of simony and a person simoniacally promoted. If the clerk himself is privy or party to the simony, he is to be deprived of that [benefice], and for ever disabled to accept any other; but if he is only simoniacally promoted by simony between two other persons, whereunto he was not privy, he is deprivable by reason of the corruption (p), but not disabled to take any other [benefice]. In like manner, according to this statute, if the presentee was not privy to the simony, though the church is become void by the simony, yet he is not disabled from being presented again; for a man cannot be said to be corruptly taking, who is not privy to the corrupt agreement. But a presentee who was privy to the simony, is a person disabled to enjoy the same benefice during life, nor can the king or any other dispense with the disability (q).

In Rex v. The Bishop of Oxford (r), a rule was obtained, calling on the bishop to show cause why a writ of mandamus should not issue, commanding him to license the Reverend Isaac Knipe, clerk, to officiate as chaplain or curate of the church or chapel of Piddington. The chapel was endowed by deed in 1428, whereby it was provided that the curate should receive all the small tithes, and be appointed by the inhabitants. In 1797 an act passed for inclosing certain lands in the township of Piddington, which left the right of the curate as to tithes on the same footing as it stood previous to the passing of the act. In 1801, upon a vacancy, the inhabitants appointed and presented a curate upon an agreement signed by him and the principal inhabitants, whereby he admitted that a certain sum of money therein specified was the immemorial money payment to the curate out of the lands of the township. It was holden by the Court of King's Bench, that this agreement, entered into for the purpose of restraining the curate from asserting his claim to the small tithes by due course of law, and furnishing evidence against his successors, was simoniacal, and the presentation made thereon void.

In Greenwood v. Woodham, an action for penalties under 31 Eliz. c. 6, in 1841, for a simoniacal contract to present, the declaration alleged a contract by the clerk to buy the advowson if he were presented to the living, and a presentation in pursuance of such contract; it was holden that proof of presentation was essential to the action, and that for that purpose it was not enough to show that the defendant prepared a presentation and tendered it to the bishop's secretary, which never was in fact used or acted upon, the clerk having been afterwards instituted on his own petition as equitable owner of the advowson (s).

Greenwood v. Woodham.

Admit, Institute, Install, Induct.]—The reason of this clause, Lord Coke tells us (for, he says, he was of that parliament, and observed the proceedings therein) was to avoid hasty and precipitate admissions and institutions to the prejudice of them that had right to present, by putting them to a quare impedit; and it is presumed that no such haste or precipitation is used but for a corrupt end and purpose (t).

Intention of act to avoid hasty institutions.

Immediately after the Investing, Installation or Induction.]—Albeit the church is full by institution, against all but the king: yet the church becomes not void by this branch of the act until after induction (u).

Church not void until after induction.

Shall not in anywise extend to take away or restrain any Punishment, Pain or Penalty, limited, prescribed or inflicted by the Laws Ecclesiastical.]—So far are the ancient ecclesiastical laws against simony, and the power of the spiritual court in the execution of those laws, from being superseded by this act, that hereby they are expressly confirmed. And all promises and contracts of what kind soever being forbidden, and by consequence punishable by the laws ecclesiastical, it follows that it could not be the intention of the legislators to make this statute the rule and measure of simony, but only to check and restrain it in the most notorious instances (x).

Saving of ecclesiastical penalties.

Which consideration seems fully to warrant Bishop Stillingfleet's observation, that this statute does not abrogate the ecclesiastical laws as to simony, but only enacts some particular penalties on some more remarkable simoniacal acts, as to benefices and orders; but does not go about to repeal any ecclesiastical laws about simony, or to determine the nature and bounds of it; and also the observation of Archbishop Wake, that this act is not privative of the jurisdiction of the church, or its constitutions, but accumulative; that it leaves to the church all the authority which it had before; only whereas before these crimes were inquirable and punishable by the ecclesiastical judge alone, they may now in some cases specified in this statute, be brought before the civil magistrate also (x).

3. Punishable in Ecclesiastical Court.

Earlier cases.

In Baker v. Rogers (y) it was said, "It appertains to the spiritual court to determine simony, and not to this court (Common Pleas) to meddle therewith; and in Riesby v. Wentworth (z), the court agreed, on application for a prohibition, that simony might be more aptly tried in the spiritual court; and a consultation was awarded.

Dobie v. Masters.

The first modern case of proceeding in the Ecclesiastical Court is that of Dobie v. Masters (a). In this case Dr. Phillimore moved the court in the behalf of Alexander Dobie, of the parish of Saint Clement's Danes, to allow the office of the judge to be promoted against the Rev. John Whalley Masters, rector of Chorley in Lancashire, in a cause of simony; and to permit a citation to be taken out against him for having purchased the immediate possession of the vicarage of Saint Nicholas, in the castle of Carisbrook, in the Isle of Wight.

The authorities above set forth, a dictum of Pollexfen, J., in Boyle v. Boyle (b), Degge (c), and Lucy v. The Bishop of St. David's (d), were cited, and the following passage in Clarke's Praxis: "Si (e) clericus commisit simoniam in obtinendo beneficium ecclesiasticum, potest sive ex officio iudicis, sive ad instantiam partis conveniri ac juxta sanctiones canonicas puniri, sic etiam laici participes ejusdem criminis," a passage which has been adopted by Oughton to its full extent (f).

The citation was ordered to issue, but the cause never came to a decision.

the ecclesiastical laws, in some circumstances, are more severe than this statute; for by that law, as I take it, he that is convicted of simony is after incapacitated not only to that living, but to all other church preferments; but of this be informed by the canonist. Degge, p. 61.

criminal proceeding of a like description, Sir J. Nicholl holding, first, that the clerk proceeded against had not been proved to be privy to having made or confirmed any simoniactal contract, secondly, that no criminal contract had been established, dismissed him from the suit, and condemned his prosecutor in costs. It was thought to have been intimated in the course of the suit that an ecclesiastical court cannot proceed to deprivation in a criminal suit against a clerk who is simoniacè promotus, without his privy or subsequent confirmation (h).

The main charge against the Bishop of St. David's was for simony, or, as it is expressed in the citation, propter simoniam sive crimen simoniacæ pravitatis (i). Bishop of St. David's case.

On the bishop's first application for a prohibition, after the general question of jurisdiction had been disposed of, counsel then moved that the matters were of temporal conusance, and not conusable by the archbishop,—that the contract amounted only to a temporal contract; but the whole court was of opinion, that though it was a contract it was a simoniactal contract, and then it will be examinable in the spiritual court; not whether the contract ought to be performed or not, but to punish the party by ecclesiastical censures: this was proper before the statute of Elizabeth, and it was saved by the statute. That the common law takes no notice of any simony but that which the statute enjoins; and the statute has not defined simony in any manner as to say what shall be simony and what not by the ecclesiastical law.

Another argument for the prohibition was, that the charge was for taking excessive fees, which was punishable by indictment at common law; to this it was answered by the counsel, that these offences by the canon law, and in the spiritual court, were simony, quod fuit concessum per totam curiam.

Other objections were urged: but the court said, that the distinction which would answer almost all the objections was this, that as to that which relates to the office of bishop, and against his duty as a bishop, the spiritual court may proceed against him to deprive him, but not punish him as for a temporal offence.

The tenor of the sentence of deprivation was: “Propter diversa crimina et excessus, et præsertim crimen simoniæ sive simoniacæ pravitatis.”

One charge was his appointing a clergyman to a living “turpis lucri, et proprii quæstûs causâ, intervenientibus fraude, pacto, et simoniacâ pravitatè.” And the transactions were described in the sentence to be “contrà sacros canones et leges in Ecclesiâ Anglicanâ receptas.”

tation of the Cathedral Church of York, and appointed Dr. Phillimore his commissary for the purpose of carrying it into execution. Among other presentments made to the commissary was one charging the dean with selling the presentations to the vicarages in his patronage. This charge was holden to be proved, and the offence to be simony, and the commissary proceeded to deprive the dean. A part of the judgment has already been quoted (k).

Why judgment annulled by Court of Queen's Bench.

The Court of Queen's Bench subsequently annulled this judgment on the ground that the visitor had exceeded his powers, and that he ought to have proceeded under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 86 (l).

It was afterwards intended to proceed de novo against the dean under the 3 & 4 Vict. c. 86, and the opinion of the attorney-general, Sir John (afterwards Lord) Campbell, was taken as to whether the dean, being a spiritual person, was not guilty of simony in selling the next presentation to livings in his gift. The opinion was as follows:—

Opinion of Sir John Campbell as to subsequent proceedings.

"I am of opinion that it will be proper in this case to institute proceedings under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 86. I conceive that for a spiritual person to sell the next presentation of a living which he holds by right of his benefice, whether voidable or not, is simony by the canon law; and I think that the dean's letter, coupled with the evidence of John Singleton, makes out such a case of simony. No reasonable man can doubt that the advance of the 100*l*. was the consideration for the grant of the next presentation, whatever colour one of the parties may try to give it. The presentation of Taylor was, I think, an offence within the two years, although the agreement to present might be beyond the two years.

Lee v. Merest.

"In Lee v. Merest (n), a criminal suit brought in the Court of Arches in 1869 against a clerk in holy orders by the secretary to the Bishop of Worcester, it was proved that the defendant had been guilty of simony, by reason of his having corruptly and simoniacally obtained presentation and institution to his vicarage, and also of conduct unbecoming a clergyman in unlawfully threatening a certain person to publish a libel upon him with the intent of extorting money. The court founding its sentence, in respect of the offence of simony, upon the general ecclesiastical as well as statute law, pronounced that the defendant was a disabled person in law to have the vicarage, and that his presentation thereto, and his admission and institution thereupon, were void and frustrate, and of no effect in law; and having regard to all the circumstances of the case, the offence of misconduct as well as that of simony, it further pronounced upon him a sentence of deprivation from the ministry and from the performance of all clerical functions whatsoever in the province of Canterbury, and condemned him in the costs of the suit. And it directed the registrar to apprise the queen's proctor of the sentence in order that her Majesty might exercise her right of presentation to the vacant benefice given by the statute."

4. Under later Statute Law.

By 1 Will. & Mar. c. 16, s. 1, "Whereas it hath often happened, that persons simoniac or simoniacally promoted to benefices or ecclesiastical livings, have enjoyed the benefit of such livings many years, and sometimes all their lifetime, by reason of the secret carriage of such simoniacal dealing, and after the death of such simoniac person, another person, innocent of such crime, and worthy of such preferment, being presented or promoted by any other patron innocent also of that simoniacal contract, have been troubled and removed upon pretence of lapse or otherwise, to the prejudice of the innocent patron in reversion, and of his clerk, whereby the guilty goeth away with profit of his crime, and the innocent succeeding patron and his clerk are punished, contrary to all reason and good conscience;" for prevention thereof it is enacted, "that after the death of the person so simoniacally promoted, the offence or contract of simony shall, neither by way of title in pleading, or in evidence to a jury, or otherwise, hereafter be alleged or pleaded to the prejudice of any other patron innocent of simony, or of his clerk by him presented or promoted, upon pretence of lapse to the Crown, or Metropolitan, or otherwise unless the person simoniac or simoniacally promoted, or his patron, was convicted of such offence at the common law, or in some ecclesiastical court, in the life-time of the person simoniac or simoniacally promoted or presented. . . ."

Special provision has been made by 9 & 10 Vict. c. 88, and 32 & 33 Vict. c. 94, ss. 12, 13, that assignments by spiritual persons of their rights of patronage, in order to facilitate the formation of new parishes under the Church Building and New Parishes Acts, shall not be holden simoniacal or within the prohibitions of this section. SECT. 5.—Non-Residence.

Sources of the law.

The law as to residence, so far as it relates to the parochial clergy (u), is now also mainly governed by the statute 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106 (x). But it is expedient to preserve some notice of the previous law. It may be considered as follows:—

1. By Canon Law.
2. Privileged Persons.
3. Excuses for Non-Residence.

Residence by Canon law.

The ancient law of the Church upon this important subject, and its restoration by the Council of Trent, are thus emphatically stated by Van Espen (y): “Nihil adeo vocationi clericali oppositum; nihil Ecclesiæ magis probrosum et laicis scandalosum esse, quam otiosam ac inertem clericorum vitam, ratione et experientiâ compertum est. Hinc jam pridem sollicita fuit ecclesia ne quis in Clerum assumeretur, nisi certo loco ascriberetur ubi functionibus ordini suo convenientibus occuparetur et vitam Clerico dignam institueret. Disciplinam hanc Canone sexto Concilii Chalcedonensis probatam, sed temporum injuriâ pene collapsam, restauratam volens Synodus Tridentina, inhærendo vestigiis dicti concilii statuit ut nullus in posterum ordinatur, qui illi Ecclesiæ, aut pio loco, pro cujus necessitate aut utilitate assumitur, non adscribatur, ubi suis fungitur muneribus, nec incertis vagetur sedibus.” Sess. 23, cap. 16, De Resid.

Otho. “The bishop shall provide, that in every church there shall be one resident, who shall take care of the cure of souls, and exercise himself profitably and honestly in performing divine service and administration of the sacraments” (z).

Penalty for non-residence.

The rule of the ancient canon law was, that if a clergyman deserted his church or prebend without just and necessary cause, and especially without the consent of the diocesan, he should be deprived. And agreeably hereunto was the practice in this realm; for though sometimes the bishop proceeded only to sequestration or other censures of an inferior nature, yet the more frequent punishment was deprivation (a).

Common law confirms the Canon law.

Regularly, personal residence is required of ecclesiastical persons upon their cures; and to that end, by the common law, if he that has a benefice with cure be chosen to an office of bailiff, or beadle, or the like secular office, he may have the king's writ for his discharge (b).

For the intendment of the common law is, that a clerk is resident upon his cure; insomuch that in an action of debt brought against J. S., rector of D., the defendant pleading that he was demurrant and conversant at B. in another county, the plea was overruled; for since the defendant denied not that he was rector of the church of D., he shall be deemed by law to be demurrant and conversant there for the cure of souls (c).

The acts 21 Hen. 8, c. 13 (d), 25 Hen. 8, c. 16, 28 Hen. 8, c. 13, and 57 Geo. 3, c. 99, contained provisions for exempting from residence the chaplains of certain distinguished persons. These acts, however, have all now been repealed.

Peccham. "We do decree, that rectors who do not make personal residence in their churches, and who have no vicars, shall exhibit the grace of hospitality by their stewards according to the ability of the church, so that at least the extreme necessity of the poor parishioners be relieved; and they who come there, and in their passage preach the word of God, may receive necessary sustenance, that the churches be not justly forsaken of the preachers through the violence of want, for the workman is worthy of his meat, and no man is obliged to warfare at his own cost" (e).

It may be well to mention some of the excuses for non-residence which were holden to exempt the party alleging them from the penalties imposed by the 10th section of 57 Geo. 3, c. 99:—Total want of health, such that the incumbent could not reside but at the risk of life, was holden a sufficient excuse for an absence of twenty years (f), but neither the want of a parsonage-house excused the incumbent's residing out of the parish (g), nor a sequestration upon a feri facias of a benefice with cure (h). The non-residence on one benefice under a licence from the diocesan thereof was holden not equivalent to actual residence thereon, so as to excuse the incumbent's non-residence on another benefice: therefore a bishop's retrospective certificate that he would have granted a licence for non-residence because the incumbent was performing the duties of another benefice, within two miles of which he lived by licence from another diocesan, not being allowed by the archbishop, was void, but good with the archbishop's certificate, though granted after 1st July, 1814 (i). If a clergyman who had two livings resided within one of the parishes wherein there was no house of residence, it was a sufficient residence there to exempt him without licence from the bishop from penalties for not residing on the other benefice (k). A private statute annexed the rectory of H. to the deanery of Windsor, and recited that the necessary residence on the deanery, and the dean's attendance on her Majesty as registrar of the Order of the Garter, would oblige him to be often absent from H., and the statute compelled him to appoint a stipendiary curate constantly resident at H.; and it appeared that this, without more, conferred an excuse for non-residence at H., although in the subsequent act of 43 Geo. 3, c. 84, imposing residence on all benefices not therein excepted, this is not enumerated as a ground of exemption or of licence (l). It seems to have been doubtful whether a clergyman was willfully absent from his benefice during the time he was in custody for debt, under an arrest made while he was residing out of his parish (m).

Licence for non-residence before 1 & 2
Vict. c. 106.

Where a licence for non-residence had been obtained previously to the 14th of July, 1814, pursuant to 54 Geo. 3, c. 54, but the allowance by the archbishop required by 43 Geo. 3, c. 84, s. 20, had not been obtained till after that period, the licence, when ratified, was valid from the time when it was originally granted (n). A licence of non-residence on a benefice within an archbishop's peculiar locally situated in another diocese, need not be registered in the registry of the diocese, but ought to be registered in the registry of the archbishop (o). A licence to an incumbent to absent himself from a living might be revoked under peculiar circumstances (p).

Conditions under old law.

Canon 47 of 1603, requiring every beneficed man licensed not to reside upon his benefice, to cause his cure to be supplied by a curate, has already been given (q).

By the old faculty of dispensation a pluralist was required "in that benefice, from which he shall happen to be most absent, to preach thirteen sermons every year, and to exercise hospitality for two months yearly; and for that time, according to the fruits and profits thereof, as much as in him lieth to support and relieve the needy inhabitants of that parish, especially the poor and needy" (r).

the benefice, to be treated of hereafter in Chapter VII. of this Part of this Work. 2. By the infliction of penalties. 3. By the compulsory appointment of a curate.

As to the infliction of penalties, sect. 32 of the Act provides, Penalties for “That every spiritual person holding any benefice shall keep non-residence residence on his benefice, and in the house of residence (if any) on incumbent belonging thereto; and if any such person shall, without any such not having a licence or exemption as is in this act allowed for that purpose, or licence or unless he shall be resident at some other benefice of which he may exemption, be possessed, absent himself from such benefice, or from such house unless he be of residence, if any, for any period exceeding the space of three resident on months together, or to be accounted at several times in any one another year, he shall, when such absence shall exceed three months and benefice. not exceed six months, forfeit one-third part of the annual value of the benefice from which he shall so absent himself; and when such absence shall exceed six months and not exceed eight months, one-half part of such annual value; and when such absence shall exceed eight months, two-third parts of such annual value; and when such absence shall have been for the whole of the year, three-fourth parts of such annual value.”

This statute, however, allows non-residence in certain specified instances, as follows:

Sect. 33. “It shall be lawful for any bishop, upon application Licence in in writing by any spiritual person holding any benefice within certain cases his diocese whereon there shall be no house or no fit house of to reside in residence, by licence under his hand and seal, to be registered in house not to do, to permit such person to reside in some fit and convenient benefice. house, although not belonging to such benefice, such house to be particularly described and specified in such licence, and for a certain time to be therein also specified, not exceeding the period by this act limited, and from time to time, as such bishop may think fit, to renew such licence; and every such house shall be a legal house of residence for such specified time to all intents and purposes: Provided always, that no such licence shall be granted to such spiritual person to reside in any house unless it be within three miles of the church or chapel of such benefice; nor in case such church or chapel be in any city, or market or borough town, unless such house be within two miles of such church or chapel.”

Houses purchased by governors of Queen Anne's bounty to be deemed residences.

Sect. 34. "And whereas the governors of the bounty of Queen Anne have purchased, built, or procured, and may hereafter purchase, build, or procure, by way of benefaction or donation to poor benefices, houses not situate within the parishes or places wherein such benefices lie, but so near thereto as to be sufficiently convenient and suitable for the residence of the officiating ministers thereof; be it therefore enacted, that such houses, having been previously approved by the bishop of the diocese, by writing under his hand and seal duly registered in the registry of the diocese, shall be deemed the houses of residence belonging to such benefices to all intents and purposes whatsoever."

Vicar or perpetual curate may reside in rectory house.

Sect. 35. "In all cases of rectories having vicarages endowed or perpetual curacies the residence of the vicar or perpetual curate in the rectory house of such benefice shall be deemed a legal residence to all intents and purposes whatever; provided that the house belonging to the vicarage or perpetual curacy be kept in proper repair to the satisfaction of the bishop of the diocese."

Successors excused while predecessor's widow remains.

By sect. 36, the widow of any spiritual person may continue in the house of residence for two months after his decease; during which time it is presumed the successor would be excused.

Privileges for temporary non-residence.

Sect. 38. "No spiritual person being dean of any cathedral or collegiate church, during such time as he shall reside upon his deanery, and no spiritual person having or holding any professorship or any public readership in either of the said universities, while actually resident within the precincts of the university, and reading lectures therein (provided always, that a certificate under the hand of the vice-chancellor or warden of the university, stating the fact of such residence, and of the due performance of such duties, shall in every such case be transmitted to the bishop of the diocese wherein the benefice held by such spiritual person is situate within six weeks after the thirty-first day of December in each year); and no spiritual person serving as chaplain of the Queen's or King's most excellent Majesty, or of the Queen dowager, or of any of the Queen's or King's children, brethren, or sisters, during so long as he shall actually attend in the discharge of his duty as such chaplain in the household to which he shall belong; and no chaplain of any archbishop or bishop, whilst actually attending in the discharge of his duty as such chaplain; and no spiritual person actually serving as chaplain of the House of Commons, or as clerk of the Queen's or King's closet, or as a deputy clerk thereof, while any such person shall be actually attending and performing the functions of his office; and no spiritual person serving as chancellor or vicar-general or commissary of any diocese, whilst exercising the duties of his office; or as archdeacon, while upon his visitations, or otherwise engaged in the exercise of his archidiaconal functions; or as dean or subdean, or priest or reader, in any of the Queen's or King's royal chapels at St. James's or Whitehall, or as reader in the Queen's or King's private chapels at Windsor or elsewhere, or as preacher in any of the inns of court, or at the rolls, whilst actually performing the duty of any such office respectively; and no spiritual person, being provost of Eton College, or warden of Winchester College, or master of the Charter House, or principal of Saint David's College, or principal of King's College, London, during the time for which he may be required to reside and shall actually reside therein respectively, shall be liable to any of the penalties or forfeitures in this act contained for or on account of non-residence on any benefice for the time in any year during which he shall be so as aforesaid resident, engaged, or performing duties, as the case may be, but every such spiritual person shall, with respect to residence on a benefice under this act, be entitled to account the time in any year during which he shall be so as aforesaid resident, engaged, or performing duties, as the case may be, as if he had legally resided during the same time on some other benefice; any thing in this act contained to the contrary notwithstanding."

Sect. 39. "It shall be lawful for any spiritual person, being prebendary, canon, priest vicar, vicar choral, or minor canon in any cathedral or collegiate church, or being a fellow of one of the said colleges of Eton or Winchester, who shall reside and perform the duties of such office during the period for which he shall be required to reside and perform such duties by the charter or statutes of such cathedral or collegiate church or college, as the case may be, to account such residence as if he had resided on some benefice: Provided always, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to permit or allow any such prebendary, canon, priest vicar, vicar choral, minor canon, or fellow, to be absent from any benefice on account of such residence and performance of duty for more than five months altogether in any one year, including the time of such residence on his prebend, canonry, vicarage, or fellowship: Provided also, that it shall be lawful for any spiritual person having or holding any such office in any cathedral or collegiate church or college in which the year for the purposes of residence is accounted to commence at any other period than the first of January, and who may keep the periods of residence required for two successive years at such cathedral or collegiate church or college, in whole or in part, between the first of January and the thirty-first of December in any one year, to account such residence, although exceeding five months in the year, as reckoned from the first of January to the thirty-first of December, as if he had resided on some benefice, anything in this act contained to the contrary notwithstanding."

Performance of cathedral duties, &c. may be accounted as residence under certain restrictions.

By sect. 37, certain persons appointed to offices before this act were made exempt from penalties for non-residence.

Preservation of rights then existing.

By sect. 40, the existing rights as to exemptions and licences of persons who were in possession of any benefice at the time of the passing of this act were preserved.

If house of residence not kept in repair by non-resident incumbent he is to be liable to the penalties for non-residence.

Sect. 41. . . . "Every spiritual person having any house of residence upon his benefice, who shall not reside therein, shall, during such period or periods of non-residence, whether the same shall be for the whole or part of any year, keep such house of residence in good and sufficient repair; and in every such case it shall be lawful for the bishop to cause a survey of such house of residence to be made by some competent person, the costs of which, in case the house shall be found to be out of repair, shall be borne by such spiritual person; and if the surveyor shall report that such house of residence is out of repair, it shall be lawful for the bishop to issue his monition to the incumbent to put the same in repair, according to such survey and report, a copy of which shall be annexed to the monition; and every such non-resident spiritual person who shall not keep such house of residence in repair, and who shall not, upon such monition, and within one month after service of such monition show cause to the contrary to the satisfaction of the bishop, or put such house in repair within the space of ten months, to the satisfaction of such bishop, shall be liable to all the penalties for non-residence imposed by this act during the period of such house of residence remaining out of repair, and until the same shall have been put in repair" (r).

As to licences for non-residence it is enacted as follows:—

Every petition for licence for non-residence to be in writing, and to state certain particulars.

Sect. 42. "Every spiritual person applying for a licence for non-residence shall present to the bishop a petition signed by himself, or by some person approved by the bishop in that behalf, and shall state therein whether such spiritual person intends to perform the duty of his benefice in person, and in that case where and at what distance from the church or chapel of such benefice he intends to reside; and if he intends to employ a curate such petition shall state what salary he proposes to give to such curate, and whether the curate proposes to reside or not to reside in the parish in which such benefice is situate: and if the curate intends to reside therein, then whether in the house of residence belonging to such benefice, or in some and what other house; and if he does not intend to reside in the parish, then such petition shall state at what distance therefrom, and at what place, such curate intends to reside, and whether such curate serves any other and what parish as incumbent or curate, or has any and what cathedral preferment, and any and what benefice, or officiates in any other and what church or chapel; and such petition shall also state the annual value and the population of the benefice in respect of which any licence for non-residence shall be applied for, and the number of churches or chapels, if more than one, upon such benefice, and the date of the admission of such spiritual person to the said benefice; and it shall not be lawful for the bishop to grant any such licence unless such petition shall contain a statement of the several particulars aforesaid; and every such petition shall be filed in the registry of the diocese by the registrar thereof, and shall be open to inspection, and copies thereof made, with the leave in writing of the bishop."

Sect. 43. "It shall be lawful for the bishop, upon such petition being presented to him, and upon such proofs being adduced as to any facts stated in any such petition as he may think necessary and shall require, to grant, in such cases as are hereinafter enumerated, in which he shall think fit to grant the same, a licence in writing under his hand for such spiritual person to reside out of the proper house of residence of his benefice, or out of the limits of his benefice, or out of the limits prescribed by this act, for the purpose of exempting such person from any pecuniary penalty in respect of any non-residence thereon; which licence shall express the cause of granting the same licence (that is to say), to any spiritual person who shall be prevented from residing in the proper house of residence, or within the limits of such benefice, or within the limits prescribed by this act, by any incapacity of mind or body; and also for a period not exceeding six months to any spiritual person on account of the dangerous illness of his wife or child making part of his family, and residing with him as such; but that no such licence on account of the illness of a wife or child shall be renewed save with the allowance of the archbishop of the province previously signified under his hand in pursuance of a recommendation in writing from the bishop, setting forth the circumstances, proofs and reasons which induced him to make such recommendation; and also to any spiritual person having or holding any benefice wherein there shall be no house of residence, or where the house of residence shall be unfit for the residence of such spiritual person, such unfitness not being occasioned by any negligence, default or other misconduct of such spiritual person, and such spiritual person keeping such house of residence, if any, and the buildings belonging thereto, in good and sufficient repair and condition to the satisfaction of the bishop, and a certificate under the hand of two neighbouring incumbents, countersigned by the rural dean, if any, that no house convenient for the residence of such spiritual person can be obtained within the parish, or within the limits prescribed by this act, being first produced to the bishop; and also to grant to any spiritual person holding any benefice, and occupying in the same parish any mansion or messuage whereof he shall be the owner, a licence to reside in such mansion or messuage, such spiritual person keeping the house of residence and other buildings belonging thereto in good and sufficient repair and condition, and producing to the bishop proof to his satisfaction at the time of granting every such licence of such good and sufficient repair and condition: Provided always, that any such spiritual person, within one month after refusal of any such licence, may appeal to the archbishop of the province, who shall confirm such refusal, or direct the bishop to grant a licence under this act, as shall seem to the said archbishop just and proper."

In cases not enumerated bishops may grant licences to reside out of limits of benefice, subject to allowance by the archbishop.

Sect. 44. "... it shall be lawful for any bishop, in any case not hereinbefore enumerated, in which such bishop shall think it expedient, to grant to any spiritual person holding any benefice within his diocese a licence to reside out of the limits of such benefice: Provided always, that in every such case the nature and special circumstances thereof, and the reasons that have induced such bishop to grant such licence, shall be forthwith transmitted to the archbishop of the province, who shall forthwith proceed therein as hereinafter provided in cases of appeal, and shall allow or disallow such licence in the whole or in part or make any alteration therein, as to the period for which the same may have been granted or otherwise; and no such licence shall be valid unless it shall have been so allowed by such archbishop, such allowance thereof being signified by the signing thereof by such archbishop: Provided also, that it shall not be necessary in such licence to specify the cause of granting the same."

By whom licences may be granted while a see is vacant, &c.

Sect. 45. "... during the vacancy of any see the power of granting licences of non-residence under this act, subject to the regulations herein contained, shall be exercised by the guardian of the spiritualities of the diocese; or in case the bishop of any diocese shall be disabled from exercising in person the functions of his office, such power shall be exercised by the person or persons lawfully empowered to exercise his general jurisdiction in the diocese: Provided always, that no licence granted by any other than the bishop shall be valid until the archbishop of the province shall have signified his approbation of the grant of such licence by signing the same."

Duration of licences.

Sect. 46. "... no licence for non-residence granted under this act . . . shall continue in force after the 31st day of December in the year next after the year in which such licence shall have been or shall be granted."

Fees for licence.

Sect. 47 imposes fees, ten shillings "over and above the stamp duty" "to the secretary or officer of the bishop, or other person granting" the licence; three shillings to the registrar of the diocese; and five shillings to the secretary of the archbishop, "when any such licence shall have been signed by such archbishop."

Licences not to be void by the death or removal of the grantor.

Sect. 48. "... no licence of non-residence shall become void by the death or removal of the bishop granting the same, but the same shall be and remain valid notwithstanding any such death or removal, unless the same shall be revoked as hereinafter mentioned."

Licences may be revoked.

Sect. 49. "... it shall be lawful for any archbishop or bishop who shall have granted any licence of non-residence as aforesaid, or for any successor of any such archbishop or bishop, after having given such incumbent sufficient opportunity of showing reason to the contrary, in any case in which there may appear to such archbishop or bishop good cause for revoking the same, by an instrument in writing under his hand to revoke any such licence: Provided always, that any such incumbent may, within one month after service upon him of such revocation, if by a bishop, appeal to the archbishop of the province, who shall confirm or annul such revocation as to him shall appear just and proper."

Sect. 50. "... every bishop who shall grant or revoke any licence of non-residence under this act shall and he is hereby required, within one month after the grant or revocation of such licence, to cause a copy of every such licence or revocation to be filed in the registry of his diocese; and an alphabetical list of such licences and revocations shall be made out by the registrar of such diocese, and entered in a book, and kept for the inspection of all persons, upon payment of three shillings, and no more; and a copy of every such licence, and a statement in writing of the grounds of exemption, shall be transmitted by the spiritual person to whom such licence shall have been granted, or who may be exempted from residence, to the churchwardens or chapelwardens of the parish or place to which the same relates, within one month after the grant of such licence, or of his taking advantage of such exemption, as the case may be; and every bishop revoking any such licence shall cause a copy of such revocation to be transmitted, within one month after the revocation thereof, to the churchwardens or chapelwardens of the parish or place to which it relates: which copies of licences and revocation, and statements of exemption, shall be by such churchwardens or chapelwardens deposited in the parish chest, and shall likewise be produced by them, and publicly read by the registrar or other officer, at the visitation of the ecclesiastical district within which such benefice shall be locally situate next succeeding the receipt thereof; and every spiritual person who shall neglect so to transmit a copy of such licence or statement of exemption, as hereby required, shall lose all benefit of such licence, and until he shall have transmitted such statement, shall not be entitled to the benefit of such exemption: Provided always, that in case the archbishop of the province shall on appeal to him annul the revocation of any such licence, the bishop by whom such revocation shall have been made shall, immediately on receiving notice from the archbishop that he has annulled the same, order, by writing under his hand, that the copies of such revocation shall be forthwith withdrawn from the said registry and parish chest, and that the same shall not be produced and read at the visitation, and that such revocation shall be erased from the list of revocations in the said registry; which order shall be binding on the registrar and churchwardens respectively to whom the same shall be addressed."

Sect. 51. "... every archbishop who shall in his own diocese grant any licence of non-residence, or who shall approve and questions.

For the purposes of this act certain questions are annually to be put by the bishop to the incumbent. As to these it is provided as follows:—

Incumbents to answer
transmitted to them by bishop.

Sect. 52. "... it shall be lawful for each bishop, and he is hereby required to transmit, some time in the month of January in each year, to every spiritual person holding any benefice within his diocese or jurisdiction, the questions contained in the first schedule to this act, for the purpose of better enabling the several bishops to make the returns hereinafter mentioned; and every spiritual person to whom such questions shall be so transmitted shall, within three weeks from the day on which the same shall be delivered to him, or to the officiating minister of the benefice for the time being, make and transmit to the bishop full and specific answers thereto, such answers being signed by such spiritual person."

The first Schedule to the act is as follows :—

Schedule of questions.

"QUESTIONS to be annually transmitted by each bishop to every spiritual person holding any benefice within his Diocese or Jurisdiction.

1. What is the name of your benefice ?
2. In what county ?
3. Name of incumbent, and date of admission ?
4. Is there a glebe house belonging to your benefice ?
5. Were you resident in the glebe house, or, there being no glebe house, or none fit for your residence, were you resident in any and what house appointed by the bishop in his licence, during the last year, for the term prescribed by law ?
6. Being non-resident, were you performing the duties of your parish for the said time ? If so, state where you resided, and at what distance from the church or chapel.
7. Were you in the last year serving any other church or chapel in the neighbourhood of incumbent ? If so, state the name thereof, and the distance from the above-named church or chapel ; and when and for how long you served the same.
8. Were you serving any other church or chapel in the neighbourhood as curate ? If so, state the name thereof, and the distance from your own church or chapel ; and when and for how long you served the same.
9. What are the services in your church ? Is a sermon or lecture given at every or which of such services ?
10. Were these services duly performed last year ? If not, for what reason ?
11. What are the services in your chapel or chapels, if any ? Is a sermon or lecture given at every or which of such services ?
12. Were these services duly performed last year ? If not, for what reason ?
13. Have you any assistant curate or curates ? If so, state his or their names ; also whether he or they is or are licensed, and the amount of his or their stipend or respective stipends.
14. If you were non-resident, were you so by licence ?
15. If non-resident by licence, state the ground of licence, and the time when it will expire.
16. If non-resident without licence, were you so by exemption ?
17. If non-resident by exemption, state the ground of exemption, and whether such exemption was claimed for the whole year, or during what part thereof.
18. If you were non-resident, and did not perform the duties of your benefice, what ecclesiastical duties, if any, were you performing, and where do you now reside ?

OBSERVE : The foregoing questions are to be answered by every incumbent, whether resident or not.

Further questions to be answered, in addition to the foregoing, in case the incumbent be non-resident.

19. What is the name of your curate ?
20. Does he reside in the glebe house ?
21. Does he pay any and what rent or consideration for the use of the glebe house ? or is any deduction made on account thereof from the stipend assigned to him in his licence ?
22. If not resident in the glebe house, does he reside in the parish ?
23. If not resident in the parish, where does he reside, and at what distance from your church or chapel ?
24. Does he serve any other church or chapel as incumbent ? If so, state the name thereof, and the distance from your own church or chapel.
25. Does he serve any other church or chapel as curate ? If so, state the name thereof, and the distance from your own church or chapel.
26. Is he licensed ?
27. What is his salary from you ?
28. Has he from you any other allowances or emoluments ? State what, and the average value thereof respectively.

Annual return to be made to her Majesty in council of residents and non-residents, &c.

By sect. 53 of the act, "On and before the 25th day of March in every year, a return shall be made to her Majesty in council, by every bishop, of the name of every benefice within his diocese or jurisdiction, and the names of the several spiritual persons holding the same respectively who shall have resided thereon; and also the names of the several spiritual persons who, by reason of any exemption under or by virtue of this act, or by reason of any licence granted by such bishop, shall not have resided on their respective benefices; and also the names of all spiritual persons, not having any such exemption or licence, who shall not have resided on their respective benefices, so far as the bishop is informed thereof; and also the substance of the answers received in all cases to the questions so transmitted as aforesaid."

Curates of non-residents.

The law as to the curates of non-residents is contained in the chapter on Stipendiary Curates (s). The two following cases, however, relating to particular instances where incumbents are non-resident within the act, 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106, so as to be liable to the appointment of curates by the bishop, ought to be noticed here.

Upon section 75 (t) the case of Sharpe v. Bluck (u) was thus: Sharpe v. Bluck.

To avowry by a rector for cattle taken as a distress for arrears of a rent-charge in lieu of tithe on land of which the plaintiff was tenant, plaintiff pleaded in bar, that the bishop of the diocese had, under stat. 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106, s. 75, appointed a curate to perform the duties of the rectory at a stipend; that defendant was at that time absent from the rectory, and had not resided thereon for nine months in the year next preceding, to wit, the year commencing on the 20th March, 1842, but had for a period exceeding three months, to wit, &c., in the course of the year aforesaid, absented himself, &c.; that the curate complained to the bishop of non-payment of the stipend, whereupon the bishop summoned defendant, and, on his non-appearance, determined summarily, and adjudged 75*l.* to be due; that defendant not paying, the bishop issued a monition, requiring him to pay, in default of which a sequestration would issue; that defendant was served with the monition, but did not pay, and the bishop thereupon issued a sequestration under the seal of his Consistorial Court, empowering a sequestrator, whom the bishop appointed, to levy the 75*l.* on the profits, rent-charges, &c. of the rectory; and that the sum now distrained for was demanded of plaintiff by the sequestrator, and paid by plaintiff to prevent his distraining. On demurrer to the plea, it was holden, that the proceedings to sequestration under stat. 1 & 2 Vict. s. 106, s. 83, were not authorized by the statute, because the power to appoint a stipendiary curate is given by sect. 75 only when an incumbent, under the circumstances there described, is absent for a period exceeding three months altogether, or to be accounted at several times in the course of any one year; and by sect. 120, the year is to be reckoned from 1st January to 31st December; and therefore, that for want of jurisdiction in the bishop to sequester, the payment under such sequestration did not discharge the plaintiff, who claimed in replevin, from paying his tithe rent-charge to the incumbent.

The case of Daniel v. Morton (x) has been decided on sect. 83 of the same act (y).

The Bishop of Norwich, within which diocese were the perpetual curacy of W. and the rectory of C., addressed an instrument to D., the perpetual curate of W., under the episcopal seal, setting forth that he, the Bishop, did, by these presents, "unite, annex and incorporate the aforesaid rectory of C., with all its rights, members, and appurtenances, to and with the aforesaid perpetual curacy of W., during your incumbency on the same, and so long as you shall be perpetual curate there, and no longer, by our ordinary authority, and as much as in us lies, and the laws and statutes of this realm do permit, and not otherwise ; so that you, the aforesaid rectory of C., with the aforesaid perpetual curacy of W., may, as one benefice, so long as you are perpetual curate of the said perpetual curacy of W., retain, and the fruits," &c., "of both the said benefices (the burdens and charges due on the same being by you sustained) receive, convert, and apply to your own use, freely and lawfully, any ecclesiastical ordinance to the contrary notwithstanding. Provided, nevertheless, that you have and keep a sufficient curate, licensed and approved by our ordinary authority, to instruct and teach the people of the parish in which you shall not reside ; and provided also that, if you shall at any time hereafter be collated or instituted to any other benefice whatsoever, that then our union shall be null and void to all intents and purposes in the law, as if the same had never been granted." It was holden that, assuming that the bishop had power to unite the two benefices into one, without the assent of the crown, chapter or patron (as to which quære), the instrument, on the whole, did not show an intention to effect such a union. That therefore (W. and C. being fifty miles from each other) D., while resident at C., was non-resident at W. within stat. 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106 ; and the bishop might, under sect. 83, while D. was receiving the profits of both livings, appoint a stipend to the curate of W., and enforce the payment by monition and sequestration of W.

Bartlett.*

It appears from the case of Ex parte Bartlett (z) that an incumbent detained in prison as a punishment for a temporal offence may nevertheless be ordered to reside, and may be proceeded against for non-residence.

Specially long residence was required by 1 Will. & Mar. c. 26, s. 2 of those presented to livings in the patronage of Papists. But this provision was repealed by 32 & 33 Vict. c. 109, s. 1 (a).

SECT. 6.—Pluralities (b).

Restraints by Council of Lateran.

By a canon made in the Council of Lateran, holden under Pope Innocent III. in the year of our Lord 1215, it is ordained, that whosoever shall take any benefice with cure of souls, if he shall before have obtained a like benefice, shall ipso jure be deprived thereof, and if he shall contend to retain the same, he shall be deprived of the other ; and the patron of the former, immediately after his accepting of the latter, shall bestow the same upon whom he shall think worthy (c).

The following case was decided in the Arches Court under the provisions of this canon:—

Decisions in accordance with above Canon.

“A clerk in holy orders being in possession of a perpetual curacy with cure of souls, augmented by the Governors of Queen Anne’s Bounty, and having without dispensation been instituted and inducted into another benefice with cure of souls, was holden to have forfeited the former, which was on sentence declared void” (d).

The Court of Exchequer Chamber, reversing the judgment of the Court of Queen’s Bench, has decided that the acceptance of a second living rendered the first living void as to the patron, and though not so as to incur a lapse without notice by the ordinary, yet so as to render it void as to the incumbent, and, as it should seem, the sale of the advowson simoniacal (e).

The following case also deserves attention:—

“By a local act of parliament (6 Geo. 2, c. xxviii), the hamlet of Bethnal Green, in the parish of Stepney, was divided from it and made a distinct parish under the name of St. Matthew, Bethnal Green, with a parish church; and the advowson was vested in the patrons of the original church; and it was enacted, ‘That the rectory of the said new church or parish shall not be taken or held in commendam.’ The rector of St. Matthew, Bethnal Green, while holding that benefice, accepted another. It was holden that the rectory did not thereby and by force of the local statute become void, but only voidable, the rectory not being rated in the king’s books and the patrons not making a new presentation” (f).

“Before institution, it shall be inquired whether the presentee hath any other benefice with cure of souls; and if he hath such benefice, it shall be inquired whether he hath a dispensation; and if he hath not a sufficient dispensation, he shall by no means be admitted, unless he do first make oath, that immediately upon his taking possession of the benefice unto which he is instituted, he will resign the rest. Whereupon he who granteth institution shall immediately give notice to the bishops in whose dioceses such former benefices shall be, and also to the patrons, that they may dispose of the same” (g).

Restraints by provincial constitutions.

“When confirmation is to be made of the election of a bishop, amongst other articles of inquiry and examination according to the direction of the canons, it shall be diligently inquired, whether he who is elected had before his election several benefices with cure of souls; and if he be found to have had such, it shall be inquired whether he hath had a dispensation, and

Canon 47.

The method which a presentee used under the old law to pursue in order to obtain a dispensation, is given in Ecton, Thesaurus Rerum Ecclesiasticarum (r).

Manner of obtaining a dispensation.

It is not necessary to notice the restraints and dispensations by statute before August, 1838, under 21 Hen. 8, c. 13 (s), and 57 Geo. 3, c. 99.

Restraints of plurality by earlier statutes.

These statutes have been repealed by 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106, and this latter act has been again amended by 13 & 14 Vict. c. 98, and 45 & 49 Vict. c. 54. These Acts have gradually simplified the law on the subject of plurality.

First of all not more than two preferments are to be held together.

By 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106, s. 2, "No spiritual person holding more benefices . . . than one shall accept and take to hold therewith any cathedral preferment or any other benefice; and no spiritual person holding any cathedral preferment and also holding any benefice shall accept and take to hold therewith any other cathedral preferment or any other benefice; and no spiritual person holding any preferment in any cathedral or collegiate church shall accept and take to hold therewith any preferment in any other cathedral or collegiate church any law, canon, custom, usage, or dispensation to the contrary notwithstanding." Then follows the proviso for archdeacons which, as amended by 4 & 5 Vict. c. 39, s. 9, has already been given (t).

c. 98.

This definition of “benefice” is repeated in 13 & 14 Vict. c. 98.

Restrictions on holding two benefices.
48 & 49-Vict.
c. 54.

Secondly, after other provisions had been tried in the two earlier acts, the law as to holding two “benefices” in the sense above defined, i.e. what may be called two parochial benefices is thus settled by 48 & 49 Vict. c. 54, s. 14:—

“Any clergyman may, with such licence or dispensation as is by the first-mentioned act” (i.e. 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106) “required for the holding together of two benefices, take and hold together any two benefices, the churches of which are within four miles of one another by the nearest road, and the annual value of one of which does not exceed 200*l.*, or if on one of the said benefices there be no church, then the distance between the two benefices, for the purposes of this act, shall be computed in such manner as shall be directed by the bishop of the diocese; but except as aforesaid, it shall not be lawful for any clergyman to take and hold together any two benefices.”

The computation of this distance is provided for by section 129 of 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106, which enacts,

1 & 2 Vict.
c. 106.

Distance how to be computed.

“... that the distance between any two benefices for the purposes of this act shall be computed from the church of the one to the church of the other by the nearest road or footpath, or by an accustomed ferry; and if on one of the said benefices there be two or more churches, then the distance shall be computed from or to the nearest of such churches, as the case may be; or if on one of such benefices there be no church, then in such manner as shall be directed by the bishop of the diocese in which the benefice proposed to be taken and held by any spiritual person in addition to one already held by him shall be locally situate.”

(u) It had been previously enacted by 58 Geo. 3, c. 45, s. 26, and 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 38, s. 13, that no church of any distinct or district parish, or to which a district had been assigned, should be tenable with the original church of the parish out of which such distinct or district parish or district has been taken.

But for any spiritual person to hold the two benefices allowed by this act section 6 enacts (x),

“That it shall be necessary for such person to obtain from the Archbishop of Canterbury for the time being, a licence or dispensation for the holding thereof, which licence or dispensation the said archbishop is hereby empowered to grant under the seal of his office of faculties, upon being satisfied as well of the fitness of the person as of the expediency of allowing such two benefices to be holden together, and that such licence or dispensation shall issue in such manner and form as the said archbishop shall think fit; and for such licence or dispensation there shall be paid to the registrar of the said office the sum of thirty shillings and no more, and to the seal keeper thereof the sum of two shillings and no more; and that no stamp duty, nor any other fee, save as hereinbefore mentioned, shall be payable on the licence or dispensation to be granted as aforesaid, nor shall any confirmation thereof be necessary; nor shall it be required of any spiritual person applying for any such licence or dispensation to give any caution or security by bond or otherwise before such licence or dispensation is granted; and if the said Archbishop of Canterbury shall refuse or deny to grant any such licence or dispensation as aforesaid, it shall be lawful for her Majesty, if she, by the advice of her privy council, shall think fit, upon application by the person to whom such licence or dispensation shall have been refused or denied, to enjoin the said archbishop to grant such licence or dispensation, or to show to her Majesty in council sufficient cause to the contrary, and thereupon to make such order touching the refusal or grant of such licence or dispensation as to her Majesty in council shall seem fit, and such order shall be binding upon the archbishop.”

By sect. 7, “Where any spiritual person shall be desirous of obtaining a licence or dispensation for holding together any two benefices, such spiritual person shall, previously to applying for the grant of such licence or dispensation, deliver to the bishop of the diocese where both benefices are situate in the same diocese, or to the bishops of the two dioceses where such benefices are situate in different dioceses, a statement in writing under his hand, verified as such bishop or bishops respectively may require, according to a form or forms to be promulgated from time to time by the Archbishop of Canterbury, and approved by the Queen in council, in which statement such spiritual person shall set forth, according to the best of his belief, the yearly income arising from each of the said benefices, separately, on an average of the three years ending on the twenty-ninth day of September next before the date of such statement, and the sources from which such income is derived, and also the yearly amount, on an average of the same period of three years, of all taxes, rates, tenths, dues, and other permanent charges and outgoings to which the same benefices are respectively subject and also the distance between the two benefices, to be computed according to the directions of this act; and it shall be lawful for the bishop to whom such statement shall be delivered to make any inquiry which he may think right as to the correctness of the same in respect to the benefices or benefice within his diocese; and such bishop is hereby required, within the space of one month after he shall have received such statement as aforesaid, to transmit to the Archbishop of Canterbury a certificate under his hand, in which certificate such bishop shall set forth or shall annex thereto a copy of the statement delivered to him as aforesaid, and shall thereby certify the amount at which he considers that the annual value of each of the two benefices (where both benefices are situate in the same diocese) and the distance of the said two benefices from each other, or the amount at which he considers the annual value of the benefice within the diocese of such bishop (where the two benefices are situate in different dioceses), and the distance of such benefice from the other benefice, ought to be taken, with respect to the licence or dispensation in question; and whenever both or either of the benefices shall be in the diocese or jurisdiction of the Archbishop of Canterbury, a certificate shall be made out in manner aforesaid by the archbishop, and shall be retained by him."

By sect. 8, "In estimating the annual value of any benefice for the purpose of any such certificate as aforesaid, it shall be lawful for the archbishop or bishop by whom such certificate shall be made, and every such archbishop and bishop is hereby directed, to deduct from the gross amount of the yearly income arising from such benefice all taxes, rates, tenths, dues, and other permanent charges and outgoings to which such benefice shall be subject, but not to deduct or allow for any stipend or stipends to any stipendiary curate or curates, nor for such taxes or rates in respect of the house of residence on any benefice, or of the glebe land belonging thereto, as are usually paid by tenants or occupiers, nor for moneys expended in the repair or improvement of the house of residence and buildings and fences belonging thereto (y).

By sect. 9, "The certificate or certificates to be transmitted to or retained by the Archbishop of Canterbury as aforesaid shall be deposited in the said office of Faculties, and in the event of the required licence or dispensation being granted, shall for the purposes of this act be conclusive evidence of the annual value of each of the benefices to which the same shall relate, and of their distance from each other; and the registrar of the Faculties shall and he is hereby required to produce such certificate or certificates to any person who may require to inspect the same."

By sect. 11, "If any spiritual person, holding any cathedral preferment or benefice, shall accept any other cathedral preferment or benefice, and be admitted, instituted or licensed to the same contrary to the provisions of this act, every cathedral preferment or benefice so previously held by him shall be and become ipso facto void, as if he had died or had resigned the same, any law, statute, canon, usage, custom, or dispensation to the contrary notwithstanding; and if any spiritual person holding any two or more benefices shall accept any cathedral preferment, or any other benefice, or if any spiritual person holding two or more cathedral preferments shall accept any benefice, or if any spiritual person holding any cathedral preferment or preferments, and benefice or benefices, shall accept another benefice, he shall, before he is instituted, licensed, or in any way admitted to the said cathedral preferment or benefice, in writing under his hand, declare to the bishop or bishops within whose diocese or dioceses any of the cathedral preferments or benefices previously holden by him are situate, which cathedral preferment and benefice, or which two benefices (such two benefices being tenable together under the provisions of this act), he proposes to hold together, and a duplicate of such declaration shall by such spiritual person be transmitted to the registry of the diocese, and be there filed; and immediately upon any such spiritual person being instituted, licensed or in any way admitted to the cathedral preferment or benefice which he shall have accepted as aforesaid, such cathedral preferment or preferments, benefice or benefices as he previously held, and as he shall not as aforesaid have declared his intention to hold, or such benefice as shall not be tenable under the provisions of this act with such newly-accepted benefice, shall be and become ipso facto void, as if he had died or resigned the same; and if such spiritual person shall in any such case refuse or wilfully omit to make such declaration as aforesaid, every cathedral preferment and benefice which he previously held shall be and become ipso facto void as aforesaid: Provided always, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to affect the provision hereinbefore made with respect to archdeacons, or with respect to spiritual persons holding, with any cathedral preferment, and with or without a benefice, offices in the same cathedral or collegiate church" (z).

Sect. 132 of 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106 provides that the act "except so far as is expressly provided," shall not affect "any powers, authorities, rights, or jurisdiction already vested in or belonging to any archbishop or bishop under or by virtue of any statute, canon, usage, or otherwise howsoever."

Heads of colleges in the universities not to hold cathedral preferments except in certain cases.

Sect. 6. “That (anything in the said recited act to the contrary notwithstanding), it shall not be lawful for any spiritual person, being head ruler of any college or hall within either of the universities of Oxford or Cambridge, or being warden of the University of Durham, and also holding any benefice, to take after the passing of this act and hold therewith any cathedral preferment or any other benefice, or for any such spiritual person, also holding any cathedral preferment, to take after the passing of this act and hold therewith any benefice: Provided always, that nothing in this act contained shall be construed to prevent any such spiritual person from holding any benefices or cathedral preferment permanently attached to or forming part of the endowment of his office.”

Deans not to hold livings except in cathedral city.

Sect. 19. “No spiritual person appointed to the deanery of any cathedral or collegiate church . . . shall accept to take and hold therewith any benefice not situate within the city or town of the cathedral or collegiate church in which he shall hold such deanery Provided always, that the income of any benefice which may be holden with any such deanery shall in no case exceed the amount or sum of 500*l.* per annum (b).

- F. Against officiating in private houses—Canon 71 (t).

Officiating in private houses.

On this last-mentioned canon, and on the cognate subject of ministering in the parish without the proper authority, there have been several decisions. There is, indeed, no general principle of ecclesiastical law more firmly established than this : that it is not competent to any clergyman to officiate in any church or chapel within the limits of a parish without the consent of the incumbent.

Jeff* (e); Molyneux v. Bagshaw (f); and Richards v. Fincher (g). These cases have been already referred to under the portions of this work relating to ministers of chapels of ease, ministers of proprietary chapels, and workhouse chaplains (h). On the other branch of this subject should be cited the cases of Barnes v. Shore (i), and Freeland v. Neale (j).

Shore.

In the first of these cases articles against an ordained minister of the Church of England for officiating in an unconsecrated chapel after the revocation of his licence by the bishop were sustained, and an allegation responsive to the articles pleading that the defendant had prior to the service of the citation seceded from the Established Church, and had taken certain oaths, &c., prescribed by the Toleration Acts, was rejected on the ground that those acts do not apply to a minister of the Established Church, and that one in holy orders cannot divest himself of such orders; and it was further holden that an unconsecrated proprietary chapel, into which strangers are admitted, is not a "private house" or "chapel," within the meaning of the 71st Canon; consequently to read the service of the church in such a building is "publicly to read."

Freeland v.
Neale.

So in Freeland v. Neale (j), articles against a clergyman for publicly reading prayers, preaching, and administering the sacrament of the Lord's Supper in an unconsecrated building called Sackville College Chapel, without the licence of, and contrary to the inhibition of the bishop of the diocese, were sustained. This case also contains a decision as to what constitutes a public reading of the prayers.

G. Disobedience to lawful commands of ordinary.

Disobedience to ordinary.

The Bishop of Winchester v. Rugg (k) is a case of a clerk proceeded against for disobeying the lawful commands of his ordinary; and that of Sieveling v. Kingsford (l) one of a clerk proceeded against for making alterations in a church without a faculty.

The act provides as follows:—

Sect. 3. "Any person admitted (before or after the passing of this act) to the office of minister (n) in the Church of England may, after having resigned any and every preferment (o) held by him, do the following things:—

Execution and inrolment of deed of relinquishment.

(1.) He may execute a deed of relinquishment in the form given in the second schedule to this act:

(2.) He may cause the same to be inrolled in the High Court of Chancery (p):

(3.) He may deliver an office copy of the inrolment to the bishop of the diocese in which he last held a preferment, or if he has not held any preferment then to the bishop of the diocese in which he is resident, in either case stating his place of residence:

Sect. 4. "At the expiration of six months after an office copy of the inrolment of a deed of relinquishment has been so delivered to a bishop, he or his successor in office shall, on the application of the person executing the deed, cause the deed to be recorded in the registry of the diocese, and thereupon and thenceforth (but not sooner) the following consequences shall ensue with respect to the person executing the deed:—

- (1.) He shall be incapable of officiating or acting in any manner as a minister of the Church of England, and of taking or holding any preferment therein, and shall cease to enjoy all rights, privileges, advantages, and exemptions attached to the office of minister in the Church of England:
- (2.) Every licence, office, and place held by him for which it is by law an indispensable qualification that the holder thereof should be a minister of the Church of England shall be ipso facto determined and void:
- (3.) He shall be by virtue of this act discharged and free from all disabilities, disqualifications, restraints, and prohibitions to which, if this act had not been passed, he would, by force of any of the enactments mentioned in the first schedule to this act (q) or of any other law, have been subject as a person who had been admitted to the office of minister in the Church of England, and from all jurisdiction, penalties, censures, and proceedings to which, if this act had not been passed, he would or might, under any of the same enactments or any other law, have been amenable or liable in consequence of his having been so admitted and of any act or thing done or omitted by him after such admission."

Sect. 5. "Provided, that if within the aforesaid period of six months the bishop to whom an office copy of the inrolment of a deed of relinquishment is delivered, or his successor in office, has notice of proceedings pending against the person executing the deed as a person who had been admitted to the office of minister in the Church of England, the bishop shall, on the application of that person, cause the deed to be recorded in the registry of the diocese on the termination of those proceedings by a definitive sentence, or interlocutory decree having the force and effect of a definitive sentence, and execution thereof, but not sooner."

As to service of proceedings.

"Nothing in this act shall relieve any person or his estate from any liability in respect of dilapidations or from any debt or other pecuniary liability incurred or accrued before or after his execution of a deed of relinquishment under this act, and the same may be enforced and recovered as if this act had not been passed." Saving for pecuniary liabilities.

CHAPTER IV.

THE ECCLESIASTICAL COURTS.

Administration of ecclesiastical law.

THE law which governs matters ecclesiastical is, as has been seen, administered partly in the spiritual, partly in the temporal courts—directly and principally however in the former, indirectly and incidentally in the latter.

It is more especially with the former that we are now concerned.

Divisions of subject.

The subject will be considered under the following heads:—

- I. The courts in which the law is administered.
- II. The officers by whom it is administered.
- III. The modes of procedure.
- IV. Visitation.
- V. Censures.
- VI. The enforcement of the proper exercise of spiritual jurisdiction, and the restraint within certain limits of that jurisdiction by the temporal courts.

Jurisdiction
of bishops, &c.

Lord Hale says, every bishop, by his election and confirmation, even before consecration, has ecclesiastical jurisdiction annexed to his office, as judex ordinarius within his diocese; and divers abbots anciently, and most archdeacons (a) at this day, by usage, have had the like jurisdiction, within certain limits and precincts (b).

Qualifications of judges in ecclesiastical

By a constitution of Archbishop Chicheley, it is enjoined as follows: "To remove the scandals brought upon the authority of the church, we, following the footsteps of the holy canons, do decree, that no clerk married, nor bigamus, nor layman, shall upon any pretence, in his own name or in the name of any other, exercise any spiritual jurisdiction; nor in causes of correction, where the proceedings are for the health of the soul, or where the judge proceedeth ex officio, shall in anywise be a scribe, or register, or keeper of the registry of such corrections: And if any ordinary inferior to the bishop or other person having ecclesiastical jurisdiction, shall admit or suffer any such person to exercise any such office as aforesaid, he shall be ipso facto suspended from the exercise of his office and jurisdiction, and from the entrance of the church; and all citations, processes, sentences, acts, and other proceedings had or made by such clerks married, bigami, or laymen, shall ipso facto incur the sentence of the greater excommunication" (c).

But by 37 Hen. 8, c. 17 (d), it was enacted that all persons, as well lay as married, "being doctors of the civil law lawfully create and made in any university," who shall be appointed to the office of "chancellor, vicar general, commissary, official, scribe or register," "may lawfully execute and exercise all manner of jurisdiction commonly called ecclesiastical jurisdiction, and all censures and coercions appertaining, or in any wise belonging to the same, albeit such person or persons be lay, married, or unmarried, so that they be doctors of the civil law as is aforesaid; any law, constitution, or ordinance to the contrary notwithstanding."

In the case of Walker v. Sir John Lamb (8 Car. 1), one question was, whether the patent of the office of commissary to the plaintiff, who was a lay person, and not a doctor but a bachelor only of the civil law, was good, or was restrained by this statute. And as to that point all the court conceived the grant was good, for the statute does not restrain any such grant, and it is but an affirmance of the common law where it was doubted if a lay or married person might have such offices; and to avoid such doubts this statute was made, which explains that such grants were good enough: and it is but an affirmative statute, and there is no restriction therein; and although doctors of the law (though lay persons or married), shall have such offices, yet that is not any restriction that none others shall have them but doctors of the law; and the statute mentions as well registers and scribes as commissaries, and that a doctor of the law shall have those offices, yet in common experience such persons as are merely lay and not doctors have exercised such offices. Wherefore they resolved that the grant was well enough (e).

By Can. 127 of 1603, "No man shall hereafter be admitted a chancellor, commissary, or official, to exercise any ecclesiastical jurisdiction except he be of the full age of six and twenty years at the least, and one that is learned in the civil and ecclesiastical laws, and is at least a master of arts, or bachelor of laws, and is reasonably well practised in the course thereof, is likewise well affected and zealously bent to religion, touching whose life and manners no evil example is had; and except before he enter into or execute any such office, he shall take the oath of the king's supremacy in the presence of the bishop, or in the open court, and shall subscribe to the Thirty-nine Articles, and shall also swear that he will to the uttermost of his understanding deal uprightly and justly in his office, without respect of favour or reward; the said oaths and subscription to be recorded by a register then present" (f).

Age.

By the ancient canon law no person was to be a proctor unless he were seventeen years of age, nor judge unless he were of the age of twenty-five (g).

Surrogates.

An ecclesiastical judge may appoint a duly qualified deputy called a surrogate to act for him.

Canon 128.

By Can. 128, "No chancellor, commissary, archdeacon, official, or any other person using ecclesiastical jurisdiction, shall at any time substitute, in their absence, any to keep any court for them, except he be either a grave minister and a graduate, or a licensed public preacher, and a beneficed man near the place where the courts are kept, or a bachelor of law or a master of arts at least, who hath some skill in the civil and ecclesiastical law, and is a favourer of true religion, and a man of modest and honest conversation, under pain of suspension, for every time that they offend therein, from the execution of their offices for the space of three months toties quoties; and he likewise that is deputed being not qualified as is before expressed, and yet shall presume to be a substitute to any judge, and shall keep any court as is aforesaid, shall undergo the same censure in manner and form as is before expressed."

4 Geo. 4, c. 76.

And by 4 Geo. 4, c. 76, s. 18, no surrogate deputed by any ecclesiastical judge, who has power to grant licences of marriage, shall grant any such licence before he hath taken an oath before the said judge, or before a commissioner appointed by commission under seal of the judge (which the judge is authorized to issue), faithfully to execute his office according to law, to the best of his knowledge; and has given security by his bond in the sum of 100*l.* to the bishop of the diocese, for the due and faithful execution of his office (h).

The authority of a surrogate cannot of course exceed that of his principal (i).

10 Geo. 4,
c. 53.

But by 10 Geo. 4, c. 53, s. 13, it is enacted, that the surrogates of the Arches and Consistory of London are to continue, after the death of such judges, till the new appointments are made (k).

Bargain and sale of offices.
5 & 6 Edw. 6,
c. 16.

By 5 & 6 Edw. 6, c. 16, it is in substance enacted that, if any person shall bargain or sell any office or deputation of any office, or any part thereof, or take any reward, promise, covenant, bond, or other assurance to receive any profit, directly or indirectly, for the same, or to the intent that any person should have or enjoy the same, which said office shall in any wise concern the administration or execution of justice, he shall forfeit all his interest therein and right of nomination thereunto, and he who shall give or pay or make such promise or agreement as aforesaid, shall be disabled in the law to have and enjoy the same; and such bargain shall be void. But acts done by such officer so offending before he be removed, shall be good in law.

Any Office.]—In Dr. Trevor's case, in 8 Jac. I., it was resolved by the opinion of the justices, upon a reference unto them by the lord chancellor, that the offices of chancellor, register, and commissary in the ecclesiastical courts, are within this statute. Which statute being made for avoiding of corruption in officers, and for the advancement of persons more worthy and sufficient to execute the said offices, by which justice and right shall be advanced, shall be expounded most beneficially to suppress corruption. And . . . it is more reason that such officers, which concern the administration and execution of justice in these points, that concern the salvation of souls and other matters aforesaid, shall be within this statute, than officers which concern the administration or execution of justice in temporal matters only (l).

Offices in ecclesiastical courts are within act.

Or Deputation of any Office.]—In Culliford v. Cardonell, in 8 Will. III., the defendant was made deputy to the plaintiff in his office, and gave bond to pay the plaintiff half the profits. On putting the bond in suit, the defendant pleaded this statute. But the determination of the court was, that such bond is not within the statute, because the condition is not to pay him so much in gross, but half the profits, which profits must be sued for in the principal's name, for they belong to him though out of them a share is to be allowed to the deputy for his service.

How far deputies are within act.

But in Godolphin v. Tudor, in 3 Anne, where the deputy was to have the fees, and in consideration thereof was to pay 200*l.* a year and save the principal harmless, this was declared to be within the statute. And it was holden by the court, that where an office is within the statute, and the salary is certain, if the principal make a deputation, reserving a lesser sum out of the salary, it is good; so if the profits be uncertain, arising from fees, if the principal made a deputation, reserving a sum certain out of the fees and profits of the office, it is good; for in these cases, the deputy is not to pay unless the profits rise to so much. And though a deputy, by his constitution, is in place of his principal, yet he has no right to the fees; they still continue to be the principal's, so that, as to him, it is only reserving a part of his own and giving away the rest to another. But where the reservation or agreement is not to pay out of the profits, but to pay generally a certain sum, it must be paid at all events; and such bond is void by the statute (m).

Godolphin v. Tudor.

The doctrine which we find in Lindwood upon this head is: If a person having spiritual jurisdiction assign to another for his salary a certain sum, so that he answer to his principal for the whole profits, this is lawful; but if the other be to retain the whole profits to himself, and answer to his principal a certain sum, this is unlawful (l).

Offender disabled from holding office.

He shall forfeit all his Interest therein.]—In the case of Sir A. Ingram, in 13 Jac. I., it was resolved by the Lord Chancellor Egerton, and Coke, Chief Justice, to whom the king had referred it, upon conference with the other justices, that the disability here intended is such that the person is utterly disabled during life to take the same office; although that afterwards becomes void by the death of any other, and a new grant be made unto him (m).

Forfeiture to crown.

And Right of Nomination thereunto.]—The statute not having said who shall dispose of the office upon such forfeiture and disability, that point came under consideration in Woodward v. Fox, in 2 Will. & Mar., and two things were resolved:—1. That the right of disposing of the office so forfeited (which in that case was the registership of the archdeaconry of Huntington) did devolve to the crown; 2. That the king might make a new register before office found, or the appearing of the title by any matter of record (n).

1 Eliz. c. 19.

Restraining acts.

The statutes 1 Eliz. c. 19, and 13 Eliz. c. 10, restraining grants by archbishops, bishops, deans and chapters, or any other having any spiritual or ecclesiastical living, of any hereditaments belonging to such archbishopric, bishopric, cathedral church or other spiritual promotion other than for the term of one and twenty years or three lives, and whereupon the accustomed rent or more shall be reserved and payable yearly during the said term, will be mentioned fully later (o).

Offices of chancellor, &c. are for some purposes within acts,

It has been adjudged, that the offices of chancellor, commissary, official, register, and such like, are hereditaments within these statutes. The general design of which being to preserve the rights of successors against any illegal practices of the present possessors; it has been, ever since, the general rule in the courts of common law, that no offices of any kind are grantable by bishops or other ecclesiastical persons, as such, in any larger extent, than they shall appear to have been granted before these statutes (p).

The power of augmentation of the fee or salary belonging to an ancient office is also restrained by these statutes; as if the ancient fee was less than 5*l*., and a grant is made with a fee of 5*l*. entire, the whole grant is void, as well for the ancient fee, as the overplus: but if the office, and the ancient and new fee, are as several grants, in several sentences, the grant is good for the office and ancient fee, and void only for the new (q).

(q) Gibs. p. 735; Bp. of Chichester v. Freedland, Cro. Car. p. 47; S. C., nom. Bp. of Chester v. Freedland, Ley, p. 71.

But Lord Coke says, that if the office has been ancient and necessary, the grant thereof, with the ancient fee, is not any diminution of the revenue, nor impoverishing of the successor: and therefore, for necessity, such grants are by construction exempted out of the general restraint of these acts. And as to granting it for the life of the grantee, he adds, if bishops should not have power to grant such offices of service and necessity for the life of the grantees, but that their estates should depend upon uncertainties, as upon the death or translation of the bishop: then able persons would not serve them in such offices, or at least would not discharge their office with any alacrity, if they have not such certain estates for their lives, as their predecessors had in the same offices (r).

But grants of necessary and ancient offices are exempted from restraints.

However, this equity of granting for life amounts to no more than for one life; and therefore where a bishop grants an office for two or more lives, it must be upon the foot of custom, that is, because such patent has usually been for two or more lives, and had been so granted before the present act was made (s).

As to grants for more lives than one.

The same is the law, and the reason of it, concerning grants of offices in reversion (that is, to have and enjoy such office, after the death of the present grantee, for life); for there can be no pretence, that such second grant is necessary, or for the advantage of the bishopric; and therefore nothing can make it legal but custom, and particularly instances, or an instance, of such grant before the making of the statute (t).

As to grants in reversion.

But to the end that unquestionable grants of ancient established offices may be good against the successor of a bishop; they must, in the first place, be grants of one office singly; for two offices, which have been usually granted apart, cannot be granted by one patent, though to the same person: and, in the next place, they must be confirmed by the dean and chapter (though they be but for one life), because they are grants at common law and not warranted by this statute; and must therefore pass as they usually did at common law before this statute (u).

What makes grant good.

According to the usual course, as stated in Lord Mansfield's judgment about to be given, the person appointed chancellor or official obtains the confirmation of the bishop's grant by the dean and chapter. His office then becomes a freehold for life.

Confirmation by dean and chapter.

And if the office be ancient, its necessity is not material. Thus in the case of Sir John Trelawney v. The Bishop of Winchester (30 Geo. 2) (x), Lord Mansfield, Chief Justice, delivered the resolution of the court:—"The plaintiff brings his action of debt to recover 500*l.*, being for five years' arrears of a salary of 100*l.* a year, for executing the office of 'great and chief steward of the bishop, and of conductor tenentium of the bishop,' and as a fee annexed to those two offices.

"This comes before the court upon a special verdict, the material facts of which are, that these offices are ancient offices, and existed before the statute of 1 Eliz. c. 19, and that they have been granted in the usual manner, and with the ancient fee; that Bishop Trelawny by indenture granted this office to the plaintiff, his eldest son, for life; that the dean and chapter confirmed this grant; that every bishop since hath paid to the plaintiff this fee of 100*l.* a year, and that the defendant paid it for eleven years after he came to the bishopric; and that this action is brought for five years accrued since: but the jury further find, that these several offices, at the time of making the said statute, were, and ever since have been, and still are, offices merely nominal; and that no duty, service, work or labour, attendance or business, ever was or is done in respect of these offices, as the defendant hath in his plea alleged.

"This is the only doubt which the jury have, and upon this fact the whole question depends.

"This case hath been argued several times, and we are all of the opinion which I shall now give.

"At common law the bishop, with the confirmation of the dean and chapter, might exercise every act of ownership over the revenue of the see, and might bind his successors in the same manner as every tenant in fee might bind his heirs. The statute was made in restraint of this power. But patents or grants of offices, with the fees or the privileges annexed to them, are not mentioned therein; nor are there any general words adapted to the case of offices. And yet there were not any bishoprics in the kingdom at that time, but what had some ancient offices annexed to them granted by the bishop. Had the legislature meant to restrain the granting of these offices, there must have been a special provision in the statute; and as the general restraint is not extended to offices, there was no reason to make the exception. Their continuing ancient offices was no injury or dilapidation to the bishopric. They brought no new charge upon the successor; and he accepted the bishopric charged with these offices as his predecessor had done, and the office and bishop continued subject to the same ancient fee.

"The act had no retrospect. It was made on the 23rd of January in the 1 Eliz. The Bishop of Ely's case, H., 10 Eliz. (y), proves that the statute doth not extend to the grant of an office: where an annuity was recovered against the successor, upon the grant of the keeping of the bishop's house in Holborn, with the fee of 3*l*.: which grant was made after the beginning of the parliament, to which the act hath reference, to wit, on the 20th of April in the first of Eliz. This was a grant of a new office with a new fee, made the very year the act took place; and yet was held to be good, as not being restrained by the statute. It was extraordinary, if it was thought that the office of taking care of a house was necessary; it was also extraordinary, to hold the fee of 3*l*. a year a reasonable fee, which considering the value of money at that time would amount to 30*l*. a year now; and as extraordinary, as it was the grant of an office which never subsisted before: but the true ground was, the court did not think the grant of such offices within the statute (z).

"T., 30 Eliz., Bolton's case (a). When the Bishop of Chester, after the said statute, granted to Bolton an annuity of five marks for counsel given and to be given, which was confirmed by the dean and chapter, the bishop died, and Bolton brought a writ of annuity against the successor; the plaintiff had no judgment; but the reason of that case was not that the office was within the statute, but that it was no office at all, but a voluntary thing to make election of one man to be his counsel, and that the grant of the salary was an alienation of the revenue of the bishopric.

"In the case of The Archbishop of Canterbury, 43 Eliz. (b), the true distinction is taken: the archbishop granted the office of surveyor, with the ancient fee, to a parker: and further he granted to him pasture for two horses in a park: and the whole grant was adjudged void. This judgment was grounded upon the new addition made to the ancient fee.

"The statute of 1 Jac. 1, c. 3, extends this same restraint to the king, which by the 1 Eliz. c. 19, was laid upon the subject. Yet the legislature did not interpose then in this case of granting ancient offices; and therefore we may presume they were satisfied that the bishop should continue to have this power.

"The Bishop of Salisbury's case (c) came next in point of time.

"From the 10 Eliz. to this day, no grant of a new office by a bishop with a new fee has been held good. Such a grant is within the 1 Eliz. c. 19, by construction; for it is a colourable alienation. But a grant of an ancient office with an ancient fee is not within that statute, but remains at common law. And if such a grant is not within the statute, but stands as at common law, the utility or necessity of the office cannot be material. And there is no case since the 10 Eliz. that has turned upon these: the only questions have been, whether the grants were within the statute.

"In the said case of the Bishop of Salisbury, it is not alleged in the pleadings, that the office was necessary. The fifth resolution in this case (d) is very material: Resolved, that the grant of an ancient office to one with an ancient fee, by a bishop, shall not bind his successor, unless confirmed by the dean and chapter: for such grants are not restrained by the statute of the 1 Eliz. c. 19, and therefore remain as at the common law, and by consequence ought to be confirmed by the dean and chapter.

"If such grants remain as at the common law, the necessity of the office cannot be material.

"In the case of The Bishop of Chichester and Freedland (e), there were no allegations in the pleadings, whether the offices were necessary or not.

"In the case of Young and Fowler, 14 Car. (f). Upon a special verdict, the jury do not find that the office (of register) was a necessary office: the question turned upon the grant in reversion.

"Thus stood the construction, upon the reason, the words, and the practice of making these grants, until the 14 Car.

"But besides the real ground upon which the case in 10 Co. 60, was determined, the counsel ex abundanti laboured to prove that the office was necessary; but the arguments are so confused and inconsistent, that it is difficult to understand them.

"In real truth, few of these offices (except judicial ones) are useful or necessary in any respect. None of them can be granted in reversion, unless they existed before the 1 Eliz., and then they remain as at common law; and, however unnecessary they were, will bind the successor.

"The case of Ridley and Pownal, 27 Car. 2 (g), is the first case wherein it appeared to the court judicially that the office was necessary. But my Lord Hale, who understood what he read, and clearly distinguished, made no distinction upon the necessity of the office.

"In the case of Jones and Beau (h), the issue out of chancery was, whether the office had been granted to two before the statute of the 1 Eliz. c. 19, but there is not a word whether necessary or not.

"The present office is found never to have been more useful than at present; and yet the predecessors of the bishop have thought the grants of it valid, and have granted it to some of the greatest men in the kingdom, who accepted (i) it as valid; and the succeeding bishops acquiesced, until the present bishop conceived a doubt thereupon.

“Upon the whole, we are unanimously of opinion : First, this being an ancient office, which existed before the statute, that it is not within it. And, secondly, that the utility or necessity of the office are not material : and this opinion we think agreeable to every judicial determination since the making of the said statute.”

In the above cited case of Jones v. Beau, or Jones v. Bew (k), or Jones v. Pugh (l), as it is more probably called, the grant of the office of vicar general to two was held good. Grant of office of vicar general to two.

By Can. 125 of 1603, “All chancellors, commissaries, archdeacons, officials, and all other exercising ecclesiastical jurisdiction, shall appoint such meet places for the keeping of their courts, by the assignment or approbation of the bishop of the diocese, as shall be convenient for entertainment of those that are to make their appearance there, and most indifferent for their travel. And likewise they shall keep and end their courts in such convenient time as every man may return homewards in as due season as may be.” Canon 125. Courts where to be kept.

Approbation of the Bishop.]—This is agreeable to the rule of the ancient canon law (m).

In The Bishop of St. David's v. Lucy it was alleged against the proceedings of the archbishop, that the bishop was cited to Lambeth before the archbishop himself, and not to the Court of Arches, upon which it was declared by the Court of King's Bench, that the archbishop may hold his court where he pleases, and may convene before himself, and sit judge himself ; and so may any other bishop ; for the power of a chancellor or vicar general is only delegated in case of the bishop (n).

A constitution of Otho enjoins as follows :—

“We do ordain, that archbishops, bishops and their officials, abbots, priors, deans, archdeacons and their officials, and deans rural, as also chancellors of cathedral churches, and all other colleges whatsoever, and convents either jointly with their rector or severally (according to their custom or statutes) shall have a seal, on which seal shall be engraved their several distinctions ; as the name of their dignity, office or college ; also their proper name (if it be an office perpetual), and so it shall be esteemed an authentic seal : but if the office is not perpetual, as that of rural deans and officials, then the seal shall have engraved upon it only the name of office ; and at the expiration of their office, they shall immediately and without difficulty resign it to those from whom they received the office” (o). Seal of court.

By Can. 124, “No chancellor, commissary, archdeacon, official, or any other exercising ecclesiastical jurisdiction, shall without the bishop's consent have any more seals than one, for the sealing of all matters incident to his office ; which seal shall always be kept either by himself, or by his lawful substitute Canon 124.

exercising jurisdiction for him, and remaining within the jurisdiction of the said judge, or in the city or principal town of the county. This seal shall contain the title of that jurisdiction which every of the said judges or their deputies do execute" (p).

Provincial Courts.

The existing ecclesiastical courts are: First, the Courts of the Primates or Provincial Courts, being, in the province of Canterbury, the Court of Arches or Supreme Ecclesiastical Court of Appeal; the Court of the Vicar General, wherein bishops of the province are confirmed; the Court of the Master of the Faculties, wherein cases relating to notaries public are heard; the Court of Audience, and the Court of the Commissary of the Archbishop, which has jurisdiction over the diocese of the Archbishop, from which an appeal lies to the Court of Arches (q).

In the province of York, the Supreme Court, called the Chancery Court, the Consistory Court, and the Court of Audience (r).

Court of Audience.

In these Courts of Audience the primates once exercised a considerable part of their jurisdiction. Sir Robert Phillimore, in the first edition of this work, added: "They are now I think obsolete, or at least only used on the rare occurrence of the trial of a bishop, as in the case of the Bishop of St. David's, deprived by the Archbishop of Canterbury in 1695 (s). But in this case the primate appears to have adopted the forms, procedure, seal and sentence of the Arches Court, and to have been attended by six bishops and by the judge of that court as his assessor. It has been supposed that a criminal suit against a bishop may be instituted in the Court of Arches. The late Archbishop Longley seems to have been of this opinion, which is perhaps countenanced by the language of the Provincial Constitutions cited by Oughton (t) and other writers; but I am not aware of any such suit having been ever instituted. In Ireland a bishop has been deprived by a suit in the court of the archbishop brought ex officio promoti of his grace, not by a private person" (u).

Since this passage was written this matter came up for discussion in Read v. The Bishop of Lincoln (x). In the course of that case it was admitted by the counsel for the promoter, and stated by the archbishop, that the court then held, was not the Court of Audience.

(p) A precedent of an indictment for counterfeiting the seal of the Arches Court, or (?) of the vicar general of the archbishop is given in "Practick Part of the Office of a Justice of the Peace."

(q) Aughtie v. Aughtie, 1 Phillim. p. 201; Fagg v. Lee, L. R., 4 Adm. & Eccl. p. 135. So in France an appeal lay from the official of an Archbishop quâ Bishop to his official quâ Archbishop: and if the Archbishop were a Primate to a third official whom he had quâ Primate: Fournier, Les Officialités au Moyen Age, p. 219.

The Court of Audience, therefore, as has been already said, has fallen into desuetude. It was, however, distinct from the Court of Arches (y).

The celebrated Zouch wrote in 1636 as follows:—"Inter Curias verò Archiepiscopi Cantuariensis primaria est Curia de Arcubus, ab Ecclesiâ arcuatâ quæ Londini Beatæ Virgini Mariæ dicata est, denominata; cujus iudex Decanus de Arcubus insignitur: Post eam Curia Audientie in Ecclesiâ Beati Pauli Londini habetur: quæ etsi æqualis sit jurisdictionis, inferior tamen cum antiquitate tum dignitate existimatur: ejusque iudex causarum negotiorumque audientie Cantuariensis auditor seu officialis dicitur" (z).

But Oughton, called by Lord Stowell "one of the oracles of our practice," writing in 1728 (a), "De Curia (olim) Audientie Cantuariensis," ends by saying, "Nullus autem a plurimis abhinc retroactis annis extitit Audientie Iudex: utpote Forensis. Hæc itaque Curia Audientie Cantuariensis omnino jamdudum exolevit: Nisi quatenus Ipse (nonnunquam) Archiepiscopus in arduis (utputa deponendis Episcopis (b) aut similibus) audientiam suam celebrat in propriâ Personâ et proprio in Palatio cum Auditore speciali, sive Auditoribus ad hoc specialiter constitutis, pro istâ vice una secum assidentibus."

Mr. Johnson says: ". . . the Archbishop of Canterbury had formerly his Court of Audience, in which at first were dispatched all such matters, whether voluntary or contentious, as the archbishop thought fit to reserve for his own hearing. They who prepared evidence and other materials to lay before the archbishop, in order to his decision, were called auditors. Afterwards this court was removed from the archbishop's palace, and the jurisdiction of it was exercised by the master or official of the audience, who held his court in the consistory place at St. Paul's. But these three great offices [of official principal of the archbishop, dean or judge of the peculiars and official of the audience] are and have been for a long time past united in one person, who keeps his court in Doctors' Commons Hall."

(y) As to this distinction, see Statuta et Ordinationes Rev. in Christo, &c. W. Warham Archiep. Cantuar. in Curia Audientie apud Lambeth edita, &c. "Imprimis statuimus quod nullus officium advocati seu procuratoris in Curia Audientie præsumat exercere nisi prius fuerit in advocatum vel procuratorem in Curia Cantuariensi admissus." "Constitutio Officialis Cantuariensis Curie Consistorialis de Arcubus pro tribunali sedens: Decrevit et statuit, de assensu et voluntate omnium existentium in dictâ curiâ absente Decano de Arcubus, quod ab illo die, &c." In this constitution, therefore, the judge of the Arches is spoken of as judge of the consistorial court of the Arches, and makes rules in the absence of the Dean of the Arches. These constitutions are printed at the end of Lindwood, p. 76. It has been suggested that the Court of Audience was the Court in which the Archbishop in pre-reformation times exercised his jurisdiction as legatus natus.

"The Archbishop of York hath in like manner his Court of Audience" (c).

Courts of two Provinces.

The Provincial Courts of the Archbishop of Canterbury and the Archbishop of York are independent of each other; the process of one province not running into the other, but being sent, by a requisition, to the local authority for execution. The appeal from each of the provincial courts lies to the crown, which now exercises its authority through the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council.

Arches.

The Arches Court exercises the appellate jurisdiction from each of the diocesan courts within the province. It may also take original cognizance of causes, by letters of request from each of those courts.

As to the judge of the Court of Arches, Oughton says (d):—"Porro, ille officialis archiepiscopi principalis cum ipso archiepiscopo quoad jurisdictionem æquiparatur: Dicitur enim, eandem esse dignitatem, et idem auditorium officialis et episcopi: Et, in foro judiciali, parem esse officialem archiepiscopi, ipsi archiepiscopo: quodque officialis principalis habet idem consistorium, cum ipso archiepiscopo, tam in eis quæ competunt archiepiscopo, jure legati, quam in his quæ competunt jure metropolitico: et nonnunquam, episcoporum ordinarium esse dicitur" (e).

In fact, as Gibson observes, the dean was originally the judge of thirteen peculiar parishes in London which were under the jurisdiction of the Archbishop of Canterbury (f): the Official Principal of the Archbishop being often absent as ambassador on the continent, the Dean of the Arches became his substitute, and gradually the two offices became blended together; but the legal title in the patent of the judge of the Arches is Official Principal (g).

The patent of Sir Robert Phillimore, as judge of the Arches Court, ran as follows:

the Official

the Arches
Court.

Style of judge of York
Courts.

The style and title of the judge of the Chancery Court of York (the Provincial Court or Court of Appeal for cases within the province) was “Granville Harcourt Vernon, Master of Arts, Vicar General and Official Principal of the Most Reverend Father in God William, by Divine Providence Lord Archbishop of York, Primate of England and Metropolitan, lawfully authorized.”

The style and title of the judge of the Consistory Court of York (the Court of the Diocese) was “Granville Harcourt Vernon, Master of Arts, Official Principal of the Consistory Court of York, lawfully authorized.”

The court in which the judge sits is described as “the Consistory place within the Cathedral and Metropolitan Church of Saint Peter in York” (i).

Diocesan Courts.

Next in order are to be mentioned the Diocesan Courts, being the Consistorial Court of each diocese, exercising general jurisdiction; and the Court or Courts of one or more Commissaries

(i) An appeal lies from the ecclesiastical court of the Isle of Man to the court at York. The ecclesiastical court of the Isle of Man still retains the old jurisdiction of the ordinary as to testaments and marriages. See statute of the Isle of Man, 37 Vict., “An Act to transfer the jurisdiction of the Archdeacon of the Isle of Man to the Episcopal Court.”

appointed by the bishop, in certain dioceses, to exercise general jurisdiction within prescribed limits.

Next, the Courts of Archdeacons, or their Officials, exercising general or limited jurisdictions, according to the terms of their patents, or to local custom, or to the authority given by 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 77, s. 19. Courts of Archdeacons.

The Diocesan Courts take cognizance of all ecclesiastical matters arising locally within their respective limits (j). Jurisdiction of Diocesan and Archdeacon's Courts.

The Archdeacon's Court is subordinate, with an appeal to the Diocesan Court. 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 77, enacts, by sect. 19, "that all archdeacons . . . shall have and exercise full and equal jurisdiction within their respective archdeaconries."

It is probable that, under this authority, it would be competent to every archdeacon to appoint, as many do, an Official with power to exercise the functions incident to that office, and to receive fees as such officer, which otherwise would be receivable by the archdeacon (k).

The jurisdictions called "Peculiars" (l), once nearly 300 in number, are practically abolished by recent legislation (m). They were, for the most part, introduced by the Pope into this country, and seem to have had for their principal object the curtailment of the bishop's legitimate authority in his diocese (n), an object which they certainly attained, to the great confusion of ecclesiastical jurisdiction for many years (o). Peculiars.

Some deans and chapters still preserve their "Officials" (who were formerly judges exercising, in a great measure, episcopal jurisdiction), as legal advisers and assessors in matters affecting the interests of the chapter, and in some cases still possessing Officials of deans and chapters.

(j) The Ecclesiastical Courts in Jersey and Guernsey are established by canons of A.D. 1623, confirmed by royal charter. The court in each island consists of the dean, or his commissary, and certain assessors chosen from among the beneficed clergy. The appeal is to the Bishop of Winchester in person, or, sede vacante, to the Archbishop of Canterbury in person (Dean of Jersey v. Rector of —, 3 Moo. P. C. C. p. 229; Falle's Cæsarea, or an Account of the Island of Jersey, Chap. VII., p. 304).

(n) An exception, confirming the rule of exemption, was made in cases of heresy, which being de causis majoribus appertained to the bishop, or the dean and chapter during a vacancy, or an inquisitor specially appointed by the Pope: Lind. p. 296; De Hæret. gloss f on "Ordinarii," "Episcopi in suis diœcesibus qui habent ordinariam jurisdictionem circa non exemptos suæ diœcesis. Circa exemptos vero in suâ diœcesi existentes habent jurisdictionem delegatam a Papâ."

The official principal or vicar general of the bishop, Lindwood says, had no cognizance of this cause.

(o) Can. 126 of 1603 records that at that date "deans, archdeacons, prebendaries, parsons, vicars and others exercising ecclesiastical jurisdiction, claim liberty to prove the last wills and testaments of persons deceased within their several jurisdictions, having no known or certain registrars, nor public places to keep their records in."

perhaps some small jurisdiction as to matters connected with the fabric and interior arrangements of the cathedral.

Chancellor.

The word chancellor, though mentioned in two statutes of Elizabeth, in the Canons of 1603, and in several modern statutes (r), is not mentioned, as Bishop Gibson observes, in the commission, and but rarely in our ancient records; but seems to have grown into use in imitation of the like title in the state; inasmuch as the proper office of a chancellor, as such, was to be keeper of the seals of the archbishop or bishop, as appears from divers entries in the registry of the archbishops of Canterbury (s).

Official principal and vicar general.

This office (as it is now understood) includes in it two other offices, which are distinguished in the commission by the titles of official principal and vicar general. The proper work of an official is, to hear causes between party and party, and formerly concerning wills, legacies, marriages, and the like, which are matters of temporal cognizance, but have been granted to the ecclesiastical courts by the concessions of princes. The proper work of a vicar general is, the exercise and administration of jurisdiction purely spiritual, by the authority and under the direction of the bishop, as visitation, correction of manners, granting institutions, and the like, with a general inspection of men and things, in order to the preserving of discipline and good government in the church (t).

And although these two offices have been ordinarily granted together, yet we find in the acts and records of the several sees frequent appointments of vicars general separately, upon occasional absences of the archbishops or bishops (u).

For, according to Gibson, the vicar general was an officer occasionally constituted, when the bishop was called out of the diocese, by foreign embassies, or attendances in parliament, or other affairs whether public or private; and being the representative of the bishop for that time, his commission contained in it all that power and jurisdiction which still rested in the bishop notwithstanding the appointment of an official, that is, the whole administration except the hearing of causes in the Consistory Court (x).

Dr. Sutton's case.

In the second year of King Charles I., Dr. Sutton, chancellor of Gloucester, was sued before the high commissioners, for that he being a divine, and having never been brought up in the science of the civil or canon laws, nor having any understanding therein, took upon him the office of chancellor, contrary to the canons and constitutions of the church. Whereupon he prayed a prohibition in the Common Pleas, suggesting that he had a freehold in the chancellorship, and ought to enjoy the same for life; but the court would not grant the prohibition; because it belonged to the spiritual courts to examine the abilities of spiritual officers; and so, though a lay person gains a freehold by his admission to a benefice, yet he may be sued in the spiritual court, and deprived for that cause (y).

But of later days, when Dr. Jones, chancellor of Llandaff, was libelled against for ignorance, prohibition was prayed, and also obtained, upon this foot of freehold; and when consultation was prayed, as in a case of mere ecclesiastical cognizance, and the prayer was supported by the precedent of Dr. Sutton, the court inclined against it, and denied Sutton's case to be law (z).

By a constitution of Otho, judges ignorant of the law, in a doubtful case, from which a prejudice may arise to either party, may, at the expense of both parties, call in the counsel of a learned assessor (a).

Assessor.

Concerning the nature and extent of the power of chancellors, as that name is understood at present, Bishop Stillingfleet says as follows:—

Jurisdiction of chancellors.

“There is a difference in law and reason, between an ordinary power depending on an ancient prescription and composition, (as it is in several places in the deans and chapters within certain precincts,) and an ordinary power in a substitute, as a chancellor or vicar general. For although such an officer hath the same court with the bishop, so that the legal acts of court are the bishop's acts by whose authority he sits there, so that no appeal lies from the bishop's officer to the bishop himself, but to the superior; and although a commissary be allowed to have the power of the ordinary in testamentary causes, which were not originally of ecclesiastical jurisdiction . . . yet in acts of spiritual and voluntary jurisdiction, the case is otherwise. For the bishop by appointing a chancellor doth not divest himself of his own ordinary power; but he may delegate some parts of it by commission to others, which goes no farther than is expressed in it. For it is a very great mistake in any to think, that such who act by a delegated power, can have any more power than is given to them, where a special commission is required for the exercise of it. For by the general commission no other authority passeth, but that of hearing causes: but all acts of voluntary jurisdiction require a special commission, which the bishop may restrain as he sees cause. For, as Lindwood saith, nothing passes virtute officii but the hearing of causes; so that other acts depend upon the bishop's particular grant for that purpose. And the law nowhere determines the bounds of a chancellor's power as to such acts; nor can it be supposed so to do, since it is but a delegated power: and it is in the right of him that deputes to circumscribe and limit it. Neither can use or custom enlarge such a power which depends upon another's will. And however by modern practice the patents for such places have passed for the life of the person to whom they were first granted; yet it was not so by the ancient ecclesiastical law of England. For Lindwood affirms, that a grant of jurisdiction ceaseth by the death of him who gave it: or else it could never pass into the dean and chapter sede vacante, or to the guardian of the spiritualities. And he gives a good reason for it: Ne invitus habeat officialem sibi fortassis odiosum. It is true, that by the statute 37 H. 8, c. 17, mere doctors of laws are made capable of exercising all manner of ecclesiastical jurisdiction. But it doth not assign the extent of their jurisdiction, but leaves it to the bishops themselves, from whom their authority is derived. And the law still distinguisheth between potestas ordinaria et delegata; for the former supposeth a person to act in his own right, and not by deputation, which, I suppose, no chancellor or official will pretend to" (b).

Jurisdiction
voluntary and contentious.

Voluntary jurisdiction is exercised in matters which require no judicial proceeding, as [formerly] in granting probate of wills, letters of administration, [and now] sequestration of vacant benefices, institution, and such like; contentious jurisdiction is, where there is an action or judicial process, and consists in the hearing and determining of causes between party and party (c).

And the distinction which Bishop Stillingfleet here lays down, between contentious and voluntary jurisdiction, as the one is supposed to be conveyed to the official, and the other to remain in the bishop, is supported, as to the contentious jurisdiction, by the books of common law; which affirm that a bishop may well sue for a pension or other right before his own chancellor; and say, that the archbishop having constituted an official principal to receive appeals, cannot afterwards come into that court and execute the office himself. Add to this, what is generally said, that if a bishop does not constitute a chancellor, he may be obliged to do it by the archbishop of the province (d).

It has been holden to be no ground for prohibiting a cause before the chancellor of a diocese in the consistorial court of the diocese, that the bishop of the diocese is interested in the cause, and that the decision had the effect of giving costs to the bishop (e).

But as to the other branch, to wit, voluntary jurisdiction, as visitation, institution, licences, and the like; all this remains in the archbishop or bishop, notwithstanding the general grant of all and all manner of jurisdiction to the official. And therefore in our ancient ecclesiastical records, we find special commissions to hear and determine matters found and detected in the visitation, granted by the visitors to such persons whose zeal and integrity they could confide in, for the effectual prosecution of the crimes and vices detected. In like manner, institutions, licences and the like, can belong to chancellors no otherwise, than as the right of granting is conveyed to them distinctly and in express terms: And all that is here said of chancellors, holds equally in the case of commissaries and officials, according to the respective powers delegated to them (f).

Under the appellation of delegated jurisdiction, in a large sense, may be comprehended the jurisdiction of archdeacons, who exercise such branches of episcopal power (in subordination to the bishops) as have been anciently assigned to them, especially the holding of visitations: and of deans, deans and chapters, and prebendaries, who used to exercise episcopal jurisdiction of all kinds, independent from the bishops, though no jurisdiction at all could accrue to them otherwise than by grant from the bishops, or by the arbitrary and overruling power of the popes. Both of these, however, originally delegated, have long obtained the style of ordinary jurisdiction, as belonging of course and without any express commission, to the several offices before mentioned (g).

jurisdiction.

But the power which we properly call delegated, is the power of chancellors, commissaries and officials; which they exercise by express commission from the respective ordinaries, to whose stations or offices such powers are annexed (h).

Ayliffe says, "But notwithstanding the afore-mentioned distinction of a chancellor and a vicar general in spirituals, strictly speaking, yet in truth, and according to the common way of speech, a chancellor is a vicar general to the bishop to all intents and purposes of law, and if the bishop will not choose a chancellor, the metropolitan may and ought to do it, for the bishop himself, according to the common law, cannot be a judge in his own consistory but in some particular cases" (i).

Bishop may be compelled to appoint a chancellor.

"It has been said, that a bishop's official or chancellor is he to whom the bishop delegates the cognizance of causes in a general manner, and as such an official or chancellor has the same consistorial audience with the bishop himself that deposes him. An appeal does not lie from such an official to the bishop himself, but to him only unto whom it ought to be appealed from the bishop himself. But 'tis not the same thing in commissaries, who are not principal officials, though deputed to an universality of causes in a certain part of the diocese, because a principal official is an ordinary, and the other only a delegated judge" (k).

Distinction between chancellors and commissaries.

It was settled, however, in Burgoyne v. Free (l), that the appeal lies from the commissary to the metropolitan, and not to the chancellor, the doctrine of the canon law, as cited by Ayliffe, being overruled in this particular by the Statute of Citations, 23 Hen. 8, c. 9. The same decision established that letters of request go in the same course with the appeal.

In Chase v. Yonge (l), Sir John Nicholl's opinion inclined against the power of a commissary to appear and deny the jurisdiction of a superior court, for the purpose of obstructing the grant of a probate, till the question of whether the person requesting it had or had not "bona notabilia," had been determined.

Sir G. Lee, in Smith v. Lovegrove (m), decided that modern chancellors or vicars general, who held patents for life, were only assistants to the bishop, and not such vicars general as those mentioned by Gibson (n); that by the Statute of Uniformity, 14 Car. 2, c. 4, the archbishop, bishop, and guardian of the spiritualties were alone empowered to license a lecturer; and that the chancellor of London had no such power.

As the bishop may bound commissions in point of power, so he may also bound them in point of duration. The commission of official, for hearing of causes, is the only one which the bishop is pretended to be under an obligation to grant, and he (as official) has less share than any other in the spiritual administration; and yet even in this the rule of the law is, that the power of officials ceases, not only by revocation, but by the death of him who deputed them. And the reason given for it is, that otherwise upon the death of the bishop the guardian of the spiritualties (and the same holds good of the successors also), might have an unacceptable person intailed upon him (o). It is, however, now, as has been already observed, taken for clear law in the case of bishops and other ordinaries, that the grant of an office for life by the predecessor, whether judicial or ministerial, if it be confirmed by the dean and chapter, is binding to the successor. But it is to be remembered that this is an allowance, and not a command; the law declares such grants good when made, but does not direct them to be made; in this the bishop is at his own liberty as much as ever, no restraint therein being laid upon him by any law of this realm (p).

The patents of chancellors differ rather widely in different dioceses, both in the powers conferred and in the reservations or otherwise which the bishop makes as to his own interference. They were collected by the Ecclesiastical Courts Commissioners of 1881, and will be found in the Appendix to their Report (q).

The duties of chancellor under the Clergy Discipline Act, 1892, will be found in Chapter X. of this Part.

came (if indeed any act of parliament was needed for this purpose) to have jurisdiction or duties throughout the area of each new see.

An action lies against the judge of an ecclesiastical court who has acted beyond the jurisdiction of the court: as where a party was excommunicated for refusing to obey an order of the ecclesiastical court which it had no authority to make; or where the party had not been previously served with a citation or monition, nor had due notice of the orders (r). An action was holden not to lie against the vicar general of the bishop for excommunicating the plaintiff for contumacy in not taking upon him administration of an intestate's effects to whom plaintiff was next of kin, and had intermeddled with the goods; although the citation by which plaintiff was cited was void by reason that it required him to appear and take administration, without leaving him an option to renounce it, and the proceedings thereupon had been set aside upon appeal; for the vicar general had jurisdiction over the subject-matter, viz., the granting administration, and there was no malice (s).

Commissary is a title of jurisdiction, appertaining to him that exercises ecclesiastical jurisdiction in places of the diocese so far distant from the chief city, that the chancellor cannot call the people to the bishop's principal consistory court without great trouble to them. This commissary is called by the canonists commissarius, or officialis foraneus, and is ordained to this special end, that he should supply the office and jurisdiction of the bishop in the out places of the diocese, or in such parishes as are peculiars to the bishop, and exempted from the archdeacon's jurisdiction: for where by prescription or by composition there are archdeacons who have jurisdiction in their archdeaconries, as in most places they have, there the office of commissary is superfluous (t).

There is also the commissary of the diocese of Canterbury (u). And there are commissaries appointed for special purposes, as for visitations (x).

Canon 130. By Can. 130 of 1603, "For lessening and abridging the multitude of suits and contentions, as also for preventing the complaints of suitors in courts ecclesiastical who many times are overthrown by the oversight and negligence or by the ignorance and insufficiency of proctors and likewise for the furtherance and increase of learning, and the advancement of civil and canon law following the laudable customs heretofore observed in the courts pertaining to the Archbishop of Canterbury; we will and ordain that no proctor, exercising in any of them, shall entertain any cause whatsoever, and keep and retain the same for two court days without the counsel and advice of an advocate, under pain of a year's suspension from his practice; neither shall the judge have power to release or mitigate the said penalty, without express mandate and authority from the archbishop aforesaid."

Canon 131. By Can. 131, "No judge in any of the said courts of the archbishop shall admit any libel or any other matter, without the advice of an advocate admitted to practise in the same court, or without his subscription; neither shall any proctor conclude any cause depending, without the knowledge of the advocate retained and feed in the cause; which if any proctor shall do or procure to be done, or shall by any colour whatsoever defraud the advocate of his duty or fee, or shall be negligent in repairing to the advocate and requiring his advice what course is to be taken in the cause, he shall be suspended from all practice for the space of six months, without hope of being thereunto restored before the said term be fully complete."

By Can. 96, "That the jurisdiction of bishops may be preserved as near as may be entire and free from prejudice, and that for the behoof of the subjects of this land better provision be made that henceforward they be not grieved with frivolous and wrongful suits and molestations: it is ordained and provided that no inhibition shall be granted out of any court belonging to the Archbishop of Canterbury at the instance of any party, unless it be subscribed by an advocate practising in the said court, which the said advocate shall do freely, not taking any fee for the same, except the party prosecuting the suit do voluntarily bestow some gratuity upon him for his counsel and advice in the said cause. The like course shall be used in granting forth any inhibition at the instance of any party by the bishop or his chancellor against the archdeacon, or any other person exercising ecclesiastical jurisdiction; and if in the court or consistory of any bishop there be no advocate at all, then shall the subscription of a proctor practising in the same court be held sufficient."

Canon 96.

In the Report of the Ecclesiastical Courts Commissioners of 1832 it was stated as follows:—

Report of Ecclesiastical Courts Commission, 1832.

"The ecclesiastical laws, as now existing, have been for upwards of three centuries administered, in the principal courts, by a body of men associated, as a distinct profession, for the practice of the civil and canon laws.

"Some of the members of this body, in the year 1567, purchased the site upon which Doctors' Commons now stands, on which, at their own expense, they erected houses for the residence of the judges and advocates, and proper buildings for holding the ecclesiastical and admiralty courts, where they have ever since continued to be held. In the year 1768, a royal charter was obtained, by virtue of which the then members of the society, and their successors, were incorporated, under the name and title of 'The College of Doctors of Law exercent in the Ecclesiastical and Admiralty Courts.'

"This college consists of a president (the Dean of the Arches for the time being) and of those doctors of law who, having regularly taken that degree in either of the universities of Oxford and Cambridge, and having been admitted advocates in pursuance of the rescript of the Archbishop of Canterbury, shall have been elected fellows of the college in the manner prescribed by the charter.

"From this brief account of the origin, and present constitution, of the college of doctors of law, it will be seen that no person can be admitted a member, or allowed to practise as an advocate in the courts at Doctors' Commons, without having first taken the degree of Doctor of Laws in one of the English universities.

"According to the present rules of these courts, a candidate for admission, as an advocate, is required to deliver, into the office of the vicar general of the province of Canterbury, a certificate of his having taken the degree of Doctor of Laws, signed by the registrar of the university to which he belongs. A petition, praying that in consideration of such qualification the candidate may be admitted an advocate, is then presented to the archbishop, who issues his fiat for the admission of the applicant (b), directed to his vicar general, who thereupon causes a rescript or commission to be prepared, addressed to the Dean of the Arches, empowering and requiring him to admit the candidate as an advocate of that court. To this a proviso is always added, 'that the person to be admitted shall not practise for one whole year from the date of his admission,' in order that, by attending during that interval, he may acquire a competent knowledge of the form of the proceedings in those courts.

"On the day appointed for the admission, which is always one of the four regular sessions in each term of the Arches Court, the candidate is presented, by the two senior advocates, to the dean, who directs the archbishop's rescript to be read, and the oaths to be administered; which being done, he is admitted into the number of advocates, according to the tenor of the rescript.

"From the college of advocates the archbishop has always selected the judges of the archiepiscopal courts" (c).

Modern
changes.

The college was abolished in pursuance of 20 & 21 Vict. c. 77, ss. 116, 117, when the probate and divorce courts were established.

The ecclesiastical courts have latterly, ex necessitate rei, admitted barristers to practise in them; but the archbishop's power to admit advocates remains.

The Church Discipline Act, 3 & 4 Vict. c. 86, s. 7, enacts that where a clerk is to be proceeded against before the bishop, articles shall be drawn up against him, which are to be signed "by an advocate practising in Doctors' Commons." But after the dissolution of the College of Advocates the Court held that a barrister could sign instead of an advocate (d).

(b) It seems that this was purely discretionary in the archbishop; and that he could not be compelled to direct the admission of a candidate: Ree v. Abp. of Canterbury, 8 East, p. 213.

(c) See 1 Phill. Intern. Law, pp. xxx—xlix, for the history of civilians in England, and of the College of Advocates.

In the Report of the Ecclesiastical Courts Commissioners of 1832, it is said as follows :—

“Proctors in the ecclesiastical and admiralty courts discharge duties similar to those of solicitors and attorneys in other courts.

Report of Ecclesiastical
mission, 1832.

“In order to entitle a person to be admitted a proctor, to practise in the Court of Arches, it is required that he shall have served a clerkship of seven years, under articles, with one of the thirty-four senior proctors, who must be of five years’ standing; and who, by the rules of the court, is prohibited from taking a second clerk until the first shall have served five years; except in the event of the death of a proctor, to whom a clerk may have been articulated, before the term of his clerkship is completed. In this case any other of the thirty-four senior proctors may take such clerk for the remainder of the term, although he himself may at the same time have a clerk of less than five years’ standing. Before a clerk is permitted to be articulated, he is required to produce a certificate of his having made reasonable progress in classical education.

“When the term of seven years is completed, the party is admitted a notary, by a faculty from the Archbishop of Canterbury; a petition is then presented to his grace, accompanied by a certificate, signed by three advocates and three proctors, that the party applying to be admitted has served, as articulated clerk to a proctor of the court, for the full term of seven years. If this certificate is approved, the archbishop issues his fiat, and a commission is directed to the Dean of the Arches, by whom the party is admitted under the title of a supernumerary, with similar ceremonies to those observed on the admission of an advocate.

“The proctor so admitted is qualified to commence business upon his own account immediately, but he is not entitled to take an articulated clerk, until he shall have been for five years within the number of the thirty-four senior proctors.”

Proctors are officers established to represent in judgment the parties who empower them (by warrant under their hands called a proxy) to appear for them, to explain their rights, to manage and instruct their cause, and to demand judgment (e). Two proxies are generally executed; one authorizing the proctor to institute, the other to withdraw proceedings. They are signed by the parties, attested by two witnesses, and deposited in the registry of the court (f). The proctor, till such power be withdrawn, is dominus litis. Proxies.

(f) The nature of a proxy, how far requisite, and when it may be dispensed with, is considered in the following cases :—Kirkhouse v. Fawcener, 2 Lee, p. 325; Prankard v. Deacle, 1 Hagg. Eccl. p. 169; Fullerton v. Dixon, 4 Hagg. Eccl. p. 402; Hawkes v. Hawkes, 1 Hagg.

"A proctor by virtue of his proxy may be held by the court till after sentence, and till then it will not be sufficient for him to declare he proceeds no further for his party. But if an appeal is interposed, he is not bound to give an appeal so far. On the contrary, he cannot act without exhibiting a new proxy in the court of appeal" (g).

Old constitutions as to proctors and proxies will be found in Lindwood and Athon (h).

By Can. 129 of 1603, "None shall procure in any cause whatsoever, unless he be thereunto constituted and appointed by the party himself, either before the judge, or by act in court; or unless in the beginning of the suit, he be by a true and sufficient proxy thereunto warranted and enabled. We call that proxy sufficient, which is strengthened and confirmed by some authentic seal, and party's approbation, or at least his ratification therewithal concurring. All which proxies shall be forthwith by the said proctors exhibited into the court, and be safely kept and preserved by the register in the public registry of the said court. And if any register or proctor shall offend herein, he shall be secluded from the exercise of his office for the space of two months, without hope of release or restoring."

Canons 130, 131, 132, and 133.

Canons 130 and 131 relating to proctors have been already referred to (i). Canons 132, 133, also relate to proctors, but are quite obsolete.

53 Geo. 3, c. 127.

The Act 53 Geo. 3, c. 127, ss. 8, 9, 11, contains provisions with respect to proctors, forbidding them to allow their names to be used by persons not entitled to act as proctors (k), and imposing penalties on persons, not being duly enrolled, exercising the functions of a proctor.

But it does not seem necessary to set out these sections, since modern legislation, which is about to be referred to, has admitted all solicitors to act as proctors.

Power of the ecclesiastical court over proctors.

In Leigh's case in 2 Will. 3 (l), a proctor of Doctors' Commons, who had done business without the advice of an advocate, contrary to the canon, and refused to pay a tax of 10s. imposed upon him by order of the court towards the charges of the house, and was suspended from his office, prayed a mandamus in the Court of King's Bench to be restored: but it was denied, and said by the court, that officers are incident to all courts, and must partake of the nature of those several and respective courts in which they attend; and the judges, or those who have the supreme authority in such courts, are the proper persons to censure the behaviour of their own officers; and if they should be mistaken, the King's Bench cannot relieve, for in all cases where such judges keep within their bounds, no other court can correct their errors in proceedings; and if any wrong be done in this case, the party must appeal.

The decisions have established the following propositions:—Where a party regularly complains of gross extortion by his proctor, the court may punish the proctor by suspension or otherwise (m). In a case where a proctor had charged 88*l.* 4*s.* 4*d.*, and the bill was referred to the registrar, who reported the proper charge to be 52*l.* 15*s.* 6*d.*, the court suspended the proctor for three months, and condemned him in costs: in this case it was the first time his conduct had been brought before the court, and there were other extenuating circumstances (n). A client is under all circumstances entitled to a detailed bill of costs from his proctor; and where it has been long acquiesced in, and payment made after the close of the suit, he is not entitled to have it referred to the registrar for examination (o). A proctor is dominus litis, and therefore responsible to the court for the purity of his proceedings (p). But the court has no power to decide what expenses are due between proctor and client, or to enforce payment of them; but where costs are given against a party, the court, in order to carry its sentence into execution, is empowered to tax the costs and to enforce their payment. All that the court can do in the case of proctor and client is to refer the bill to the registrar for his examination; this is merely in aid of justice, and for the convenience of suitors (q).

Under the old law it was holden that the lawful admission of proctors depends upon the usage and practice of the court into which they are admitted; and a decree of a judge of a diocesan court for the admission of proctors, contrary to the usage and practice of his court, was reversed on appeal to the Arches Court (r).

The claim of a proctor in the Arches Court of Canterbury to practise in a diocesan court of the province, without having been formally admitted therein, was allowed (s).

Modern legislation has, as has already been stated, proceeded in the direction of admitting all solicitors to act as proctors. The first step was taken by 33 & 34 Vict. c. 28, s. 20, which enacted that "it shall be lawful for an attorney or solicitor to perform all such acts as appertain solely to the office of a proctor in any ecclesiastical court other than the provincial courts of the Archbishops of Canterbury and of York, and the diocesan court of the Bishop of London, without incurring any forfeiture or penalty, and to make the same charges which a proctor would be entitled to make, and to recover the same, any enactment or enactments to the contrary notwithstanding."

In the excepted courts solicitors remained incapable of practising (t) till 40 & 41 Vict. c. 25, s. 17, which enacts as follows: "Any solicitor may practise in all courts and before all persons having or exercising power, authority, or jurisdiction in matters ecclesiastical in England, and shall be deemed to be duly qualified to practise and may practise in all matters relating to applications to obtain notarial faculties, and generally shall have and may exercise all the powers and authorities, and shall be entitled to all the rights and privileges, and may fulfil all the functions and duties which appertain or belong to the office or profession of a proctor, whether in the provincial, diocesan, or other jurisdiction in England."

Though it may be that proctors may still be made and admitted by an ecclesiastical court, it is not probable that any such power will be exercised; and when the remaining proctors have ceased to practise, the work will probably be done exclusively by solicitors.

SECT. 3.—Register or Registrar (u).

Canon 123.

His presence necessary to a judicial act.

By Can. 123 of 1603, "No chancellor, commissary, archdeacon, official, or any other person using ecclesiastical jurisdiction, shall speed any judicial act, either of contentious or voluntary jurisdiction, except he have the ordinary register of that court, or his lawful deputy; or if he or they will not or cannot be present, then such persons as by law are allowed in that behalf to write or speed the same, under pain of suspension ipso facto" (v).

And this is according to the rule of the ancient canon law; which, to prevent falsifications, requires the acts to be written by some public person (if he may be had), or else by two other credible persons: and the credit which the canon law gives to a notary public is, that his testimony shall be equal to that of two witnesses (x).

Canon 134.

When he may be suspended.

By Can. 134, "If any register, or his deputy or substitute whatsoever, shall receive any certificate without the knowledge and consent of the judge of the court; or willingly omit to cause any person cited to appear upon any court day to be called; or unduly put off and defer the examination of witnesses to be examined by a day set and assigned by the judge; or do not obey and observe the judicial and lawful monition of the said judge; or omit to write or cause to be written such citations and decrees as are to be put in execution and set forth before the next court day; or shall not cause all testaments exhibited into his office to be registered within a convenient time; or shall set down or enact, as decreed by the judge, any thing false or conceived by himself, not so ordered or decreed by the judge; or in the transmission of processes to the judge ad quem, shall add or insert any falsehood or untruth, or omit any thing therein, either by cunning or by gross negligence; or in causes of instance, or promoted of office, shall receive any reward in favour of either party, or be of council directly or indirectly with either of the parties in suit; or in the execution of their office shall do ought else maliciously, or fraudulently, whereby the said ecclesiastical judge or his proceedings may be slandered or defamed: we will and ordain, that the said register, or his deputy or substitute, offending in all or any of the premises, shall by the bishop of the diocese be suspended from the exercise of his office, for the space of one, two, or three months or more, according to the quality of his offence; and that the said bishop shall assign some other public notary to execute and discharge all things pertaining to his office, during the time of his said suspension."

How his office is to be supplied during suspension.

Dr. Harris says a registrar may be articleed against "for neglect of or refusal to do his duty, and might be censured for it by suspension from his office and deprivation if he persisted in his neglect or refusal." This is a very curious and learned opinion (y).

Opinions on this point.

Sir W. Wynne says, "If the registrar misbehaves in the duties of his office he is liable to be suspended and even deprived of it. But I do not think that the chancellor has power extra-judicially to exclude the registrar from the execution of any duty of his office, or to confer it upon any other person." "I do not think that the chancellor can appoint his seal-keeper to issue out licences without passing through the hands of his registrar. I think that usage of very many years will justify the registrar in taking an equal fee with the chancellor upon marriage licences, notwithstanding that his fee was less in the old table published in the 16th century" (z).

Dr. Godolphin says, if there be a question between two persons touching several grants, which of them shall be register of the bishop's court; this shall not be tried in the bishop's court, but at the common law; for although the subjectum circa quod be spiritual, yet the office itself is temporal (a).

Mandamus to admit.

mandamus to Dr. Ward, the commissary, to admit Henry Dryden to be deputy register of the Archbishop of York's court: suggesting that Dr. Thomas Sharpe had been admitted to the office, to execute the same by himself or his deputy; that he had appointed Dryden (who is averred to be a fit person) to be his deputy, whom the commissary had refused to admit, to the great damage of Dr. Sharpe who complains; and therefore the writ commands the commissary to admit and swear Dryden, or show cause to the contrary. To this the commissary returns; that long before the constituting Dryden to be deputy, John Sharpe and Thomas Sharpe were admitted to the office as principals, to hold for their lives, and the life of the survivor; that they, in the year 1714, appointed John Shaw to be their deputy, who executed the office till John Sharpe died; that Thomas Sharpe survived, and on May 12, 1727, by a new appointment constituted Shaw his deputy, who was admitted, and executed the office until suspended in the manner after mentioned; that Shaw at the time of his admission took an oath that he should justly and honestly execute the office, without favour or reward, and do every thing incumbent on the office, and not be an exactor or greedy of rewards; and then sets forth the 134th canon; and further, that while Shaw was deputy, several proctors of the court on the 16th of February, 1727, exhibited to the commissary several articles against him, complaining of divers misbehaviours in his office, contrary to several of the particulars set forth in the said canon; that Shaw being summoned on the 6th of April, 1728, gave in his answer in writing (which is set forth); and then the return goes on, that forasmuch as it appeared to the commissary that the answer was insufficient, and that Shaw had confessed himself guilty of several omissions and extortions in the exercise of his office, therefore upon complaint thereof to the archbishop, he on the 21st of May, 1728, by his commission under his archiepiscopal seal directed to the commissary and reciting that Shaw had been guilty in the manner before mentioned, did therefore empower the commissary to suspend him and assume another notary public; that by virtue thereof, he on the 24th of May, 1728, suspended Shaw for five years, and assumed Joseph Leech a notary public, who before the constituting Dryden to be deputy, took upon him and has ever since executed the office: that Shaw appealed, and in that appeal alleged, that on the 23rd of May, 1728, he resigned the office, and that Dr. Sharpe had appointed William Smith to be deputy; that delegates were appointed, who on the 23rd of October, 1728, issued an inhibition to the commissary, that pending the appeal he should do nothing to the prejudice of the appellant; that the appeal remains undetermined; and for these reasons he cannot admit Dryden to be the deputy of Dr. Sharpe. After argument, the court said: "Surely it is attempting too much, to support this as a good return; the effect of a mandamus, as laid down, is certainly so, that it gives no right. The canon only intended that the bishop should suspend where the principal would not revoke; but an actual revocation is better than a suspension. It would be carrying the power of inhibitions a great way if we should allow them the force contended for by the return. We are therefore all of opinion, that the return is ill." Then exception was taken to the writ, that a mandamus would not lie for a deputy. But it was answered, that this is not a mandamus for the deputy, but for the principal to be admitted to have a deputy. Then it was further objected, that a mandamus does not lie for a spiritual office; and for this were cited divers cases, where it was determined that a mandamus will not lie for a proctor, who belongs as much to the ecclesiastical court as the register does. Unto which it was answered, that this is not any objection; a mandamus has been granted to admit an under-schoolmaster, and yet schoolmasters are within the canons of 1603 as well as registers; so in the case of Mr. Folks, lately for the office of apparitor-general of the Archbishop of Canterbury (b); so it has been often granted for a parish clerk; for a sexton; so in like manner it was granted to restore Dr. Bentley to his degrees; and to admit Dr. Sherlock to a prebend at Norwich; and it is to be observed that no assize will lie for this office, therefore if the party has not this remedy he has none; the reason why it was refused to a proctor was, because it did not appear what interest he had, but here appears a freehold. And the court said: "We all think this writ is good, notwithstanding the exceptions that have been taken, and therefore a peremptory mandamus must go" (c).

In Rex v. The Bishop of Gloucester the registrars of a diocese were authorized by their patent of office to appoint a deputy "to be approved of and allowed by the bishop," who, if he should not approve of and allow the deputy named and proposed to him, was empowered to nominate another with a salary payable out of the profits of the registrarship. The registrars appointed a deputy, subject to the approval of the bishop, who declared that, "for good and sufficient reasons," which he did not specify, he disapproved of the party nominated. In that case the court refused a rule nisi for a mandamus to the bishop to admit the deputy (d).

In the case of The Bishop of Bangor, who was prosecuted at the Shrewsbury Assizes in 1796, by the deputy registrar of the Consistorial Court, for a riot and assault in forcibly taking possession of his room in the chapter house, Mr. Justice Heath intimated his doubt whether the bishop had the power of withdrawing his confirmation once given of this officer's appointment, and his strong opinion that at all events he must have recourse to a proceeding at common law. The jury, however, acquitted Registrar in new diocese.

In Ridley v. Pownell (f), it was holden that the bishop of a new diocese might appoint a registrar.

Fees.

A registrar may recover his fees by action at law (g).

Duty to register under modern acts.

The duty of the registrar by statute to register orders in council, baptisms, burials, under the statutes 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106, s. 116, and 52 Geo. 3, c. 146, s. 8, has been already mentioned (h).

Under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 113, ss. 88, 89, he is bound under penalties to register every order in council made under that act. He is entitled to no fees for so doing, but to fees on searches and copies.

His duties under the Public Worship Regulation Act will be found in Chapter ix. of this Part.

No vested rights.

The Act 10 & 11 Vict. c. 98, preventing new ecclesiastical officers from acquiring vested rights, applies to registrars (i).

By 7 & 8 Vict. c. 68, s. 2, registrars are to make an annual return to the Secretary of State of all fees received by them, either for themselves or for the judges or other officers. By sect. 3 they are also to make an annual return as to the state of their offices.

Returns by.

SECT. 4.—Secretary.

Nature of office.

The office of secretary to a bishop is one of comparatively modern origin; its duties are nowhere defined, and there seems no reason why the office, though a convenient one, should necessarily exist. Secretaries are, however, mentioned in 41 Geo. 3, c. 79, s. 14 (k). They are also mentioned in 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106, ss. 47, 131, where they are spoken of as officers having to do with the admission of spiritual persons to benefices or cathedral preferments, and provision is made for fixing their fees in these matters by Order in Council; and their fees have been accordingly so fixed (l).

Mentioned in statutes.

By 38 & 39 Vict. c. 76, s. 2, secretaries, apparitors, seal-keepers, and other officers are to hold office subject to the pleasure of Parliament. No vested rights.

By sect. 3 secretaries are to make annual returns of their fees to the Secretary of State. Returns by.

SECT. 5.—Notary Public (n).

Notaries take a place in a work on ecclesiastical law, partly because their office and functions are specially recognized in ecclesiastical matters; partly because they are still appointed by the Archbishop of Canterbury, who has taken in this matter the place of the Pope. Hence it comes that officials whose duties are partly international, partly civil, and partly ecclesiastical, and whose appointment is regulated by statute, have still a purely ecclesiastical origin. Why treated of.

A notary was anciently a scribe, that only took notes or minutes, and made short draughts of writings and other instruments, both public and private. But at this day we call him a notary public, who confirms and attests the truth of any deeds or writings in order to render the same authentic (o). Nature of office.

The law books give to a notary several names or appellations; as actuarius, registrarius, scriniarius, and such like. All which words are put to signify one and the same person. But in England, the word registrarius is confined to the officer of some court, who has the custody of the records and archives of such court, and is oftentimes distinguished from the actuary thereof. It has been said that a register ought always to be a notary public, for that seems to be a necessary qualification of his office. But it may be doubted whether there is such a necessity (p).

A notary public is appointed to this office by the Archbishop of Canterbury; who in the instrument of appointment decrees, that "full faith be given, as well in as out of judgment, to the instruments by him to be made." Which appointment is also to be registered and subscribed by the clerk of his Majesty for faculties in Chancery (q). How appointed.

The chief officer of the Archbishop of Canterbury is the Master of Faculties, to whom applications are to be made for the admission or the removal, under any special circumstances, of notaries. In the Institutes, the Court of Faculties is stated Master of faculties.

to be “a court, although it holdeth no plea of controversie. It belongeth to the archbishop, and his officer is called magister ad facultates” (r).

Mention in early statutes.

Notaries are mentioned in the Statute of Provisors, 25 Edw. 3, stat. 4 (A.D. 1351), in 27 Edw. 3, stat. 1, c. 1 (A.D. 1353) (s), and in 16 Ric. 2, c. 5 (A.D. 1392—1393), commonly called the Statute of Præmunire.

25 Hen. 8, c. 21, sect. 2, enacts as follows: “That neither your Highness, your heirs nor successors, Kings of this realm, nor any your subjects of this realm, nor of any other your dominions, shall from henceforth sue to the said bishop of Rome called the Pope, or to the see of Rome, or to any person or persons having or pretending any authority by the same, for licences, dispensations, compositions, faculties, grants, rescripts, delegacies, or any other instruments or writings, of what kind, name, nature, or quality soever they be, for any cause or matter, for the which any licence, dispensation, composition, faculty, grant, rescript, delegacy, instrument, or other writing, heretofore hath been used and accustomed to be had and obtained at the see of Rome, or by authority thereof, or of any prelates of this realm; nor for any manner of other licences, dispensations, compositions, faculties, grants, rescripts, delegacies, or any other instruments or writings that in causes of necessity may be lawfully granted without offending of the Holy scriptures and laws of God; But that from henceforth every such licence, dispensation, composition, faculty, grant, rescript, delegacy, instrument and other writing afore named and mentioned, necessary for your Highness, your heirs and successors, and your and their people and subjects, upon the due examinations of the causes and qualities of the persons procuring such dispensations, licences, compositions, faculties, grants, rescripts, delegacies, instruments or other writings, shall be granted, had or obtained, from time to time, within this your realm, and other dominions, and not elsewhere, in manner and form following, and none otherwise; that is to say, the Archbishop of Canterbury for the time being, and his successors, shall have power and authority, from time to time, by their discretions, to give, grant, and dispose, by an instrument under the seal of the said archbishop, unto your Majesty, and to your heirs and successors, kings of this realm, as well all manner such licences, dispensations, compositions, faculties, grants, rescripts, delegacies, instruments, and all other writings, for causes not being contrary or repugnant to the Holy scriptures and laws of God, as heretofore hath been used and accustomed to be had and obtained by your Highness, or any your most noble progenitors, or any of your or their subjects, at the see of Rome, or any person or persons by authority of the same, and all other licences, dispensations, faculties, compositions, grants, rescripts, delegacies, instruments, and other writings, in, for and upon all such causes and matters as shall be convenient and necessary to be had, for the honour and surety of your Highness, your heirs and successors, and the wealth and profit of this your realm; so that the said archbishop or any of his successors, in no manner wise shall grant any dispensation, licence, rescript, or any other writing afore rehearsed, for any cause or matter repugnant to the law of Almighty God."

The third section provides that the archbishop or his "sufficient and substantial commissary deputy" may grant such faculties.

It would seem from section 11 that an appeal lay from the master of the faculties to the lord chancellor.

It is from this statute that the power of the archbishop is derived; and it extends even to the colonies (t). The modern statutes regulating the appointment of notaries may be shortly stated.

41 Geo. 3, c. 79, intituled "An Act for the better Regulation of Public Notaries in England," enacts as follows:—

Sect. 1. "No person in England shall be created to act as a public notary, or use and exercise the office of a notary, or do any notarial act, unless such person shall have been duly sworn, admitted and inrolled, in manner hereinafter directed, in the court wherein notaries have been accustomedly sworn, admitted and inrolled."

Sect. 13 requires "all persons who may hereafter apply for a faculty to become a public notary, and practise within the city of London and the liberties thereof, or within the circuit of three miles of the same city," to "come into and become members and take their freedom of the incorporated company of scriveners of London, according to the rules and ordinances of the said company."

Sect. 14. "Nothing in this Act contained shall extend or be construed to extend, to any proctor in any ecclesiastical court in England; nor to any secretary or secretaries to any bishop or bishops, merely practising as such secretary or secretaries; or to any other person or persons necessarily created a notary public for the purpose of holding or exercising any office or appointment, or occasionally performing any public duty or service under government, and not as general practitioner or practitioners; anything hereinbefore contained to the contrary notwithstanding: Provided always, that nothing herein contained shall extend or be construed to exempt any proctor, being also a public notary, from the pains, penalties, forfeitures and disabilities by this act imposed upon any public notary, who shall permit or suffer his name to be in any manner used for or on account, or for the profit and benefit of any person or persons not entitled to act as a public notary."

By 6 & 7 Vict. c. 90, reciting 41 Geo. 3, c. 79, in order to remove certain doubts, it is provided that public notaries may retain clerks or apprentices in their business as such, or in their business as solicitors and notaries.

Apprentices.

By sect. 2, no public notary, unless in general practice, is to retain a clerk or apprentice.

By sect. 3, persons serving five years to a notary are to be entitled to admission as notaries; unless they have bound themselves for a longer time. If they have, the consent of the notary is required.

Master of the faculties may require testimonials of ability, &c.

Sect. 4. "The master of the faculties for the time being may make any general rule or rules requiring testimonials, certificates, or proofs as to the character, integrity, ability, and competency of any person who shall hereafter apply for admission or re-admission as a public notary to practise either in England or in any of her Majesty's foreign territories, colonies, settlements, dominions, forts, factories, or possessions, whether such person shall have served a clerkship or not, and from time to time alter and vary such rules as to the master of the faculties shall seem meet, and may admit or reject any person so applying, at his discretion, any law, custom, usage, or prescription to the contrary notwithstanding."

Appeal.

Sect. 5. "If the master of the faculties shall refuse to grant any faculty to practise as a public notary to any person without just and reasonable cause, then the chancellor of England or the Lord Keeper of the Great Seal for the time being, upon complaint thereof being made, shall direct the Queen's writ to the said master of the faculties to the effect and shall proceed thereon according to the intent and meaning of the act 25 Hen. 8, c. 21, and in manner and form as is therein provided and set forth in case of the refusal of any licences, dispensations, faculties, instruments, or other writings, as fully and effectually, and with the same powers and authority, as if the same were here inserted and re-enacted."

Procedure and penalties.

Provisions for taking and filing affidavits, as to indentures of apprenticeship, for striking off the roll notaries who have been improperly articulated as apprentices, for the transfer of indentures to fresh masters, for the oath to be taken by notaries on admission, and for the imposition of a penalty on anyone practising as a notary without authority or lending his name to an unauthorized practitioner are contained in 41 Geo. 3, c. 79, ss. 4, 5, 8, 9, 10, 11, and 6 & 7 Vict. c. 90, ss. 7, 8, 9, 10. It is not thought necessary to set these out.

District notaries.

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 70.

Recited act limited to London and ten miles thereof.

Solicitors may be admitted as notaries out of those limits.

As to district notaries a special act has been passed, 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 70, which by sect. 1, limits the requirements of clerkship or apprenticeship contained in 41 Geo. 3, c. 79 (now qualified by 6 & 7 Vict. c. 90) "to the city of London and liberties of Westminster, the borough of Southwark, and the circuit of ten miles from the Royal Exchange in the said city of London."

Sect. 2. "It shall and may be lawful for the master of the court of faculties of his grace the Lord Archbishop of Canterbury in London from time to time, upon being satisfied as well of the fitness of the person as of the expediency of the appointment, to appoint, admit and cause to be sworn and inrolled in the said court of faculties any person or persons residing at any place distant more than ten miles from the Royal Exchange in the said city of London, who shall have been previously admitted, sworn and inrolled an attorney or solicitor in any of the courts at Westminster, or who shall be a proctor practising in any ecclesiastical court, to be a notary public or notaries public to practise within any district in which it shall have been made to appear to the said master of the court of faculties that there is not (or shall not hereafter be) a sufficient number of such notaries public admitted or to be admitted under the provisions of the said recited act for the due convenience and accommodation of such district, as the said master of the Court of Faculties shall think fit, and not elsewhere; any law or usage to the contrary notwithstanding."

By sect. 3, nothing in the act shall extend to authorize notaries appointed thereby to act "within the said city of London, the liberties of Westminster, the borough of Southwark, or within the circuit of ten miles from the Royal Exchange in the said city of London."

By sect. 4, "if . . . any notary admitted by virtue of this act shall practise as a notary, or perform or certify any notarial act whatsoever, out of the district specified and limited in and by the faculty to be granted to him by virtue of this act, or within the city of London, the liberties of Westminster, the borough of Southwark, or the circuit of ten miles from the Royal Exchange in London aforesaid," the Court of Faculties may cause him to be struck off the roll of faculties, "and every person so struck off shall thenceforth for ever after be wholly disabled from practising as a notary or performing or certifying any notarial act."

By 52 & 53 Vict. c. 10, s. 6, British diplomatic and consular officers abroad may administer oaths and do notarial acts.

Ayliffe says, a notary public (or actuary) that writes the acts of court ought not only to be chosen by the judge, but approved also by each of the parties in suit; for though it does of common right belong to the office of the judge, to assume and choose a notary for reducing the acts of court in every cause into writing, yet if he be a suspected person he may be refused by the litigants: for the use of a notary was intended, not only on account of the judge, to help his memory in the cause, but also that the litigants might not be injured by the judge (t).

And, particularly, the office of a notary in a judicial cause is employed about three things: first, he ought to register and enrol all the judicial acts of the court, according to the decree and order of the judge, setting down in the act the very time and place of writing the same; secondly, he ought to deliver to the parties, at their especial request, copies and exemplifications of all such judicial acts and proceedings as are there enacted and decreed; and thirdly, he ought to retain and keep in his custody the originals of such acts and proceedings, commonly called the protocols (πρωτοσ κολλη, the notes, or first draughts (u)), the things first glued together (x).

Authenticity
ceedings.

As a notary is a public person, so consequently all instruments made by him are called public instruments; and a judicial register of record made by him is evidence in every court according to the civil and canon law. And a bishop's register establishes a perpetual proof and evidence, when it is found in the bishop's archives; and credit is given not only to the original, but even to an authentic copy exemplified (y).

And one notary public is sufficient for the exemplification of any act; no matter requiring more than one notary to attest it (z).

And the rule of the canon law is, that where the testimony of two witnesses is required, one notary will do as well: unus notarius æquipollet duobus testibus (a).

Stamps.

By 54 & 55 Vict. c. 39, the faculty for admitting or authorizing any person to act as a notary in England shall be upon a 30*l.* stamp. And every notarial act shall be on a 1*s.* stamp, except a protest of a bill of exchange or promissory note.

given, as well in judgment as therout, to the instruments to be from this time made by you; the oaths hereunder written having been by us, or our master of the faculties, first required of you and by you taken."

[Here come the oaths of allegiance, of office, as by 6 & 7 Vict. c. 90, s. 7; and of service, if not under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 70.]

"Provided always, that these presents do not avail you anything, unless duly registered and subscribed by the clerk of her Majesty for faculties in chancery. Given under the seal of our office of faculties, at Doctors' Commons, this — day of —, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and —, and in the — year of our translation."

In the cases of Dering and Brooke v. Wright (May 4, 1836), and Hoskins v. Greetham (February, 1838), caveats were entered against the grant of a faculty, and the causes were argued by counsel at Doctors' Commons before the Master of the Faculties. In the former case the faculty was granted, in the latter refused.

Cases where admission has been argued.

There have been several cases of late years in which the question of the admission of notaries has been argued.

The Melbourne Notaries have been several times before the Master, one time being the 10th of April, 1872. On the same day a case was argued relating to a Liverpool notary. On the 27th of July, 1871, a case of Stephenson and Oates v. Hearfield, relating to the admission of notaries at Great Grimsby, was argued. The Sheffield Notaries (b), and the Neath Notaries have also given occasion to argument.

The modern practice, in the case of district notaries, is for the applicant for admission to file a memorial signed by himself, and a further memorial of such of the principal inhabitants of the place where he intends to practise as will support his application. The memorial may be met by a counter memorial on the part of the opponents, and further memorials may be filed in reply. Affidavits are rarely used. Every application should be supported by a certificate of the fitness and good character of the applicant, signed by two notaries public.

Modern practice.

Individual notaries, and in some cases societies of notaries practising at a particular place, are admitted to oppose the grant of faculties to applicants.

SECT. 6.—Apparitor.

Apparitors (so called from that principal branch in their office, Who. which consists in summoning persons to appear) are officers appointed to execute the proper orders and decrees of the court (c).

How appointed.

And these are chosen by the ecclesiastical judges respectively; who may suspend them for misbehaviour, but may not remove them at discretion, when they hold their office by patent.

His office and duty.

The proper business and employment of an apparitor is, to attend in court, to receive such commands as the judge shall please to issue forth; to convene and cite the defendants into court; to admonish or cite the parties in the production of witnesses and the like; and to make due return of the process by him executed (d).

For particular regulations in early times, see Otho. Athon, p. 63; and Boniface, Lind. p. 221.

By 21 Hen. 8, c. 5, as well as by the 138th canon, apparitors are called summoners or sumners (e).

By Can. 138 of 1603, "Forasmuch as we are desirous to redress such abuses and aggrievances as are said to grow by sumners or apparitors; we think it meet that the multitude of apparitors be (as much as is possible) abridged or restrained: wherefore we decree and ordain, That no bishop or archdeacon, or other their vicars or officials, or other inferior ordinaries, shall depute or have more apparitors to serve in their jurisdictions respectively, than either they or their predecessors were accustomed to have thirty years before the publishing these our present Constitutions. All which apparitors shall by themselves faithfully execute their offices; neither shall they under any colour or pretence whatsoever cause or suffer their mandates to be executed by any messengers or substitutes, unless it be upon some good cause to be first known and approved by the ordinary of the place. Moreover, they shall not take upon them the office of promoters or informers for the court, neither shall they exact more fees than are in these our Constitutions formerly prescribed. And if either the number of the apparitors deputed shall exceed the assigned limitation, or any of the said apparitors shall offend in any of the premisses; the persons deputing them, if they be bishops, shall upon admonition of their superior discharge the persons exceeding the number so limited; if inferior ordinaries, they shall be suspended from the execution of their office, until they have dismissed the apparitors by them so deputed; and the parties themselves so deputed shall for ever be removed from the office of apparitors, and if being so removed they desist not from the exercise of their said offices, let them be punished by ecclesiastical censures as persons contumacious. Provided, that if upon experience the number of the said apparitors be too great in any diocese, in the judgment of the archbishop for the time being, they shall by him be so abridged, as he shall think meet and convenient."

Office of Promoters or Informers for the Court.]—The case of Carlion v. Mill, in 8 Car. 1, was an action upon the case, for that the defendant being an apparitor under the bishop of Exeter, maliciously, and without colour or cause of suspicion of incontinency, of his own proper malice, procured the plaintiff ex officio, upon pretence of fame of incontinency with one Edith (whereas there was no such fame nor just cause of suspicion) to be cited to the consistory court, and there to be at great charges and vexation until he was cleared by sentence; which was to his great discredit, and cause of great expenses and losses; for which the action is brought. Upon not guilty pleaded, and found for the plaintiff, it was moved in arrest of judgment, that in this case an action lies not; for he did nothing but as an informer, and by virtue of his office. But all the court held, forasmuch as it is alleged that he did maliciously and without colour of suspicion cause him to be cited, upon pretence of fame where there was no offence committed, and it is averred that there was not any such fame, and he is found guilty thereof, therefore the action well lies (g).

God, John, late Archbishop of Canterbury in the year of our Lord God One thousand five hundred ninety and seven, and were by him Ratified and Approved, under pain that every such Judge, Officer or Minister offending herein shall be Suspended from the Exercise of their several Offices, for the space of six Months for every such Offence. Always provided, that if any Question shall arise concerning the certainty of the said Fees or any of them, then those Fees shall be held for lawful, which the Archbishop of Canterbury for the time being shall under his Hand approve, except the Statutes of this Realm before made, do in any Particular Case express some other Fees to be due. Cases relating to.

In Folks' case (k) it would seem that a mandamus lies to admit the archbishop's apparitor-general. See Reyner and Parker's case, upon the authority of a summoner, which was held not to extend to ordering a parson to pay tithes to a person to whom he had not paid them, although the bishop certified that according to 26 Hen. 8, c. 3 he had refused to pay them (l).

No vested interests.

By Can. 136, "We do likewise constitute and appoint, That the Registers belonging to every such Ecclesiastical Judge, shall place two Tables, containing the several Rates and Sums of all the said Fees; one in the usual Place or Consistory where the Court is kept, and the other in his Registry, and both of them in such sort, as every man, whom it concerneth, may without difficulty come to the View and Perusal thereof, and take a Copy of them; the same Tables to be so set up before the Feast of the Nativity next ensuing. And if any Register shall fail to place the said Tables according to the Tenor hereof, he shall be Suspended from the execution of his Office, until he cause the same to be accordingly done; And the said Table being once set up, if he shall at any time remove or suffer the same to be removed, hidden or any way hindered from sight, contrary to the true meaning of this Constitution, he shall for every such Offence be Suspended from the Exercise of his Office for the space of Six Months." The object of this chapter is to give an outline of the mode of proceeding both in criminal and in civil suits in the Ecclesiastical Court.

Original object of suit may be changed.

There is a remarkable peculiarity which distinguishes certain suits in the Ecclesiastical Court from those which could be brought in equity or at common law. It is this: the original object of a suit may be changed, and assume in the conclusion an entirely different shape from that in which it had been instituted. Thus under the old law a suit might be commenced against a woman for jactitation of marriage, and if her defence were that she was duly married, and this defence were established, the sentence would be a decree against the husband for a restitution of conjugal rights. A wife might sue for a restitution of conjugal rights, and the defence of the husband might be that she had been guilty of adultery; and if he succeeded the sentence would be a divorce à mensâ et thoro against the wife. On the same principle a husband, against whom a wife had instituted a suit for divorce on the ground of cruelty, might plead her adultery in a responsive allegation (b), and was not compelled to take out any separate or cross citation for the purpose. On application for a faculty to remove articles put into a church without a faculty, those who appear in opposition may pray in the same suit for a faculty to confirm (c). The reconventio of the Roman Dutch law is a somewhat similar proceeding. The two together have led to the introduction of "counterclaims" into the procedure of the High Court of Justice.

SECT. 2.—Who may be Parties to a Suit.

The Criminal Suit is open to every one whom the ordinary allows to promote his office, and the Civil Suit to every one showing an interest (d).

been permitted to promote the office of the judge against a clergyman, an objection was taken by the counsel for the latter against the institution of the suit by one who it appeared from the evidence was among those denounced by the 9th and 12th Canons of 1603 as schismatics, and therefore ipso facto excommunicated, it being contended that the 53 Geo. 3, c. 127, had only removed civil penalties from dissenters. The judge, however, overruled the objection, holding that a person, even when excommunicated by sentence, was not now disabled from suing in the Ecclesiastical Courts. The Privy Council confirmed this sentence (e).

But since 53 Geo. 3, c. 127, a party pronounced contumacious, and whose contempt has been signified at a preceding stage of the cause for disobedience to any order of the judge, cannot appear in court at a subsequent period, or prosecute an appeal from proceedings carried on in pœnam, until he has been absolved from his contempt, and taken the oath de parendo juri to his ordinary (f).

An outlaw would have no persona standi in these courts (g). Outlaw.

2. All minors may bring suits by their guardian, elected for the purpose by the Ecclesiastical Courts; lunatics by their committee duly appointed. But the judge cannot compel a father to continue as a party in a suit when his son has become of age during its continuance; if he attempt to do so, he will be liable to an action on the case at common law (h). Minors, imbecile persons, lunatics.

3. Married women might, under the old law in certain cases, have instituted alone a civil suit in the ecclesiastical courts, as in a case of defamation, or in a legacy bequeathed to the separate use (i). Married women.

4. A person may sue and appeal (k) in formâ pauperis; but "to sue as a pauper is a great privilege of law; it belongs only to the necessity arising from absolute poverty and from the Paupers.

absence of any other mode of obtaining justice; no person is entitled to the gratuitous labours of others who can furnish the means of providing them for himself: besides, it places the adverse party under great disadvantages, it takes away one of the principal checks upon vexatious litigation; the legal claim to so great a privilege ought, therefore, to be clearly made out. It is a complete but not an uncommon misapprehension of the law to suppose that because a person is in insolvent circumstances, and because he can truly swear that he is not worth 5*l.* after all his just debts are paid, that therefore he is entitled to be admitted, or, rather, to proceed as a pauper; it is primâ facie ground to admit him as such, but no more" (l). It would seem from the cases cited in this extract from Sir J. Nicholl's judgment, that the criterion is the income, and not the debts, of the party; for instance, where a person admits an income of 70*l.* per annum, and owes 200*l.* beyond his effects, he will not be admitted to sue as a pauper. A person erroneously admitted as a pauper may be dispaupered (m).

Interveners.

5. Interveners in a suit are unknown to the common law, but the doctrine of the civil and canon law administered in the admiralty and ecclesiastical courts (n), is, "Tertius intervenire potest pro interesse suo in omni causâ quæ tangit bona aut personam suam" (o). In a matrimonial cause there might have been an intervention (p) at any time, even in the appeal; but a person who has no interest cannot be permitted to intervene (q). In testamentary causes, it has been said, that "Interveners must take the cause in which they intervene as they find it at the time of such their intervention; hence they can only of right do what they might have done had they been parties in the first instance, or had their intervention occurred in an earlier stage of the cause" (r). In a case of divorce, where the alleged marriage is denied to be valid, the court has permitted third parties who have estates expectant (inter alia) upon the issue of such marriage being declared illegitimate, to be cited to see proceedings so far as relate to the marriage (s); but such parties cannot object to the manner in which the original citation in the cause was executed, nor can an intervener take an objection to the jurisdiction of the court if the principal parties litigant have submitted to it (t). In a faculty case an intervention has been allowed upon an appeal (u). The passage on which the law of Igitur et venditoris fidejussor emptore victo appellabit, licet emptor et venditor acquiescant*" (v).

SECT. 3.—Mode of conducting a Suit.

With the successive removal from the jurisdiction of the Ecclesiastical Courts of causes as to tithes, marriages, wills, and intestacy, defamation and in large part dilapidations, the civil business of the Ecclesiastical Courts has been much reduced. The criminal work as far as regards the discipline of the Clergy is the subject of four several procedures, established by the statutes 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106; 3 & 4 Vict. c. 86; 37 & 38 Vict. c. 85; and 55 & 56 Vict. c. 32, each of which will require a separate chapter. Nevertheless the old procedure remains important (a) for the remaining civil business, (b) for the criminal jurisdiction over the laity, and (c) as affording principles which underlie the statutory procedure and are required as a guide to much of its construction. Therefore it may be convenient in this section to give a general sketch of the forms to be observed in the conduct of a suit, both civil and criminal, in the Ecclesiastical Court.

Modern changes as to procedure.

The old mode of procedure was framed upon a system which proceeded on written evidence taken before an examiner (x) : But this has, for all practical purposes, been entirely altered by the statute which introduced vivâ voce evidence into the Ecclesiastical Courts (17 & 18 Vict. c. 47) ; and proceedings have been since conducted in substance as cases at nisi prius are conducted, though the names and forms of the pleadings are different, and the power remains of taking evidence before an examiner when necessary.

Frame and ends of old system.

The mode of commencing the suit and bringing the parties before the court is by a process called in the consistorial courts a citation, containing the name of the judge, the plaintiff, and name, residence, and diocese of the defendant; the cause of action, and the time and place of appearance. In the Arches Court this process is called a decree. This citation, in ordinary cases, is prepared and signed by the proctor, and issued under seal of the court; but in special cases the facts are alleged in what is termed an act of court, and upon those facts the judge

(x) See for a full account of the old practice, Burn, ed. Phillimore, tit. Practice, vol. 3. The mode of pleading now in use in the High Court of Justice was modelled on that in use in the Admiralty Court, which again was derived from that used in the Ecclesiastical Courts, though considerably condensed.

Intimation.

or his surrogate decrees the party to be cited, to which in certain cases is added an Intimation that if the party does not appear, or, appearing, does not show cause to the contrary, the court will proceed to do as therein set forth. These decrees or citations are signed by the registrar of the court. In some cases the citation also contains a monition, and the party cited is admonished to do something or otherwise to appear and show cause why he should not. The citation in duplex querela has both monition and intimation: and a citation with a monition has been adopted, but with doubtful regularity, in some other cases (y).

First plea—its different names.

The name of the first plea varies according to the description of the cause. In criminal proceedings the first plea is called articles, because it runs in the name of the judge, who articles and objects. In plenary causes, which are not criminal, the first plea is termed the libel, and runs in the name of the party or his proctor, who alleges and propounds the facts founding the demand. In testamentary causes the first plea was called an allegation.

Subsequent pleas.

This first plea, though more comprehensive (especially in criminal suits), is analogous to the old declaration at common law, or bill in equity. But there is this characteristic difference, that all such pleas are broken into separate positions or articles, the facts upon which the party founds his demand being alleged under separate heads according to the subject-matter and the time in which they have occurred. Every subsequent plea, in all causes, whether responsive or rejoining, and by whatever party given in, is termed an allegation.

Advantages incident to this mode of pleading.

Here it should be remarked, that before a plea of any kind, whether articles, libel or allegation, is admitted, it is open to the adverse party to object to its admission, either in the whole or in part; in the whole, when the facts altogether, if taken to be true, will not entitle the party giving the plea to the demand which he makes, or to support the defence which he sets up (z); in part, if any of the facts pleaded are irrelevant to the matter in issue, or could not be proved by admissible evidence, or are incapable of proof.

These objections are made and argued before the judge, and decided upon by him; and his decision may be appealed from. For the purpose of the argument, all the facts capable of proof are assumed to be true; they are, however, so assumed, merely for the argument, but are not so admitted in the cause; for the party who offers the plea is no less bound afterwards to prove the facts; and the party who objects to the plea is no less at liberty afterwards to contradict the facts. This proceeding is attended with great convenience in abridging the introduction of unnecessary and improper matter, to which parties themselves are generally too much disposed. They are apt to consider trivial circumstances to be important, and desire them to be inserted in the plea: a desire which neither the honest reluctance of the practitioners, nor the judicious advice of counsel, is always able to counteract: even the authority and vigilance of the court itself cannot altogether prevent redundant pleading, and can only check it by taking it into consideration on the question of costs.

(z) As to a libel of appeal, vide infra, p. 980.

The proceedings just referred to have also the convenience of enabling parties, in many instances, to take the opinion of the court in a very summary way, particularly in amicable suits: if the facts are candidly stated, and the court, upon the plea being objected to, should be of opinion, that if proved, the facts either will or will not support the prayer of the plea; in the one case, if the plea is admitted, the further opposition may be withdrawn; in the other case, if the plea is rejected, the party offering it either abandons the suit, or appeals, in order to take the judgment of a superior tribunal. This course saves the expense and delay consequent upon proving the facts by witnesses, in cases where there exists no doubt of the facts being correctly alleged in pleas, and where the question between the parties is principally or perhaps altogether a question of law arising out of the facts so stated in plea.

The plaintiff, or his proctor who brings in the libel, prays that a day may be assigned for the defendant's or his proctor's answer to it, and on such day assigned, the plaintiff or his proctor, in presence of the defendant or his proctor, requests the answer, the giving of which creates the litis contestatio (a), which common lawyers call the issue (b). Such issue may be either, 1, simple affirmative, in which case there is of course an end of the suit; or, 2, simple negative, consisting of a general denial of the libel; or what may be termed, 3, qualified affirmative or negative, in the language of Conset, "When the defendant doth indeed confess the fact, but yet adds some certain qualities or circumstances of this fact, which are silently passed over by the plaintiff, by reason of which omission of the circumstances of the fact it may be said to be different from the fact propounded in the libel; hence, though the defendant may not simply deny the fact, yet he may do it indirectly, while he shows the fact to be much otherwise than what is related by the plaintiff" (c). In causes of divorce the party used, generally, to

(a) The origin of the phrase is to be traced to the primitive manners of the Romans. At the opening of the suit the defendant invoked some of the standers by as witnesses. This was called antestari or contestari. See Festus de V. S.; sub voce "Contestari."

(b) Before issue given, a suit is not held to be commenced by the civil or canon law; but from the return of the citation there is a lis pendens. See Ray v. Sherwood, 1 Curt. pp. 173, 193; Sherwood v. Ray, 1 Moo. P. C. C. p. 365.

(c) See an instance in the special answer by confessing the fact of marriage, but otherwise contesting the suit negatively.

Personal answers.

The plaintiff is, in all civil causes, entitled to what are called the personal answers of the defendant on oath, with this exception, that the defendant is not bound to answer any criminal matter, though civiliter intentata, as the charge of adultery in a matrimonial suit. In criminal suits he cannot be called upon for answers at all. These personal answers should contain an answer of fact to all and every the positions or articles of the libel.

Designation of witnesses.

Whatever parts of the libel the defendant has not admitted, in his personal answers, the plaintiff proceeds to prove by witnesses. The old practice was as follows: a notice, called a designation, was delivered to the defendants of their names, and the different articles on which it was intended to examine them; he was, therefore, distinctly apprised of the points to which he should address his cross-examination of each witness, as well as the matters which it might be necessary for him to contradict or to explain by counterpleading.

Responsive allegation.

The mode of doing this, was to give in a responsive allegation (d), which might be attended with the same consequences as the earlier plea, that is to say, objections to its admissibility, answers upon oath, and the examination of witnesses. The witnesses were examined secretly, and their depositions taken down by an examiner. Publication of the evidence was prayed by one party, and unless the party had not had time to prepare his interrogatories, or unless he alleged an allegation exceptive to the evidence, publication was decreed by the judge. The court might extend this time on reasonable cause being shown, and its duration must, too, of course, depend on the distance of the abode of the witnesses, the facility of reaching them, &c. Each term assigned was technically called an assignation, and the book in which the minutes of the court were kept by the registrar was called the assignation book. The term given for proof was called the term probatory. The court might also, on very strong reasons being shown, renew a lapsed term.

Term assigned for proof.

Counter-allegation.

A counter-allegation might be given in to the responsive allegation, and was subject to the same incidents and rules as the former. But in a rejoinder to a responsive allegation, the only facts strictly pleadable were those either contradictory to or explanatory of facts pleaded in the allegation to which it rejoined, and those noviter perventa to the proponent's knowledge; though the court might, under certain circumstances, permit facts to be pleaded which did not come under these descriptions (e). Beyond this step the mere pleadings were rarely carried (f), but it

Courts with the personal answers.

(e) Dew v. Clark, 2 Add. p. 102.

(f) A fourth allegation was admitted by the judge of the Consis-should seem that the discretion of the judge and the advocate, and the apprehension of costs, rather than any positive rule, prevented further pleading. And here one exception should be mentioned; it was always permitted to give in an allegation of facts "noviter perventa" to the knowledge of one of the parties in the suit, it being fully established to the satisfaction of the judge that such facts could not have been earlier known to the party now propounding them. For instance, in matrimonial causes it was allowed to plead acts of adultery committed since the institution of the suit, or before, such being shown to be noviter perventa. An exceptive allegation might also be given under certain restrictions to the character of witnesses (g).

Exceptive
allegation.

With the introduction of oral evidence taken at the hearing the practice of examining witnesses upon the libel first, then upon the responsive allegation, and then upon each subsequent allegation as it was given in, has disappeared; and witnesses are now examined generally at the hearing upon the points left in issue by the pleadings and the personal answers. But the rules as to objecting to the admissibility of a pleading and as to requiring the personal answers of the other party remain.

When the parties in a cause renounce all further allegations, unless exceptive, the cause is concluded against them, though it is still within the discretion of the court to allow further pleading by rescinding the conclusion (h).

Conclusion.

The instruments adopted by the Ecclesiastical Court for giving effect to its process are, first, citation or decree, as has been shown (i); secondly, monition, that is to say, granting to the party complaining an order monishing the party complained against to obey under pain of the law and contempt thereof; and, thirdly, compulsory: a writ to compel the attendance of a witness to undergo examination.

Citation,
monition, and compulsory.

Thus there may be a monition for personal answers, for bringing in scripts and scrolls, for payment of costs or alimony, to churchwardens to hold a vestry, to a clergyman to reside, &c., &c. (k).

The difference between a citation and a monition seems to be, that the former requires a party to appear, the latter an act to be done.

All writs require a certificate of their execution. Such certificate is indorsed on the instrument setting forth the day and place of service, signed by the officer or person who served it. An affidavit of the truth of the certificate is also indorsed.

Writ de contumace capi-endo.

The last resource of the ecclesiastical courts for the enforcement of their processes, is to obtain a writ "de contumace capiendo" or a sequestration.

Process where a decree cannot be personally served before proceeding in pænam contumaciæ.

If there should be no opportunity of effecting a personal service of a citation or decree, proof of the fact is made by affidavit of the officer on returning the citation into court, upon which another decree issues, called a decree viis et modis. This decree is served if possible on the person, if not upon the house, the last known place of residence, or the church-door, and by all ways and means likely to affect the party with the knowledge of its contents. Such decree is returned into court, with the certificate of the apparitor as to the means which have been taken, and on the return of such citation viis et modis (l), the court proceeds in pænam contumaciæ; and the proceedings thus necessarily conducted ex parte would be conclusive upon the party not appearing. An unsuccessful attempt was made to enforce upon the Ecclesiastical Court the necessity of applying for a significavit against the non-appearing party, instead of proceeding in pænam during his absence; but both the Courts of Queen's Bench and of Chancery refused a prohibition applied for on this amongst other grounds; the lord chancellor remarking, that many courts proceeded to judgments in the absence of parties who were voluntarily absent (m).

Appearance
under protest.

The party cited, to save his contumacy, may appear under protest, and may show cause against the citation; for instance, that the court has no jurisdiction in the subject-matter, or that he is not amenable to that jurisdiction. This preliminary objection is heard upon petition and affidavits, and either the protest is allowed and the defendant dismissed, or the protest is overruled, and the defendant is assigned to appear absolutely. Costs, it should be remarked, are usually given against the unsuccessful party. Either party may appeal from the decision on this preliminary point; or the defendant, should the judge decide against him on the question of jurisdiction, may apply to the High Court of Justice for a prohibition.

Initiatory process in the Arches.

The initiatory process in the Arches Court is by decree, which is founded on letters of request, or by citation, which is issued only on an appeal, except in suits for legacies, where the Court formerly had original cognizance, when once the will had been proved in the Prerogative Court. The first plea, as has been said, is termed a libel in civil, and articles in criminal suits, not an allegation, as in the Prerogative Court.

Act on petition.

It seems proper to mention here that a very convenient and

(l) In the Arches Court a further decree would issue to see proceedings, and endeavours would be made to serve this upon the party: but this is not thought necessary in

summary mode of proceeding, called an act on petition, or an act of court, is often resorted to in these courts for the adjudication of any incidental subject which may arise during or after the progress of a suit: such as the taxation of costs between party and party; or on a preliminary matter, such as a question of domicile; or an appearance under protest; or formerly on the grant of an administration pendente lite (n).

An act on petition is the form of proceeding by which a party may be compelled before the ordinary to take upon him the office of churchwarden, and in which a cause is heard whenever application for a faculty for the alteration or removal of a church, the erection of an organ or monument, &c., is opposed.

Of this nature, too, are proceedings in a cause, which is of rare occurrence, before the Master of the Faculties, where the issue of a licence for a marriage is opposed, or in respect of the creation of a notary public.

Proceedings on an act on petition must be so conducted as not to prejudice the defendant, if the more formal proceedings by plea and proof would have been in the particular case more regular (o).

It is competent to either party to what is technically termed write to the act, that is, to reply by written statements and affidavits to the statement of the adversary, under of course a liability to costs for unnecessarily protracting the suit. This mode of proceeding is very simple, consisting of statements supported by affidavits, and argued by counsel.

Proceedings in duplex querela should be by plea and proof and not by act on petition (p).

A party proceeding for a civil remedy at the same time in the Temporal and in the Ecclesiastical Courts may be put to his election (q). Election.

SECT. 4.—Sentence.

By the ancient canon law, sentence of suspension or excommunication ought not to be given without a previous admonition: unless the offence is such as in its own nature immediately requires such sentence. In Archbishop Arundel's Register, mention is made of an appeal from a sentence of suspension, as unjust for want of a canonical admonition (r). And every sentence must be in writing; otherwise it deserves not the name of a sentence, and needs not the formality of an appeal to reverse it (s). And the sentence must be pronounced in the presence of both parties; otherwise sentence given in the absence of one of the parties is void (t).

A sentence is either definitive or interlocutory.

Definitive.

A definitive sentence is that which puts an end to the suit in controversy, and regards the principal matter in question.

Interlocutory.

An interlocutory sentence determines only some incident or emergent matter in the proceeding, as some exception, or the like, but does not affect the principal matter in controversy (u).

Final interlocutory decree.

But according to modern practice, frequent use is made in the Arches Court of what is termed a final interlocutory decree; and the only difference between this and a sentence is, that the one (the sentence) is a decree itself under the hand of the judge making it; and that the other, the interlocutory decree (and which should express that it is to have the force of a written sentence), is merely the statement of the registrar, acting as a notary public, that a decree (to such an effect or in such terms) was made by the judge. They are both equally effective, and therefore sometimes one is had and sometimes the other.

Place of hearing and sentence.

The court must be held and sentence pronounced at a place which is within the ambit of its jurisdiction (x). But where a suit proceeded to a sentence in the Commissary Court of Surrey, in which certain witnesses had been produced, sworn, and examined, in the diocese of London, without express consent given to time and place; and on appeal objection was taken to the depositions of such witnesses, it was ruled that the objection could not be sustained, especially by reason that the appellant had acquiesced by his acts in what had been done, and that, as the facts were within his knowledge in the court below, and no objection taken, it was too late to object in the Appellate Court (y).

Execution.

The execution of the sentence, in case there be no appeal interposed, is either completed by the act of the court itself, or remains to be completed by the act of the party, in which cases execution is enforced by the compulsory process of contumacy, significavit and attachment (z).

SECT. 5.—Appeal (a).

An appeal is a provocation from an inferior to a superior judge, whereby the jurisdiction of the inferior judge is for a while suspended as to the cause from which such appeal is made, the cognizance of it having been transferred to the superior judge. It is laid down in the books of civil and canon law that an appeal, as well as a judicial process, derives its origin from the law of nations.

The description and origin of appeal.

Very ancient usage, it would seem, invented and introduced this right in order that no man might be injured by the injustice or unskilfulness of his judge, but that every person judicially aggrieved, whether principal litigant or not, provided it were his interest to have the sentence from which he appealed reversed, should be entitled to this remedy. Appeals have been therefore much favoured by all systems of jurisprudence, and the right of instituting them universally considered as sacred. Durandus expressly says that the right should be so esteemed by the judge appealed from ("reverenter ei deferat"), and that even in doubtful cases he should receive and admit an appeal. In the Ecclesiastical Courts of this country, paupers have been allowed the right of appeal (b).

As to the early practice of the church upon this point with respect to its ordained ministers, it seems to have permitted a presbyter or deacon, excommunicated by his own bishop, to appeal first to the metropolitan, from him to the provincial synod, and from that to the patriarch, from whom there lay no appeal except to a general council (c).

Appeals granted to the clergy by the early practice of the church.

There were no appeals to the pope out of England before the reign of King Stephen, when they were introduced by Henry de Blois, bishop of Winchester, the pope's legate. Not but attempts had been made before that time to carry appeals to Rome, which were vigorously withstood by the nation, as appears by the complaint of the pope in the reign of Henry I. that the king would suffer no appeals to be made to him; and before that, in the reign of William Rufus, the bishops and barons told Anselm (who was attempting it) that it was a thing unheard of for any one to go to Rome (that is, by way of appeal), without the king's leave. And though this point was yielded in the reign of King Stephen, yet his successor Henry II. resumed and maintained it, as appears by the constitutions of Clarendon, which provide for the course of appeals within the realm, so as that further process be not made, without the king's assent (d). And afterwards, in the parliament of Northampton, the constitutions of Clarendon were renewed; and in the reigns of Richard I. and King John, we find new complaints of the little regard paid to those appeals; for which also divers persons were imprisoned in the reigns of Edward I., Edward II. and Edward III. (e).

Nevertheless, appeals to Rome still obtained until the reign of king Henry VIII., when they were abolished by 24 Hen. 8, c. 12, and 25 Hen. 8, c. 19, here following:—

25 Hen. 8,
c. 12.
Appeals to Rome
abolished.

By 24 Hen. 8, c. 12, ss. 1, 2, “all causes testamentary, causes of matrimony, and divorces, rights of tithes, oblations, and obventions,” shall be finally determined within the king’s jurisdiction and authority, and not elsewhere: any foreign appeals to the see of Rome, or to any other foreign courts or potentates, to the let or impediment thereof in any wise notwithstanding. And if any person shall procure from the see of Rome or any other foreign court any appeal in any the causes aforesaid, or execute any process concerning the same, he shall incur a præmunire.

25 Hen. 8,
c. 19.

And by 25 Hen. 8, c. 19, s. 4, no manner of appeals shall be had out of this realm . . . to the bishop or see of Rome, in any causes or matters whatsoever; but all manner of appeals, of what nature or condition soever they be, shall be made and had after such form and condition, as is limited for appeals in causes of matrimony, tithes, oblations, and obventions, by a statute made since the beginning of this parliament. And if any person shall sue any appeal to the bishop or see of Rome, or procure or execute any process from thence; he, his aiders, counsellors, and abettors, shall incur a præmunire.

24 Hen. 8,
c. 12.

Appeals to the several courts respectively within this realm.

And by 24 Hen. 8, c. 12, s. 3, appeals within this realm shall be in this form, and not otherwise; “first, from the archdeacon or his official, if the matter or cause be there begun, to the bishop diocesan of the said see. . . . If it be commenced before the bishop diocesan or his commissary, then from the bishop diocesan or his commissary, within fifteen days next ensuing the judgment or sentence given, to the archbishop . . . and there to be definitely and finally ordered, decreed, and adjudged,” without any other appeal whatsoever.

If the matter, for any the causes aforesaid, “be commenced before the archdeacon of any archbishop, or his commissary, then the party grieved shall or may take his appeal, within fifteen days next after judgment or sentence there given, to the court of the arches, or audience of the same archbishop or archbishops; and from the said court of the arches, or audience, within fifteen days then next ensuing after judgment or sentence there given, to the archbishop of the same province,” there to be finally determined without any other appeal.

(d) This assent might be withheld and the appeals prohibited, as we find in Registrum Brevium, fo. 89, De securitate inveniendu quod se non divertat aliquis versus partes externas sine licentia regis.

If the matter be commenced, for any the causes aforesaid, before the archbishop, then the same shall be before him definitively determined, without any other appeal, provocation, or any other foreign process out of this realm to be sued to the let or derogation of the said judgment, sentence or decree, otherwise than is by this act limited; "saving always the prerogative of the archbishop and church of Canterbury, in all the foresaid causes of appeals, to him and his successors, to be sued within this realm, in such and like wise as they have been accustomed and used to have heretofore" (f).

Appeals within this Realm shall be in this Form.]—Which is to be done by demanding letters missive, called apostoli, from the judge a quo, to the judge ad quem (g).

From the Archdeacon or his Official to the Bishop.]—And not per saltum to the archbishop: and this is agreeable to the rule of the ancient canon law (h). The canon law, however, allowed an appeal to the pope, omisso medio (i), and to his legates. Both an appellate and an original jurisdiction are said to belong to the Archbishop of Canterbury legationis jure (k). But this custom of appealing to the pope is said not to have obtained in France, where, if the bishops in council doubted of the ecclesiastical law, the appeal lay to the metropolitan in council, and from him to the primate, whose decision was final (l). The rule of the civil law is that appeals shall be made gradatim, and not per saltum (m).

From arch-
court.

In the case of Robinson v. Godsalve, in 8 Will. 3, it was resolved by the court, that where an archdeacon has a peculiar jurisdiction, he is totally exempt from the power of the bishop, and the bishop cannot enter there and hold court. And in such case, if the party who lives in the peculiar be sued in the bishop's court, a prohibition shall be granted, for the statute intends that no suit shall be per saltum. But if the archdeacon has not a peculiar, then the bishop and he have concurrent jurisdiction, and the party may commence his suit either in the archdeacon's court or the bishop's; and if he commence in the bishop's court, no prohibition shall be granted; for if it should, it would confine the bishop's court to determine nothing but appeals, and render it incapable of having any causes originally commenced there (n).

Where archdeacon has a peculiar.

From the Bishop.]—This is to be extended to all who have episcopal jurisdiction: as in the case of Johnson v. Ley, in 7 Will. 3, where the dean of Salisbury, in one of his peculiars, made letters of request to the Dean of the Arches, it was objected, in order to obtain a prohibition, that this was per saltum, and that he ought to have made request to the Bishop of Salisbury, his immediate ordinary: but the plea was not allowed, because this was not (as in the case of an archidiaconal peculiar) subject to the jurisdiction of the ordinary, but immediately to the archbishop (o).

From the Bishop or his Commissary, to the Archbishop.]—And not from the bishop's official or commissary, to the bishop himself; for the reason given in the canon law, namely, lest (having both but one auditory) the appeal should seem to be made from the same person to the same person (p).

25 Hen. 8,
c. 19.

Appeals from archbishop's
court.

By 25 Hen. 8, c. 19, s. 4, for lack of justice in the courts of the archbishop, the party may appeal to the king in chancery; and upon every such appeal, a commission shall be directed under the great seal to such persons as shall be named by the king, like as in case of appeal from the admiral's court, to hear and determine such appeals; whose sentence shall be definitive: and no further appeals to be had from the said commissioners.

For lack of Justice in the Archbishops' Courts.]—Such appeal lies not from a local visitor; nor in any cause of a temporal nature; nor did it lie from the high commission court when in being, because they themselves were the king's delegates, as acting by immediate commission from him, and there was no remedy against their sentences but a new commission to others, grantable in virtue of the royal prerogative and independent from this statute (q).

The Party grieved may appeal to the King in Chancery.]—And no commission of delegates, in any case of weight, used to be awarded, but upon petition preferred to the Lord Chancellor, who named the commissioners himself, to the end they might be persons of convenient quality, having regard to the weight of the cause and dignity of the court from which the appeal was (r).

And sometimes for a supply of justice, on petition to the king, a special commission of delegacy issued, to begin the suit, and proceed originally in the cause; as where the archbishop himself was interested, or the like (s).

A Commission shall be directed under the Great Seal, to such Persons as shall be named by the King.]—These commissioners were usually some of the lords spiritual and temporal or both, and commonly one or more of the twelve judges, and one or more doctors of the civil law (t).

And they were commonly called delegates (according to the language of the civil and canon law), on account of the special commission or delegation they received from the king, for the hearing and determining every particular cause. Agreeably whereunto, their proceedings were according to the rules of the civil and ecclesiastical laws; and on that account it has been particularly adjudged, that a suit there did not abate by the death of the parties: this being the course in the ecclesiastical courts. Also prohibitions went to them, as to an ecclesiastical court. But in the case of Stevenson v. Wood, in 10 Jac. 1 (u), the better opinion of the court was, that they could not grant letters of administration (x).

Whose Sentence shall be definitive.]—In the case of Saul v. Wilson, in 1689, it was said that there lies no appeal from a sentence in a court of delegates; for they cannot have any original jurisdiction, because it is a matter grounded upon an act of parliament, and the act gives them none (y).

But on a petition to the king in council, a commission of review might be granted under the great seal, appointing new judges, or adding more to the former judges, to revise, review, and rehear the cause (z).

And hereupon Lord Coke observes, that albeit these statutes do upon certain appeals make the sentence definitive as to any appeal, and that no further appeal should be had; yet the king after such a definitive sentence, as supreme head, may grant a commission of review, for two causes: 1. For that it is not restrained by the statute. 2. For that after a definitive sentence, the pope as supreme head by the canon law used to grant a commission ad revidendum; and such authority as the pope had, claiming as supreme head, of right belongs to the crown, and is annexed thereunto by the statutes 26 Hen. 8, c. 1, and 1 Eliz. c. 1 (a). And so it was resolved in the King's Bench, in 39 Eliz., where the case was, that sentence being given in an ecclesiastical cause in the country, the party grieved appealed according to the act of 24 Hen. 8, c. 12, to the archbishop, before whom the first sentence was affirmed. Whereupon, according to the statute of 25 Hen. 8, c. 19, he appealed to the delegates: before whom both the former sentences were repealed and made void by definitive sentence. And thereupon the queen, as supreme head, granted a commission of review, ad revidendum the sentence of the delegates. And upon this matter a prohibition was prayed in the King's Bench, pretending that the commission of review was against law, for that the sentence before the delegates was definitive by the statute of 25 Hen. 8, c. 19. But upon mature deliberation and debate the prohibition was denied: for that the commission for the causes abovesaid was resolved to be lawfully granted. In that case Coke says, he being then the queen's attorney, was of counsel to maintain the queen's power. And precedents were cited in that court, in Michelot's case, 29 Eliz., and in Goodman's case, and in Huet's case, in the same year (b).

But a commission of review was matter of discretion, and not of right: and if it were a hard case, the chancellor would advise the crown not to grant it (c).

In the commission of review, there was sometimes a clause to admit other allegations and new matter, and to take proofs thereupon as well on the one part as on the other (d).

Appeal to the king is party.

By 24 Hen. 8, c. 12, s. 4, in case any cause, matter, or contention, for any the causes specified in the said statute, shall come in contention in any of the aforesaid courts which shall touch the king, his heirs or successors, the party grieved may appeal from any of the courts of this realm to the spiritual prelates, and other abbots and priors of the upper house, assembled and convocate by the king's writ in the convocation being, or next ensuing, within the province or provinces where the same matter or contention is or shall be begun, so that such appeal be within fifteen days after sentence given; and the same to be there finally determined. It would seem that this section is no longer in force, but the point was not clearly decided (e).

No commission of review to be hereafter granted.

By 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 41, the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council was formed.

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 41.

The composition of this body has been altered from time to time. As it now stands, by the joint effect of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 41, s. 1, 39 & 40 Vict. c. 59, ss. 6, 25, and 50 & 51 Vict. c. 70, s. 3, every past or present lord president of the council, lord chancellor of Great Britain or of Ireland, lord of appeal in ordinary, judge of the High Court of Justice or Court of Appeal in England or in Ireland, or of the Court of Session in Scotland, being privy councillors, are members; and further, it is lawful for the Crown from time to time, by sign manual, "to appoint any two other persons, being privy councillors, to be members of the said committee."

Members of Judicial Committee.

By sect. 3 of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, "All appeals or complaints in the nature of appeals whatever, which, either by virtue of this Act, or of any law, statute or custom, may be brought before his Majesty or his Majesty in council from or in respect of the determination, sentence, rule or order of any court, judge or judicial officer, and all such appeals as are now pending and unheard, shall, from and after the passing of this act, be referred by his Majesty to the said judicial committee of his privy council, and such appeals, causes and matters shall be heard by the said judicial committee, and a report or recommendation thereon shall be made to his Majesty in council for his decision thereon as heretofore, in the same manner and form as has been heretofore the custom with respect to matters referred by his Majesty to the whole of his privy council or a committee thereof" (the nature of such report or recommendation being always stated in open court).

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42.

All appeals to be referred by his Majesty to the judicial committee, to report thereon.

By sect. 7, it shall be lawful for the judicial committee to examine witnesses by word of mouth, or to direct that the depositions of any witness shall be taken in writing by the registrar of the privy council.

Power to take evidence.

By sect. 8, it shall be lawful for the judicial committee to direct that witnesses shall be examined or re-examined, and as to such facts as to the said committee shall seem fit; and his Majesty in council may, on the recommendation of the said committee, remit the matter which shall be the subject of such appeal to the court from the decision of which such appeal shall have been made, and direct that such court shall rehear such matter, in such form, and either generally or upon certain points only, and upon such rehearing take such additional evidence, though before rejected, or reject such evidence before admitted, as shall be directed, or it may be directed that a feigned issue shall be tried in any court in any of his Majesty's dominions abroad.

To remit causes.

To direct issues.

By sects. 10—13, the judicial committee may direct an issue to try any fact, may in certain cases direct depositions to be read at the trial of the issue, may make such orders as to the admission of evidence as are made by the Court of Chancery, and may direct new trials.

Costs.

By sect. 15, costs are to be in the discretion of the judicial committee.

Reference to registrar.

By sect. 17, the judicial committee may refer matters to the registrar in the same manner as matters used by the Court of Chancery to be referred to a master; and by sect. 18, the crown may from time to time appoint a registrar.

Subpœna.

By sect. 19, the attendance of witnesses and production of papers may be compelled by subpœna.

Time of appealing.

Sect. 20. "All appeals to his Majesty in council shall be made within such times respectively within which the same may now be made, where such time shall be fixed by any law or usage, and where no such law or usage shall exist, then within such time as shall be ordered by his Majesty in council. . . ."

committee.
c. 38.

By 6 & 7 Vict. c. 38, s. 2, "In respect of all incidents, emergents, dependents, and things adjoined to, arising out of, or connected with appeals from any ecclesiastical court," the judicial committee shall have full power (subject to rules) to make interlocutory orders and administer oaths, and do all such things as may be necessary, or as the judges of the court appealed from, or the judges delegate or con-delegates appointed under the great seal might have done.

By sect. 7, "for better punishing contempts, compelling appearances, and enforcing judgments of her Majesty in council," and orders of the judicial committee, in appeals from the ecclesiastical courts, her Majesty in council and the judicial committee shall have the same powers of attachment and committal as were then possessed by the High Court of Admiralty.

By sect. 15, the judicial committee may make rules of practice to be confirmed by the Queen in council.

7 & 8 Vict.
c. 69.

By the joint effect of sect. 11 of this act and sect. 9 of 7 & 8 Vict. c. 69, all appeals to the privy council may be referred by a general order, which is made once a year in November, to the judicial committee, and no special order of reference is necessary.

By sect. 12 of 7 & 8 Vict. c. 69, a further power of punishing contempts and enforcing orders by sequestration of the offender's goods and chattels is given.

14 & 15 Vict.
c. 83.

By 14 & 15 Vict. c. 83, s. 13, three members, "exclusive of the Lord President," form a quorum of the judicial committee (g).

(g) As to the powers and practice of the Judicial Committee, see Macpherson, Practice of the Judicial Committee, ch. x.; Martin

v. Mackonochie, L. R., 3 P. C. p. 409; 7 Moo. P. C. C., N. S. p. 239; Hebbert v. Purchas, L. R., 4 P. C. p. 301; et vide infra, Chap. XII. Section 4.

The judicial committee had called in archbishops and bishops being privy councillors as assessors in one or two ecclesiastical appeals. By 3 & 4 Vict. c. 86, s. 16, every archbishop or bishop who was a privy councillor was made a member of the committee for such appeals, and one at least had to sit. But now, by 39 & 40 Vict. c. 59, s. 14, "Her Majesty may by order in council, with the advice of the judicial committee of her Majesty's privy council, or any five of them, of whom the Lord Chancellor shall be one, and of the archbishops and bishops being members of her Majesty's privy council, or any two of them, make rules for the attendance on the hearing of ecclesiastical cases as assessors of the said committee, of such number of the archbishops and bishops of the Church of England as may be determined by such rules." Episcopal assessors.
39 & 40 Vict.
c. 59.

"The rules may provide for the assessors being appointed for one or more year or years, or by rotation or otherwise, and for filling up any temporary or other vacancies in the office of assessor.

"Any rule made in pursuance of this section shall be laid before each House of Parliament within forty days after it is made if Parliament be then sitting, or if not then sitting, within forty days after the commencement of the then next session of Parliament.

"If either House of Parliament present an address to her Majesty within forty days after any such rule has been laid before such House praying that any such rule may be annulled, her Majesty may thereupon by order in council annul the same, and the rule so annulled shall thenceforth become void, but without prejudice, nevertheless, to the making of any other rule in its place, or to the validity of anything which may in the meantime have been done under any such rule."

Rules were made under this Act by Order in Council of 15th November, 1876. They will be found in the Law Reports (h). Rules under this Act.

Now, therefore, in all ecclesiastical appeals there are episcopal assessors, but in none are there episcopal members of the judicial committee.

The modern statutes, 3 & 4 Vict. c. 86, the Public Worship Act, 1874, and the Clergy Discipline Act, 1892, give an appeal to the privy council. But there is no appeal for a curate from the decision of the archbishop confirming a revocation of his licence under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106 (i). Appeals under modern acts.

A question has been raised whether it is lawful or proper to express in the judgment, as it is called, that is, in the reasons given by the judicial committee for its report to the Queen in council, the fact that their lordships are or are not unanimous, or the further fact that particular members of the committee dissent; and also whether, if this is not to be done, such individual members may make their dissent public. Whether can express dissent.

The controversy on this question reached an acute stage after the decision in the case of Ridsdale v. Clifton (k); the late Lord Chief Baron Kelly having stated that he and two other members of the judicial committee (since known to be the late Lord Justice Amphlett, and the author of this book, Sir Robert Phillimore) had dissented from that part of the judgment which purported to condemn the Eucharistic vestments.

The late Lord Chancellor Cairns took strongly the view that Lord Chief Baron Kelly had no right to reveal his dissent, and framed an order in council of the 4th of February, 1878, reciting an old order of the 20th of February, 1627 (when there was no judicial committee), and ordering that "the ancient rule and practice of the privy council shall be strictly adhered to, respected, and observed, in all appeals, causes, or matters referred by her majesty to the judicial committee of the privy council, or to any other committee or assembly of the privy council, and that no disclosure be made touching the matters treated of in council, and no publication made by any man how the particular voices and opinions went."

Notwithstanding this order in council, Lord Chief Baron Kelly maintained that he had had a right to disclose his assent (l), and this view was supported by Mr. Finlason (m), and by Lord Grimthorpe (n). Lord Selborne, on the other hand, has published a considerable pamphlet in support of the new order in council (o).

The present editor, respectfully, but decidedly, has long been of opinion that, both on principle and with regard to precedents, the new order in council cannot be supported, and seeks to impose an illegal prohibition. He contributed, in a letter to The Times (p), several additional precedents which had hitherto escaped public notice, in which the dissent of members of the judicial committee from the conclusion of the majority had been publicly expressed (q).

Bp. of Salisbury*, and Wilson v. Fendall, 2 Moo. P. C. C., N. S. p. 375; Cowie v. Renfrey, 5 Moo. P. C. C. p. 232; Cooper v. Bockett, 4 Moo. P. C. C. p. 452; and Shersly v. Hibbert, 5 N. C. p. 477; where Ld. Brougham at the council table expressed his dissent. With this may be compared the statement of personal concurrence of a member in Long v. Commissioners of Claims, 2 Knapp, p. 59; and of the archbishop and bishop who were assessors in Liddell v. Westerton, Moore, Special Report. In the case of Michael v. Thomas, 5 N. C. p. 614, and Phillips v. Phillips, Ibid. p. 440, after the judgment had been read at the table, individual members added explanations and limitations. Secondly, as to statements of opinion without giving the names of the dissentients: Craig v. Furnell, 6 N. C. p. 692; Sheppard v. Bennett, L. R.,

The matter at present rests in this undecided state.

During the appeal from an inferior Ecclesiastical Court to a superior one, the sentence given by the inferior court or judge is suspended. Suspension of the sentence during the appeal.

Thus, if a church be voidable by deprivation, and the ecclesiastical judge has actually pronounced a sentence of deprivation against the incumbent; yet if the person deprived makes his appeal, the church is not actually void, so long as the appeal depends; and if the sentence of deprivation upon the appeal be declared void, the clerk is perfect incumbent as before, without any new institution (r).

And pending the appeal it is usual, at the instance of the appellant, for the superior court to grant an inhibition to stay the execution of the sentence in the inferior court until the appeal shall be determined. Inhibition.

An inhibition is a writ to forbid a judge from farther proceeding in a cause depending before him. Inhibitions most commonly issue from the higher court to the inferior on an appeal; but there are likewise inhibitions on visitations (s).

Concerning which, by Can. 96 of 1603, it is ordained "that no inhibition shall be granted out of any court belonging to the Archbishop of Canterbury, at the instance of any party, unless it be subscribed by an advocate practising in the said court. . . . The like course shall be used, in granting forth any inhibition at the instance of any party, by the bishop or his chancellor against the archdeacon, or any other person exercising ecclesiastical jurisdiction at all, and if in the court or consistory of any bishop there be no advocate, then shall the subscription of a proctor practising in the same court be held sufficient" (t). Canon 96.

And by Can. 97, "It is further ordered and decreed that henceforward no inhibition be granted by occasion of any interlocutory decree, or in any cause of correction, except under the form aforesaid: and moreover, that before the going out of any such inhibition, the appeal itself, or a copy thereof (avouched by oath to be just and true), be exhibited to the judge or his lawful surrogate, whereby he may be fully informed, both of the quality Canon 97.

4 P. C. p. 351. On the other hand, unanimity was, in the early days of the judicial committee, frequently expressly stated. See Nation v. Paricute, 2 Knapp, p. 71; Le Gros v. Le Breton, Ibid. p. 182; Rajah v. Sorriah, Ibid. p. 263; Re Adam, 1 Moo. P. C. C. p. 477; Re Gould, 2 Moo. P. C. C. p. 192. Ld. Selborne agrees that this anonymous statement of unanimity or division is permissible. Reference has been made to the practice of the delegates. They gave no reasons for their judgment, but only pronounced the formal order that the sentence appealed from should be affirmed, reversed, or varied, as the case might be. Consequently no individual expression of opinion in court could take place, but there seems to have been no obligation of secrecy. See the statement of V.-C. Bruce in Cockcroft v. Rawles, 4 Moo. P. C. C. at p. 249, and some instances referred to by Ld. Selborne.

of the crime and of the cause of the grievance, before the granting forth of the said inhibition. And every appellant, or his lawful proctor, shall before the obtaining of any such inhibition, show and exhibit to the judge or his surrogate in writing, a true copy of those acts wherewith he complaineth himself to be aggrieved, and from which he appealeth; or shall take a corporal oath, that he hath performed his diligence and true endeavour for the obtaining of the same, and could not obtain it at the hands of the register in the country, or his deputy, tendering him his fee. And if any judge or register shall either procure or permit any inhibition to be sealed, so as is said, contrary to the form and limitation above specified, let him be suspended from the execution of his office for the space of three months: and if any proctor, or other person whatsoever by his appointment, shall offend in any of the premisses, either by making or sending out any inhibition, contrary to the tenor of the said premisses, let him be removed from the exercise of his office for the space of a whole year, without hope of release or restoring."

Peremption of appeal.

An appeal may be what is technically called perempted by certain acts done by the appellant or acquiesced in by him after the sentence complained of has been delivered, e.g. the receipt of costs; but courts are not now disposed to countenance this doctrine unless the act which perempts be of a decided character (u).

When an inhibition must precede an appeal.

If an appeal be interposed from a grievance inflicted, or a definitive or interlocutory sentence pronounced by an inferior judge, an inhibition is first to be requested from the judge to whom it is appealed; this inhibition usually contains a citation for the party who obtains the sentence, or at whose petition the grievance was imposed (called the party appellate), to answer in a cause of appeal; and, by virtue of this inhibition, the judge from whom it is appealed, his registrar, and the party appellate, are to be inhibited, that they proceed not further to the execution of the sentence pronounced against the appellant, while this appeal depends, nor do any thing to his prejudice; and this inhibition is to be certified to the judge to whom it is appealed, with a certificate thereupon, mentioning what day the party and judge were inhibited, and on what day the party appellate was cited to answer in this cause of appeal. There is also issued a monition for the transmission of the process in the court below, which is a separate instrument. The inhibition contains the substance of what is subsequently set forth in the libel of appeal, which is called the praesertim of the appeal. The court, it should be observed, is not legally obliged to defer to an appeal till an inhibition is served; nor is there any distinction whether all the acts be done on the day on which the appeal is asserted, or some on a subsequent day. And when the court has overruled objections to the admission of an allegation, it has admitted the allegation on the following court day, notwithstanding an appeal had in the interim been inserted (x). The general inclination of the court is to defer to the appeal; but it will not do so where the delay may defeat the ends of justice (y). It has been holden that the 97th canon inferred a discretion in the judge ad quem to grant or refuse his inhibition (z).

Inhibition
discretionary.

An attentat, in the language of the civil and canon laws, is anything whatsoever wrongfully innovated or attempted in the suit by the judge à quo, pending an appeal; but steps taken by the judge à quo on the same court day, but after an appeal entered, and subsequent thereto, but prior to the service of the inhibition are not holden to constitute an attentat (a).

Attentat.

All the several acts of one court day constitute, with reference to attentats, but one act, notwithstanding an appeal intermediate between those acts (b).

Appeals, as laid down in the books, are said to be of two kinds, that is to say, they are judicial or extra-judicial; the first from the sentence, the last from the acts and the extra-judicial decrees. The judicial appeal is made from the sentence of the judge, which is either definitive or interlocutory. The extra-judicial appeal may be interposed upon such grievances as any one may suffer, either by the judge's deferring to pronounce sentence or rejecting some material evidence, or immoderate taxation of charges; sometimes, though rarely, from condemnation (c) in costs; from the granting too short a time or delay wherein to do any act, &c., and also, as laid down in the books, from an unjust excommunication upon a false certificate of the citation, and denying the service to any one.

Appeals:
1. Judicial.
2. Extra-judicial.

An appeal must be instituted within fifteen days, and prosecuted within a year or year and a day from the date of the delivery of the sentence.

Time allowed for appealing.

There are three methods by which an appeal may be instituted:

Modes of instituting appeal.

1. By an appeal asserted virâ voce, before the judge and the registrar in open court, at the time of the delivery of the sentence, called an appeal apud acta, because taken down by the registrar in the act of court in the following form: "A. B. protested of a grievance, and of appealing, and instantly appealed."

2. By a protocol of appeal, which is an instrument attested by a notary public in the presence of two credible witnesses, or of one other notary, containing an outline of the proceedings in the court below, that is to say, such particulars as the time, place, judge, parties, and tenor of sentence.

3. By what must be called, for the sake of distinction, the appeal itself, viz., a more extended form of statement than the protocol, but signed and witnessed by the same persons.

Appeal where nothing remains to be done after sentence.

where something remains to be done.

Power of the judge à quo.

Of the judge ad quem.

Parties.

Libel.

New evidence.

Such being the different methods of instituting an appeal, it should be further observed, that where a definitive sentence or final interlocutory decree has been pronounced, and where nothing further remains to be done for the purpose of carrying the same into execution, as might be the case in matrimonial suits, the proctor, against whose party sentence is given, may, within fifteen days, enter a protocol before a notary public, and may prosecute his appeal by applying to the superior court for an inhibition at any time within a year, or, as some suppose, a year and a day, from the delivery of the sentence; but if anything remains to be done by the court after sentence, in order to carry it into effect, as by grant of probate or administration, by enforcing restitution of conjugal rights, payment of church rate, or of costs pronounced for, there being no appeal alleged apud acta, the party submitting to such judicial acts or orders would be barred of his right of appeal. Nor can the court (d) à quo dismiss, or perempt, or, otherwise than as above mentioned, affect the right of appeal where it has been alleged apud acta, although the party should delay to prosecute it; any such attempt would trespass on the province of the judge ad quem; the judge à quo can only proceed to carry his sentence into execution (e).

A judge acting ex officio mero may be made a party to the appeal; not so, however, where he acts ad instantiam partis (f).

The libel of appeal ought to agree with the inhibition (g). It may be opposed, but only for errors on its face and in the discretion of the judge (h). But the merits of an appeal are not to be discussed on objection to the admission of the libel (i).

New evidence is occasionally admitted on an appeal; but it must be shown to be of facts noviter perventa to the knowledge of the party (j).

SECT. 6.—Letters of Request.

What they are.

It has been said that the Arches Court may take original cognizance by letters of request of all causes which may be brought in a diocesan court of the province. The nature of these remains to be explained. In any case, where a diocesan court within the province has a jurisdiction over the parties, the plaintiff may apply to the judge of such court for letters of request, in order that, as the case may be, the cause may be instituted in the Court of Arches or the Chancery Court of York; and when the judge of the court below has consented to sign such letters, and they have been accepted by the judge of the Arches Court or Court of York, a decree issues under his seal, calling upon the defendant to answer to the plaintiff in the suit instituted against him. The institution of a suit by letters of request does not fall under the prohibition of the "Bill of Citations," 23 Hen. 8, c. 9 (k). The effect of the provisions of 3 & 4 Vict. c. 86, as to letters of request, will be considered in the chapter on that act (l).

The Dean of Arches has declined to accept letters of request presented jointly by the archdeacon and the chancellor of Norwich (m). When refused.

The jurisdiction of the provincial court is strictly limited to the letters of request; and it cannot be called upon to try a civil suit for a sum of money different from that stated to be in dispute in the letters of request (n). Limit of jurisdiction where letters of request accepted.

Letters of request are sometimes issued for other purposes than for sending the cause to another court: e.g. they are sent from one judge to another to request him to examine witnesses out of the jurisdiction of the former but in that of the latter (o), to enforce a monition (p), &c. Letters of request, &c., sub mutua vicissitudinis obtentu.

SECT. 7.—Caveat.

A caveat is a caution entered in the spiritual court, to stop licences, dispensations, faculties, institutions, and such like, from being granted without the knowledge of the party that enters it. By canon law.

And a caveat is of such validity by the canon law, that if an institution, administration, or the like, be granted pending such caveat, the same is void (q).

But not so by the common law. For by the common law, an admission, institution, probate (r), administration, or the like, By common law.

contrary to a caveat entered, shall stand good; in the eye of which law, the caveat is said to be only a caution for the information of the court (like a caveat entered in Chancery against the passing of a patent, or formerly in the Common Pleas against the levying of a fine); but that it does not preserve the right untouched so as to null all subsequent proceedings, because it does not come from any superior; nor has it ever been determined, that a bishop became a disturber, by giving institution without regard to a caveat; on the contrary, it was said by Coke and Doderidge, in the case of Hutchins v. Glover, in 14 Jac. 1, that they have nothing to do with a caveat in the common law (s).

Effect of entry.

The mere entry of a caveat will not found a jurisdiction, for it might be entered with intent to deny the jurisdiction, and prevent the court from taking cognizance of the matter (t). A caveat against an inhibition has been entered, and the inhibition, after hearing counsel, refused (u). The proper course to be taken by the party wishing to proceed is to revoke the caveat, that is, enter a statement that he appears notwithstanding the caveat.

If a ratepayer was dissatisfied with his assessment to a church rate, one of his remedies was to enter a caveat against its confirmation by the ordinary (x).

SECT. 8.—Citation.

Nature and form of.

A citation is a judicial act, whereby the defendant, by authority of the judge (the plaintiff requesting it), is commanded to appear, in order to enter into suit, at a certain day, in a place where justice is administered (y).

Its contents.

The Citation ought to contain—1. The name of the judge, and his commission, if he be delegated; if he is an ordinary judge, then the style of the court where he is judge. 2. The name of him who is to be cited. 3. An appointed day and place where he must appear; which day ought either to be expressed particularly to be such a day of the week or month, or else only the next court day (or longer) from the date of the citation: and the time of appearance ought to be more or less, according to the distance of the place where they live. 4. The cause for which the suit is to be commenced (z). 5. The name

By Can. 120 of 1603, "No bishop, chancellor, archdeacon, official, or other ecclesiastical judge, shall suffer any general processes of quorum nomina to be sent out of his court, except the names of all such as thereby are to be cited shall be first expressly entered by the hand of the register or his deputy under the said processes, and the said processes and names be first subscribed by the judge or his deputy, and his seal thereto affixed."

Canon 120.
Process of quorum nomina forbidden.

The rule of the ancient canon law in which case was, that by the general clause quidam alii in citations, not more than three or four persons should be drawn into judgment; whose names (quorum nomina) the person who obtained the citation was particularly to express, that there might be no room for fraud, in varying the names at pleasure (b).

A company in London refusing to pay a church rate set upon their hall, the master and wardens were cited into the Ecclesiastical Court by their surnames and names of baptism, with the addition of master and wardens of the company of wax chandlers. And upon moving for a prohibition, because they were cited in their natural capacity, when it should have been in their politic capacity, the court held the citation to be good, because the body politic could not be cited, and there was no remedy but in this way: and a prohibition was denied (c).

company.

The following extracts are copied from two manuscript opinions of a very eminent civilian (the late Dr. Lawrence) upon this subject. He was consulted as to the liability of the Company of the Proprietors of the Birmingham Canal Navigation to pay church rates, and as to the mode of citing them.

Opinions of Dr. Lawrence.

(1.) "As the citation is not before me, I cannot tell whether any or what special matter of defence may appear on the face of it; but a citation addressed to a corporate body ought to call upon them to appear by their syndie, who is the party in the cause on their behalf. If the officers, or managers, or directors of the corporation against whom the citation issues, do not appoint a syndie in lawful form, or sufficiently instruct him, the ecclesiastical judge may compel them by censures passed even to excommunication." Doctors' Commons, January, 1800.

(2.) "The citation should be directed to the managing part of the company by their proper description, as well as to the company generally: as to the warden or masters, &c., of the Bank of England; or chairman, deputy chairman, directors, &c., of the East India Company. What is the proper legal description of the Birmingham Canal Company, I know not; but whatever it is, unless that citation be used, it is a nullity, and may be resisted with effect." Doctors' Commons, April, 1800.

Opinion of Sir V. Gibbs.

Sir Vicary Gibbs gave an opinion coinciding with that of Dr. Lawrence upon the same case.

Misnomer
of party.

The citation of a party by an erroneous christian name, a simple misnomer or false addition, where there is no doubt as to the identity of the party, has been holden to be sufficient (d). An objection of this kind urged as a plea in abatement must be taken before issue, for, by giving issue, the party allows himself to be the party designed (e); and whoever alleges a misnomer is bound to assign the true name by which he means to abide, and against which he is not at liberty to aver (f); but a new citation must be taken out.

Other objections to citation.

Where the general law is to be relied upon, it is not necessary that it should be specifically stated in the citation (g); and as to variance between the articles and citation, where the charge is substantially the same, and only a part of the charge is taken away, it will not be fatal. A citation has been holden sufficient, where it only called upon the party to bring in an administration, and to show cause why another should not be granted, and did not say to show cause why the original administration should not be revoked (h); but it has been holden void where it was taken out upon false pretences, and not served on the party against whom it had been entered (i). In a matrimonial suit it was holden that a citation issuing as "in a suit of nullity of marriage by reason of a former marriage," will not found a sentence of separation "by reason of an undue publication of banns," the woman being therein described as spinster; the first husband having died subsequently to the publication of banns, but prior to the marriage (k).

Misnomer
of judge.

A wrong description of the judge either by his name or title is fatal to the citation, and to all proceedings founded on it, especially in criminal suits. And an error of this kind in a copy delivered to the proctor of the defendant has been holden to entitle the latter to be dismissed from the suit (l).

In criminal suit how offence to be stated.

A citation in a cause of office must describe sufficiently the offence charged against the party, so as to show that it is a matter of ecclesiastical cognizance, but it need not minutely specify all the particulars of the offence which are to be charged in the articles (m).

In all cases of a process served on a minor, the court requires a certificate of its having been served in the presence of a natural and legal guardian of the minor; or, at least, in that of some person or persons upon whom the actual care and custody of the minor, for the time being, has properly devolved (n).

Service of,
on minor.

It has been said that a citation may be served viis et modis (o). There is some difference between this service and personal service. A personal service may conclude both the party and the court; but a service viis et modis is a constructive service, and concludes the party, but does not conclude the court. The court on good and sufficient grounds may open the proceedings to get at the substantial justice of the case (p). It is laid down in the books, says Sir William Wynne, and is not to be denied, that parties may be put in contempt by a public citation only (q).

By the ancient laws of the church, the metropolitan was forbidden to exercise judicial authority in the diocese of a provincial bishop, unless in case of appeal or vacancy. And therefore when Archbishop Peccham excommunicated the Bishop of Hereford for resisting this concurrent power, and affirming against the archbishop that he could not exercise any jurisdiction exclusive of the bishop within the bishop's own diocese, nor take cognizance of causes there per querelam, the archbishop defended his claim, not upon the common right of a metropolitan, but upon the peculiar privilege of the Church of Canterbury, that the Church of Canterbury enjoys such a privilege, that the archbishop for the time being may and ought to hear causes arising within the diocese of his suffragans, and that in the first instance. Which privilege probably sprung from the Archbishops of Canterbury being legati nati to the pope (r).

canon doth affirm execution of such request or instance of jurisdiction to be lawful or tolerable; upon pain of forfeiture, to every person by any ordinary, commissary, official or substitute, by virtue of his office or at the suit of any person to be cited or otherwise summoned or called contrary to this act, of double damages and costs." Sect. 2. "Provided always, that it shall be lawful to every archbishop of this realm to call, cite or summon any person or any persons inhabiting in any bishop's diocese within his province for causes of heresy, if the bishop or other ordinary immediate thereunto consent, or do not his duty in punishment of the same."

Sects. 3 and 5 related to the prerogatives of the archbishops in respect of the probate of testaments (s). As to probate.

Far from and out of the Diocese.]—By reason of this expression in the preamble, it was doubted in 6 Jac. 1, whether the archbishop was not at liberty (notwithstanding this act) to cite the inhabitants of London and other neighbouring places of the same diocese, into his Court of Arches, which would be no more a grievance to the subject than the being cited into the Consistory of London, and could not properly be called a citing out of the diocese, since the Court of Arches is holden within the diocese of London. But all the justices of the Court of Common Pleas held, that the archbishop is restrained by this act from citing any inhabitants of London, besides his own peculiars, because the excusing the subject from travel and charges was not the only benefit intended by it, but also the benefit of appeals; and by diocese in this statute, was understood jurisdiction, and as to the language of the preamble, that the enacting part of the statutes are in many cases of larger extent than their preambles are (t). But in Gobbet's case (u) in the next reign, where a composition between the Archbishop and the Bishop of London as to beginning causes in the Arches Court was referred to, the prohibition was denied. And in Ford v. Weldon (v), the Court being equally divided, no prohibition seems to have been granted.

That no manner of Person shall be from henceforth cited.]—But if a man is cited out of his diocese, and appears, and sentence is given, or if he submits himself to the suit, he shall have no benefit by this statute, nor will a prohibition be granted (x). Privilege may be waived.

(s) By sect. 6, no spiritual judge is to take any sum or sums of money "for the seal of any citation . . . to be awarded or obtained, than only 3*d.*"

"It is certainly true (says Sir John Nicholl) that both the canon and the statute law forbid the citing of parties out of their dioceses or peculiar jurisdictions. But it is equally true that the rule, at least in the statute law, was meant for the benefit of the subject, which benefit it hath uniformly, as far as I see, been held to provide for sufficiently, by giving defendants who are so cited a privilege of pleading to the jurisdiction." Consequently, if a party who is so cited once waive that privilege by appearing and submitting to the suit, he or she is bound to the jurisdiction (y).

Out of the Diocese.]—And that, as it seems, whether the see be full or vacant. For in the 13 or 14 Jac. 1, in the case of one Pickover, it was resolved upon this statute that if a bishopric within the province of Canterbury be void, and so the jurisdiction be devolved to the metropolitan, he must hold his court within the inferior diocese, for such causes as were by the ecclesiastical law to be holden before the inferior ordinary; and the prothonotaries said, it had been so formerly resolved. But a little before this, in the 11 Jac. 1, the contrary was resolved, that is, where one was cited out of his diocese before the Archbishop of Canterbury as guardian of the spiritualties, not only prohibition was denied, but it was further said, that if he had been cited before him as metropolitan, it would have been granted upon this statute (z).

Or peculiar jurisdiction.]—That is, whether they be cited out of such peculiar to the Arches, or before the ordinary within whose diocese the peculiar lies. And Coke said, that if a man be sued out of his diocese, yet if he be sued within his own proper peculiar, he is not within this statute (a).

Where he shall be inhabiting.]—In 8 Jac. 1, an attorney in the King's Bench was sued in the Arches for a legacy; and, for that he inhabited in the diocese of Peterborough, prohibition was prayed and granted; because, though he remained here in term time, he was properly inhabiting within the jurisdiction of the bishop of Peterborough (b).

In the case of Wilmott v. Loid, in 5 Anne (c), a difference was taken by Holt, Chief Justice, where a man of another diocese is taken flagranti delicto: he said, where the party goes into another diocese, and is commorant there, and comes back casually into the first diocese, in such case the citation cannot be good; for suppose a man comes casually into the diocese of London and commits a crime there, and then goes back to the diocese where he dwells and then casually comes to London again, it seems that he cannot be here cited; but if he had been cited before he left London, then that would be flagranti delicto.

Immediate Judge or Ordinary dare not, nor will not, convict the Party.—In Archbishop Parker's register, we find the archbishop to have put benefices in another diocese under sequestration, by reason of the negligence of the ordinary; but this is an act only of voluntary jurisdiction. And before the Reformation, we find the archbishop requiring bishops to proceed against particular persons in their dioceses, or show cause why himself should not proceed (d).

Be Party.—If the cause be begun before the archbishop, though the bishop or other judge (who was party in the cause) dies whilst it is depending, and so the occasion ceases upon which it was first brought before the archbishop, yet he being in possession of it, it shall not be removed (e). For, per Doderidge, J., by the civil law the death of the plaintiff or defendant is not any abatement of the libel, but they have a revivor . . . ; and the intent of the statute is not that such a cause should be remanded, whereby the plaintiff should lose the costs of his suit.

By Can. 94 of 1603, "No dean of the Arches, nor official of the archbishop's consistory, nor any judge of the audience, shall henceforward in his own name, or in the name of the archbishop, either ex officio or at the instance of any party, originally cite, summon or any way compel, or procure to be cited, summoned or compelled, any person which dwelleth not within the particular diocese or peculiar of the said archbishop, to appear before him or any of them, for any cause or matter whatsoever belonging to ecclesiastical cognizance, without the licence of the diocesan first had and obtained in that behalf, other than in such particular cases only as are expressly excepted and reserved in and by a statute anno 23 Hen. 8, c. 9. And if any of the said judges shall offend herein, he shall for every such offence be suspended from the exercise of his office for the space of three whole months."

Canon 94.

The return of the citation is either personally in court by him who executed the same, who certifies and makes oath how and in what manner the defendant was cited; or else it is by authentic certificate, which is a kind of solemn writing, drawn or confirmed by some public authority, and ought chiefly to contain the name of the mandatory or person to whom it is directed, and the name of the judge who directed the same, with his proper style and title; likewise the day and place in which the defendant was cited, and the causes for which he is cited; in testimony whereof, some authentic seal ought to be put to it, of some archdeacon, official commissary or rural dean; and it ought to express that they set their seal thereunto at the special instigation and request of the mandatory. To all which certificates, in all causes, as much credit is given as if the mandatory had personally made oath of the execution thereof.

Modern
practice.

According to modern practice, a certificate of the service of the citation is endorsed on that instrument, setting forth the day and place of its service on the party, signed by the person who served it: an affidavit of the truth of the certificate is also endorsed upon the instrument.

SECT. 9.—Libel and Allegation.

Nature of a libel.

A libel (f) is a declaration or charge, drawn up in writing, on the part of the plaintiff, unto which the defendant is obliged to answer (g).

For when the defendant appears upon the citation, then the libel ought to be exhibited by the plaintiff, and a copy of it delivered to the defendant (h).

2 Hen. 5,
st. 1, c. 3.

Copy of libel to be granted to party cited.

To which purpose it is enacted by 2 Hen. 5, stat. 1, c. 3, as follows: "Forasmuch as divers of the king's liege people be daily cited to appear in the spiritual court before spiritual judges, there to answer to divers persons as well of things which touch freehold, debt, trespasses, covenants and other things, whereof the cognizance pertaineth to the court of our lord the king, as of matrimony and testament; and when such persons so cited appear and demand a libel of that which against them is surmised to be informed, to give their answer thereunto, or otherwise to purchase of our lord the king a writ of prohibition according to their case; which libel to them is denied by the said spiritual judges, to the intent that such persons should not be aided by any such writ, against the law, and to the great damage of such persons so impleaded: Our said lord the king, by the advice and assent of the lords spiritual and temporal, and at the request and instance of the commons, hath ordained and established, that at what time the libel is grantable by the law, it may be granted and delivered to the party without any difficulty" (i).

Principles of law respecting libel and allegation.

The same principles of law, as to the form and substance of these pleas, govern both libel and allegation; the allegation being, as has been shown, an answer to the libel, and in certain causes, such as church rates, frequently altogether omitted. It often happens that the court admits part of an allegation and rejects part, or orders the whole or part to be reformed.

The court will sometimes, and in particular cases, delay the admission of a libel, in order to allow the party charged an opportunity of stating any special matter in the way of protest, to induce the court to decline further proceedings in the case. Delay to admit libel.

The principle, qui ponit fatetur, that is, that he who sets up a plea is bound by it, is invariably held. The contents of a libel or allegation are to be presumed, in the first instance, to be true, being admitted in order to proceed to proof; and this maxim has been found in practice to be very beneficial to suitors, for if the facts alleged in the plea would not, if substantiated by evidence, entitle the party propounding them to the relief he prays, the cause is stopped in limine, and all further expense is saved. But the maxim does not go the length of supposing every syllable alleged to be true (k). Principle qui ponit fatetur.

Proceedings in duplex querela should be by plea and proof, that is by libel answered by allegation, with witnesses, and not by act on petition and affidavits (l). Pleading in duplex querela.

SECT. 10.—Articles.

The statute 2 Hen. 5, stat. 1, c. 3, applies to articles in a criminal case, as it does to libel in a civil case (m). 2 Hen. 5, st. 1, c. 3.
A copy must be delivered to party cited.

General requisites of articles.

Where the ordinary has allowed his office, that is, the office of the judge is promoted, the whole transaction must be fairly and specifically stated, in order that the defendant may be enabled, without injustice to himself, to give an affirmative issue (n). The general words of articles are construed only to include subordinate charges ejusdem generis with the principal, while the præsertim is looked to for the principal accusations (o). The court cannot go beyond the particular offence charged, nor the articles beyond the citation (p). But in a criminal suit for incest, a marriage may be annulled although the citation is silent upon the subject (q). According to the practice, the promoter of the office of the judge is bound not only to give in articles, but also a correct copy to the defendant—an error in the copy being as fatal to the suit as an error in the original articles (r).

misnomer.

It is not a fatal objection that the articles are exhibited in the name of the surrogate, and not of the judge (s), or in the name of the bishop instead of his official (t); but where the office of the judge is wrongly described, the error is fatal, and may be pleaded in bar of further proceedings (u).

When articles are to be exhibited.

The general rule is, that articles must be brought in on the court day immediately subsequent to that on which the defendant has appeared (x).

Amendment and admissibility of articles.

Articles once brought in may be reformed and amended under the direction of the court prior to their actual admission, but when they are once admitted and issue is joined, either party is bound by them; and it must be borne in mind, that the promoter is not at liberty to drop in with charges one after another, with perhaps this single exception, that offences ejusdem generis subsequently committed may be pleaded in subsequent articles (y). But circumstances may justify the admission of further articles explanatory to a responsive allegation (z), or where it is clearly shown that they could not have been sooner pleaded (a).

In a case where the original articles pleaded a certain transaction without specification, the court allowed additional articles, pleading the same transaction with greater minuteness, to be brought in afterwards (b).

If the articles contain a substantive charge, the court is bound to admit them, and cannot listen to a suggestion that they do not truly detail the circumstances (c), though the court is strictly confined to a consideration of the offences charged in the articles (d).

When the court is bound to admit them.

The promoter may always bring in articles, even though the defendant in appearing has admitted his liability to censure; for, without the detail of the offences in the articles, the court would not know what punishment to inflict (e).

Articles necessary though offence admitted.

The proper form of articles in cases under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 86 has been discussed in the cases of Parnell v. Roughton (f) and Combe v. Edwards (g).

Articles under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 86.

SECT. 11.—Personal Answers (h).

After contestation of suit (i), the next thing which follows in course of practice, if a suit proceeds, is the demanding and giving in of personal answers, unless it be in a criminal cause, wherein no one is bound to accuse himself (k). These are made in writing to the several articles or positions of a libel, or to any other judicial matter exhibited in court, and ought to be expressed in very clear and certain terms; and upon the oath also of the person that exhibits them.

When brought in.

When not.

For personal answers are therefore provided in law, that by the help of them, the adverse party may be relieved in the matter of proof. And if these answers are not clear, full, and certain, they are deemed and taken in law as not given at all: and upon a motion made, the judge ought to enjoin new answers; it being the same thing to give no answer at all, as to give a general and insufficient answer (l).

Their object.

A personal answer, therefore, ought to have these three qualities in it: first, it ought to be pertinent to the matter in hand.

What they should contain.

(h) The same observation as to the effect of the introduction of vivâ voce evidence applies to this subject.

(i) Formerly also the oath of calumny was taken by both litigants. See Cod. lib. ii. tit. lix.;

Nov. 49, c. 3; Nov. 124, c. 1; X. ii. 7, and VI. ii. 4.

(k) But the promoter in a criminal cause may, if the application is made in proper time, be ordered to give in his personal answers to the defendant's responsive plea, Martin v. Muckonochie, L. R. 4 Adm. & Eccl. at p. 282.

(l) "Nihil interest negit quis an taceat interrogatus, an obscure respondeat, ut incertum demittat interrogatorem" (Dig. lib. XI. tit. I. ii. § 7), is the language of the Roman law upon this subject.

Secondly, it ought to be absolute and unconditional. And, thirdly, it ought to be clear and certain (m).

In answers, a party, first, is bound only to answer in facts, not to his own motives, nor to his belief of the motives of another person: and, secondly, where the plea avers ignorance of the real nature of a transaction by a party to such transaction and to the suit, the other party is, in his answers to such plea, allowed to state facts inferring full knowledge thereof and acquiescence therein.

Personal answers are not confined to being mere echoes of the plea accompanied with simple affirmances or denials, but the respondents are further at liberty to enter into all such matter as may fairly be deemed not more than sufficient to place the transactions, as to which their answers are, in what they insist to be the true and proper light (n).

Consequences of not bringing in answers.

Require a personal service.

If the answers of a party are not brought in at the time assigned by the court, the facts pleaded are taken pro confesso, and the expense of taking depositions to prove facts confessed in answers, is paid by the party producing the witnesses. It is a maxim of the law administered in the Ecclesiastical Courts, that whatever is to be done personally by the party principal in the cause, requires, in strictness, a personal service of the notice or decree for doing it upon the party principal, and it has therefore been holden that a service of a decree for answers upon the proctor will not justify the court in putting the principal party in contempt, if these answers are not brought in. This was laid down as law by Sir John Nicholl, in his judgment in Durant v. Durant (o), in which he entered into an accurate and elaborate history of this branch of the suit.

Exceptions to answers.

Where answers cannot be claimed.

It seems that the ancient practice was to give acts on petition exceptive to answers, but never an allegation (p).

Answers cannot be claimed where they would subject the party making them to a prosecution for a felony (q). In criminal suits the defendant's answers upon oath are not to be required even to those positions which are not in themselves criminatory. The law upon this point is fully and carefully set forth by Sir J. Nicholl, in the case of Schultes v. Hodgson (r). A party is not bound to answer when his answer would criminate himself, nor, it should seem, when it would tend to degrade him (s).

answers.

It was a common error of country courts to consider personal answers as responsive allegations, and to examine witnesses, an error which arose from a confusion of the answers with the plea (t). The obvious use and advantage of answers is to save the necessity of taking evidence (u), and causes are sometimes decided upon them alone (x).

Answers may be directed to be reformed. Instances are to be found in the reports where they have been so on the several scores of redundancy (y), for containing abusive matter (z), for irrelevancy (a); and an assignation for fuller answers has sometimes been decreed after publication (b). When a certificate to a decree for answers has been discontinued, it is still competent to the proctor having discontinued it, to object to answers (c). Time has been allowed to an agent acting under a power of attorney to plead on an answer in an interest cause, when the principal resided in Jamaica (d), but a party not giving in his answers on the day of the return of the decree, personally served, will be pronounced contumacious (e).

Reformation of, &c.

Consequence of not giving.

SECT. 12.—Costs.

The question of costs in the Ecclesiastical Courts is, for the most part, a matter in the discretion of the judge, according to the nature and justice of the case; and the reasons for granting or refusing costs are publicly expressed at the time of giving the judgment.

Discretionary.

If either party be condemned in costs, the proctor of the other party brings in his bill. The bill is referred to the registrar, who is attended by the proctors on both sides, and, after examining the bill item by item, he allows or disallows or modifies the several charges, according to the established practice, where such practice exists; and, in other cases, according to the reasonableness of each charge: having taken off all overcharges, he reports to the judge, in open court, the amount of the bill as allowed, and the proctor makes oath that the sum reported has been necessarily expended by or on behalf of his party. If no objection has been offered to the report, the judge then taxes the bill at that sum, and decrees a monition for the payment of it; but if either party is dissatisfied with the report of the registrar on any item of the bill, the objection may be brought before the court for its decision. The regular charges are, however, so well known and established, and the registrars of the several courts, who are acting under the sanction of an oath of office, are so experienced and respectable, that an exception to their report as to costs rarely occurs.

Payment of.

The payment of the costs thus taxed, as between party and party, is enforced by the process of contumacy; but costs as between proctor and client cannot be taxed by the judge, nor the payment thereof be enforced by the court; the proctor must recover his bill of costs against his client by an action at law (f).

General principles with respect to.

It has always been holden in the Ecclesiastical Courts, that costs are matters of discretion, but not of a capricious but a legal discretion, exercised according to a just consideration of all the circumstances, and with an adherence to general rules and former precedents (g). The court will sometimes give, in lieu of full costs, a smaller sum nomine expensarum. A client is, under all circumstances, entitled to a detailed bill of costs from his proctor, but where this has been delivered in, and long acquiesced in, and payment made, he is not entitled, after the suit is over, during which he has not been inops consilii, to have it referred to the registrar for examination (h). A monition for the payment of costs will be enforced, if necessary, by the further aid of the court (i). If a party committed for non-payment of costs under an erroneous process be thereupon released, the court is bound, at the application of the party to whom they are still due, to issue a new monition for payment of such costs (k). It has also pronounced an Irish peer in contempt for non-payment of costs, and directed such contempt to be signified, leaving the lord chancellor to decide whether the writ de contumace capiendo should issue.

Procedure at taxation of.

The costs are taxed at a certain sum (say 100*l.*), "besides the expense of a monition;" but if a monition be necessary, the expense of it falls, and of course any further expense, which disobedience to the monition may occasion, on the disobeying party (l). Costs may be taxed de die in diem, but usually costs are only taxed from term to term, and for the hearing. Where a prohibition has been applied for, the temporal courts have no power either by custom or by 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 21, to allow to the successful party his costs in the Ecclesiastical Court (m). And the Ecclesiastical Court will not, on the other hand, include the expenses incident to proceedings for a prohibition in its taxation of costs (n).

Costs of prohibition.

The court has the power in all cases upon application made to it, to direct security to be given for costs by either or all of the parties.

Security for costs;

Where it is proved to the court that a party instituting his suit became bankrupt since the suit began, it will order such party to give security for costs, before it allows further proceedings in the cause (o).

And in criminal suits, one of the reasons why an application must be made to the judge before his office is promoted is, that he may consider the fitness of the person to be made responsible for costs to the other party (p).

in criminal suits.

The giving costs is not a matter absolutely unappealable, though such appeals, especially for trifling sums, are much to be discouraged (q). An appeal is perempted by doing any subsequent act in furtherance of the sentence, viz., attending taxation of costs (r). On an appeal from a grievance, the court will not enforce payment of the costs incurred in the inferior court (s) before the final hearing; but then the court, in cases not matrimonial, may give costs in both courts.

Appeals for costs.

Costs below on appeal.

Costs in the Privy Council have been already noticed (t).

As a general principle, where an offence has been committed, the expense of correcting it is to be borne by the offender; full costs, however, are not given in all cases, but are mitigated according to the discretion of the court (u). If many charges are made and very few are proved, the party against whom they are brought will not be condemned in the expenses of the whole proceeding (x).

In criminal suits.

A proctor may be condemned in costs for improper practices in the conduct of a suit, besides being subject to other punishment for extortionate charges (y).

(b) The Clergy Discipline Act Rules are in force in all these courts; and the Order as to Court Fees of July 22, 1889, referred to infra, p. 1002, is in force in all the diocesan courts in the province of Canterbury.

SECT. 14.—Court Fees.

By canon.

Fees in the ecclesiastical courts were generally regulated by canons 135 and 136 of 1603, which have been already set out (z).

By 10 Geo. 4, c. 53.

By 10 Geo. 4, c. 53, ss. 1—4, power was given to fix fees in the courts of the Archbishop of Canterbury and of the Bishop of London.

By archbishop's
order.

The Archbishop of Canterbury has been recently advised that it is competent to him, under the power reserved to him by canon 135, to issue a new scale of fees for the diocesan courts within his province; and he has accordingly published an order approving of a scale of fees "to be taken by the chancellors, official principals, commissaries, and registrars of the diocesan courts in the province of Canterbury, in the matters therein specified, until further order by us or our successors."

This order, dated the 22nd of July, 1889, was registered in the principal registry of the province on the 26th July in that year, and is also to be seen in every diocesan registry.

By 1 & 2 Vict.
c. 106.

Under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106, certain fees are provided for; by s. 82, on the licensing of curates; and under s. 131, by Order in Council, on presentations, institutions, and inductions to benefices. These will be found in their proper places (a).

By 30 & 31
Vict. c. 135.

Under 30 & 31 Vict. c. 135, power was given to make fees, to be confirmed by Order in Council, upon ordinations (b), consecrations of churches and churchyards and faculties (c), and visitations (d). These will be found in their proper places.

Returns.

As already stated (e), annual returns of these fees have to be made to the Secretary of State.

Under
P. W. R. Act and C. D. Act, 1892.

The rules under the Public Worship Regulation Act, 1874, and the Clergy Discipline Act, 1892, which have been referred to in the preceding section of this chapter, contain scales of court fees for proceedings under those Acts respectively.

CHAPTER VII.

PROCEDURE UNDER 1 & 2 VICT. c. 106 (a).

THE procedure against curates under this act has been already mentioned (b). Curates.

By 7 & 8 Vict. c. 59, s. 2, persons in holy orders appointed to the office of church clerk, chapel clerk or parish clerk under that act are to be proceeded against as if they were licensed curates. Parish clerks in orders.

The procedure by which incumbents charged with inadequate performance of ecclesiastical duties under 48 & 49 Vict. c. 54 (the Pluralities Act Amendment Act, 1885) can be compelled to provide and pay one or more curates has also been already mentioned (c). Inadequate performance of ecclesiastical duties.

As to trafficking and farming it is enacted by sect. 31 of the statute 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106 (d), "If any spiritual person shall trade or deal in any manner contrary to the provisions of this act it shall be lawful for the bishop of the diocese where such person shall hold any cathedral preferment, benefice, curacy, or lectureship, or shall be licensed or otherwise allowed to perform the duties of any ecclesiastical office whatever, to cause such person to be cited before his chancellor or other competent judge, and it shall be lawful for such chancellor or other judge, on proof in due course of law of such trading, to suspend such spiritual person for his first offence for such time not exceeding one year as to such judge shall seem fit; and on proof in like manner before such or any other competent ecclesiastical judge of a second offence committed by such spiritual person subsequent to such sentence of suspension, such spiritual person shall for such second offence be suspended for such time as to the judge shall seem fit; and for his third offence be deprived ab officio et beneficio, and thereupon it shall be lawful for the patron or patrons of any such cathedral preferment, benefice, lectureship, or office, to make donation or to present or nominate to the same as if the person so deprived were actually dead; and in all such cases of suspension, the bishop during such suspension shall sequester the profits of any cathedral preferment, Spiritual persons illegally trading may be suspended, and for the third offence deprived.

benefice, lectureship, or office of which such spiritual person may be in possession, and by an order under his hand direct the application of the profits of the same respectively, after deducting the necessary expenses of providing for the due performance of the duties of the same respectively, towards the same purposes and in the same order, as near as the difference of circumstances will admit, as are hereinafter directed with respect to the profits of a benefice sequestered in case of non-compliance after monition with an order requiring a spiritual person to proceed and reside on his benefice (e), save that no part of such profits shall be paid to the spiritual person so suspended, nor applied in satisfaction of a sequestration at the suit of a creditor; and in case of deprivation the bishop shall forthwith give notice thereof in writing under his hand to the patron or patrons of any cathedral preferment, benefice, lectureship, or office which the said spiritual person may have holden in the manner hereinafter required with respect to notice to the patron of a benefice continuing under sequestration for one whole year, and thereby becoming void, and any such cathedral preferment or benefice shall lapse at such period after the said notice as any such last-mentioned benefice would, under the provisions of this act, lapse: Provided always, that no contract shall be deemed to be void by reason only of the same having been entered into by a spiritual person trading or dealing, either solely or jointly with any other person or persons, contrary to the provisions of this act, but every such contract may be enforced by or against such spiritual person, either solely or jointly with any other person or persons, as the case may be, in the same way as if no spiritual person had been party to such contract."

As to the non-residence of incumbents.
Two modes of proceeding to punish non-residence.

The statute 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106 empowers the bishop to punish the non-residence of incumbents by the adoption of one of two modes of procedure provided by it for that purpose (f):—

1. By a summary process of monition and sequestration; 2. By the infliction of certain penalties mentioned in Part IV. Chap. III. Sect. 5, under sect. 32 of 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106 (g). In both cases an appeal is given from the order of the bishop to the archbishop.

As to the process by monition and sequestration, it is enacted as follows:—

Sect. 54. "In every case in which it shall appear to the bishop that any spiritual person holding any benefice within his diocese, and not having a licence to reside elsewhere than in the house of residence belonging thereto, nor having any legal cause of exemption from residence, does not sufficiently, according to the true meaning and intent of this act, reside on such benefice, it shall be lawful for such bishop, instead of proceeding for penalties under this act . . . or after proceeding for the same, to issue or cause to be issued a monition to such spiritual person, requiring him forthwith to proceed to and to reside on such benefice, and perform the duties thereof, and to make a return to such monition within a certain number of days after the issuing thereof; provided that in every such case there shall be thirty days between the time of serving such monition on such spiritual person, in the manner hereinafter directed, and the time specified in such monition for the return thereto; and the spiritual person on whom any such monition shall be served, shall, within the time specified for that purpose, make a return thereto into the registry of the diocese, to be there filed; and it shall be lawful for the bishop to whom any such return shall be made to require such return or any fact contained therein to be verified by evidence (h); and in every case where no such return shall be made, or where such return shall not state such reasons for the non-residence of such spiritual person as shall be deemed satisfactory by the bishop, or where such return, or any of the facts contained therein, shall not be so verified as aforesaid, when such verification shall have been required, it shall be lawful for the bishop to issue an order in writing under his hand and seal, requiring such spiritual person to proceed and reside as aforesaid within thirty days after such order shall have been served upon him in like manner as is hereinafter directed with respect to the service of monitions; and in case of non-compliance with such order it shall be lawful for the bishop to sequester (i) the profits of such benefice until such order shall be complied with, or such sufficient reasons for non-compliance therewith shall be stated and proved as aforesaid, and to direct, by any order to be made for that purpose under his hand, and filed as aforesaid, the application of such profits, after deducting the necessary expenses of serving the cure, either in the whole or in such proportions as he shall think fit, in the first place to the payment of the penalties proceeded for, if any, and of such reasonable expenses as shall have been incurred in relation to such monition and sequestration, and in the next place towards the repair or sustentation of the chancel, house of residence of such benefice, or any of the buildings and appurtenances thereof, and of the glebe and demesne lands, and in the next place, where such benefice shall be likewise under sequestration at the suit of any creditor, then towards the satisfaction of such last-mentioned sequestration; and after the satisfaction thereof, then and in the next place towards the augmentation or improvement of any such benefice, or the house of residence thereof, or any of the buildings and appurtenances thereof, or towards the improvement of any of the glebe or demesne lands thereof, or to order and direct the same or any portion thereof to be paid to the treasurer of the governors of the bounty of Queen Anne, for the purposes of the said bounty, as such bishop shall, in his discretion, under all circumstances, think fit and expedient; and it shall also be lawful for the bishop, within six months after such order for sequestration, or within six months after any money shall have been actually levied by such sequestration, to remit to such spiritual person any proportion of such sequestered profits, or to cause the same or any part thereof, whether the same remain in the hands of the sequestrator or shall have been paid to the said treasurer, to be paid to such spiritual person; and every such sequestrator at the suit of the bishop is hereby required, upon receiving an order under the hand of such bishop, forthwith to obey the same; and the said treasurer is hereby authorized and required, upon receiving a like order from such bishop, to make such payment out of any money in his hands: Provided always, that any such spiritual person may, within one month after service upon him of the order for any such sequestration, appeal to the archbishop of the province, who shall make such order relating thereto, or to the profits that shall have been so sequestered as aforesaid, for the return of the same or any part thereof to such spiritual person, or to such sequestrator at the suit of any creditor (as the case may be), or otherwise as may appear to such archbishop to be just and proper; but nevertheless such sequestration shall be in force during such appeal."

Appeal against sequestrations to the archbishop.

As to hearing of clerk before process issues.

Before the writ of sequestration, which is of a highly penal character, issues, the clerk must be heard by the ordinary, but not before the issue of the monition.

Upon these two points the following cases are important.

1. As to the issue of the monition.

Before issue
of monition.

In proceedings under this statute, for the sequestration of a benefice for non-residence, it is not necessary that the bishop's monition, under sect. 54, should be preceded by a citation or other warning to the incumbent.

Where the incumbent, in answer to such monition, sends a return assigning an excuse for non-residence, which the bishop considers insufficient, that is a sufficient hearing of the incumbent to authorize the bishop to make an order upon the incumbent to return into residence within thirty days.

Where the incumbent, being served with such order, sends to the bishop, upon affidavit, an excuse for not obeying the order, which the bishop considers insufficient, that is a sufficient hearing of the incumbent to authorize the bishop to sequester the benefice after the lapse of the thirty days.

Under sect. 58, a benefice becomes void if it remain for the space of a year under sequestration for non-residence, the year commencing from the date of the decree of sequestration; the case not falling within sect. 120, which provides that for all purposes of the act, except as therein otherwise provided, the year shall commence on 1st January and be reckoned to 31st December, both inclusive.

This was so holden on motion for prohibition by the Court of Queen's Bench and the Court of Exchequer; and afterwards in an action brought by such incumbent against his successor for the income of the living (k).

2. As to hearing the clerk before the sequestration issues.

Before issue of sequestration.

A writ of sequestration issued under this statute to compel a clergyman to reside on his benefice is not merely in the nature of a distress to compel residence, but is also a penal proceeding against him, as it is one step towards the forfeiture of the benefice. The bishop, therefore, ought to give the clergyman an opportunity of being heard before directing the sequestration.

If, in obedience to a monition issued by the bishop, a clergyman goes into residence and again ceases to reside, the bishop may serve him with an order to reside; but if that order be disobeyed, the bishop is not justified in directing a sequestration at once, and the sequestration will be void, unless before issuing it he gives the clergyman an opportunity of rebutting the supposed facts, or of offering lawful excuse for his disobedience to the order to reside (l).

Sect. 55. "Every spiritual person to whom any such monition or order in writing shall be issued as aforesaid, who shall be at the time of the issuing thereof absent from his benefice, contrary to the provisions of this act, but who shall forthwith obey such monition or order, and the profits of whose benefice shall by reason of such obedience not be sequestered, shall nevertheless pay all costs, charges, and expenses incurred by reason of the issuing and serving such monition or order, and the proceedings thereon shall not be stayed until such payment shall be made."

Incumbents

Sect. 56. "If any spiritual person, not having a licence to reside out of the limits of his benefice, nor having other lawful cause of absence from the same, who after any such monition or order as aforesaid requiring him to reside, and before or after any such sequestration as aforesaid, shall in obedience to any such monition or order have begun to reside upon his benefice, shall afterwards, and before the expiration of twelve months next after the commencement of such residence, wilfully absent himself from such benefice for the space of one month together, or to be accounted at several times, it shall be lawful for the bishop, without issuing any other monition or making any order, to sequester and apply the profits of such benefice, as before directed by this act, for the purpose of enforcing the residence of such spiritual person, according to the true intent of the original monition issued by the bishop as aforesaid; and it shall be lawful for the bishop so to proceed in like cases from time to time as often as occasion may require; provided that in each such case such spiritual person may, within one month after the service upon him of the order for any such sequestration, appeal to the archbishop of the province, who shall make such order relating thereto, or to the profits sequestered, or to any part thereof, as to him may seem just and proper, but nevertheless such sequestration shall be in force during such appeal."

Reasons for remitting penalties for non-residence of a certain amount to be transmitted to the Queen in Council.

Sect. 57. "In every case in which any archbishop or bishop shall think proper, after proceeding by monition for the recovery of any penalty under this act for non-residence of more than one-third part of the yearly value of any benefice for any non-residence exceeding six months in the year, to remit the whole or any part of any such penalty, such archbishop shall forthwith transmit to Her Majesty in council, and such bishop shall forthwith transmit to the archbishop of the province to which he belongs, a statement of the nature and special circumstances of each case, and the reasons for the remission of any such penalty; and it shall thereupon be lawful for Her Majesty in council, or for the archbishop, as the case may be, to allow or disallow such remission in whole or in part, in the same manner as is provided in this act with relation to the allowance or disallowance of licences of non-residence granted in cases not hereinbefore expressly enumerated; Provided always, that the decision of the archbishop with respect to cases transmitted to him from a bishop shall be final."

Benefice continuing so sequestered one year, or being twice so sequestered within two years, to become void.

Sect. 58. "If the benefice of any spiritual person shall continue for the space of one whole year under sequestration (m) issued under the provisions of this act for disobedience to the bishop's monition or order requiring such spiritual person to reside on his benefice, or if such spiritual person shall, under the provisions of this act, incur two such sequestrations in the space of two years, and shall not be relieved with respect to either of such sequestrations upon appeal, such benefice shall thereupon become void; and it shall be lawful for the patron of such benefice to make donation or to present or nominate to the same as if such spiritual person were dead; and the bishop, on such benefice so becoming void, shall give notice in writing under his hand to such patron, which notice shall either be delivered to such patron or left at his usual place of abode, or if such patron or place of abode shall be unknown, or shall be out of England, such notice shall be twice inserted in the London Gazette, and also twice in some newspaper printed and usually circulated in London, and in some other newspaper usually circulated in the neighbourhood of the place where such benefice is situate; and for the purposes of lapse the avoidance of the benefice shall be reckoned from the day on which such notice shall have been delivered as aforesaid, or from the day on which six months shall have expired after the second publication of such notice in the London Gazette, as the case may be; and every such notice in the Gazette and newspapers shall state that the patron or the place of abode of the patron is unknown, or that he is said to be out of England, as the case may be, and that the benefice will lapse, at the furthest, after the expiration of one year, from the second publication thereof as aforesaid; and upon any such avoidance it shall not be lawful for the patron to appoint by donation or present or nominate to such benefice so avoided the person by reason of whose non-residence the same was so avoided."

Sects. 107, 108, 109, dealing with the powers of archbishops in their dioceses, with peculiars and with the abolition of concurrent jurisdiction, have been already given at length (n).

Sect. 110. "Every sequestration issued under the provisions of this act shall have priority, and the sums to be thereby recovered shall be paid and satisfied in preference to all other sequestrations, and the sums to be thereby recovered . . . except such sequestrations as shall have been issued before any sequestration under this act under the provisions of an act passed" in 17 Geo. 3, "for promoting the residence of the parochial clergy, and the monies to be recovered by such excepted sequestrations respectively."

Sequestrations under this act to have priority.

Sect. 111. "All appeals under the provisions of this act to any archbishop shall be in writing signed by the party appealing, and in order to discourage frivolous appeals, no proceedings shall be had in any such appeal until the appellant shall, if required, have given security, in such form and to such amount as the archbishop shall direct, of payment to the bishop of such costs as shall be awarded by the archbishop if he shall decide against the appellant; and, after such security, if required, shall have been given, the said archbishop shall forthwith, either by himself or by some commissioner or commissioners appointed under his hand from among the other bishops of his province, make or cause to be made inquiry into the matter complained of, and shall after such inquiry, and in the latter case after a report in writing from his said commissioner or commissioners, give his decision in such appeal in writing under his hand; and when he shall decide the merits of the appeal against the appellant, he shall also award and direct whether any and what amount of costs shall be paid by the appellant to the bishop respondent; and in like manner, when he shall decide in favour of the appellant, he shall also award and direct whether any and what amount of costs shall be paid by the bishop respondent to the appellant."

Appeals under this act.

Sect. 112. "In all cases in which proceedings under this act are directed to be by monition and sequestration, such monition shall issue under the hand and seal of the bishop, and such monition, and any other instrument or notice issued in pursuance of the provisions of this act, and not otherwise specially

Sect. 113. "Provided always, that in any case of non-residence in which a monition shall have been served upon any spiritual person under the provisions of this act, requiring such spiritual person to reside on his benefice, no sequestration shall issue until an order requiring such spiritual person to proceed and reside upon such benefice within thirty days, as hereinbefore enacted, shall have been served upon him in the same manner as is hereinbefore directed as to the service of monitions."

With respect to the recovery of penalties and forfeitures under sect. 32, mentioned in a former chapter (o), the provisions are as follows:—

Penalties against spiritual persons under this act, when and how to be recovered.

Sect. 114. "All penalties and forfeitures which shall be incurred under this act by any spiritual person holding a benefice shall and may be sued for and recovered in the court of the bishop of the diocese in which such benefice is situate, and by some person duly authorized for that purpose by such bishop by writing under his hand and seal, and in no other court, and by or at the instance of no other person whatever; and the payment of every such penalty or forfeiture, together with the reasonable expense incurred in recovering the same, shall and may be enforced by monition and sequestration; and it shall and may be lawful for such bishop, by any order made for that purpose in writing under his hand, and to be registered in the registry of the diocese, which the registrar is hereby required to do, to direct that every such penalty or forfeiture so recovered as aforesaid, and which shall not have been remitted in whole or in part, or so much thereof as shall not have been remitted, shall be applied towards the augmentation or improvement of such benefice or of the house of residence thereof, or of any of the buildings or appurtenances thereof."

Application of penalties recovered.

A suit to recover a penalty against a beneficed clergyman under this act for non-residence is a civil and not a criminal suit or proceeding, and, therefore, need not be brought under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 86 (p).

Not a criminal suit.

Sect. 117. "All penalties and forfeitures under this act incurred by persons not spiritual, or by spiritual persons not holding benefices, shall be sued for and recovered by any person who will sue for the same by action of debt in any of her majesty's courts of record at Westminster."

Recovery of penalties against laymen or unbeficed clergymen.

Sect. 118. "No penalty shall be recovered against any spiritual person, under the provisions of this act, other or further than those which such spiritual person may have incurred subsequent to the first day of January in the year immediately preceding the year in which such proceedings shall be commenced."

Penalties not recoverable for more than one year.

Sect. 119. "All penalties recovered under the provisions of this act, the application of which is not specially directed thereby, shall be paid over to the treasurer of the governors of the bounty of Queen Anne, to be applied to the purposes of the said bounty."

Application of penalties.

As to fees and other matters: Sect. 115. "All fees, charges, costs and expenses incurred or directed to be paid by any spiritual person holding any benefice under the provisions of this act, which shall remain unpaid for the period of twenty-one days after demand thereof in writing delivered to or left at the usual or last place of abode of such spiritual person may be recovered by monition and sequestration: Provided always, that it shall be lawful for the person or persons of whom any such fees, costs, charges and expenses shall be so demanded to apply to the bishop of the diocese to order the taxation thereof, and such bishop shall thereupon order some proper person to tax and settle the same; and the certificate of allowance, by the person so to be appointed, of such fees, costs, charges and expenses so to be taxed, shall be final."

Recovery of fees, &c. by monition and sequestration.

Sect. 116. "If the registrar of any diocese shall refuse or neglect to make any entry, or to do any other matter or thing prescribed by this act, he shall forfeit for every such refusal or neglect the sum of five pounds."

Their taxation.

CHAPTER VIII.

PROCEDURE UNDER 3 & 4 VICT. c. 86.

THIS "Act for better enforcing Church Discipline" passed in 1843, was, with the exception of a now repealed act (the 1 Hen. 7, c. 4), the first statute passed by the state in aid of the discipline of the clergy in matters of morality. It was not, however, confined to offences against morality, but provided a procedure for all kinds of clerical offences. After having given rise to much costly litigation, it had at last been pretty well construed and expounded by judicial decision, and had been worked by the ecclesiastical officials as a fairly satisfactory and efficient piece of machinery. In 1874 the Legislature, in a panic, passed the Public Worship Regulation Act, giving a concurrent procedure in matters of ritual. And in 1892, was passed, unwisely as the editor thinks, the Clergy Discipline Act, 1892, creating a new and exclusive procedure for cases of morality. The act of 1843, which had cost so much money and toil to interpret and make workable, now remains only for doctrinal cases, simony, breaches of official duty, some cases difficult to classify, and ritual; and as to this last only as an optional procedure: and the discipline of the clergy is now to be enforced by four separate systems with varying courts—the system provided by 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106, and the other three mentioned in this paragraph. To these might be added a fifth, i.e., that in use in cases of dilapidations.

statutory procedure.

Turning now to the several provisions of the Act of 1843. First (though the enactment comes nearly at the end of the act), it is to be observed that it enacts as follows:—

As to criminal suits generally—

Sect. 23. "No criminal suit or proceeding against a clerk in holy orders of the United Church of England and Ireland, for any offence against the laws ecclesiastical (a), shall be instituted in any ecclesiastical court otherwise than is hereinbefore enacted or provided" (b).

No suit against a clerk to be instituted except as herein provided.

(a) In Rackham v. Bluck (1 Roberts. p. 367; 5 Moo. P. C. C. p. 305; 9 Q. B. p. 691) it was holden that a proceeding to recover penalties for non-residence under 1 & 2

Vict. c. 106, ss. 33, 114, was not a "criminal suit or proceeding."

(b) This clause has taken away any power which the ordinary, quæ visitor, might have possessed of de-

Secondly, it is provided—the provision is perhaps difficult to construe and apply—

As to the personal powers of the ordinary—

Not to affect authority of bishop out of court.

Sect. 25. “Nothing in this act contained shall be construed to affect any authority over the clergy of the respective provinces or dioceses which the archbishops or bishops of England and Wales may now, according to law, exercise personally and without process in court.”

Any authority of the bishop exercised out of court is no bar to the institution of proceedings under this act (c).

Thirdly, as to limitation of time—

Suits to be commenced within two years.

This statute limits the time within which a clerk may be prosecuted under its provisions, a limitation introduced there by positive law for the first time to the theory of clerical discipline. It is provided by sect. 20, “Every suit or proceeding against any such clerk in holy orders for any offence against the laws ecclesiastical shall be commenced within two years after the commission of the offence, in respect of which the suit or proceeding shall be instituted, and not afterwards: Provided always, that whenever any such suit or proceeding shall be brought in respect of an offence for which a conviction shall have been obtained in any court of common law, such suit or proceeding may be brought against the person convicted at any time within six calendar months after such conviction, although more than two years shall have elapsed since the commission of the offence in respect of which such suit or proceeding shall be so brought.”

Proviso.

When the time begins to run.

It has been finally ruled by the Privy Council and the Court of Arches, reversing the decision of the Archbishop of Canterbury acting for the Bishop of Bath and Wells, that the commencement of the suit dates from the service of the citation upon the accused clerk and not from the date of the issue of a preliminary commission (d). This case exhausts all the learning on the subject; see also Sherwood v. Ray (e), Brookes v. Cresswell (f); and as to the application of this section to the 68th Canon, Titchmarsh v. Chapman (g).

Reference to offences without the two years, how far allowed.

The offence for which the clerk is article must have been committed within the two years preceding the service of the citation, but it does not follow that offences without that limit may not be given in evidence as rendering probable the commis-prising a clerk summariè et sine figurâ judicii; and this power is not preserved by sect. 25: Reg. v. Abp. of York, 2 Q. B. p. 1; 2 G. & D. p. 202. But see the case of the Dean of Wells, Walrond v. Pollard, Dyer, p. 273, et vide supra, p. 166. The Public Worship Regulation Act excludes the operation of this clause for matters within its compass.

sion of an offence within the limits (h). For an analogous decision see The Duke of Norfolk's Case (i). See also The Bishop of Hereford v. Thompson (j). The general rule at common law seems to be that the limited time begins to run from the moment when the injury complained of is so complete as to enable the injured party to take legal proceedings.

It is further provided, however, by sect. 21, that the act 27 Geo. 3, c. 44, "does not and shall not extend to the time of the commencement of suits or proceedings against spiritual persons for any of the offences in the said act named" (k).

Fourthly, as to preferments subject to the provisions of this act—

Sect. 2. "Unless it shall otherwise appear from the context, the term 'preferment,' when used in this act, shall be construed to comprehend every deanery, archdeaconry, prebend, canonry, office of minor canon, priest vicar, or vicar choral in holy orders (l), and every precentorship, treasurership, sub-deanery, chancellorship of the church, and other dignity and office in any cathedral or collegiate church, and every mastership, wardenship, and fellowship in any collegiate church, and all benefices with cure of souls, comprehending therein all parishes, perpetual curacies, donatives, endowed public chapels, parochial chapelries, and chapelries or districts belonging to or reputed to belong, or annexed or reputed to be annexed, to any church or chapel, and every curacy, lectureship, readership, chaplaincy, office, or place which requires the discharge of any spiritual duty, and whether the same be or be not within any exempt or peculiar jurisdiction; and the word 'bishop,' when used in this act, shall be construed to comprehend 'archbishop;' and the word 'diocese,' when used in this act, shall be construed to comprehend all places to which the jurisdiction of any bishop extends under and for the purposes of an act 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106" (m).

Fifthly, all places formerly exempt and peculiar, not subject to their proper ordinary, are made subject to him for the purposes of this act.

Sect. 22. "Every archbishop and bishop within the limit of whose province or diocese respectively any place, district or preintituled 'An Act that no person shall be cited out of the diocese where he or she dwelleth, except in certain cases'” (p).

Both these tribunals confirmed the original sentence of the dean and chapter. Analogy of

The Act of Uniformity, 1 Eliz. c. 2, had already, by sect. 4, empowered bishops and their officers to proceed for the purpose of enforcing that act in places otherwise exempt from their jurisdiction (n).

Having considered the extent and limitation of the operation of the statute, we will now state the means which it employs for effecting the end which it has in view, namely, the discipline of the clergy.

The statute provides for the trial of an accused clerk as follows:—

Modes of trial.

1. The bishop may issue a commission of inquiry.
2. If that commission report that there is a prima facie ground for further proceedings,—
3. The bishop may try the case himself with certain assessors ;
4. Or may appoint a commissary to hear the case ;
5. Or may, after issuing the commission, and before articles are filed, send the case to be heard by the court of the province ;
6. Or may pronounce sentence, with the consent of the accused and party complaining, without further proceedings ;
7. Or may, without issuing any commission, send the case to be tried in the first instance by the court of the province.

From the sentence of the bishop or his commissary an appeal lies to the court of the province. From the sentence of the court of the province, whether acting as a court of appeal or as a court of first instance, an appeal lies to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council.

Appeal.

The enactments of the statute relative to these matters are as follows:—

1. As regards the issuing and working of the commission.

Sect. 3. “In every case of any clerk in holy orders of the United Church of England and Ireland who may be charged with any offence against the laws ecclesiastical, or concerning whom there may exist scandal or evil report as having offended against the said laws, it shall be lawful for the bishop of the diocese within which the offence is alleged or reported to have been committed, on the application of any party complaining thereof, or if he shall think fit of his own mere motion, to issue a commission under his hand and seal to five persons, of whom one shall be his vicar-general, or an archdeacon or rural dean within the diocese, for the purpose of making inquiry as to the grounds of such charge or report: Provided always, that notice of the intention to issue such commission under the hand of the bishop, containing an intimation of the nature of the offence, together with the names, addition, and residence of the party on whose application or motion such commission shall be about to issue, shall be sent by the bishop to the party accused fourteen days at least before such commission shall issue.”

Bishop may issue a commission of inquiry.

The accused clerk is, however, not entitled to be heard as of No preliminary right of right in objection in a preliminary way to the character of the party on whose application or motion the commission is to issue (p).

What are offences.

The question how far "a clerk in holy orders" can, for the purposes of this act, relieve himself from his responsibility to the ordinary, has been considered (q).

Discretion of bishop as to allowing the promotion of his office.

The having caused a "scandal or evil report" is, in the case of a clerk, an offence per se (r); and for this reason, and for the sake of purging the church from such scandal, proceedings may be taken in the Ecclesiastical Court, against a clerk, when they could not be taken because of 27 Geo. 3, c. 44, against a layman at all, or against a clergyman pro salute animæ (s), before the passing of this act (t).

The words "it shall be lawful," construed with the other words "if he shall think fit," and the whole tenor of the act, do not take away the discretion of the ordinary as to permitting or refusing his office to be promoted, or in other words, a criminal suit to be instituted, against a clerk (u). It was, however, in an early case holden that, if the bishop has allowed a commission to issue at the instance of a promoter, he has no longer a discretionary power, but must allow further proceedings to be taken if the promoter insist (x). But the decision in Reg. v. The Bishop of Oxford throws doubt on this.

Vicar-general mentioned in act.

It should be observed that the word "vicar-general" is used in this section, and not "official principal," as if the act contemplated these two offices being holden by separate persons, though since the Reformation they have, as a matter of fact, been always united in the office of "chancellor" (y).

Limit of power of commissioners.

The commissioners are bound to confine their inquiry to offences committed within the diocese of the bishop who issues the commission (z). In the case of a bishop found incompetent under the now repealed act, 6 & 7 Vict. c. 62, all proceedings had nevertheless to be taken in his name (a).

Notice of intended commission.

The "notice" only indicates the intention to institute proceedings, and such intention may be abandoned; and where no commission has issued according to the notice, the issue of letters of request is considered as superseding that notice (b).

of the commissioners.

It seems that where the case is afterwards sent by letters of request to the court of the province, that court cannot take any cognizance of any defects in the mode of proceeding before the commissioners (c).

After letters of request no defect in commission material.

Sect. 5. “The said commissioners or any three of them shall transmit to the bishop under their hands and seals, the depositions of witnesses taken before them, and also a report of the opinion of the majority of the commissioners present at such inquiry, whether or not there be sufficient prima facie ground for instituting proceedings against the party accused; and such report shall be filed in the registry of the diocese; and if the party accused shall hold any preferment in any other diocese or dioceses, the bishop to whom the report shall be made shall transmit a copy thereof, and of the depositions, to the bishop or bishops of such other diocese or dioceses (d), and shall also upon the application of the party accused, cause to be delivered to such party a copy of the said report and of the depositions, on payment of a reasonable sum for the same, not exceeding two-pence for each folio of ninety words.”

commenced under this act against any such clerk, it shall be lawful for the bishop of any diocese within which such clerk may hold any preferment, with the consent of such clerk and of the party complaining, if any, first obtained in writing, to pronounce, without any further proceedings, such sentence as the said bishop shall think fit, not exceeding the sentence which might be pronounced in due course of law; and all such sentences shall be good and effectual in law as if pronounced after a hearing, according to the provisions of this act, and may be enforced by the like means."

What is a lawful sentence.

A "sentence which might be pronounced in due course of law" may include a condition that at the expiration of the period of suspension decreed the clerk should procure a certificate, signed by three beneficed clergymen, of his good behaviour and morals during his suspension, and that such certificate should be approved of by the bishop before the suspension was taken off (e).

Articles and depositions to be filed.

Sect. 7. "If the commissioners shall report that there is sufficient prima facie ground for instituting proceedings, and if the bishop of any diocese within which the party accused may hold any preferment, or the party complaining shall thereupon think fit to proceed against the party accused, articles shall be drawn up, and, when approved and signed by an advocate practising in Doctors Commons, shall, together with a copy of the depositions taken by the commissioners, be filed in the registry of the diocese of such last-mentioned bishop; and any such party, or any person on his behalf, shall be entitled to inspect without fee such copies, and to require and have, on demand, from the registrar (who is hereby required to deliver the same), copies of such depositions, on payment of a reasonable sum for the same, not exceeding two-pence for each folio of ninety words."

Signature of barrister to articles.

The words "by an advocate practising in Doctors Commons" must be considered as directory only, and the direction can no longer be complied with, as the College of Advocates has legally ceased to exist; and it seems that the articles may now be signed by any barrister (f).

As to documents not produced to commissioners.

In a proceeding against a clerk the bishop sent all the documents connected with the case, whether produced before the commissioners or not, to the registry. When the case came before the Court of Arches an application was made to the court to direct the registrar to allow the clerk access to certain of these documents, which were stated to refer to some charges which had been abandoned. These documents had not been produced before the commissioners. It was holden that, as by sections 5 and 7 of this statute the clerk was entitled to be furnished only with the evidence given before the commissioners, the application must be rejected (g).

Sect. 8. "A copy of the articles so filed shall be forthwith served upon the party accused, by personally delivering the same to him, or by leaving the same at the residence house belonging to any preferment holden by him, or if there be no such house, then at his usual or last known place of residence (h); and it shall not be lawful to proceed upon any such articles until after the expiration of fourteen days after the day on which such copy shall have been so served."

Service of copy of the articles.

Sect. 9. "It shall be lawful for the said last-mentioned bishop, by writing under his hand, to require the party to appear, either in person or by his agent duly appointed, as to the said party may seem fit, before him at any place within the diocese, and at any time after the expiration of the said fourteen days, and to make answer to the said articles within such time as to the bishop shall seem reasonable; and if the party shall appear, and by his answer admit the truth of the articles, the bishop, or his commissary specially appointed for that purpose, shall forthwith proceed to pronounce sentence thereupon according to the ecclesiastical law."

Bishop may require the party to appear before him; and may pronounce judgment where offence admitted.

This the bishop may do, though he is, by his secretary, the real promoter of the suit (i).

Sect. 10. "Every notice and requisition to be given or made in pursuance of this act, shall be served on the party to whom the same respectively relate in the same manner as is hereby directed with respect to the service of a copy of the articles on the party accused."

How notice and requisition to be served.

Sect. 11. "If the party accused shall refuse or neglect to appear and make answer to the said articles, or shall appear and make any answer to the said articles other than an unqualified admission of the truth thereof, the bishop shall proceed to hear the cause, with the assistance of three assessors (k) to be nominated by the bishop, one of whom shall be an advocate who shall have practised not less than five years in the court of the archbishop of the province, or a sergeant at law, or a barrister of not less than seven years' standing, and another shall be the dean of his cathedral church, or of one of his cathedral churches, or one of his archdeacons, or his chancellor; and upon the hearing of such cause the bishop shall determine the same, and pronounce sentence thereupon according to the ecclesiastical law."

bishop or his commissary in pursuance of this act shall be good and effectual in law, and such sentences may be enforced by the like means as a sentence pronounced by an Ecclesiastical Court of competent jurisdiction."

Therefore, disobedience to the sentence incurs the penalties of contumacy and of contempt of court (l).

As to Letters of Request—

Bishop may send the cause to the court of appeal of the province.

Sect. 13. "Provided always that it shall be lawful for the bishop of any diocese within which any such clerk shall hold any preferment, or if he hold no preferment, then for the bishop of the diocese within which the offence is alleged to have been committed, in any case, if he shall think fit, either in the first instance or after the commissioners shall have reported that there is sufficient prima facie ground for instituting proceedings, and before the filing of the articles, but not afterwards, to send the case by letters of request to the court of appeal of the province, to be there heard and determined according to the law and practice of such court: Provided always, that the judge of the said court may, and he is hereby authorized and empowered from time to time to make any order or orders of court for the purpose of expediting such suits or otherwise improving the practice of the said court, and from time to time to alter and revoke the same (m): Provided also, that there shall be no appeal from any interlocutory decree or order not having the force or effect of a definitive sentence, and thereby ending the suit in the court of appeal of the province, save by the permission of the judge of such court" (n).

Judge of the court may make orders for expediting such suits.

No appeal from interlocutory decree.

No form of letters of request authorized.

It is to be observed that no particular form of letters of request is authorized by the statute (o); and the tendency of the later judgments, especially of the Privy Council, has been to render it unnecessary to state the offence so fully as was formerly required (p).

Archbishop may send letters of request to his own court.

Court must receive them.

This act has effected a separation between the archbishop or bishop and his court, and it seems that under the provisions of it the archbishop may send letters of request to his own court (q).

It has been ruled by the Privy Council that the court of appeal of the province must accept letters of request sent to it under this section (r), the practical effect of which is to convert the court of appeal into a court of first instance. The Judicial Committee itself will not accept letters of request, and very rarely

As to Appeals—

Sect. 15. "It shall be lawful for any party who shall think himself aggrieved by the judgment pronounced in the first instance by the bishop, or in the court of appeal of the province, to appeal from such judgment; and such appeal shall be to the archbishop, and shall be heard before the judge of the court of appeal of the province, when the cause shall have been heard and determined in the first instance by the bishop, and shall be proceeded with in the said court of appeal in the same manner and subject only to the same appeal as in this act is provided with respect to cases sent by letters of request to the said court; and the appeal shall be to the Queen in Council, and shall be heard before the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council when the cause shall have been heard and determined in the first instance in the court of the archbishop" (u).

It was ruled by Sir Robert Phillimore when judge of the Court of Arches that the accused party is admissible to give evidence (z); and such evidence has been received in several cases which have been subsequently appealed. The Privy Council seems to have acquiesced in this ruling, though it has given no positive judgment upon this point (a).

Section 13. “Every pensioned clerk shall remain amenable to ecclesiastical discipline, and be liable to suspension from or forfeiture of pension for offences which would have involved suspension from or forfeiture of the benefice had he remained incumbent thereof, and proceedings under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 86, may be taken against every offending pensioned clerk in the same manner as if he had remained incumbent of the benefice, and in the same manner in all respects as if the offence alleged to have been committed had been committed within the said benefice: Provided always, that in case any offending pensioned clerk shall reside elsewhere than in England or Wales or the Channel Islands it shall be lawful for the bishop by a letter or summons under his hand, with the consent of the archbishop of the province, to be signified by his countersigning such letter or summons, addressed and sent prepaid by post to such pensioned clerk at his last known place of residence, to require such clerk to attend in England and appear in any proceedings which may be instituted against him for any such offence by him committed or alleged to have been committed, and to appoint a place in England where service of all subsequent process, articles, and documents may be made, and service of such process, articles, and documents at such place shall be sufficient; and if such pensioned clerk shall neglect to appear to such proceedings within three calendar months after such letter or summons shall have been sent to him as aforesaid, and to appoint such place for service, such proceedings may be prosecuted in his absence.”

CHAPTER IX.

PROCEDURE UNDER THE PUBLIC WORSHIP REGULATION ACT, 1874 (a).

OBSERVATIONS as to the variety of forms of statutory procedure against criminous clerks will be found at the beginning of the last chapter. This act has, as its preamble recites, for object "further regulations" "for the administration of the laws relating to the performance of divine service." It will be best to take its material sections in order.

Sect. 6 defines several terms, the material ones of which are as follows:

- | | |
|------------------|---|
| "Burial ground." | "The term 'burial ground' means any churchyard, cemetery or burial ground, or the part of any cemetery or burial ground in which, at the burial of any corpse therein, the order for the burial of the dead contained in the Book of Common Prayer is directed by law to be used :" |
| "Church." | "The term 'church' means any church, chapel, or place of public worship in which the incumbent is by law or by the terms of licence from the bishop required to conduct divine service according to the Book of Common Prayer :" |
| "Diocese." | "The term 'diocese' means the diocese in which the church or burial ground is situate to which a representation relates, and comprehends all places which are situate within the limits of such diocese :" |
| "Incumbent." | "The term 'incumbent' means the person or persons in holy orders legally responsible for the due performance of divine service in any church, or of the order for the burial of the dead in any burial ground :" |
| "Parish." | "The term 'parish' means any parish, ecclesiastical district, chapelry, or place, over which any incumbent has the exclusive cure of souls" (b) : |
| "Parish-ioner." | "The term 'parishioner' means a male person of full age who before making any representation under this act has trans- | mitted to the bishop under his hand the declaration contained in Schedule (A) (c) to this act, and who has, and for one year next before taking any proceeding under this act has had, his usual place of abode in the parish within which the church or burial ground is situate, or for the use of which the burial ground is legally provided, to which the representation relates."

Sect. 7. "The Archbishop of Canterbury and the Archbishop of York may, but subject to the approval of her Majesty to be signified under her sign manual, appoint from time to time a barrister-at-law who has been in actual practice for ten years, or a person who has been a judge of one of the superior courts of law or equity, or of any court to which the jurisdiction of any such court has been or may hereafter be transferred by authority of parliament, to be, during good behaviour, a judge of the provincial courts of Canterbury and York, hereinafter called the judge (d). Appointment of judge.

"If the said archbishops shall not, within six months after the passing of this act, or within six months after the occurrence of any vacancy in the office, appoint the said judge, her Majesty may by letters-patent appoint some person, qualified as aforesaid, to be such judge.

"Whosoever a vacancy shall occur in the office of official principal of the Arches Court of Canterbury, the judge shall become ex officio such official principal, and all proceedings thereafter taken before the judge in relation to matters arising within the province of Canterbury shall be deemed to be taken in the Arches Court of Canterbury (e); and whosoever a vacancy shall occur in the office of official principal or auditor of the Chancery Court of York, the judge shall become ex officio such official principal or auditor, and all proceedings thereafter taken before the judge in relation to matters arising within the province of York shall be deemed to be taken in the Chancery Court of York (f); and whosoever a vacancy shall occur in the office of master of the faculties to the Archbishop of Canterbury, such judge shall become ex officio such master of the faculties. Judge to become on vacancy official principal of Arches Court and of Chancery Court.

(e) Under the provisions of 38 & 39 Vict. c. 77, s. 8, the late Sir Robert Joseph Phillimore resigned the offices of official principal of the Arches Court and Master of the Faculties.

(f) By sect. 6 of 38 & 39 Vict. c. 76, the Worshipful Granville Harcourt Vernon was enabled to resign the office of official principal or auditor of the Chancery Court of York, without resigning his other offices; which he accordingly did.

a member of the Church of England, and shall, before entering on his office, sign the declaration in Schedule (A.) to this act; and if at any time any such judge shall cease to be a member of the church, his office shall thereupon be vacant.

"This section shall come into operation immediately after the passing of this act."

provincial
courts.

The effect of this section has been holden to be to give to "the judge" under this act all the position and powers (so far as temporal law can give them) of the former officials principal of the Arches Court and Chancery Court. Proceedings, therefore, though taken under this act, are to be deemed to be taken in the appropriate ancient ecclesiastical court; and orders made in such proceedings can be enforced as other ecclesiastical orders are by significavit and imprisonment or enrolment and sequestration (g). This was finally decided by the House of Lords (h).

Sect. 8. "If the archdeacon of the archdeaconry, or a churchwarden of the parish (i), or any three parishioners of the parish (k), within which archdeaconry or parish any church or burial ground is situate, or for the use of any part of which any burial ground is legally provided, or in case of cathedral or collegiate churches, any three inhabitants of the diocese, being male persons of full age, who have signed and transmitted to the bishop under their hands the declaration contained in Schedule (A.) under this act, and who have, and for one year next before taking any proceeding under this act have had, their usual place of abode in the diocese within which the cathedral or collegiate church is situate, shall be of opinion,—

- (1.) That in such church any alteration in or addition to the fabric, ornaments, or furniture thereof has been made without lawful authority, or that any decoration forbidden by law has been introduced into such church (l); or,
- (2.) That the incumbent has within the preceding twelve months used or permitted to be used in such church or burial ground any unlawful ornament of the minister

(g) Vide infra, Chap. XII. sect. 8.

(i) If the complainant ceases to be a churchwarden during the suit, he does not thereby lose his position for the purposes of this Act: Perkins v. Enraght, 7 P. D. p. 31; aff. on app. nom. Harris v. Perkins, ibid. p. 161.

(k) See the definition of "parish" in sect. 6, supra, p. 1026. They must be parishioners at the time of the complaint: Hudson v. Tooth, 2 P. D. p. 125.

(l) This clause seems to follow the distinction drawn between "ornaments" (ornamenta) and decorations: vide supra, pp. 721, 731. But while decorations and ornaments of the minister (sub-sect. 2), if illegal, come within the purview of this act, ornaments of the church apparently only do so when the complaint is that they were put up without lawful authority, i.e. without a faculty: vide infra, Part VI. Chap. II. sect. 6.

That the incumbent has within the preceding twelve months failed to observe, or to cause to be observed, the directions contained in the Book of Common Prayer relating to the performance, in such church or burial ground, of the services, rites, and ceremonies ordered by the said book, or has made or permitted to be made any unlawful addition to, alteration of, or omission from such services, rites, and ceremonies,— such archdeacon, churchwarden, parishioners, or such inhabitants of the diocese may, if he or they think fit, represent the same to the bishop, by sending to the bishop a form as contained in Schedule (B.) (m), to this act, duly filled up and signed, and accompanied by a declaration made by him or them under the act of the fifth and sixth year of the reign of King William the Fourth, chapter sixty-two, affirming the truth of the statements contained in the representation: provided that no proceedings shall be taken under this act as regards any alteration in or addition to the fabric of a church if such alteration or addition has been completed five years before the commencement of such proceedings" (n).

Sect. 9. "Unless the bishop shall be of opinion, after considering the whole circumstances of the case, that proceedings should not be taken on the representation (o) (in which case he shall state in writing the reason for his opinion), and such statement shall be deposited in the registry of the diocese, and a copy thereof shall forthwith be transmitted to the person or some one of the persons who shall have made the representation, and to the person complained of,) he shall within twenty-one days (p) after receiving the representation transmit a copy thereof to the person complained of, and shall require such person, and also the person making the representation, to state in writing within twenty-one days whether they are willing to submit to the directions of the bishop touching the matter of the said representation, without appeal; and if they shall state their willingness to submit to the directions of the bishop without appeal, the bishop shall forthwith proceed to hear the matter of the representation in such manner as he shall think fit, and shall pronounce such judgment require and enforce the attendance of witnesses, and the production of evidences, books, or writings, in the like manner as a judge of one of the superior courts of law or equity, or of any court to which the jurisdiction of any such court has been or may hereafter be transferred by authority of parliament.

“ Unless the parties shall both agree that the evidence shall be taken down by a shorthand writer, and that a special case shall not be stated, the judge shall state the facts proved before him in the form of a special case, similar to a special case stated under the Common Law Procedure Acts, 1852-1854 (t).

“ The judge shall pronounce judgment on the matter of the representation, and shall deliver to the parties, on application, and to the bishop, a copy of the special case, if any, and judgment. Judgment.

“ The judge shall issue such monition (if any) and make such order as to costs as the judgment shall require. Monition and costs.

“ Upon every judgment of the judge, or monition issued in accordance therewith, an appeal shall lie, in the form prescribed by rules and orders to her Majesty in council (u). Appeal.

“ The judge may, on application in any case, suspend the execution of such monition pending an appeal, if he shall think fit” (x). Stay of proceedings pending appeal.

It will be convenient at the end of this section (sect. 9) to refer to the discretion given to the bishop by its first words. These words became a matter of contention in the case of the reredos in St. Paul’s Cathedral, the complainants applying to the High Court of Justice for a mandamus to compel the Bishop of London to transmit the representation to the archbishop in order to its being heard by the judge, they alleging that the bishop’s “ reason for his opinion ” against further proceedings was, as he stated it in the required writing, no reason and only showed that he had not considered “ the whole circumstances of the case ” and nothing but these circumstances. This contention found favour with the court of first instance ; but was overruled by the Court of Appeal and finally by the House of Lords (y). The discretion of the bishop under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 86 to stay proceedings under that act has been already noticed (z).

(t) 15 & 16 Vict. c. 76 ; 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125. But a shorthand writer may, in an undefended case, be sworn and take down the evidence : Hudson v. Tooth, 2 P. D. p. 125.

(x) In appeals from the ecclesiastical courts, as already stated supra, pp. 977—979, the law was that an appeal simply did not suspend the decree of the court below, but an inhibition might always be applied for by the appellant, by which the court of appeal inhibited the court appealed from, from doing any thing to the prejudice of the appeal. This inhibition used to be issued as a matter of course on an appeal from the Arches or Chancery Courts to the Privy Council. But it was holden by the Privy Council in Ridsdale v. Clifton, 1 P. D. p. 383, that in cases under this act the inhibition was a matter of discretion, and was only to be issued under the order of the appellate court.

Registrar of the diocese to perform duties under the act.

Sect. 10. "The registrar of the diocese, or his deputy duly appointed, shall perform such duties in relation to this act and shall receive such fees as may be prescribed by the rules and orders."

Parties may appear in person or by counsel, &c.

Sect. 11. "In any proceedings under this act either party may appear either by himself in person or by counsel, or by any proctor or any attorney or solicitor" (a).

No fresh evidence admitted on appeal, except by leave of appellate court.

Sect. 12. "For the purpose of an appeal to her Majesty in council under this act, the special case settled by the judge, or a copy of the shorthand writer's notes, as the case may be, shall be transmitted in the manner prescribed by rules and orders, and no fresh evidence shall be admitted upon appeal except by the permission of the tribunal hearing the appeal."

Inhibition of incumbent.

Sect. 13. "Obedience by an incumbent to a monition or order of the bishop or judge, as the case may be, shall be enforced, if necessary, in the manner prescribed by rules and orders, by an order inhibiting the incumbent from performing any service of the church or otherwise exercising the cure of souls within the diocese for a term not exceeding three months (b), provided that at the expiration of such term the inhibition shall not be relaxed until the incumbent shall, by writing under his hand, in the form prescribed by the rules and orders, undertake to pay due obedience to such monition or order, or to the part thereof which shall not have been annulled, provided that if such inhibition shall remain in force for more than three years from the date of the issuing of the monition, or from the final determination of an appeal therefrom, whichever shall last happen, or if a second inhibition in regard to the same monition shall be issued within three years from the relaxation of an inhibition, any benefice or other ecclesiastical preferment held by the incumbent in the parish in which the church or burial ground is situate, or for the use of which the burial ground is legally provided, in relation to which church or burial ground such monition has been issued as aforesaid, shall thereupon become void, unless the bishop shall, for some special reason stated by him in writing, postpone for a period not exceeding three months the date at which, unless such inhibition be relaxed, such benefice or other ecclesiastical preferment shall become void as aforesaid; and upon any such avoidance it shall be lawful for the patron of such benefice or other ecclesiastical preferment to appoint, present, collate, or nominate to the same as if such incumbent were dead; and the provisions contained in" 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106, s. 58 (c), "in reference to notice to the patron, and as to lapse, shall be applicable to any benefice or other ecclesiastical preferment avoided under this act; and it shall not be lawful for the patron at any time to appoint, present, collate, or nominate to such benefice or such other ecclesiastical preferment the incumbent by whom the same was avoided under this act.

“The bishop may, during such inhibition, unless he is satisfied that due provision is otherwise made for the spiritual charge of the parish, make due provision for the service of the church and the cure of souls, and it shall be lawful for the bishop to raise the sum required from time to time for such provision by sequestration of the profits of such benefice or other ecclesiastical preferment.”

Provision for spiritual charge during inhibition.

“Any question as to whether a monition or order given or issued after proceedings before the bishop or judge, as the case may be, has or has not been obeyed shall be determined by the bishop or the judge, and any proceedings to enforce obedience to such monition or order shall be taken by direction of the judge.”

The statute makes no provision for enforcing obedience to an inhibition. It was, however, rather assumed than decided in Hudson v. Tooth (d) that the inhibition might be treated as an ordinary ecclesiastical decree or order, obedience to which might be enforced by signification and imprisonment; and that this assumption was right was finally decided by the House of Lords in Green v. Lord Penzance (e).

How obedience to inhibition may be enforced.

A monition may order discontinuance of matters charged, and “all practices, acts, matters, and things of the same or a like nature.” An inhibition reciting such a monition and disobedience in several specified matters mentioned in the monition and in some other matters not mentioned, was holden on prohibition good, because the judge would have jurisdiction (subject to appeal) to determine whether these matters were of like nature, and must be taken to have done so: and also because, omitting these disputed matters, there was enough disobedience to justify an inhibition for the full period (f).

How monition and inhibition may be construed.

Sect. 14. “It shall not be necessary to obtain a faculty from the ordinary in order lawfully to obey any monition issued under this act, and if the judge shall direct in any monition that a faculty shall be applied for, such fees only shall be paid for such faculty as may be directed by the rules and orders (g); provided that nothing in this act contained shall be construed to limit or control the discretion vested by law in the ordinary as

Faculty not necessary in certain cases.

(d) 2 P. D. p. 45.

(e) 6 App. Ca. p. 657. See also Dale's Case, Enraght's Case, 6 Q. B. D. p. 376; et vide supra, p. 1028.

(f) Enraght v. Lord Penzance, 7 App. Ca. p. 240.

(g) It is not easy to understand what is meant by this part of the section. Possibly it was intended to provide for orders made by the judge under this act when he is not also judge of the Arches or Chancery Court. The provision for applying for faculties under the direction of the judge may be intended for cases where a decoration has been set up without lawful authority (sect. 8 (1)), but is nevertheless such an one as the court might approve, and as to which a faculty to confirm might issue: vide supra, p. 1029, and infra, Part VI. Chap. II. sect. 6.

to the grant or refusal of a faculty : provided also, that a faculty shall, on application, be granted, if unopposed, on payment of such a fee (not exceeding two guineas) as shall be prescribed by the rules and orders, in respect of any alteration in or addition to the fabric of any church, or in respect of any ornaments or furniture, not being contrary to law, made or existing in any church at the time of the passing of this act."

notices.

Sect. 15. "All notices and other documents directed to be given to any person under this act shall be given in the manner prescribed by rules and orders."

Substitute for bishop when patron or in case of illness.

Sect. 16. "If any bishop shall be patron of the benefice or of any ecclesiastical preferment held by the incumbent respecting whom a representation shall have been made (h) or shall be unable from illness to discharge any of the duties imposed upon him by this act in regard to any representation, the archbishop of the province shall act in the place of such bishop in all matters thereafter arising in relation to such representation (i) ; and if any archbishop shall be patron of the benefice or of any ecclesiastical preferment held by the incumbent respecting whom a representation shall have been made, or shall be unable from illness to discharge any of the duties imposed upon him by this act in regard to any representation, her Majesty may, by her sign manual, appoint an archbishop or bishop to act in the place of such archbishop in all matters thereafter arising in relation to such representation (k)."

Provisions relating to cathedral or collegiate church.

Sect. 17. "The duties appointed under this act to be performed by the bishop of the diocese shall in the case of a cathedral or collegiate church be performed by the visitor thereof.

"If any complaint shall be made concerning the fabric, ornaments, furniture, or decorations of a cathedral or collegiate church, the person complained of shall be the dean and chapter of such cathedral or collegiate church (l), and in the event of obedience not being rendered to a monition relating to the fabric, ornaments, furniture, or decorations of such cathedral or collegiate church, the visitor or the judge, as the case may be, shall have power to carry into effect (m) the directions contained in such (h) In Serjeant v. Dale, 2 Q. B. D. p. 558, the bishop had only an alternate right of presentation; but he was ruled to be patron for this purpose.

(i) A somewhat analogous clause is to be found in 3 & 4 Vict. c. 86; vide supra, p. 1024.

(k) The last part of this section has no precedent in the act 3 & 4 Vict. c. 86.

(l) There is sometimes a doubt whether a church is or is not a collegiate church. This provision would seem to make it clear that only such churches as not being cathedrals have deans and chapters are collegiate churches within this act. Westminster and Windsor are the two principal if not the only collegiate churches under this act, and of them the crown is visitor. The operation of this section in their cases, first enabling the crown as visitor to send the complaint to the judge and then giving an appeal from the judge to the crown in council, seems not to have been considered.

monition, and, if necessary, to raise the sum required to defray the cost thereof by sequestration of the profits of the preferments held in such cathedral or collegiate church by the dean and chapter thereof.

“If any complaint shall be made concerning the ornaments of the minister in a cathedral or collegiate church, or as to the observance therein of the directions contained in the Book of Common Prayer, relating to the performance of the services, rites, and ceremonies ordered by the said book, or as to any alleged addition to, alteration of, or omission from such services, rites, and ceremonies in such cathedral or collegiate church, the person complained of shall be the clerk in holy orders alleged to have offended in the matter complained of; and the visitor or the judge, as the case may be, in the event of obedience not being rendered to a monition, shall have the same power as to inhibition, and the preferment held in such cathedral or collegiate church by the person complained of shall be subject to the same conditions as to avoidance, notice and lapse, and as to any subsequent appointment, presentation, collation, or nomination thereto, and as to due provision being made for the performance of the duties of such person, as are contained in this act concerning an incumbent to whom a monition has been issued, and concerning any benefice or other ecclesiastical preferment held by such incumbent” (n).

Sect. 18. “When a sentence has been pronounced by consent, or any suit or proceeding has been commenced against any incumbent under the act of the third and fourth year of the reign of her Majesty, chapter eighty-six, he shall not be liable to proceedings under this act in respect of the same matter; and no incumbent proceeded against under this act shall be liable to proceedings under the said act of the third and fourth year of the reign of her Majesty, in respect of any matter upon which judgment has been pronounced under this act.”

Limitation of proceedings against incumbent.

Sect. 19. “Her Majesty may by order in council, at any time either before or after the commencement of this act, by and with the advice of the Lord High Chancellor, the Lord Chief Justice of England, the judge to be appointed under this act, and the archbishops and bishops who are members of her Majesty’s Privy Council, or any two of the said persons, one of them being the Lord High Chancellor or the Lord Chief Justice of England, cause rules and orders to be made for regulating the procedure and settling the fees to be taken in proceedings under this act, so far as the same may not be expressly regulated by this act, and from time to time alter or amend such rules and orders (o).

Rules for settling procedure and fees under this act.

(n) Vide sect. 13 of the act, supra, p. 1032.

(o) These rules were first made by Order in Council of June 28, 1875. The second and existing rules were made by Order in Council of Feb. 22, 1879, and will be found in the Law Reports, 4 P. D. p. 250. Their validity was affirmed in Dale’s Case, Enraght’s Case, 6 Q. B. D. p. 376.

All rules and orders made in pursuance of this section shall be laid before each House of Parliament within forty days after the same are made, if parliament is then sitting, or if not, within forty days after the then next meeting of parliament; and if an address is presented to her Majesty by either of the said Houses within the next subsequent forty days on which the House shall have sat praying that any such rules may be annulled, her Majesty may thereupon by order in council annul the same, and the rules and orders so annulled shall thenceforth become void, without prejudice to the validity of any proceedings already taken under the same."

Saving.

Sect. 4 of the act provides (an unnecessary provision) that proceedings taken under it shall not fall under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 86, s. 23, prohibiting all proceedings against clerks except in conformity with its provisions (p).

Sect. 5 saves "any jurisdiction which may now be in force for the due administration of ecclesiastical law."

made use of.

Nine cases (including double proceedings against the late Mr. Dale and the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's) have been mentioned above as brought under this act. Of these three did not come to a hearing. It is believed that a few more than these nine so mentioned reached the stage of a "representation;" but were then stopped by the bishop. This is, as far as known, the sum total of the use, in twenty years, to which the act has been put.

CHAPTER X.

THE CLERGY DISCIPLINE ACT, 1892 (a).

OBSERVATIONS have been made in an earlier chapter on the variety of the present statutory modes of procedure against the clergy (b).

This act divides into two parts: the first applies to beneficed clergymen who have been convicted in the temporal courts of certain offences, and makes them, by reason of such conviction, liable to deprivation. The second part provides a new procedure for "Offences against Morality committed by clergymen."

As to the first part the act provides as follows:—

Sect. 1.—“(1.) If either—

- “(a) a clergyman is convicted of treason or felony, or is convicted on indictment of a misdemeanour, and on any such conviction is sentenced to imprisonment with hard labour or any greater punishment, or
- “(b) an order under the acts relating to bastardy is made on a clergyman, or
- “(c) a clergyman is found in a divorce or matrimonial cause to have committed adultery, or
- “(d) an order for judicial separation is made against a clergyman in a divorce or matrimonial cause, or
- “(e) a separation order is made against a clergyman under the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1878;

“then, after the date at which the conviction, order, or finding becomes conclusive, the preferment (if any) held by him shall, within twenty-one days, without further trial be declared by the bishop to be vacant as from the said date, and he shall be incapable, save as in this act mentioned, of holding preferment.

“(2.) Provided that if when so convicted he receives a free pardon from the Crown his incapacity shall cease, and if he receives the pardon before the institution of another clergyman to such preferment the bishop shall, within twenty-one days after receiving notice in writing of such pardon, again institute him and cause him to be inducted into the preferment, and no fee shall be payable to any person whomsoever in respect thereof.

On conviction of clergyman for treason, felony, or grave misdemeanour, or for certain other offences, ordinary to declare benefice of convicted clerk void.

Re-institution of clerk if pardoned by Crown and benefice not filled.

“(3.) If any act required under this section to be done by a default of bishop.

bishop is not done within the said twenty-one days it shall be done by or under the authority of the archbishop of the province."

Effect of section.

The provisions in s. 2 of 33 & 34 Vict. c. 23 (b), which make any office or benefice held by any one convicted of felony ipso facto void, appear to be both expanded and modified quoad beneficed clerks by this section.

The second part of the act contains all the sections except the first. It runs as follows:—

On conviction of clergyman in temporal courts of ecclesiastical offence, or complaint against clergyman for immorality.

Sect. 2. "If a clergyman either is convicted by a temporal court of having committed an act constituting an ecclesiastical offence, and the foregoing section does not apply to him, or is alleged to have been guilty of any immoral act, immoral conduct, or immoral habit, or of any offence against the laws ecclesiastical, being an offence against morality and not being a question of doctrine or ritual, he may be prosecuted by any of the parishioners of the parish in which such clergyman holds preferment, or by the bishop of the diocese, or by any person approved by the bishop, and tried in the consistory court of the diocese in which he holds preferment, and may be so prosecuted and tried in accordance with the prescribed procedure, subject as follows:—

bishop where charge
vague, &c.

"(a) If the complaint made against the clergyman appears to the bishop of the diocese to be too vague or frivolous to justify proceedings he shall disallow the prosecution (c):

Security for costs.

"(b) The prosecutor may at any stage of the proceedings be ordered to give security for costs, unless the offence alleged in the prosecution is one of which the clergyman has been convicted by a temporal court:

Trial of questions of fact by judge and assessors.

"(c) If any question of fact (other than the fact of the conviction of a temporal court) has to be determined, and either party to a case so requires, five assessors shall be chosen in the prescribed manner, and shall, for deciding a question of fact, be members of the court; and the decision of such question must either be the unanimous decision of the assessors, or that of the chancellor and at least a majority of the assessors:

Retrial in certain cases.

"(d) If no such decision is arrived at, the case shall, if either party so desires, be retried as soon as possible, with assessors chosen as before, save that no assessors who acted at the former trial shall act as assessors on the retrial:

Questions of law and costs.

"(e) The chancellor on any trial shall preside, and shall alone determine any question of law, and also any question of costs, and whether the question is one of possessed under the act 3 & 4 Vict. c. 86. Vide supra, p. 1018.

law or of fact shall be deemed to be a question of law”^(d).

Sect. 3.—“(1.) The assessors shall be chosen in the prescribed manner from the list of assessors who shall be elected as soon as possible after the commencement of this act, and every three years afterwards, as follows (that is to say) :—

Election of and mode of choosing assessors.

“(a) Three shall be elected from their own number by the members of the cathedral church of the diocese;

“(b) Four shall be elected from their own number by the beneficed clergy of each archdeaconry in the diocese; and

“(c) Five shall be elected from the justices of the county by the court of quarter sessions of each county wholly in the diocese, and of such of the counties partly in the diocese as may be prescribed.

“(2.) Provided that—

“(a) The consent of an assessor to serve shall be obtained before he is elected; and

“(b) If an assessor ceases to be one of the body from whom he is elected, or resigns, or dies, or becomes incapable of acting, the chancellor may declare a vacancy, and thereupon the vacancy may be filled by another election.

“(3.) When the presence of assessors is required, three clergymen and two laymen shall be chosen out of the assessors on the said list by ballot conducted by the registrar in the presence of such (if any) of the parties as desire to be present by themselves or their representatives.

“(4.) The assessors chosen shall be bound to attend when required, and if anyone fails so to attend without a reasonable excuse satisfactory to the chancellor he shall be disqualified for acting or being elected again as assessor, and the chancellor shall declare a vacancy, and the vacancy shall be filled by a new election.

“(5.) If any assessor is objected to by either party for reasons approved by the chancellor, he shall be discharged from serving.

“(6.) If by reason of any objection or of non-attendance or otherwise the requisite number of assessors is not obtained before the trial, the chancellor shall, if there is time, cause a clergyman or layman, as the case may require, to be chosen from the list of assessors by another ballot, but, if there is not time, shall

(d) This section gives very large power to the chancellor, and very little to the assessors (so called). The choice of this last word is of the oddest. An assessor originally was a legal adviser to a judge, who being judge by virtue of his office, ecclesiastical or civil, might possess common sense and honesty, but had not sufficient technical knowledge of law. Then technical or scientific experts came to be given to judges as assessors. But the province of the judge was still to decide upon the facts. The assessors under this act have to deal with the facts only, and are in fact jurymen with restricted powers. The assessors under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 86 are very different. Vide supra, p. 1021.

appoint some clergyman or layman, as the case may require, who is willing to serve, and is not objected to by either party for cause shown and deemed sufficient by the chancellor, to make up the full number of five assessors."

Appeals on question of law or fact.

Sect. 4.—“(1.) Either party to a case may appeal against any judgment of a consistory court under this act in respect of any matter of law.

“(2.) If a defendant desires to appeal against any judgment of a consistory court under this act in respect of the facts, he may petition for leave to appeal, and if he satisfies the appellate court that there is a prima facie case leave shall be given, and he may appeal.

“(3.) An appeal against any interlocutory judgment under this act, not having the force or effect of a definitive sentence upon the merits of the case, shall not be allowed except by leave of the court.

“(4.) An appeal or petition under this section shall be within the prescribed time and in accordance with the prescribed rules, and may (at the option of the appellant or petitioner) be to the provincial court or to her Majesty the Queen in Council, but if to the provincial court the decision of that court shall be final.

“(5.) If there is an appeal, the sentence shall be suspended until the appeal is determined or abandoned, and for the purpose of any inhibition be deemed not to have been given” (e).

Limitation of prosecutions and conclu-siveness of conviction,
&c.

Sect. 5.—“(1.) A complaint under this act for an offence shall not be made after five years from the date of the offence, or of the last of a series of acts alleged as part of the offence, except that complaint may be made within two years after a conviction by a temporal court becomes conclusive (f).

“(2.) A conviction, order, or finding shall become conclusive for the purposes of this act—

“(a) where there has been any appeal (whether by case reserved, special case, motion for new trial, writ of error, appeal, or otherwise), upon the date at which the appeal is dismissed or abandoned, or the proceedings on appeal are finally concluded; and

“(b) if there has been no such appeal, upon the expiration of the time limited for such appeal, or where no time is so limited of two months from the date of the conviction, order, or finding;

but, if varied on appeal, shall be conclusive only as so varied, and, so far as it is reversed on appeal shall cease to be of any effect.

“(4.) In the event of any such conviction, order, or finding, by or before a temporal court, as makes the preferment of a clergyman subject to be declared vacant, or renders a clergyman liable to prosecution under this act, the court shall cause the prescribed certificate of the conviction, order, or finding, to be sent to the bishop of the diocese in which the court sits, and such certificate shall be preserved in the registry of that diocese, or of any other diocese to which it may be sent by direction of the bishop.”

“(c) if he is sentenced to suspension for a term, he shall not, during that term, exercise or perform without leave of the court any right or duty of or incidental or attached to his preferment, nor reside in or within such distance from the house of residence of that preferment as is specified in the sentence, and shall not, at the end of the term, be re-admitted until he has satisfied the court of his good conduct during the term (g).

“(2.) Where by virtue of anything in or done under this act a clergyman becomes incapable of holding preferment, his incapacity—

“(a) shall cease if he receives a free pardon from the Crown (h); and

“(b) shall not extend to any preferment which the bishop of the diocese and archbishop of the province in which it is situate, after such public notice, if any, as they think desirable, allow him to hold.

“(2.) Every rule purporting to be made in pursuance of this section shall be forthwith laid before both Houses of Parliament, and if an address is presented to her Majesty the Queen by either House within the next forty days thereafter on which that House has sat, praying that any such rule may be annulled, her Majesty in Council may annul the same, without prejudice to the validity of anything done in the meantime in pursuance thereof; but subject as aforesaid, every such rule shall, while unrevoked, be of the same validity as if enacted in this act.”

Sect. 12 gives the following definitions, “unless the context otherwise requires”—

Definitions.

“Clergyman” means a clergyman, not being a bishop of a diocese, who is in holy orders in the Church of England, or who, though ordained by a bishop of another church, is permitted to officiate as a priest or deacon of the Church of England :

“Chancellor” means the judge of the consistory court by whatever name known :

“Provincial court” means as respects the province of Canterbury the Arches Court of Canterbury, and as respects the province of York the Chancery Court of York :

“County” includes a riding or division having a separate court of quarter sessions :

“Member of a cathedral church” means any dean, residentiary canon, non-residentiary canon, prebendary, or honorary canon of that church :

“Archdeaconry” includes the Isle of Ely :

(m) This section would seem to render it doubtful whether the Commissary Court of Surrey which has consistorial jurisdiction over the portion of the diocese of Winchester within the county of Surrey can entertain cases under this act.

"Judicial appointment" includes a chairmanship of quarter sessions and a police or stipendiary magistrateship :

"Judgment" includes decree and order :

"Prescribed" means prescribed by rules made in pursuance of this act :

The expressions "immoral act," "immoral conduct," and "immoral habit" shall include such acts, conduct, and habits as are proscribed by the seventy-fifth and one hundred and ninth canons issued by the Convocation of the Province of Canterbury in the year one thousand six hundred and three (m).

Exclusion of question of doctrine or ritual, and savings.

Sect. 13.—Sub-section 1 provides that nothing in this act shall

"(a) render a clergyman liable to be tried or sentenced under this act in respect of any question of doctrine or ritual ; or

"(b) affect any prerogative of her Majesty the Queen as respects pardon or otherwise ; or

"(c) affect the liability of a clergyman to any prosecution, action, or proceeding, in any court other than an ecclesiastical court, but if he can be prosecuted under this act for an offence, any other criminal proceeding against him for that offence shall not be instituted in an ecclesiastical court."

Sub-section 2 enacts:—"This act shall apply only to a clergyman who either holds preferment within the meaning of this act, or resides or has committed the offence in England or Wales ; and where a clergyman holds a licence from a bishop in England or Wales, this act shall apply to that clergyman, notwithstanding that he resides elsewhere, as if he held preferment in the diocese of that bishop."

Short title, commencement of act, and repeal.

By Sect. 14, "(1.) This act may be cited as the Clergy Discipline Act, 1892.

"(2.) This act shall come into operation at the expiration of three months next after it passes, and, so far as regards any prosecution and trial under this act, apply to offences committed before or after the passing or commencement thereof.

"(3.) The Church Discipline Act, 1840, shall, except so far as the sections in the schedule to this act are applied by this act, be repealed as respects any proceeding instituted after the commencement of this act against a clergyman for an offence for which he can be prosecuted or his benefice declared vacant under this act."

Rules.

Rules under sect. 9 were made in 1892 and 1893, and are published by the Queen's Printers, and in vol. 62 of the "Law Journal," and "Statutory Rules and Orders" for 1892 and 1893.

CHAPTER XI.

VISITATION.

- SECT. 1.—General Law.
 2.—Bishop's Triennial Visitation.
 3.—Archidiaconal Visitation.
 4.—Royal Visitation.

SECT. 1.—General Law.

FOR the government of the church and the correction of offences, visitations of parishes and dioceses were instituted in the ancient church, that so all possible care might be taken to have good order kept in all places (a).

For the first six hundred years after Christ, the bishops in their own persons visited all the parishes within their respective dioceses every year, and they had several deacons in every diocese to assist them. After that they had authority in case of sickness or other public concerns, to delegate priests or deacons to assist them; and hereupon, as should seem, they cantoned their great dioceses into archdeaconries, and gave the archdeacons commissions to visit and inquire, and to give them an account of all at the end of their visitations; and the bishops reserved the third year to themselves, to inform themselves (amongst other things) how the archdeacons, their substitutes, performed their duties (b).

By a constitution of Otho, archbishops and bishops shall go about their dioceses at fit seasons, correcting and reforming the churches, and consecrating and sowing the word of life in the Lord's field (c).

And, regularly, the order to be observed therein is this: In a diocesan visitation, the bishop is first to visit his cathedral church; afterwards the diocese. In a metropolitical visitation, the archbishop is first to visit his own church and diocese; then in every diocese to begin with the cathedral church and proceed thence as he pleases to the other parts of the diocese. Which appears from abundance of instances in the ecclesiastical records, as well of papal dispensations for the archbishop to visit without observing the said order, as of episcopal licences for the visitor to begin in other parts of the diocese than in the cathedral church (d).

And this sprang from the precept of the canon law, which requires that the archbishop willing to visit his province shall first visit the chapter of his own church and city, and his own diocese; and after he has once visited all the dioceses of his province, it shall be lawful for him (having first required the advice of his suffragans, and the same being settled before them, which shall be put in writing that all may know thereof) to visit again, according to the order aforesaid, although his suffragans shall not assent thereunto. And the like form of visiting observed by the archbishops shall be observed also by the bishops in their ordinary visitations (e).

Difference between visitor of charitable foundation and ecclesiastical visitor.

The office of visitor of a charitable foundation was probably derived from the ecclesiastical visitor; but there is considerable difference between their powers. The visitor of a charity acts under the direction, express or implied, of the founder, as to whom the maxim is cujus est dare ejus est disponere. Such a visitor is tied to no forms; he decides summarily and without appeal, and may suspend or deprive any beneficiary or officer of the foundation, either for fault or for contumacy. The only restrictions upon him are that he should observe such obvious rules of justice, as, for example, to give any accused person the opportunity of self-defence (f). But the ecclesiastical visitor, though he may decide summarily and with little attention to form, yet sits in a certain sense in a court, and is liable to the same appeals as he would be in his ordinary court. And on ecclesiastical visitations the visitor might (till the passing of 3 & 4 Vict. c. 86) proceed to suspend or deprive for contumacy or crime, subject to the right of appeal (g).

General
ecclesiastical visitor.

But a prohibition has been issued to a bishop, who claimed a right to present by lapse, under pretence of his visitatorial authority, to the office of a canon residentiary of his church, it being a freehold office, and the right of election thereto in the dean and chapter; nor does it seem certain that by virtue of his visitatorial power he may, in a case where the dean and chapter have neglected or refused to appoint such a canon, appoint one pro tempore until such election be had (h).

The two leading modern cases on the power of an ecclesiastical visitor have arisen in cathedral cases; the earlier one is that of York, in 1840; the later, that of Exeter, in 1874.

In the former case the Archbishop of York held a visitation of the dean and chapter of that cathedral church, and appointed the late Dr. Phillimore his commissary, for the purpose of carrying it into effect (i). The Dean of York's Case.

Among the presentments made to the commissary was one which charged the dean with the sale of the livings in his ecclesiastical patronage. The dean denied the jurisdiction of the commissary to try the charge, and conducting himself with violence in court, was pronounced in contempt, for which he refused to purge himself during the trial. The commissary proceeded to try the charge in the visitatorial court, witnesses were examined vivâ voce, and their depositions taken down by the registrar. Finally, the commissary, in a judgment already quoted from (j), pronounced the dean guilty of simony, and to have incurred the penalty of deprivation on the twofold ground of contumacious behaviour and simoniacal practices. Proceedings at visitation.

The dean applied for a prohibition, after sentence, to the Court of Queen's Bench (k). For the prohibition it was argued, that the commissary had exceeded the limits of the visitatorial jurisdiction, even as it stood before the 3 & 4 Vict. c. 86, as the proceedings ought to have been by articles, like all criminal suits in the ecclesiastical courts; but since the statute of 3 & 4 Vict. the whole trial was clearly illegal,—that the chapter of York were exempted from the visitatorial power of the ordinary,—that the proceedings were bad in the absence of the party accused,—that evidence was taken vivâ voce. On the other hand it was argued against the prohibition, that jure ordinario, every bishop or metropolitan might visit his cathedral,—that if he might visit he might punish, and therefore deprive if the offence was of a magnitude to require such punishment,—that the 3 & 4 Vict. c. 86 was framed alio intuitu,—that the visitatorial rights required express words to take them away,—that they were saved by sect. 25 of that act (l),—that such power had been exercised in the case of the Dean of Wells (m),—that there was a court of appeal (the judicial committee of the privy council) which would correct the judgment if wrong,—that it was competent to a visitor to pro- Application for prohibition.

ceed summariè, as in the case of a college, the power of the visitor being the same in both cases,—that it was too late to apply for a prohibition after sentence.

Judgment in prohibition.

The Court of Queen's Bench decided wholly on the ground that such a proceeding was a "criminal suit or proceeding against a clerk in holy orders" for an "offence against the laws ecclesiastical" within the meaning of sect. 23 of 3 & 4 Vict. c. 86, and was therefore forbidden by that section.

The judgment is thus summed up :

"We are constrained to conclude, that the most reverend prelate, in so far as he proceeded in his visitation to deprive the dean, has acted beyond his jurisdiction. We therefore decline to enter upon the consideration of the numerous points of objection raised against other portions of the proceeding of the learned commissary. But there is one which is not unfit to be disposed of ; it was argued that the sentence was final, and that there was nothing now remaining which this court could prohibit from being done, and that there was not even a continuing court to which our writ could be addressed." After giving other reasons why this argument was inapplicable, the court proceeded : "And it is plain that the dean could not apply before sentence, for the sentence of deprivation is the only thing done which is beyond the jurisdiction of the archbishop. Up to that point his grace unquestionably had power to inquire with a view to ulterior proceedings, and it seems that the lord chancellor discharged an application for a prohibition that had been made to him before sentence upon that very ground" (m).

Submission of dean to visitor.

At a subsequent stage of the visitation the dean appeared and read a paper expressive of regret for his contumacy, and for his having sold, whether illegally or not, the livings in his gift ; whereupon the commissary absolved him from his contumacy.

The Exeter Reredos Case.

The Exeter case has already been referred to (n). In that case a prebendary of the cathedral petitioned the bishop as visitor, complaining of a reredos recently erected in the cathedral by the dean and chapter, and the bishop held a visitation directed to that matter only. He was assisted by the late Mr. Justice Keating as assessor. The dean and chapter appeared under protest, and objected that there was no jurisdiction. But the bishop, acting under the advice of his assessor, overruled the objection, and decided that the reredos both was unlawful in itself, and had been unlawfully erected, as no faculty had been obtained for it, and ordered it to be removed. On appeal the Court of Arches held, first, that there was an appeal ; secondly, that the bishop had no jurisdiction to make such an order ; thirdly, that the reredos was not unlawful per se ; and, fourthly, that a faculty was not required by a dean and chapter before they made alterations in their cathedral (o). On further appeal, the Privy Council held that the bishop had jurisdiction, but in other respects agreed with the Court of Arches, and, therefore, reversed the bishop's judgment (p). Further appeal to Privy Council.

The joint result of these two cases seems to be that the bishop may visit and may inquire and may make orders; and that contumacy at the visitation or disobedience to the orders of the visitor will be the ecclesiastical offence of disobedience to the lawful orders of the ordinary (q), which will have to be punished by separate and substantive proceedings. This is substantially the view which Sir Robert Phillimore took in the first edition of this work, as will be seen on reference to the last paragraph of the next section. Result of these cases.

SECT. 2.—Triennial Visitation by Bishop.

By Can. 60 of 1603, for the office of confirmation, it is enjoined, that the bishop or his suffragan shall perform that office in his visitation every third year; and if in that year, by reason of some infirmity, he be not able personally to visit, then he shall not omit the same the next year after, as he may conveniently (r). Can. 60.

Upon which Dr. Gibson observes that by the ancient canon law, visitations were to be once a year; but it is to be noted, that those canons were intended of parochial visitations, or a personal repairing to every church; as appears not only from the assignment of procurations (originally in provisions and afterwards in money) for the reception of the bishop; but also by the indulgence which the law grants in special cases, where every church cannot be conveniently repaired to, of calling together the clergy and laity from several parts unto one convenient place that the visitation of them may not be postponed. From this indulgence, and the great extent of the dioceses, grew the custom of citing clergy and people to attend visitations at particular places; the times of which visitations, as they are now usually fixed about Easter and Michaelmas, have evidently sprung from the two yearly synods of the clergy, which the canons of the church required to be holden by every bishop about those two seasons, to consider of the state of the church and religion within the respective dioceses: an end that is also answered by the presentments that are there made concerning the manners of the people; as they used to be made to the bishop at his visitation of every particular church. But as to parochial visitation, or the inspection into the fabrics, mansions, utensils and ornaments of the church, that care has been long devolved upon the archdeacons; who at their first institution in the ancient church were only to attend the bishops at their Origin of present practice.

ordinations, and other public services in the cathedral; but being afterwards occasionally employed by them in the exercise of jurisdiction, not only the work of parochial visitation, but also the holding of general synods or visitations when the bishop did not visit, came by degrees to be known and established branches of the archidiaconal office as such; which by this means attained to the dignity of ordinary, instead of delegated, jurisdiction. And by these degrees came on the present law and practice of triennial visitations by bishops; so as the bishop is not only not obliged by law to visit annually, but (what is more) is restrained from it (s).

Reformatio Legum.

The Reformatio Legum Ecclesiasticarum contains the following provision on this subject: "Episcopus . . . diocesim totam . . . tertio quoque anno visitet, et consuetas procuraciones accipiat: ut vero aliis temporibus quoties visum fuerit, visitet propter novos casus qui incidere possint, ei liberum esto modo suis impensis id faciat, et nova onera stipendiorum aut procurationum ab ecclesiis non exigit" (t).

Inhibition
during the time of
visitation.

In the bishop's triennial, as also in regal and metropolitical, visitations, all inferior jurisdictions respectively are inhibited from exercising jurisdiction, during such visitation. And we find, in the time of Archbishop Winchelsey, a bishop prosecuted for exercising jurisdiction before the relaxation of the inhibition; and in Archbishop Tillotson's time, a bishop suspended, for acting after the inhibition. And even matters begun in the court of the inferior ordinary (whether contentious or voluntary) before the visitation of the superior, are to be carried on by the authority of such superior (u).

Grant of
not unusual.

However, it has not been unusual, especially in metropolitical visitations, to indulge the bishops and inferior courts, in whole or in part, in the exercise of jurisdiction, pending the visitation. Thus, we find relaxations granted, pending the visitation, by Archbishop Abbot; and by others, an unlimited leave or commission, to exercise jurisdiction, or proceed in cases, notwithstanding the visitation; and elsewhere, a leave to confer orders, confirm, grant fiats for institution, institute, or correct, whilst the inhibition continued in other respects (x).

Power of punishment reserved.

After the relaxation of the inhibition, and especially in metropolitical visitations, we find not only reservations of power to rectify and punish the comperta et detecta, but also special commissions issued for that end (y).

ment for their contumacy. Probably in the present state of the law the offender must be articulated against under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 86; but he is certainly liable to punishment and to the costs incurred by his contumacy (z).

Bishops on their visitations used to be entitled to receive procurations (a). It seems, however, that where the estates of bishops have vested in the ecclesiastical commissioners under 23 & 24 Vict. c. 124 (b), these procurations have become payable to the commissioners, who have, however, abandoned their collection (c). Episcopal procurations.

SECT. 3.—Archidiaconal Visitation.

Lindwood says, the archdeacon, although there be not a cause, may visit once a year: but if there be cause, he may visit oftener. Nor does it hinder, where it is said in the canon law, that he ought to visit from three years to three years: for this is to be understood so that he shall visit from three years to three years of necessity, but he may visit every year if he will (d). How often to take place.

Langton. "The archdeacons in their visitation shall see that the offices of the church be duly administered; and shall take an account in writing of all the ornaments and utensils of the churches, and also of the vestments and books; which they shall cause to be presented before them every year for their inspection, that they may see what have been added, or what have been lost" (e). That they may see.—Therefore the archdeacon ought to go to the place in person to visit, and not to send any other; which if he do, he shall not have the procurations (due upon the account of visiting) in money: but otherwise, he whom he shall send shall receive procurations for himself and his attendants in victuals (f).

and generally of temporals and spirituals; and what they shall find to want correction, that they correct diligently. And when they visit, correct or punish crimes, they shall not presume to take anything of any one (save only moderate procurations), nor to give sentence against any persons unjustly, whereby to extort money from them. For whereas these and such like things do savour of simony, we decree, that they who do such things shall be compelled by the bishop to lay out twice as much for pious uses; saving nevertheless other canonical punishment against them. And they shall endeavour frequently to be present at the chapters in every deanry, and therein instruct the clergy (amongst other things) to live well, and to have a sound knowledge and understanding in performing the divine offices" (g).

"We enjoin the archdeacons and their officials, that in the visitation of churches they have a diligent regard to the fabric of the church, and especially of the chancel, to see if they want repair: and if they find any defects of that kind, they shall limit a certain time under a penalty within which they shall be repaired. Also, they shall inquire by themselves or their officials, in the parishes where they visit, if there be ought in things or persons which wanteth to be corrected: and if they shall find any such, they shall correct the same either then or in the next chapter (i).

And their Officials.]—Here it seems to be intimated, that the archdeacon's official may visit; which yet is not true, at least in his own right; yet he may do this in the right of the archdeacon, when the archdeacon himself is hindered (k).

Stratford. "Forasmuch as archdeacons and other ordinaries in their visitations finding defects as well in the churches as in the ornaments thereof and the fences of the churchyard and in the houses of the incumbents, do command them to be repaired under pecuniary penalties, and from those that obey not do extort the said penalties by censures, wherewith the said defects ought to be repaired, and thereby enrich their own purses to the damage of the poor people: therefore that there may be no occasion of complaint against the archdeacons and other ordinaries and their ministers by reason of such penal exactions, and that it becometh not ecclesiastical persons to gape after or enrich themselves with dishonest and penal acquisitions, we do ordain, that such penalties, so often as they shall be exacted, shall be converted to the use of such repairs, under pain of suspension ab officio which they shall ipso facto incur until they shall effectually assign what was so received to the reparation of the said defects (l).

Upon which certificate we desire the said high commissioners will ex officio mero send for such parties and compel them to obey the just and lawful decrees of such ecclesiastical ordinaries making such certificate."

The original parochial libraries, which come under the operation of the statute of Anne, 7 Anne, c. 14, are by sect. 3 of that statute to be inquired after by the ordinary at his visitation. The visitation articles in use in the diocese of Lincoln contain an article directed to this end.

Parochial
libraries.

In the year 1626, Mr. Huntley, rector of Stourmouth, was required by Dr. Kingsley, archdeacon of Canterbury, to preach a visitation sermon, which he refused: and being cited before the high commissioners, it was urged that he was bound to the performance of that office in pursuance of the archdeacon's mandate, by virtue of his oath of canonical obedience. He answered that he was not a licensed preacher according to the Canons of 1603, and especially that he was not bound thereunto by his said oath, which implied only an obedience according to the canon law, as it is in force in this realm; and that there is no canon, foreign or domestic, which required him to do this; but on the contrary, that the ancient canon law enjoined the visitor himself to preach at his own visitation. But the court admonished him to comply; and on his refusal, fined him 500*l.*, and imprisoned him till he should pay the same, and also make submission; and afterwards degraded and deprived him. But this is one instance, amongst others, in which that court whilst it subsisted carried matters with a pretty high hand (n).

Visitation
sermon.

By Can. 137, "Forasmuch as a chief and principal cause and use of visitation is, that the bishop, archdeacon, or other assigned to visit, may get some knowledge of the state, sufficiency and ability of the clergy, and other persons whom they are to visit; we think it convenient that every parson, vicar, curate, schoolmaster, or other person licensed whosoever, do at the bishop's first visitation, or at the next visitation after his admission, show and exhibit unto him his letters of orders, institution, and induction, and all other his dispensations, licences, or faculties whatsoever, to be by the said bishop either allowed, or (if there be just cause) disallowed and rejected: and being by him approved, to be (as the custom is) signed by the register: and that the whole fees accustomed to be paid in the visitations in respect of the premises be paid only once in the whole time of every bishop, and afterwards but half of the said accustomed fees in every other visitation during the said bishop's continuance."

To be by the said Bishop allowed.—None but the bishop, or other person exercising ecclesiastical authority by commission from him, has right de jure communi to require these exhibits of the clergy; nor does the enacting part of this canon convey the right to any other; and therefore if any archdeacons are entitled to require exhibits in their visitations, it must be upon the foot of custom, the beginning whereof has probably been an encroachment; since it is not likely that any bishop should give to the archdeacon and his official a power of allowing or disallowing such instruments as have been granted by himself or his predecessors (o).

Whole Fees.—In the registry of Archbishop Islip, there is a sequestration of the benefices of divers clergymen refusing to make due exhibits in a visitation (p).

And afterwards but Half of the said accustomed Fees.—Lindwood, speaking of the letters of orders to be exhibited by stipendiary curates going from one diocese to another, says, that after the archdeacon or his official or other ordinary has satisfied himself of their orders and of their life and conversation, they may be admitted to officiate, and their names ought to be entered in the register of such ordinary; whereupon in other visitations or inquiries, their letters of orders ought not to be reinspected, nor their names to be entered again, seeing they are sufficiently known already: and so they do ill (he says) who in every of their visitations take something for the inspection and approbation of the said letters of orders, seeing such entry ought not to be made but once, namely, at the first admission (q).

take care of the goods, repairs and ornaments of the church, as appears by the ancient register of writs; yet this work of presenting has been devolved on them and their assistants by canons and constitutions of a more modern date. Anciently the way was to select a certain number, at the discretion of the ordinary, to give information upon oath; which number the rule of the canon law upon this head evidently supposes to have been selected while the synod was sitting, and the people as well as clergy in attendance there. But in process of time this method was changed, and it was directed in the citation that four, six or eight, according to the proportion of the district, should appear (together with the clergy) to represent the people, and to be the testes synodales (u).

But all this while we find nothing of churchwardens presenting, but the style of the books is, "The parishioners say," "The laymen say," and the like, until a little before the Reformation, when the churchwardens began to present, either by themselves, or else with two or three more parishioners of credit joined with them. And this last (by the way) is evidently the origin of that office which our canons do call the office of sidesmen or assistants (x).

In the beginning of the reign of King James the First, a commissary had cited many persons of several parishes to appear before him at his visitation; and because they appeared not, they were excommunicated. But a prohibition was granted, because the ordinary has not power to cite any into that court, except the churchwardens and sidemen (y).

Can. 113 providing that the parson, vicar, or curate may join in every presentment with the churchwardens and sidemen at the times of visitation, "if they the said churchwardens and the rest will present such enormities as are apparent in the parish," or if they will not, then may by themselves present, has been already given at length (z).

Can. 114 as to presenting Popish recusants is obsolete.

By Can. 116, "No church-wardens, quest-men, or side-men of any parish, shall be enforced to exhibit their presentments to any having ecclesiastical jurisdiction, above once in every year, where it hath been no oftener used, nor above twice in every diocese whatsoever, except it be at the bishop's visitation; for the which presentments of every parish church or chapel, the register of any court where they are to be exhibited shall not receive in one year above fourpence; under pain, for every offence therein, of suspension from the execution of his office for the space of a month toties quoties, Provided always that, as good occasion shall require, it shall be lawful for every minister, church-wardens and side-men to present offenders as often as they shall think

Canon 119.
Articles of inquiry.

By Can. 119, "For the avoiding of such inconveniences as heretofore have happened by the hasty making of bills of presentments upon the days of visitation and synods, it is ordered, That always hereafter, every chancellor, archdeacon, commissary and official, and every other person having ecclesiastical jurisdiction, at the ordinary time when the churchwardens are sworn; and the archbishop and bishops, when he or they do summon their visitation, shall deliver or cause to be delivered to the church-wardens, quest-men and side-men of every parish, or to some of them, such books of articles as they or any of them shall require, for the year following, the said church-wardens, quest-men and side-men to ground their presentments upon, at such times as they are to exhibit them. In which book shall be contained the form of the oath, which must be taken immediately before every such presentment; to the intent that having beforehand time sufficient, not only to peruse and consider what their said oath shall be, but the articles also whereupon they are to ground their presentments, they may frame them at home both advisedly and truly, to the discharge of their own consciences after they are sworn as becometh honest and godly men."

Frame them at Home.—By an entry in one of our records about 200 years ago, says Bishop Gibson, the ancient way of making presentments seems to have been the ordinary's examination of the synodal witnesses, and the taking their directions and presentments by word of mouth, and then immediately entering them in the acts of the visitation. And although presentments are now required to be framed at home, there is no doubt but every visitor has the same right of personal examination that ancient visitors had, as often as he shall find occasion (a).

By reason of several disputes which have been made concerning the articles of inquiry, the convocation has sometimes attempted to frame one general body of articles for visitations, but the same as yet has not been brought to effect (b).

committed by the said criminous persons, as also the common fame which is spread abroad of them, whereby they are often maligned and sometimes troubled by the said delinquents or their friends; we do admonish and exhort all judges both ecclesiastical and temporal, as they regard and reverence the fearful judgment-seat of the highest Judge, that they admit not in any of their courts, any complaint, plea, suit or suits, against any such church-wardens, quest-men, side-men or other church officers, for making any such presentments, nor against any minister for any presentments that he shall make; all the said presentments tending to the restraint of shameless impiety, and considering that the rules both of charity and government do presume, that they did nothing therein of malice, but for the discharge of their consciences."

The person accused in those days was required to answer upon oath to the charge laid against him, and to bring his compurgators; but the oath ex officio being now abolished (c), it is wrong and unlawful to present any person upon common fame only without proof. not now lawful.

It is not enough to present that such a one has committed fornication, or the like, but the person ought to be named with whom he committed the offence, and that there is a public fame thereof; otherwise upon such a general and uncertain presentment, the person accused cannot know how to make his defence, and there may be cause of appeal (d). Presentments in what manner to be made.

By Can. 117, "No church-wardens, quest-men or side-men shall be called or cited, but only at the said time or times before limited, to appear before any ecclesiastical judge whosoever, for refusing at other times to present any faults committed in their parishes, and punishable by ecclesiastical laws. Neither shall they, nor any of them, after their presentments exhibited at any of those times, be any further troubled for the same, except upon manifest and evident proof it may appear, that they did then willingly and wittingly omit to present some such public crime or crimes as they knew to be committed, or could not be ignorant that there was then a public fame of them, or unless there be very just cause to call them for the explanation of their former presentments. In which case of wilful omission, their ordinaries shall proceed against them in such sort, as in causes of wilful perjury in a court ecclesiastical it is already provided." Canon 117.

By Can. 118, "The office of all church-wardens and side-men shall be reputed ever hereafter to continue until the new church-wardens that shall succeed them be sworn, which shall be the first week after Easter, or some week following, according to the direction of the Ordinary; which time so appointed shall always be one of the two times in every year when the minister and church-wardens and side-men of every parish shall exhibit to their several ordinaries the presentments of such enormities as Canon 118.

And this duty they shall perform before the newly chosen church-wardens and side-men be sworn, and shall not be suffered to pass over the said presentments to those that are newly come into office, and are by intendment ignorant of such crimes; under pain of those censures which are appointed for the reformation of such dalliers and dispensers with their own consciences and oaths."

It is enjoined by Can. 26, that no minister shall admit to the holy communion any churchwardens or sides-men who wittingly and willingly, desperately and irreligiously, incur the horrible crime of perjury in neglecting or refusing to present such enormities and public offences as they know themselves to be committed in their said parishes, or are notoriously offensive to the congregation, although they be urged by some of their neighbours, or by their minister, or by the ordinary himself, to discharge their consciences by presenting them (d).

Selby's case.

In Selby's case (e), in 1680, a prohibition was prayed to the archdeacon of Exeter, because he proceeded to excommunicate the plaintiff, for that he, being churchwarden, refused to present a notorious delinquent, being admonished. And a prohibition was granted: for they are not to direct the churchwarden to present at their pleasure; but if one churchwarden refuses to present, he may be presented by his successor.

Canon 121.
None to be presented twice for the same offence.

By Can. 121 of 1603, "In places where the bishop and archdeacon do by prescription or composition visit at several times in one and the same year (f), lest for one and the self-same fault any of his majesty's subjects should be challenged and molested in divers ecclesiastical courts, we order and appoint, that every archdeacon or his official, within one month after the visitation ended that year, and the presentments received, shall certify under his hand and seal, to the bishop, or his chancellor, the names and crimes of all such as are detected and presented in his said visitation, to the end the chancellor shall thenceforth forbear to convent any person for any crime or cause so detected or presented to the archdeacon. And the chancellor, within the like time after the bishop's visitation ended and presentments received, shall under his hand and seal signify to the archdeacon or his official the names and crimes of all such persons, which shall be detected or presented unto him in that visitation, to the same intent as is aforesaid. And if these officers shall not certify each other as is here prescribed, or after such certificate shall intermeddle with the crimes or persons detected and presented in each other's visitation; then every of them so offending shall be suspended from all exercise of his jurisdiction, by the bishop of the diocese, until he shall repay the costs and expenses which the parties grieved have been at by that vexation" (g).

The Common Pleas, in 1862, and the Exchequer Chamber, in 1864, decided that the registrar of an archdeaconry court could recover his fees for attendance at the archdeacon's visitation against the churchwardens of the parishes visited (h). Fees payable at visitations.

The Queen's Bench, however, in 1870, held that the liability of the churchwardens to pay the registrar was not personal, and that if they had no funds in their hands for the repairs of the church or any other expenses of their office, and were without the means of obtaining funds except by voluntary subscriptions, they were not liable to pay the fees (i). When not recoverable.

By the table of fees, fixed according to 30 & 31 Vict. c. 135 (k), and published in the London Gazette of March 19, 1869, the fees on visitations are fixed as follows:— Table of fees fixed in pursuance of 30 & 31 Vict. c. 135.

"The chancellor's fee includes the attendance of the chancellor or his surrogate, the examination of the presentments of the outgoing churchwardens and the admission of the new churchwardens to office. The registrar's fee includes the drawing and issuing of the inhibition and of the mandate for the citation of the clergy; the preparation of the visitation books and of the articles of inquiry, and of the presentment papers; the attendance at the visitation and attesting the presentments and declarations of the churchwardens; the registering the papers exhibited by the clergy; the tabulating in the registry the copies of the register books of baptisms and burials, and other papers required to be annually transmitted. The apparitor's fee includes the preparation and delivery of the citations to the clergy and churchwardens, and the attendance at the visitation."

inferior clergy; wherein custom, as to the quantum, shall prevail (m).

Anciently by provisions in kind.

These procurations were anciently made by procuring victuals and other provisions in specie; concerning which constitutions have been ordained in England in accordance with the general canon law (n).

But by a constitution of Stratford, "No procuration shall be due without actually visiting; and if any shall visit more churches than one in one day, he shall have but one procuration, to be proportioned amongst the said churches. And because sometimes the retinue of a visitor exceedeth the number of men and horses appointed by the canons, so that they who pay their procurations in victuals are excessively burdened beyond the rate which is usually paid in money, it shall be in the choice of the visited to pay the same in money or in provisions (o).

Procurations now converted into money.

And this last constitution, by putting it in the choice of the incumbent, whether he would entertain the visitor in provisions or compound for it by a certain sum of money, was the cause of the custom generally prevailing afterwards, and which now universally obtains, of a fixed payment in money, instead of a procuration in meat, drink, provender, and other accommodation (p).

Whether due when no visitation is made.

Procuration is due to the person visiting, of common right; and although originally due by reason of visitation only, yet the same may be due without actual visitation. The foregoing constitutions limit the payment, whether in provisions or money, to actual visitation, and warrant the denial of them when no visitation is holden. Upon which a doubt has been raised, whether those archdeacons who are not permitted to visit, but are inhibited from doing it in the bishop's triennial visitation, have a right to require procurations for that year. They who have maintained the negative, build their opinion upon the express letter both of the ancient canon law, and of our own provincial constitutions. But others, who undertake to defend the rights of the archdeacons, allege that, though it might be reasonable that they lose their procurations, in case they neglect their office of visiting (which, by the way, was all that the ancient constitutions meant), yet that reason does not hold when they are restrained and inhibited from it; and that procurations are rated in the valuation of King Henry VIII. as part of the revenues of every archdeacon, who therefore paid a certain annual tenth for them; and the law could never intend the payment of the tenth part every year, if there had been any year in which he was not to receive the nine parts. Which two arguments (Dr. Gibson says) are so strong in favour of the archidiaconal rights, the first in reason, and the second in law as well as reason, that no more need to be said upon that head (q).

Procurations are suable only in the spiritual court, and are merely an ecclesiastical duty (r). And may be levied by sequestration or other ecclesiastical process (s).

In Saunderson v. Claget (t), in 7 Geo. 1, Dr. Claget, Archdeacon of Sudbury, commenced a suit in the Consistory Court of Norwich, against Saunderson, as proprietor or curate of the impropriate rectory of Aspal in Suffolk, for the annual sum of 6s. 8d. as a procuration or proxy due to the archdeacon for visitations. Saunderson moved the Court of King's Bench for a prohibition, and suggested that this was a rectory impropriate, without any vicar endowed; that all the tithes and profits belonged to the proprietor, who at his own expense used to provide a curate to celebrate divine service at the parish church. But the court held: 1, That this was an ecclesiastical duty, and therefore properly suable for in the spiritual court: 2, That it was claimed both by and from an ecclesiastical person, which made it the stronger: 3, That though there was an impropriation in the case, still there must be a curate to take care of the souls of the parishioners, and that curates as well as other persons must stand in need of bishops' or archdeacons' instructions and visitation: consequently, 4, That the ordinary or archdeacon ought to be allowed for his procuration what had been usually paid for it, which here appeared to be 6s. 8d.: 5, That where a thing is claimed by custom in the spiritual court, it must be intended according to their construction of a custom; and by their law, forty years make a custom or prescription.

If there be a parsonage and a vicarage endowed, only one is to pay procurations; but which of them must pay is to be directed by custom, or the endowment, if extant (u).

To assign, name, and authorize.—Lord Coke said, it was resolved by all the judges, that if this act had never been made, the king or queen of England for the time being might have made such an ecclesiastical commission by the ancient prerogative and law of England (e); but Bishop Stillingfleet (f) denies that "our ancient law doth give the king a power, by virtue of his ecclesiastical jurisdiction, to appoint commissioners, by an extraordinary way of jurisdiction, to proceed in primâ instantiâ against parsons by ecclesiastical censures;" and Bishop Gibson agrees with this learned prelate.

To visit.—“This branch was enacted out of necessity, for that the bishops and most of the clergy being then popish, it was necessary to raise a commission to deprive them who would not deprive themselves, and to have a more summary proceeding than by the ordinary and prolix course of law is required.” To this effect my Lord Coke. But Bishop Stillingfleet believes that they were deprived by a particular commission for that purpose; which the queen might grant in virtue of this act by the same reason that she issued particular commissions into every county to execute the powers contained and specified in the said act.

ECCLESIASTICAL CENSURES.

SECT. 1.—Censuræ sive Coercitiones Ecclesiasticæ.

What spiritual punishments are.

SPIRITUAL punishments (a) consist in withdrawing from the baptized person a certain privilege, or certain privileges, which the church has given him, or in wholly expelling him from the Christian communion. A simple ecclesiastical censure is the gentlest,—excommunication is the severest form of punishment. All classes of spiritual punishments known to this country, however, may be ranged under the general head or category of censures—censuræ (b).

As to clergy and laity.

There are some censures applicable to the whole church, clergy and laity; others applicable only to one of these classes.

Classes of censures.

The censures to which both clergy and laity are subject may, for the purposes of this work, be considered as follows:—

1. Admonition, or monition.
2. Penance.
3. Suspension ab ingressu ecclesiæ.

4. Excommunication, with the spiritual and temporal consequences incident to it.

(b) "Coercitio Ecclesiastica est censura sive poena," Zouch, ib.

Those to which the clergy alone are subject may be considered as—

1. Suspension.
2. Sequestration.
3. Deprivation.
4. Degradation.

SECT. 2.—Admonition.

Admonition, or monition, is the first and lightest form of ecclesiastical censure, whether to clergymen or laymen. It is to be observed, that when an admonition has been duly served, after a trial, upon the admonished person, disobedience to it entails the penalties incident to a contempt of the order of a lawful court (c).

Disobedience to, a contempt.

In the ordination services the clerk solemnly binds himself to reverently obey “his ordinary, and to follow with a glad mind and will their godly admonitions,”—an obligation binding, no doubt, in foro conscientie, but distinct from the legal admonition to be enforced in foro externo.

Difference between legal admonition and those in ordination service.

SECT. 3.—Penance.

Penance (d) is said to be an ecclesiastical punishment, used in the discipline of the church, which affects the body of the penitent; by which he is obliged to give a public satisfaction to the church for the scandal he has given by his evil example. So in the primitive times, they were to give testimonies of their reformation, before they were re-admitted to partake of the mysteries of the church. In the case of incest, or incontinency, the sinner was till lately usually enjoined to do a public penance in the cathedral or parish church, or public market, barelegged and bareheaded, in a white sheet, and to make an open confession of his crime in a prescribed form of words; which was augmented or moderated according to the quality of the fault, and the discretion of the judge. So in smaller faults and scandals, a public satisfaction or penance, as the judge shall decree, is to be made before the minister, churchwardens, or some of the parishioners, respect being had to the quality of the offence, and circumstances of the fact; as was instanced in the case of defamation, or laying violent hands on a minister, or the like (e), when the ecclesiastical courts had jurisdiction in these matters (f).

And as these censures may be moderated by the judge's discretion, according to the nature of the offence; so also they may be totally altered by a commutation of penance; and this has been the ancient privilege of the ecclesiastical judge, to admit that an oblation of a sum of money for pious uses shall be accepted in satisfaction of public penance (g).

But penance must be first enjoined, before there can be a commutation; or otherwise it is a commutation for nothing (h).

Divers kinds of penance.

Lindwood and other canonists mention three sorts of penance:—

- (1.) Private—enjoined by any priest in hearing confessions.
- (2.) Public—enjoined by the priest for any notorious crime, either with or without the bishop's licence, according to the custom of the country.
- (3.) Solemn penance—concerning which it is ordained by a constitution of Archbishop Peccham as follows:—"Whereas, according to the sacred canons, greater sins, such as incest and the like, which by their scandal raise a clamour in the whole city, are to be chastised with solemn penance; yet such penance seemeth to be buried in oblivion by the negligence of some, and the boldness of such criminals is thereby increased; we do ordain, that such solemn penance be for the future imposed, according to the canonical sanctions" (i).

And this penance could be enjoined by the bishop only; and did continue for two, three, or more years. But in latter ages, for how many years soever this penance was inflicted, it was performed in Lent only. At the beginning of every Lent, during these years, the offender was formally turned out of the church; the first year, by the bishop; the following year, by the bishop or priest. On every Maundy Thursday, the offender was reconciled and absolved, and received the sacrament on Easter-day, and on any other day till Low Sunday: this was done either by the bishop or priest. But the last final reconciliation or absolution could be passed regularly by none but the bishop. And it is observable, that even down to Lindwood's time, there was a notion prevalent, that this solemn penance could be done but once. If any man relapsed after such penance, he was to be thrust into a monastery, or was not owned by the church; or, however, ought not to be owned according to the strictness of the canon: though there is reason to appre-

(e) God. App. pp. 18, 19.

(f) The penance judicially imposed is spoken of in this chapter. It does not affect the power of absolution given to the priest on a general or special confession of sin. Thus, Zouch, Descriptio Juris et Judicii Ecclesiastice, pars 1, s. 3, "Denique in singulis parochiis, sine dignitate et jurisdictione Rectores constituuntur, quibus Ecclesiæ curandæ regendæque committuntur. Et in foro pœnitentiæ ligandi absolvendique potestatem habent."

(g) God. App. p. 19.

hend that it was often otherwise in fact. And indeed this solemn penance was so rare in those days, that all which has been said on this subject was rather theory than practice, except perhaps in the case of heresy (k).

A constitution of Boniface says: "We do ordain, that laymen shall be compelled by the sentence of excommunication to submit to canonical penances, as well corporal as pecuniary, inflicted on them by their prelates. And they who hinder the same from being performed, shall be coerced by the sentences of interdict and excommunication. And if distresses shall be made on the prelates upon this account, the distrainers shall be proceeded against by the like penalties" (l).

constitutions.

Which corporal penalties Lindwood specifies in divers instances; as thrusting them into a monastery, branding, fustigation, imprisonment (m).

"We do decree," says another constitution, "that the archdeacons for any mortal and notorious crime, or from whence scandal may arise, shall not take money for the same of the offenders, but shall inflict upon them condign punishment" (n).

"And because the offender hath no dread of his fault, when money buys off the punishment: and the archdeacons, and their officials, and some that are their superiors, when their subjects of the clergy or laity commit relapses into adultery, fornication, or other notorious excesses, do for the sake of money remit that corporal penance, which should be inflicted for a terror to others; and they who receive the money apply to the use of themselves, and not of the poor, or to pious uses; which is the occasion of grievous scandal, and ill example: Therefore, we do ordain, that no money be in any wise received for notorious sin, in case the offender hath relapsed more than twice; on pain of restoring double of what shall have been so received within one month after the receipt thereof, to be applied to the fabric of the cathedral church; and of suspension ab officio, which they who receive the same, and do not restore double thereof within one month as aforesaid, shall ipso facto incur. And in commutations of corporal penances for money (which we forbid to be made without great and urgent cause), the ordinaries of the places shall use so much moderation, as not to lay such grievous and excessive public corporal penances on offenders, as indirectly to force them to redeem the same with a large sum of money. But such commutations, when they shall hereafter be thought fit to be made, shall be so modest, that the receiver be not thought rapacious, nor the payer too much aggrieved; under the penalties before mentioned" (o).

By the statute of Circumspecté agatis, 13 Edw. 1, st. 4, already referred to (p), the bishops are permitted to "hold plea in court

st. 1, c. 2.

By the statute of Articuli Cleri, 9 Edw. 2, st. 1, c. 2, "if a prelate enjoin a penance pecuniary to a man for his offence, and it be demanded, the king's prohibition shall hold place, but if prelates enjoin a penance corporal, and they which be so punished will redeem upon their own accord such penances by money; if money be demanded before a spiritual judge, the king's prohibition shall hold no place."

Before the Prelate.]—It seems to be agreed by the canonists, that archdeacons may not inflict pecuniary penalties, unless warranted by prescription (r).

Disposal of the commutation money.

Ayliffe says, that anciently the commutation money was to be applied to the use of the church, as fines in cases of civil punishment are converted to the use of the public (s).

By several of the canons made in the time of Queen Elizabeth, it was to be applied to pious and charitable uses; and the Reformatio Legum directed that it should be to the use of the poor of the parish where the offence was committed or the offender dwelled. And there was to be no commutation at all but for very weighty reasons and in cases very particular. And when commutation was made, it was to be with the privy and advice of the bishop. In Archbishop Whitgift's register we find that the commutation of penance without the bishop's privy was complained of in parliament. And it was one of King William's injunctions, that commutation be not made but by the express order and direction of the bishop himself, declared in open court. And by the Canons of 1640, if in any case the chancellor, commissary, or official, should commute penance without the privy of the bishop, he was at least to give a just account yearly to the bishop of all commutation money in that year, on pain of one year's suspension (t).

Regulations
as to by convocation
in Queen Anne's time.

In the reign of Queen Anne this matter was taken into consideration by the convocation, who made the following regulations, viz. That no commutation of penance be hereafter accepted or allowed of by any ecclesiastical judge, without an express consent given in writing by the bishop of the diocese or other ordinary having exempt jurisdiction, or by some person or persons to be especially deputed by them for that purpose; and that all commutations or pretended commutations, accepted or allowed otherwise than is hereby directed, be ipso facto null and void. And that no sum of money given or received for any commutation of penance, or any part thereof, shall be disposed of to any use without the like consent and direction in writing of the bishop or other ordinary having exempt jurisdiction, if the cause has been prosecuted in their courts; or of the archdeacon if the cause has been prosecuted in his court. And all money received for commutation pursuant to the foregoing directions, shall be disposed of to pious and charitable uses by the respective ordinaries above named: whereof at the least one-third part shall by them be disposed of in the parish where the offenders dwell: and that a register be kept in every ecclesiastical court, of all such commutations, and of the particular uses to which such money has been applied: and that the account so registered be every year laid before the bishop or other ordinary exempt having episcopal jurisdiction, in order to be audited by them: and that any ecclesiastical judge or officer offending in any of the premises be suspended for three months for the said offence (u).

Oughton says, generally commutation money is to be given to the poor where the offence was committed, or applied to other pious uses at the discretion of the judge (x). Oughton's opinion.

About the year 1735, Dr. Burn says, the Bishop of Chester cited his chancellor to the archbishop's court at York, to exhibit an account of the money received for commutations, and to show cause why an inhibition should not go against him, that for the future he should not presume to dispose of any sum or sums received on that account without the consent of the bishop. In obedience to this, an account was exhibited without oath; and that being objected to, a fuller was exhibited upon oath. And upon the hearing several of the sums in the last account were objected to as not allowable, and an inhibition prayed to the effect above. But the archbishop's chancellor refused to grant such inhibition, and was of opinion that the bishop could only oblige an account: and so dismissed the chancellor without costs. Account of commutations required in 1735.

It is expedient to make a special reference to some modern decisions on this subject.

Where a party has been convicted of incest, penance has been remitted where it was shown that the health of the party ordered to perform it would have been endangered thereby, and where the promoter expressed his concurrence with the prayer for such remission (y). In another case Lord Stowell said, "In the older canons, which perhaps can hardly be said as carrying with them all their first authority, a solemnis penitentia is enjoined before the bishop of the diocese. This, however, as I have just remarked, is now softened down. Attending then to what I think is the most material point, the removing of such a scandal, and looking to the age and infirmity of the party, and what might be the consequence of such a punishment, the court will Penance may be remitted.

not think it necessary to inflict the public penance; but condemn him in the full costs of this prosecution, accompanying this with the injunction that the same intercourse must not continue, but must be bonâ fide and substantially removed" (z).

Enforced in cases of defamation.

The case last-mentioned was a prosecution for incest. But where the penance enjoined for defamation has been to acknowledge the defamation and ask for the forgiveness of the party defamed in the vestry-room before the clergyman and churchwardens, the exact form of retraction of the defamatory words enjoined by the court has been compelled by the court (a).

Schedule of penance must be given to the party.

Where a writ de contumace capiendo expressed "that the defendant had been pronounced guilty of contumacy and contempt of the law and jurisdiction ecclesiastical in not having obeyed a decree made upon him to perform the usual penance in the parish church of St. M. N. in a certain cause of defamation," and it appeared that at the time the sentence was pronounced a schedule of penance was made out, which, by the practice of the Ecclesiastical Court, could not be delivered to the defendant until he paid the costs of the suit: it was holden, that he ought to have had the decree exhibited to him in its more perfect form before he could be considered as being in contempt, especially as the costs were not mentioned in the significavit, and that he was consequently entitled to be discharged (b). But where an application was made to set aside a writ de contumace capiendo on the ground that the defendant had not been admonished to take out a schedule of penance, and that he was sentenced to perform penance in the minister's house, which he had no right to enter—it appearing, nevertheless, that there was an order for the party to pay costs, for the not doing which he was in contempt, and for which in fact the significavit had issued—the application was rejected, for the sentence awarded payment of a precise sum, 25*l.* costs; and if the proceedings of the court had been, as was suggested, defective, the costs would not be thereby decreased (c).

Randall v.
Vowles.

In Randall v. Vowles, a case in the consistorial court of Chichester, on the 17th of June, 1856, Sir Robert Phillimore, then chancellor of the diocese, gave the following judgment, in which the question of penance is referred to (d):

Penance in circumstances not enjoined.

"This is a proceeding of great importance, both as regards the individuals who are the subject of it, and the interests of the civil and religious community of which they are members. It is a criminal suit brought against two persons, by name Joseph and Elizabeth Vowles, who are alleged to have de facto intermarried with each other, and to be cohabiting together; their relation to each other rendering such marriage null and void, and such cohabitation incestuous and wicked.

“The object of the suit is twofold; to obtain a declaratory sentence of the nullity of the de facto marriage had between the parties; and a decree against them to abstain from incestuous cohabitation for the future.

“The promoter of the suit is the incumbent of the parish in which these persons were, at the time of the institution of the suit, resident. The incumbent and the churchwardens are the lawful guardians of the moral purity of the parishioners. I do not know that a more proper promoter of the office of the judge, in a suit of this grave and highly penal character, could have been found.

“The articles have been very carefully drawn, and are signed by an experienced and eminent advocate practising in Doctors’ Commons. Every link in the chain of evidence taken upon these articles is, I lament to say, scrupulously and fully established by the testimony of witnesses, and, in addition to this proof, in itself ample and sufficient, I find the confession of the guilty parties. It is proved that Elizabeth Tonsett married John Vowles, and had by him a child, now living; that her husband is dead; and that she is now cohabiting in incestuous intercourse with her late husband’s father, Joseph Vowles, both the guilty parties having contrived to obtain, by a fraudulent suppression of their mutual relationship, the performance of the marriage service in a parish in London, where they were not known, over this unhallowed and revolting union. It is painful to add that the consequences of their sin have travelled beyond themselves. It appears that of this unnatural as well as unchristian cohabitation, a child has been the fruit.

“From some portions of the evidence I had hoped that the remorse and contrition from which sooner or later they cannot escape, had already overtaken these unhappy persons, and that they had determined to abstain from future intercourse with each other. I learn, however, that such is not the case; and it only remains for me to give sentence according to the law upon the facts which are proved before me.

“I pronounce the marriage which has been de facto solemnized between these parties null and void. I follow the example of my Lord Stowell in the case of Burgess v. Burgess (e), in not enjoining public penance to be performed by them; but, remembering that the effect of such a prosecution as this ought to be remedial as well as penal, I admonish the parties to abstain from further incestuous intercourse, and to live separate and apart in different habitations. It is my duty to warn them that if this admonition of the court be disobeyed, the ordinary, upon due application being made to him, will be compelled to pronounce a sentence of excommunication against them. I am, moreover, bound to condemn them in the costs of this suit."

SECT. 4.—Suspension.

Two kinds. In the laws of the church, we read of two sorts of suspension; one relating solely to the clergy, the other extending also to the laity (f).

Relating to the clergy. That which relates solely to the clergy, is suspension from office and benefice jointly, or from office or benefice singly; and may be called a temporary degradation, or deprivation of both. So we find it described by John of Athon: a person deposed, is he who is deprived of his office and benefice, although not solemnly; a person degraded, is he who is deprived of both solemnly, the ensigns of his order being taken from him; a person suspended, is he who is deprived of them both for a time, but not for ever (g).

And the penalty upon a clergyman officiating after suspension, if he shall persist therein after a reproof from the bishop, is (by the ancient canon law) that he shall be excommunicated all manner of ways, and every person who communicates with him shall be excommunicated also (h).

By whom this suspension may be pronounced. Suspension may be pronounced by the chancellor of the diocese; deprivation by the bishop alone (i).

Relating to the laity. The other sort of suspension, which extends also to the laity, is suspension ab ingressu ecclesie, or from the hearing of divine service, and receiving the holy sacrament, which may therefore be called a temporary excommunication (k).

Ab ingressu ecclesie. Instances are furnished by the reports of the Ecclesiastical Courts of parishioners suspended ab ingressu ecclesie, for brawling in a church, or in the vestry, before the passing of 23 & 24 Vict. c. 32 (l); this sentence being attended by condemnation in costs of a sum nomine expensarum.

It was a common form of punishment for contumacy in not appearing to a citation: in the language of 23 Hen. VIII. c. 9, "or at the least suspended from all divine services" (m).

When such suspension is to be inflicted. Which two sorts of suspension, the one relating to the clergy alone, and the other to the laity also, do herein agree, that both are inflicted for crimes of an inferior nature, such as in the first case deserve not deprivation, and such as in the second case deserve not excommunication; that both, in practice at least, are temporary; both also terminated, either at a certain time when inflicted for such time, or upon satisfaction given to the judge when inflicted until something be performed which he has enjoined: and, lastly, both (if unduly performed) are attended with further penalties; that of the clergy, with irregularity, if they act in the meantime; and that of the laity (as it seems) with excommunication, if they either presume to join in communion during their suspension, or do not in due time perform those things which the suspension was intended to enforce the performance of (n).

By the ancient canon law, sentence of suspension ought not to be given without a previous admonition; unless where the offence is such, as in its own nature requires an immediate suspension: and if sentence of suspension, in ordinary cases, be given without such previous admonition, there may be cause of appeal (o).

Previous admonition necessary.

The following is extracted from the case of Johnstone v. Sutton (p), and there said to be taken from a manuscript book in the handwriting of Sir E. Simpson, formerly king's advocate and judge of the admiralty. "Offence—Undoubted rule in admiralty and ecclesiastical courts, that persons suspended for an offence supposed, of which he is afterwards acquitted in proper court, is entitled to all the intermediate profits. Thus, in case of capture of prize at sea, the officer in arrest being actually on board, and afterwards duly acquitted, or restored to his station, shall share the prize-money. So in civil causes in admiralty: if a master turns his mate without just cause before the mast, and he sue for wages as mate for the whole time, he may recover, though he did not do the duty. So if a clergyman be suspended ab officio et beneficio, and upon an appeal declared innocent, he will recover the profits of the living. Profits—Persons suspended from an office, entitled to intermediate profits, if innocent."

Intermediate profits between charge and acquittal go to person acquitted.

The Judicial Committee of the Privy Council have on two occasions, in the cases of Martin v. Mackonochie (q) and Hebbert v. Purchas (r), thought themselves warranted by the law in inflicting the punishment of suspension for disobedience to their orders. But for these decisions it would have seemed that these contempts of court would be punished, as contempts of all courts are, by committing, or, in the case of ecclesiastical courts, signifying, the offender.

Suspension for contempt.

The sentence of suspension is generally followed by a decree of sequestration, which provides for the performance of the duties of the benefice, &c., during the period of suspension. Where the benefice is already under sequestration, as, for instance, under a writ of sequestrari facias, the sequestration issuing upon the suspension takes precedence, and the previous sequestration is suspended as long as the sentence of suspension lasts (s).

Suspended clerk cannot maintain action for profits.

As to the condition of an incumbent who has been suspended from his benefice, it has been decided that when a clergyman has been suspended ab officio et a beneficio, he is not entitled to any of the profits of the benefice, and cannot recover them by action during the continuance of the suspension, although no sequestration may have issued (t).

And where, under a suspension, a sequestration was issued, it was holden by Vice-Chancellor Bacon, that the fruits of the benefice sequestered belonged to the bishop as chief pastor of the church, subject to the duty of providing for the services (u).

Suspension is expressly mentioned as a suitable ecclesiastical punishment in the Clergy Discipline Act, 1892 (v).

55 & 56 Vict. c. 32.

SECT. 5.—Sequestration (x).

When the writ of sequestration issues.

The Commissioners for inquiring into the Practice and Jurisdiction of the Ecclesiastical Courts say in their Report (y) :

“Sequestrations issue under the following circumstances : 1st, In obedience to writs from the courts of common law, whereby the bishop is directed to levy certain sums in pursuance of the statutes regulating Queen Anne’s Bounty ; 2ndly, Under the various provisions contained in the statute 57 Geo. 3, c. 99 (z), and in cases of outlawry ; 3rdly, In pursuance of decrees or orders emanating from the ecclesiastical courts, in cases where clergymen are proceeded against before those jurisdictions ; and, lastly, during vacancies.

“In all these cases, we apprehend the law clearly to be, that before any proportion of the profits of the benefice can be

(v) Vide supra, Chap. X.

(x) The ecclesiastical sequestration must not be confounded with the sequestration for contempt issued out of the High Court of Justice under 2 & 3 W. 4, c. 93. Vide infra, §. 8 The origin of the term sequestration is derived from the Roman law : “Sequester dicitur, apud quem plures eandem rem de qua controversia est ; deposuerunt, dictus ab eo quod occurrit aut quasi sequenti eos qui contendunt, committitur.” (Dig. lib. xl. cap. 110.) It was much disputed by the earlier canonists whether the sequestrator had not a right to present to the benefice ; but the negative is now universally adopted. See for a clear exposition of the canon law on this subject the titles “Usufruit,” “Possession,” “Séquestre,” in Durand de Maillane, Dict. de Droit Canonique.

applied in payment of debts, or for any other purpose, the service of the church must first be provided for, out of those profits; and when this has been done, the buildings and fences in the glebe, and the chancel also when the incumbent repairs, ought to be sustained and kept in proper order. The right of nominating the sequestrator lies with the bishop; but when the sequestration issues on account of debts, it may often happen that the sequestration is committed to the creditor, or his nominee; in all other cases, the bishop exercises his right of nomination by selecting according to his own judgment."

Sequestration, as a punishment, is inflicted under the powers of 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106, s. 54, for non-residence (a). It is inflicted, partly as a punishment, and partly as a means of obtaining a debt, under the powers of 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106, s. 67, and 34 & 35 Vict. c. 43, for dilapidations, &c. (b). It is the means by which a non-resident incumbent may be compelled to pay the salary of his curate (c); and it is generally a part or consequence of the punishment of suspension, though apparently not always necessary for that end (d).

Sequestration as a punishment.

When a living becomes void by the death of an incumbent, or otherwise, the ordinary is to send out his sequestration, to have the cure supplied, and to preserve the profits (after the expenses deducted) for the use of the successor (e).

During the vacancy of a benefice.

Sometimes a benefice is kept under sequestration for many years together, or wholly; namely, when it is of so small value, that no clergyman fit to serve the cure will be at the charge of taking it by institution. In which case, the sequestration is committed sometimes to the curate only, sometimes to the curate and churchwardens jointly (f).

Where none will accept the benefice.

Sometimes the fruits and profits of a living which is in controversy, either by the consent of parties, or the judge's authority, are sequestered and placed for safety, in a third hand. And thus where two different titles are set on foot, the rights are carefully preserved, and given to him for whom the cause is adjudged (g).

During suit.

And the judge is also wont to appoint some minister to serve the cure, for the time that the controversy shall depend; and to command those to whom the sequestration is committed, to allow such salary as he shall assign out of the profits of the church to the parson that he orders to attend the cure (h).

Sequestrations used to issue in cases of outlawry (i):—

Outlawry.

Sometimes a sequestration issues upon the Queen's writ to the bishop to satisfy the debts of the incumbent (j).

clergyman, and upon a feri facias, directed to the sheriff to levy the debt and damages, he returns that the defendant is a clerk beneficed having no lay fee. Whereupon a feri facias de bonis ecclesiasticis (k) is directed to the bishop to levy the same of his ecclesiastical goods, and by virtue thereof the profits of the benefice should be sequestered.

And in this case the bishop may name the sequestrators himself, or may grant the sequestration to such persons as shall be named by the party who obtained the writ.

If the sequestration be laid and executed before the day of the return of the writ, the mesne profits may be taken by virtue of the sequestration, after the writ is made returnable, otherwise not (l).

Stratford. "If an appeal be made against a sentence of sequestration, and lawfully prosecuted, the party sequestered shall enjoy the profits pending the appeal" (m).

While the boundaries of dioceses were being re-arranged, cases arose as to sequestration in transferred portions of a diocese. It is probably now not necessary to do more than give the references to these cases (n).

The sequestration is a continuing execution, and the sequestrator must continue in possession until the debt is levied, and the bishop must return not the writ but the amount levied from time to time (o).

The history and nature of the writ are very clearly stated in Arbuckle v. Cowtan (p)—a decision on the Insolvency Act then in force.

Since this decision, which established that the assignees of an insolvent incumbent were not ipso facto entitled to the revenues of the benefice, a series of acts has enabled the assignee or trustee in insolvency or bankruptcy to obtain sequestration of the benefice. The act now in force is "The Bankruptcy Act, 1883," 46 & 47 Vict. c. 52, s. 52 (1).

"(1.) Where a bankrupt is a beneficed clergyman, the trustee may apply for a sequestration of the profits of the benefice, and the certificate of the appointment of the trustee shall be sufficient authority for the granting of sequestration without any writ or other proceeding, and the same shall accordingly be issued as on a writ of levari facias founded on a judgment against the bankrupt, and shall have priority over any other sequestration issued after the commencement of the bankruptcy in respect of a debt provable under the bankruptcy, except a sequestration issued before the date of the receiving order by or on behalf of a person who at the time of the issue thereof had not notice of an act of bankruptcy committed by the bankrupt, and available for grounding a receiving order against him (q).

“(2.) The bishop of the diocese in which the benefice is situate may, if he thinks fit, appoint to the bankrupt such or the like stipend as he might by law have appointed to a curate duly licensed to serve the benefice in case the bankrupt had been non-resident, and the sequestrator shall pay the sum so appointed out of the profits of the benefice to the bankrupt, by quarterly instalments, while he performs the duties of the benefice.

“(3.) The sequestrator shall also pay out of the profits of the benefice the salary payable to any duly licensed curate of the church of the benefice in respect of duties performed by him as such during four months before the date of the receiving order not exceeding fifty pounds.

A sequestration also issues in obedience to the Queen's writ of sequestrari facias de bonis ecclesiasticis (r).

Writ of sequestrari facias de bonis ecclesiasticis.

The following decisions relate to the right of priority in cases where several sequestrations have been issued:—

Sequestration when part of an ecclesiastical punishment takes precedence, though later in date, of a sequestration issued at the instance of a creditor. Thus where upon a writ of sequestrari facias de bonis ecclesiasticis, issued from the Court of Queen's Bench at the suit of a creditor, a sequestration was duly issued and published by the bishop, under which the sequestrator appointed by him entered into the rectory, and received the profits of it; and where, afterwards, and before the creditor's claim was satisfied, or the sequestration was removed, the bishop, in pursuance of a sentence of suspension for eighteen months, duly adjudged in the Ecclesiastical Court, under the Church Discipline Act, 1840, against the same rector, issued and published another sequestration appointing another sequestrator,—It was holden, that the effect of the first sequestration was suspended during the continuance of the second, so that, during that time, the creditor could not call upon the bishop to account for any of the profits of the living (s).

Case in which a later takes precedence of an earlier sequestration.

As a general rule, the law requires that when several writs of feri or levari facias are delivered to the bishop's officer, he should issue the sequestrations thereon in the order of time in which the writs were delivered to him to be executed, and not according to the date of their teste.

Where, therefore, writs of levari facias issued against W. were delivered to the deputy registrar of the bishop in 1847, with directions to suspend the execution of them until further instructions, and with a request that notice should be given of any subsequent writ being lodged and sequestration applied for; and on the 30th March, 1853, W. having become insolvent, the petition of the provisional assignee was lodged with the deputy registrar to be executed, and with directions that sequestration thereon should be immediately issued, and notice thereof having been given by the deputy registrar, directions were given on the 31st March to issue sequestration upon the writs of levari facias.—It was holden, that the petition of the provisional assignee was entitled to priority over the writs of levari facias (s).

Sequestration of judgment creditors entitled to priority over sequestration by assignee of bankrupt incumbent.

It was holden by the Exchequer Chamber, affirming the judgment of the Queen's Bench, that if a judgment creditor of a beneficed clergyman issue a sequestration, and, the clergyman becoming bankrupt, his assignee under the bankruptcy issue a second sequestration, the former sequestration will remain valid and have priority, even though it were not published till after the filing of the petition in bankruptcy (t).

Bond of sequestrator.

It is usual for the ecclesiastical judge to take bond of the sequestrators, well and truly to gather and receive the tithes, fruits, and other profits; and to render a just account (u).

His duties.

And those to whom the sequestration is committed, used to cause the same to be published in the church, in the time of divine service (x). Now, since 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 45, such publication is made by fixing the instrument on the church door (y).

It was decided not to be necessary that a sequestration should be published before the return day of the levari facias on which it was founded, or that a copy should be fixed to the church door where that was not the usual mode of publication in the diocese of the sequestered benefice (z).

A sequestrator is not entitled to charge the benefice, if the incumbent forbids it, with the expense of audit dinners to the tithepayers; but the expense will be allowed, if it has been usual, and the incumbent did not forbid it. The bishop is not bound to appoint as sequestrator the person who will act on the cheapest terms (a).

Can maintain an action.

Power is now given to the sequestrator to maintain an action in his own name, and levy a distress, or take any other proceedings which the incumbent might take (b).

(b) By 12 & 13 Vict. c. 67, vide supra, p. 375.

After the sequestrators have performed the duty required, the sequestration is to be taken off, and application of the profits to be made according to the directions of the ordinary. And he shall allow to them a reasonable sum out of the profits, according to the trouble they shall have had in gathering the tithes. And he is also to allow for the supply of the cure, what shall be convenient, relation being had to the charge and to the profits, and likewise for the maintenance of the incumbent and of his family (in case where there is an incumbent), if he has not otherwise sufficient to maintain them.

Application of profits.

The sequestrator is entitled to all the future profits, but not to the amount of the sequestrated living (c); and so it has been holden, that a rector whose glebe was sequestered was entitled to a verdict in ejectment upon a demise laid before the sequestration took effect, but he could not have an "habere facias possessionem," because he was no longer entitled to possession (d).

To what a sequestrator is entitled.

In Re Parker's Charity (e), where a testator in 1763 gave a legacy in trust for the vicar of N. for the time being, he annually preaching a sermon on a particular day, to be paid in augmentation of the vicarage; it was holden that the gift was an augmentation of the vicarage and not a mere legacy to the then vicar, and that it passed to the sequestrator.

If the sequestrators refuse to deliver up their charge, they shall be compelled thereunto by the ecclesiastical judge: and if they shall, being called thereunto, delay to give an account, it is usual for the judge to deliver unto the party grieved the bond given, with a warrant of attorney to sue for the penalty thereof to his own use at the common law (f).

Amenable to ecclesiastical judge.

Therefore, if the incumbent is not satisfied with what the sequestrators have done in the execution of their charge, his proper remedy is by application to the spiritual judge; and if he shall think himself aggrieved by the determination of such judge, he may appeal to a superior jurisdiction.

Sometimes a bill in equity has been brought, which yet, as it seems, ought not to be brought against the sequestrators solely, for that they are only bailiffs or receivers, and have no interest. As in Jones v. Barrett, in 1724 (g), on a bill by the vicar of West Dean, in the county of Sussex, against the defendant, who was sequestrator, for an account of the profits received during the vacation, it was objected for the defendant, that the bishop ought to have been made a party, since the sequestrator is accountable to him for what he receives, and the court seemed to think the bishop should have been a party; but by consent, the cause was referred to the bishop of the diocese.

As to suits in equity, against.

In Williams v. Ivimey (h), the court held that no bill would lie against a sequestrator appointed under a judgment, the remedy being by motion in the action.

As to application to temporal court.

Besides his remedy in the Ecclesiastical Court, a clerk whose benefice is under sequestration for debt has a right to come to the court, from which the writ of levari facias issued, from time to time, to see that the sequestration is being properly executed; but, if he delays for several years after the sequestration has been satisfied, he cannot require an inquiry to be then made (i).

Dilapidations.

The law as to dilapidations on a benefice under sequestration is now fixed by 34 & 35 Vict. c. 43 (k).

As to residuary profits.

Where there is a sequestration issuing on a suspension for an ecclesiastical offence, it is said that the bishop is entitled to take the profits of the sequestered benefice, subject to due provision for performance of the duties thereof (l).

Vicar sequestered and licensed as curate disqualified to act as magistrate.

The power and character of the sequestrator, and the legal status of the incumbent whose living is sequestered, underwent much discussion in the Court of Queen's Bench in 1839. The bishop had issued a sequestration of the vicarage and at the same time licensed the vicar as stipendiary curate, assigning to him the vicarage-house and grounds as a residence, directing the sequestrator to pay him 120*l.* a year. The question was, whether the vicar had then such a possession of his ecclesiastical benefice as qualified him to act as a magistrate under 18 Geo. 2, c. 20, which requires a freehold estate of the clear yearly value of 100*l.* It was holden that he was not qualified (m).

General position of sequestered clerk.

In the course of the judgment the following passage, which is of general importance, occurs:—"The difficulty in the case arises from his continuing to reside and occupy the house and grounds, which are found to be above the yearly value of 100*l.* If he be in the occupation of them by right as vicar, notwithstanding the sequestration, and could not be put out from them or compelled to pay any rent for them by any proceeding whatever, it is impossible to say that he has not an estate for life in them, or say that they are affected by the sequestration; and if not, the value is sufficient. Now, with respect to the house, it seems clear that the defendant is in the occupation as vicar, and that the assignment of it to him as a residence by the bishop is merely void, inasmuch as the incumbent is bound to reside notwithstanding any sequestration, and the bishop could not turn him out, nor change his character from that of vicar to that of stipendiary curate. But it is not found by the case that the house alone is of the yearly value of 100*l.*; and as the onus lies on the defendant, we cannot presume it to be so. The grounds and stipend must therefore be taken into consideration, and with respect to them the case is very different. The sequestrator might undoubtedly let the grounds as well as any other part of the glebe, and raise a profit towards the purposes of the writ; and though they are not so let, but assigned to the defendant by the bishop, they, as well as the stipend of 120*l.* also assigned him by the bishop, are by no means enjoyed by him simply as vicar in his own right."

It has been said that, under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106, the bishop is empowered to sequester the profits of an ecclesiastical benefice in several cases, by way of punishment. Sequestrations under this statute are to have priority over all others; and the provisions of this act are engrafted on the more recent act which follows.

Sequestrations under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106.

By 34 & 35 Vict. c. 45, the Sequestration Act, 1871:—

Sects. 1, 2, 3, 4. "On sequestration the bishop is to appoint a curate and assign a stipend; and the amount of the stipend and its payment is provided for" (n).

34 & 35 Vict. c. 45.

Sect. 5. "In case any such sequestration remains in force for more than six months, the bishop, if it appears to him that scandal or inconvenience is likely to arise from the incumbent continuing to perform the services of the church while the sequestration remains in force, may, from and after the expiration of such period, inhibit the incumbent from performing any services of the church within the diocese as long as the sequestration shall remain in force, and the bishop may at any time withdraw such inhibition."

Power for bishop to inhibit in certain cases.

Sect. 6. "During such time as any sequestration remains in force, the incumbent shall be absolutely disabled from presenting or nominating to any benefice then vacant, of which he may be patron in right of the benefice under sequestration, and the right of presentation or nomination to such vacant benefice shall be exercised by the bishop of the diocese in which such vacant benefice is locally situate."

Presentation to benefices suspended during sequestration.

Sect. 7. "During the continuance of any sequestration it shall not be lawful for the incumbent of the benefice under sequestration to accept or be instituted or licensed to any other benefice or preferment, the acceptance of or institution or licensing to which would avoid or vacate the benefice so under sequestration, unless with the consent in writing of the bishop of the diocese and the sequestrator."

Incumbent of sequestered benefice not to accept other benefice but with leave.

SECT. 6.—Deprivation.

Definition.

Deprivation (o) or deposition (p) is an ecclesiastical censure, whereby a clergyman is deposed of his parsonage, vicarage, or other spiritual promotion or dignity (q).

Causes of deprivation.

The causes of deprivation may be classed under two heads : I. Such as have been allowed by the common law, or created by statute ; II. Such as depend upon the canon law only.

I. Causes of Deprivation allowed by the Common Law, or created by Statute.

At common law and by statute.

1. Want of Orders.—Before 14 Car. 2, c. 4, s. 10, if a layman was presented, instituted, and inducted, he was parson de facto, and acts done by him while parson (r), such as marriages, leases, &c., were valid ; but he might be deprived (s). Now the above-mentioned statute enacts, that no one shall be capable to be admitted to any benefice who is not ordained priest.

2. Illiteracy.—Which, Lord Hobart says, subjects a person to deprivation, being malum in se (t).

3. Want of Age.—Now regulated by 13 Eliz. c. 12, which declares admissions, institutions, and inductions, contrary to the act, void (u).

4. Simony.—Was a crime at the common law (x), and is now regulated by 31 Eliz. c. 6, which declares the presentation, institution, and induction so obtained, utterly void (y).

5. Plurality.—Formerly by 21 Hen. 8, c. 13, and now by 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106, s. 11 (z) ; but before either statute the first benefice was void by cession, if the parson took a second without dispensation (a). Yet, though the patron might present thereto if he would, he was not compellable to take notice till deprivation (b). Plurality was forbidden by the ancient canon law (c), and by the Constitutions of Othobon and Archbishop Peccham (d).

6. Conviction of Treason, Murder, or Felony, by the Temporal Courts.—On which the ecclesiastical courts used to build a sentence of deprivation (e); and which now by statute imposes on the bishop the duty of declaring the living vacant (f). Unless, indeed, the living has already become vacant by virtue of the following provision in 33 & 34 Vict. c. 23, s. 2, which is as follows: . . . “if any person hereafter convicted of treason or felony, for which he shall be sentenced to death or penal servitude, or any term of imprisonment with hard labour or exceeding twelve months, shall at the time of such conviction hold . . . any ecclesiastical benefice . . . such . . . benefice . . . shall forthwith become vacant . . . unless such person shall receive a free pardon from her Majesty within two months after such conviction. . . .”

7. Incumbent refusing to use the Book of Common Prayer, or Speaking or Preaching anything in Derogation thereof, or using any other Rite or Ceremony, being thereof twice convicted,—shall be deprived (g).

8. Incumbent not publicly reading the Thirty-nine Articles of Religion in the Church of his Benefice, with Declaration of Assent, if wilfully offending,—shall absolutely forfeit his benefice (h).

9. Incumbent advisedly maintaining or affirming any Doctrine contrary to the Thirty-nine Articles, and when convented before the Bishop or Commissioners, persisting therein, and being thereof lawfully convicted,—is cause for the ordinary to deprive by sentence (i).

10. Infidelity and Miscreancy.—Under which heads may be contained atheism, blasphemy, heresy, schism, and the like, which the laws of the church have always punished with deprivation (k). The jurisdiction of the Ecclesiastical Court, in these cases, is reserved by 29 Car. 2, c. 9, which takes away the writ de heretico comburendo.

14. Conviction of Perjury in the Temporal or Ecclesiastical Court (o).

15. Non-payment of Tenths, according to 26 Hen. 8, c. 3, s. 15. Certified by the Bishop.—By 2 & 3 Edw. 6, c. 20, the incumbent was to be adjudged ipso facto deprived of that benefice whereof such certificate was made. But now by 3 Geo. 1, c. 10, s. 2, the defaulter is to forfeit double the value of the tenths; and the bishop is discharged from receiving them, and a collector appointed in his room (p).

16. Dilapidation or Alienation.—Lord Coke says, that dilapidation of ecclesiastical palaces, houses, and buildings, is a good cause of deprivation (q). But Dr. Gibson doubts whether the punishment was ever inflicted, and observes that the books of canon law speak of alienations only (r).

17. Non-residence (s).

18. The several matters besides those referred to in No. 6 mentioned in 55 & 56 Vict. c. 32, s. 1 (t).

II. Causes of Deprivation by the Canon Law.

Causes of deprivation by canon law.

1. Disclosing Confessions—From anger, hatred, or even fear of death, was punished with degradation (u).

2. Wearing Arms—Was punished with excommunication, and if the party remained contumacious, he was ipso facto deprived (x).

3. Non-residence (y).

4. Demanding Money for Sacraments—Was considered as a species of simony, and punished as such by Otho (z).

5. Obstinacy in an Intruder, where Institution had not been obtained, or where the prior Incumbent was proved alive—Was punished by Othobon with the loss of all benefices within the kingdom (a).

6. Violating a Sanctuary—Was punished by Othobon with excommunication ipso facto; and if satisfaction were not made within a limited time, with deprivation (b).

7. Marriage and, à fortiori, Bigamy.—By 31 Hen. 8, c. 14, s. 9, now repealed, a priest keeping company with a wife was to suffer as a felon (c).

8. Concubinage—Was punished by degradation by Alexander II (d). And by 31 Hen. 8, c. 14, s. 10, now repealed, a priest keeping a concubine forfeited his goods, chattels, and promotions, and was to suffer imprisonment at the king's will.

9. Contumacy in wearing an irregular Habit—After monition was punished with suspension, ab officio et beneficio, by Archbishop Stratford, which could only be redeemed by payment of a fifth part of the profits of the benefice for one year to the poor (e).

10. Officiating after Excommunication without Absolution (f).

11. Keeping solemn Fasts other than such as are appointed by Law—Either publicly or privately, without the licence and direction of the bishop under his hand and seal, or being wittingly present at any of them, is punished with suspension for the first fault, excommunication for the second, and deposition from the ministry for the third (g).

By Can. 122 of 1603, "When any minister is complained of in any ecclesiastical court, belonging to any bishop of his province, for any crime, the chancellor, commissary, official, or any other having ecclesiastical jurisdiction to whom it shall appertain, shall expedite the cause by processes and other proceedings against him: and upon contumacy for not appearing shall first suspend him; and afterwards his contumacy continuing, excommunicate him. But if he appear, and submit himself to the course of law, then the matter being ready for sentence, and the merits of his offence exacting by law either deprivation from his living, or deposition from the ministry, no such sentence shall be pronounced by any person whosoever, but only by the bishop, with the assistance of his chancellor, the dean (if they may conveniently be had), and some of the prebendaries, if the court be kept near the cathedral church; or of the archdeacon if he may be had conveniently, and two other at least grave ministers and preachers, to be called by the bishop, when the court is kept in other places."

Degradation. Degradation is an ecclesiastical censure, whereby a clergyman is deprived of his holy orders which formerly he had, as of priest or deacon.

And by the canon law, this may be done two ways: either summarily, or by word only; or solemnly, as by divesting the party degraded of the ornaments and ensigns of his order or degree.

Which solemn degradation was anciently performed in this manner, as is set forth in the sixth book of the Decretals. If the offender was a person in inferior orders, then the bishop of the diocese alone; if in higher orders, as priest or deacon, then the bishop of the diocese, together with a certain number of other bishops, sent for the party to come before them. He was brought in, having on his sacred robes, and having in his hands a book, vessel or other instrument or ornament appertaining to his order, as if he were about to officiate in his function. Then the bishop publicly took away from him, one by one, the said instruments and vestments belonging to his office, saying to this effect, This and this we take from thee, and do deprive thee of the honour of priesthood; and, finally, in taking away the last sacerdotal vestment, saying thus, By the authority of God Almighty, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, and of us, we do take from thee the clerical habit, and do depose, degrade, despoil, and deprive thee of all order, benefit, and privilege of the clergy (k).

And this seems to have been done in the most disgraceful manner possible; of which there seems to be some remains, in the common expression of pulling a man's gown over his ears.

A deposition, or degradation from the ministry, necessarily includes deprivation of benefice; though a man may be deprived of his benefice without being degraded from the ministry. The statute 23 Hen. 8, c. 1, s. 6, now repealed, reserved to the ordinary the power of degrading clerks convict of treason, petit treason, murder and certain other felonies there mentioned, before judgment. And Dr. Gibson observes, that in the judgment given against Dr. Leighton, for publishing a seditious book, it is said as follows:—"And in respect the defendant hath heretofore entered into the ministry, and this court, for the reverence of that calling, doth not use to inflict any corporal or ignominious punishment upon any person so long as they continue in orders; the court doth refer him to the high commission, there to be degraded of his ministry." Which being accordingly done, he was set in the pillory, whipped &c. (l).

SECT. 8.—Excommunication and Process for Contempt.

It is very necessary to bear in mind the distinction between excommunication purely spiritual and excommunication enforced by statute and the civil law (m).

As to the first, excommunication is an ecclesiastical censure, whereby the person against whom it is pronounced is, for the time, cast out of the communion of the church (n).

And it is of two kinds, the lesser and the greater: The lesser excommunication is, the depriving the offender of the use of the sacraments and divine worship; and this sentence was passed by judges ecclesiastical, on such persons as were guilty of obstinacy or disobedience, in not appearing upon a citation, or not submitting to penance, or other injunctions of the court (o).

The greater excommunication is that whereby men are deprived, not only of the sacraments, and the benefit of divine offices, but of the society and conversation of the faithful (p).

If a person be excommunicated generally, as if the judge say: I excommunicate such a person—this shall be understood of the greater excommunication (q).

The law in many cases inflicted the censure of excommunication ipso facto upon offenders; which nevertheless was not intended so as to condemn any person without a lawful trial for his offence: but he must first be found guilty in the proper court, and then the law gave that judgment. Thus by 5 & 6 Edw. 6, c. 4, s. 2, every person who shall smite or lay violent hands upon another in any church or churchyard, was to be deemed ipso facto excommunicate; yet a defendant could not while that statute was in force plead excommunication in a plaintiff without showing either a sentence of excommunication by the ordinary, or a conviction at law (r); and where the canonists speak of an excommunication ipso facto, they are unanimous that a declaratory sentence is necessary (s).

There are divers provincial constitutions, by which it is provided, that this censure shall not be pronounced (in ordinary cases) without previous monition or notice to the parties, which also is agreeable to the ancient canon law (t). And the Court of Arches has decided, that in every case an excommunication ipso facto requires a sententia declaratoria (u).

(m) Lind. p. 345, gloss on Excommunicamus. “Similem modum, &c., ubi patet quod pro futuris culpis sententia excommunicationis ferri non debet, nec pro præsenti-bus, nec pro præteritis, nisi monitione canonicâ præmissâ. By Ecclesiastical Censure.]—That is, by the lesser excommunication, if they have not been admonished to desist; and by the greater excommunication, if they have been admonished, and have not desisted (a).

Article 33.

And by Art. 33 of the Thirty-nine Articles of Religion, "That person which by open denunciation of the church is rightly cut off from the unity of the church, and excommunicated, ought to be taken, of the whole multitude of the faithful, as an heathen and publican; until he be openly reconciled by penance, and received into the church by a judge that hath authority thereunto."

Ancient constitutions.

And this is according to the ancient rule of the church. And it was further ordained by many other ancient constitutions of the church, that if a person excommunicated in one city or diocese went to another, whoever received him to communion, should be also excommunicate: for which reason no strangers were to be received to communion, till they showed their letters of recommendation. This rule was incorporated into our law by the Council of London, in the year 1126, that no person shall presume to receive to communion any stranger excommunicate; and if any shall knowingly do so, he himself shall be deprived of Christian communion (b).

Canon 85.

Excommunicates to be kept out of the church.

By Can. 85 of 1603, the churchwardens or questmen especially shall see "that all persons excommunicated, and so denounced, be kept out of the church" (c).

And if a clergyman presume to officiate, after he is excommunicated, the canon law orders him to be deprived (d).

To be publicly denounced every six months.

Canon 65.

In the ancient church, the sentence of the greater excommunication was solemnly promulged four times in the year; with candles lighted, bells tolling, the cross and other solemnities (e).

By Can. 65 (f), "All ordinaries shall, in their several jurisdictions, carefully see and give order, that . . . who for notorious contumacy or other notable crimes stand lawfully excommunicate (unless within three months immediately after the said sentence of excommunication pronounced against them they reform themselves, and obtain the benefit of absolution,) be every six months ensuing, as well in the parish church as in the cathedral church of the dioceses in which they remain, by the minister openly in time of divine service upon some Sunday, denounced and declared excommunicate, that others may be thereby both admonished to refrain their company and society, and excited the rather to procure out a writ de excommunicato capiendo, thereby to bring and reduce them into due order and obedience” (g).

Lord Coke says, none can certify excommunication but only the bishop, unless the bishop be beyond sea or in parts remote; or one that has ordinary jurisdiction, and is immediate officer to the king’s courts; as the archdeacon of Richmond, or the dean and chapter in time of vacation. But in ancient time, every official or commissary might testify excommunication to the king’s court; and for the mischief that ensued thereupon it was ordained by parliament, that none should testify excommunication but the bishop only (h).

Who may certify excommunication.

Of this power, as restrained to the bishop, Lindwood writes thus: At the request of inferior prelates, the king used not to write for the taking of excommunicates. Wherefore, if any be excommunicated by a person inferior to the bishop, as by the dean, or archdeacon, the invocation of the king’s majesty ought to be made by the bishop; for they who are inferior to bishops cannot call in the secular arm, but the bishops shall execute their sentences; and if the bishops will not do this, they may be compelled thereunto by the archbishop (i).

Whatever may have been the civil disqualifications incident to excommunication, they are now removed by 53 Geo. 3, c. 127.

As to civil disqualifications.

The rule of the canon law is, that an excommunicate person shall not be presented to a benefice; and he who knowingly shall present an excommunicate person, shall be suspended from presenting to any benefice, until he shall have obtained absolution (k).

An excommunicate may not be presented to a benefice.

By Can. 68, if the minister refuse to bury any corpse, “except the party deceased were denounced excommunicated majori excommunicatione, for some grievous and notorious crime, and no man able to testify of his repentance”; he shall be suspended from his ministry for the space of three months (l).

May not have burial office. Canon 68.

And by the rubric in the Book of Common Prayer, the burial office shall not be used for any that die excommunicate.

As to the imprisonment of excommunicate persons, the old law and custom of this realm was as follows:—The person who remained forty days under the sentence of excommunication should, at the request of his proper diocesan, be arrested and imprisoned by a writ of de excommunicato capiendo directed to the sheriff; but first there ought to be a certificate from such diocesan under his episcopal seal, signifying to the Court of Chancery the contempt of the party to holy church (m).

Which forty days were to be accounted after the minister had published the excommunication in the church; which was done by virtue of an instrument he had for that purpose, under the seal of the ecclesiastical court: and then if the person excommunicated did not submit within forty days after the said publication, he might (after such certificate so made as aforesaid) be arrested upon the writ of excommunicato capiendo (n).

But though the bishop might certify not only an excommunication made by himself, but also an excommunication made by his commissary or official who did it in his right, and by his archdeacon, whose jurisdiction is derived from him (in which case the rule in the register is, that when the bishop signifies any one to be excommunicate by authority of the archdeacon or official, it ought always to be said in the writ to be by the authority of that bishop or him who so certifies); yet he might not certify that which has been done in another court: and therefore a certificate that another bishop has certified him, or that he had seen a sentence of excommunication made by another bishop, was of no force (o).

And if the bishop made a wrong certificate, he was liable to be made a party and to pay costs (p).

The certificate of the bishop ought to express the cause, and the suit against him, specially in the certificate; to the end the temporal judges might see whether the spiritual court had cognizance of the original cause, and whether the excommunication be according to law; that if it were otherwise, they might write to them to absolve the party (q).

For since it affected the liberty of a man's person, therefore it concerned a temporal interest (r).

And the bishop having certified the excommunication under seal, albeit he died, yet the certificate shall serve (s).

Issues ex debito justitiæ.

Lord Coke says, the writ of excommunicato capiendo proceeds only ex gratiâ regis (t).

On the contrary, Lindwood says, this writ is grantable of right, ex debito (u).

And by a Constitution of Archbishop Boniface, delivered in the wonted strain of that archbishop's constitutions, If the king deny the accustomed writ de excommunicato capiendo, his cities, castles, towns, and villages within that diocese, shall by the bishop be put under an interdict until the same shall be granted (x).

Dr. Cosin (with more moderation) says concerning this writ, that "it is a liberty peculiar to the Church of England, above all the realms in Christendom" that he has read of, that although the assistance of the secular arm has ever been afforded to the church in most other Christian countries, as well as this, yet in no instance is it perhaps so surely and so effectually reached out, as in the execution of this writ, which is debitum justitiæ, and not made to depend upon the pleasure of the prince (y).

And this seems to be agreeable to the tenor of the chapter now repealed in the statute of Articuli cleri, 9 Edw. 2, st. 1, c. 12, where to the complaint of the clergy in this respect, the king makes answer, "That the said writ was never yet denied, nor shall be hereafter."

The statute regulating this writ is 5 Eliz. c. 23. This statute recites that "divers persons offending in many great crimes and offences, appertaining merely to the jurisdiction and determination of the ecclesiastical courts and judges of this realm, are many times unpunished for want of due execution of the writ de excommunicato capiendo; . . . the great abuse whereof, as it should seem, hath grown, for that the said writ is not returnable into any court that might have the judgment of the well executing and serving the said writ, but hitherto hath been left only to the discretion of the sheriffs and their deputies, by whose negligences and defaults for the most part the said writ is not executed upon the offenders as it ought to be; by reason whereof, such offenders be greatly encouraged to continue their sinful and criminous life, much to the displeasure of Almighty God, and to the great contempt of the ecclesiastical laws of this realm."

It enacts as follows: sect. 1, "Every writ of excommunicato capiendo that shall be granted . . . (z) out of the High Court of Chancery . . . shall be made in the time of the term (a), and returnable . . . in the King's Bench in the term next after the teste of the same writ; and the same writ shall be made to contain at the least twenty days between the teste and the return thereof: and after the same writ shall be so made and sealed, then the said writ shall be forthwith brought into the Court of King's Bench, and there in the presence of the justices shall be opened and delivered of record to the sheriff or other officer to whom the serving and execution thereof shall appertain, or to his or their deputy or deputies. . . ."

Sect. 2. "The sheriff or other officer to whom such writ of excommunicato capiendo, or other process by virtue of this Act shall be directed, shall not in anywise be compelled to bring the body of such person . . . as shall be named in the said writ or process, into the said Court of the King's Bench at the day of the return thereof; but shall only return the same writ and process thither, with declaration briefly how and in what manner he hath served and executed the same. . . ."

All such writs shall be made in term time, returnable into the King's Bench, and opened and delivered of record to the sheriff.

Sheriff not compellable to bring in body;

(z) The verbiage of this Act, its duplicate verbs, and the use of singular and plural, "person or persons," &c., make it very tedious, hence the omissions in the text.

“And if the said sheriff or other officer shall return that the party cannot be found within his bailwick, then the said justices of the King’s Bench shall award one writ of capias against the said person named in the said writ of excommunicato capiendo; returnable in the same court in the term time two months at the least next after the teste thereof; with a proclamation to be contained within the said writ of capias, that the sheriff or other officer in the full county court, or else at the general assizes or at quarter sessions shall make open proclamation ten days at the least before the return, that the party named in the said writ shall, within six days next after such proclamation, yield his body to the gaol and prison of the said sheriff or other such officer, there to remain as a prisoner, according to the tenor and effect of the first writ of excommunicato capiendo, upon pain of forfeiture of 10*l*. And thereupon, after such proclamation had, and the said six days past and expired, then the said sheriff or other officer shall make return of the same writ of capias into the said Court of the King’s Bench, of all that he hath done in the execution thereof, and whether the party named in the said writ have yielded his body to prison or not.

“And if upon the return of the said sheriff it shall appear that the party or parties named in the same writ of capias have not yielded their bodies to the gaol and prison of the said sheriff or other officer, according to the effect of the same proclamation, then every such person that shall so make default shall for every such default forfeit to the Queen’s Highness 10*l*.”

The section goes on to provide for the issue of one other writ of capias against the said person that so shall be returned to have made default, with such like proclamation as was contained in the first capias, and a pain of 20*l*. to be mentioned in the said second writ and proclamation. The same procedure is to be followed. The second writ may be followed by a third with like pain, and so on infinitely.

Sect. 6. “Provided always, that in Wales, the counties palatine of Lancaster, Chester, Durham and Ely, and in the cinque ports, being jurisdictions and places exempt, where the Queen’s Majesty’s writ doth not run, and process of capias from thence not returnable into the . . . King’s Bench; after any significavit being of record in the said Court of Chancery, the tenor of such significavit by mittimus shall be sent to such of the head officers of the said country of Wales, counties palatine, and places exempt, within whose offices, charge or jurisdiction the offenders shall be resiant; that is to say, to the chancellor or chamberlain for the said county palatine of Lancaster and Chester, and for the cinque ports to the lord warden of the same, and for Wales and Ely, and the county palatine of Durham, to the chief justice or justices there: and thereupon every of the said justices and officers to whom such tenor of significavit with mittimus shall be directed and delivered, shall have power to make like process to the inferior officers to whom the execution of process there doth appertain, returnable before the justices there, at their next sessions or courts, two months at the least after the teste of every such process: so always, as in every degree they shall proceed in their sessions and courts against the offenders, as the justices of the said Court of King's Bench are limited by the tenor of this Act in term times to do and execute" (c).

Sect. 7. "Provided also that any person at the time of any process of capias (afore-mentioned) awarded, being in prison, or out of this realm in the parts beyond the sea, or within age, or of non-sane memory, or woman covert, shall not incur any of the pains or forfeitures afore-mentioned, which shall grow by any return or default happening, during such time of non-age, imprisonment, being beyond sea, or non-sane memory; and the party grieved may plead every such cause or matter in bar of and upon the distress or other process that shall be made for levying of any of the said pains or forfeitures.

Proviso for prisoners, infants, femes covert and other disabled persons.

"And if the offender against whom any such writ of excommunicato capiendo shall be awarded, shall not in the same writ have a sufficient and lawful addition or if in the significavit it be not contained, that the excommunication doth proceed upon some cause or contempt of some original matter of heresy, or refusing to have his child baptized, or to receive the holy communion as it commonly is now used to be received in the Church of England, or to come to divine service now commonly used in the said Church of England, or error in matters of religion or doctrine now received and allowed in the said Church of England, incontinency, usury, simony, perjury in the ecclesiastical court, or idolatry: that then all and every pains and forfeitures limited against such persons excommunicate by this statute, by reason of such writ of excommunicato capiendo wanting sufficient addition, or of such significavit wanting all the causes afore-mentioned, shall be utterly void in law; and by way of plea, to be allowed to the party grieved."

nuper of the place, the first proclamation shall be without penalty or forfeiture.

Sect. 1. It shall be forthwith brought into the Court of King's Bench.—It has been often adjudged that this form of taking out the writ, and the several steps therein (as contained in this clause of the Act), ought to be precisely pursued; and for default thereof many persons have been discharged (d).

Sect. 3. Capias.—The penalties of this Act being inflicted upon none but those who are excommunicated for some of the causes specified in sect. 7, the capias accordingly must not be with penalty in any other case: or if it issue so by mistake, the court will grant a supersedeas upon motion: and, if the party be taken, will upon pleading (after the habeas corpus is granted and returned and so the matter is judicially before them) discharge him from the penalties, though not from the imprisonment. In consideration of which pleading, and the trouble and charge that attends it, it is said that he may have an attachment against the plaintiff (e).

He shall remain in the Custody of the said Sheriff.—In Slipper v. Mason, in 1 Anne, the plaintiff obtained sentence against the defendant for 210*l.* for non-payment of tithes and costs. The defendant for non-payment was excommunicated, and arrested upon an excommunicato capiendo, and the sheriff let him escape. The plaintiff brought a special action against the sheriff, and had a verdict against him for the 210*l.* It was moved in arrest of judgment, that the action would not lie. But by the court it was adjudged that the action well lay (f).

Without Bail.—By 3 Edw. 1, c. 15, now repealed, persons excommunicate, taken at the request of the bishop, shall be in nowise replevisable by the common writ, nor without writ.

But if the party offered sufficient caution de parendo mandatis ecclesie in forma juris, then should the party have the king's writ to the bishop to accept his caution, and to cause him to be delivered. And if the bishop will not send to the sheriff to deliver him, then shall he have a writ out of the chancery to the sheriff for his delivery; or if he be excommunicated for a temporal cause, or for a matter whereof the ecclesiastical court has no cognizance, he shall be delivered by the king's writ without any satisfaction (g).

Sect. 7. Shall not in the same Writ have a sufficient and lawful Addition.—In Reg. v. Sangway, in 1 Anne, the defendant was excommunicated for a certain cause of jactitation of marriage, and taken upon a capias and brought up by habeas corpus; and exception was taken to the writ that therein no addition was given to the defendant; but the court held, that for any of the causes mentioned in the statute, the defendant's addition ought to be in the writ, but that in other cases no addition is necessary (h).

If in the significavit it be not contained.]—In Rex v. Fowler, Holt, Chief Justice, said that at the common law the cause had no need to be shown in the writ of excommunicato capiendo; but it was sufficient to say that the party was excommunicate for manifest contumacy; but in the bishop's certificate it ought to be shown. And now, since 5 Eliz. c. 23, the cause ought to be shown in the writ (i).

As to showing cause of excommunication in writ.

Rex v. Fowler.

In the same case, on a habeas corpus the return was, that Fowler was taken and in custody by a writ of excommunicato capiendo, and the excommunication was in the writ recited to be for certain causes of subtraction of tithes or other ecclesiastical rights; and because this return was uncertain, the court was moved that he might be discharged; and the question was, whether this return was uncertain, and whether that uncertainty would vitiate the writ: and the court resolved, 1, that the return was uncertain, for that the other rights might be such matters as were out of their jurisdiction, and they ought to show the matter was within their jurisdiction, for of that the king's courts are to be judges, and not they themselves: 2, the cause of excommunication must be set forth in the writ. Accordingly the writ was quashed, and this special entry made on the habeas corpus, that the party was discharged because the writ de excommunicato capiendo was quashed (j).

In Reg. v. The Bishop of St. Davids, already cited (k), the defendant having been arrested upon an excommunicato capiendo, was brought into court by habeas corpus. And upon the return it appeared that he was excommunicated for non-payment of costs, in which he was condemned by commissioners delegate in a certain cause of office or correction, at the promotion of Lucy. And this by the court was holden to be ill, because it did not appear that these costs were adjudged in a cause of ecclesiastical cognizance; and it is plain, since 5 Eliz. c. 23, that the cause ought to appear in the writ; for otherwise how can this court make judgment of the several causes specified in that statute, in order to award several processes with penalties? And the court discharged the defendant (l).

Reg. v. The Bishop of St. Davids.

So in the Court of Chancery, in 10 Geo. 2, in Rex v. Eyre, two significavits were quashed, being only said to be in a cause which came by appeal concerning a matter merely spiritual. For by Lord Talbot: We are not to lend our assistance but where it appears clearly they have jurisdiction, and are not to trust them to determine what is a matter merely spiritual (m).

Rex v. Payton. In Rex v. Payton, in 37 Geo. 3, it was holden that a writ de excommunicato capiendo, which stated that the defendant was excommunicated in a cause of defamation and slander merely spiritual, was good. If the sentence of the greater, instead of the lesser, excommunication be pronounced, it is only a ground of appeal, and the Court of King's Bench will not quash a writ de excommunicato capiendo for that objection. It is not necessary that the defendant should be resident in the diocese at the time of the excommunication: it is sufficient if he were there at the time of the citation (n).

5 Eliz. c. 23,
s. 3.
Absolution
and discharge.

Sect. 5 of 5 Eliz. c. 23, saves and reserves "to all archbishops and bishops and all others having authority to certify any person excommunicated, like authority to accept and receive the submission and satisfaction of the said person so excommunicated, in manner and form heretofore used; and him to absolve and release, and the same to signify, as heretofore it hath been accustomed," to the Queen in Chancery; "and thereupon to have such writs for the deliverance of the said person so absolved and released from the sheriff's custody or prison, as heretofore they or any of them had, or of right ought or might have had."

In which case, if due caution be offered by the party excommunicated, and admitted by the bishop, then the bishop may command the sheriff to deliver him out of prison (o).

What is due caution.

The language of the writs, when they speak of absolving and delivering an excommunicate, is facta satisfactione, aut præstita cautione, prout moris est, de parendo mandatis ecclesie, that is, either making present satisfaction at or upon his absolution, or putting in caution that he will hereafter perform that which the bishop shall reasonably and according to law enjoin him. Which caution, in the civil law, is of three sorts: 1, fide jussoria, as where a man binds himself with sureties to perform somewhat; 2, pignoratitia or realis cautio, as when a man engages goods, or mortgages lands, for the performance; 3, juratoria, when the party which is to perform anything, takes a corporal oath to do it (p).

(p) For the doctrine of putting in cautions, see Inst. lib. 4, tit. 11, with the Commentaries of Vinnius and Huber, Prælectiones. Of these cautions Bishop Gibson observes, that "the last of them, viz. an oath de parendo juri et stando mandatis ecclesie in forma juris, is that which is often accepted by ordinaries; and as to the second, it is expressly mentioned in the ancient Register (fo. 66a, 67), and has always been acknowledged in the temporal courts to be good in law. But as to the first, under which is comprehended the taking of a bond for performance, it was declared, 9 Jac. 1 (1 Bulst. p. 122), to be against law; but as that was a judgment given by the way only, so when the same matter came

If good and sufficient caution is offered and not admitted, then a writ to the bishop is provided in the register, to command him (after having taken sufficient caution), to order the person to be delivered (q). Writ of deliverance in certain cases.

And if the bishop did not deliver him upon the said writ, then the party might have another writ to the sheriff, to command him to apply personally to the bishop, and admonish him to deliver the party after having taken sufficient caution; and if the bishop would not do the same in presence of the sheriff, then the sheriff to deliver him (r).

And the reason thereof was, for that by the excommunication the party was disabled to sue any action, or to have any remedy for any wrong done unto him so long as he shall remain excommunicate. And also the party grieved might have his action upon his case against the bishop; in like manner as he might when the bishop excommunicated him for a matter which belonged not to ecclesiastical cognizance. Also the bishop in those cases might be indicted at the suit of the king (s).

In like manner, if one appeared in the spiritual court, and was excommunicated for refusing to answer, where he was not bound by the law to answer (as, for instance, when he could not obtain a copy of the libel), prohibition was granted, with a clause to absolve and deliver the party (t). Order to absolve in certain cases.

But although, in case the party excommunicated rests in the sentence given against him, there is no legal means for his deliverance, but submission and caution as is aforesaid; yet if he appeal from such sentence to a superior ecclesiastical judge, this puts the party in the same state that he was in before the sentence given; which the law orders, by reason of the present doubtfulness whether it was valid or invalid. Add to this, that by appeal the judge a quo ceases to be his judge in that cause; and if the party was imprisoned, and were to continue so, he would thereby be hindered from the effectual prosecution of his appeal, which may happen to prove just. Wherefore, upon allegation in behalf of the party against whom the writ is gone Appeal.

under consideration again, 25 Car. 2, The Bp. of Exon v. Star, T. Raym. p. 226; 2 Lev. p. 36, it was urged that by the tenor of the writ the choice of the caution is left to the discretion of the ordinary, and that caution by obligation is as much a caution as either of the other two, and more for the ease of the party than a pledge, and the constant use and practice of the ecclesiastical courts; upon this Hale doubted whether it was good or not; but Wild held it was good, saying that such bonds had been frequent, and that they had been out, that he has appealed, and upon proof made thereof by an authentic instrument, a writ of supersedeas (without any appearance of a scire facias preceding) is provided for him in the register (u).

But the usual way (especially in cases where it is doubtful whether objections may not lie against his being delivered) was the issuing a scire facias, to warn the bishop and the party prosecuting to show cause why the sheriff should not surcease from attaching the excommunicate, or why he should not deliver him, if he be in prison. And if the bishop in cases of office, and the prosecutor in cases of instance, did not appear in Chancery, the party was delivered; but if they appeared, and not the party, then a re-attachment went forth to imprison him (x).

As to quashing the writ de excommunicato capi-
endo.

In Reg. v. The Bishop of St. Davids, the defendant was taken upon a writ of excommunicato capiendo, and being in custody in Newgate, prayed a habeas corpus, and was brought into court thereupon; and it appeared by the return that the writ of excommunicato capiendo was not yet returnable. And the court held that one taken on a writ of excommunicato capiendo cannot come into this court but by habeas corpus; and if he be brought in before the writ is returnable, he shall not be allowed to plead or move to quash the writ (y).

But in Rex v. Theed, in 3 Geo. 1, after the writ had been opened and entered of record, it was delivered out in order to take up the defendant; and before the return, the defendant moved and had it superseded; for the court said they could judge of it by the entry; and since it appeared that the defendant could not be legally detained upon it if he was taken, it was proper to supersede it, to prevent the man's being restrained of his liberty contrary to law; that the intent of the statute, which directs the writ to be delivered in open court, was to apprise the court of the nature of the cause; that this was now to be considered as a writ that improvidè emanavit; and they were not to wait till the return, till all the inconveniences which they should have prevented by not issuing the writ had happened (z). And in Rex v. Munnery (a) a writ de excommunicato capiendo was quashed, being only for not appearing to answer certis articulis animæ suæ salutem morumque correctionem concernentibus.

(b) 1 Inst. p. 134.

The two acts immediately following have wrought a great change in the law of excommunication :—

The first, 53 Geo. 3, c. 127, substitutes a decree pronouncing the contumacious person in contempt, and signifying his contempt in the same way as excommunication used to be signified, all other proceedings being the same.

After reciting that, "it is expedient that excommunication, together with all proceedings following thereupon, should, saving in certain cases, be discontinued, and that other proceedings should be substituted in lieu thereof; and that certain other regulations should be made in the proceedings of the ecclesiastical courts;" . . . it enacts as follows :—Sect. 1. "Excommunication, together with all proceedings following thereupon, shall in all cases, save those hereafter to be specified, be discontinued throughout that part of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland called England; and in all causes which according to the laws of this realm are cognizable in the ecclesiastical courts, when any person or persons having been duly cited to appear in any ecclesiastical court, or required to comply with the lawful orders or decrees, as well final as interlocutory, of any such court, shall neglect or refuse to appear, or neglect or refuse to pay obedience to such lawful orders or decrees, or when any person or persons shall commit a contempt in the face of such court, no sentence of excommunication shall be given or pronounced, saving in the particular cases hereafter to be specified, but instead thereof, it shall be lawful for the judges or judge who issued out the citation, or whose lawful orders or decrees have not been obeyed, or before whom such contempt in the face of the court shall have been committed, to pronounce such person or persons contumacious and in contempt, and within ten days to signify the same, in the form to this act annexed, to his Majesty in chancery, as hath heretofore been done in signifying excommunications (c); and thereupon a writ de contumace capiendo, in the form to this act annexed, shall issue from the Court of Chancery, directed to the same persons to whom the writs de excommunicato capiendo have heretofore been directed; and the same shall be returnable in like manner as the writ de excommunicato capiendo hath been by law returnable heretofore, and shall have the same force and effect as the said writ; and all rules and regulations not hereby altered, now by law applying to the said writ and the proceedings following thereupon, and particularly the several provisions contained in 5 Eliz. c. 23, shall extend and be applied to the said writ de contumace capiendo and the proceedings following thereupon, as if the same were herein particularly repeated and enacted (d); and Writ de contumace capiendo to issue.

(c) The court refused, on discretionary grounds, to signify where the contempt was after a long lapse of time: Hakes v. Cox, (1892) P.

p. 110.

(d) This makes the cases upon the old act still valuable.

Upon obedience or submission, person to be absolved and discharged.

the proper officers of the said Court of Chancery are hereby authorized and required to issue such writ de contumace capiendo accordingly; and all sheriffs, gaolers and other officers are hereby authorized and required to execute the same, by taking and detaining the body of the person against whom the said writ shall be directed to be executed; and upon the due appearance of the party so cited and not having appeared as aforesaid, or the obedience of the party so cited and not having obeyed as aforesaid, or the due submission of the party so having committed a contempt in the face of the court, the judges or judge of such ecclesiastical court shall pronounce such party absolved from the contumacy and contempt aforesaid, and shall forthwith make an order upon the sheriff, gaoler or other officer in whose custody he shall be, in the form to this act annexed, for discharging such party out of custody, and such sheriff, gaoler or other officer shall, on the said order being shown to him, so soon as such party shall have discharged the costs lawfully incurred by reason of such custody and contempt, forthwith discharge him (e).

In what cases excommunication shall continue.

Then follows an important section.

Sect. 2. "Provided always . . . that nothing in this act contained shall prevent any ecclesiastical court from pronouncing or declaring persons to be excommunicated in definitive sentences, or in interlocutory decrees having the force and effect of definitive sentences, such sentences or decrees being pronounced as spiritual censures for offences of ecclesiastical cognizance, in the same manner as such court might lawfully have pronounced or declared the same, had this act not been passed" (f).

Sect. 3. "And . . . no person who shall be so pronounced or declared excommunicate, shall incur any civil penalty or incapacity whatever, in consequence of such excommunication, save such imprisonment, not exceeding six months, as the court pronouncing or declaring such person excommunicate shall direct, and in such case the said excommunication, and the term of such imprisonment, shall be signified or certified to his Majesty in chancery, in the same manner as excommunications have been heretofore signified, and thereupon the writ de excommunicato capi-

(f) It seems to be competent to the court to pass this sentence without signifying, as in the case of the prosecutor not asking for a significavit; in which case, if the excommunicated person remained in that state till his death, according to the rubric preceding the burial service, that service would not be used on his behalf; nor, of course, would he be entitled, while living, to receive the holy communion. This was done in Hoile v. Scales, 2 Hagg. Eccl. p. 597.

2 & 3 Will. 4,
c. 93.

Practical use of.

The second act, 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 93, was intended only for certain exceptional cases where contumacious persons were in Ireland or were privileged from arrest; but since the abolition of imprisonment for debt has become the only means of enforcing the payment of costs when decreed by an ecclesiastical court.

It recites that “great inconvenience has been found to arise by reason of the process of the several ecclesiastical courts in England being inoperative and unavailable out of the limits of the respective jurisdictions of such courts, and against persons having privilege of peerage, lords of parliament, and members of the house of commons; and in many instances a failure of justice hath thereby ensued.” And that it is expedient, “that the process of the said several courts, and the means of enforcing obedience to the same, should be of equal force and have the like operation, as well in that part of the united kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland called England as in that part of the same united kingdom called Ireland, and as well against persons having privilege of peerage, lords of parliament, and members of the house of commons, as against all other his majesty’s subjects,” and enacts as follows:

Where persons residing beyond the jurisdiction of any ecclesiastical courts are cited to appear, &c., and refuse obedience, the judge thereof may pronounce them contumacious, and certify the same to the Lord Chancellor, &c., within ten days, and

Sect. 1. “In all causes which according to the laws of this realm are or may be cognizable in any of the several ecclesiastical courts in that part of the united kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland called England . . . when any person or persons, as well those which have or hereafter shall have privilege of peerage, or are or hereafter may be peers of parliament or members of the house of commons, as all others who shall happen to be domiciled or residing either in England or in Ireland, and beyond the limits of the jurisdiction of the court in which such causes have been or shall have been respectively instituted or commenced, or shall be depending, having been duly cited to appear in any such ecclesiastical court, . . . or required to comply with any lawful order or decree, as well final as interlocutory, which hath been or shall have been made by any such court respectively, shall neglect or refuse to pay obedience to any such lawful order or decree, or when any such person or persons shall commit a contempt in the face of such court, or any other contempt towards such court, or the process thereof, it shall be lawful for the judge or judges out of whose court the citation or process hath already issued or may hereafter issue, or whose lawful orders or decrees have not or shall not have been obeyed, or before whom such contempt in the face of the court shall be committed, or by whose order or authority such process in respect of or towards which any such contempt shall have been committed has been or shall be awarded or issued, or the successor or successors in office of such judge or judges respectively, to pronounce such person or persons contumacious and in contempt, and within ten days after such person or persons shall have been so pronounced to be contumacious and in contempt to signify the same to the lord chancellor, lord keeper, or lords commissioners for the custody of the great seal of England for the time being respectively, whenever the person or persons who shall have been so pronounced contumacious and in contempt shall be domiciled or residing in England, and within the like period of ten days to signify the same to the lord chancellor, lord keeper or lords commissioners for the custody of the great seal of Ireland for the time being respectively, whenever the person or persons who shall have been so pronounced contumacious and in contempt shall be domiciled or residing in Ireland, in the form annexed to" 53 Geo. 3, c. 127; "and thereupon, and in case the person so reputed to be in contempt shall not be a peer, lord of parliament, or member of the house of commons, a writ de contumace capiendo shall issue from his majesty's said High Court of Chancery in England or in Ireland, as the case may happen, to be directed to the same persons to whom writs de excommunicato capiendo were by law returnable before the passing of the said act of parliament, and the same shall be returnable in like manner as the writ de excommunicato capiendo had been theretofore by law returnable, and shall have the same force and effect as the last-mentioned writ; and all rules and regulations not altered by the said act" 53 Geo. 3, c. 127, "and which before the passing of the same act applied to the said writ de excommunicato capiendo, and the proceedings following thereupon, and particularly the several provisions contained in" 5 Eliz. c. 23, "shall extend and be applied to the said writ de contumace capiendo, and the proceedings following thereupon, as if the same were herein particularly repeated and enacted; and the proper officers of the said two several High Courts of Chancery in England and Ireland, as the case may happen to be, are hereby authorized and required to issue such writ de contumace capiendo accordingly; and all sheriffs, gaolers, and other officers in England and in Ireland, as the case may happen to be, are hereby required and authorized to execute the same, by taking and detaining the body of the person or persons thereupon a writ de contumace capiendo shall issue, unless the person be a peer, &c.

All regulations and provisions applying to the writ de excommunicato, and proceedings thereupon, shall be applied to the writ de contumace.

Upon the appearance or submission of the party, the judge may order him to be absolved or discharged.

Where persons possessed of estates, &c. in England neglect to pay money ordered by the said courts, the judges may pronounce such persons contumacious, and certify the same to the Lord Chancellor, who shall cause process of sequestration to issue against the estate of the party in England.

against whom the said writ shall be so directed to be executed; and upon the due appearance of the party or parties so cited and not having obeyed as aforesaid, or the due submission of the party or parties so having committed a contempt in the face of the court, or otherwise, as hereinbefore is mentioned, the judge or judges of such ecclesiastical court . . . as the case may be, shall pronounce such party or parties absolved from the contumacy and contempt aforesaid, and shall forthwith make an order upon the sheriff, gaoler, or other officer in whose custody he, she, or they shall be, in the form to" 53 Geo. 3, c. 127, "annexed, for discharging such party or parties out of custody; and such sheriff, gaoler, and other officer shall, on the said order being shown to him, so soon as such party or parties shall have discharged the costs lawfully incurred by reason of such custody and contempt, forthwith discharge him, her, or them."

Sect. 2. "In all such cases as are hereinbefore mentioned, and which are or may be cognizable in any or either of the several hereinbefore mentioned courts, when any person or persons, as well such person or persons as have or shall hereafter have privilege of peerage, or are or shall hereafter be lords of parliament or members of the House of Commons, as others who shall happen to be domiciled or residing either in England or in Ireland, have been or shall have been ordered or required, by the lawful order or decree, final or interlocutory, of any such court respectively, to pay any sum or sums of money, and when any such person or persons, after having been duly monished, shall refuse or neglect to comply with such monition, and to pay the sum or sums of money therein ordered to be paid by him or them, within the time and in the manner in any such order or decree mentioned or expressed, or a peer or lord of parliament or member of the House of Commons shall refuse or withhold obedience, or shall in any way neglect to perform or shall not perform any decree or order, final or interlocutory, of such courts as aforesaid, it shall be lawful for the judge or judges who shall have made such order or decree, or his or their successor or successors in office, to pronounce the person or persons so neglecting or refusing to comply with such order or decree contumacious and in contempt, and within ten days after such person or persons shall have been so pronounced contumacious and in contempt to cause a copy of such order or decree, under the seal of the court wherein the same shall have been made, or under the hand or hands of such judge or judges, or one of them, to be exemplified, and certified to the lord chancellor, lord keeper, or lords commissioners for the custody of the great seal of England for the time being respectively, whenever the person or persons who shall have been so pronounced contumacious shall be domiciled or residing, or shall be seised or possessed of or entitled to any real or personal estate, goods, chattels, or effects, situate, lying, or being in England; and the said lord chancellor, lord keeper, or lords commissioners for the custody of the great seal of England, shall forthwith cause such copy of such order or decree, when it shall be presented to them respectively, so exemplified, to be enrolled in the rolls of the High Court of Chancery in England, and shall thereupon cause process of sequestration to issue against the real and personal estate, goods, chattels, and effects, in England, of the party or parties against whom such order or decree shall have been made, in order to enforce obedience to and performance of the same, in the same manner and form, and with the like power and effect, as if the cause wherein such order or decree shall have been made had been originally cognizable by and instituted in the said Court of Chancery in England, and as if all and every the process of the said Court of Chancery in England ordinarily issuing in causes there pending antecedent to process of sequestration had been duly issued and returned in the last-mentioned court; and it shall and may be lawful for the said lord chancellor, lord keeper, or lords commissioners of the great seal in England, to make such order and orders in respect of or consequent upon such sequestration, or in respect of the real or personal estate, goods, chattels, or effects sequestered by virtue thereof, as he or they shall from time to time think fit, or for payment of all or any of the monies levied or received by virtue thereof . . .” (h).

Sect. 3 contains a like provision as to persons domiciled or residing, or seised or possessed of or entitled to any real or personal estate, goods, chattels, or effects, situate in Ireland.

Act.

pardon.

With respect to the effect of a general pardon issued by the king, it seems to have been always agreed, that the king's pardon will discharge any suit in the spiritual court ex officio : also it seems to have been settled, that it will likewise discharge any suit in such court ad instantiam partis pro reformatione morum or salute animæ, for such suits are in truth the suits of the king, though prosecuted by the party.

(k) 2 Curt. p. 632.

(m) 8 P. D. p. 79.

Also it seems to be agreed, that if the time to which such pardon has relation be prior to the award of costs to the party, it shall discharge them: and it seems to be the general tenor of the books, that though it be subsequent to the award of the costs, yet if it be prior to the taxation of them, it shall discharge them, because nothing appears in certain to be due for costs before they are taxed.

As to discharging costs.

Also, if after a person is excommunicate there comes a general act of pardon, it seems that the offence is taken away without any formal absolution.

Where party excommunicated.

Also, if a person be imprisoned on a writ de excommunicato capiendo, for his contumacy in not paying costs, and afterwards the king pardons all contempts, it seems that he shall be discharged of such imprisonment without any scire facias against the party; because it is grounded on the contempt, which is wholly pardoned; and the party must begin anew to compel a payment of the costs.

But it seems agreed, that a pardon would not discharge a suit in the spiritual court, any more than in a temporal, for a matter of interest or property in the plaintiff. Also it is agreed, that after costs are taxed in a suit in such court at the prosecution of the party, whether for a matter of private interest, or pro reformatione morum or salute animæ, they shall not be discharged by a subsequent pardon (n).

Suits in matters of interest not discharged.

A person admitted to the benefit of clergy was not to be deprived in the spiritual court for the crime for which he had had his clergy. For a pardon frees the party from all subsequent punishment, and consequently from deprivation (o).

Pardon may free from deprivation.

By sect. 59 of 20 Geo. 2, c. 52, which is the last act of general pardon, contempts in the ecclesiastical court in matters of correction are pardoned; but not in causes which have been commenced for matters of right; but by sect. 37, the offences of incest, simony, or dilapidation were excepted (p).

20 Geo. 2, c. 52.

Sects. 1 and 6 of the Clergy Discipline Act, 1892, contemplate the grant of pardons by the Crown, and the removal thereby of any ecclesiastical punishment inflicted on a clerk (q).

CHAPTER XIII.

RELATIONS BETWEEN COURTS SPIRITUAL AND TEMPORAL.

SECT. 1.—*Limit of Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction.*2.—*Prohibition.*3.—*Mandamus.*SECT. 1.—Limit of Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction.

Origin of
ecclesiastical
jurisdiction.

For the first 300 years after Christ, the distinction of ecclesiastical or spiritual causes, in point of jurisdiction, did not begin; for at that time no such distinction was heard of in the Christian world; for the causes of testaments, matrimony, bastardy, adultery, and the rest, which are called ecclesiastical or spiritual causes, were merely civil, and determined by the rules of the civil law, and subject only to the jurisdiction of the civil magistrate. But after the emperors were become Christian, out of a zeal and desire they had to grace and honour the learned and godly bishops of that time, they were pleased to single out certain special causes, wherein they granted jurisdiction to bishops; namely, in cases of tithes, because paid to men of the church; in causes of matrimony, because marriages were for the most part solemnized in the church; in causes testamentary, because testaments were many times made in extremis, when churchmen were present giving spiritual comfort to the testator, and therefore they were thought the fittest persons to take the probates of such testaments: and so of the rest. Yet these bishops did not then proceed in these causes according to the canons and decrees of the church (for the canon law was not then made), but according to the rules of the imperial law, and as the civil magistrate proceeded in other causes (a).

In England.

Accordingly in this kingdom, in the Saxon times, before the Norman Conquest, there was no distinction of jurisdictions; but all matters, as well spiritual as temporal, were determined in the county court, called the sheriff's tourn, where the bishop and earl (or in his absence the sheriff) sat together; or else in the hundred court, which was held in like manner before the lord of the hundred and ecclesiastical judge (b).

(a) The case of Præmunire, Davis, p. 97.

The separation of the ecclesiastical from the temporal courts was made by William the Conqueror. And as from thence we are to date this great alteration in our constitution, it is judged necessary to recite the charter of separation verbatim; which is as follows:

William the Conqueror's charter of separation.

“WILLIELMUS, Dei gratia rex Anglorum, R. Bainardo et G. de Magnavilla, et P. de Valoines, cæterisque meis fidelibus de Essex et Hertfordschire et de Middlesex, salutem. Sciatis vos omnes, et cæteri mei fideles qui in Anglia manent, quod episcopales leges, quæ non bene, nec secundum sanctorum canonum præcepta, usque ad mea tempora in regno Anglorum fuerunt, communi concilio et concilio archiepiscoporum [meorum] et [cæterorum (c)] episcoporum, et abbatum, et omnium principium regni mei, emendandas judicavi. Propterea mando, et regia auctoritate præcipio, ut nullus episcopus, vel archidiaconus, de legibus episcopalibus amplius in Hundret placita teneant; nec causam quæ ad regimen animarum pertinet, ad iudicium secularium hominum adducant; sed quicunque secundum episcopales leges, de quacunque causa vel culpa interpellatus fuerit, ad locum quem ad hoc episcopus elegerit, et nominaverit, veniat; ibique de causa vel culpa sua respondeat, et non secundum Hundret, sed secundum canones et episcopales leges, et rectum Deo et episcopo suo faciat. Si vero aliquis, per superbiam elatus, ad justitiam episcopalem venire contempserit, et noluerit; vocetur semel, et secundo, et tertio: Quod si nec sic ad emendationem venerit, excommunicetur; et si opus fuerit ad hoc vindicandum, fortitudo et justitia regis vel vicecomitis adhibeatur: Ille autem qui vocatus ad justitiam episcopi venire noluerit, pro unaquaque vocatione legem episcopalem emendabit. Hoc etiam defendo, et mea auctoritate interdico, ne ullus vicecomes aut præpositus, seu minister regis, nec aliquis laicus homo, de legibus quæ ad episcopum pertinent, se intromittat; nec aliquis laicus homo alium hominem sine justitia episcopi ad iudicium adducat: Iudicium vero in nullo loco portetur, nisi in episcopali sede, aut in illo loco, quem episcopus ad hoc constituerit” (d).

This charter, Mr. Selden says, was recited in a close roll of King Richard II., and then confirmed (e).

For upon the conquest made by the Normans, the pope took the opportunity to usurp upon the liberties of the crown of England. For the Conqueror came in with the pope's banner, and under it won the battle. Whereupon the pope sent two legates into England, with whom the Conqueror called a synod, deposed Stigand, Archbishop of Canterbury, because he had not purchased his pall from Rome, and displaced many bishops and abbots to make room for his Normans. This admission of the pope's legates first led the way to his usurped jurisdiction in England; yet no decrees passed or were put in execution, touching matters ecclesiastical, without the royal assent; nor would the king submit himself in point of fealty to the pope, as appears by his epistle to Gregory VII. Yet in his next successor's time, namely, in the time of king William Rufus, the pope by Anselm, Archbishop of Canterbury, attempted to draw appeals to Rome, but prevailed not. . . . Yet in the time of the next king, to wit, King Henry I., the pope usurped the patronage and donation of bishoprics, and of all other benefices ecclesiastical. . . . And after this, at a synod holden at London, in the year 1107, a decree was made, unto which the king assented (says Matthew Paris), that from henceforth no person should be invested in a bishopric by the giving of a ring and pastoral staff (as had been before), nor by any lay hand. Hereupon the pope granted, that the Archbishop of Canterbury for the time being should be for ever legatus natus: and Anselm for the honour of his see obtained, that the Archbishop of Canterbury should in all general councils sit at the pope's foot, as alterius orbis papa, or pope of this part of the world. Yet after Anselm's death, this same king gave the Archbishop of Canterbury to Rodolph, Bishop of London, and invested him by the ring and pastoral staff; and this, because the succeeding popes had broken Pope Urban's promise, touching the not sending of legates into England, unless the king should require it. And in the time of the next succeeding king, to wit, King Stephen, the pope gained appeals to the court of Rome; for in a synod at London, convened by Henry, Bishop of Winchester, the pope's legate, it was decreed that appeals should be made from provincial councils to the pope; before which time appeals to Rome were not in use. Thus did the pope usurp three main points of jurisdiction, upon three several kings after the Conquest (for of King William Rufus he could gain nothing), viz. upon the Conqueror, the sending of the legates or commissioners to hear and determine ecclesiastical causes; upon Henry I., the donation and investiture of bishoprics and other benefices; and upon King Stephen, the appeals to the court of Rome. And in the time of King Henry II., the pope claimed exemption of clerks from the secular power. And, finally, in the time of King John, he took the crown from off the king's head, and compelled him to accept his kingdom from the pope's donation (g).

Provisors.

27 Edw. 3,
st. 1, c. 1.

Nevertheless all this obtained not without violent struggle and opposition: and this caused the statutes of Provisors to be made, in the reigns of King Edward III. and King Richard II. The first of these (namely, 27 Edw. 3, st. 1, c. 1) is now repealed.

(g) God. p. 96.

And by the other statute, viz., 16 Ric. 2, c. 5 (which the pope called exécrabile statutum, and the passing thereof fedum et turpe facinus), it is enacted, “if any purchase or pursue, or cause to be purchased or pursued, in the court of Rome or elsewhere, such translations of prelates, processes and sentences of excommunication, bulls, instruments, or any other things whatsoever which touch the king, against him, his crown and his regality, or his realm as is aforesaid: and they which bring within the realm or them receive, or make thereof notification, or any other execution whatsoever within the said realm or without, that they, their notaries, procurators, maintainers, abettors, fautors, and counsellors, shall be put out of the king’s protection, and their lands and tenements, goods and chattels forfeit to our lord the king, and that they shall be attached by their bodies if they may be found, and brought before the king and his council, there to answer to the cases aforesaid, or that process shall be made against them by premunire facias, in manner as it is contained in other statutes of provisors, and other which do sue in any other court in derogation of the regality of our lord the king.”

They are called other courts (Lord Coke says) either because they proceed by the rules of other laws, as by the canon or civil law; or by other trials than the common law warrants. For the trial warranted by the law of England for matters of fact, is by verdict of twelve men before the judges of the common law of matters pertaining to the common law, and not upon examination of witnesses in any court of equity. So as those other courts are either such as are governed by other laws, or such as draw the party to another kind of trial (h).

this Act.

And where 16 Ric. 2, c. 5, says, “in the court of Rome or elsewhere” (although it may seem to be meant and conceived of the places of remove which the popes used in those days, being sometimes at Rome in Italy, sometimes at Avignon in France, sometimes in other places, as by the date of the bulls and other proceedings in that age may be seen): yet this expression, he says, includes also the ecclesiastical and other courts within this realm, for matters which belong to the cognizance of the common law; as where a bishop deprives an incumbent of a donative: or excommunicates a man for hunting in his parks; or where commissioners of sewers imprison a man for not releasing a judgment at law (i).

laws of the same, by the said sufferance, consents and custom, and none otherwise," have been already given (k).

Lord Hale as to the force of ecclesiastical law in England.

Lord Hale says, that neither the canon nor the civil law have any obligations as laws within this realm, upon any account that the popes or emperors made those laws, canons, rescripts or determinations, or because Justinian compiled their body of the civil law, and by his edicts confirmed and published the same as authentical, or because this or that council or pope made those or these canons or decrees, or because Gratian or Gregory, or Boniface or Clement did (as much as in them lay) authenticate this or that body of canons or constitutions; for the king of England does not recognize any for authority as superior or equal to him in this kingdom, neither do any laws of the pope or emperor, as they are such, bind here: but all the strength that either the papal or imperial laws have obtained in this kingdom, is only because they have been received and admitted either by the consent of parliament, and so are part of the statute laws of the kingdom, or else by immemorial usage and custom in some particular cases and courts, and no otherwise; and therefore so far as such laws are received and allowed of here, so far they obtain and no farther; and the authority and force they have here is not founded on, or derived from themselves, for so they bind no more with us, than our laws bind in Rome or Italy. But their authority is founded merely on their being admitted and received by us, which alone gives them their authoritative essence and qualifies their obligation (l).

Spiritual courts, how

law.

And hence it is, that even in those courts where the use of those laws is indulged, according to that reception which has been allowed: if they exceed the bounds of that reception by extending themselves to other matters than has been allowed to them, or if those courts proceed according to that law when it is controlled by the common law of the kingdom, the common law does and may prohibit them.

SECT. 2.—Prohibition.

First use of prohibitions.

The power of the temporal court to restrain the ecclesiastical court within the limits of its jurisdiction is of very ancient date in this country—the power is exercised by a writ of prohibition, two of which are noticed by Glanville, who wrote about the 31 Hen. 1; and the subject is fully treated by Bracton, who wrote about 52 Hen. 3. The clergy complained much of these writs, and exhibited their grievances, under the guidance of Archbishop Boniface, A.D. 1267, in the form of articuli cleri, and articuli contra prohibitionem regis.

By the statute of Circumspectè agatis, 13 Edw. 1, st. 4, the king to his judges sendeth greeting: Use yourselves circumspectly in all matters concerning the Bishop of Norwich and his clergy, not punishing them if they hold plea in Court Christian of such things as be mere spiritual, that is to wit, of penance enjoined by prelates for deadly sin, as fornication, adultery, and such like, for the which sometimes corporal penance, and sometimes pecuniary is enjoined, especially if a freeman be convict of such things: Also if prelates do punish for leaving the churchyard unclosed, or for that the church is uncovered, or not conveniently decked: in which case none other penance can be enjoined but pecuniary: Item, if a parson demand of his parishioners oblations or tithes due and accustomed; or if any parson do sue against another parson for tithes greater or smaller, so that the fourth part of the value of the benefice be not demanded: Item, if a parson demand mortuaries (m), in places where a mortuary hath been used to be given: Item, if a prelate of a church, or the patron, demand of a parson a pension due to him; all such demands are to be made in a spiritual court. [And for laying violent hands on a clerk, and in cause of defamation, it hath been granted already, that it shall be tried in a spiritual court, when money is not demanded, but a thing done for punishment of sin] (n); and likewise for breaking an oath: In all cases afore rehearsed, the spiritual judge shall have power to take knowledge, notwithstanding the king's prohibition (o).

Not grantable in cases merely spiritual.

General principles on which it is grantable.

13 Edw. 1, st. 4.

This adjustment of the claims of spiritual and temporal jurisdiction continues to this day (p).

In the eighteenth year of the same king there was another statute upon the subject of ecclesiastical jurisdiction, called the Statute of the Writ of Consultation.

Writ of consultation.

Consultation was a writ, whereby a cause being formerly removed by prohibition out of the ecclesiastical court, or Court Christian, to the king's court, is returned thither again. For if the judges of the king's court, comparing the libel with the suggestion of the party, find the suggestion false, or not proved, and therefore the cause to be wrongfully called from the Court Christian; then, upon this consultation or deliberation, they decree it to be returned again; whereupon the writ in this case obtained was called a consultation (q).

Concerning which it is thus enacted by The Statute of the Writ of Consultation, 18 Edw. 1:—"Whereas ecclesiastical judges have often surceased to proceed in causes moved before them, by force of the king's writ of prohibition, in cases where remedy could not be given to complainants in the king's court, by any writ out of chancery, because that such plaintiffs were deferred of their right and remedy in both courts, as well temporal as spiritual, to their great damage, like as the king hath been advertised by the grievous complaint of his subjects; our lord the king willeth and commandeth, that where ecclesiastical judges do surcease in the aforesaid cases, by the king's prohibition directed unto them, that the chancellor or the chief justice of our lord the king for the time being, upon sight of the libel of the same matter, at the instance of the plaintiff, if they can see that the case cannot be redressed by any writ out of the chancery, but that the spiritual court ought to determine the matters, shall write to the ecclesiastical judges before whom the cause was first moved that they proceed therein, notwithstanding the king's prohibition directed to them before" (r).

For what causes prohibition goes.

This prohibition may issue either in respect of the court, or in respect of the matter of the suit, or in respect of an obvious denial of justice in the conduct of a suit. But the fact that there is an appeal to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council from all acts of the ecclesiastical court is borne in mind by the judges of the temporal courts when an application for a prohibition is made to them; though these courts prohibited the court of delegates(s), and claim a power—never yet, I believe, exercised—to prohibit the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council (t).

When prohibition should not be granted.

Prohibition ought not to be granted where the temporal and the spiritual court have concurrent jurisdiction (u); nor where the spiritual court proceeds according to its own rules and canons in a matter triable before it (x). The proper remedy is appeal (y). Nor where several matters are before the ecclesiastical court, some triable, some alleged not to be triable, by it, and no intimation has been given as to the course which the court will pursue, and no question raised before it as to its jurisdiction over any particular matter (z). But if the ecclesiastical court be apparently proceeding to try all the matters, prohibition will be granted as to such as are of temporal cognizance (a).

Where a court has jurisdiction over a suit, mere irregularities in the proceedings in the suit do not afford any ground for a prohibition (b).

It is no ground for prohibiting a cause before the chancellor of the diocese in the consistorial court of the diocese, that the bishop of the diocese is interested in the cause (c).

In case the principal matter belong to the cognizance of the spiritual court, all matters incidental (though otherwise of a temporal nature) are also cognizable there; and no prohibition will lie, provided they proceed in the trial of such temporal incident, according to the rules of the temporal law; but if otherwise, it lies even after the sentence, although the objection do not appear upon the face of the libel, but is collected from the whole of the proceedings (d). But it lies on the party applying for the writ to show the excess of jurisdiction (e).

A temporal loss, ensuing upon a spiritual sentence, is not of itself cause of prohibition (f).

In Burder v. Hodgson the Arches Court entertained a suit against a clerk for the purpose of deprivation or suspension by reason of a public scandal existing against him, although the scandal originated from a charge which, if true, would constitute a criminal offence at common law, and although the suit was brought before any conviction at law. A prohibition was applied for, and a rule nisi obtained; but the rule was afterwards discharged, the court not being satisfied that the offence charged could be made the subject of an indictment. The question whether, if the offence had been clearly indictable, the Ecclesiastical Court would still have had jurisdiction, was therefore not determined (g).

A similar decision was given by the Privy Council, reversing a writ in the nature of a prohibition sent by the Royal Court of Jersey to the Ecclesiastical Court of that island (h).

Since the Clergy Discipline Act, 1892, this point will probably not arise (i).

Propter defectum triationis.

Prohibition may be granted when the Ecclesiastical Court has jurisdiction over the subject matter, but is proceeding to try it according to rules which are contrary to those of the common law. Such are called prohibitions propter defectum triationis. They arise in cases where a custom or prescription is put in issue. The reason is given in The Churchwardens v. The Rector of Market Bosworth, in 10 Will. 3, by Holt, Chief Justice: "The reason for which the spiritual court ought not to try customs is, because they have different notions of customs, as to the time which creates them, from those that the common law hath: For in some cases the usage of ten years, in some twenty, in some thirty years, make a custom in the spiritual court; whereas by the common law it must be for time immemorial. And therefore since there is so much difference between the laws, the common law will not permit that court to adjudge upon customs, by which in many cases the inheritances of persons may be bound. But in this case, that reason fails: for the spiritual court is so far from adjudging that there is any such custom which the common law allows, that they have adjudged that there hath not been any custom allowed by their law, which allows a less time than the common law to make a custom. And the plaintiffs having grounded their libel upon a custom which was well grounded if the custom had not been denied (for libels there may be upon customs), but the custom being denied and found no custom, it is not reason to prohibit the court in executing their sentence against the plaintiffs" (k).

For misconstruction of act of parliament.

It was holden as settled law, since Lord Ellenborough's elaborate judgment in Gould v. Gapper (l), that the misconstruction of an act of parliament by the Ecclesiastical Courts in the decision of a case within their jurisdiction, is matter of prohibition, and not only of appeal (m). The point was however again mooted in Burder v. Veley (n), and is treated by Lord Blackburn in Mackonochie v. Lord Penzance (o) as still open to doubt. See however White v. Steele (p).

It seems also to be established, that in such a case prohibition will not be granted before the decision of the ecclesiastical judge has been actually given, as the temporal courts will not presume that the spiritual court will adopt an erroneous construction of the statute; nor will they presume that it will exceed its jurisdiction (q).

But if it appear on the face of the proceedings in the Ecclesiastical Court, that they are about to exceed their jurisdiction, and try matters which are triable only at common law, the court of common law will grant immediate prohibition, and not wait till the parties have incurred the expense of further proceedings (r).

Special prohibitions grounded upon the Bill of Citations have been mentioned in treating of that statute (s); so, also, have been mentioned prohibitions quousque, for not delivering a copy of the libel or articles (t).

Where upon the face of the libel, citation, or articles, it does not appear that application was being made to the Ecclesiastical Court to exceed its jurisdiction, but it can be proved, notwithstanding, that in fact the matter submitted to the court is outside its jurisdiction, a prohibition will be granted. This used to be called granting a prohibition "upon a collateral surmise." It was heretofore a petition of the clergy to the king in parliament, that no prohibition might be granted, without first showing the libel; and it was a complaint of Archbishop Bancroft, in the time of King James the First, that prohibitions were granted without sight of the libel, which (as it was there said) is the only rule and direction for the due granting of a prohibition. There was at one time much dispute on this point; and there are many cases on it (u); it being apparently at one time the practice of the temporal courts to grant a prohibition upon a mere suggestion without any proof. It has, however, been settled, at least since the time of Chief Justice Holt (v), that there must be an affidavit of the truth of the suggestion; and modern practice requires that all documents and pleadings in the ecclesiastical court should be verified and brought before the temporal court; so that this controversy may be said to have disappeared.

In what cases before application for prohibition question must be raised in spiritual court.

The suggestion must have been moved and rejected in the spiritual court, before it can be admitted in the temporal court. In The Bishop of Winchester's Case (x) it was holden, that in a suit for tithes in the spiritual court a man may have a prohibition, suggesting a prescription or modus, before or without pleading; but this seems not to be law. But as Chief Justice Holt said, wherever the matter which you suggest for a prohibition is foreign to the libel, you must plead it below before you can have a prohibition; otherwise, where the cause of prohibition appears on the face of the libel (y).

Prohibition after sentence.

It is a general rule that a prohibition cannot be had after sentence, unless the want of jurisdiction in the court below appears on the face of the proceedings in it (z). If, however, it appear on the face of the proceedings that the court has exceeded its jurisdiction, a prohibition will be granted, even after sentence (a). But this last rule is applicable to those cases only where prohibitions are granted for want of original jurisdiction in the courts below, and not to those cases where they may be had if duly applied for, on account of defect of trial. For where a matter collateral and incidental to a suit arises, which is properly triable at common law as a modus, though the courts of common law would have granted a prohibition before sentence on account of the defect of trial in the ecclesiastical court, they will not grant it after sentence if the defendant there pleaded the modus, and submitted to the trial of it, for by so doing he has waived the benefit of a trial at common law (b); and to oust the ecclesiastical court of its jurisdiction it is not enough that a custom or prescription be stated, except it be denied by the other side and the court are proceeding to try it: for it may be immaterial to the question (c).

Plaintiff may have a prohibition.

The plaintiff as well as defendant, in the spiritual court, may have a prohibition to stay his own suit. To this purpose when Archbishop Bancroft alleged that the plaintiff's having made choice thereof, and brought his adversary there into trial, should by all intendment of law and reason, and by the usage of all other judicial places, thereby conclude himself in that behalf; yet the answer of the judges was, that none may pursue in the ecclesiastical court, for that which the king's court ought to hold plea of; but upon information thereof given to the king's courts, either by the plaintiff or by any mere stranger, they are to be prohibited, because they deal in that which appertains not to their own jurisdiction (d).

As a writ of prohibition will issue to prevent the Ecclesiastical Court from overstepping its bounds, so a writ of mandamus will issue commanding them to do justice whenever the same is refused or unreasonably delayed (g). Object of.

A mandamus has been granted to the archbishop, upon an appeal to him, under sect. 98 of 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106, against the revocation, by the bishop, of a curate's licence, to compel the archbishop to inquire into and hear the appeal, and decide the merits thereof (h). When granted.

The procedure in mandamus is now regulated by the Crown Office Rules of 1886. Procedure.

PART V.

PROPERTY OF THE CHURCH.

CHAPTER I.

INTRODUCTORY.

Jural persons. JURAL persons, as distinguished from natural persons, are a fiction of law (a).

Jural persons are divided into two great classes :—

Corporations.

Endowed or Charitable Institutions.

The substratum of the former is a union of persons,—of the latter, the existence of property. The former is governed by the will of all the members or of a certain number of them,—the latter by the will of the endower or founder. It may be difficult to distinguish between a corporation and a charitable institution; and what is originally a charitable institution may become a corporation. Another division of this subject is into secular and religious jural persons. This division is to be ascertained by the end which the institution has in view, namely, either a secular or an exclusively religious end (b).

Beginning of church
property.

The first beginning of church property arose from the bag into which contributions were placed, and from which our Lord and His apostles supplied their earthly needs.

After the Ascension of our Lord, the faithful had their goods in common. The church—ecclesia—of Jerusalem might be considered the jural person in whom these small beginnings of property were vested. But when the apostles, in the execution of their office, planted the church in various and distant places of the earth, the local unity of church property at Jerusalem was necessarily at an end.

The successors of the apostles, the bishops, collected the contributions of the faithful, in the first instance at least, for separate dioceses. The religious societies of Christians, it must be remembered, did not before the time of Constantine constitute a "collegium licitum," though particular societies or churches were said "religionis causâ coire," and if dissolved by a legal order might have liberty to divide their common stock, "pecunias communes." This was, however, the "jus singulorum," and not "jus universæ ecclesiæ."

Individual congregations appear to have had their own religious places of worship, "conventicula," and their own burying places, "cæmeteria." To a certain extent, therefore, and for short periods, the churches may be said to have been more than tolerated, almost legalized, even before the time of Constantine.

This was the state of the law and the practice at the beginning of the fourth century. The persecution of Diocletian (A.D. 303) was accompanied by a confiscation of church property, but this ceased in A.D. 305, and shortly afterwards the property of the church was distinctly placed under the protection of the law.

The edicts of restitution by Constantine and Licinius, and the edicts of toleration, allowed the Christians to rebuild their churches, and repossess their sites and dwellings, which had been confiscated, ad jus fisci devoluta (c).

The era of Constantine.

The recognition of the Christian church by the state; the restitution of her property by the fiscus; the immunity of her priests from secular burdens; her special privilege (d) of being the subject of testamentary bequests, combined with the perfect peace which had succeeded to the terrible storms, concurred to cause the rapid increase of her property.

Between the reigns of these emperors and that of Justinian some restraints were placed and afterwards removed on the capacity of the church to be the legatee of bequeathed property; but before the reign of Justinian the capacity of the church to represent a jural person, a particular saint, prophet, or angel, to whom property had been nominatim bequeathed, was recognized. But by the legislation of Justinian (in A.D. 530) all doubt on the subject was removed (e).

practice.

From this period it has been the practice of all Christian states to allow, under certain restrictions, the church to acquire property. But the state has maintained, especially in modern times, her right and duty, after a certain lapse of time, to control, vary, and perhaps apply to other purposes.

Estates of the various classes of the clergy.

The landed property of the clergy in England may be said to have consisted of the estates attached to the sees of bishops; the estates of deans and chapters; the separate estates of single prebendaries and other church dignitaries; the estates of minor cathedral corporations, of archdeacons; and, lastly, the glebe lands or estates of the parochial clergy. Tithe rent-charge, which by our law is to be treated as a kind of landed property, may also be holden by any of the ecclesiastical persons above mentioned.

The ecclesiastical commissioners.

Many of these estates are now transferred to, others are under the management of, the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, who deal with them in accordance with divers statutory powers and restrictions conferred or imposed upon them. Such of these as relate to the actual working and leasing of the lands will be mentioned later in this Part, and the others will be found arranged under the chapter on the Ecclesiastical Commissioners (f).

Canon 87.
Terriers.

By Can. 87 of 1603, "We ordain that the archbishops and all bishops within their several dioceses, shall procure (as much as in them lieth) that a true note and terrier of all the glebes, lands, meadows, gardens, orchards, houses, stocks, implements,

Si vero unius ex Archangelis meminerit, vel venerandorum martyrium, nulla facta ædis mentione (quod quidem etiam novimus à quodam factum, qui ex illustribus erat, et in omni verborum et legum doctrina spectatissimus): si quidem aliquis sit in illa civitate, vel vicinia ejus, venerabilis locus in honorem illius reverendissimi Archangeli vel martyris constructus, videri ipsum scriptum esse heredem: si vero nullus talis locus est in illa civitate viciniave ejus, tunc venerabilia loca, quæ in metropoli ejus sunt, videri instituta: et si quidem in ipsa metropoli inventus fuerit talis aliquis locus, illi proculdubio videri relictam, vel hereditatem, vel legatum, vel fideicommissum: si vero illic nullus talis locus apparet, denuo ecclesias quæ in illo loco sunt, capere id debere. Sane sanctissimis ecclesiis omnes aliæ domus cedunt; nisi constet, defunctum aliud nomen sensisse et voluisse adicere, et aliud dixisse: nam tale quid accidisse et nos scimus in cujusdam Pontici testamento, et tunc etiam constitutum fuisse, ut contra scriptum veritas obtineret. § 2. Si autem testator certum locum non apposerit, multa autem templa ejusdem tituli aut nominis in illa civitate inventa fuerint, vel ejus vicinia: siquidem in aliquo illorum defunctus frequenter versabatur, et majorem erga illud habebat affectionem, illi templo videri legatum relictum: si vero nihil tale inveniatur, maxime ei templo ex multis ejusdem nominis videatur relictum legatum, vel hereditas, quod est cæteris indigentius, et magis opis et eleemosynæ egens." —Cod. Lib. i. Tit. ii. c. 26.

tenements, and portions of tithes lying out of their parishes, (which belong to any parsonage, or vicarage, or rural prebend,) be taken by the view of honest men in every parish, by the appointment of the bishop, whereof the minister to be one, and be laid up in the bishop's registry, there to be for a perpetual memory thereof."

It may be convenient also to have a copy of the same exemplified, to be kept in the church chest (g).

These terriers are of greater authority in the ecclesiastical courts than they are in the temporal; and yet even in the temporal courts these terriers are of some weight, when duly attested by the register (h).

Especially if they be signed, not only by the parson and churchwardens, but also by the substantial inhabitants; but if they be signed by the parson only, they can be no evidence for him; so neither (as it seemeth) if they be signed only by the parson and churchwardens, if the churchwardens are of his nomination. But in all cases they are certainly strong evidence against the parson (i).

Terriers, though signed by the churchwardens only, are admissible as evidence, and they are also admissible against the rector, though signed by none claiming under or acting for him (k).

The act 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 80, enabling ecclesiastical corporations, sole or aggregate, to submit to arbitration questions between themselves, their lessees, sub-lessees, customary or copyhold tenants, as to identification of lands, and fixing boundaries between such lands and those held by such lessees, &c., in their own right, and for recording and registering the result of such arbitrations, may be here mentioned, though more recent legislation, which will be referred to in Chap. VI., sects. 4, 5, and 6, has probably taken away the necessity for that act.

The landed property of the church is, like other landed property, subject to the statutes of limitation, which prevent the recovery of real estate from an adverse possessor after a certain lapse of time.

The acts are 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27 and 37 & 38 Vict. c. 57, which acts are to be read together.

By sect. 1 of the latter act, "after the commencement of this act, no person shall make an entry or distress, or bring an action or suit to recover any land or rent, but within twelve years next after the time at which the right to make such entry or distress, or to bring such action or suit, shall have first accrued to some person through whom he claims; or if such right shall not have accrued to any person through whom he claims, then within twelve years next after the time at which the right to make such entry or distress, or to bring such action or suit, shall have first accrued to the person making or bringing the same."

By sect. 1 of the former act the word "rent" is to include among other things, "all annuities and periodical sums of money charged upon or payable out of any land (except moduses or compositions belonging to a spiritual or eleemosynary corporation sole)."

By sect. 29 of the same act, which section is not affected by 37 & 38 Vict. c. 57, it is declared as follows:—

No lands or rents to be recovered by ecclesiastical or eleemosynary corporations sole, but within two incumbencies and six years after, or sixty years.

"Provided always, and be it further enacted, that it shall be lawful for any archbishop, bishop, dean, prebendary, parson, vicar, master of hospital, or other spiritual or eleemosynary corporation sole, to make an entry or distress, or to bring an action or suit to recover any land or rent within such period as hereinafter is mentioned next after the time at which the right of such corporation sole, or of his predecessor, to make such entry or distress, or bring such action or suit, shall first have accrued; (that is to say), the period during which two persons in succession shall have held the office or benefice in respect whereof such land or rent shall be claimed, and six years after a third person shall have been appointed thereto, if the times of such two incumbencies and such term of six years taken together shall amount to the full period of sixty years; and if such times taken together shall not amount to the full period of sixty years, then during such further number of years in addition to such six years as will with the time of the holding of such two periods and such six years, make up the full period of sixty years; and after the said thirty-first day of December, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-three, no such entry, distress, action, or suit shall be made or brought at any time beyond the determination of such period."

The Ecclesiastical Commissioners v. Rowe.

It was holden by the House of Lords, reversing the Court of Appeal in The Ecclesiastical Commissioners v. Rowe (1) that where land claimed as originally vested in a corporation sole had been transferred to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, they could avail themselves of the provisions of sect. 29, just quoted, in respect of land, into possession of which they never actually came, and which had begun to be adversely possessed when it belonged to the Ecclesiastical Corporation sole.

CHAPTER II.

RESIDENCE HOUSES.

SECT. 1.—*Introductory.*2.—*Of the Parochial Clergy.*3.—*Of Bishops, Deans and Canons.*SECT. 1.—Introductory.

EVERY church of common right is entitled to house and glebe. And the assigning of these at the first was of such absolute necessity that without them no church could be regularly consecrated (a).

Every church to have house and glebe.

The house and glebe are both comprehended under the word manse, of which the rule of the canon law is, sancitum est ut unicuique ecclesie unus mansus integer absque ullo servitio tribuatur (b).

This house must be kept in good order and repair by the occupant, that is, the incumbent of the benefice (c).

Repair of house.

The Chancery Division will in a suitable case authorize the application of the purchase money of glebe taken by a railway company in improving the parsonage house (d).

Improvements when glebe taken by railway.

Several statutes have been passed for the purpose of providing residence houses or of enlarging them, or of exchanging the old ones for new and better ones, not only in the cases of the parochial clergy, but also in those of members of cathedral and collegiate churches, and of bishops and archbishops.

Acts for providing residence houses.

SECT. 2.—Of the Parochial Clergy.

The acts relating strictly to the building of residence houses for the parochial clergy are as follows:—

(1.) 17 Geo. 3, c. 53 (e).

(2.) 1 & 2 Vict. c. 23 (f). These statutes relate chiefly to (e) Sect. 2 of 21 Geo. 3, c. 66, as to the form of some instruments to be framed under 17 Geo. 3, c. 53, also remains in the statute book.

(f) Both these acts, with 1 & 2 Vict. c. 29, passed to supply a gap in one section of the latter; 2 & 3 the power of the incumbent to raise money by mortgage for building or repairing the residence house on his living; though 17 Geo. 3, c. 53, also empowers the ordinary, in certain circumstances, to compel an incumbent to avail himself of the provisions of that act.

(3.) 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106, an enactment which not only empowers, but requires the bishop to enforce its provisions. Indeed, throughout that statute the single authority of the bishop is substituted for that of the ordinary, patron and incumbent in the former acts.

By 5 & 6 Vict. c. 26, s. 13, no incumbent whose living has been augmented by the ecclesiastical commissioners under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 113, may raise money by mortgage of his benefice, without the consent of the commissioners.

As to raising money for building by mortgage, under 17 Geo. 3, c. 53.

Act. 1 of that act enacts as follows:—"Whenever the parson, vicar, or other incumbent, of any ecclesiastical living, parochial benefice, chapelry, or perpetual curacy, being under the jurisdiction of the bishop or other ecclesiastical ordinary, whereon there is no house of habitation, or such house is become so ruinous and decayed, or is so mean, that one year's net income and produce of such living will not be sufficient to build, rebuild, or put the same, with the necessary offices belonging thereto, in sufficient repair, shall think fit to apply for the aid and assistance intended to be given by this act, it shall and may be lawful for every such parson, vicar, or incumbent (after having procured, from some skilful and experienced workman or surveyor, a certificate containing a state of the condition of the buildings on their respective glebes, and of the value of the timber and other materials thereupon fit to be employed in such buildings or repairs or to be sold, and also a plan and estimate of the work proposed to be done (such state and estimate to be verified upon oath, taken before some justice of the peace, or master in chancery, ordinary or extraordinary), and laid the same, together with a just and particular account in writing, signed by him, and verified upon oath, taken as aforesaid, of the annual profits of such living, before the ordinary and patron of the living, and obtained their consent to such proposed new buildings or repairs, by writing under their respective hands, in the form for that purpose contained in the schedule hereunto annexed), to borrow and take up at interest, in the manner hereafter mentioned, such sum or sums of money as the said estimate shall amount unto, after deducting the value of timber or other materials which may be thought proper to be sold, not exceeding two years' net income and produce of such living, after deducting all rents, stipends, taxes, and other outgoings, excepting only the salaries to the assistant curate, where such a curate is necessary; and as a security for the money so to be borrowed, to mortgage the glebe, tithes, rents, and other profits and emoluments, arising or to arise from such living, to such person or persons who shall advance the same, by one or more deed or deeds, for the term of twenty-five years, or until the money so to be borrowed, with interest for the same, and such costs and charges as may attend the recovery thereof, shall be fully paid and satisfied, according to the terms, conditions, true intent and meaning of this act; which mortgage deed or deeds shall be made in the forms or to the effect for that purpose contained in the said schedule, and shall bind every succeeding parson, vicar, or incumbent of such living, until the principal and interest, costs and charges, shall be paid off and discharged, as fully and effectually as if such successor had executed the same."

and mortgage the glebe, tithes, &c. for twenty-five years.

This provision will authorize the raising of money to build additional rooms only, as well as an entire house (f).

Section authorizes building rooms.

An incumbent may under this act, with proper consents, advance his own money and take a charge on the living (g). But the bishop, who has to consent, may not advance his own money and take the charge (h).

Who may advance money.

Sect. 2. "And . . . every such mortgagee shall execute a counterpart of every such mortgage, to be kept by the incumbent for the time being; and a copy of every such deed of mortgage shall be registered in the office of the registrar of the bishop of the diocese where the parish lies, or other ordinary having episcopal jurisdiction therein for the time being, after having been first examined by him with the original; which officer shall register the same, and be entitled to demand and receive the sum of five shillings, and no more, for such register; and every such deed shall be referred to upon all necessary occasions, the person inspecting the same paying one shilling for every such search; and the said deed, or a copy thereof, certified under the hand of the registrar, shall be allowed as legal evidence, in case any such mortgage deed shall happen to be lost or destroyed."

Every mortgagee to execute a counterpart of the mortgage, to be kept by the incumbent, &c.

This section is transcribed verbatim into sect. 64 of 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106, with this difference, that in place of the words "in the office of the registrar," down to "jurisdiction therein," are inserted the words "in the office of the bishop of the diocese," there being a provision in this latter act that no peculiars shall be exempt from its operation.

c. 106, s. 66.

Sect. 66 of 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106, contains an exact transcript of this provision, except, as has been already remarked, with regard to sect. 64 of the same act, that "bishop" in the latter act stands throughout in the place of "ordinary, patron, and

Sects. 5 and 8 of 17 Geo. 3, c. 53, provide—

Sect. 5, "Every such ordinary, before he or they shall signify his or their consent, in manner aforesaid, shall cause an inquiry to be made, and certified to him or them by the archdeacon, chancellor of the diocese, or other proper persons living in or near the parish where such buildings are proposed to be made or repaired, in the forms for that purpose specified in the said schedule, of the state and condition of such buildings at the time the incumbent entered upon such living or benefice, how long such incumbent had enjoyed such living or benefice, what money he had received, or may be entitled to receive, for dilapidations, and how and in what manner he had laid out what he had so received; and if it shall appear to them that such incumbent had, by wilful negligence, suffered such buildings to go out of repair, then to certify the same to the said ordinary, and also the amount of the damage which such buildings had sustained by the wilful neglect of such incumbent; and such incumbent, if the ordinary require it, shall pay the same into the hands of the nominee or nominees to be appointed under the authority of this act, towards defraying the expenses of buildings or repairs, before the ordinary shall give his consent as aforesaid."

c. 54.

Power to modify mortgages.

By 49 & 50 Vict. c. 54 (The Extraordinary Tithe Redemption Act, 1886), s. 12, "When it shall appear to the governors . . . that the income of any benefice on which a mortgage to the said governors exists has been diminished by the operation of the act, it shall be lawful for the said governors, by resolution of their board on the application of the incumbent, with the consent of the patron, to make such modification in the conditions of such mortgage, or the term fixed for the repayment of the principal secured thereby, as may seem to them just and reasonable. The date of any such resolution, the term of extension, and the altered rate of payments or of instalments, shall be endorsed on the respective mortgage deeds free of charge to the incumbent. . . ."

Consent of patrons under above three acts.

As to the consent of patrons to the execution of the provisions of the above statutes, Sects. 14, 20 of 17 Geo. 3, c. 53; sects. 10, 12 of 1 & 2 Vict. c. 23; and sects. 125 to 128 of 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106, contain provisions for determining who is the patron for the purposes of those acts, and how the consent of such patron, being the crown, a minor, idiot, lunatic or feme covert, shall be given and testified.

By 17 Geo. 3, c. 53, s. 17, "Where the incumbent of any chapelry or perpetual cure shall be nominated by the rector or vicar of the parish wherein the same is situated, in every such case the consent of such rector or vicar, together with the consent of the patron of such rectory, shall be necessary in all such matters wherein the consent of the patron is required by the former provisions of this act."

17 Geo. 3,

In certain cases the consent of the patron of the rectory necessary.

The sections in 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106, referred to above as to patrons and consents, are as follows:—

1 & 2 Vict.
c. 106.

Sect. 125. "In every case in which the consent of, or the execution of any deed or deeds, instrument or instruments by the patron of any cathedral preferment or of any benefice, sinecure rectory, or vicarage, or the owner or impropiator of any lands, tithes, tenements, or hereditaments, is required for carrying into effect any of the purposes of this Act, and also in every case in which it may be necessary to give any notice to any such patron for any of the said purposes, the consent or execution by or notice to the patron or person entitled to make donation or present or nominate to such cathedral preferment, benefice, sinecure rectory, or vicarage, in case the same were then vacant, or the person or persons who shall be in the actual possession, receipt, or perception of the rents, proceeds, or profits of such lands, tithes, tenements, or hereditaments, for any estate or interest not less than an estate for life, shall respectively be sufficient."

Who to be considered patron.

Sect. 126. "In any case in which the consent of the patron of any benefice shall be required to the exercise of any power given by this act, or in which any notice shall be required by this act to be given to the patron of any benefice, and the patronage of such benefice shall be in the crown, the consent of the crown to the exercise of such power shall be testified, and such notice shall be given respectively in the manner hereinafter mentioned; (that is to say,) if such benefice shall be above the yearly value of twenty pounds in the queen's books, the instrument by which the power shall be exercised shall be executed by and any such notice shall be given to the lord high treasurer or first lord commissioner of the treasury for the time being; and if such benefice shall not exceed the yearly value of twenty pounds in the queen's books, such instrument shall be executed by and any such notice shall be given to the lord high chancellor, lord keeper or lords commissioners of the great seal, for the time being; and if such benefice shall be within the patronage of the crown in right of the Duchy of Lancaster, such instrument shall be executed by and any such notice shall be given to the chancellor of the said duchy for the time being; and the execution of such instrument by and any such notice given to such person or persons shall be deemed and taken for the purposes of this act to be an execution by and a sufficient notice to the patron of the benefice."

of any benefice shall be required to the exercise of any power given by this act, and the patron of such benefice shall be a minor, idiot, lunatic, or feme covert, it shall be lawful for the guardian or guardians, committee or committees, or husband of such patron (but in case of a feme covert with her consent in writing), to execute the instrument by which such power shall be exercised in testimony of the consent of such patron; and such execution shall for the purposes of this act be deemed and taken to be an execution by the patron of the benefice."

How, where patronage is attached to the duchy of Cornwall.

Sect. 128. "In any case in which the consent of the patron of any benefice shall be required to the exercise of any power given by this act, or in which any notice shall be required by this act to be given to the patron of any benefice, and the advowson and right of patronage of such benefice shall be part of the possessions of the duchy of Cornwall, the consent of the patron of such benefice to the exercise of such power shall be testified and such notice shall be given respectively in the manner hereinafter mentioned; (that is to say), the instrument by which the power shall be exercised shall be executed by and any notice shall be given to the Duke of Cornwall for the time being, if of full age, but if such benefice shall be within the patronage of the crown in right of the duchy of Cornwall, such instrument shall be executed by and any such notice shall be given to the same person or persons who is or are by this act authorized to testify the consent of the crown to the exercise of any power given by this act in respect of any benefice in the patronage of the crown; and the execution of such instrument by and any such notice given to such person or persons shall be deemed and taken for the purposes of this act to be an execution by and a sufficient notice to the patron of the benefice."

Grant of sites.

By 19 & 20 Vict. c. 50, s. 15, parishioners and others forming a numerous class, who are patrons of a living, may give their consent at a meeting called under the provisions of that act, as patrons for the purposes of those acts (s).

As to money recovered for dilapidations.

By 17 Geo. 3, c. 53, s. 9, all money received for dilapidations was to be applied in part of the payments under the estimate for rebuilding made in pursuance of that act, or in making additional buildings and improvements.

An almost identical provision is contained in 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106, s. 69. These provisions have been, however, practically superseded by the enactments in The Ecclesiastical Dilapidations Act, 1871, 34 & 35 Vict. c. 43 (t).

The power of converting useless residence-houses into farm buildings, etc., given by 1 & 2 Vict. c. 23, s. 6, will be noticed hereafter (u).

17 Geo. 3, c. 53, enacts by sect. 21, as follows:—"And it shall and may be lawful for any archbishop or bishop of any diocese, and also for any ecclesiastical corporation sole or aggregate, being lord or lords of any manor within which there shall be any waste or common lands, parcel of the demesnes of such manor, lying convenient for the house and buildings, and other the purposes of this act, to grant a part or parts of such waste or common lands in perpetuity for the several purposes of this act, leaving sufficient common for the several persons having right of common upon such wastes or commons, and obtaining the consent of the lessee of such lands, if the same shall be in lease."

17 Geo. 3, c. 53.
Lords of manors which contain any waste lands convenient for the purposes of that act, may grant a part thereof in perpetuity, &c.

The provisions in 43 Geo. 3, c. 108, and 51 Geo. 3, c. 115, enabling persons, by deed inrolled or by will, to give lands not exceeding five acres, or chattels not exceeding in value 500*l.*, for the purpose, inter alia, of supplying mansion houses with glebes for the residence of ministers officiating in churches and chapels, and further enabling any lord of the manor to grant land not more than five acres of the waste of the manor for the same purposes, will be noticed more particularly hereafter (x). Reference should also be made to the provisions of 28 & 29 Vict. c. 69, noticed in a later chapter (y), enabling persons under disability to sell or give lands to the governors of Queen Anne's Bounty for residence-houses, gardens, &c.

Powers under other statutes.

The 18th section of 4 & 5 Vict. c. 39, which repeals a former provision of sect. 58 of 3 & 4 Vict. c. 113, on the same subject, and also a clause of 2 & 3 Will. 4, ch. x., relating to the annexation of a house of residence to the archdeaconry of Durham, enacts that, ". . . the dean and chapter of any cathedral or collegiate church, with the consent of their visitor, may from time to time sanction and confirm the exchange of houses of residence, or of houses attached to any dignities, offices, or prebends in the precincts of such church, among the canons of such church, or may make any such arrangement to take effect at any future time, or may assign any one of such houses being vacant to any canon willing to accept the same in lieu of the house theretofore occupied by him, and thereupon any house no longer required by any canon may by the said dean and chapter be disposed of, in such way as they shall deem fit, with the consent of their visitor, and of the ecclesiastical commissioners for England, signified under their common seal."

3 & 4 Vict. c. 113, s. 59, enacts that, "It shall be lawful for the ecclesiastical commissioners to authorize any dean or canon of any cathedral church to raise monies on his deanery or canonry, for the purpose of building, enlarging, or otherwise improving the residence-house thereof, on such terms and conditions as the said commissioners, with the concurrence of the bishop and the chapter, shall approve; and all the provisions of" [1 & 2 Vict. c. 23] "shall be applied, mutatis mutandis, to all such cases in which any dean or canon shall be authorized as aforesaid to raise monies on his deanery or canonry for the purpose aforesaid."

6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 77, recites that the commissioners under that act recommended that "fit residences be provided for the Bishops of Lincoln, Llandaff, Rochester, Manchester, and Ripon;" and that, "for the purpose of providing the bishop of any diocese with a more suitable and convenient residence than that which now belongs to his see, sanction be given for purchases or exchanges of houses or lands, or for the sale of lands belonging to the respective sees, and also, where it may be necessary, for the borrowing by any bishop of a sum not exceeding two years' income of his see, upon such terms as shall appear to be fit and proper;" and that "the governors of the bounty of Queen Anne be empowered to lend money upon mortgage to such bishops," and enables schemes to that effect to be made.

2 & 3 Vict. c. 18, the next act passed on this subject, was repealed by 5 & 6 Vict. c. 26; but all mortgages made under it are not affected by the repeal.

By 5 & 6 Vict. c. 26, the existing statute, it is provided as follows:—

Sect. 1. "Whenever it shall appear to be expedient to relieve any bishop having more episcopal houses of residence than one from any of such houses, or to provide any bishop with a more convenient house of residence or to add to, alter, improve, or take down and rebuild any episcopal house of residence, or to improve the demesnes thereof, it shall be lawful, by the authority provided in" [6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 77] (z), "with the consent, under the hand and episcopal seal of the bishop, to make such arrangements as may by such authority be deemed most expedient, for selling and conveying to such person or body corporate, and for such consideration as may be approved by the like authority, any episcopal house of residence then belonging to the see of such bishop, or for taking down the same or any part thereof, and selling the site or the materials thereof (as the circumstances may render expedient); or for adding to, altering, improving, or taking down and rebuilding any episcopal house of residence; or for improving the demesnes adjoining to any such house by the purchase of any land, tenement or hereditament in the immediate neighbourhood or within the view thereof; or for building a new episcopal house of residence for any see on any site to be approved by the like authority; and for applying the proceeds of any such sale as aforesaid, or any part thereof, to any of such purposes, or to any such other purposes, and in such manner as shall appear to be most conducive to the permanent benefit of the see; and so much of the said act as relates to the providing of any bishop with a more suitable and convenient residence, shall be extended so as to include and apply to any of the purposes of this act."

Provisions of 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 77, s. 1, made applicable thereto.

Sect. 2. "In any scheme which shall be laid before her majesty in council by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners for England under this act, recommending any arrangement for taking down or selling any episcopal residence, or changing the site thereof, the said commissioners shall set forth particularly the grounds and reasons upon which they deem it expedient to offer such recommendation."

Commissioners to state their reasons for the alteration.

Sect. 5. "It shall be lawful for the dean and chapter, or for the dean, or for any canon of any cathedral church, under the authority aforesaid, to purchase any episcopal house of residence sold under the provisions of this act, or the site of any such house, or any other house or site, being contiguous or near to such cathedral church, or any part of such house or site, and to add to, alter or improve any such house or to take down the same, and to build another house or more houses than one upon the site thereof, or to apply the site of any such house, or any part thereof, by and with the authority aforesaid, to the improvement of the cathedral, or the precincts thereof; and so much of" [3 & 4 Vict. c. 113] "as relates to the raising of monies by any dean or canon for the purpose of building, enlarging or otherwise improving the residence-house of his deanery or canonry, shall be extended so as to make lawful the raising of monies, in the manner and with the authority therein provided, by any dean and chapter, dean or canon, for any purpose of this act."

Chapters, deans and canons may purchase and alter, take down or rebuild.

Provisions of 3 & 4 Vict. c. 113, s. 59, made applicable thereto.

Sect. 6. "Any house so purchased by the dean and chapter, dean or canon, of any cathedral church, or any house erected upon any site so purchased, may, by the authority aforesaid, and with the consent of the dean and chapter, be made the deanery, or the house of residence for any canon of such church; and the house theretofore occupied as the deanery, or any house no longer required as the house of residence of any canon, may be so applied or disposed of, as may by the same authority and with the like consent be determined on."

Episcopal house may be made the deanery or a canonical house.

By sect. 8, the purposes of this act are to be within the provisions of 3 & 4 Vict. c. 113, s. 68 (a).

- Fixtures. By sects. 9, 10, pictures, books, or other goods and chattels in any house sold or taken down may be sold, or removed to the new house, and provision is made for certain fixtures, fittings, and other articles being catalogued and made part of the freehold and irremovable.
- Insurance. By sect. 11, provision may be made directing that any residence-houses bought, built or improved under the act shall be insured against fire (b).
- Purchase from persons under disability. By sect. 12, corporations and persons having a limited interest or under disability may sell lands for the purposes of that act, the amount to be paid into the bank of England in the name and with the privity of the accountant-general of the Court of Chancery (c), if over 200*l.*, with other provisions similar to those contained in the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 18).
- 38 & 39 Vict. c. 34. By the Bishopric of St. Albans Act, 1879 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 34), reciting that for the reasons therein mentioned the Bishop of Winchester had assented to the sale of the episcopal residence in London attached to the bishopric of Winchester, the Ecclesiastical Commissioners were directed to sell "the episcopal residence attached to the bishopric of Winchester, and situate in the liberties of Westminster, and carry over the proceeds, after deducting the expenses thereof, to the St. Albans Bishopric Endowment Fund" (d).

SECT. 1.—Introductory.

It is not proposed to discuss the origin of the tithes in England. A very full treatment is given to the subject by Lord Selborne (a). It is enough to say that the payment of tithes was compelled by ecclesiastical censures, enforced by the writ de excommunicato capiendo; that, at least from A.D. 1200, statutory authority for their payment was given first by 27 Hen. 8, c. 20, and 32 Hen. 8, c. 7; then by 2 & 3 Edw. 6, c. 13; that they were for the most part converted into rent-charges upon the land recoverable from the occupier by 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71, and several acts amending and extending that Act; and that finally the rent-charge has been put directly upon the owner of the land by 54 & 55 Vict. c. 8. These acts will be more fully dealt with in this chapter.

Summary of history.

(a) Ancient Facts and Fictions concerning Churches and Tithes. See also History of the Law of Tithes in England by G. Edwardes Jones.

Division of tithes into prædial, mixt and personal :
Prædial.

Tithes, with regard to the several kinds or natures, were divided into prædial, mixt and personal.

Prædial tithes were such as arise merely and immediately from the ground ; as grain of all sorts, hay, wood, fruits, herbs (b).

Mixt.

Mixt tithes were those which arise not immediately from the ground, but from things immediately nourished by the ground, as by means of goods depastured thereupon, or otherwise nourished with the fruits thereof ; as colts, calves, lambs, chickens, milk, cheese, eggs (c).

Personal.

Personal tithes were such profits as do arise by the honest labour and industry of man, employing himself in some personal work, artifice, or negociation ; being the tenth part of the clear gain, after charges deducted (d).

Division of tithes into great and small tithes.

Tithes, with regard to value, were divided into great and small.

Great tithes ; as corn, hay and wood (e).

Small tithes ; as the prædial tithes of other kinds, together with those which are called mixt, and personal (f).

But it is said, that this division might be altered by custom, which will make wood a small tithe. It is not, however, altered by quantity, i.e., a small tithe is not turned into great, if the parish is generally sown with it ; nor by change of place, the same things, as hops, being in gardens small tithes, and in fields the same (g).

Tithes restrained to the proper parish.

It is said by Lord Coke and many others, Dr. Prideaux taking a contrary view (h), that before the Council of Lateran in the year 1180, a man might have given his tithes to what church or monastery he pleased.

Be that as it will, it is certain that now tithes of common right do belong to that church, within the precincts of whose parish they arise. This regulation corresponding with the ancient law of the land, was thought by Lord Coke to be enjoined by a decretal epistle of Innocent III. to the Archbishop of Canterbury in the year 1200 (i).

Portion of tithes within another parish.

Yet notwithstanding, one person may prescribe to have tithes within the parish of another, and this is what is called a portion of tithes (k).

One reason of which might be, the lord of a manor's having his estate extending into what is now apportioned into distinct parishes ; for there were tithes before the present distribution of parishes took place.

But whatever origin these portions might have, they were in law so distinct from the rectory, that if one who had them purchased the rectory, the portion was not extinct, but remained grantable; but as to the cognizance thereof, the case being between parson and parson, and concerning a spiritual matter, that belonged, like the cognizance of other tithes, to the ecclesiastical court (l).

If a portion of tithes were possessed for 150 years, or such a length of time as to make the right doubtful, a court of equity would not assist the plaintiff, who as rector, claimed tithe on lands occupied by the defendants, by directing an issue, but he must have established his right at law (m). Where a portion of tithes had been possessed for 250 years by the owners of the lands, the court presumed a grant of them before 13 Eliz. c. 10, though tithes were not specifically mentioned in the title deed, under which the lands were claimed (n).

Tithes extra-parochial (o), or within the compass of no certain parish, belong to the crown. By the canon law, they were to be disposed of at the discretion of the bishop; but, by the law of England, all extra-parochial tithes, as in several forests, do belong to the king, and may be granted to whom he will; and, accordingly, they have been actually adjudged to him, not only by several resolutions of law, but also in parliament, in the case of the prior and bishop of Carlisle, in the 18 Edw. 1, concerning tithes in Inglewood Forest, that the king in his forest aforesaid may build towns, assart lands (or make them fit for tillage), and confer those churches, with the tithes thereof, at his pleasure, upon whomsoever he pleases; because that the same forest is not within the limits of any parish (p). By custom, however, a parson or vicar might be entitled to the tithes of extra-parochial lands (q).

where the owner of the cattle dwells (r). Tithes of agistment for cattle fed upon the common were not within this statute (s).

SECT. 2.—Of what things Tithes were paid.

Things that renew yearly.

Of common right, tithes were to be paid for such things only as do yield a yearly increase by the act of God (t).

Yet this rule admitted of some exceptions: as, for instance, tithe was due of saffron, though gathered but once in three years; and concerning sylva cadua, there is an entry in the register, that consultations shall be granted thereof, notwithstanding that it is not renewed every year (u). But “great wood of the age of twenty years or of greater age” was not tithable (x).

Once in the year.

Generally, of things increasing yearly, tithes were to be paid only once in the year (y).

Things of the substance of the earth.

Of common right, no tithes were to be made of quarries of stone or slate, for that they are parcel of the freehold, and the parson had tithe of the grass or corn which grew upon the surface of the land in which the quarry is; so, also, not for coal, turf, flags, tin, lead, brick, tile, earthen pots, lime, marle, chalk, and such like, because they are not the increase, but of

Dr. Burn's work contained the following catalogue of the several particulars tithable:—1, Corn and other grain, as beans, peas, tares, vetches; 2, Hay and other like herbs and seeds, as clover, rape, wood, broom, heath, furze; 3, Agistment or pasturage; 4, Wood; 5, Flax and hemp; 6, Madder; 7, Hops; 8, Roots and garden herbs and seeds, as turnips, parsley, cabbage, saffron, and such like; 9, Fruits of trees, as apples, pears, acorns; 10, Calves, colts, kids, pigs; 11, Wool and lambs; 12, Milk and cheese; 13, Deer and conies; 14, Fowl; 15, Bees; 16, Mills, fishings, and other personal tithes. It will be seen below that fishing and other personal tithes are not necessarily included under the operation of the Tithe Commutation Acts, 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71, s. 90, and 2 & 3 Vict. c. 62, s. 9.

(x) 45 Edw. 3, c. 3. There is a various reading of forty for twenty years.

(y) Gibs, p. 669, thinks this rule not universally true, and quotes from the canon law a decree of Clement III. to be found in X. iii. 30, 21. But the complaint there made is for sowing different seeds in the same ground, and paying tithes of the produce of one only, and not for refusing to pay different tithes of the produce of the same seed; so that the authority does not support the position. Tithes of clover, however, seem to have been paid more than once a year.

the substance of the earth. And the like has been resolved of houses (considered separately from the soil), as having no annual increase. But, by particular custom, tithes of any of these might be payable (z).

By the common law of England, there was no tithe due for things that are feræ naturæ, and therefore it has been resolved, that no tithe shall be paid for fish taken out of the sea, or out of a river, unless by custom, as in Wales, Ireland, Yarmouth, and other places; neither, for the same reason, was any tithe due of deer, conies, or the like. But if the tithe thereof were due by custom, it must be paid (a).

No tithe was due for fowls or eggs of fowls in a decoy (b), or for hounds, or for animals kept for pleasure or curiosity. Things tame.

By 2 & 3 Edw. 6, c. 13, s. 5 (c), "All such barren heath or waste ground, other than such as be discharged from the payment of tithes by act of parliament, which before this time have lain barren, and paid no tithes by reason of the same barrenness, and now be or hereafter shall be improved and converted into arable ground or meadow, shall, from henceforth, after the end and term of seven years next after such improvement fully ended and determined, pay tithe for the corn and hay growing upon the same." 2 & 3 Edw. 6, c. 13. Barren land.

Sect. 6. "Provided always . . . That if any such barren, waste or heath ground hath before this time been charged with the payment of any tithes, and that the same be hereafter improved or converted into arable ground or meadow, that then the owner or owners thereof shall, during seven years next after the said improvement, pay such kind of tithe as was paid for the same before the said improvement" (d).

As lands which were in no parish paid tithes to the king, so lands lying within the precincts of a forest (though also in a parish), if they were in the hands of the king, paid no tithes. And this privilege extended to the king's lessee, but not to his feoffee. But if the forest were disafforested, and within any parish, then they had to pay tithes in the hands of the king's lessee (e). Forest land.

It has been questioned, where a park has paid a modus, and is disparked, whether the modus shall continue or be discharged, and tithes paid in kind; and all the books are clear, that if the modus was a certain consideration in money for all the tithes of such a park, such modus shall hold, notwithstanding it be dis- Park.

parked; but if the modus was for the deer and herbage of such a park, the modus is gone upon disparking (f).

In like manner, if the modus has been to pay a buck and a doe for all the tithes of such a park, and the park is disparked, the modus shall continue, and the owner may give a buck and a doe out of another park; but if it was to pay the shoulder of every deer, or expressly a buck and a doe out of the same park, the modus is gone (g).

But where the modus was part in money and part in venison out of the park (namely, two shillings and the shoulder of every deer), the court was divided; two being of opinion that the two shillings continued, and that the spiritual court should assign an equitable recompence for the shoulders, according to the number that had been usually paid; and the other two, that the money and venison making one entire modus, the one being gone, the whole was dissolved (h).

Glebe land.

Glebe lands in the hands of the parson did not pay tithe to the vicar, though endowed generally of the tithes of all lands within the parish; nor, being in the hands of the vicar, did they pay tithe to the parson; and this is according to the known maxim of the canon law, that the church shall not pay tithes to the church (i). Non enim Levitæ a Levitis decimas accepisse leguntur (j). But this exemption did not extend to the lessee or feoffee of the vicar (k). But if the vicar were specially endowed of the small tithes of the glebe lands of the parsonage, then he had them, though they were in the hands of the appropriator (l).

If a parson leased his glebe lands, and did not also grant the tithes thereof, the tenant had to pay the tithes thereof to the parson (m).

And if a parson let his rectory, reserving the glebe lands, he had to pay the tithes thereof to his lessee (n).

Sect. 43 of 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71, provides the mode of fixing a contingent rent-charge on glebe not in the hands of the owner. Sect. 6 of 2 & 3 Vict. c. 62, provides for the merger of such contingent rent-charge in land.

Abbey land.

All abbots and priors and other chief monks originally paid tithes as well as other men, until Pope Paschal II. exempted generally all the religious from paying tithes of lands in their own hands. And this continued as a general discharge till the time of King Henry II., when Pope Hadrian IV. restrained this exemption to the three religious orders only of Cistercians, Templars, and Hospitalers; unto which Pope Innocent III. added a fourth, to wit, the Præmonstratenses. And this made up the four orders which are commonly called the privileged orders; for that they claimed a privilege to be discharged of tithes by the pope's establishment.

Then came the general Council of Lateran in the year 1215, and further restrained the said exemption from tithes of lands in their own occupation to those lands which they were in possession of before that council.

But the Cistercians, as it appears, in process of time procured bulls to exempt also their lands which were let to farm; for the restraining of which practice the statute of 2 Hen. 4, c. 4 (o), 2 Hen. 4, c. 4. was made; by which it was enacted, that as well they of the said order as all other religious and seculars which should put the said bulls in execution, or from thenceforth should purchase other such bulls, or by colour thereof should take advantage in any manner, should incur a præmunire.

So that this statute restrained them from purchasing any such exemptions for the future; and as to the rest, left their privileges as they were before the said statute; that is to say, under a limitation to such lands only as they had before the Lateran Council aforesaid; and it is certain they obtained many lands after that council, which, therefore, were in no wise exempted. And also the said statute left them as it found them, subject to the payment of divers compositions for tithes of their demesne lands made with particular rectors, who contesting their privileges even under that head, brought them to compound. Which two restraints were also followed by a third at the time of the dissolution; when as many of them as did not fall under the statute 31 Hen. 8, c. 13, lost their exemptions, 31 Hen. 8, c. 13. there being no saving clause in the acts of their dissolution or surrender to preserve or to revive them.

But as to those which were dissolved by 31 Hen. 8, c. 13, it was enacted as follows by sect. 21 of that act; viz. "Where divers and sundry abbots, priors, and other ecclesiastical governors and governesses of the said late monasteries, abbaties, priories, nunneries, colleges, hospitals, houses of friars, and other religious and ecclesiastical houses and places, have had . . . divers and sundry parsonages appropriated, tithes, pensions, and portions, and also were acquitted and discharged of and for the payment and payments of tithes to be paid out or for their said monasteries, abbaties, priories, nunneries, colleges, hospitals, houses of friars and other religious and ecclesiastical houses and places, manors, messuages, lands, tenements, and hereditaments;" it is enacted, that "as well the King our sovereign lord, his heirs and successors, as all and every such person and persons, their heirs and assigns," which have or hereafter shall have any of the said monasteries, abbaties, priories, nunneries, colleges, hospitals, houses of friars, or other ecclesiastical houses or places, sites, circuits, precincts, of the same or of any of them, or any manors, messuages, parsonages appropriate, tithes, pensions, portions, or other hereditaments, whatsoever they be, which belonged or appertained or now belong "to any such religious house, shall hold and enjoy as well the said parsonages appropriate, tithes, pensions, and portions of the said monasteries, abbaties, priories, nunneries, colleges, hospitals, houses of friars, and other religious and ecclesiastical houses and places, sites, circuits, precincts, manors, meases, lands, tenements, and other hereditaments, whatever they be and every of them, according to their estates and titles, discharged and acquitted of payment of tithes, as freely and in as large and ample manner as the said late abbots, priors, abbesses, prioresses, and other ecclesiastical governors and governesses or any of them, had held, occupied, possessed, used, retained, or enjoyed the same or any parcel thereof."

By reason of which discharge from tithes of lands which were given to the king by this act, and which were discharged in the hands of the religious, it has been more strictly inquired what were the houses dissolved by this act, than by any other of the acts of dissolution; which will best appear by the following catalogue.

Alien priories. The possession of alien priories was given to the crown by a statute of 2 Hen. 5, in which there were no words to restrain their privileges (p).

At the time of the dissolution, the religious were discharged from payment of tithes three several ways; either by the pope's bulls, or by their order as aforesaid, or by composition: which discharges would have vanished and expired with the spiritual bodies whereunto they were annexed, if they had not been continued by the special clause above mentioned (as it happened to those which were dissolved by the other statutes of dissolution, for want of such clause). And by the said clause also is created a new discharge, which was not before at the common law, that is, unity of the possession of the parsonage and land tithable in the same hand: for if the monastery at the time of the dissolution was seised of the lands and rectory, and had paid no tithes within the memory of man for the lands, those lands shall now be exempted from payment of tithe, by a supposed perpetual unity of possession; because the same persons that had the lands, having also the parsonage, they could not pay tithes to themselves (q).

How the religious were discharged from payment of tithes.

But though by such union the persons so possessed were discharged from the payment of tithes, yet the lands were not absolutely discharged of the tithes: for upon any disunion that might happen, the payment of tithes again revived: so that the union only suspended the payment, but was no absolute discharge of the tithes themselves. And therefore such union was not to be pleaded as a discharge from tithes, but only as a discharge from the payment of tithes (r).

SECT. 3.—Recovery of Tithes before Commutation.

It is not necessary to do more than very slightly mention the old law as to the recovery of tithes.

By a constitution of Archbishop Winchelsea an incumbent was compelled to demand his tithes, that they might not be lost to his successors (s).

Incumbent bound to demand.

The ordinary course was to bring a suit against the owner of the property to be tithed; but this rule had some exceptions in the case of agistment, and where crops were sold on the ground before they were fully got in (t).

Who to be sued.

An executor might be sued for tithes due from his testator (u).

Recoverable in the Ecclesiastical
Courts.

Tithes were generally to be recovered in the Ecclesiastical Courts; and the jurisdiction of those courts for that purpose is specially confirmed by the statute of Circumspectè agatis, 13 Edw. 1, the statute of Articuli Cleri, 9 Edw. 2, st. 1, c. 1, 27 Hen. 8, c. 20, and 32 Hen. 8, c. 7.

2 & 3 Edw. 6,
c. 13.

By 2 & 3 Edw. 6, c. 13, these statutes were confirmed; and it was further provided that, in the event of the refusal of any person to set out his tithes, double the value might be recovered from him by suit in the Ecclesiastical Court. By the same statute a penalty of treble the value of the tithes was also imposed upon the person so offending; this however was recoverable only in the courts of common law.

Small tithes and tithes owed by Quakers.

Provisions for the recovery of tithes and offerings of a small amount, and of tithes owed by Quakers, by summary proceedings before two justices of the peace, were made by 7 & 8 Will. 3, c. 6; 7 & 8 Will. 3, c. 34; 1 Geo. 1, st. 2, c. 6, s. 2; 53 Geo. 3, c. 127; 7 Geo. 4, c. 15; 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 74; and 4 & 5 Vict. c. 36. These statutes, which still have their force with respect to offerings, will be treated of in a later chapter (w).

Suits in equity.

Tithes were also sued for in the courts of equity, the equity side of the Court of Exchequer being the favourite court for that purpose.

*Modus

Under the old system of tithe-taking it was not uncommon for a custom to be established whereby some fixed sum of money or quantity of corn or other titheable goods was taken by the tithe-owner instead of the literal tithe of the various titheable objects. This fixed sum or quantity was called a modus. There might be a modus for a whole parish or for some particular lands in it only. Moduses might be sued for in the Ecclesiastical Courts (x). Bills also might be filed by the tithe-payers in the courts of equity to establish a modus as against the tithe-owner (y). Provisions for dealing with moduses were made by the various Tithe Commutation Acts (z).

London and local tithes.

In the nature of moduses were the customary tithes paid in the city of London, and the various compositions made by many towns and places and confirmed by local acts (a).

Shortening of time for claim of modus.

2 & 3 Will. 4,
c. 100.

The act 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 100, provided for the shortening of the period, during which exemption from payment of tithes or a modus or composition for tithes must be proved to have existed, to thirty years, unless there was counter evidence, and in any case to 60 years, or the tenure of office by two successors in a corporation sole, and three years after the entry into office by a third (sect. 1). The act was not to extend to cases where the tithes had been demised, or where there had been a composition for a term between the tithe-owner and tithe-payer, if a suit was begun within three years after the expiration of such demise or composition (sect. 4); and the time during which the tithes and lands were in the same hands, or during which the tithe-owner was under disability, was not to be reckoned in the 30 or 60 years (sects. 5 and 6).

This act was not to extend to any suits then existing or which should be brought within one year (sect. 3). In consequence of this provision a great number of suits were immediately instituted by tithe-owners, temporary provision for which had to be made by 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 83.

Several cases have been decided upon the construction of the clauses of 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 100. These however are not of much present importance (b). The act, said Lord Macnaghten, in Payne v. Esdaile, "in certain cases permits a defendant to rely on lapse of time, but only in answer to a demand for tithes in kind" (c).

Cases on the act.

SECT. 4.—The Tithe Commutation Acts.

The principal Tithe Commutation Acts are as follows:—
(1.) 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71, The Tithe Act, 1836. (2.) 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 69. (3.) 1 & 2 Vict. c. 64. (4.) 2 & 3 Vict. c. 62. (5.) 3 & 4 Vict. c. 15. (6.) 5 & 6 Vict. c. 54. (7.) 9 & 10 Vict. c. 73. (8.) 23 & 24 Vict. c. 93, The Tithe Act, 1860.

Tithe Commutation
Acts;

49 & 50 Vict. c. 54, The Extraordinary Tithe Redemption Act, 1886 (d); 54 & 55 Vict. c. 8, The Tithe Act, 1891, make a new departure as to the recovery, and indirectly as to the incidence, of tithe.

These statutes must be considered as constituting one enactment, their principle being to substitute a corn-rent, payable in money and permanent in quantity, though fluctuating in value, for all tithes, whether payable under a modus, or composition or not, which may have heretofore belonged either to ecclesiastical or lay persons. Such rent-charge is to be met by two half-yearly payments, namely, on the 1st of July and the 1st of January in every year. Certain commissioners and assistant commissioners were appointed to execute the provisions of this act (e). Two modes were allowed of ascertaining the gross principle of.

(b) The principal seem to be: Salkeld v. Johnson, 1 Hare, pp. 190, 204; 1 Mac. & G. p. 242; 2 C. B. p. 749; 2 Ex. p. 256; Fellowes v. Clay, 4 Q. B. p. 313; 3 G. & D. p. 443; *Knight v. (c) 13 App. Ca. p. 613.

amount of the rent-charge, payable in respect of the tithes (f) of the whole parish. 1, a voluntary agreement, or after a specified period had elapsed without any such arrangement being adopted, 2, a compulsory award. These acts were not to affect tithes due before the commutation (g), and made provision for payments due for the period intervening between the end of former compositions and the commutation (h). False evidence given before the commissioners under 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71, was to be esteemed as perjury, and withholding evidence a misdemeanor (i).

These provisions in the first acts have been supplemented and in some few respects modified by the later acts. They are all however now rather matters whose importance has passed, as the commutation of the tithes has been some time completed. The following are the several sections bearing upon the procedure to a commutation: 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71, ss. 10—28, 32, 35, 39, 44—54, 59—61, 65, 73—76; 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 69, ss. 1, 4—6, 9, 11; 2 & 3 Vict. c. 62, ss. 8, 10, 22—25; 3 & 4 Vict. c. 15, ss. 1—12 (temporary), 13, 15, 16, 20—24; 5 & 6 Vict. c. 54, ss. 1—4, 9—11.

Boundaries might be settled.

It should perhaps also be noticed that, questions having often arisen during the process of commutation as to the boundaries of parishes, the commissioners were empowered to decide on such boundaries in many cases (k).

Principal features of the Tithe Commutation
Acts.

It may be well in this place to observe some of the principal features of the Tithe Commutation Acts.

1. Under these acts, except the two last, the mode of recovering the rent-charge in arrear was by distraining for it in the same manner as a landlord recovers his rent. When the rent-charge was twenty-one days in arrear its owner might distrain, but not for more than two years' rent-charge; and if the rent-charge had been forty days in arrear, possession of the land might be given to the owner of the rent-charge, until the arrears and costs were satisfied (l).

2. If the interest of the owner of the rent-charge ceases before the 1st of January or 1st of July (the appointed times of payment), such owner or his representative is entitled to a proportional part of the rent-charge for the time which may have elapsed from the last day of payment to the time of his interest determining (m).

3. If the lands be uncultivated they are nevertheless liable to the rent-charge, but not if they have been wasted away by the sea or otherwise destroyed by any natural casualty (n).

(f) Certain exceptions are mentioned below.

(m) 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71, s. 86.

(n) 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71, s. 85.

4. Where a rent-charge is payable to a spiritual incumbent, a portion of land not exceeding twenty acres may be given in lieu of all or part of the rent-charge (o).

5. The rent-charge may at the request of the land-owner (certain forms being observed) be confined to a part of the land, on the whole of which it may have been apportioned; the value of such land being treble the value of the apportioned rent-charge (p).

6. Tithes, or rent-charge in lieu thereof, may in certain instances be merged in land (q). Tithes formerly could not have been so merged.

7. In all leases and agreements made subsequently to the commutation of tithes into rent-charge, the landlord was made liable to the payment of the rent-charge instead of the occupying tenant (r).

8. Small rent-charges might be redeemed by payment of a sum of money not less than twenty-four times the amount of the rent-charge at the time (s).

9. Barren or waste land in a parish where the tithes have been commuted did not, on being brought into cultivation, pay tithes under 2 & 3 Edw. 6, c. 13, s. 5 (t), except the extraordinary hop or fruit tithe (u).

SECT. 5.—Rent-charge substituted for Tithe.

6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71, after providing that the landowners shall appoint the valuers of the tithes to be commuted, contains provisions in sections 32 to 55 (which are repealed except as to tithes not commuted).

6 & 7 Will. 4,
c. 71.

Of these sections, sect. 32 is as follows:

"The valuer or valuers so chosen shall apportion the total sum agreed to be paid by way of rent-charge instead of tithes, and the expenses of the apportionment, amongst the several lands in the said parish, according to such principles of apportionment as shall be agreed upon at the meeting at which the valuer or valuers shall be chosen, or if no principles shall be then agreed upon for the guidance of the valuer or valuers, then having regard to the average titheable produce and productive quality of the lands, according to his or their discretion and

apportion the rent-charge.

pealed, except as to tithes not commuted.

judgment, but subject in each case to the provisions hereinafter contained, and so that in each case the several lands shall have the full benefit of every modus and composition real, prescriptive, and customary payment, and of every exemption from, or non-liability to, tithes relating to the said lands respectively, and having regard to the several tithes to which the said lands are severally liable."

And by sects. 36 and 37 :

After 1st October, 1838, the commissioners may ascertain total value of tithes in any parish in which no previous agreement has been made.

"After the first day of October, 1838, the commissioners shall proceed in manner hereinafter mentioned, at such time and in such order as to them shall seem fit, either by themselves or by some assistant commissioner, to ascertain and award the total sum to be paid by way of rent-charge instead of the tithes of every parish in England and Wales, in which no such agreement binding upon the whole parish as aforesaid shall have been made and confirmed as aforesaid : Provided, nevertheless, that if any proceeding shall be had towards making and executing any such agreement after the commissioners shall have given or caused to be given notice of their intention to act as aforesaid in such parish, the commissioners may refrain from acting upon such notice, if they shall think fit, until the result of such proceeding shall appear."

Value of tithes to be calculated upon an average of seven years.

Sect. 37. "In every case in which the commissioners shall intend making such award, notice thereof shall be given in such manner as to them shall seem fit; and after the expiration of twenty-one days after such notice shall have been given, the commissioners or some assistant commissioner shall, except in the cases for which provision is hereinafter made, proceed to ascertain the clear average value (after making all just deductions on account of the expenses of collecting, preparing for sale and marketing, where such tithes have been taken in kind,) of the tithes of the said parish, according to the average of seven years preceding Christmas in the year 1835 : Provided, that if during the said period of seven years, or any part thereof, the said tithes or any part thereof shall have been compounded for or demised to the owner or occupier of any of the said lands in consideration of any rent or payment instead of tithes, the amount of such composition, or rent or sum agreed to be paid instead of tithes, shall be taken as the clear value of the tithes included in such composition, demise or agreement, during the time for which the same shall have been made; and the commissioners or assistant commissioners shall award the average annual value of the said seven years so ascertained as the sum to be taken for calculating the rent-charge to be paid as a permanent commutation of the said tithes : Provided also, that whenever it shall appear to the commissioners that the party entitled to any such rent or composition shall in any one or more of the said seven years have allowed and made any abatement from the amount of such rent or composition on the ground of the same having in any such year or years been higher than the sum fairly payable by way of composition for the tithe, but not otherwise, then and in every such case such diminished amount, after making such abatements as aforesaid, shall be deemed and taken to have been the sum agreed to be paid for any such year or years: Provided also, that in estimating the value of the said tithes, the commissioners or assistant commissioner shall estimate the same without making any deduction therefrom on account of any parliamentary, parochial, county, and other rates, charges, and assessments, to which the said tithes are liable; and whenever the said tithes shall have been demised or compounded for on the principle of the rent or composition being paid free from all such rates, charges, and assessments, or any part thereof, the said commissioners or assistant commissioner shall have regard to that circumstance, and shall make such an addition on account thereof as shall be an equivalent" (x).

Tithes to be valued without deduction on account of parochial and county rates, &c.

The same rule with respect to rates is directed to be pursued in sections 40, 41, 43.

Sect. 55. "A draft of every apportionment shall be made, and shall set forth the agreement or award, as the case may be, upon which such apportionment is founded, and every schedule thereunto annexed, and the said draft or some schedule thereunto annexed, whether made by or under the direction of the valuers or commissioners or assistant commissioners, shall state the name or description and the true or estimated quantity in statute measure of the several lands to be comprised in the apportionment, and shall set forth the names and description of the several proprietors and occupiers thereof, and whether the said several lands are then cultivated as arable, meadow, or pasture land, or as wood land, common land, or howsoever otherwise, and shall refer, by a number set against the description of such lands, to a map or plan to be drawn on paper or parchment, and the same number shall be marked on the representation of such lands in the said map or plan; and the draft of the apportionment shall also state the amount charged upon the said several lands, and to whom and in what right the same shall be respectively payable" (y).

Form of apportionment.

In the case of Re Appledore Tithe Commutation (z), there were in the parish ancient pasture lands, arable lands, and wood lands; and a modus of 1s. an acre was payable to the vicar for all tithes except those of corn, the wood land being exempt by custom. An award was made and confirmed. In apportioning the award the valuer imposed upon the pasture land a small charge above the 1s. an acre on the ground of the possibility of its being converted into tillage. The commissioners confirmed this apportionment.

Re Appledore Tithe Commutation.

(x) By sect. 38, a power was given to the commissioners to increase or diminish the sum to be paid for commutation, and a report was ordered to be laid before parliament on the mode of exercising this power, which was accordingly done.

(y) See 3 & 4 Vict. c. 15, s. 21.

(z) 8 Q. B. p. 139.

On motion for a prohibition the Court of Queen's Bench held that a prohibition would not lie to the commissioners in the circumstances ; but that if it did, the commissioners were right.

Specific apportionment of rent-charge.

By sect. 58, the landowner may have the rent-charge specifically apportioned upon particular lands under certain conditions.

Rent-charge rated as tithes.

Sect. 69 of the 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71, provides that the rent-charge is to be liable to the same rates to which the tithes commuted would have been liable (a).

Alteration of apportionment.

The original apportionment may be altered, when it becomes convenient. The following sections of this Act and the subsequent acts give the machinery.

Apportionment may be altered by commissioners of land tax if desired.

Sect. 72. "If at any time subsequent to the confirmation of any such instrument of apportionment the owner of any lands charged with any such rent-charge shall be desirous that the apportionment thereof shall be altered, it shall be lawful for the commissioners of land tax for the county or place where the said lands are situate, or any three of them, to alter the apportionment in such manner and in such proportion and to the exclusion of such of the lands as the landowner with the consent of two justices of the peace acting for the county, riding, division or other jurisdiction in which the lands are situated, may direct; and such altered apportionment shall be made by an instrument in writing under the hands and seals of the said commissioners of land tax and of the said landowner and justices of the like form and tenor as to the said lands as the original apportionment, and bearing date the day of its execution by the said commissioners of land tax, subject to the provision hereinbefore contained with respect to the value of lands on which any rent-charge may be charged on account of the tithes of any other lands; and every such altered apportionment shall be as valid as if made and confirmed by the tithe commissioners as aforesaid, and shall be taken to be an amendment of the original apportionment; and in every such case two counterparts of the instrument of altered apportionment under the hands and seals of the said commissioners of land tax and justices and landowner, shall be sent, one to the registrar of the diocese, and one to the incumbent and church or chapel-wardens, or other person having the custody of the other copy of the original instrument of apportionment: and one counterpart shall be annexed to the copy of the instrument of apportionment in the custody of the registrar and such other person respectively, and taken to be an amendment thereof; and thenceforward such lands shall be charged only according to such altered apportionment; and all expenses of such alteration shall be borne by the landowner desiring the same."

Expenses of, how borne.

5 & 6 Vict. c. 54.

Power to alter

By 5 & 6 Vict. c. 54, s. 14, "If at any time after the confirmation of any instrument of apportionment it shall appear that the lands charged with one entire rent-charge belong to or have become vested in several owners, and that any of the owners of such lands shall be desirous that the apportionment thereof should be altered, it shall be lawful for the commissioners of land tax for the county or place where the said lands are situated, or any three of them, to appoint, by notice under their hands, a time and place for hearing the parties to such application, and all other parties interested therein; and upon satisfactory proof of such notice having been served on all parties interested full twenty-one days before the day of hearing, to proceed to alter the apportionment in such manner and in such proportion amongst the said lands as to them shall seem just, subject nevertheless to the consent of two justices of the peace, as in the said first-recited act provided; and further, that upon such application being made to the said tithe commissioners, they shall have the same power of making such alteration as by the said first-recited act and by this act is vested in the commissioners of land tax, and that without any such consent of two justices of the peace; provided that no alteration of any apportionment shall be made under the first-recited act or this act whereby any rent-charge shall be subdivided, so that any subdivision thereof shall be less than five shillings" (b).

Sect. 15. "Three counterparts shall be made of every instrument of altered apportionment at the expense of the landowner desiring the alteration; and two of the said counterparts shall be sent as provided by the first-recited act, and the third shall be sent to or deposited in the office of the tithe commissioners, . . . and shall be annexed to the instrument of apportionment in the custody of the said commissioners, or the person having the custody of their records and papers."

Copy of instrument of altered apportionment to be sent to Tithe Office.

By 23 & 24 Vict. c. 93, s. 11, with the consent of the owner or owners of any lands charged with rent-charge under any instrument of apportionment, whether payable to one or more owners of rent-charge, and without regard to the mode in which the same rent-charge is apportioned by the said instrument, the commissioners may by an altered apportionment re-apportion and redistribute the same rent-charge over and amongst the said lands or any part thereof, and to the exclusion of any such lands, but no rent-charge shall be charged upon any land to the exclusion of other land of the same owner, unless the land so charged with rent-charge is held for an estate in fee simple or fee tail in possession, or unless the same and the land so excluded are settled to the same uses.

23 & 24 Vict. c. 93.

Rent-charge may be re-apportioned and redistributed on the same or on other lands.

Sect. 12. "Where, through the removal or alteration of fences between land charged with rent-charge under any instrument of apportionment and land upon which no rent-charge is now charged, or which is tithe-free, it becomes impossible or difficult to distinguish the limits of the land so charged with rent-charge

Where fences removed rent-charge may be apportioned on land tithe-free jointly with other land.

(b) See also 3 & 4 Vict. c. 15, ss. 26, 27; and 9 & 10 Vict. c. 73, ss. 13, 14, infra.

the commissioners may, with the consent of the owner of the said lands, include the whole of such lands in any instrument of altered apportionment to be made by the said commissioners, and may apportion the rent-charge as well on the said land not heretofore charged as on the said land heretofore liable to the payment thereof, or on any part thereof, provided that the whole of the lands on which such rent-charge is apportioned are held for an estate in fee simple or fee tail in possession, or are settled to the same uses."

Land not to be charged to a different owner than before without consent.

Consent of landowner not required where his lands are not charged.

Power to commissioners to alter apportionment where successive alterations have made collection inconvenient or difficult, but not to alter amount.

Sect. 13. "No land shall be charged with rent-charge payable to a different owner than the rent-charge previously charged thereon was payable to, without the consent in writing of the owner of the rent-charge so proposed to be charged, except in cases of altered apportionment after inclosure."

Sect. 14. "It shall not be necessary to obtain the consent of any landowner to an altered apportionment whose lands are not charged with rent-charge by such altered apportionment."

Sect. 15. "Whenever it shall appear to the commissioners that any instrument of apportionment shall have been altered by successive instruments of altered apportionment, so as in the judgment of the commissioners to render the collection of the rent-charge upon the lands included in such apportionment and altered apportionments unreasonably inconvenient or difficult, the commissioners may, upon the application of the person or persons entitled to such rent-charge or any part thereof, and without notice to or the consent of any owner of such lands, make a further instrument of altered apportionment as regards the whole of the said lands, or such portions thereof as to them shall seem fit, but without making any alteration in the amount charged on the lands of any particular owner, and the altered apportionment so made by the commissioners shall be taken to be an amendment of and in substitution for so much of the said original apportionment and altered apportionments as relates to the lands included in the said lastly made altered apportionment."

Power to commissioners to alter apportionment where boundaries of parishes have been altered.

Sect. 16. "Whenever any new boundaries of parishes shall have been or shall be set out upon any inclosure or otherwise, and it shall appear to the commissioners that the apportionment of the rent-charge in such parishes is thereby rendered inconvenient, the commissioners may make and confirm an altered instrument of apportionment adapted to the altered distribution of the lands in such parishes or any of them, and to the new boundaries which shall have been so set out, or otherwise the commissioners may, by an order under their hands and seal, declare the lands which shall be affected by such alteration of boundaries, either with or without any other lands comprised in such inclosure, and whether such lands are situate in one or more parishes, to be a separate district for the purposes hereinafter mentioned, and may make and confirm an altered instrument of apportionment adapted to the altered distribution of such lands, with reference to the owners both of the lands and rent-charge in such district, and the commissioners may determine that the amount of rent-charge payable to each of the owners of rent-charge in such district shall be fixed and apportioned upon such particular lands as to them shall seem convenient, so that no lands are charged with more than their due proportion of rent-charge; and every such determination shall be binding and conclusive, and such altered apportionment, when confirmed, shall be annexed to the original apportionment for that parish from which the greatest amount of rent-charge is payable under the altered apportionment, and counterparts thereof shall be annexed to the original apportionment for each of the other parishes comprised in such district, and copies thereof shall be deposited in respect of each several parish comprised in the district, in conformity with the provisions of the said recited acts" (bb).

Sect. 17. "All the powers given by the said recited acts or by this act in relation to the alteration of instruments of apportionment shall extend to all altered apportionments and to awards of rent-charge in lieu of corn rents, and to awards under local acts by which any rent-charge is awarded in lieu of tithes, glebe or commonable or other rights or easements."

Powers for altering apportionments or awards.

The value of the rent-charge is fixed as follows:

By the original Act, 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71, s. 57, "Every rent-charge charged upon any lands by any such intended apportionment shall be deemed at the time of the confirmation of such apportionment, as hereinafter provided, to be of the value of such number of imperial bushels, and decimal parts of an imperial bushel of wheat, barley and oats, as the same would have purchased at the prices so ascertained by the advertisement to be published immediately after the passing of this act, in case one-third part of such rent-charge had been invested in the purchase of wheat, one-third part thereof in the purchase of barley, and the remaining third part thereof in the purchase of oats, and the respective quantities of wheat, barley and oats, so ascertained, shall be stated in the draft of every apportionment."

Value of rent-charge. 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71. Rent-charges to be valued according to the average price of corn.

By 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 69, s. 7, "The prices at which the conversion from money into corn is to be made, at the time of the confirmation of each apportionment, according to the provisions of the said act, are seven shillings and one farthing for a bushel of wheat (c), three shillings and eleven pence halfpenny for a bushel of barley, and two shillings and nine pence for a bushel of oats."

7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 69. Prices at which conversion from money into corn is to be made.

The manner in which the average price of the bushel of each grain was thereafter to be ascertained, was at first fixed by sect. 56 of 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71. But this section is now repealed, and in lieu thereof provision is made by the Corn Returns Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 37) (d).

Confirmation
by the commissioners.

As to confirmation, by 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71, it is enacted :

Sect. 63. "After such proceedings as aforesaid shall have been had, and all such objections, if any, shall have been finally disposed of, the commissioners or assistant commissioner shall cause the instrument of apportionment to be ingrossed on parchment, and shall annex the map or plan thereunto belonging to the ingrossed instrument of apportionment, and shall sign the instrument of apportionment and the map or plan, and shall send both to the office of the commissioners; and if the commissioners shall approve the apportionment, they shall confirm the instrument of apportionment under their hands and seal, and shall add thereunto the date of such confirmation" (e).

Clarke v.
Yonge.

Sect. 66. "No confirmed agreement, award or apportionment shall be impeached after the confirmation thereof by reason of any mistake or informality therein, or in any proceedings relating thereunto" (f).

In the case of Clarke v. Yonge (g), it was decided, that though a confirmed award under this section is final as between the tithe-owners and tithe-payers, it does not exclude from further investigation a case between the tithe-owners themselves, in which there was, before the award was made, a just title to a portion of the tithes, which by mistake was not brought forward till after the award was made.

Edwards v.
Bunbury.

Similarly, it was holden in the case of Edwards v. Bunbury (h), (e) This section is repealed, except as to tithes not commuted.

(f) This section was further confirmed by 10 & 11 Vict. c. 104, s. 2.

that a commissioner had no jurisdiction in a contested case to decide who was the person entitled to a particular rent-charge.

By 9 & 10 Vict. c. 73, sect. 15, "Where by any agreement or award made under the provisions of the said acts a rent-charge has been or shall have been agreed or awarded to be paid to any person in lieu of any tithes, and after the apportionment of such rent-charge shall have been made and confirmed under the provisions of the said acts it shall appear that some tithes included in the aggregate tithes in lieu of which such rent-charge shall have been so agreed or awarded to be paid, or some portion or undivided share of some tithes so included, were or was at the time of such agreement or award the property of some person other than the person to whom the same rent-charge was so agreed or awarded to be paid, or that the whole of the tithes included in the aggregate in respect of which such rent-charge was agreed or awarded to be paid were not held by the person to whom such rent-charge was so agreed or awarded to be paid in the same right and for the same estate, or were not subject after the determination of the estate of such person to the same limitations or estates legal and equitable, it shall be lawful for the commissioners in any of the cases aforesaid, in pursuance of or in accordance with the decree or direction of a court of equity of competent jurisdiction, or on the request in writing of the parties who for the time being in case there had been no commutation would have been the owners of all the tithes included in such aggregate, to make or confirm a supplemental award or apportionment of such rent-charge in such manner that, without altering the aggregate amount of rent-charge to which any owner of land may be subject, separate rent-charges or separate portions of rent-charge may be made payable to the parties who would have been owners of the tithes in case they had not been extinguished in lieu of the several tithes or portions of tithe included in such aggregate which would belong to different persons, or be held in different rights, or be subject to different limitations or estates; and by such supplemental award and apportionment the commissioners, if they shall so think fit, may apportion or award to be paid to one of the respective owners, or to the owner in lieu of one of his respective rights, the whole of any rent-charges payable under the original instrument of apportionment out of specific lands, instead of dividing each rent-charge made payable in lieu of the aggregate of the tithes of each parcel of land between or among the owners of the separate tithes arising out of such parcel; and such supplemental award and apportionment, when confirmed by the commissioners under their hands and seal, shall take effect from the half-yearly day of payment which shall happen next after the confirmation thereof."

By sect. 16 (which, however, is repealed except as to tithes not commuted), the commissioners are empowered to declare that lands as to which before apportionment doubts have arisen, as to whether they are or not exempt from tithe, or subject to some modus, or as to the boundaries of the parish in which they lie, shall be a separate district for commutation, so that the awards may be confirmed as to the other lands in the parish. Supplemental awards may also be made for contingent rent-charges under 2 & 3 Vict. c. 62, s. 11, and 3 & 4 Vict. c. 15, s. 14, for inclosures of lands, and for other purposes.

Place of deposit of copy of confirmed apportionment may be altered by quarter sessions.

Sect. 17. "Where the place of deposit of the copy of a confirmed instrument of apportionment, which by 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71, is directed to be deposited with the incumbent and church or chapel-wardens for the time being, or such other fit person as the commissioners shall approve, shall be alleged to be inconvenient to the majority of the persons interested therein, or otherwise inconvenient or unsafe, it shall be lawful for any person interested in the lands or rent-charge to which such apportionment shall relate to apply to the court of general quarter sessions of the peace for the county, riding, division or place in which such place of deposit shall be situate for an order for the deposit of such copy in some more convenient or secure custody or place, and fourteen days' notice in writing of every such application shall be given to the persons in whose custody such copy shall at the time of such application be deposited; and it shall be lawful for the court at the quarter session for which such notice shall be given to hear and determine such application in a summary way, or they may, if they think fit, adjourn it to the following session; and upon the hearing of such application the court may, if they think fit, order such copy to be removed from the custody of the persons with whom the same shall have been deposited, and to be deposited with such other persons or in such other custody as the court, having reference to the security and due preservation of such copy, and to the convenience of the parties interested therein, may think fit, and may make such order concerning the notice to be given of such removal and deposit, and concerning the costs of such application, or of any opposition thereto, as they may think reasonable."

23 & 24 Vict. c. 93.

Justices may order an instrument of apportionment to be restored to proper custody.

By 23 & 24 Vict. c. 93, sect. 28, "Whenever any person, other than the persons legally entitled to the possession of the same, shall have possession of the sealed copy of any confirmed instrument of apportionment, it shall be lawful for any two justices of the peace for the county or other jurisdiction within which the lands mentioned in the said apportionment are situate, upon the application of any person interested in the lands or rent-charge, and upon fourteen days' notice in writing of such application to the person or persons in whose custody such copy shall be at the time of such application, to hear and determine such application; and upon hearing such application the said justices may order such copy to be removed from the custody of the person holding the same, and to be deposited in such other custody as the said justices, having reference to the security and due preservation of such copy, and to the convenience of the parties interested therein, may think fit, and may impose a fine, not exceeding twenty shillings, for each day that any such copy shall be retained, contrary to the terms of such order, upon the person so retaining it, and may make such further order concerning the notice to be given of such removal and deposit, and concerning the costs of such application and the said fine, or of any opposition thereto, as they may think reasonable."

A notice under this section must be a notice that an application has been made, not of an intention to apply (h).

By sect. 26 the commissioners may order the map to be detached in suitable cases from the instrument of apportionment. Map may be detached.

By sect. 27, when the original instrument of apportionment has been destroyed or defaced, the commissioners may require the copy deposited in the parish or in the diocesan registry to be delivered up to them for a limited time for the purpose of restoring their defaced instrument, or making a new copy, where it has been lost. Such restorations or copies are to have the force of originals. Renewal of defaced copy.

By 10 & 11 Vict. c. 104, s. 4, the commissioners could require an erroneous apportionment to be delivered up to them for correction. Corrections.
10 & 11 Vict.
c. 104.

6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71, proceeds to enact as follows:—

Sect. 67. "From the first day of January next following the confirmation of every such apportionment the lands of the said parish shall be absolutely discharged from the payment of all tithes . . . and instead thereof there shall be payable thenceforth to the person in that behalf mentioned in the said apportionment a sum of money equal in value, according to the prices ascertained by the then next preceding advertisement to the quantity of wheat, barley and oats, respectively mentioned therein to be payable instead of the said tithes, in the nature of a rent-charge issuing out of the lands charged therewith; and such yearly sum shall be payable by two equal half-yearly payments on the first day of July and the first day of January in every year; the first payment, except in the case of barren reclaimed lands, as hereinafter provided, being on the first day of July next after the lands shall have been discharged from tithes as aforesaid; . . . and after every first day of January the sum of money thenceforth payable in respect of such rent-charge shall vary so as always to consist of the price of the same number of bushels and decimal parts of a bushel of wheat, barley and oats respectively, according to the prices ascertained by the then next preceding advertisement; and any person entitled from time to time to any such varied rent-charge shall have the same powers for enforcing payment thereof as are herein contained concerning the original rent-charge: Provided always that nothing herein contained shall be taken to render 6 & 7 Will. 4, any person whomsoever personally liable to the payment of any such rent-charge”

Land not to be sold for rent-charge. It was attempted under this section to treat the rent-charge hereby imposed as an ordinary rent-charge to all intents and purposes, and to have the land sold in default of other means of satisfying it. But the Court held the contrary (i).

Payments by tenants. By sect. 80, any tenant paying the rent-charge is to be allowed the same in account with his landlord (k).

Surrenders by lessees. By the repealed sect. 88, lessees of tithes might surrender their leases under certain conditions. If they did not, they continued liable on their covenant to pay the old rent (l).

45 and 46 Vict. c. 37. Returns from towns of purchases of British corn, and publication of average price. By the Corn Returns Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 37), sect. 4, “Weekly returns of the purchases of British corn shall be made, under the direction of the Board of Trade, in manner provided by this act from such towns, not less than one hundred and fifty and not more than two hundred in number, as may be from time to time fixed by Her Majesty in Council, and the average price of British corn shall be from time to time ascertained from those returns, and published by the Board of Trade in manner provided by this act.”

Meaning of British corn. By sect. 18, “The expression ‘British corn’ means wheat, barley, and oats, the produce of the United Kingdom, the Channel Islands, or the Isle of Man, and any such wheat, barley, or oats is in this act referred to as a sort of British corn.”

Computation and publication of averages by Board of Trade. The act then, after providing for the collection and making of returns by corn inspectors, enacts, by sect. 9, as follows:

“The Board of Trade shall cause the average prices of each sort of British corn to be computed from the summaries sent by the inspectors of corn returns in pursuance of this act, as follows:

“(1.) In each week the average price during the next preceding week of each sort of British corn for the whole of the towns and for each town from which a summary is obtained, shall be computed, and shall be published in the London Gazette:

“(2.) After each of the quarter days, the twenty-fifth day of March, the twenty-fourth day of June, the twenty-ninth day of September, and the twenty-fifth day of December, the average price of each sort of British corn during the quarter ending on that quarter day shall be forthwith computed and published in the London Gazette:

“(3.) After the twenty-fifth day of December in every year the average price of each sort of British corn shall be computed for the year, and the seven years ending on that day, and shall be published in the London Gazette in the month of January next following:

(k) See on the construction of this section, Daves v. Thomas, 1892,

- “(4.) The average price of any sort of British corn for any week shall be ascertained by adding together the total quantities of that sort of British corn appearing from the summaries of the inspectors of corn returns to have been bought during such week, and the total prices for those quantities as appearing from the said summaries, and by dividing the total prices by the total quantities as so ascertained. The quarterly or yearly average prices shall be ascertained by adding together the weekly averages of the weeks included in such quarter or year, and dividing the total by the number of weeks in such quarter or year respectively :
- “(5.) The septennial average price shall be ascertained by adding together the average annual prices for the seven years, and dividing the total by seven :
- “(6.) The annual and septennial average shall state the average for the imperial bushel.”

Sect. 10. “The statement of the septennial average price referring to the imperial bushel published under this act in the London Gazette shall be substituted for the advertisement referred to in” 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71, s. 56 (m).

By 2 & 3 Vict. c. 62, s. 11 (now repealed except as to tithe not commuted), the following power is given to substitute a fixed for a contingent rent-charge in the cases of exempt and crown lands :

“Where lands are exempted from the payment of tithes, or of rent-charge instead of tithes, whilst in the occupation of the owner of such lands, by reason of having been parcel of the possessions of any privileged order, it shall be lawful for the respective owners of the said lands and tithes or rent-charge, by the parochial agreement for the rent-charge, or by a supplemental agreement in cases where the parochial agreements or any award shall have been confirmed by the said commissioners, to be made in such form as the commissioners shall direct or approve to agree to the payment, or for the commissioners in the case of a compulsory award, with the consent of the respective owners of the said lands and tithes, to award the payment of a fixed and continuing rent-charge, without regard to the change of occupation or manurance of such lands, equivalent in value, according to the judgment of the commissioners, to such contingent rent-charge ; and such lands shall, from the date of the confirmation by the commissioners of such parochial agreement or supplemental agreement or award, as the case may be, or from such date as shall be fixed by the parties, with the approval of the said commissioners, in any such agreement or supplemental agreement, be subject to such fixed rent-charge instead of the contingent tithes or rent-charge to which such lands were subject previous to such agreement or supplemental agreement or award

3 & 4 Vict.
c. 15.

Extension of powers to substitute fixed rent-charge instead of contingent
rent-charge.

This power is thus extended by 3 & 4 Vict. c. 15, s. 14 (also repealed except to the same extent). After reciting the power given by the last act it provides that—"Such power shall extend to all cases where, by reason of lands being partially exempted from the payment of tithes, by custom or otherwise, or by being subject to a shifting or leaping modus, or other customary payment, or rendered due only on certain contingencies, a contingent rent-charge has been already fixed, or would according to the provisions of the said firstly-recited act be fixed in respect of such lands; and it shall be lawful for the said commissioners, with such consent of both land-owners and tithe-owners as in the said lastly recited act is required in that respect, at any time before the confirmation of the apportionment of any rent-charge, by any award, or by a supplemental award, where an award or parochial agreement has been made before the passing of this act, or for the land-owners or tithe-owners by a parochial agreement or supplemental agreement where a parochial agreement or award has already been made in respect of such lands, to exercise such powers in such manner and subject to the same conditions as are given by the said lastly recited act in cases of lands formerly part of the possessions of a privileged order: Provided always, and it is hereby declared, that nothing herein contained extends to cases of change of cultivation only, nor to cases of prescription relating to wood-land."

2 & 3 Vict.
c. 62.

Provisions for substituting fixed rent-
charge, extended to crown lands.

By 2 & 3 Vict. c. 62, s. 12 (repealed except as to tithes not commuted), "'And whereas certain crown lands, by reason of their being of the tenure of ancient demesne or otherwise, are exempted from payment of tithes whilst in the tenure, occupation, or manurance of her Majesty, her tenants, farmers, or lessees, or their under-tenants, as the case may be, but become subject to tithes when aliened or occupied by subjects not being tenants, farmers, or lessees of the crown, and doubts have arisen how far the provisions of the said first-recited act relating to lands heretofore parcel of the possessions of any privileged order, or in the nature of glebe, or otherwise in like manner privileged and partially exempt, are applicable to such crown lands;' be it declared and enacted, that all and every the said provisions of the said first-recited act do extend to such crown lands, and that the provision lastly in this act contained for substituting a fixed rent-charge instead of a contingent rent-charge on lands partially exempt from tithes shall extend and be applicable to such crown lands as aforesaid: Provided always, that no such fixed rent-charge shall be substituted instead of such contingent rent-charge on such crown lands without the consent of the persons or officers who are by the said first-recited act respectively required to be substituted in cases of commutation of tithes where the ownership of lands or tithes is vested in her Majesty" (n).

By 4 & 5 Vict. c. 39, s. 29, "The ecclesiastical commissioners for England shall, in respect of all lands, tithes, tenements, or other hereditaments, endowments, or emoluments, already vested or liable to be vested in them by or under the provisions of either of the said acts or of this act, be deemed to be the owners or joint owners thereof respectively, as the case may be, for all the purposes of '6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71,' and of the several acts to amend and explain the same."

By 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71, s. 87, provision is made for the sale of buildings and the sites thereof rendered useless or unnecessary by the commutation of tithes. And 2 & 3 Vict. c. 62, s. 15, extended these provisions to collegiate and corporate bodies.

By 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71, ss. 77, 78, any owner of a limited estate in lands or any ecclesiastical owner of lands may charge the expenses of commuting the tithes on those lands upon the lands themselves for twenty years. By 2 & 3 Vict. c. 62, s. 16, the same power is given to all corporations, cathedral, collegiate, or otherwise; and by sect. 17. colleges or ecclesiastical corporations aggregate may, with the consent of the commissioners, charge these expenses on any other lands belonging to them.

SECT. 6.—Lammas Lands, Commons in Gross, Gated or Stinted Pastures.

By 2 & 3 Vict. c. 62, s. 13 (repealed except as to tithes not commuted), after reciting that "large tracts of land called lammas lands are in the occupation of certain persons during a portion of the year only, and are liable to the tithes of the produce of the said lands increasing and growing thereon during such occupation, and at other portions of the year are in the occupation of other persons, and in their hands liable to different kinds of tithes arising from the agistment, produce, or increase of cattle or stock thereon; and by reason of such change of occupation such last-mentioned tithes cannot be commuted for a rent-charge issuing out of or fixed upon the said lands," and that the previous acts are thereby rendered inoperative in the several parishes where such lammas lands lie: And that the same acts "are in like manner inoperative in certain cases where a personal right of commonage, or a right of common in gross, is vested in certain persons by reason of inhabitancy or occupation in the parish where any common may lie, or by custom or vicinage, but without having such right of common so annexed or appurtenant to or arising out or in respect of any lands on which any rent-charge could be fixed instead of the tithes of the cattle or stock, or their produce, increase, or agistment, on such common, annexed to such personal right;” it is enacted, that “in every case where by reason of the peculiar tenure of such lands, and the change during the year of the occupiers thereof, or of such right of commonage, a rent-charge cannot, in the judgment of the said commissioners, be fixed on the said lands in respect of cattle and stock received and fed thereon, or of the produce and increase of such cattle and stock, at such portion of the year as the said lands are thrown open, or where such right of commonage alone exists, it shall be lawful for the parties interested in such lands or commons and the tithes thereof in the case of a parochial agreement, or for the commissioners in the case of a compulsory award, in every such parochial agreement or award respectively, or by any supplemental agreement in the nature of a parochial agreement, or by a supplemental award, as the case may be, where any parochial agreement or award has been already made, to fix a rent-charge instead of the tithes of such lammas land or commons, to be paid during the separate occupation thereof by the separate occupiers, in like manner as other rent-charges are fixed by the said acts or any of them, and to declare in such agreement or award, or supplemental agreement or award, as the case may be, such a sum or rate per head to be paid for each head of cattle or stock turned on to such lammas land or commons by the parties entitled to the occupation thereof after the same shall have been so thrown open, or by the parties entitled to such right of commonage as aforesaid; and every such sum shall be ascertained and fixed upon a calculation of the tithes received in respect of such last-mentioned occupation or right for the period and according to the provisions for fixing rent-charges in the said recited acts, and shall be due and payable by the owner of such cattle or stock on the same being first turned upon such lands or commons, and shall be recoverable by the persons entitled thereto by distress and impounding of the cattle or stock in respect of which such sum shall be due, in like manner as cattle are distrained and impounded for rent, and be subject to the same provisions as to distress and replevin of the same as are by law provided in cases of distress for rent.”

But these provisions are not to “extend to lammas lands where no tithes or payments instead of tithes have been taken during the seven years ending at Christmas, 1835, in respect of the cattle or stock received and fed thereon, or of the produce and increase of such cattle or stock at such portion of the year as the said lands are thrown open.”

By sect. 14. After reciting that in certain cases of commons thereafter to be inclosed, “allotments may be made in respect of tenements and hereditaments to which a right of going on such common is appendant or appurtenant, the tithes whereof would be chargeable on the tenements or hereditaments in respect of which such allotments may be made, and" that "such tenements or hereditaments are not of themselves an adequate security for the rent-charge to be fixed in respect of such tithes;" it is declared and enacted, that "in every such case the rent-charge to be fixed instead of such tithes shall be a charge upon and recoverable out of any allotments to be in future made in respect of such rights, as well as upon such tenements or hereditaments in respect of which such allotments are made, and by the same ways and means as are provided for the recovery of rent-charges by the said acts or any of them, or this act."

By 3 & 4 Vict. c. 15, s. 15, the provisions of the last-mentioned act "may be carried into effect and such powers exercised at any time before the confirmation of the apportionment of any rent-charge, by the land-owners and tithe-owners by a supplemental agreement after an award, or by the commissioners by a supplemental award after a parochial agreement."

By 9 & 10 Vict. c. 73, s. 13, "Where lands now charged or hereafter to be charged with rent-charges or portions of rent-charges under confirmed instruments of apportionment have been or shall be (after the confirmation of such apportionment) inclosed or divided, allotted or exchanged, by agreement or award made under the powers of any general or local act of inclosure (or otherwise), in such manner that the apportionment shall appear to the commissioners to be inconvenient with reference to the altered distribution of the land among the several owners thereof, it shall be lawful for the commissioners, upon the application of the owners of such lands, or the majority in number and value of such owners, or upon the application of the person or persons entitled to such rent-charges or portions of rent-charges, or any of them, to make or confirm an altered instrument of apportionment adapted to the altered distribution of the lands, in order that the rent-charges or portions of rent-charges originally charged on the several portions of land which shall have been taken or allotted away from the former owners on such inclosure, division, allotment, or exchange, shall be charged on the lands which shall have been allotted or received in the way of substitution or compensation for the lands so taken or allotted away from the former owners thereof, or as near thereto as circumstances will admit; and every such altered apportionment, when confirmed under the hands and seal of the commissioners, shall be valid as from the date of such confirmation, and shall be taken to be an amendment of the original apportionment."

By sect. 14, the expenses of such altered apportionment shall be borne by the owners of the lands to which it relates, and shall be recovered in the same manner as expenses chargeable common appurtenant to be a charge on the allotments made in respect of the lands to which right of common attached.

23 & 24 Vict.
c. 93.

Tithes commuted for a sum or rate per head may be converted into a rent-charge.

By 23 & 24 Vict. c. 93, s. 18, "In any case in which tithes have been commuted for a sum or rate per head to be paid for each head of cattle or stock turned on land subject to common rights or held or enjoyed in common, during the whole of the year, the commissioners may, upon the application in writing of any person entitled to receive such sum or rate per head, or of any person who may be liable to pay the same or any part thereof, by a supplemental award and apportionment, by way of supplement to the apportionment under which such rate per head shall be now payable, convert the same into a gross rent-charge, to be thereafter payable out of such land."

Gross rent-charge may be apportioned on gated or stinted pastures.

Sect. 19. "Where a gross rent-charge has been made payable in respect of the tithes of any gated or stinted pasture, and such gates or stints are rated to the relief of the poor, the commissioners may, by the instrument of apportionment to be made of such rent-charge, or by a supplemental award and apportionment, where an apportionment shall have been already made, upon the application in writing of the person entitled to such rent-charge, or of any owner of a gate or stint, apportion such gross rent-charge pro rata upon the gates or stints, and after such apportionment or supplemental award and apportionment the owner of such rent-charge shall have the same powers for the recovery of any arrears thereof, by distress on the goods and chattels of the person rated to the relief of the poor in respect of the gates or stints the rent-charge upon which is in arrear, as are given by the said recited acts (n) for the recovery of rent-charge in arrear, and such powers of distress may be exercised upon the goods and chattels of such person, whether found upon the said pasture or elsewhere."

Rent-charge on commons may be commuted for a part of the land, or redeemed.

Sect. 20. "In every other case in which a gross rent-charge is charged upon any land subject to common rights, or held or enjoyed in common during the whole of the year, the commissioners shall, upon the application in writing of the person entitled to such rent-charge, or of any person liable to pay the same or any part thereof, convene a meeting of the owners of such land and persons liable to pay such rent-charge, of which twenty-one days' notice shall be given in such manner as to the commissioners shall seem fit; and the majority in value of the persons attending such meeting may determine whether such rent-charge shall be commuted for an equivalent part of the land on which it is chargeable, or be redeemed for a sum equal to twenty-five times the amount of such rent-charge, to be paid by a time to be limited by the commissioners, and may further determine, if the rent-charge is to be redeemed, whether the redemption money shall be raised by rate on the persons liable to such rent-charge, or by sale of a portion of such land :

Provided always, that if no determination be come to at such meeting the commissioners may proceed to commute the rent-charge for land as hereinafter provided."

Sect. 21. "If the rent-charge is to be commuted for land, the commissioners shall define and set out the land to be so given, and shall vest the same in the owner of the rent-charge by an award, to be made by them in like manner as awards of exchange of glebe for other land are made under the said recited acts, and subject to all the like incidents."

By sects. 22, 23, if the rent-charge is to be redeemed for a sum to be raised by the sale of a portion of the land liable to such rent-charge, the commissioners may define and set out the land to be sold, and are to execute the proper conveyances to the purchaser.

Sect. 24. "Wherever a sum or rate per head shall be in arrear, the arrears shall be recoverable by distress and impounding of any cattle, stock, goods, or chattels belonging to the person in respect of whose cattle or stock such sum or rate per head is in arrear, wherever the same may be found."

Sect. 25. "Where any lands in respect to the cattle or stock upon which any sum or rate per head shall be payable shall be inclosed, divided, allotted, or exchanged, under the powers of any general or local act of inclosure or otherwise, the commissioners may, by the altered apportionment which may be made by them, adapted to the altered distribution of the said lands, charge a rent-charge equivalent to the amount of the sum or rate per head which shall have been previously payable, upon the lands which shall have been allotted under the said inclosure in lieu of the rights in respect of which the said sum or rate per head was made payable, which rent-charge shall be thereafter payable out of the same lands, in such manner and proportion as the said altered apportionment shall direct."

Rent-charges created under this act are not subject to 54 & 55 Vict. c. 8 (the Tithe Act, 1891) (o).

If rent-charge is commuted for land, commissioners to set out the land and to vest the same in owner.

Commissioners to convey land.

Where rate per head is in arrear, the same may be recovered by distress.

Upon inclosure, rate per head may be converted into rent-charge.

SECT. 7.—Fruit and Hop Plantations.

By sect. 40 of 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71 (p), the commissioners were empowered to make a separate valuation of the hop grounds, orchards, or gardens, according to the average rate of composition for the tithes of similar lands during seven years preceeding Christmas, 1835, within a certain district. By sect. 42 an ordinary and extraordinary charge for tithes was to be fixed for hop grounds or market gardens. Hop grounds or market gardens going out of cultivation were to be subject to such ordinary charge; but such as were newly cultivated after the commutation, were to undergo the extraordinary charge.

*Walsh v.
Trimmer.*

In the case of Walsh v. Trimmer (q), a commutation of tithes took place in a parish where there was land cultivated for hops, and an extraordinary charge was fixed for this culture. At the time of the commutation there was a large piece of waste land which did not pay tithes. Some years afterwards this waste land was inclosed and cultivated for hops. It was holden by the House of Lords, reversing the decision of the Exchequer Chamber, and restoring that of the Queen's Bench, that this land had become liable to the extraordinary charge for hop culture.

But no provision was made in these clauses for the contingency of a change of cultivation in orchards and fruit plantations. 2 & 3 Vict. c. 62, supplied this defect, enacting—

2 & 3 Vict.
c. 62.

Provision for dividing the tithe of fruit plantations in certain cases.

By sect. 26, that in case any of the lands in a parish shall be orchards or fruit plantations, and notice in writing by the owners whose interest shall not be less than two-thirds of the whole of the orchards and fruit plantations in such parish, shall be given before the draught of such apportionment shall be framed, the tithes, orchards and fruit plantations in such parish shall be distinguished into two parts accordingly, to be called the ordinary charge and the extraordinary fruit charge; and the extraordinary charge shall be a rate per imperial acre.

Newly-cultivated fruit plantations to be charged an additional sum.

By sect. 27, all lands in any parish "in which an extraordinary fruit charge shall have been distinguished as aforesaid at the time of commutation, and which shall be newly cultivated as orchards or fruit plantations at any time after such commutation, shall be charged with" the extraordinary fruit charge in that parish: "Provided always, that no such additional amount shall be charged in respect of any plantations of apples, pears, plums, cherries, and filberts, or of any one or more of those fruits, during the first five years, and half only of such additional amount during each of the next succeeding five years, of such new cultivation thereof; and that no such additional amount shall be charged in respect of any plantation of gooseberries, currants, and raspberries, or of any one or more of those fruits during the first two years, and half only of such additional amount during each of the next succeeding two years, of such new cultivation thereof; and that no such additional amount shall be charged in respect of any mixed plantation of apples, pears, plums, cherries, or filberts, and of gooseberries, currants, or raspberries, during the first three years, and half only of such additional amount during each of the next succeeding three years, of such new cultivation thereof."

Orchards, &c. displanted to be relieved

By sect. 28, lands which shall cease to be cultivated as orchards or fruit plantations shall be charged, after the thirty-first day of December next following such change of cultivation, only with the ordinary charge. from additional charge.

Further supplementary provisions for mixed plantations of hops and fruit, for separating rectorial and vicarial tithes are made by sects. 29—32 of 2 & 3 Vict. c. 62. Sect. 33 of that act, and sect. 18 of 3 & 4 Vict. c. 15, provide, in the case of tithes not commuted, for parochial agreements. It is not thought necessary now, by reason of 49 & 50 Vict. c. 54 (v), to set out these sections in full. Supplemental provisions.

The last-mentioned section of 3 & 4 Vict. c. 15 provided that “no such extraordinary charge shall be payable in respect of any such hop grounds and market gardens during the first year, and only half such extraordinary charge during the second year, in which they shall be newly cultivated as such, whether such new cultivation shall have commenced before or after the making of such parochial agreement or award as aforesaid.” 3 & 4 Vict. c. 15.

By 3 & 4 Vict. c. 15, s. 19, “It shall not be necessary to distinguish in any apportionment the amount of extraordinary rent-charge to be charged upon the lands of each individual landowner which shall be cultivated as hop grounds, market gardens, orchards, fruit plantations, or mixed plantations of hops and fruit, provided that the acreable amount of extraordinary charge for all the lands so cultivated respectively in any district which shall have been assigned, or in any parish wherein any extraordinary rent-charge shall have been declared, previous to the confirmation of the instrument of apportionment, shall be inserted therein.” No extraordinary charge payable on hop grounds, &c., for the first year of their being cultivated, &c.
Extraordinary rent-charge need not be distinguished on separate lands in apportionment.

By 23 & 24 Vict. c. 93, s. 42, “Whenever the commissioners are requested in the manner provided by the said recited acts (s) to charge an additional rent-charge by way of extraordinary charge upon any hop grounds or market gardens newly cultivated as such beyond the limits of any district for which an extraordinary charge for hop grounds or market gardens respectively shall have been already distinguished, the commissioners may declare the lands in the parish in which such newly cultivated hop grounds or market gardens are situate a district within which the extraordinary charge to be then fixed by them shall be thereafter payable.” 23 & 24 Vict. c. 93.
Formation of district within which extraordinary charges in respect of hop grounds and market gardens shall be payable.

By sect. 43, the commissioners may enter upon land at reasonable times to discover the extent cultivated as hop grounds or market gardens for the purposes of the preceding section. Power of inspection.

It was holden, in the case of Russell v. The Tithe Commissioners (t), that, under these sections and sect. 42 of 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71, the tithe commissioners have power to create or assign a new district and to impose an extraordinary rent-charge upon lands newly cultivated as market gardens in a *Russell v. parish in which no such district had been assigned at the time of the original commutation.

36 & 37 Vict.
c. 42.
Restriction of provisions respecting market gardens newly cultivated.

But this decision led to the enactment of 36 & 37 Vict. c. 42, by sect. 1 of which "so much of," sections 40 & 42 of 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71, sections 26 to 33 (inclusive) of 2 & 3 Vict. c. 62, sections 18 and 19 of 3 & 4 Vict. c. 15, and section 42 of 23 & 24 Vict. c. 93, "and of the powers therein contained conferred on the Tithe Commissioners, as provide for the charging of an additional rentcharge by way of extraordinary charge on market gardens newly cultivated as such, shall extend and apply only to a parish in which an extraordinary charge for market gardens was distinguished at the time of commutation."

49 & 50 Vict.
c. 54.

The Extraordinary Tithe Redemption Act, 1886, 49 & 50 Vict. c. 54, after reciting that this extraordinary tithe is levied under the Tithe Commutation Acts, "on hop grounds, orchards, fruit plantations, and market gardens" enacts as follows:—

Limitation of extraordinary charge.

Sect. 1. "No extraordinary charge shall be charged or levied under the Tithe Commutation Acts on any hop ground, orchard, fruit plantation, or market garden, newly cultivated as such after the passing of this Act."

Fixing of capital value of extraordinary charge.

Sect. 2. "The Land Commissioners for England, hereinafter referred to as 'the Commissioners,' shall as soon as may be after the passing of this Act ascertain in each parish in England and Wales and certify the capital value of the extraordinary charge on each farm, or where not a farm on each parcel of land, in respect of which the said charge is payable at the date of the passing of this Act."

Manner in which capital value is to be ascertained.

Sect. 3. "For the purpose of estimating the capital value of the said charge the Commissioners shall take into consideration the net annual value of the same after allowing for the expenses of collection, rates, taxes (except income tax) and other outgoings, the value of the land subject to the said charge, the length of time during which the said charge has been paid, the prospect of the continuance or discontinuance of the special cultivation in respect of which the said charge is imposed, the right of the cultivator to discontinue such special cultivation at any time and thereby to cause the suspension of the said charge, the prospect of the substitution of other land on the same farm for such cultivation, notwithstanding the provisions of the first section of this Act, and any other special circumstances applicable to the farm or parcel of land under consideration, and shall, if so advised or requested, hear evidence on behalf of the landowner (t), the tithe payer, and the tithe owner. The Commissioners shall then determine and certify under their seal the capital value of the said charge, and the value so certified shall, for the purposes of this Act, be the capital value of the charge: Provided that where the tithe owner is absolutely entitled to the charge in fee simple in possession, or is empowered to dispose thereof absolutely, or to give an absolute discharge for the capital value thereof, the Commissioners may, on the joint application of the tithe owner, the tithe payer, and the landowner, or of the tithe owner and the landowner in cases where the last named is also the tithe payer, certify such amount as may be agreed on between them to be the capital value of the charge included in such application."

Sect. 4. "(1.) Subject to the provision of this Act with respect to the redemption of charges, land in respect of which at the date of the passing of this Act extraordinary charge is payable shall, so soon as the capital value of the said charge shall have been certified under the provisions of this Act, be charged with the payment of an annual rent-charge equal to four per centum on such capital value, in lieu of the extraordinary charge which shall cease on the half-yearly day of payment thereof which shall immediately precede the date of the said certificate, such rent-charge to be a charge upon the particular farm or parcel of land in respect of which the same has been assessed.

Interest on capitalised value of extraordinary charge to be until redemption first charge on land.

(2.) Provided that the Commissioners may from time to time, if they think fit, on application by or on behalf of any person interested in land so charged, by order under their seal exonerate from the charge the whole or any part of that land, and may, if necessary, substitute other land for the land so exonerated, provided that the value of the land charged with the payment of the rent-charge shall be in their opinion equal to at least three times the capital value of the rent-charge and that such land is held under the same title, and subject to the same limitations as the land so exonerated.

(3.) The rent-charge shall be payable half-yearly on the days on which the extraordinary charge in the parish has hitherto been payable, and the first payment thereof shall be made on the one of the said two days which shall first occur after the capital value shall have been certified as aforesaid, the first payment to be a full half-yearly payment. The rent-charge shall have priority over all existing and future estates, interests, and incumbrances whatever.

(4.) The rent-charge shall be payable to the person who would but for this Act have been for the time being entitled to receive the extraordinary charge, and shall be held on the trusts and subject to the provisions and conditions (if any) applicable to that charge.

(5.) If default is made in payment of any instalment of the rent-charge it may be recovered by action in Her Majesty's High Court of Justice, or a county court, or in the same way that rent-charge in lieu of ordinary tithe is recoverable and subject to like conditions, or by entry upon and perception of the rents and profits of the land subject to such rent-charge. The said rent-charge shall not be subject to any parochial, county, or other rate, charge, or assessment."

Cases on section.

It is, therefore, not subject to land tax (u).

Where a farm, part of which was hop ground, had the extraordinary rent-charge assessed upon it under this Act in respect of such hop ground, and was afterwards sold in lots, it was decided that the part only which was cultivated as hop ground at the date of the Act was liable to the extraordinary rent-charge and not the other lots (x).

Redemption
of charge.

Sect. 5. "(1.) The owner of or any person interested in any land subject either to an extraordinary charge or to a rent-charge substituted therefor under this Act may at any time redeem the charge in manner by this section provided.

(2.) Where the person entitled to the charge is the incumbent of a benefice, the owner or any person interested in the land may pay the amount of the capital value of the extraordinary charge to the Governors of Queen Anne's Bounty (the receipt of whose treasurer shall be a sufficient discharge for the same), to be held or applied for the benefit of the incumbent for the time being, as if the same were money paid in redemption of ordinary rent-charge.

(3.) Where the person entitled to the charge is absolutely entitled thereto in fee simple in possession, or is empowered to dispose thereof absolutely, or to give an absolute discharge for the capital value thereof, the owner of or any person interested in the land may, after giving one month's notice to the person entitled to the charge, pay or tender to him the amount of the capital value of the extraordinary charge or any less sum which may be agreed on.

(4.) In any other case the owner of or any person interested in the land may pay the amount of the capital value of the extraordinary charge into the Bank of England, to be placed to the account of the Paymaster-General, in the matter of the land-owner and the tithe owner (naming them), and in the matter of this Act; and the money so paid shall be applicable to the like purposes and may be dealt with in like manner as if it were money paid into the bank under the Tithe Commutation Acts.

(5.) On proof to the Commissioners that payment or tender has been made as by this section provided in respect of any extraordinary charge or substituted rent-charge, they shall certify that the charge is redeemed, and that certificate shall be final and conclusive, and the land shall be thereby absolutely freed and discharged from the charge from the date of the next half-yearly payment."

Redemption
in case of settled land.

Sect. 6. "(1.) Money applicable to the purchase of land to be settled to or on any uses or trusts shall be applicable in or towards the redemption of an extraordinary charge or a rent-charge under this Act on land settled to or on the like uses or trusts.

(2.) Where a person is tenant for life of land subject to an extraordinary charge or a rent-charge under this Act he may borrow any money required for redemption thereof, and may charge the inheritance with repayment of the money so borrowed with interest, and the charge so created shall have the like priority as a rent-charge under this Act.

(3.) Where a person is tenant for life of land subject to an extraordinary charge or a rent-charge under this Act he may sell the land or any part thereof, or any land settled to or on the like uses or trusts, and apply the proceeds in or towards redemption of the charge.

Sect. 7. "(1.) Where a tenant of land subject to an extraordinary charge has before the passing of this Act contracted to pay the charge or any part thereof he shall, whilst his tenancy subsists, be liable to pay to his landlord the rent-charge substituted for the extraordinary charge; and any sum which a tenant is so liable to pay may be recovered by the landlord as the tenant's rent is for the time being recoverable.

Charge to be borne by landlord.

(2.) For the purposes of this section a tenancy from year to year or a tenancy at will shall be deemed to determine at the time when it would by law become determinable if notice or warning to determine the same were given at the date of the passing of this Act.

(3.) Subject as aforesaid a rent-charge under this Act shall as between landlord and tenant be payable by the landlord, any agreement to the contrary notwithstanding."

Sects. 8, 9 and 10, provide for the proceedings of the Commissioners in carrying out the provisions of this Act.

Procedure.

By sect. 11, every certificate made by the Commissioners under this Act shall be filed in their office: and an office copy shall be delivered out to any person requiring the same on payment of the proper fee, and shall be sufficient evidence of the certificate.

Filing of certificates of commissioners.

Sect. 12. "When it shall appear to the Governors of Queen Anne's Bounty that the income of any benefice on which a mortgage to the said Governors exists has been diminished by the operation of this Act, it shall be lawful for the said Governors, by resolution of their board on the application of the incumbent, with the consent of the patron, to make such modification in the conditions of such mortgage or the term fixed for the repayment of the principal secured thereby as may seem to them just and reasonable.

Power to Queen Anne's Bounty to modify mortgages.

The date of any such resolution, the term of extension, and the altered rate of payments or of instalments, shall be endorsed on the respective mortgage deeds free of charge to the incumbent.

The application of the provisions of this Act shall not in any way invalidate the instruments of security under which loans have been granted by the Governors; the said provisions shall extend and apply to such instruments as if originally, fully, and expressly inserted therein" (y).

Sect. 13. "Whereas under the provisions of Acts of Parliament certain fixed charges have been made on the income of benefices in receipt of extraordinary tithes in favour of other benefices or of district churches or chapelries situated within the limits of parishes of which the incumbents are in receipt of extraordinary tithes: Be it enacted that after the passing of this Act the Ecclesiastical Commissioners may make such alterations in the charges aforesaid, having in view the altered state of things created by this Act, as the said Commissioners may deem most equitable" (z).

3 & 4 Vict.
c. 15.

By 3 & 4 Vict. c. 15, sects. 25, 26, and 27, which now apply only to the cases in which tithes have not been commuted, it is enacted as follows:—

Gardens or lawns of small extent may be exempted from rent-
charge.

Sect. 25. "Whereas in many cases tithe-owners have, during the seven years of average prescribed by the said first-recited act" (6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71), "forborne to take the tithes of lands used and occupied as gardens, lawns, or the like, or compositions in lieu thereof, on account of such lands being of small extent, and the tithes thereof being of inconsiderable value: be it enacted, that where in such cases the tithes of a parish or district have been commuted, whether by a parochial agreement or by a compulsory award, and it shall be shown to the satisfaction of the said commissioners that the rent-charge or rent-charges specified in the said agreement or award has or have been based upon the average value of the tithes of the said parish or district during the seven years of average, exclusive of any tithes in respect of such gardens, lawns, or such like small holdings, according to the provisions of the said first-recited act, and that no part of the said rent-charge or rent-charges has been agreed to be given or awarded in respect of the tithes of such gardens, lawns, or other such like small holdings, it shall be lawful for the said commissioners, if they think fit, to order and direct that no part of the said rent-charge or rent-charges shall be apportioned upon such gardens, lawns, or other such like small holdings."

Sect. 26. "And whereas it hath happened that in cases where, during the seven years of average prescribed by the said first-recited act, tithes shall not have been demanded of certain tenements, by reason of their small extent of or the small amount of such tithes, such tenements have notwithstanding been included in the apportionment of the rent-charge for the parish, whereby the occupiers of such tenements have become liable to have their goods distrained upon, and the tithe-owner has been subjected to much increased difficulty and expense in the collection of the rent-charge, contrary to the true intent and meaning of the said first-recited act; and it is therefore expedient, under certain restrictions, to give relief in such cases: be it enacted, that in any such case in which the apportionment shall have included any number of small tenements, exceeding in the whole one hundred, from which tenements no tithe or composition for tithe shall have been demanded or taken (notwithstanding their liability thereto) during the period of seven years next preceding Christmas in the year 1835, it shall be lawful for the commissioners, and they are hereby authorized, if they shall see fit, upon the application in writing of any ten or more of the owners or occupiers of such small tenements, or of the tithe-owner, and after satisfactory proof shall have been given that no part of the rent-charge has been agreed to be given or awarded in respect of the tithes of such small tenements, to cause a new apportionment to be made of the said rent-charge, and to order and direct that no part thereof shall be apportioned upon such small tenements."

The commissioners to cause a new apportionment to be made in cases in which the apportionment shall have included tenements from which no tithe has been taken during seven years previous to Christmas, 1835.

Provision is made by this and the following section (sect. 27) for the making of this new apportionment and the costs thereof:—

Expenses of new apportionment.

"And as to any part of such costs as may be borne by the tithe-owner, such tithe-owner, being an ecclesiastical benefited person, may charge or assign the rent-charge as a security for the repayment of such costs in like manner as for the costs of the commutation under the said act" of 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71.

SECT. 9.—Personal, House, and Mineral Tithes.

By 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71, s. 90, "Nothing in this act contained, unless by special provision, to be inserted in some parochial agreement and specially approved by the commissioners, in which case the same shall be valid, shall extend to Easter offerings, mortuaries, or surplice fees (b), or to the tithes of fish or fishing,

c. 62.

Power after and mineral tithes.

By 2 & 3 Vict. c. 62, s. 9, however, "It shall be lawful, at any time before the confirmation of any apportionment after a compulsory award in any parish, for the land-owners and tithe-owners, having such interest in the lands and tithes of such parish as is required for the making a parochial agreement, to enter into a parochial agreement for the commutation of Easter offerings, mortuaries, or surplice fees, or of the tithes of fish, or fishing, or mineral tithes; and all the provisions, conditions, limitations, and powers of the said recited acts or any of them, relating to parochial agreements, so far as the same shall in the judgment of the commissioners be applicable to the subject of the proposed commutation, shall be observed and applied in every such case as if no previous award had been made; and every such agreement may fix the period at which the rent-charge to be paid under such agreement shall commence, but so nevertheless that the same and the subsequent payments thereof shall be made on some day fixed for the payment of the rent-charge awarded in such parish, and shall be recoverable from time to time by the means provided in the said acts or either of them for the recovery of the rent-charges in the said parish" (d).

Fish in ponds.

It does not seem to be agreed, whether or how far fish in ponds or private fisheries are liable to pay tithes; and therefore the same must be referred to the customs of particular places.

Deer.

Rabbits.

Oysters.

But it seems that of these no tithe can be due, where no profit is made thereof, and where they are kept only for pleasure, or to be spent in the house or family; as fish kept in a pond generally are (e); for they are like deer in a park, and rabbits in an inclosed warren, wild in their nature; and partaking of the realty, go to the heir (f). Oysters, or oyster lays or beds, are not tithable (g).

Fish in rivers.

Also fish taken in common rivers are tithable only by custom (h).

And in this case Lindwood says it is only a personal tithe, and shall be paid to that church where he who takes them hears divine service and receives the sacraments (i).

Fish in the sea.

Where fish are taken in the sea, though they are feræ naturæ, and consequently not tithable of common right, yet by the custom of the realm they are tithable as a personal tithe, that is, not by the tenth fish, or in kind, but by some small sum of money in consideration of the profits made thereby after costs deducted (k).

By the case of Rex v. Carlyon (l), it appears to be the custom in the parish of Paul, in the county of Cornwall, to pay one-tenth of all the fish caught and brought on shore within the parish; and there the court held that the proprietors of this tithe were rateable to the poor in respect of it (m).

Upon which foundation, it is said, that if the owners of a ship do lend it to mariners to go to an island for fish, and are in consideration of such loan to have a certain quantity of fish when they come back; no tithe shall be paid by the mariners for what is given to the owners, because they are only to pay for the clear gain (n).

A custom that tithes in kind ought to be paid to the vicar for all sea fish taken or caught with any nets or boats that had been housed or wintered at or in the parish in the interval between the last preceding fishing season and the season during which the fish were caught or taken (whether such nets or boats were the property of parishioners or not) has been established (o). Unless there be a clear custom to the contrary, the tithe of fish taken in the sea appears to be payable to the parson of the parish where the fisherman resides (p).

By a constitution of Archbishop Winchelsea, it is ordained, that "personal tithes shall be paid of artificers and merchandizers, that is, of the gain of their commerce; as also of carpenters, smiths, masons, weavers, inn-keepers, and all other workmen and hirelings, that they pay tithes of their wages; unless such hireling shall give something in certain to the use or for the light of the church, if the rector shall so think proper:" that is to say, they shall pay the tenth part of the profit, deducting first all necessary and reasonable expenses (q).

Personal
tithes.

And by 2 & 3 Edw. 6, c. 13 (r), s. 7, every person exercising merchandizes, bargaining and selling, clothing, handicraft or other art or faculty by such kind of persons, and in such places as heretofore within these forty years have accustomedly used to pay such personal tithes, or of right ought to pay (other than such as be common day labourers), shall yearly at or before the feast of Easter, pay for his personal tithes the tenth part of his clear gains; his charges and expenses, according to his estate, condition or degree, to be therein abated, allowed and deducted."

Sect. 8. "Provided always that in all such places where handicraftsmen have used to pay their tithes within these forty years, the same custom of payment of tithes to be observed and continue."

Sect. 9. "If any person refuse to pay his personal tithes in form aforesaid, then it shall be lawful to the ordinary of the diocese where the party is dwelling, to call the same party before him, and by his discretion to examine him by all lawful and reasonable means, other than by the party's own corporal oath, concerning the true payment of the said personal tithes."

Tithes of fish.

Sect. 11. "Provided also that this act or anything therein contained shall not extend to any parish which stands upon and towards the sea coasts, the commodities and occupying whereof consisteth chiefly in fishing, and have by reason thereof used to satisfy their tithes by fish; but that all such parishes shall pay their tithes according to the laudable customs, as they have heretofore of ancient time within these forty years used and accustomed, and shall pay their offerings as is aforesaid."

London, Canterbury, &c.

Sect. 12. "Provided also, that this act or anything therein contained shall not extend in any wise to the inhabitants of the cities of London and Canterbury, and the suburbs of the same, nor to any other town or place that hath used to pay their tithes by their houses, otherwise than they ought or should have done before the making of this act"

Restrictions imposed by this act.

This act restrains the canon law in three things: First, where the canon law was general, that all persons in all places should pay their personal tithes, the act restrains it to such kind of persons only, as have accustomedly used to pay the same within forty years before the making of the act. Secondly, whereas by the ecclesiastical laws they might before this act have examined the party upon his oath concerning his gain, this act restrains that course, so that the party cannot be examined upon oath. Thirdly, by this act the day labourer is freed from the payment of his personal tithes (s).

It cannot be intended upon this act, that if such tithes have been sometimes paid within forty years, they are therefore due; but they must have been accustomedly, that is, constantly, paid for forty years next before the act (t).

If it be demanded how such payment must now be proved forty years before the making of the act; the answer is, as in other like cases, à posteriori; by what has been done all the time of memory since the act (u).

Cases as to tithes on trade profits.

Sir Simon Degge says, the only case that he could find for above a hundred years before his time, where the tithes of the profits of such trades were sued for by any clergyman, was that of Dolley v. Davies, in 11 Jac. I., which was thus: The parson of a parish in Bristol libelled in the spiritual court against an inn-keeper, to have tithes of the profits of his kitchen, stable, and wine cellar, and did set forth in his libel, that he made great gain in selling of his beer, having bought it for 500*l.* and sold it for 1,000*l.*, of which gain he ought to have tithe by the common law of the realm. Upon which occasion, the clerk of the papers informed the court, that when one had libelled for tithes of the gain of 10*l.* for 100*l.* put out, a prohibition was granted: and the same was also granted in that case (x).

And personal tithes are now scarce any where paid in England, unless for mills (y), or fish caught at sea; and then they are payable where the party hears divine service, and receives the sacraments (z). Personal tithes now rare.

Tithes may be payable by custom for houses and other build- Houses.
ings, although they are generally exempt (a).

In some places, particularly near London, though not within the city, and therefore not within 37 Hen. 8, c. 12, a sum of money is paid for each house in the nature of a modus decimandi. In Pocock v. Tidmarsh it appeared that this payment, which was 12*s.* per house, was the only provision for the vicar of St. Saviour's, Southwark, and the court decreed its payment (b). In Beresford v. Newton the Court of Exchequer similarly enforced certain ancient customary payments in respect of certain houses in that part of the parish of St. Andrew's, Holborn, which is not within the City of London (c). In the argument of that case many similar instances were referred to. Tithes or offerings of this kind have been sometimes converted into church rates leviable by statute (d).

Tithes are not due of things which are of the substance of the earth (e), as for lead ore in Derbyshire, and tin in Devonshire or Cornwall (f). A customary payment in lieu of tithe of mines is good (g). A lime-kiln, though not tithable of common right, may be so by custom (h); so may white salt (i). Substance of the earth.

SECT. 10.—Incidents to Tithe and Rent-charge.

Tithes in lay hands.

Tithes which come to the crown by the statutes of dissolution, and are now vested in the lay impropiators, are subject to all the laws and incidents of other incorporeal freehold property.

6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71.

By 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71, it is carefully provided that the rent-charge shall be subject to the same incumbrances and incidents as tithe had been before.

Rent-charge to be subject to the same incumbrances and incidents as tithe before this act.

Sect. 71. "Any person having any interest in or claim to any tithes, or to any charge or incumbrance upon any tithes, before the passing of this act, shall have the same right to claim upon the rent-charge for which the same shall be commuted as he had to or upon the tithes, and shall be entitled to have the like remedies for recovering the same as if his right or claim to or upon the rent-charge had accrued after the commutation: provided that nothing herein contained shall give validity to any mortgage or other incumbrance which before the passing of this act was invalid or could not be enforced; and every estate for life, or other greater estate, in any such rent-charge, shall be taken to be an estate of freehold; and every estate in any such rent-charge shall be subject to the same liabilities and incidents as the like estate in the tithes commuted for such rent-charge; and where any lands were exempted from tithe whilst in the occupation of the owner thereof by reason of being glebe or of having been heretofore parcel of the possessions of any privileged order, the same lands shall be in like manner exempted from the payment of the rent-charge apportioned on them whilst in the occupation of the owner thereof; and where by virtue of any act or acts of parliament heretofore passed any tithes are authorized to be sold, exchanged, appropriated, or applied in any way, the rent-charges for which such tithes may be commuted under the provisions of this act, or any part thereof, shall or may be saleable or exchangeable, appropriated and applied, to all intents and purposes, in like manner as such tithes, and the same powers of sale, exchange and appropriation shall in all such cases extend to and may be exercised in respect of the said commutation rent-charges; and the money to arise by the sale of such rent-charges shall or may be invested, appropriated, and applied to the same purposes and in like manner as the money to arise by the sale of any such tithes might have been invested, appropriated, and applied under such particular act or acts in case this act had not been passed; and no such rent-charge shall merge or be extinguished in any estate of which the person for the time being entitled to such rent-charge may be seised or possessed in the lands on which the same shall be charged."

Time as bar to recovery.

To the recovery of an estate in tithe by the true owner against a wrongful possessor, lapse of time formerly was no bar. But by 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 2 (k), twenty years' adverse possession gave a good title, and now by 37 & 38 Vict. c. 57, s. 9, twelve years' adverse possession gives a good title.

It was for a long time thought that these acts operated only between rival claimants to an estate in existing tithe, and had no effect where the question was whether land by long non-payment had escaped liability to tithe.

In The Dean and Chapter of Ely v. Bliss, first heard before Lord Langdale as Master of the Rolls (l), then appealed to the Lord Chancellor (Lord St. Leonards) and then sent first to the Court of Exchequer (m) and then to the Court of Common Pleas, the ultimate judgment at which the Lord Chancellor arrived, reversing the Master of the Rolls, was that non-payment of tithe for twenty years and upwards did not constitute in the tithe-payer adverse possession against the tithe-owner, and consequently was no defence to a suit for tithes (n). In the words of Lord Selborne in The Irish Land Commission v. Grant (o), "Lord St. Leonards decided in substance that the word 'land' as extended in that section to 'tithes' meant the incorporeal hereditament vested in the tithe-owner and not the reddendum to be made by the tithe-payer."

In The Irish Land Commission v. Grant, just cited, the right to tithe rent-charge in Ireland was vested in a spiritual corporation sole until 1871, when it was transferred by statute to a lay corporation, the predecessors in title of The Land Commission. In 1877 this lay corporation brought an action to recover six years' arrears. For more than twenty years there had been no payment or acknowledgment in writing. It was holden, affirming the decision of the Irish Court of appeal, that tithe rent-charge was, as tithe would have been, "rent" within the meaning of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, s. 1, and that sect. 2 applied as between the tithe-owner and the person liable to pay tithe rent-charge.

This seems to overrule Lord St. Leonards' decision in The Dean and Chapter of Ely v. Bliss (m).

In Payne v. Esdaile (p), where a lay impropiator was suing for the City payments in lieu of tithe made under 30 Hen. 8, c. 12 (q), a similar decision was arrived at. These payments were considered as "annuities or periodical sums of money charged upon land" within the same section of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27; and non-payment for upwards of twenty years was considered a good defence.

It is to be observed that none of these cases touch that of a spiritual corporation sole, such as the incumbent of a benefice. In The Dean and Chapter of Ely v. Bliss, the claimant was a corporation aggregate. In Payne v. Esdaile the claimant was a lay impropiator. In The Irish Land Commission v. Grant the original tithe-owner had been a spiritual corporation sole; but the Irish Court of Appeal and the House of Lords considered that the lay corporation aggregate which had succeeded him could not avail themselves of his peculiar position. Assuming a spiritual corporation sole to come under the real property limitation acts at all, it is not a question of the twelve years or twenty years bar; but of sixty years or three incumbencies under sect. 29 (r). But, inasmuch as tithe is only brought under this act by the definition clause (sect. 1), and that definition clause refers only to "tithes other than tithes belonging to a spiritual or eleemosynary corporation sole," it seems very doubtful whether the statutes of limitation afford any defence to a claim by a spiritual corporation sole. Lord Selborne touches upon this question in The Irish Land Commission v. Grant (s), but leaves it undecided.

6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71, contains certain provisions for giving land, in lieu of tithes, to ecclesiastical persons, but not to lay impropiators. It should be observed, that this exchange of land for tithes must be the subject of an agreement: it cannot be by an award (t) of the commissioners.

Land not exceeding twenty acres may be given as commutation for tithes, &c.

6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71.

Sections 21, 27, and 28 of that act, having specified the nature of parochial agreements, it is enacted, by sect. 29, that "any such parochial agreement may be made in manner and form aforesaid for giving to any ecclesiastical owner, in right of any spiritual benefice or dignity, of any tithes or of any rent-charge for which such tithes shall have been commuted, any quantity not exceeding in the whole twenty imperial acres of land by way of commutation for the whole or an equivalent part of the great or small tithes of the parish, or in discharge of or exchange for the whole or an equivalent part of any rent-charge agreed to be paid instead of such tithes, but subject in every case to the provisions hereinafter contained; and every such agreement shall be made in such form and contain such particulars as the commissioners shall in that behalf direct, specifying the land whereof the tithes or rent-charge for which such tithes shall have been commuted shall be the subject of such agreement, and giving full and sufficient descriptions of the quantity, state of culture, and annual value of the land proposed to be given in exchange for such tithes or rent-charge: provided always, that the same consent and confirmation shall be necessary to any such agreement as in the case of an agreement for a rent-charge; and that in case the said agreement shall not extend to the whole of the tithes of the parish, an agreement or award as hereinafter provided may and shall be made for the payment of a rent-charge in satisfaction of the residue of the said tithes; and such rent-charge when agreed upon or awarded, or the residue thereof, shall be apportioned in manner hereinafter provided upon all the lands of the parish subject to the payment of tithes, unless otherwise agreed upon by the parties to the said parochial agreement, except the land so given by way of commutation, in like manner as if no agreement for giving land had been made: provided also, that the land so given shall be free from incumbrances, except leases at improved rent, land tax, or other usual outgoings, and shall not be of leasehold tenure, nor of copyhold or customary tenure, subject to arbitrary fine or the render of heriots."

Sect. 31. "Such agreement for giving land confirmed by the said commissioners, shall operate as a conveyance of such land to the owner of such tithes or rent-charge, and the land so conveyed shall thereupon vest in and be and be deemed to be holden by such person or persons, and upon the like uses and trusts in every respect as the tithes or rent-charge in commutation or exchange for which the same shall have been given shall be vested and holden: and for the purpose of making and completing any such agreement, the provisions of this act respecting persons under legal disability (u) shall apply to every person party to such agreement, or in whom any such land shall be vested, and whose concurrence or consent may be necessary to the perfecting thereof, or of the title to such land, as fully as if the same had been here repeated and re-enacted."

or, in default thereof, such person as may be nominated for that purpose by the commissioners after due inquiry shall have been made by them as to the fitness of such person, and whom they are hereby empowered to nominate under their hands and seal, shall, for the purposes of this act, be substituted in the place of such patron, owner, or person so interested."

of tithes or rent-charge: provided always, that no such tithe-owner shall be enabled to take or hold more than twenty imperial acres of land in the whole by virtue of any such agreement or agreements made in the same parish; and the same consent and confirmation relatively to the lands and tithes comprised in the said agreement shall be necessary to any such agreement as in the case of a parochial agreement for giving land instead of tithes, and all the provisions hereinbefore contained concerning a parochial agreement for giving land shall be applicable to every such agreement as hereinbefore last mentioned, so far as concerns the lands and tithes comprised in the said agreement: provided also, that any amendment which shall be made in the draft of apportionment before confirmation thereof, and subsequent to any such agreement for giving land instead of rent-charge, whereby the charge upon the lands referred to in such agreement shall be altered, shall be taken to annul the execution of such agreement for giving land, and any consent which may have been necessary thereunto."

Under these provisions land in lieu of tithes could not be given after the confirmation of the apportionment.

tithes.

2 & 3 Vict. c. 62, makes the time coextensive with the duration of the commission, enacting as follows:

Sect. 19, "So much of the said first-recited act as enables any land-owner, either by parochial agreement or individually, to give land instead of tithes or rent-charge at any time before the confirmation of any instrument of apportionment, shall be and the same is hereby extended, and the powers and provisions for that purpose may be exercised in every such case at any time, as well after as before such confirmation of the apportionment as aforesaid, during the continuance of the commission constituted and with the consent of the commissioners appointed and acting under the said first-recited act."

Lands taken by ecclesiastical titheowners instead of tithes to vest absolutely in them.

Sect. 20. "In any case where any land shall have been or shall hereafter be taken by any ecclesiastical tithe-owner under any agreement for the commutation of any tithes, or for giving land instead of any rent-charge, under the recited acts, or any of them, or this act, such land shall, upon the confirmation of such agreement, vest absolutely in such tithe-owner and his successors, free from all claims of any person or body corporate, and without being thereafter subject to any question as to any right, title, or claim thereto, or in any manner affecting the same; and the commissioners shall cause to be inserted in or endorsed upon every such agreement the amount of the rent-charge instead of which such land was given, and the lands upon which the same was chargeable; and every person who, if this act had not been made, would have been entitled to recover any such land given instead of rent-charge, or any rents or profits issuing out of such land, shall be entitled to recover against the party or parties giving such land instead of tithes or rent-charge, his, her, or their heirs, executors, or administrators, by way of damages, in an action on the case, such compensation as he or she may be entitled to for any loss thereby sustained; and such damages, and all costs and expenses awarded to the plaintiff in such action, shall forthwith attach upon and be payable out of the lands exonerated by such agreement."

Sect. 21. "All agreements and other assurances which shall be made for the purpose of effecting the taking of land instead of rent-charge under the provisions of the said recited acts, or any of them, or this act, shall be valid and effectual for the purpose of vesting an estate of inheritance as to such lands in such ecclesiastical tithe-owner and his successors, notwithstanding the same be made by any corporation sole or aggregate, or any trustees or feoffees for charitable purposes, otherwise restrained from or incapable of making any such valid conveyance or assurance."

Corporations, trustees, and feoffees to charitable uses may convey lands.

By 3 & 4 Vict. c. 15, s. 17, the provisions of this section are extended to churchwardens and overseers, and trustees or feoffees of parish property or of any property holden on a parochial or public trust.

3 & 4 Vict. c. 15.

By 5 & 6 Vict. c. 54, s. 6, "Whereas the power of giving land instead of tithes has been found beneficial to both tithe-owners and land-owners, but such power has been inoperative in a great degree by reason that the land-owners by giving land instead of vicarial tithe cannot free their lands from the liability to rectorial tithe, and the converse; be it enacted, that it shall be lawful for any tithe-owner with the consent of the patron and ordinary in the case of spiritual tithes, to be testified as their consent under the first recited act is testified to anything for which their consent is therein required, and subject in that case to the limitation of quantity of land provided by the first-recited act, and subject to the approval of the tithe commissioners, to agree for the assignment to any other owner of tithes issuing out of the same lands of so much of his tithes arising within the same parish, or of the rent-charge agreed or awarded to be paid instead of such tithes, as shall be an equivalent for the tithes belonging to such other tithe-owner issuing out of the same lands, or for the rent-charge agreed or awarded to be paid instead thereof, for the purpose of enabling any land-owner who shall be desirous of giving land instead of tithes to free his lands, or any part thereof, from both rectorial and vicarial tithes, and from the payment of any rent-charge in respect thereof; and every such agreement shall be carried into effect by means of an award or supplemental award, to be made by the said commissioners either before or after the confirmation of the apportionment, in like manner as awards or supplemental awards are made by them pursuant to the powers vested in them before the passing of this act."

5 & 6 Vict. c. 54.

easements, which is not of legal validity, and such lands or money, or both, shall appear to the commissioners to be a fair equivalent for the said tithes or glebe, or rights or easements, they shall be empowered to confirm and render valid such agreement; and in case the same shall not appear to be a fair equivalent, the said commissioners shall nevertheless be empowered to confirm such agreement, and also to make an award for such rent-charge, which with the said land or money, or both, will be a fair equivalent for the said tithes or glebe, or rights or easements, and, subject to such confirmation and award, to extinguish the right of the tithe-owners to the perception of the said tithes, or his title to the said glebe rights or easements, or to the receipt of any rent-charge instead thereof, other than the rent-charge awarded over and above the lands or money, or both, so confirmed to them."

41 & 42 Vict.
c. 42.

Exchange of annual payment for lands or tithe rent-charge.

By 41 & 42 Vict. c. 42, s. 7, "The provisions of the said acts with reference to the exchange of glebe lands for other lands shall extend to and be deemed to authorise any spiritual person to exchange for lands, or for tithe rent-charge, any annual payment or augmentation belonging to him in right of his benefice and charged upon or payable out of any lands or tithe rent-charge."

SECT. 12.—Redemption of Rent-charge.

In what cases.

Provisions for the redemption of rent-charges in the following cases—(1) where the whole rent-charge payable in the parish does not exceed 15*l.* a year; (2) where a rent-charge is divisible into very small sums; (3) where it has been erroneously charged on lands not within the parish; (4) where land is to be taken for churches, chapels, cemeteries, or public buildings—are made by the later Commutation Acts, 9 & 10 Vict. c. 73, 23 & 24 Vict. c. 93, and 41 & 42 Vict. c. 42.

9 & 10 Vict.
c. 73.

Power to the amount does not

(1) By 9 & 10 Vict. c. 73, s. 1, "Where, under any agreement or award which has been or hereafter shall be confirmed by the commissioners, the amount of the rent-charge agreed or awarded to be paid instead of the tithes of any parish shall not exceed the sum of fifteen pounds, and shall not have been apportioned, or the apportionment of such rent-charge shall not have been confirmed by the commissioners, it shall be lawful for the owners of the land chargeable therewith, or any of them, with the consent of the person or persons for the time being entitled to the receipt thereof, or, in the case of an infant, feme covert, or lunatic, with the consent of the guardian, husband, or committee of the estate of the person so under disability, to redeem such rent-charge on payment, in manner hereinafter mentioned (within such time as the commissioners shall in each case limit in this behalf), of a sum of money not less than twenty-four times the amount of such rent-charge."

By 23 & 24 Vict. c. 93, s. 31, the commissioners may order a redemption without the consent of the person entitled to the receipt of the tithes, for a sum equal to twenty-five times the amount of the rent-charge. 23 & 24 Vict.
c. 93.

By 9 & 10 Vict. c. 73, s. 2, "In every case in which any such rent-charge, not exceeding fifteen pounds as aforesaid, has been or shall be awarded to be paid, the commissioners shall give notice, in such manner as they shall think fit, of the time within which it shall be lawful for the owners of the land charged therewith, or any of them, to redeem such rent-charge; and when it shall appear to the commissioners that the consideration money for the redemption of such rent-charge as aforesaid shall have been paid, according to the provisions of this act, within the time limited by them in this behalf, or within any enlarged time which the commissioners may by any order under their hands and seal allow for that purpose, no apportionment of the rent-charge shall be made, but the commissioners shall, by a certificate under their hands and seal, certify that such rent-charge has been redeemed, and that the parish is discharged of such rent-charge, and of the tithes in lieu of which such rent-charge was agreed or awarded to be paid, as from such time as the commissioners shall think reasonable and declare, and such parish shall be thenceforth discharged according to the terms of such certificate." 9 & 10 Vict.

By 23 & 24 Vict. c. 93, s. 32, "Whenever lands charged with rent-charge under any instrument of apportionment or altered apportionment shall be divided for building or other purposes into numerous plots, and it shall appear to the commissioners that no further apportionment of the said rent-charge can conveniently be made, the commissioners may, if they shall see fit, upon the application of any one owner of the said lands, and without the consent of any other owner, or of the person for the time being entitled to the receipt of the said rent-charge, and without limitation as to the amount thereof, by an order under their hands and seal direct that such rent-charge shall be redeemed by the payment by the owners of the lands chargeable therewith, within such time as the commissioners shall by such order direct and appoint, of a sum equal to twenty-five times the amount of such rent-charge."

41 & 42 Vict.
c. 42.

Redemption of tithe not exceeding 20s.

By 41 & 42 Vict. c. 42, s. 3, "Whenever land has been charged with any rent-charge not exceeding twenty shillings, the commissioners may, if they see fit, upon the application of the owner of such land or of the person entitled to the rent-charge thereon, by an order under their hands and seal, direct that such rent-charge shall be redeemed by the payment by or on behalf of the owner of the said land charged therewith, within such time as the commissioners by such order shall direct and appoint, of a sum of money equal to twenty-five times the amount of such rent-charge."

Redemption
of tithe exceeding 20s.

Sect. 4. "Whenever any land has been charged with a rent-charge exceeding twenty shillings, the commissioners may, if they see fit, upon the joint application of the owner of the land and the person entitled to the rent-charge, order such rent-charge to be redeemed for a sum not being less than twenty-five times the amount thereof, provided that the bishop of the diocese and the patron of the benefice consent to such redemption, whenever the person entitled to the rent-charge is entitled thereto in right of any benefice or cure."

Redemption of tithe on divided lands.

Sect. 5. "Whenever lands charged with rent-charge under any instrument of apportionment or altered apportionment shall be divided for building or other purposes into numerous plots, and it shall appear to the commissioners that no further apportionment of the said rent-charge can conveniently be made, the commissioners may, if they shall see fit, upon the application of the owner or of the person for the time being entitled to the receipt of the said rent-charge, and without limitation as to the amount thereof, by an order under their hands and seal, direct that such rent-charge shall be redeemed by the payment by the owners of the lands chargeable therewith, within such time as the commissioners shall by such order direct and appoint, of a sum of money not less than twenty-five times the amount of such rent-charge."

Sect. 6. "All the powers and provisions of the said recited acts (u) respecting the redemption of rent-charge and the assessment and recovery of redemption money and expenses (except as otherwise by this Act is provided) shall be applicable to all redemptions authorised and effected under this act."

(3) By 9 & 10 Vict. c. 73, s. 3, "In every case in which, by any instrument of apportionment confirmed under the provisions of the said acts, any rent-charge or portion of rent-charge has been or shall have been (by reason of error as to boundary or otherwise), charged on lands not within the parish in respect of the tithes of which the aggregate rent-charge the apportionment of which shall have been so confirmed was agreed or awarded to be paid, such rent-charge or portion of rent-charge so charged on lands not within the parish shall be redeemable on payment by the owners of the lands charged with the residue of such aggregate rent-charge, or any of them, of a sum of money equal to twenty-four times the amount of the rent-charge or portion of rent-charge hereby made redeemable, and it shall be lawful for the commissioners, before they shall proceed to direct a new apportionment, to give notice that the rent-charge or portion of rent-charge so erroneously apportioned on lands not within the parish may be redeemed, under the provisions of this act, within a time in such notice to be limited in this behalf" (x).

Sect. 4. "When it shall appear to the commissioners that the consideration money for the redemption of the rent-charge or portion of rent-charge so charged by such instrument of apportionment on lands not within the parish shall have been paid, according to the provisions of this act, within the time which shall have been limited by the commissioners in this behalf, or within any enlarged time which the commissioners may by order under their hands and seal allow for that purpose, and that the arrears thereof (if any) have been paid, the commissioners shall under their hands and seal certify that such rent-charge or portion of rent-charge has been redeemed, and thenceforth, except as respects the lands so erroneously charged, and the rent-charge or portion of rent-charge apportioned thereon, the apportionment and charges made by such instrument of apportionment shall be valid and effectual in such and the same manner as if the aggregate rent-charge had originally consisted only of the sum of the portions charged on the lands within the parish, and had been apportioned on such lands and no others, in the portions in the instrument of apportionment expressed."

By 23 & 24 Vict. c. 93, s. 33, "Whenever it shall be shown to the satisfaction of the commissioners that by reason of error as to boundary or otherwise any rent-charge or portion of rent-charge shall have been charged by any confirmed instrument of apportionment on lands not within the parish in respect of the tithes of which the aggregate rent-charge, the apportionment of which shall have been so confirmed, was agreed or awarded to be paid, the commissioners may, if they shall see fit, upon the application of the owner or owners of the said lands, and without the consent of any owner of land in the said parish, or of the person for the time being entitled to the receipt of the said rent-charge, by an order under their hands and seal, direct that such rent-charge or portion of rent-charge so charged on lands not within the parish shall be redeemed by the payment by the owners of lands charged with the residue of the said rent-charge by the said apportionment, or any of them, within such time as the said commissioners shall by such order direct and appoint, of a sum equal to twenty-five times the amount of such rent-charge; and if there shall be any question touching the situation or boundary of the lands which shall be alleged to have been erroneously included in the said apportionment, the commissioners shall have the same powers for hearing and determining the same as are given by the said first-recited act for hearing and determining any difference whereby the making of an award of rent-charge in lieu of tithes is hindered."

Provision for charging rent-charge where land made chargeable for more than one parish.

41 & 42 Vict. c. 42.

Where land taken for certain public purposes rent-charge to be redeemed.

Sect. 34. "Where any land has been made chargeable with rent-charges in lieu of tithes for more than one parish, the commissioners, on being satisfied thereof, may determine in respect of which parish the rent-charge ought to have been charged, and may, by order, direct such rent-charge to be paid in respect of such parish only."

(4) By 41 & 42 Vict. c. 42, s. 1, "In all cases where land charged with rent-charge in lieu of tithes is taken for any of the following purposes, that is to say, the building of any church, chapel, or other place of public worship; the making of any cemetery or other place of burial; the erection of any school under the Elementary Education Act; the erection of any town hall, court of assize, gaol, lunatic asylum, hospital, or any other building used for public purposes, or in the carrying out of any improvements under the Artizans Dwellings Act, 1875; the formation of any sewage farm under the provisions of the Sanitary Acts, or the construction of any sewers, or sewage works, or any gas or water works; or the enlarging and improving of the premises or buildings occupied or used for any of the above-mentioned purposes;—the person or persons proposing to carry out the above-mentioned works, buildings, or improvements shall, as soon as the said person or persons are in possession of the land, and before the land is applied to any of the purposes aforesaid, apply to the Tithe Commissioners to order the redemption of the rent-charge for a sum of money equal to twenty-five times the amount thereof; and the redemption money, with the expenses incident to the redemption, shall be paid to the said commissioners within a time to be fixed by such order, or within any enlarged time the commissioners may appoint, and the commissioners shall apply such redemption money in the manner provided by the said acts."

Sect. 2. "The application to the said commissioners in respect of any such land may be signed by the secretary of any company which shall have taken the land, or in the case of a corporation, school or other board, by the clerk of the said board or corporation, and in every other case by such person or persons as the commissioners may require."

Application for redemption, how signed.

As to all cases, it is provided by the two earlier acts as follows:—

23 & 24 Vict. c. 93, s. 35. "Before the commissioners shall order the compulsory redemption of any rent-charge, they shall cause notice to be given of their intention in such manner as to them shall seem fit, and shall by such notice specify the time (being not less than twenty-one days) within which objections in writing to such proposed order may be signified to them; and in case any notice of objections shall be given within the time limited as aforesaid, the commissioners shall, by themselves or an assistant commissioner, take such objections into their consideration."

23 & 24 Vict. c. 93.

Commissioners shall give notice of their intention to order compulsory redemption.

Sect. 36. "If the person absolutely entitled to the redemption money refuses to receive the same, or if the rent-charge be subject to incumbrances, and the commissioners shall consider that the incumbrancers should be protected, such redemption money shall be dealt with as is provided in cases where the owner of the rent-charge is only entitled thereto for a limited estate."

If person refuse to receive redemption money, to be dealt with as if under disability.

Sect. 37. "Where the money to be paid for the redemption of any rent-charge does not exceed two hundred pounds, and the person for the time being entitled to such rent-charge shall be a corporation not authorized to make an absolute sale of such rent-charge otherwise than under the provisions of the said recited acts, the redemption money may be paid into the hands of trustees to be nominated by the commissioners, by order under their hands and seal, and the money when so paid shall be applied by the trustees, with the consent of the commissioners, to the purposes to which money to be paid for the redemption of any rent-charge into the Bank of England in the name of the accountant-general is by the said recited acts directed to be applied, and upon every vacancy in the office of such trustees some other person shall be appointed by the said commissioners in like manner."

Trustees may be appointed to receive sums not exceeding 200*l.* payable to corporations.

By 9 & 10 Vict. c. 73, s. 6, "In every case in which a rent-charge is redeemable under the provisions of this act, the commissioners shall, upon the request of the owners of land chargeable with such rent-charge or any of them, certify under the hands and seal of the commissioners the sum of money in consideration of which such rent-charge may be redeemed (y); and when it shall appear to the commissioners that payment or tender of such consideration money has been duly made, it shall be lawful for the commissioners to certify that such rent-charge has been redeemed under the provisions of this act, and such certificate shall be final and conclusive: Provided that if any consideration money shall be paid for the redemption of a rent-charge to a person not entitled under the provisions of this act to receive the same, the land which was charged with such rent-charge before the redemption thereof shall be charged in equity with the payment of such consideration money to the person rightfully entitled thereto as if the same were purchase-money for such land remaining unpaid; but the same remedies may be had against the person who shall have wrongfully received such money as purchasers are entitled to by the rules of law and equity."

Sections 7, 9, 10 provide for the payment of the consideration money to lay owners of the rent-charge; as to spiritual owners, it is enacted as follows by sect. 8, "The consideration money for the redemption under this act of any rent-charge agreed or awarded to be paid or payable under any apportionment to any spiritual person in respect of his benefice or cure shall be paid to the 'governors of Queen Anne's Bounty for the augmentation of the maintenance of the poor clergy;' and such consideration money shall be applied and disposed of by the said governors as money in their hands appropriated for the augmentation of such benefice or cure should by law and under the rules of the said governors be applied and disposed of."

Consideration money for redemption of rent-charges payable to spiritual owners, to be paid to Governors of Queen Anne's Bounty.

Power to persons entitled for limited interests to charge expenses of redemption.

By sect. 11, "Every owner of an estate in land less than an immediate estate in fee simple or fee tail, or which may be settled upon any uses or trusts may, with the consent of the commissioners, or in such manner as they shall direct, charge so much of the consideration money and other monies payable in respect of the redemption of a rent-charge, or any part thereof, with interest after the yearly rate of four pounds by the hundred upon the lands of such owner which would have been subject to such rent-charge, or to an apportioned part thereof, but so, nevertheless, that the charge upon such land shall be lessened in every year after the redemption of such rent-charge by one twentieth part at least of the whole original charge thereon."

23 & 24 Vict. c. 93.

How expenses to be divided.

By 23 & 24 Vict. c. 93, s. 39, the expenses of making new awards or apportionments or of collecting redemption money are to be raised by the commissioners from the tithe-owners and land-owners in the same manner as expenses of making original awards under the earlier acts.

Informal arrangements may be confirmed.

By sect. 40, "Whenever land or money payments, or both, have been given to the tithe-owners of any parish, and are now holden by them, instead of tithes or glebe or commonable or other rights or easements, and it shall appear that such land or money payments, or both, shall have been so given by virtue of any act of parliament the provisions of which have not been fully carried out, or by virtue of any arrangement which is not of legal validity, the commissioners may, if it shall appear just and expedient, having regard to all the circumstances of or incident to the case, by an award confirm the tithe-owner in possession of the said land or money, or both, and may confirm and render valid any such arrangement, and may also award a rent-charge, subject to the provisions of the said recited acts, when and in such cases as to them shall seem fit; and, subject to such confirmation and award, the commissioners may extinguish the right of the tithe-owners to the perception of the said tithes, or his title to the said glebe rights or easements, or to the receipt of any rent-charge instead thereof, other than the rent-charge, if any, awarded over and above the lands or money, or both, so confirmed to them."

The capitalized extraordinary charge created in lieu of hop grounds and fruit gardens by 49 & 50 Vict. c. 54, may be redeemed under sect. 5 of that act as already stated (z).

By 48 & 49 Vict. c. 32, corn rents and similar payments may be redeemed (a).

Redemption of extraordinary tithe charge; of corn rents, &c.

SECT. 13.—Merger of Rent-charge.

The first provision for merger of the rent-charge in the land is contained in 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71, s. 71, and is as follows:—

6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71.

"It shall be lawful for any person seised in possession of an estate in fee simple or fee tail of any tithes or rent-charge in lieu of tithes, by any deed or declaration under his hand and seal, to be made in such form as the said commissioners shall approve, and to be confirmed under their seal, to release, assign, or otherwise dispose of the same, so that the same may be absolutely merged and extinguished in the freehold and inheritance of the lands on which the same shall have been charged."

Tenant in fee simple or fee tail may declare rent-charge merged.

The charges and incumbrances on tithes (and therefore on rent-charges) being various and many, such as liability to the repairs of the chancel, to stipends of ministers and curates, and fee-farm rents, and sometimes to mortgages, annuities, &c., the commissioners for carrying the tithe commutation acts into execution refused to confirm the merger of tithes so incumbered into land, till the passing of 2 & 3 Vict. c. 62, which removed this obstacle by making any legal charge on the tithes the first charge on the land in which the tithes are merged, and by giving the same remedies against such lands, or the owners thereof, as existed previously to the merger against the tithes or the owners thereof. Section 1 of the last-mentioned act, after reciting the former statutes, enacts, that "In every case where any tithes or rent-charge shall have been or shall hereafter be released, assigned, or otherwise conveyed or disposed of under the provisions of the said acts, or any of them, or of this act, for merging or extinguishing the same, the lands in which such merger or extinguishment shall take effect shall be subject to any charge, incumbrance, or liability which lawfully existed on such tithes or rent-charge previous to such merger to the extent of the value of such tithes or rent-charge; and any such charge, incumbrance, or liability shall have priority over any charge or incumbrance existing on such lands at the time of such merger taking effect; and such lands, and the owners thereof for the time being, shall be liable to the same remedies for the recovery of any payment and the performance of any duty in respect of such charge, incumbrance, or liability, or of any penalty or damages for non-payment or non-performance thereof respectively, as the said tithes or rent-charge, or the owner thereof for the time being, were or was liable to previous to such merger."

Apportionment of charges when tithes merged, on lands being of three times the value of the charge.

The same act gives also a power (sect. 2) of apportioning the charges on tithes merged, and (sect. 4) of apportioning charges on tithes not merged:

Sect. 2. "Every person entitled to exercise the powers for merger of tithes or rent-charge in land under the said acts or any of them, or of this act, may, with the consent of the tithe commissioners for the time being under their hands and seal of office, and of the person to whom the lands in which such merger or extinguishment shall take effect shall belong, either by the deed or other instrument or declaration by which such merger shall be effected, or by any separate deed, instrument, or declaration to be made in such form as the commissioners shall approve, specially apportion the whole or any part of any such charge, incumbrance, or liability affecting the said tithes or rent-charge so merged or extinguished, or proposed to be merged or extinguished in such lands, upon the same or any part thereof, or upon any other lands of such person held under the same title, and for the same estate in the same parish, or upon the several closes or portions of such lands, or according to an acreable rate or rates upon lands of different quality, in such manner and proportion, and to the exclusion of such of them, as the person intending to merge the same, with such consent as aforesaid, may by any such deed, instrument, or declaration direct: Provided always, that no land shall be so exclusively charged unless the value thereof shall in the opinion of the said commissioners be at least three times the value of the amount of the charge, incumbrance, or liability charged or intended to be charged thereon, over and above all other charges and incumbrances, if any, affecting the same" (b).

Sect. 4. "Where the whole of the great tithes or the whole of the small tithes, or the respective rent-charges in lieu thereof, shall be lawfully subject to any such charge, incumbrance, or liability, and the person entitled to such tithes or rent-charge respectively shall be desirous of apportioning such charge, incumbrance, or liability respectively exclusively upon any part of such tithes or rent-charge, although such person has not the power or does not intend to merge the same under the said acts or this act, such person may, with the like consent of the said commissioners, and in such manner as they shall see fit and prescribe, and also with the consent of the bishop of the diocese, specially apportion such charge, incumbrance, or liability respectively upon any part or portion of the tithes or rent-charge respectively subject thereto, not being in the opinion of the said commissioners less than three times the value of the said charge, incumbrance, or liability, or of such part thereof as shall be so apportioned thereon, or intended so to be.”

where tithes not merged.

By sect. 71 of 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71, only tenants in fee or in tail were empowered to merge rent-charge; but this power was extended by 1 & 2 Vict. c. 64, and 2 & 3 Vict. c. 62, to all persons having powers of appointment over the fee simple of tithes or rent-charge, and to cases where tithes (or rent-charge in lieu of tithes), and the lands out of which they are payable, are both settled to the same uses (when anybody in possession of an estate for life in tithes may merge the rent-charge): and also to the owners of glebes in certain cases specified below.

c. 71.

Who may merge rent-
charge.

By 1 & 2 Vict. c. 64, s. 1, “It shall be lawful for any person or persons who shall, either alone or together, be seized of or have the power of acquiring or disposing of the fee simple in possession of any tithes or rent-charge in lieu of tithes, by any deed or declaration under his or their hand and seal or hands and seals, to be made in such form as the Tithe Commissioners for England and Wales shall approve, and to be confirmed under their seal, to convey, appoint, or otherwise dispose of the same, so that the same may be absolutely merged and extinguished in the freehold and inheritance of the lands out of or on which the same shall have been issuing or charged; and every such deed or declaration as aforesaid shall be valid and effectual for the purpose aforesaid, although the same may not be executed or made in the manner or with the formalities or requisites which if this act had not been passed would have been essential to the validity of any instrument by which such person or persons could have acquired or disposed of the fee simple in possession of such tithes, or rent-charge in lieu of tithes” (c).

Sect. 3. “In all cases where tithes, or rent-charge in lieu of tithes, and the lands out of which the same are payable, are both settled to the same uses, it shall be lawful for any person in possession of an estate for life in both such lands and tithes, same uses, the tenant for life may cause them to merge in the land.

Tithes may be merged in copyhold lands.

2 & 3 Vict. c. 62.

Provision for deducting value of tithes and rent-charge from arbitrary fines in cases of merger in copyholds.

Tithe and rent-charge of glebe may be merged.

Tithes or

Sect. 4. "And whereas doubts have been entertained whether, according to the true construction of the said act, any tithes, or rent-charge in lieu of tithe, can be merged in lands of copyhold tenure, and it is expedient that such doubts should be removed; be it therefore declared and enacted, that the provisions in the said act and this act contained as to the merger of any tithe, or rent-charge in lieu of tithe, shall be deemed and taken to extend to all lands, being copyhold of inheritance or copyhold for lives, or of any other tenure whatsoever."

By 2 & 3 Vict. c. 62, s. 7, "In every case of merger of tithes or rent-charge issuing out of land of copyhold tenure, and subject to arbitrary fine, it shall be lawful for the said commissioners, on the application of the owner of such land, to ascertain, by such ways and means as they shall think fit, the annual value of the tithes or rent-charge so merged or intended to be merged; and the said commissioners shall in such case cause to be indorsed on the deed, declaration, or other instrument effecting such merger, a certificate under their hands and seal, setting forth such annual value so ascertained; and in every case of future assessment of fine on the lands which before such merger were subject to such tithes or rent-charge, the parties entitled to such fine shall assess the same as if such lands were subject to the tithes or rent-charge of which the annual value shall be so endorsed; and the production of such deed, declaration, or instrument of merger, or of a duplicate thereof, with such certificate endorsed, or of an office copy of such deed, declaration, or instrument and certificate endorsed thereon, shall be sufficient evidence of the annual value of such tithes or rent-charge."

This act also allows the tithes and rent-charge of glebe lands to be merged:—

Sect. 6. "The provisions of the said acts and this act for merger or extinguishment of tithes or rent-charge instead of tithes in the lands out of which such tithes shall have been issuing, or whereon such rent-charge shall be fixed, do and shall extend to glebe or other land, in all cases where the same and the tithes or rent-charge thereof shall belong to the same person in virtue of his benefice, or of any dignity, office, or appointment held by him."

Further provisions on this subject are made by the following sections of 9 & 10 Vict. c. 73:—

Sect. 18. "Where by any agreement or award already made or hereafter to be made a rent-charge shall have been agreed or awarded to be paid instead of the tithes of any parish, or instead of any of such tithes, and shall not have been apportioned, it shall be lawful for the person who under the provisions of the said recited acts would have been enabled in case such agreement or award had not been made to merge the tithes in lieu of which such rent-charge shall have been agreed or awarded to be paid, or such of the same tithes as were payable out of part of the said lands, by any deed or declaration, to be made in such form as the commissioners shall approve, and to be confirmed under their hands and seal, to declare that the tithes which he would have been so entitled to merge shall, so far as respects all the lands, or, if he shall think fit, so far as respects only any specified part of the lands out of which the same were payable, and the rent-charge or portion of rent-charge which shall have been awarded or ought to be apportioned in lieu thereof on such lands, or specified parts of such lands, as the case may be, shall be merged, and such merger shall take effect accordingly; and in case such merger shall extend to all the lands which would have been chargeable with such rent-charge, no apportionment of such rent-charge shall be made under the provisions of the said recited acts; but in case such merger shall extend to part only of the lands which would have been chargeable with such rent-charge, then such portion of the rent-charge shall be apportioned among the other lands which would have been chargeable with such rent-charge as such other lands would have been subject to in case such merger had not taken place; and the owner of the land to which such merger shall extend shall pay such portion of the expenses of or incident to the apportionment as the commissioners or any assistant commissioner may under the special circumstances order to be paid by such owner, instead of the rateable proportions to which he would have been liable in case the whole of such rent-charge had been apportioned."

Sect. 19. "All the powers relating to the merger and extinguishment of any tithes, or rent-charge instead thereof, may be executed by a person entitled in equity to such tithes or rent-charge in all respects and with the same consequence as he could have done if he had been legally entitled thereunto; and every instrument already executed and purporting to be made in pursuance of the powers of the said acts or any of them by any person so entitled in equity shall in every respect be as effectual and have the same consequence as if he had been legally entitled to the said tithes or rent-charge at the time of the execution of such instrument, subject nevertheless in every case to any charge, incumbrance, or liability, which lawfully or equitably existed on such tithes or rent-charge to the extent of the value of such tithes or rent-charge; and any such charge, incumbrance, or liability shall have such priority, and the lands and the owners thereof for the time being shall be liable in the same manner in respect of such rent-charge, incumbrance, or liability, or of any penalty or damages for non-payment or non-performance thereof respectively, as by the said act of "2 & 3 Vict. c. 62 "is provided in the case of such merger or extinguishment as therein mentioned. . . ."

*Walker v.
Bentley.*

In the case of Walker v. Bentley (d), it was holden by the Vice-Chancellor and confirmed by the Lords Justices that under this last section an instrument purporting to merge the tithes executed with the consent of the commissioners is conclusive, though the person executing the instrument had actually no estate in the tithes or rent-charge.

SECT. 14.—Former Mode of recovering Rent-charge.

The powers given for the recovery of the rent-charge by 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71, were in force until the Tithe Act, 1891. Under this last Act a new procedure was established, which where it prevails supersedes the old. It seems also to prevail in all cases, except where a rent-charge is claimed under the Tithe Act, 1860, in respect of the tithes on any gated or stinted pasture. The old mode is, however, briefly set out as applying at any rate to this excepted case:

6 & 7 Will. 4,
c. 71.

When rent-charge in arrear for twenty-one days, after half-yearly days of payment, the person entitled thereto may distrain.

6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71, s. 81. "In case the said rent-charge shall at any time be in arrear and unpaid for the space of twenty-one days next after any half-yearly day of payment, it shall be lawful for the person entitled to the same, after having given or left ten days' notice in writing at the usual or last known residence of the tenant in possession, to distrain upon the lands liable to the payment thereof, or on any part thereof, for all arrears of the said rent-charge, and to dispose of the distress when taken, and otherwise to act and demean himself in relation thereto, as any landlord may for arrears of rent reserved on a common lease for years; provided that not more than two years' arrears shall at any time be recoverable by distress."

When rent-charge in arrear for forty days after half-yearly days of payment, and no sufficient distress on the premises, writ to be issued, directing sheriff to summon jury to assess arrears.

Sect. 82. "In case the said rent-charge shall be in arrear and unpaid for the space of forty days next after any half-yearly day of payment, and there shall be no sufficient distress on the premises liable to the payment thereof, it shall be lawful for any judge of his majesty's courts of record at Westminster, upon affidavit of the facts, to order a writ to be issued, directed to the sheriff of the county in which the lands chargeable with the rent-charge are situated, requiring the said sheriff to summon a jury to assess the arrears of rent-charge remaining unpaid, and to return the inquisition thereupon taken to some one of his majesty's courts of law at Westminster, on a day therein to be named, either in term time or vacation: a copy of which writ, and notice of the time and place of executing the same, shall be given to the owner of the land, or left at his last known place of abode, or with his known agent, ten days previous to the execution thereof, and the sheriff is hereby required to execute such writ according to the exigency thereof; and the costs of such inquisition shall be taxed by the proper officer of the court; and thereupon the owner of the rent-charge may sue out a writ of habere facias possessionem, directed to the sheriff, commanding him to cause the owner of the rent-charge to have possession of the lands chargeable therewith until the arrears of rent-charge found to be due, and the said costs, and also the costs of such writ and of executing the same, and of cultivating and keeping possession of the lands, shall be fully satisfied: provided always, that not more than two years' arrears over and above the time of such possession shall be at any time recoverable."

Under this section crops growing into profit are to be taken into consideration in estimating the sufficient distress (e). The judge's order under this section may be obtained ex parte (f). Possession of the land, and recovery of the full two years' arrears, may be obtained, if there is no sufficient distress at the end of the two years, though at the end of the three half-years previous there might have been sufficient distress, if it had been taken, for the arrears then due (g).

Cases on this section.

It has been holden that the injury sustained by a tithe-owner, in consequence of land being rendered incapable of producing tithe, is not such a wrongful act in law as will entitle a tithe-owner to maintain an action for damages (h).

No action for damages for non-cultivation.

Sect. 83. "It shall be lawful for the court out of which such writ shall have issued, or any judge at chambers, to order the owner of the rent-charge who shall be in possession by virtue of such writ from time to time to render an account of the rents and produce of the lands, and of the receipts and payments in respect of the same, and to pay over the surplus (if any) to the person for the time being entitled thereunto, after satisfaction of such arrears of rent-charge and all costs and expenses as aforesaid, and thereupon to order a writ of supersedeas to issue to the said writ of habere facias possessionem, and also by rule or order of such court or judge from time to time to give such summary relief to the parties as to the said court or judge shall seem fit."

No action for rent-charge against landowner or occupier.

Power to owner of rent-charge to let land taken under writ of possession.

Remedy for enforcing payment of contribution of rent-charge.

No action for the rent-charge lies against the owner or occupier of the lands (i).

The following supplemental provisions are made by 5 & 6 Vict. c. 54:—

Sect. 12. "It shall be lawful for any owner of rent-charge having taken possession of any land for nonpayment of the rent-charge under the provisions of 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71, from time to time during the continuance of such possession to let such land, or any part thereof, for any period not exceeding one year in possession, at such rent as can be reasonably obtained for the same; and the restitution of such land, on payment or satisfaction of the rent-charge, costs, and expenses, shall be subject and without prejudice to any such tenancy."

Sect. 16. "In case any land charged with one amount of rent-charge shall belong to two or more land-owners in several portions, and the owner of any such portions, or his tenant, shall have paid the whole of such rent-charge, or any portion thereof greater than shall appear to him to be his just proportion, and contribution thereto shall have been refused or neglected to be made by any other of the said land-owners, or his tenants, after a demand in writing made on them, or either of them, for that purpose, it shall be lawful for any justice of the peace acting for the county or other jurisdiction in which the land is situated, upon the complaint of any such land-owner, or his tenant or agent, to summon the owner so refusing or neglecting to make contribution, or his tenant, to appear before any two or more such justices of the peace, who, upon proof of the demand and of service of the summons, as hereinafter provided, whether or not the party summoned shall appear, shall examine into the merits of the complaint, and determine the just proportion of the rent-charge so paid as aforesaid which ought to be contributed by the land-owner of such other portion of the said land, and by order under their hands and seals (k) shall direct the payment by him of what shall in their judgment be due and payable in respect of such liability to contribution, with the reasonable costs and charges of such proceedings, to be ascertained by such justices; and thereupon it shall be lawful for the complainant to take the like proceedings for enforcing payment of the said amount of contribution and costs, and with the like restriction as to the arrears recoverable, as are given to the owner of the rent-charge by the said first-mentioned act or this act for enforcing payment of the rent-charge."

Sect. 17. "Service of the said demand in writing, and summons, or of any notice to distrain, or copy of writ to assess the arrears of rent-charge, or notice of the execution thereof under the said first-recited act, or the several acts to amend the same, or this act, upon any person occupying or residing on the land chargeable with the rent-charge, or in case no person shall be found thereon, then affixing the same in some conspicuous place on the land, shall be deemed good service of any such summons, notice, writ, or other proceeding."

23 & 24 Vict.

By sect. 29 the tithe-owner who issues a notice may charge and recover as if it were rent-charge two shillings and sixpence for every notice.

By 5 & 6 Vict. c. 54, s. 19, any irregularity or unlawful act in the course of the distress shall not vitiate proceedings, "but the party aggrieved by such unlawful act or irregularity may recover full satisfaction for the special damage." But the plaintiff shall not recover "for any such unlawful act or irregularity, if ten days' notice in writing shall not have been given to the defendant by the plaintiff of his intention to bring such action before the commencement thereof, or if tender of sufficient amends has been made by the party distraining, or his agent, before such action brought, or if after action brought a sufficient sum of money shall have been paid into court, with costs, by or on behalf of the defendant."

A special provision is made for recovering rent-charges from railway companies by 7 & 8 Vict. c. 85, s. 22. to the said rent-charge or parts of such rent-charge, in case the same has been or shall be in arrear and unpaid for the space of twenty-one days next after any half-yearly day fixed for the payment thereof, to distrain for all arrears of the said rent-charge upon the goods, chattels and effects of the said company, whether on land charged therewith, or any other lands, premises or hereditaments of such company, whether situated in the same parish or elsewhere, and to dispose of the distress when taken, and otherwise to demean himself in relation thereto as any landlord may for arrears of rent reserved on a lease for years: provided always, that nothing herein contained shall give or be construed to give a legal right to such rent-charge, when but for this act such rent-charge was not or could not be duly apportioned."

14 & 15 Vict.
c. 25.

Tenant quitting, leaving tithe rent-charge unpaid, landlord may pay same, and recover from him.

And, as to the relations between landlords and tenants, it is provided as follows by 14 & 15 Vict. c. 25, s. 4:

"If any occupying tenant of land shall quit leaving unpaid any tithe rent-charge for or charged upon such land which he was by the terms of his tenancy or holding legally or equitably liable to pay, and the tithe-owner shall give or have given notice of proceeding by distress upon the land for recovery thereof, it shall be lawful for the landlord, or the succeeding tenant or occupier, to pay such tithe rent-charge, and any expenses incident thereto, and to recover the amount or sum of money which he may so pay over against such first-named tenant or occupier, or his legal representatives, in the same manner as if the same were a debt by simple contract due from such first-named tenant or occupier to the landlord or tenant making such payment."

SECT. 15.—Recovery under the Tithe Act, 1891.

Gradual shifting of incidence of tithe and rent-charge.

Tithe was recoverable from the actual occupier in respect of the fruits of the soil or the increase of his stock, received by him; and its recovery was enforced by personal suit against him; and tithe rent-charge under the Commutation Acts was made a charge upon the soil, enforceable in the first place by distress upon the land, or, in the event of failure of distress, by the tithe-owner himself entering into possession of the land. Thus tithe rent-charge was intended to be, in the last resort, a burthen upon the landlord, as in fact it was. In the first instance the tenant would suffer from the proceedings to enforce its recovery; and by arrangement between the landlord and the tenant an agreement might be and commonly was made that the tenant should pay the tithe to the tithe-owner. No one, however, was personally liable to the tithe-owner; only the property could be proceeded against. The Tithe Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 8), has made the claim for tithe rent-charge a personal claim against the land-owner; has put the occupier altogether out of question, and has, at the same time, made execution of the judgment not 54 & 55 Vict.

c. 8.

personal, but against the property, and has given the land-owner some relief.

The provisions of the Act of 1891 are as follows :—

By sect. 9 the word “owner” refers, in the case of lands belonging to the Crown, to the Commissioners of Woods; in case of lands belonging to the Duchy of Cornwall, to the keeper of records of the Duchy. Otherwise it is to have the same meaning as in the Tithe Act, 1836 (6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71).

Sect. 1.—“(1.) Tithe rent-charge as defined by this act issuing out of any lands shall be payable by the owner of the lands, notwithstanding any contract between him and the occupier of such lands, and any contract made between an occupier and owner of lands, after the passing of this act, for the payment of the tithe rent-charge by the occupier shall be void.

Liability of owner to pay tithe rent-charge, and modification of contracts with tenants.

“(2.) Where the occupier is liable under any contract made before the passing of this act to pay the tithe rent-charge, then he shall cease to be bound by that part of his contract, but he shall be liable to pay to the owner such sum as the owner has properly paid on account of the tithe rent-charge which such occupier is liable under his said contract to pay, exclusive of any costs incurred or paid by the owner in respect of such tithe rent-charge, and every receipt given for such sum shall state expressly that the sum is paid in respect of that tithe rent-charge: Provided that where the lands, out of which any tithe rent-charge issues, are occupied by several occupiers who have contracted to pay the tithe rent-charge, any of such occupiers shall be liable only to pay such proportion of the sum paid by the owner of the lands on account of that tithe rent-charge as the rateable value of the lands occupied by him bears to the rateable value of the whole of the lands occupied by such occupiers.

Sect. 2. “(1.) Where any sum due on account of tithe rent-charge issuing out of any lands is in arrear for not less than three months, the person entitled to such sum may, whatever is the amount, apply to the county court of the district in which the lands or any part thereof are situate, and the county court, after such service on the owner of the lands as may be prescribed, and after hearing such owner if he appears and desires to be heard, may order that the said sum, or such part thereof as appears to the court to be due, be, together with the costs, recovered in manner provided by this act, and tithe rent-charge as defined by this act shall not be recovered in any other manner.

Recovery of tithe rent-charge through county court.

“(2.) Where it is shown to the court that the lands are occupied by the owner thereof, the order shall be executed by the appointment by the court of an officer who, subject to the direction of the court, shall have the like powers of distraint for the recovery of the sum ordered to be paid as are conferred by the Tithe Acts on the owner of a tithe rent-charge for the recovery of arrears of tithe rent-charge, and no greater or other powers; and if there is no sufficient distress the person entitled to the sum ordered to be recovered may proceed to obtain possession of the lands under section 82 of the Tithe Act, 1836 (k).

“(3.) In any other case the order shall be executed by the appointment by the court of a receiver of the rents and profits of the lands, and of any other lands which would be liable to be distrained upon for the tithe rent-charge to which the order refers under the provisions of section 85 of the Tithe Act, 1836 (l), and where any of such lands are held at one rent together with other lands in another parish, the court shall apportion the rent between the said lands and the lands in the other parish in proportion to their rateable value, in which case the payment of such apportioned rent by the occupier to the receiver shall in every respect, as between the occupier and the owner of the lands, be deemed to be a payment on account of the total rent payable to the owner of such lands.

“(4.) Subject to the prescribed regulations, the county court shall have the same powers over receivers as in any other case, and may confer on the person appointed receiver any powers which the court can confer upon persons appointed receivers, but the court shall not have power to order the sale of the lands.

“(5.) Any sum ordered by the court under this section to be recovered shall be payable by a trustee in bankruptcy, sheriff, or officer of a court who is in possession of the lands, in like manner as if it were tithe rent-charge recoverable under the Tithe Acts.

“(6.) Where the occupier of the lands out of which the tithe rent-charge issues is liable under any contract made before the passing of this act to pay the tithe rent-charge, and is consequently liable by virtue of this act to pay the amount thereof to the owner of the lands, the owner of the lands shall serve notice of such liability on the owner of the tithe rent-charge, and thereupon, before an order under this section is made, there shall be such service on the occupier in addition to the owner as may be prescribed, and a hearing of such occupier if he appears and desires to be heard. Any owner of the lands who fails to serve such notice as aforesaid on the owner of the tithe rent-charge, shall not be entitled to recover from the occupier any sum which he has paid on account of tithe rent-charge as aforesaid, unless and until he has, after notice to the occupier of his application for the same, obtained from the county court a certificate that there was good and sufficient cause for the failure to give such notice, and that the occupier has not been prejudiced thereby.

“(7.) Rules under this act may regulate the procedure practice and costs under this act in county courts, and may direct what service shall be good service for the purposes of this act on the owner or occupier of any lands or the owner of any tithe rentcharge, and may provide that, if the owner of any lands is not known, any proceeding under this act may be taken against the owner of the lands without naming the person who is the owner.

“(8.) The fees payable on the proceedings under this section shall not exceed those set forth in the schedule to this act (n), and the fees, charges, and expenses in or incidental to any distress under this act shall be the same as are for the time being payable under the Law of Distress Amendment Act, 1888 (n).

“(9.) Nothing in this act shall impose or constitute any personal liability upon any occupier or owner of lands for the payment of any tithe rentcharge, or any other sum recoverable or payable under this act, and the court shall not, by virtue of this act, or of the County Courts Act, 1888 (o), have any power to imprison any such occupier or owner by reason only of the non-payment of such tithe rentcharge or other sum, and shall in any other case have no other or greater powers of fine or imprisonment than are conferred by the County Courts Act, 1888” (o).

Sect. 3.—“(1.) The Lord Chancellor may, after consultation Rules. with the Rule Committee of County Court Judges, make rules for carrying this act into effect, and for regulating, providing, and prescribing any matter authorised by this act to be regulated, provided, or prescribed by rules under this act. In framing such rules regard shall be had to making the procedure as simple and inexpensive as practicable.

“(2.) Every rule under this act shall be laid before each House of Parliament within forty days next after it is made, if Parliament is then sitting, or, if not, within forty days after the commencement of the then next ensuing session, and if an address is presented to Her Majesty by either House of Parliament within the next subsequent forty days on which the said House shall have sat, praying that any such rule may be free, &c.

Sect. 4. "Where a receiver appointed under this act of the rents and profits of any lands satisfies the county court that the lands are let on such terms as not to reserve a rent sufficient to enable the receiver to recover from the owner thereof the sum ordered to be recovered, the court, after such service on the owner and occupier of the lands as may be prescribed, and after hearing such owner and occupier if they appear and desire to be heard, may direct that the order for such recovery shall be executed as if the occupier were the owner of the lands: Provided that any such occupier shall be entitled in addition to any other remedy, unless he would have been liable to pay the tithe rentcharge under any contract made before the passing of this act, to deduct from any sums at any time becoming due from him to the landlord under whom he holds, any amount which shall have been recovered from him under this section in respect of tithe rentcharge or costs, with interest thereon at the rate of four per centum per annum: Provided further, that such occupier shall be entitled, notwithstanding anything in this act, to recover from such landlord by action at law any such amount which shall have been recovered from him under this section as aforesaid as money paid on the account of such landlord."

Appearance
by agents.

Sect. 5.—“(1.) An application to a county court for an order under this act may be made on behalf of the tithe owner by his agent, although not a solicitor.

Restrictions
as to costs.

“(2.) On any application to a county court for an order under this act, no costs either of a solicitor or of a witness shall be allowed in any case where the amount claimed is paid without further proceedings, nor where notice of intention to apply for time to pay the tithe-owner's claim has been given (except in cases where costs could be allowed by the court on a judgment summons), and when notice of opposition has been given within the prescribed time, the costs of a solicitor shall only be allowed for work done subsequent to the notice.”

Rates due

owner.
Power of appeal.

Sect. 6 provides for the rating of the owner of the tithe rent-charge and recovery of the rate assessed (m).

By sect. 7, “If any party in any action or matter under this act shall be dissatisfied with the determination or direction of the judge of the county court in point of law or equity, or upon the admission or rejection of any evidence, the party aggrieved by the judgment, direction, decision, or order of the judge may appeal from the same to the High Court of Justice” in the same way as he could in any other county court case.

Sect. 8 gives relief to the tithe-payer where the tithe rent-charge as claimed bears an excessive proportion to the whole annual value of the land, the maximum proportion being fixed at two-thirds. Its provisions are as follows :—

“(1.) Where a sum is claimed on account of tithe rent-charge issuing out of any lands, and the county court is satisfied that, if the sum claimed is paid, the total amount paid on account of the tithe rent-charge for the period of twelve months next preceding the day on which the sum claimed became payable, will exceed two-thirds of the annual value of the lands as ascertained and entered in the assessment for the purpose of Schedule B. to the Income Tax Act, 1853 (n), or as certified as hereinafter mentioned, the court shall order the remission of so much, whether the whole or part of the sum claimed, as is equal to the excess, and the amount so ordered to be remitted shall not be recoverable; and if the court is satisfied that neither such remission, nor the liability thereto, has been taken into account in estimating the rateable value of the tithe rent-charge, the court may remit such amount of any then current rate assessed on the owner of the tithe rent-charge as appears to the court to be proportionate to the amount of the remission of tithe rent-charge.

Remission of tithe rent-charge when exceeding two-thirds annual value of land.

“(2.) Where the lands out of which any tithe rent-charge issues are assessed for the purposes of the said Schedule B. together with other lands, the surveyor of taxes for the parish in which the lands are so assessed, on the application of the owner or occupier of the lands, shall divide the annual value in such assessment between the lands out of which any tithe rent-charge issues and the other lands, and give notice of the annual value of the lands as determined on such division to the applicant and to the owner of the tithe rent-charge; and if either of them is dissatisfied with the annual value so determined, he may appeal to the general commissioners of income tax for the division in which the lands are assessed, and those commissioners, after due notice to and hearing the parties or their agents, if any of them wishes to be so heard, shall finally determine the proper division of the annual value; and the annual value of lands so determined as aforesaid shall, for the purposes of this section, be the annual value of the lands as ascertained for the purpose of the said Schedule B.

“(3.) For the purposes of this section the owner of tithe rent-charge shall have the same right of appeal as the owner of lands, whether under the enactments relating to the said assessment or under this section.

Appeal in such cases.

“(4.) If in any case the annual value of any lands is not ascertained and entered in the assessment for the purpose of the said Schedule B., the general commissioners of income tax for the division in which the lands are situate shall, on the application of the owner or occupier of the lands, ascertain the annual value of the lands for the purpose of the said Schedule B., and inform the applicant of the same.

Ascertainment of value of land by income tax commissioners.

Certificate of annual value.

“(5.) The commissioners of taxes shall on demand and payment of one shilling give a certificate of the amount of the annual value of any lands under this section.

Remission in certain cases of special
charge.

“(6.) Where it appears from any award that a special apportionment has been made in pursuance of section fifty-eight of the Tithe Act, 1836 (k), whereby tithe rentcharge has been charged specially upon certain closes of land in different proportions, and to the exclusion of certain of them, the court shall not grant a remission under this section unless satisfied that the applicant would have been entitled to such remission if no such special apportionment had been made.

“(7.) Where two or more tithe rentcharges issue out of the same lands, and a remission of tithe rentcharge has been made by a county court under this section, the amount paid by the owner of the lands on account of tithe rentcharge shall be divided between the owners of such tithe rentcharges in proportion to the amount thereof as fixed by the apportionment or any altered apportionment.

“(8.) This section shall not apply to any lands other than those used solely for agricultural or pastoral purposes or for the growth of timber or underwood.”

Definition
clause.

By sect. 9, “the expression ‘tithe rentcharge’ means tithe rentcharge issuing out of lands and payable in pursuance of the Tithe Acts, and includes any rentcharge into which a corn rent has, either before or after the passing of this act, been converted under the Tithe Act, 1860 (l), and which is subject to the like incidents as such tithe rentcharge as aforesaid; but does not include a rentcharge payable under the Extraordinary Tithe Redemption Act, 1886 (m), nor a rentcharge payable under the Tithe Act, 1860 (n), in respect of the tithes on any gated or stinted pasture, nor a sum or rate payable for each head of cattle or stock turned on land subject to common rights or held or enjoyed in common.”

Sect. 10.—“(1.) This act shall extend to every sum on account of tithe rentcharge which first becomes payable on or after the half-yearly day of payment of such tithe rentcharge which occurs next after the passing of this act, whether such sum accrued before or after that day, and shall not extend to sums due on account of tithe rentcharge which were in arrear before the passing of this act, nor, except so far as relates to the assessment and recovery of rates, shall it extend to tithe rentcharge issuing out of the lands of a railway company (o).

“(2.) A sum on account of tithe rentcharge shall not be recoverable under this act unless proceedings for such recovery have been commenced before the expiration of two years from the date at which it became payable.

“(4.) Any enactment in the Tithe Acts or in the Extraordinary Tithe Redemption Act, 1886 (p), directing any expenses, rentcharge, or other sums to be recovered as tithe rentcharge, shall, as respects any sum becoming due after the passing of this act, be construed to refer to the recovery of tithe rentcharge under this act, save that the owner of the lands shall not be entitled to obtain any remission under this act” (q).

SECT. 16.—Tithes in City of London.

The city of London has been excepted from the several tithe acts, and always had its own peculiar order for payment of tithes and offerings, which has grown up as follows :—

Excepted from general statutes.

It appeared by the records of the city of London, that Niger, bishop of London, in the 13 Hen. 3, made a constitution, in confirmation of an ancient custom formerly used time out of mind, that provision should be made for the ministers of London in this manner, that is to say, that he who paid the rent of 20*s.* for his house wherein he dwelt, should offer every Sunday, and every Apostle's day whereof the evening was fasted, one halfpenny; and he that paid but 10*s.* rent yearly, should offer but one farthing; all which amounted to the proportion of 2*s.* 6*d.* in the pound, for there were fifty-two Sundays, and eight Apostles' days the vigils of which were fasted; and if it chanced that one of the Apostles' days fell upon a Sunday, then there was but one halfpenny or farthing paid.

Constitution of Bishop Niger.

This payment of 2*s.* 6*d.* in the pound continuing until in the 13 Ric. 2, Arundel, Archbishop of Canterbury, made an explanation of Niger's constitution, whereby the offerings amounted to the sum of 3*s.* 5*d.* in the pound, and for a time the payment seems to have been most usually made according to this rate, for Lindwood shows, that the citizens of London, by an ancient ordinance observed in the said city, are bound, every Lord's-day, and every principal feast-day either of the Apostles or others whose vigils are fasted, to pay one farthing for every 10*s.* rent that they paid for their houses wherein they dwelt.

Constitution of Archbishop Arundel.

However, ten years after an order for the payment of tithes according to the rate of 2*s.* 9*d.* in the pound had been established by the 27 Hen. 8, c. 21 (r), another law and order was made, as follows, by the 37 Hen. 8, c. 12: “Where of late time, contention, strife and variance hath risen and grown within the city of London and the liberties of the same, between the parsons, vicars, and curates of the said city, and the citizens and inhabitants of the same, for and concerning the payment of tithes, oblations, and other duties within the said city and liberties; for appeasing whereof, a certain order and decree was made thereof, by the most reverend father in God Thomas Archbishop of Canterbury, Thomas Audley, Knight, Lord Audley of Walden, and then Lord Chancellor of England, now deceased, and other of the king's most honourable privy council; and also the king's letters patents and proclamation was made thereof, and directed to the said citizens concerning the same; whereupon it was after enacted in the parliament holden at Westminster by prorogation, the fourth day of February, in the twenty-seventh year of the King's Majesty's most noble reign, that the citizens and inhabitants of the same city should, at Easter then next following, pay unto the curates of the said city and suburbs, all such and like sums of money, for tithes, oblations, and other duties, as the said citizens and inhabitants by the order of the said late lord chancellor, and other the king's most honourable council, and the king's said proclamation, paid or ought to have paid by force and virtue of the said order at Easter, which was in the year . . . 1535; and the same payments so to continue from time to time, until such time as any other order or law should be made, published, ratified, and confirmed by the King's highness and the two and thirty persons by his grace to be named, as well for the full establishment concerning the payment of all tithes, oblations, and other duties of the inhabitants within the said city, suburbs, and liberties of the same, as for the making of other ecclesiastical laws of this realm of England; and that every person denying to pay as is aforesaid should, by the commandment of the mayor of London for the time being, be committed to prison, there to remain until such time as he should have agreed with the curate for the said tithes, oblations, and other duties as is aforesaid, as in the said act more plainly appeareth; since which act, divers variances, contentions and strifes are newly arisen, and grown between the said parsons, vicars, and curates, and the said citizens and inhabitants, touching the payment of the tithes, oblations, and other duties, by reason of certain words and terms specified in the said order, which are not so plainly and fully set forth as is thought convenient and meet to be; for appeasing whereof, as well the said parsons, vicars, and curates, as the said citizens and inhabitants, have compromised and put themselves to stand to such order and decree touching the premises as shall be made by the said right reverend father in God, Thomas, Archbishop of Canterbury" and the several other persons stated in the statute, "for a final end and conclusion to be had and made touching the premises for ever: And to the intent to have a full peace and perfect end between the said parties, their heirs and successors, touching the said tithes, oblations, and other duties for ever, it is enacted . . . That such end, order, and direction as shall be made, decreed, and concluded by the forenamed archbishop, lords, and knights, or any six of them, before the first day of March next ensuing, of, for and concerning the payment of tithes, oblations, and other duties within the said city and the liberties of the same, and inrolled of record in the King's high court of chancery, shall stand, remain, and be as an act of parliament, and shall bind as well all citizens and inhabitants of the said city and liberties for the time being, as the said parsons, vicars, curates, and their successors for ever, according to the effect, purport, and intent of the said order and decree so to be made and inrolled; and that every person denying to pay any of his tithes, oblations, or other duties, contrary to the said decree so to be made, shall by the commandment of the mayor of London for the time being, and in his default or negligence by the lord chancellor of England for the time being, be committed to prison there to remain till such time as he hath agreed with the curate or curates for his or their said tithes, oblations, and other duties as is aforesaid."

Which decree made in pursuance hereof is as follows (s); Decree. viz. :—

1. "As touching the payment of tithes in the city of London, and the liberties of the same: It is fully ordered and decreed by the most reverend father in God Thomas Archbishop of Canterbury, primate and metropolitan of England, Thomas Lord Wrythesly, lord chancellor of England, William Lord St. John, president of the King's majesty's council and lord great master of his Highness's household, John Lord Russell, lord privy seal, Edward Earl of Hertford, lord great chamberlain of England, John Vicount Lisle, high admiral of England, Richard Lister, knight, chief justice of England, and Roger Cholmely, knight, chief baron of his grace's exchequer, this present twenty-fourth day of February, "in the year of our Lord 1545," according to the statute in such case lately provided, that the citizens and inhabitants of the said city and liberties thereof for the time being, shall yearly, without fraud or covin, for ever pay their tithes to the parsons, vicars, and curates of the said city, and their successors for the time being, after the rate hereafter following; that is to wit: Of every 10s. rent by the year of all and every house and houses, shops, ware-houses, cellars, stables, and every of them, within the said city and liberty thereof, 16½d.; and of every 20s. rent by the year of all and every such house and houses, shops, ware-houses, cellars, stables, and every of them within the said city and liberty of the same, 2s. 9d. And so above the rent of 20s. by the year, ascending from 10s. to 10s., according to the rate aforesaid.

2. "Item, that where any lease is or shall be made of any dwelling house or houses, shops, ware-houses, cellars, or stables or any of them, by fraud or covin, reserving less rent than hath been accustomed or is ; or that any such lease shall be made without any rent reserved upon the same, by reason of any fine or income paid beforehand, or by any other fraud or covin ; that then in every such case, the tenant or farmer, tenants or farmers, shall pay for his or their tithes of the same after the rate aforesaid, according to the quality of such rents as the same house or houses," &c. "were last letten for without fraud or covin before the making of such lease."

3. "Item, that every owner or owners, or inheritor or inheritors of any dwelling-house, or houses, shops, ware-houses, cellars, or stables, inhabiting or occupying the same himself or themselves shall pay after such rate, or tithes as is abovesaid after the quantity of such yearly rent as the same was last letten for, without fraud or covin.

4. "Item, if any person hath taken, or hereafter shall take, any mease or mansion place by lease, and the taker or takers thereof, his or their executors or assigns, doth or shall inhabit in any part thereof, and have or hath within eight years last past before this order, or hereafter shall let out the residue of the same ; that then in such case, the principal farmer or farmers, or first taker or takers thereof, his or their executors or assigns, shall pay his or their tithes after the rate abovesaid, according to his or their quantity therein and that his or their executors, assignee, or assigns shall pay his or their tithes after the rate aforesaid according to the quantity of their rent by year.

5. "And if any person or persons hereafter have taken or shall take divers mansion-houses, shops, ware-houses, cellars or stables in one lease, and letteth or shall let out one or more of the said houses and keepeth or shall keep one or more in his or their own hands, and inhabiteth or inhabit in the same ; that then the said taker or takers, and his or their executors or assigns, shall pay his or their tithes after the rate abovesaid, according to the quantity of the yearly rent of such mansion house or houses retained, in his or their own hands ; and that his assignee or assignees of the residue of the said mansion house or houses, shall pay his or their tithes after the rate abovesaid, according to the quantity of their yearly rents.

6. "Item, if such farmer or farmers, or his or their assigns, of any mansion house or houses, ware-houses, shops, cellars, or stables, hath at any time within eight years last past, or shall hereafter let over all the said mansion house or houses contained in his or their lease, to one or to divers persons ; that then the inhabitants, lessees, or occupiers of them and every of them, shall pay their tithes after the rate of such rents as the inhabitants, lessees, or occupiers, and their assignee or assignees, have been or shall be charged withal, without fraud or covin.

7. "Item, if any dwelling-house within eight years last past was or hereafter shall be converted into a ware-house, store-house, or such like ; or if a ware-house, store-house or such like, within the said eight years was or hereafter shall be converted into a dwelling-house, the occupiers thereof shall pay tithes for the same after the rate above declared of mansion house rents.

8. "Item, that where any person shall demise any dye-house or brew-house, with implements convenient and necessary for dyeing or brewing, reserving a rent upon the same, as well in respect of such implements as in respect of such dye-house or brew-house, that then the tenant shall pay his tithes after such rate as is abovesaid, the third penny abated; and that every principal house or houses, with key or wharf, having any crane or gibet belonging to the same, shall pay after the like rate of their rents as is aforesaid, the third penny abated; and the other wharfs belonging to houses having no crane or gibet, shall pay for tithes as shall be paid for mansion houses in form aforesaid.

9. "Item, that where any mansion house with a shop, stable, ware-house, wharf with crane, timber-yard, teinter-yard, or garden belonging to the same, or as parcel of the same, is or shall be occupied together, that if the same be hereafter severed or divided, or at any time within eight years last past were severed or divided, that then the farmer or farmers or occupier or occupiers thereof shall pay such tithes as is abovesaid for such shops, stable, ware-houses, wharf with crane, timber-yard, teinter-yard, or garden aforesaid, so severed or divided, after the rate of their several rents thereupon reserved.

10. "Item, that the said citizens and inhabitants shall pay their tithes quarterly, that is to say, at the feast of Easter, the nativity of St. John the Baptist, the feast of St. Michael the archangel, and the nativity of our Lord by even portions.

11. "Item, that every householder paying 10s. rent or above shall for him or herself be discharged of their four offering days; but his wife, children, servants, or others of their family, taking the rites of the church at Easter, shall pay 2*d.* for their four offering days yearly.

12. "Provided always, and it is decreed, That if any house which hath been or hereafter shall be letten for 10s. rent by the year, or more, be or hath been at any time within eight years last past, or hereafter shall be, divided and leased into small parcels or members, yielding less yearly rent than 10s. by the year, that then the owner or owners, if he or they shall dwell in any part of such house, or else the principal lessee or lessees, if the owner or owners do not dwell in some part of the same, shall from henceforth pay for his or their tithes after such rate of rent as the same house was accustomed to be letten for, before such division or dividing into parts or members; and the under farmer and farmers, and lessee and lessees, to be discharged of all tithes for such small parcels, parts or members, rented at less yearly rent than 10s. by the year without fraud or covin, paying 2*d.* yearly for four offering days.

13. "Provided always, and it is decreed, That for such gardens as appertain not to any mansion house, and which any person or persons holdeth or shall hold in his or their hands for pleasure, or to his own use, that the then person so holding the same shall pay no tithes for the same; but if any person or persons which holdeth or shall hold any such garden, containing half an acre or more, shall make any yearly profit thereof, by way of sale, that then he or they shall pay tithes for the same after such rate of his rent, as is herein first above specified.

14. "Provided also, that if any such gardens now being of the quantity of half an acre, or more, be hereafter by fraud or covin divided into less quantities, then to pay according to the rate abovesaid.

15. "Provided always, that this decree shall not extend to the houses of great men, or noble men, or noble women, kept in their own hands, and not letten for any rent, which in times past have paid no tithes, so long as they shall so continue unletten; nor to any halls of crafts or companies, so long as they be kept unletten, so that the same halls in times past have not used to pay any tithes.

16. "Provided always, and it is decreed, That this present order and decree shall not in anywise extend to bind or charge any sheds, stables, cellars, timber-yards, nor teinter-yards, which were never parcel of any dwelling-house nor belonging to any dwelling-house, nor have been accustomed to pay any tithes; but that the said citizens and inhabitants shall thereof be quit of payment of any tithes, as it hath been used and accustomed.

17. "Provided also, and it is decreed, That where less sum than after 16½*d.* in the 10*s.* rent, or less sum than 2*s.* 9*d.* in the 20*s.* rent, hath been accustomed to be paid for tithes; that then in such places the said citizens and inhabitants shall pay, but only after such rate as hath been accustomed.

18. "It is also decreed, That if any variance, controversy or strife do or shall hereafter arise in the said city for nonpayment of any tithes; or if any variance or doubt shall arise upon the true knowledge or division of any rent or tithes within the liberties of the said city, or of any extent or assessment thereof, or if any doubt arise upon any other thing contained within this decree; that then, upon complaint made by the party grieved to the mayor of the city of London for the time being, the said mayor, by the advice of counsel, shall call the said parties before him, and make a final end in the same, with costs to be awarded by the discretion of the said mayor and his assistants according to the intent and purport of this present decree.

19. "And if the mayor shall not make an end thereof within two months after complaint to him made, or if any of the said parties find themselves aggrieved, that then the lord chancellor of England for the time being, upon complaint to him made within three months then next following, shall make an end in the same, with such costs to be awarded as shall be thought convenient, according to the intent and purport of the said decree.

20. "Provided always, That if any person or persons take any tenement for a less rent than it was accustomed to be letten for,

by reason of great ruin or decay, burning, or such like occasions or misfortunes, that then such person or persons, his executors or assigns, shall pay tithes only after the rate of the rent reserved in his or their lease, and none otherwise, as long as the same lease shall endure."

Several cases have been decided under this decree : viz., Meadhouse v. Taylor (t), Green v. Piper (u), Skidmore and Eire v. Bell (x), Bennett v. Trepas (y), Antrobus v. The East India Company (z), Macdougall v. Parrier (a), Vivian v. Cochrane (b), London and Blackwall Railway Company v. Letts (c), Payne v. Esdaile (d), which are not here given at length, because, by a series of acts, every parish in the city, it is believed, has been since separately provided for in a course of legislation which, though based on 37 Hen. 8, c. 12, has altered several of the features of that act.

This legislation began upon the occasion of the fire in London in the year 1666, as to the churches and houses thereby consumed, when 22 & 23 Car. 2, c. 15, enacted as follows:—"Whereas the tithes in the city of London were levied and paid with great inequality, and are, since the late dreadful fire there, in the rebuilding of the same, by taking away of some houses, altering the foundations of many, and the new erecting of others, so disordered, that in case they should not for the time to come be reduced to a certainty, many controversies and suits of law might thence arise": it is therefore enacted, "That the annual certain tithes of all and every parish and parishes within the said city and liberties thereof, whose churches have been demolished, or in part consumed by the late fire, and which said parishes, by virtue of an act of this present parliament . . . (e), remain and continue single, as heretofore they were, or are by the said act annexed or united into one parish respectively, shall be as followeth; (that is to say), the annual certain tithes, or sum of money in lieu of tithes."

Sect. 2 contains a list of the parishes and of the sums set opposite to them.

Sect. 3. "Which respective sums of money to be paid in lieu of tithes within the said respective parishes, and assessed as hereinafter is directed, shall continue to be esteemed, deemed and taken to all intents and purposes to be the respective certain annual maintenance (over and above glebes and perquisites, gifts and bequests to the respective parson, vicar and curate of any parish for the time being, or to his or their respective successors, or to other persons for his or their use) of the said respective parsons, vicars and curates, who shall be legally instituted, inducted and admitted into the respective parishes aforesaid."

And by sects. 4, 5, 6, 7, for the more equal levying of the same upon the several houses, buildings and other hereditaments within the respective parishes, assessments were ordered to be made before July 24, 1671, "upon all houses, shops, warehouses and cellars, wharfs, keys, cranes, water-houses (which water-houses shall pay in the respective parishes where they stand and not otherwise), tofts of ground (remaining unbuilt), and all other hereditaments whatsoever (except parsonage or vicarage houses), the whole respective sum by this act appointed, or so much of it as is more than what each impropiator is by this act enjoined to allow."

By sect. 8, three transcripts of the assessments were to be made; one to be deposited amongst the records of the city, another in the registry of the bishop of London, and another in the parish vestry respectively, for a perpetual memorial thereof.

By sect. 9, the sums assessed were to be paid to the respective parsons, vicars and curates, at the four most usual feasts, to wit, at the annunciation of the blessed Virgin, the nativity of St. John Baptist, the feast of St. Michael the Archangel, and the nativity of our blessed Saviour, or within fourteen days after each of the feasts aforesaid, by equal payments; the respective payments thereof to begin and commence only from such time as the incumbent shall begin to officiate or preach as incumbent.

By sect 10, impropiators shall pay and allow what bonâ fide they have used and ought to pay and satisfy to the respective incumbents at any time before the said late fire; the same to be computed as part of the maintenance of such incumbent.

Sect. 11 provides, that if any inhabitants shall refuse or neglect to pay to the incumbent the sum appointed by him to be paid (the same being lawfully demanded upon the premises); it shall be lawful for the lord mayor, upon oath to be made before him of such refusal or neglect, to grant out warrants for the officer or person appointed to collect the same, with the assistance of a constable in the day time, to levy the same by distress and sale of the goods of the party so refusing or neglecting; restoring to the owner the overplus over and above the said arrears and the reasonable charges of making such distress.

By sect. 12, if the lord mayor shall refuse or neglect to execute any of the powers to him given by the act, it shall be lawful for the lord chancellor or lord keeper, or two or more of the barons of the exchequer, by warrant under their hands and seals respectively, to do and perform what the said lord mayor might or ought to have done in the premises.

Sect. 14. "Provided always that no court or judge ecclesiastical or temporal, shall hold plea of or for any the sum or sums of money due and owing or to be paid by virtue of this act;

other than the persons hereby authorized to have cognizance thereof: nor shall it be lawful to or for any parson, vicar, curate or incumbent, to convent or sue any person assessed as aforesaid and refusing or neglecting to pay the same in any court or courts, or before any judge or judges, other than what are authorized and appointed by this act, for the hearing and determining of the same, in manner aforesaid."

Sect. 15. "Provided also, That it shall and may be lawful for the warden and minor canons of St. Paul's Church, London, parson and proprietors of the rectory of St. Gregory (f) aforesaid, to receive and enjoy all tithes, oblations and duties arising or growing due within the said parish, in as large and beneficial manner, as formerly they have or lawfully might have done, anything therein to the contrary notwithstanding" (g).

The following cases have been decided on this statute:—Ex parte Croxall (h), The Warden and Minor Canons of St. Paul's v. Morris (i). Cases on this act.

Some of the later Acts of Parliament are—44 Geo. 3, c. 89, Later local acts. for relief of certain incumbents in the city. 27 & 28 Vict. c. cclxviii., which deals with the parishes of St. Andrew Under-shaft; St. Katherine Coleman; St. Olave, Hart Street; All-hallows, London Wall; Allhallows Barking; St. Ethelburga; St. Alphage, London Wall; St. Martin Outwich, Threadneedle Street; St. Peter le Poer, Broad Street; Allhallows Staining, Mark Lane; and Christ Church, Newgate Street; and provides in each case for a fixed tithe for the incumbent to be raised by pound rates, called tithe rates, over the parish. 38 & 39 Vict. c. lxxiv., for the parish of St. Gregory and the minor canons of St. Paul's. The Christ Church, Newgate Street, Tithe Act, 1879 (42 & 43 Vict. c. xciii.). The London City Tithes Act, 1879 (42 & 43 Vict. c. clxxvi.), which applies similar provisions with those enacted by 27 & 28 Vict. c. cclxviii., to all the remaining city parishes, except St. Botolph, Aldgate; and 44 & 45 Vict. c. xcvi., which converts the tithe in this last parish into a church rate. It has been decided that this rate is not itself rateable to the poor as tithe would be (h). A later Act as to this parish is 51 & 52 Vict. c. lxxix.

there have been in many places arrangements made by local acts for paying corn rents in lieu of the ordinary tithes.

These corn rents were left untouched by the earlier commutation acts; but provision for their conversion into rent-charges, similar to the ordinary commutation rent-charges, is made by 23 & 24 Vict. c. 93, as follows:—

23 & 24 Vict.
c. 93.

Corn rents under local acts may be converted into tithe rent-
charge.

Sect. 1. "Where corn rents are payable by virtue of any local act of parliament, in commutation of the whole or part of the tithes of any parish, and such corn rents shall be subject to variation at certain periods under the provisions of the same act, the commissioners, upon the application in writing of the owners of lands liable to the payment of the major part in value of such corn rents, or of the persons to whom a major part in value of such rents are payable, at any time at which the said corn rents might be subjected to variation under such local act, or at any other time, upon the joint application in writing of the owners of lands liable to the payment of the major part in value of such corn rents, and of the persons to whom a major part in value of such rents are payable, may, by an award under their hands and seal, convert the same into a rent-charge, to be thenceforth and for ever thereafter payable, in like manner and subject to the like incidents as rent-charges awarded under the said recited acts (1) are payable and subject to: provided always, that nothing in this act contained shall be construed to render any such rent-charge liable to parochial or other rates or taxes, from which the corn rents in respect of which such rent-charge shall have been awarded were free and exempt."

County or towns from whose returns average to be calculated.

Sect. 2. "Wherever the local act provides that the average prices upon which any corn rents shall be varied shall be taken from any county, or from towns from which corn returns are made, the commissioners shall calculate the rent-charge to be awarded by them in lieu of such corn rents upon the returns for such county or such towns; and where no corn returns are made from the towns so named, the commissioners shall select two towns in the same or any adjoining county from which there are returns, and give notice thereof in such manner as to them shall seem fit, and shall appoint a time (being not less than twenty-one days from the date of the notice) within which objections to such selection may be signified in writing to the commissioners by any person interested, and if there be any such objections the commissioners shall consider the same, and shall either confirm the selection, or select some other towns, as they may think fit."

How average to be calculated.

Sect. 3. "The commissioners shall calculate the rent-charge to be awarded in lieu of any such corn rents upon the average prices for the number of years next preceding the date of the application to them, which shall be provided by such local act as the basis of variation, having due regard to the average prices upon which such corn rents were ascertained, and such calculation, where practicable, shall be made with reference to the particular grain mentioned in the local act under which such corn rents are payable, or if there shall be no returns of such grain, upon the average prices of wheat, barley, and oats."

Sect. 4. "The commissioners shall apportion the rent-charge to be awarded by them in lieu of corn rents upon and among the lands heretofore subject to such corn rents, either by a general schedule or a schedule in detail of the same lands, to be annexed to and form part of their award, and with or without a map of the same lands or any part thereof, but the commissioners shall not require a map unless the same shall in their opinion be rendered necessary for the identification of any such lands; and the commissioners shall deposit a draft of such award for inspection in the same manner as by the said recited acts is required in reference to an instrument of apportionment, and shall cause notice of such deposit to be given in such manner as to them shall seem fit, and shall by such notice specify the time (being not less than twenty-one days) within which objections in writing to such proposed award may be signified to the commissioners; and in case any notice of objection shall be given within the time limited as aforesaid, the commissioners shall appoint a time and place for hearing such objections, and shall by themselves or by an assistant commissioner take such objections into their consideration; and if there be no notice of objections, or when the said commissioners or assistant commissioner shall have heard and determined all such objections, the commissioners shall confirm such award, with or without amendments, as they shall see fit, and such award shall thenceforth be binding and conclusive on all persons whomsoever, subject to the provision hereinafter contained, and shall be conclusive evidence on every matter in the said award set forth and contained."

Commissioners to apportion rent-charge.

Sect. 5. "Any person dissatisfied with the said award, and who shall be desirous of appealing against the same, shall have the same power of appeal as is given by the said first-recited act in the case of a decision given under the forty-fifth section of such act (m), notwithstanding that the yearly payment in dispute shall be less than twenty pounds; and the court is hereby empowered to amend such award, or to remit the same to the commissioners to be amended by them in such manner as the said court shall direct, and the commissioners shall thereupon amend the same, in conformity to such direction, and the award so amended shall be binding and conclusive on all persons whomsoever."

sioners to tations.

As to expenses

Sect. 7. "In making any such award, and any inquiries incident thereto, the commissioners shall have the same powers as to the attendance and examination of witnesses, the production of documents, and all other matters, as are given by the said recited acts (n) in matters relating to the commutation of tithes; and all expenses of or incident to any such award or any part thereof shall be borne and paid by and amongst the owners of lands heretofore liable to such corn rents, and the persons to whom the same were payable respectively, in such proportion and manner as the commissioners shall direct, and be recoverable in like manner as expenses under the said recited acts (n) are recoverable."

Copies of award to be deposited, &c.

Sect. 8. "The commissioners shall cause to be made two copies of every such award of rent-charge in lieu of corn rents, which copies shall be sealed by them and be deposited in like manner and subject to all the like incidents as provided by the said recited acts in reference to the sealed copies of an instrument of apportionment."

As to recovery of rent-charges lieu of corn rents.

Sect. 9. "The payment of any rent-charge awarded in lieu of corn rents which shall be in arrear may be enforced by the same ways and means as payment of rent-charge in arrear may be enforced under the provisions of the said recited acts, or may be enforced, at the option of the person to whom the same rent-charge is payable, by the same ways and means as are provided by the local act for the recovery of the corn rents in lieu of which such rent-charge shall have been awarded."

Where consents not given, draft of proposed altered apportionment to be inspection.

Sect. 10. "In any case of altered apportionment in which the consent of the whole of the landowners interested in such alteration shall not be signified thereto, the commissioners shall, in lieu of the service of notice required by the said acts, cause a draft of the proposed altered apportionment to be deposited for inspection, in the same manner as by the said first-recited act is required in reference to an instrument of apportionment, and shall cause notice to be given of such deposit in such manner as to them shall seem fit, and shall by such notice specify the time (being not less than twenty-one days) within which objections in writing to such proposed altered apportionment may be signified to the commissioners; and in case any notice of objection shall be given within the time limited as aforesaid, the commissioners shall appoint a time and place for hearing such objection, and shall, by themselves or by an assistant commissioner, take such objection into their consideration; and if there be no notice of objection, or when the said commissioners or assistant commissioner shall have heard and determined every such objection, jection, com-

the commissioners shall confirm such altered apportionment, with or without amendments, as they shall see fit."

By 48 & 49 Vict. c. 32 ("The Tithe Rent-charge Redemption Act, 1885"), sect. 2, "The powers and provisions of the said recited acts (o) respecting the redemption of rent-charge (except as otherwise by this act is provided) shall extend and be applicable to all corn rents, rent-charges, and money payments, payable out of or charged on any lands by virtue of any act of parliament in lieu of tithes."

48 & 49 Vict.
c. 32.

Sect. 3. "Every application to the commissioners for the redemption of any such corn rent, rent-charge, or money payment shall be accompanied with a certified copy or extract from the act, and from any award made in pursuance thereof, showing the amount of the corn rent, rent-charge, or money payment proposed to be redeemed, and with such evidence or proof of the payment of such corn rent, rent-charge, or money payment together with such particulars of the land liable thereto as the commissioners shall think fit."

"Provided always, that if the said corn rent, rent-charge, or money payment should have been varied by any order of justices at quarter sessions, the consideration money payable for the redemption shall be calculated on such varied amount, and a certified copy of the last of such orders or other satisfactory evidence of the variation shall be furnished to the said commissioners, and such certified copies or extracts shall be verified and signed by the person or persons having the custody of the said act, award, or order of justices respectively."

Sect. 4. "In lieu of the deposit of copies of the certificate of redemption as provided by the said recited acts, copies of every certificate of redemption under this act, sealed with the seal of the said commissioners, shall be deposited with such person or persons as the said commissioners, having regard to the circumstances of each case, shall determine."

editor was counsel, and in a later case before the Oxfordshire Quarter Sessions, where the editor was present as a magistrate. The point in these cases was one which not infrequently arises in the working of these acts. They all fix a certain money rent, and a value in corn, then provide that if the price of corn rise or fall at the expiry of certain periods, usually twenty-one or fourteen years, application may be made to Quarter Sessions for a variation of the corn rent. In the above cited case of Reg. v. The Justices of Lindsey it was holden that the application must be made as soon as the fourteen or twenty-one years expired, and if not made then must wait for a new period. In the later cases it was holden sufficient that at least fourteen or twenty-one years had expired.

By 14 & 15 Vict. c. 53, the tithe commission was amalgamated with the copyhold commission and the inclosure commission, and commissioners were to be appointed under the act for two years: these new commissioners were to be called tithe commissioners, copyhold commissioners, or inclosure commissioners, according to the powers by virtue of which they acted and the duties which they undertook, in each case.

This commission was continued from time to time. By 31 & 32 Vict. c. 89, provisions are made for defraying the expenses of the commission by means of fees.

By sect. 1, security for costs is to be taken before any inquiry is held by an assistant commissioner; and by sect. 6, the commissioners shall prepare a table of fees, to be approved by the lords of the treasury, in respect of the business transacted under the acts administered by them; and these fees are to be paid in stamps. The table of fees, and any alterations afterwards made therein, are to be published in the Gazette and laid before parliament.

CHAPTER IV.

PENSIONS, OFFERINGS, FEES.

SECT. 1.—*Pensions.*2.—*Offerings.*3.—Fees.

Subject of chapter.

THIS chapter deals with several minor sources, from which, as well as from the more prominent sources of glebes and tithes, the incomes (a) enjoyed by ecclesiastical persons in virtue of their benefices or preferments, arise.

SECT. 1.—Pensions.

What are pensions.

Pensions are certain sums of money paid to clergymen in lieu of tithes; and some churches have settled on them annuities or pensions payable by other churches.

Thus, in the Registrum Honoris de Richmond (b), we find a pension paid out of Coram, or Coverham Abbey, in the county of York (unto which the church of Sedburgh was appropriated), to the prior of Connyside (unto whose priory the church of Orton was appropriated), for the said church of Sedburgh [Sedberwe], 20*s*.

Origin of.

These pensions are due by virtue of some decree made by an ecclesiastical judge upon a controversy for tithes, by which the tithes have been decreed to be enjoyed by one, and a pension instead thereof to be paid to another; or they have arisen by virtue of a deed made by the consent of the parson, patron and ordinary (c).

Pensions paid by monasteries.

At the dissolution of monasteries there were many pensions issuing out of their lands, and payable to several ecclesiastical persons; which lands were vested in the crown by the statutes of dissolution; in which statutes there is a saving to such persons of the right which they had to those pensions: but notwithstanding such general saving, those who had that right were disturbed in the collecting and receiving such pensions; and therefore by another statute, 34 & 35 Hen. 8, c. 19, it was enacted, that pensions, portions, corrodies, indemnities, synodics, proxies, and all other profits due out of the lands of religious houses dissolved, shall continue to be paid to ecclesiastical persons by the occupiers of the said lands. And the plaintiff may recover the thing in demand, and the value thereof in damages in the ecclesiastical court, together with costs. And the like he shall recover at the common law when the cause is there determinable (d).

By 26 Hen. 8, c. 3, s. 18, reciting that, "Forasmuch as every incumbent of the dignities, benefices, and promotions spiritual aforementioned shall be charged by this act to the payment of the tenth part of the value of their dignities, benefices, and promotions spiritual, without any deduction or allowance of such pension or pensions, wherewith some of them have been charged to pay to their predecessors during their lives, or to other persons to the use of such their predecessors during their lives," it is enacted that "it shall be lawful to every incumbent charged with any such pension payable to any his predecessors, or to any to his use, to receive and keep in his hand the tenth part of every such pension; and that every such incumbent and his sureties shall from henceforth be acquitted and discharged of the said tenth part of every such pension, by virtue and authority of this present act; any decree, ordinance or assignment of any ordinary, or any collateral writing or security made for such pension to any spiritual person or persons, or to any to their uses for term of their lives, in anywise notwithstanding; and that as well every incumbent, as such parsons as stand bound for him for payment of any such pensions, shall plead this act in every of the king's courts, for the clear extinguishment and discharge of the tenth part of every such pension."

Sect. 19. . . . "No pension shall hereafter be assigned by the ordinary, or by any other manner of agreement, by collateral surety, or otherwise, upon any resignation of any dignity benefice or promotion spiritual, above the value of the third part of the dignity benefice or promotion spiritual resigned: and if any pension amounting above the value of the third part of the dignity benefice or promotion spiritual heretofore resigned, be already limited and made sure to any spiritual person or persons, by decree of the ordinary, or otherwise by any collateral surety, or hereafter shall happen to be assigned and made sure to any parson or parsons spiritual, or to any other to their use, by decree of the ordinary, or by any other collateral surety, upon 34 & 35 Hen. 8, c. 19.

26 Hen. 8, c. 3. They which pay pensions to others out of their spiritual living may retain the tenth part thereof.

No pension shall be reserved upon the resignation of a benefice, above the value of the third part.

(d) Provisions for the redemption of pensions payable to spiritual persons and charged on the Consolidated Fund are made by 36 & 37 Vict. c. 57, and 45 & 46 Vict. c. 73, s. 23.

any resignation thereof; yet nevertheless the incumbent charged with such pension, nor his sureties collateral, shall not be compelled to pay any more pension than the value of the third part of his dignity, benefice, or promotion spiritual so resigned shall amount unto; but shall by authority of this act be clearly acquitted and discharged of so much of the said pension as shall amount above the value of the third part of the dignity or benefice so resigned; any decree or assignment of the ordinary, or any collateral writings or sureties heretofore made, or hereafter to be had or made for the same, to the contrary thereof notwithstanding" (d).

13 Edw. 1,
st. 4.

A pension may be sued for in ecclesiastical court.

By the statute of Circumspectè agatis, 13 Edw. 1, st. 4, "if a prelate of a church, or the patron, demand of a parson a pension due to him, all such demands are to be made in a spiritual court;" in which case "the spiritual judge shall have power to take knowledge, notwithstanding the king's prohibition."

In pursuance of which, the general doctrine is, that pensions, as such, are of a spiritual nature, and to be sued for in the spiritual court; and accordingly, when they have come in question, prohibitions have been frequently denied or consultations granted, even though they have been claimed upon the foot of prescription (e).

Contrary
opinion of Lord Coke.

Lord Coke, indeed, said, if a pension be claimed by prescription, there, seeing a writ of annuity lies, and that prescription must be tried by the common law, because common and canon law therein do differ, they cannot sue for such a pension in the ecclesiastical court (f).

Jones v. Stone.

But this has been denied to be law: and in the case of Jones v. Stone, in 12 Will. 3 (g), Holt, C. J., said he could never get a prohibition to stay a suit in the spiritual court against a parson for a pension by prescription.

Gooche v.
The Bishop of London.

In the case of Gooche v. The Bishop of London, in 4 Geo. 2 (h), the bishop libelled in the spiritual court, suggesting that Dr. Gooche, as Archdeacon of Essex, is to pay 10*l.* due to the bishop as a prestation for the exercise of his exterior jurisdiction. The doctor moved for a prohibition, alleging that he had pleaded there was no prescription; and then that being denied, a prohibition ought to go for defect of trial. On the contrary, it was argued for the bishop, that the libel being general it must not be taken that he goes upon a prescription; but it is to be considered in the same light as the common case of a pension which is suable for in the spiritual court; and the nature of the demand shows it must have its original from a composition, it being a recompense for the archdeacon's being allowed to exercise a jurisdiction which originally did belong to the ordinary. And by the court: "They may certainly entitle themselves ab antiquo without laying a prescription. And as they have only laid it in general, there is no ground for us to interpose, till it appears by the proceedings that a prescriptive right will come in question; if they join issue on the plea, it will then be proper to apply; but at present there ought to be no prohibition."

In Bailey v. Cornes (i), in 1724, a bill was preferred in the Court of Exchequer for a pension only, payable to the preacher of Bridgnorth; and upon hearing of the cause (which was afterwards ended by compromise) it seemed to be admitted that a bill might be brought for a pension only.

Bill for pension in Court of Exchequer.

A bishop may sue for a pension before his chancellor, and an archdeacon before his official (k).

How and against whom suits may be instituted.

If a suit be brought for a pension or other thing due of a parsonage, it seems that the occupier (though a tenant) ought to be sued; and if part of the rectory be in the hand of the owner, and part in the occupation of a tenant, the suit is to be against them both (l).

And though there is neither house, nor glebe, nor tithes, nor other profits, but only of Easter offerings, burials, and christenings, yet the incumbent is liable to pay the pension (m).

If an incumbent leave arrearages of a pension, the successor shall be answerable, because the church itself is charged, into whatsoever hand it comes (n).

In Still and Bunn v. Palfrey (o), where the parishioners had the patronage of the parish and were bound to provide and pay a minister, and it was the custom to agree upon the election of each minister for the payment of a fixed stipend, Sir H. J. Fust appears to have thought that, though no church-rate could be made for this stipend, a suit for the payment of it, in the nature of a suit for a pension or for ecclesiastical dues, might be brought in the Ecclesiastical Court.

Still v. Palfrey.

By 13 Eliz. c. 20, s. 1, the grant of any new pension is made void (p). Pensions may, however, be granted bishops resigning, under the Bishops Resignation Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 111), to deans and canons resigning, under 35 & 36 Vict. c. 8, and to incumbents resigning according to the provisions of the Incumbents Resignation Acts (34 & 35 Vict. c. 44, and 50 & 51 Vict. c. 23) (q).

SECT. 2.—Offerings (r).

What offerings are. Offerings, oblations, and obventions, are one and the same thing: though obvention is the largest word. And under these are comprehended, not only those small customary sums commonly paid by every person when he receives the sacrament of the Lord's Supper at Easter, sometimes called Easter dues, which in many places are by custom twopence from every communicant, and in London fourpence a house, but also the customary payment for marriages, christenings, churchings and burials (s).

Oblations according to canon law. The term oblation, in the canon law, means whatever is in any manner offered to the church by the pious and faithful, whether it be moveable or immoveable property (t). These offerings were given on various occasions, such as at burials and marriages, by penitents, at festivals, or by will. But they were not to be received from persons excommunicated, or who had disinherited their sons, or been guilty of injustice, or had oppressed the poor. Such offerings constituted at first the chief revenues of the church. When established by custom, they may now be recovered as small tithes before two justices of the peace, by 7 & 8 Will. 3, c. 6, and subsequent acts.

How recoverable. Offerings were made at the holy altar by the king and queen twelve times in the year on festivals called offering days, and distributed by the dean of the chapel to the poor. James the First commonly offered a piece of gold, having the following motto: "Quid retribuam domino pro omnibus que tribuit mihi? Cor contritum et humiliatum non despiciet Deus." The money in lieu of these accustomed offerings is now fixed at fifty guineas a year, and paid by the privy purse annually to the dean or his order; for the distribution of which offertory money, the dean directs proper lists of poor people to be made out.

Royal offerings. Offerings, as now known to the law and recoverable by legal process, may be divided into two kinds: (1), mortuaries or offerings at the burial of the dead, and (2), offerings at the four great feasts.

Kinds of offerings. The law as to mortuaries has been already mentioned in the chapter on burial (u).

Mortuaries. Offerings at the four principal feasts are expressly provided for by the following section of 2 & 3 Edw. 6, c. 13.

2 & 3 Edw. 6, c. 13. Sect. 10. Provided always that all and every person and persons which by the laws or customs of this realm ought to make or pay their offering, shall yearly from henceforth well and truly content and pay his or their offering to the parson, vicar, proprietor, or their deputies or farmers of the parish or parishes where it shall fortune or happen him or them to dwell or abide; and that at such four offering days as at any time heretofore within the space of four years last past hath been used and accustomed for the payment of the same; and in default thereof, to pay for their said offerings at Easter then next following" (x).

The four offering days are Christmas, Easter, Whitsuntide, and the feast of the dedication of the parish church (y). Four offering days.

Concerning the offerings at Easter, it is directed by the rubric at the end of the communion office, that "yearly at Easter, every parishioner shall reckon with the parson, vicar, or curate, or his or their deputy or deputies, and pay to them or him all ecclesiastical duties, accustomedly due, then and at that time to be paid." Easter offerings.
Rubric.

And it has been decreed, that Easter offerings are due of common right, and not by custom only (z); C. B. Gilbert said, that offerings were a compensation for personal tithes (a). And in the case of Carthew v. Edwards, it was holden that they were due from the householder for every member of his family of sixteen years of age and upwards (b). Of common right.

Easter offerings are due by the common law at the rate of twopence per head (c); but by custom it may be more. In London, it is mentioned in several books of authority, that a groat a house is due (d); but I have not discovered on what this opinion of a groat a house for offerings in London is founded. Hobart refers to "the statute," but does not mention any statute in particular. By 37 Hen. 8, c. 12, s. 12, every householder in London paying 10s. rent or above, shall be discharged of offerings; but his wife and children, or others, taking the rites of the church, at Easter should pay twopence each for their offerings yearly (e). To what amount.

c. 12.

In Reg. v. Hall (f), the terriers of the glebe lands and other rights belonging to the parish church of Batley, dating from 1727 to 1825, contained the following clause: "Easter offerings. Every communicant, 2d.; every cow, 2d.; every plough, 2d.; every foal, 1s.; every hive of bees, 1d.; every house, 3½d." Reg. v. Hall.

It was holden—1. That the terriers were evidence of such a custom as excluded the common law right (if such existed) to a payment of 2d. for every member of a family of the age of sixteen as an Easter offering, because it included items to which the common law right did not extend. 2. That the word com-municant did not override the whole clause, but that each item was an independent charge, and payable by every parishioner, whether he came within the denomination of a communicant or not. 3. That in the absence of evidence to the contrary "communicants" meant only those who were actually attendants at the communion; and that therefore this charge could only be demanded from actual communicants. 4. That the custom attached to any house as soon as built and occupied, and was not confined to ancient houses which were in existence when the terriers were made.

Dominicals.

In a case of Reg. v. Sandford, reported as far as the writer knows only in the Church Review of June 13, 1874, the Court of Queen's Bench is reported to have discharged a rule to quash a decision of the magistrates at Exeter ordering payment to the rector of a parish in that city of 9s. 4d. dominicals.

6 & 7 Vict.

By 6 & 7 Vict. c. 37, s. 15, the act for making new parishes (h), "the like Easter offerings and dues may be received within the limits of such new parish by the perpetual curate thereof, as are and were before the time of the passing of this act payable to the incumbent of the church of the principal parish of which such new parish originally formed a part."

Pentecostals.

Pentecostals, otherwise called Whitsun-farthings, took their name from the usual time of payment, at the feast of Pentecost. These are spoken of in a remarkable grant of King Henry VIII. to the dean and chapter of Worcester; in which he makes over to them all those oblations and obventions, or spiritual profits, commonly called Whitsun-farthings, yearly collected or received of divers towns within the archdeaconry of Worcester, and offered at the time of Pentecost. From hence it appears that pentecostals were oblations; and as the inhabitants of chapelries were bound, on some certain festival or festivals, to repair to the mother church, and make their oblation there, in token of subjection and dependence, so, as it seems, were the inhabitants of the diocese obliged to repair to the cathedral (as the mother church of the whole diocese) at the feast of Pentecost. Something like this was the coming of many priests and their people in procession to the church of St. Austin in Canterbury, in Whitsun-week, with oblations and other devotions; and in the register of Robert Read, who was made Bishop of Chichester in the year 1396, there is a letter to compel the inhabitants of the parishes within the archdeaconry of Chichester, to visit their mother church in Whitsun-week (i).

These oblations grew by degrees into fixed and certain payments from every parish and every house in it, as appears not only from the aforementioned grant of King Henry VIII., but also from a remarkable passage in the articles of the clergy in convocation in the year 1399; where the sixth article is, a humble request to the archbishops and bishops that it may be declared whether Peter-pence, the holy loaf and pentecostals were to be paid by the occupiers of the lands, though the tenements were fallen or not inhabited, according to the ancient custom, when every parish paid a certain quota (k).

These are still paid in some few dioceses, being now only a charge upon particular churches, where by custom they have been paid (l).

Modern payments of pentecostals.

And if they be denied where they are due, they are recoverable in the spiritual court (m).

Nothing in particular is to be found in the books as to the offerings at the other two principal feasts.

Offerings at other two feasts.

By the statute of Circumspectè agatis, 13 Edw. 1, st. 4, "If a parson demands of his parishioners oblations due and accustomed," "all such demands are to be made in the spiritual court," in which case "the spiritual judge shall have power to take knowledge notwithstanding the king's prohibition."

for the same, with all offerings, oblations, and obventions, to the several rectors, vicars, and other persons to whom they shall be due in their several parishes, according to the rights, customs, and prescriptions commonly used within the said parishes respectively: and if any person shall subtract or withdraw, or any ways fail in the true payment of such small tithes, offerings, oblations, obventions, or compositions, by the space of twenty days at most after demand thereof, it shall be lawful for the person to whom the same shall be due to make his complaint in writing to two or more justices of the peace within that county, place, or division where the same shall grow due, neither of which justices is to be patron of the church or chapel whence the said tithes shall arise, nor any ways interested in such tithes, offerings, oblations, obventions, or compositions aforesaid."

By sect. 2, the justices are to summon in writing the party complained of, and, upon his appearance or default, if service of the summons is proved, may determine the cause and give compensation for the small tithes or offerings refused.

Sect. 5 excludes from the operation of the act the city of London and other places where special provision is made by local statutes.

Sect. 6 limits the time of complaint to the justices to two years from the time when the tithes or offerings became due.

Sect. 7. "Any person finding himself aggrieved by any judgment to be given by two such justices, may appeal to the next general quarter sessions. . . . And no proceedings or judgment had by virtue of this act shall be removed or superseded by any writ of certiorari, or other writs out of his majesty's courts at Westminster, or any other court, unless the title of such tithes, oblations, or obventions shall be in question."

Sect. 8. "Where any person complained of for subtracting or withholding any small tithes or other duties aforesaid, shall, before the justices to whom such complaint is made, insist upon any prescription, composition, or modus decimandi, agreement, or title, whereby he ought to be freed from payment of the said tithes or other dues in question, and deliver the same in writing to the said justices subscribed by him; and shall then give the party complaining reasonable and sufficient security, to the satisfaction of the said justices, to pay all such costs and damages, as upon a trial at law to be had for that purpose in any of his majesty's courts having cognizance of that matter, shall be given against him, in case the said prescription, composition, or modus decimandi shall not upon the said trial be allowed; in that case, the said justices shall forbear to give any judgment in the matter, and then and in such case the party complaining shall be at liberty to prosecute such person for his said subtraction in any other court where he might have sued before the making of this act."

A party summoned under this act, who resists the payment of tithe on the ground of a modus under this last section, must set up a modus before the justices in the first instance; and if he neglect to do so, and an order is made by the justices, he cannot, on appeal to the sessions, give evidence of the modus. It should seem that this eighth section takes away from the justices the power of trying a question of modus in any case (o).

Sect. 14. "Any clerk or other person who shall begin any suit for recovery of small tithes, oblations, or obventions, not exceeding the value of forty shillings, in his majesty's court of exchequer, or in any of the ecclesiastical courts, shall have no benefit by this act for the same matter for which he hath so sued."

Defence of modus not available unless raised before justices.

Person suing in other courts for sums within this act, to have no benefit from it.

By 7 Geo. 4, c. 15, in places where the justices are patrons of the church, the parties are to be summoned before two justices of any adjoining county, riding, or division.

As to Quakers' tithes, it is thus provided by 7 & 8 Will. 3, c. 34, s. 3, "And whereas by reason of a pretended scruple of conscience, Quakers do refuse to pay tithes and church rates," "where any Quaker shall refuse to pay or compound for his great or small tithes, or to pay any church rates, it shall and may be lawful to and for the two next justices of the peace of the same county (other than such justice of the peace as is patron of the church or chapel whence the said tithes shall arise, or anyways interested in the said tithes), upon the complaint of any parson, vicar, farmer, or proprietor of tithes, churchwarden or churchwardens, who ought to have received or collected the same, by warrant under their hands and seals, to convene before them such Quaker or Quakers neglecting or refusing to pay or compound for the same, and to examine upon oath" (or affirmation, in case of the examination of a Quaker) "the truth and justice of the said complaint, and to ascertain and state what is due and payable by such Quaker or Quakers to the party complaining; and by order under their hands and seals to direct and appoint the payment thereof, so as the sum ordered aforesaid do not exceed ten pounds: and upon refusal to pay according to such order, it shall be lawful for any one of the said justices, by warrant under his hand and seal, to levy the money thereby ordered to be paid by distress and sale of the goods of such offender, his executors or administrators, rendering only the overplus to him, her or them, the necessary charges of distraining being thereout first deducted and allowed by the said justice. And any person finding himself aggrieved by any judgment given by such two justices of the peace, may appeal to the next general quarter sessions to be held for the county, riding, city, liberty, or town corporate, and the justices of the

And no proceedings or judgment had, or to be had, by virtue of this act shall be removed or superseded by any writ of certiorari or other writ out of his majesty's courts at Westminster, or any other court whatsoever, unless the title of such tithes shall be in question."

No certiorari unless title involved.

No distress pending appeal.

This act extended by 1 Geo. 1, st. 2, c. 6.

Sect. 5. "Provided also that in case any such appeal be made as aforesaid, no warrant of distress shall be granted until after such appeal be determined."

And by 1 Geo. 1, stat. 2, c. 6, s. 2, the like remedies shall be had "against any Quaker or Quakers for the recovering of any tithes or rates, or any customary or other rights, dues, or payments belonging to any church or chapel, which of right by law and custom ought to be paid, for the stipend or maintenance of any minister or curate officiating in any church or chapel; and any two or more justices of the peace of the same county or place (other than such justice as is patron of any church or chapel, or anywise interested in the said tithes), upon complaint of any parson, vicar, curate, farmer, or proprietor of such tithes, or any churchwarden or chapelwarden, or other person who ought to have, receive, or collect any such tithes, rates, dues, or payments as aforesaid, are authorized and required to summon in writing under their hand and seals, by reasonable warning, such Quaker or Quakers against whom such complaint shall be made, and after his or their appearance, or upon default of appearance, the said warning or summons being proved before them upon oath, to proceed to hear and determine the said complaint, and to make such order therein as in the aforesaid act is limited, and also to order such costs and charges as they shall think reasonable, not exceeding ten shillings, as upon the merits of the cause shall appear just; which order shall and may be so executed, and on such appeal may be reversed or affirmed by the general quarter sessions, with such costs and remedy for the same; and shall not be removed into any other court, unless the titles of such tithes, dues, or payments shall be in question, in like manner as by the aforesaid act is limited or provided."

Further extended by 53 Geo. 3, c. 127.

By 53 Geo. 3, c. 127, s. 6, these last acts as to Quakers are extended so as to comprise any sum not exceeding 50*l.*; and one justice is competent to receive the complaint and to summon the party before two justices.

Justices of peace may determine complaints

Further, by sect. 4 of that act, reciting 7 & 8 Will. 3, c. 6, it is enacted, "That such justices of the peace [as are in the said recited act mentioned] shall, from and after the passing of this act, be authorized and required to hear and determine all complaints touching tithes, oblations, and compositions subtracted or withheld, where the same shall not exceed ten pounds in amount from any one person, in all such cases, and by all such means, and subject to all such provisions and remedies, by appeal or otherwise, as are contained in the said act of King William, touching small tithes, oblations, and compositions not exceeding forty shillings: Provided always, nevertheless, that from and after the passing of this act, one justice of the peace shall be competent to receive the original complaint, and to summon the parties to appear before two or more justices of the peace, as in the said act is set forth."

It seems that where the respondent, on a summons before the justices, disputes his liability, and the complainant accordingly takes proceedings in some court, the complainant may get six years' arrears of tithes and offerings; though if the respondent had submitted to the justices, he could only have been compelled to pay two years' arrears (r).

Decision on section.

This section takes away the right, not only of bringing suits for tithes under 10*l*., but also of bringing actions under 2 & 3 Edw. 6, c. 13, s. 2, for not truly setting out tithes under 10*l*. (s).

4 & 5 Vict. c. 36.

Enactments and provisions of recited act respecting proceedings for tithes and other ecclesiastical dues extended to all ecclesiastical courts in England.

Lastly, by 4 & 5 Vict. c. 36 (t), it is enacted as follows:—“ . . . all the enactments and provisions of ” 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 74, respecting suits or other proceedings “in any of her majesty's courts in England, in respect of tithes, oblations and compositions of or under the yearly value of ten pounds, and of any great or small tithes, moduses, compositions, rates or other ecclesiastical dues or demands whatsoever, of or under the value of fifty pounds, withheld by any Quaker, shall extend and be applied to all ecclesiastical courts in England.”

SECT. 3.—Fees.

Divisions of subject.

The sources of income to the clergy mentioned in this section may be divided into two heads—(1.) What are commonly called “surplice fees.” (2.) Fees for other acts performed in virtue of their office by beneficed clergy.

What are surplice fees.

“Surplice fees,” also sometimes called offerings or oblations (u), are those which are paid to the minister for performing certain of the offices of the church for the behoof of individual members.

It has already been said that no fee is due for the administration of baptism (x). As to baptism.

The law as to fees on marriages has been already mentioned (y). Marriage.

The law as to fees or "accustomed offerings" on churchings has been already mentioned (z). Churching.

The law as to fees on burials has been already mentioned (a). Burial.

Where the clergyman is entitled to a fee for performing any of these offices, the parish clerk or sexton is often also entitled to a fee for performing his part in the office or ceremony (b). Clerk and sexton.

The fees for these offices depend on custom, and have varied very much in different places. It has sometimes, too, been difficult to prove that any fee of constant amount has been customarily paid. Fees depend on custom.

By 59 Geo. 3, c. 134, s. 11, "It shall be lawful for the commissioners" (that is, now the Ecclesiastical Commissioners), "and they are hereby empowered to make and fix any table of fees for any parish, with the consent of the vestry or select vestry, or persons exercising the powers of vestry in such parish, and also to make and fix any such table of fees for any extra-parochial place, or in or for any district, chapelry, or parochial chapelry in which any church or chapel shall be built or appropriated, under the provisions of the above-recited act (c) or this act, with the consent, nevertheless, in all such cases of the bishop of the diocese; and all fees so fixed may be demanded, received, sued for, prosecuted, and recovered by the spiritual person, or clerk, or sexton, to whom the same shall be assigned, in like manner, and by such and the same means, as any ancient legal fees of a like nature may be sued for, prosecuted and recovered." Power of ecclesiastical commissioners to fix fees.

In the diocese of London it seems that the chancellor of the diocese may fix fees (d). Fees in London.

By 6 & 7 Vict. c. 37, s. 15. " . . . It shall be lawful to publish banns of matrimony in such church, and according to the laws and canons in force in this realm to solemnise therein marriages, baptisms, churchings, and burials, and to require and receive such fees upon the solemnisation of such offices or any of them as shall be fixed by the chancellor of the diocese in which such new parish shall be situate, and which fees, and also the fees for churchings to be received as aforesaid by the minister of such district such chancellor is hereby empowered and required to fix accordingly." 6 & 7 Vict. c. 37. Commutation of.

The same provisions as to the commutation or non-commutation of surplice fees are made by the Tithe Commutation Acts, 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71, s. 90, and 2 & 3 Vict. c. 62, s. 9, as are made with respect to Easter offerings and mortuaries (f).

Altarage.

These surplice fees and the other minor offerings are often in old books spoken of under the name of altarage.

Altarage, it is said, comprehends not only the offerings made upon the altar, but also all the profit which accrues to the priest by reason of the altar, obventio altaris (g).

Out of these, the religious assigned a portion to the vicar; and sometimes the whole altarage was allotted to him by the endowment (h).

Legal decisions as to.

Since the Reformation, divers disputes have arisen, what dues were comprehended under the title of altaragium; which were thus determined in a trial in the Exchequer, in 21 Eliz., viz.: "Upon hearing of the matter, between Ralph Turner, Vicar of West Haddon, and Edward Andrews, it is ordered, that the said vicar shall have by reason of the words altaragium cum manso competenti contained in the composition of the profits assigned for the vicar's maintenance, all such things as he ought to have by these words according to the definition thereof made by the Reverend Father in God John Bishop of London, upon conference with the civilians David Hewes, Judge of the Admiralty, Bartholomew Clerk, Dean of the Arches, John Gibson, Henry Joanse, Lawrence Hewes, and Edward Stanhope, all Doctors of the Civil Law; that is to say, by altaragium, tithes of wool, lambs, colts, calves, pigs, goslings, chickens, butter, cheese, hemp, flax, honey, fruits, herbs, and such other small tithes, with offerings that shall be due within the parish of West Haddon." And the like was for Norton in Northamptonshire, in the same court, within two or three years before, upon hearing, ordered in like manner (i).

Franklyn v.
The Master of St. Cross.

And in Franklyn v. The Master and Brethren of St. Cross, in 1721, it was decreed, that where altaragium is mentioned in old endowments, and supported by usage, it will extend to small tithes, but not otherwise (k).

(d) Vide infra, Part IX. Chap. VI.

Yet it seems to be certain, that the religious when they allotted the altarage in part or in whole to the vicar or capellane, did mean only the customary and voluntary offerings at the altar, for some divine office or service of the priest, and not any share of the standing tithes, whether prædial or mixed (l).

Former meaning of Altarage.

There are various fees due to the beneficed clergy for acts done or authorized by them in virtue of their office, besides those due for their spiritual ministration in the cases already mentioned, which have been called surplice fees.

Fees other than surplice fees.

The minister of any church is entitled to a fee for searching the register books of baptisms and burials, and for giving copies of entries therein. This right is expressly saved by 52 Geo. 3, c. 146, s. 16 (m).

Searches of and copies from registers.

As to marriages, he is, by 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 86, s. 35, to allow searches at all reasonable times of any register book in his keeping, and to give a copy certified under his hand of any entry therein upon payment of fees as follows: "For every search extending over a period of not more than one year the sum of 1*s.*, and 6*d.* additional for every additional year, and the sum of 2*s.* 6*d.* for every single certificate."

6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 86.

He is also, by 1 Vict. c. 22, s. 27, to be paid for making the duplicate register of marriage for the superintendent registrar, at the rate of 6*d.* for each entry (n).

1 Vict. c. 22.

The rector or vicar is also entitled to fees for the erection of gravestones and monuments in churchyards, the affixing of monumental tablets to the walls of churches, and the construction of vaults, in the cases mentioned in the Chapter on Burial (o).

CHAPTER V.

WASTE AND DILAPIDATIONS.

SECT. 1.—*The General Law.*2.—*Ecclesiastical Dilapidations Acts.*SECT. 1.—The General Law.

Ecclesiastical persons subject to the law
of waste.

ECCELESIASTICAL persons are subject to certain rules of law as to the committal of waste on their estates. It is obvious that no ecclesiastic can enjoy his benefice or preferment for more than his life at furthest; and in the eye of the law every person in succession in an ecclesiastical corporation sole is a quasi-tenant for life, having the freehold and an estate for life in his benefice or preferment, but no more.

General law
of waste.

The law as to waste in general is thus laid down by Mr. Joshua Williams (a), "Every tenant for life, unless restrained by covenant or agreement, has the common right of all tenants to cut wood for fuel to burn in the house, for the making and repairing of all instruments of husbandry, and for repairing the house, and the hedges and fences, and also the right to cut underwood and lop pollards in due course. But he is not allowed to cut timber, or to commit any other kind of waste: either by voluntary destruction of any part of the premises, which is called voluntary waste, or by permitting the buildings to go to ruin, which is called permissive waste."

Again, Mr. Williams says (b), "So a tenant for life cannot plough up ancient meadow land; and he is not allowed to dig for gravel, brick, or stone, except in such pits as were open and usually dug when he came in; nor can he open new mines for coal or other minerals, nor cut turf for sale on bog lands; for all such acts would be acts of voluntary waste. But to continue the working of existing mines, or to cut turf for sale in bogs already used for that purpose, is not waste; and the tenant may accordingly carry on such mines and cut turf in such bogs for his own profit."

(b) Ibid. p. 24.

All waste of this kind, whether voluntary or permissive, is called in the ecclesiastical law a dilapidation.

In the Report of the Ecclesiastical Courts Commission of 1832, it is said :

“If any spiritual person holding any preferment for life allow the parsonage house, stables, barns, or any other of the buildings, or the fences, on the property of the church, to fall into decay, or commit or allow to be committed any wilful waste on the same, he may be proceeded against in the ecclesiastical court, and compelled to make the necessary reparation. In case of accident by fire, the same responsibility attaches.

“Though suits of this description are infrequent, we think that this branch of jurisdiction ought to be retained, and that it may, when necessary, be beneficially exercised by the provincial courts. Some modifications may, however, be advantageously introduced. These proceedings have hitherto been carried on in the criminal form: in lieu of this, we are of opinion, that a civil suit should be substituted, and the defendant compelled by sequestration to obey the orders of the court; preserving to all the authorities of the church, the patron and parishioners, a right to institute the proceedings.

“When the chancel is repaired by a spiritual incumbent, the proceeding just described will in every respect apply; but in cases where a lay rector or other impropiator is bound to repair, it may not be expedient to enforce a sentence given in a civil suit by sequestration issuing from the ecclesiastical court; but we anticipate no inconvenience from this circumstance, if the suggestions we have made for carrying the process of the provincial courts into effect be adopted. The right of bringing these suits should be subjected to the same regulations as those proposed for suits instituted against spiritual incumbents.

“Suits for dilapidations may also be brought upon any vacancy made by the incumbent, against him or his personal representatives, by the successor to the benefice. This jurisdiction, which is enjoyed in common with the courts of common law, we think ought to be preserved.

“Doubts have been entertained, whether suits for dilapidations could be brought against perpetual curates. We are humbly of opinion, that all such or any similar persons holding preferment for life, whether in the strict acceptation of the term perpetual curates or not, should, in respect of all property they hold in right of the church, be liable on account of dilapidations to all proceedings which may be lawfully carried on against spiritual rectors or vicars (c).

“During the last half-century, land has frequently, upon enclosures taking place, been allotted to benefices in lieu of tithes; there may be some question whether the general rules applicable to dilapidations could be extended to such allotments;

Known to ecclesiastical law as dilapidations.

Report of ecclesiastical courts commission, 1832.

(c) Vide supra, p. 240; infra, p. 1264.

this doubt should in our judgment be set at rest, by declaring that all property of the church so acquired should with respect to dilapidations be deemed glebe.

"It will be desirable also to invest the provincial courts with power, upon application, to allow mines to be opened and worked, upon conditions equitable and fair to the persons at present holding spiritual preferment and their successors; and in all cases of this description, notice should be given to the patron."

Definition in The Parson's Counsellor.

A dilapidation, according to "The Parson's Counsellor" (d), is the pulling down, or destroying in any manner, any of the houses or buildings belonging to a spiritual living, or suffering them to run into ruin or decay; or wasting or destroying the woods of the church; or committing or suffering any wilful waste in or upon the inheritance of the church. And certainly, Degge adds, there can be nothing worse becoming the dignity of a clergyman than non-residence and dilapidations, which for the most part go hand in hand.

Remedies for waste.

The remedies in cases of voluntary waste are several.

It has been said that if a bishop cut down and sell the trees of his bishopric, or a parson or prebendary commit waste, a writ of prohibition of waste lies at common law (e), for which there is a writ in the register (f).

Prohibition.

In the case of Jefferson v. The Bishop of Durham, it was holden, however, that the Court of Common Pleas had no power to issue an original writ of prohibition to restrain a bishop from committing waste in the possessions of his see, at least at the suit of an uninterested person (g).

Suit in ecclesiastical court.

Further, it was holden in the Bishop of Salisbury's Case (h) that the ecclesiastical courts might punish a bishop, parson, or other ecclesiastical person for cutting down trees upon the lands, unless it be for reparations of their ecclesiastical houses, and for doing or suffering to be done any dilapidations; and Lord Coke thinks that dilapidations (which in the ecclesiastical courts clearly include waste) are sufficient cause for deposing or depriving a bishop (i); but the circumstances must be of a very aggravated character which would warrant such a sentence.

Injunction.

The High Court of Justice will grant an injunction at the suit of the patron to restrain waste (k). And it is said that a similar injunction will be granted against a bishop at the suit of the attorney-general (l).

(l) Jefferson v. Bp. of Durham, 1 B. & P. p. 105.

But the patron cannot pray an account of the waste already committed, for he cannot have any profit from the living (m).

It has sometimes been thought that an action for damages by the succeeding incumbent against his predecessor, or the personal representatives of his predecessor, would lie in all cases of waste. So Gibson (n) and, following him, Dr. Burn (o) are of opinion. The point seems to have been rather assumed than decided in the case of Huntley v. Russell (p), where a new gravel pit had been opened and part of the gravel therein sold by the incumbent, and his representatives were holden liable in an action for the value of the gravel. The point, however, was very carefully considered in the case of Ross v. Adcock (q); and the Common Pleas held that the right of a rector to recover from the representatives of his predecessor damages at law for waste was confined to the case of dilapidations to houses and buildings, and did not extend to waste committed by digging gravel on the glebe.

Whether action for damages.

Ross v. Adcock.

It had been previously holden that no action for damages would lie against the executors of a prior incumbent for miscultivation of the glebe land (r).

Bird v. Relph.

It was at one time thought that an ecclesiastical person had a right to open mines (s), but the law is now well settled to the contrary (t). In Bartlett v. Phillips (u), the coal under parts of the glebe of a vicarage had, at different times since 1756, with the consent of the vicars for the time being, been gotten by the persons working adjoining collieries, and royalties had been paid to the vicars for the time being, the working being conducted solely by underground passages from the adjoining collieries without entering on the surface of the glebe. In 1844 the then vicar demised the minerals in the glebe to a mining company, and he received considerable sums by way of royalty from this company. It was holden by the lords justices that the mines were not old ones previously opened, that the vicar had no right to receive these royalties, and that they must be invested for the permanent benefit of the living.

Opening
mines.

In the case of Holden v. Weekes (v) it was holden, that the incumbent of a living could not open mines without the consent of the patron and ordinary; and that it was doubtful whether he could do so with such consent. And more recently in The (v) 1 J. & H. p. 278; 6 Jur., N. S. p. 1288; 30 L. J., Ch. p. 35.

Ecclesiastical Commissioners v. Wodehouse (u), the Court expressed an opinion that an incumbent, even with the consent of the patron and ordinary, had, under the general law, no right to open mines.

Upon a bill by patron to have an agreement between himself and the incumbent, for opening and working mines, declared void and cancelled, and to restrain future workings—the court declared that the workings were not lawful; but, being of opinion, that if duly authorized, the workings would be beneficial to the living, directed an inquiry what steps should be taken to obtain the concurrence of all necessary parties, and gave liberty to continue the workings in the meantime, subject to account (r). Under recent statutes, however, the Ecclesiastical Commissioners have power to sanction the opening of mines by incumbents in certain cases (w).

Cutting timber.

As regards the felling of timber, it was decided by Lord Eldon in the case of Wither v. The Dean and Chapter of Winchester (x), that ecclesiastical bodies, having the right to fell timber for the repairs of their buildings, are not bound necessarily to apply the specific timber, where it has grown upon portions of their property in parts of the country very distant (in this case eighteen miles) from the buildings to be repaired.

In the case, however, of The Duke of Marlborough v. St. John (y), this right of selling timber for repairs was much doubted, and the circumstance that the rector had applied a much larger sum in the repairs of the rectory house than the proceeds of the sale of timber cut by him, was holden not to be an answer to a case made against him of cutting and selling timber in a suit instituted by the patron.

And in the case of Sowerby v. Fryer (z), the purposes for which a vicar is entitled to cut timber are limited to proper and necessary repairs for the vicarage house, buildings, and premises. He may not, it was said, fell timber for the purpose of making a general repairing fund; and the expression of Lord Hardwicke, in Knight v. Mosely (a), that “parsons have been indulged in selling timber and stone where the money has been applied in repairs,” merely means that where the trees or the quarries are far distant from the spot where they are wanted, the timber or stone may be sold, and similar materials purchased on the spot with the proceeds.

Chancels, houses, fences and buildings.

As to chancels, and the houses, fences and buildings (b) on an ecclesiastical benefice, some alteration in the general law and a total alteration in the mode of procedure has been made by the Ecclesiastical Dilapidations Act, 1871 (34 & 35 Vict. c. 43).

This act, however, is for the most part confined to the case of the parochial clergy; and for many purposes the old law remains still material.

The old law is expressed in the following constitutions and statutes: Old law as to dilapidations.

“If the rector of a church at his death shall leave the houses of the church ruinous or decayed, so much shall be deducted out of his ecclesiastical goods as shall be sufficient to repair the same, and to supply the other defects of the church. The same we do decree concerning those vicars who have all the revenues of the church, paying a moderate pension. For inasmuch as they are bound to the premises, such portion may well be deducted, and ought to be reckoned amongst the debts. Always, nevertheless, having a reasonable regard to the revenues of the church, when such deduction is to be made” (c). Constitution of Edmund.

“We do ordain, that no inquisition to be made concerning the defects of houses or other things belonging to an ecclesiastical benefice, shall avail to the prejudice of another, unless it be made by credible persons sworn in form of law, the party interested being first cited thereunto. And the whole sum estimated for the defects of houses or other things belonging to ecclesiastical benefices, whether found by inquisition, or by way of composition made, the diocesan of the place shall cause it to Constitution of Mepham.

13 Eliz. c. 10. By 13 Eliz. c. 10, "Where divers and sundry ecclesiastical persons of this realm, being endowed and possessed of ancient palaces, mansion houses, and other edifices and buildings belonging to their ecclesiastical benefices or livings have, of late years, not only suffered the same, for want of due reparations, partly to run to great ruin and decay, and in some part utterly to fall down to the ground, converting the timber, lead, and stones to their own benefit and commodity; but also have made deeds of gift, colourable alienations, and other conveyances of like effect of their goods and chattels in their lifetime to the intent and of purpose, after their deaths, to defeat and defraud their successors of such just actions and remedies as otherwise they might and should have had for the same against their executors or administrators of their goods by the laws ecclesiastical of this realm, to the great defacing of the state ecclesiastical and intolerable charges of their successors and evil precedent and example for others, if speedy remedy be not provided:" it is therefore enacted, "that if any archbishop bishop dean archdeacon provost, treasurer, chaunter, chancellor, prebendary, or any other having any dignity or office in any cathedral or collegiate church within this realm; or if any parson, vicar or other incumbent of any ecclesiastical living whereunto belong any house or houses, or other buildings, which by law or custom he is bound to keep and maintain in reparation, do make any deed or gift, or alienation or other like conveyance of his movable goods or chattels, to the intent and purpose aforesaid, that then the successor and successors of him that shall make such deed of gift or alienation, shall and may commence suit and have such remedy in any ecclesiastical court of this realm competent for the matter against him or them to whom such deed of gift or alienation shall be so made, for the amendment and reparation of so much of the said dilapidations and decays or just recompense of the same as hath happened by his fact or default, in such sort as he might or ought to have, if he or they to whom such deed of gift or alienation shall be so made, were executor or executors of the testament and last will of him that made such deed or deeds of gift or alienation, or were administrator or administrators of his goods or chattels . . ." (f).

How actions first arose.

Sir Simon Degge says, suits for dilapidations are most properly and naturally to be brought in the spiritual courts: and no prohibition lies. But nevertheless, he says, the successor may (if he will) upon the custom of England, have a special action upon the case against the dilapidator, his executors or administrators (g).

(g) Degge, pt. 1, c. 8; Wats. c. 39,

In the case of Bunbury v. Hewson, H., the incumbent of a vicarage, died leaving the buildings of the vicarage out of repair. B. succeeded him, and died, whereupon S. was appointed. The premises still being dilapidated, the executrix of B. was compelled to pay S. the amount necessary to put them in repair, and she then brought an action against the executor of H., and it was holden that the action was maintainable. It was also holden that the custom of England for rectors and vicars to leave their houses in repair to their successors, was transferred to Wales by 27 Hen. 8, c. 26 (h).

Action by executor against executor.

Custom applies to Wales.

It seems to have been at one time doubted, but it is now clearly settled, that a perpetual curate is liable for dilapidations (i). A vicar choral, if he have a house by virtue of his office, is similarly liable (j).

What persons liable.

Though the law allowed the payment of dilapidations before legacies, yet the same were not to be paid before other debts (k). In fact the executor of a deceased incumbent was bound to satisfy simple contract debts before paying for dilapidations by the testator. Therefore, in a suit on the custom of England for dilapidations, by the successor of a deceased incumbent against the executor, it was a good plea that, since the commencement of the suit, defendant had paid simple contract debts, leaving no assets to be administered (l). It seems, however, that in the administration of equitable assets in the Court of Chancery claims for dilapidations were satisfied pari passu with specialty and simple contract debts (m). And since the Ecclesiastical Dilapidation Acts a claim under those acts has been decided to rank as a debt (n).

Ranking of payments for dilapidations.

In Hubbard v. Beckford (o) and in Wingfield v. Watkins (p), Lord Stowell held the sequestrator liable to demands for dilapidations, and overruled the objection, that he was not liable for more than the surplus on rendering his account. Now, however, the duties of a sequestrator in this matter are limited to those imposed by the Ecclesiastical Dilapidations Acts; and he is not now liable to pay the balance left in his hands upon avoidance of the benefice, to meet repairs (q).

Former liability of sequestrator for dilapidations.

Essex (s), the court directed the balance of a sequestrator's account remaining in the registry, upon the death of the incumbent (who had been discharged under the Insolvent Debtors Act, and an assignee appointed), to be paid to the assignee, although no personal representative was before the court.

Where incumbent has not legal estate.

In a declaration by a vicar against his predecessor for dilapidations, he averred that he was seised in right of his vicarage: it appeared that part of the premises were copyhold, and devised to the master and senior fellows of a college, in trust to permit the vicar to receive the profits arising therefrom, after deducting certain charges which might accrue to the lord of the manor, or the expenses attending the repairs of the premises:—It was holden that the legal estate was vested in the trustees; that the use was not executed within the statute 9 Geo. 2, c. 36, and consequently that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover (t).

Where successive rectors had been in possession of land for above fifty years past, but in an action for dilapidations, brought by the present against the late rector, it appeared that the absolute seisin in fee of the same land was in certain devisees, by a devise since 9 Geo. 2, c. 36, and that no conveyance was inrolled according to the first section of that act, nor any disposition of it made to any college, (i.e., according to the fourth section,) it has been holden, that no presumption could be made of any such conveyance inrolled, and consequently that the rector had no title to the land, as the statute avoids all grants, &c., in trust for any charitable use made otherwise than is thereby directed, though in fact it appeared that the title to the rectory was in Balliol College, Oxford (u).

Dilapidations on exchange of livings.

It has been already pointed out that cross claims for dilapidations arising on an exchange of livings, may be waived by the two incumbents, both before and since the Ecclesiastical Dilapidations Acts, without such waiver being treated as simoniacal or illegal (x).

14 Eliz. c. 11.

By 14 Eliz. c. 11, s. 6, "all sums of money hereafter to be recovered for or in the name of dilapidations, by sentence, composition, or otherwise, shall, within two years after such receipt, be truly employed upon the buildings and reparations, in respect whereof such money for dilapidations shall be paid; on pain that every person so receiving and not employing as aforesaid, shall forfeit double as much as so shall be by him received and not employed; the which forfeiture shall be to the use of the queen's majesty, her heirs and successors" (y).

the rectory-house into a finished state of repair, but are only bound to restore what is actually in decay, and to make such repairs as are absolutely necessary for the preservation of the premises. If the present incumbent has repaired with timber which grew on the glebe, the executors of the late incumbent are entitled to be allowed for the value of such timber in the estimate of dilapidations due from them (z).

In Wise v. Metcalfe it was holden that an incumbent of a living is bound to keep the parsonage-house and chancel in good and substantial repair, restoring and rebuilding when necessary, according to the original form, without addition or modern improvement; but he is not bound to supply or maintain anything in the nature of ornament, such as painting (unless that be necessary to preserve exposed timber from decay), and whitewashing and papering; and in an action for dilapidations against the executors of a deceased rector by the successor, the damages are to be calculated upon this principle (a). This case contains an exposition of the whole law on this subject (b).

Properly speaking a faculty or licence should be obtained from the ordinary before alterations of importance are made in the parsonage-house or buildings. It has, however, been decided that it is not a dilapidation to pull down without a faculty old farm buildings and erect new ones, if the new ones are better than the old ones (c). Faculties, however, are not infrequently granted for such purposes.

When faculty required.

Sheds or hovels of wood erected by an incumbent are removable by his representatives after his death, and no dilapidations can be claimed in respect of their removal, or à fortiori their bad state of repair (d).

Removal of buildings.

In a case where a rector erected in the garden of the rectory, apart from the rectory house (e), hot-houses about seventy feet long, and between ten and twenty feet high, consisting of a frame and glasswork resting on brick walls about two feet high, and embedded in mortar on these walls: it was holden, that he or his executors in a reasonable time after his death were entitled to remove them, without incurring any liability as for either dilapidations or waste (f).

SECT. 2.—*The Ecclesiastical Dilapidations Acts.*34 & 35 Vict.
c. 43.

It is now time to notice 34 & 35 Vict. c. 43, the Ecclesiastical Dilapidations Act, 1871, and the amending act, 35 & 36 Vict. c. 96. The first act came into operation on August 1st, 1871. It provides as follows :

Explanation of terms.

Sect. 3. "The term 'benefice' in this act shall comprehend all rectories with cure of souls, vicarages, perpetual curacies, donatives, endowed public chapels, and parochial chapelries, and chapelries or districts belonging or reputed to belong, or annexed or reputed to be annexed, to any church or chapel.

"The term 'patron' shall, with reference to any benefice, mean the person or persons or corporation who, in case such benefice were vacant, would be entitled to present thereto ; but if the right to present to such benefice shall be vested in different persons or corporations, whether jointly or by way of alternate presentations, the term patron shall (unless the context requires otherwise) comprehend both or all such different persons or corporations in whom such right of joint or alternate presentations shall for the time being be vested ; and as regards the patrons referred to in sections 126, 127 and 128 of the act 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106 (g), the actions of or towards such patrons required by this act shall be performed in the manner stated in such sections 126, 127 and 128, as if the said sections were here repeated and made applicable to the provisions of this act.

"The term 'surveyor' shall mean the official surveyor elected under this act, except where otherwise described.

"The term 'governors' shall mean the governors of the Bounty of Queen Anne for the augmentation of the maintenance of the poor clergy.

"The term 'the archdeacon' shall mean the archdeacon of the archdeaconry within which the benefice is situated with regard to which the provisions of this act are sought to be applied.

"The term 'the rural dean' shall mean the rural dean of the rural deanery within which the benefice is situated with regard to which the provisions of this act are sought to be applied."

What included as buildings.

Sect. 4. "The provisions of this act respecting buildings belonging to a benefice shall apply to all such houses of residence, chancels, walls, fences, and other buildings and things as the incumbent of the benefice is by law or custom bound to maintain in repair."

Building out of diocese.

Sect. 5. "For the purposes of this act any building belonging to a benefice shall be deemed to be within the diocese of the bishop under whose jurisdiction the benefice is, although the building be not in fact locally situate within that diocese."

Who to have bishops' powers.

By sects. 6 and 7, archbishops are in their diocese to have the powers here given to bishops. The guardians of the spirituali-ties during a vacancy, and the person lawfully empowered to exercise his general jurisdiction in the diocese when a bishop is incapacitated, are to exercise the bishop's powers.

As to surveyors of dilapidations :—

Sect. 8. "A surveyor or surveyors of ecclesiastical dilapidations shall be appointed in and for each diocese by the archdeacons and rural deans, if any, of such diocese, assembled at a meeting convened for that purpose, at which the bishop of the diocese, or in his absence the senior archdeacon present, as to the date of his appointment as archdeacon, shall preside. Every such appointment may be general or for a limited term, and may be for the whole or part of the diocese as shall be stated in the appointment, and shall be subject to the approval of the bishop of the diocese; the bishop shall have power to hear any complaint against the surveyor of neglect, breach of duty, or unfitness for his office, and to remove him from his office after giving him an opportunity of showing cause to the contrary. No surveyor appointed under the provisions of this act shall have any claim to compensation in consequence of the repeal or any alteration of this act."

Surveyors for each diocese.

Sect. 9. "On a vacancy occurring in the office of surveyor, a fit person shall in like manner be appointed within three months from the occurrence of such vacancy."

Their successors.

Sect. 10. "The surveyor shall be paid according to a rate of charges, and not by way of salary, and such charges and also the fees of the bishop's secretary and registrar for work done in pursuance of this act, shall be fixed in each diocese by the bishop, the archdeacons, the rural deans, if any, and the chancellor for the time being of such diocese, assembled at a meeting convened for that purpose, who may from time to time, at a meeting convened for that purpose, revise and alter such rate of charges and fees; but if any such alteration of surveyors' charges be made after the buildings belonging to any benefice shall have been inspected pursuant to this act by a surveyor, the payment of such surveyor for such inspection, and for all subsequent proceedings after such inspection with reference thereto, shall be according to the rate of charges in force at the time of making such inspection."

Payment of surveyors by fixed rate of charges.

By 35 & 36 Vict. c. 96, s. 3, the two archbishops, with their vicars general and the lord chancellor, with consent of the lords of the Treasury, may at any time during 1873 review the rates of fees of secretaries, registrars and surveyors charged under the preceding sections, and may ordain in lieu thereof one uniform table, which they may alter from time to time; this table to be submitted to the Queen in council, and generally dealt with like the tables of fees framed under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106, s. 131, and 30 & 31 Vict. c. 135 (h).

35 & 36 Vict. c. 96.

Power to fix uniform scale of fees and charges.

The powers given by this section have apparently never been exercised.

(h) Vide supra, pp. 107, 356.

34 & 35 Vict.
c. 43.

By 34 & 35 Vict. c. 43, s. 11, the surveyor is not to be interested in contracts made under that act.

As to inspections at other times than when a benefice is vacant :—

Inspection
ordered at request of archdeacon, rural dean, patron, or incumbent.

Sect. 12. "It shall be lawful for the bishop, on the complaint in writing of the archdeacon, or of the rural dean, or of the patron of a benefice, that the buildings of the benefice are in a state of dilapidation, or at the request of the incumbent, to direct the surveyor to inspect the buildings of the benefice, or any of them; provided always, that a copy of such complaint shall be forwarded by the bishop to the incumbent, or the sequestrator, if any, one month before such inspection shall be ordered."

As to a benefice under sequestration.

Sect. 13. "As regards a benefice put under sequestration, the bishop may, within six months after such sequestration issued, direct the surveyor to inspect as aforesaid, and such inspection shall be renewed in every fifth year while such benefice shall be under sequestration."

It has been decided that sequestrators of benefices to which this act applies ought now to repair only upon a survey made under the act (i).

Form of report and service on incumbent.

Sect. 14. "The surveyor shall as soon as conveniently may be after such direction inspect, and within one month after inspection send to the bishop a report of the result of the same, and shall send a copy to the incumbent, and to the sequestrator, if any."

Its contents.

Sect. 15. "Where the surveyor shall report that any works are needed for putting into repair any dilapidated building belonging to a benefice, he shall report,—

1. What works are so needed, specifying the same in detail :
2. What he estimates to be the probable cost of such works :
3. At or within what time or times such works respectively ought to be executed."

Objections by incumbent,
and reference thereon.

Sect. 16. "The incumbent, or the sequestrator, if any, may within one month after the sending the said copy, state in writing to the bishop objections to the report on any grounds of fact or law, and in such case the bishop may, if he shall think fit, at the expense of the party objecting, direct a second report to be made by another surveyor or take the opinion of counsel upon any question of law, and the bishop shall, after due consideration of the whole matter, give his decision in writing.

"If no objections to the report shall be made, then, at the end of the period limited for making objections thereto, the report shall be final: and if objections shall have been made, then the report, as modified by the bishop's decision, shall be final."

Incumbent to execute works.

Sect. 19. "In case of a benefice not under sequestration, it shall be the duty of the incumbent to execute the repairs prescribed in the final report in the manner and at or within the time or times therein prescribed, or within such extended time or times as the bishop shall by writing under his hand direct."

By sect. 17, the incumbent may borrow from the governors, with the consent of the bishop and patron, upon the security of the benefice,—

Incumbent may borrow from the governors.

"(1.) The whole or any part of the sum stated in the final report as the cost of the works:

(2.) Such sum as the governors shall think fit in respect of costs and expenses."

By 35 & 36 Vict. c. 96, s. 1, the amount lent is never to exceed in the whole three years' net income of the benefice.

35 & 36 Vict. c. 96.

By the same section, "In fixing the terms of future advances, the governors may either lend moneys, to be repaid by annual instalments with interest on the principal money, or by a fixed sum or sums payable yearly in the form of a terminable annuity, but the rate of interest to be used in all computations shall not exceed four pounds per centum per annum. Upon the appointment of a new incumbent the mortgage term of repayment may be extended in respect of the balance of any loan, if the governors shall so direct, to be certified by a memorandum under the hand of their secretary, endorsed upon or attached to the deed and counterpart, such extension to be kept within the limits prescribed by the said recited acts," i.e., those contained in the schedule to 34 & 35 Vict. c. 43, and mentioned under sect. 62 (k).

Not more than three years' income.

Loans may be made to be repaid in instalments with interest or by annuity.

Alteration of mortgage term.

By sect. 2. "It shall be lawful for the governors, with the consent in writing, under the hand only, of the mortgagor or of his successor, to change the day of the date of the annual payments payable to them under any mortgage deed, provided that they do not thereby lengthen the period for which the benefice or preferment is encumbered."

Power to change the day of the date of annual payments.

Various subsequent statutes, that is to say, 44 & 45 Vict. c. 25, 49 & 50 Vict. c. 34, and 50 & 51 Vict. c. 38, have enabled the governors to extend the term of payment (l). The term may also specially be extended, in cases coming under 49 & 50 Vict. c. 54, by sect. 12 of that act (m).

Later statutes.

By 34 & 35 Vict. c. 43, s. 18, the sum lent shall be placed in the books of the governors to an account entitled "The Dilapidation Account of A. B., incumbent of _____;" and out of it the governors shall pay the costs and expenses incidental to the completion of the security.

34 & 35 Vict. c. 43.

The governors to keep a dilapidation account.

Sect. 20. "In the case of a benefice under sequestration, the sum stated in the final report as the cost of the works shall be a charge upon the moneys from time to time received by the sequestrator in respect of the net profits or income of the benefice in priority to all other charges, except the stipends of the curate or curates appointed to perform the duties attaching to the Sequestrators to pay dilapidation moneys to the governors.

benefice, and the sequestrator shall so long as the sequestration shall remain in force pay so much of such profits as shall remain in his hands after payment of the said stipends to the governors until the whole of the sum stated shall have been paid."

Application of money paid by sequestrators.

By sect. 21, moneys paid in respect of a benefice under sequestration shall be placed in the books of the governors to an account called "The Dilapidation Account of C. D., sequestrator of . ." The repairs may be executed as the moneys are received or deferred, with the consent of the bishop, until the whole sum required shall have been paid, and they shall be paid for out of the moneys standing to the account as in the case of repairs executed by an incumbent; and if any benefice under sequestration shall become vacant before such repairs shall have been completed, an inspection and report shall be made by the surveyor and proceeded with in the same manner as if such benefice had not been under sequestration; and the amount (if any) which shall have been paid to the governors by the sequestrator in respect of repairs, and not expended, shall be carried to the dilapidation account of the new incumbent in reduction of the amount payable by the late incumbent, his executors or administrators.

Proviso in case archdeacon or patron make complaint of want of repairs.

Sect. 22. "Where complaint shall be made by the archdeacon, or the rural dean, or the patron of the benefice as aforesaid, if the incumbent shall, within twenty-one days after notice of such complaint shall have been given as aforesaid, inform the bishop in writing that he intends forthwith to put his buildings in proper repair, the bishop shall allow the incumbent a reasonable time to execute such repairs, and on being satisfied that such repairs have been fully executed shall abstain from further proceedings; but the bishop may during the progress and after the completion of such repairs direct the surveyor to inspect and report thereon, and if the surveyor shall report that the repairs are insufficient direct the surveyor to inspect and report upon such repairs; and if he shall report that further repairs are necessary, then the powers of this act shall or may be put in force in like manner as if the incumbent had not given notice that he intended himself to do the repairs."

Execution of works on neglect, &c., of incumbent.

Sect. 23. "If any incumbent shall refuse or neglect duly to execute in the prescribed manner, and at or within the prescribed time or times, any prescribed repairs, it shall be lawful for the bishop to raise the sum prescribed in the final report, if not otherwise provided by the incumbent, together with all costs incurred by the bishop in relation thereto, by sequestration of the profits of the benefice, and the provisions contained in sections 20 and 21 with respect to the payment of the profits of the benefice to the governors and the application of the money shall be applicable to this section."

Avoidance of benefice not to affect report,
&c.

Sect. 24. "No report, order, or proceedings thereunder shall be affected by a vacancy occurring in the benefice before the commencement or pending the execution of the works prescribed by the report, but such report shall be acted on as if such vacancy had not occurred, subject nevertheless to any modification which may be made therein in consequence of any report of the surveyor after his inspections made in consequence of such vacancy, in pursuance of provisions hereinafter specified."

As to the houses of residence of archbishops, bishops, deans, and canons, the only provisions are as follows:—

Sect. 25. "It shall be lawful for any archbishop or bishop and for the holder of any dignity or office (n) in any cathedral or collegiate church to employ any surveyor, approved for the purpose by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, to inspect and examine any house of residence or other building appurtenant thereto of such archbishop or bishop, or belonging to any such dignity or office which he is by law or custom bound to maintain in repair at his own personal cost."

Houses belonging to dignitaries. Archbishop or bishop may require inspection.

Sect. 26. "Where, in the opinion of such surveyor, founded on any such inspection, any works are needed for putting into a proper state of repair the house of residence or other building inspected, he shall report what works are so needed, and at or within what time or times such works or any particular part or parts thereof ought to be executed."

Works to be prescribed.

Sect. 27. "A certificate of such surveyor that such works have been duly executed, which shall be filed in the registry of the diocese in duplicate, and one of the duplicates whereof shall be delivered or sent by the registrar to the archbishop or bishop, to whose see or to the person to whose dignity or office, as the case may be, the certificate relates, shall be conclusive evidence of the due execution of such works."

Evidence of execution of works.

Sect. 28. "If the archbishoprick or bishoprick, dignity, or office to which the certificate shall relate shall become vacant within the period of five years from the filing of such certificate, the archbishop or bishop, or the holder of the dignity or office, as the case may be, or his representatives respectively, shall not, as to such house of residence or other building, be liable to any claim for dilapidations in respect of such archbishoprick or bishoprick, dignity, or office, either under this act or at the suit of any successor independently of this act, except for wilful waste and loss or damage by fire; but this exemption from liability shall be subject to the like condition in regard to insurance against fire as is contained in the 47th section in the case of the incumbent of a benefice" (o).

Protection of archbishops or bishops from further liability.

As to the estates of archbishops and bishops the following provisions occur in recent acts, and do not seem to be repealed by the 34 & 35 Vict. c. 43 act:—

By 23 & 24 Vict. c. 124, s. 9, "The estates committee (p)

23 & 24 Vict. c. 124.

p. 1261.

shall cause the property assigned as an endowment for any see as aforesaid to be inspected so often as they think fit, and shall cause notice in writing of all dilapidations or want of repair found on such inspection, and of the repairs or works necessary for remedying the same, to be given to the archbishop or bishop of such see, and such archbishop or bishop shall forthwith do or cause to be done, at his or their own expense, or at the expense of his or their lessees or tenants (as the case may require), the repairs or works mentioned in such notice; and if any difference arise between such archbishop or bishop and the estates committee with regard to the condition of such property, or the repairs or works required by the estates committee, the matter in difference shall be referred to arbitration as hereinafter provided."

29 & 30 Vict. c. 111.

Provision as to dilapidations on episcopal estates.

By 29 & 30 Vict. c. 111, s. 12, "No archbishop or bishop succeeding to a see shall have any claim against his predecessor therein, or against the representatives of such predecessor in respect of dilapidations on the estate forming the endowment of such see, but all the claims, rights, remedies, and powers of recovery which the archbishop or bishop so succeeding as aforesaid would legally have had as against his predecessor or the representatives of such predecessor in respect of dilapidations if this act had not passed shall belong to and be possessed by the said commissioners, and may be enforced and exercised on their behalf by the estates committee, who shall pay due regard to any just and reasonable claims for special consideration which any archbishop or bishop so vacating his see, or his representative, may appear to them to possess, on the ground of the actual state or repair of the buildings on the estate at the time of its transfer to him from the commissioners: Provided always, that this section shall not extend to the case of any dilapidations occurring in or about the house or houses of residence belonging to any see or in or about the appurtenances of any such house or houses."

Further provision as to dilapidations on episcopal estates.

Sect. 13. "The estates committee shall make or cause to be made such inspection of the whole or any part of the property forming the endowment of any see as is contemplated by sect. 9 of 23 & 24 Vict. c. 124, "whenever they may be reasonably required so to do by the archbishop or bishop of such see by writing under his hand, as well as at any other times at which such inspection may appear to them to be necessary or desirable."

As to vacant benefices (q):—

34 & 35 Vict. c. 43.

Inspection of buildings of a

By sect. 29 of 34 & 35 Vict. c. 43, "Within three calendar months after the avoidance of any benefice . . . unless the late incumbent shall under this act be free from all liability to

(q) This does not apply to the case of archbishops, bishops, deans or canons; and it would seem therefore that the contingency of a vacancy in any of their offices is not provided for by the act, except in cases falling under sect. 28.

dilapidations, the bishop shall direct the surveyor who shall inspect the buildings of such benefice, and report to the bishop what sum, if any, is required to make good the dilapidations to which the late incumbent or his estate is liable, and the late incumbent, his executors or administrators, shall have right of entry at reasonable hours, with his or their surveyor, upon the premises of the vacated benefice until such time as the question of the dilapidations has been finally settled.”

benefice on a vacancy.

It was decided in the case of Gleaves v. Murriner (r) that the surveyor was not bound to report or even to inspect within the three months mentioned in this section; and in Caldow v. Pixell (s) that the bishop was not bound to direct him within the three months: that is, it was holden in each case that orders made upon surveyors' reports could be enforced though the reports were thus belated.

These times are directory only, not essential.

By sect. 30, the surveyor shall send copies of the report to the new incumbent, and the late incumbent, his executors or administrators. He shall certify to the bishop how each copy was sent.

Report of inspection to be sent to bishop, new incumbent and late incumbent, or his representatives.

Sect. 31. “The report shall state what works, if any, are, in the opinion of the surveyor, needed, specifying the same in detail, and may state any special circumstances, and shall state what sum, in the opinion of the surveyor, will be required to make good the dilapidations.”

Contents of report.

Sect. 32. “The new incumbent and the late incumbent, his executors or administrators, may state in writing to the bishop objections to the report on any grounds of fact or law, and in such case the bishop may, if he shall think fit, at the expense of the party objecting, direct a second report to be made by some competent person, or take the opinion of counsel upon any question of law.”

Objections to the report.

Sect. 33. “Such objections shall be transmitted to the bishop within one month after the sending of the copy of the report to the party by whom they are made, but the bishop may receive an objection transmitted at a later period if for any special reason he shall think fit to do so.”

Time for objecting.

Sect. 34. “The bishop shall in uncontested cases, as soon as conveniently may be after the time for the transmission of objections has expired, and in contested cases after consideration of the whole matter, make an order stating the repairs and their cost for which the late incumbent, his executors or administrators, is or are liable.”

The bishop to make an order.

Sect. 35. “The order shall be signed by the bishop in triplicate, and he shall send one copy to the new incumbent, another to the late incumbent, his executors or administrators, and the other to the registrar of the diocese, to be filed in the registry, and the registrar shall send a copy thereof to the governors.”

Delivery of bishop's order.

Sect. 42. “The new incumbent shall cause the repairs specified

Repairs to be executed within eighteen months.

in the order to be executed within eighteen months after the date of the order, unless, with the consent of the patron and bishop, he shall decide upon rebuilding the premises in question, in which case the money standing to the credit of his dilapidation account in the books of the governors shall be applied towards the cost of the new building."

Sum payable for dilapidation to be a debt due.

Sect. 36. "The sum stated in the order as the cost of the repairs shall be a debt due from the late incumbent, his executors or administrators, to the new incumbent, and shall be recoverable as such at law or in equity."

Ranking of debts so payable.

It has been decided that this debt ranks in the administration of the estate of a deceased incumbent pari passu with other debts, though under the old law dilapidations were sometimes postponed to debts (t).

50 & 51 Vict.
c. 23.

Set-off of dilapidation moneys against pension.

The pension payable to a retired incumbent under the Incumbents Resignation Acts must generally be paid without deduction, and cannot be charged or incumbered. But now, by 50 & 51 Vict. c. 23, s. 6, "If a retired clerk shall on retirement have become liable to the payment to his successor of any sum on account of dilapidations under the Ecclesiastical Dilapidations Act, 1871, and shall not have paid such sum in manner in the said act mentioned, it shall be lawful for the incumbent of the benefice for the time being to withhold the amounts due from time to time in respect of any pension granted under the principal act, and to apply the same in discharge of the sum due for dilapidations as aforesaid until the whole debt shall have been discharged. Provided that the amount so withheld in any one year shall not exceed one half the total amount of the pension for such year without the consent of the bishop of the diocese in which such benefice shall be situate (u).

Payments to and powers of governors.

By sect. 37, the new incumbent is to pay over the dilapidation money to the governors.

By sect. 38, the governors may advance money to him for the repairs on the security of the benefice (x).

By sect. 39, the governors shall keep a dilapidation account of the moneys received and the moneys lent by them.

By sect. 40, the new incumbent shall pay the balance of the cost of the repairs to the governors within six months.

Extension of time within which such payment must be made.

Sect. 41. "The bishop, if from any special circumstances he think fit, may, upon the application of the new incumbent, enlarge the period within which such incumbent is required to pay such last-mentioned sum for any period not exceeding twelve months from the date of the order, and may authorize the payment of such amount either in one sum or by instalments of such amounts and on such days (not being beyond the end of such twelve months) as the bishop shall determine."

(x) As to the provisions in 35 & 36 Vict. c. 96, ss. 1, 2, affecting these loans, vide supra, p. 1267.

Sect. 43. "If the moneys payable under this act to the governors by the new incumbent of any benefice shall not be paid by such incumbent before the expiration of the time specified in this act for such payment to be made, the governors shall give notice thereof to the bishop, and it shall be lawful for the bishop to raise the amount thereof by sequestration of the profits of the benefice."

Payment of money to governors by new incumbent may be enforced by sequestration.

As to the execution of works:—

By sect. 44, where money is standing to the credit of the dilapidation account of an incumbent required by this act to execute repairs, the surveyor shall certify from time to time that a certain sum is due, and on such certificate, countersigned by the bishop, the governors shall "cause the amount therein specified to be paid to the person or persons named therein as entitled to receive the same."

Payment by governors on execution of works.

By sect. 45, "The repairs to be executed in the case of a benefice under sequestration, and the repairs to be executed in the case of the refusal or neglect of the incumbent to execute the same (including rebuilding or repairing in case of fire), shall be executed under the direction of the surveyor." The surveyor may employ a builder or contractor under a contract and specifications prepared by him; and payments are to be made from time to time as in the last section; "but neither the governors, the bishop, nor the patron, shall incur any liability at law or in equity to any builder or contractor, or otherwise, under or by virtue of any such specification or contract, further than the obligation on the part of the governors to pay the moneys standing to such dilapidation account in manner aforesaid."

Execution of works if benefice under sequestration or on refusal of incumbent.

Sect. 46. "When the repairs shall have been finished, the surveyor, if the same shall be completed to his satisfaction, shall give a certificate of the same having been completed, which certificate shall be in triplicate, and one of the triplicates shall be delivered to the incumbent or the sequestrator, another registered in the registry of the diocese, and the third delivered to the governors, and such certificate shall be conclusive evidence of the due execution of the prescribed works."

Final certificate of completion of works.

Sect. 47. "No further or subsequent report shall be made as to the buildings belonging to the benefice, and specified in the last-mentioned certificate (except at the request of the incumbent himself), before the end of five years from the filing of the said certificate."

Protection to incumbent from further liability for five years.

"If such benefice shall become vacant within such period of five years, the incumbent or his representatives shall not be liable to any claim for dilapidations in respect of the buildings specified in the certificate, except for wilful waste."

"The exemption from liability under this present section shall in no case apply to loss or damage by fire where the incumbent at the time of filing the certificate of the due execution of the works shall not have insured, to the satisfaction of the governors, the house of residence and buildings belonging to the benefice in some fit office against loss or damage by fire, in at least three-fifths of the value thereof, and who shall not keep such house and buildings so insured during such period of five years or until the earlier avoidance of the benefice."

Payment of surveyor, secretary and registrar.

By sect. 48, the charges of the surveyor and the fees of the bishop's secretary and registrar, shall, except as otherwise provided, be paid by the incumbent or by the sequestrator, and shall be a debt due from him or them. When the governors advance a sum in respect of surveyor's charges, it shall be paid by them to the surveyor.

Benefice becoming vacant during repairs, liability of outgoing incumbent or his representatives.

Sect. 49. "If an inspection shall have been made of any benefice under this act, and the incumbent liable to execute the prescribed repairs shall vacate such benefice before the surveyor shall have signed a certificate of the completion of the same, such incumbent, his executors or administrators, shall be liable to the payment of all moneys in respect of such repairs (not previously paid by him to the governors in respect thereof), and of the surveyor's inspection, report, and certificate, which such incumbent would respectively have been liable to pay in case he had not vacated, which moneys shall be a debt due from such incumbent, his executors or administrators, to the next incumbent, and shall be recoverable as such at law or in equity; and such next incumbent, whether he shall recover the same or not, shall be liable to pay all such moneys in the same manner as his predecessor in such incumbency would have been liable to pay in case he had continued to be the incumbent of such benefice, and such next incumbent shall be allowed, with the consent of the patron and bishop, to borrow on the security of the profits of the benefice such sum as he shall fail so to recover towards meeting such payments as the governors may be willing and able by law to advance on loan for that purpose."

Execution of works other than those specified in surveyor's report. Special certificate of surveyor.

Sect. 50. "If the incumbent liable to execute repairs shall be desirous of altering or remodelling the buildings belonging to the benefice, or any of them, or of rebuilding the same or any of them, so as to render such repairs or any of them impracticable or unnecessary, it shall be lawful for such incumbent, with the consent of the bishop and patron, to execute the proposed works in lieu of such repairs; and in such case the surveyor shall, upon the completion of such works to his satisfaction, give a special certificate, certifying that the same have been completed, which certificate shall be signed in triplicate, and one of such triplicates shall be delivered to the incumbent, and another to the bishop, who shall cause the same to be registered in the registry of the diocese, and another to the governors, and such certificate shall have the same effect as a certificate of the completion of the works specified in the order."

Where such additional works do not render im-

Sect. 51. "If such additional or substituted works shall not render the whole of such repairs impracticable or unnecessary, then so much of the money standing to the credit of the dilapidation account as the surveyor shall certify to be necessary for the execution of the repairs not so rendered impracticable or unnecessary shall be retained by the governors, and shall be dealt with, as regards certificates and otherwise, in the same manner as if the repairs not so rendered impracticable or unnecessary had been the only repairs specified in the order.”

practicable or unnecessary all the works specified in the report.

Sect. 52. “If an incumbent, after having paid to the governors the amount specified in the report, desire to defer the execution of the works specified in the report, or any of them, for a limited period, and the surveyor shall certify in writing that such postponement may be safely made, the bishop, with the consent of the patron, may authorize such postponement, and may require the incumbent to pay to the governors such a sum, annually or in gross, as shall be certified by the surveyor to be proper to meet any probable further dilapidations, and the moneys so paid shall be carried to the credit of his dilapidation account; and if the benefice shall be vacated during the period of postponement, the late incumbent, his executors or administrators, shall not be entitled to be repaid any part of such additional moneys, but he or they shall not be subject to any further claim for dilapidations, and in case of such vacancy the money paid by him to the governors shall be dealt with as if the succeeding incumbent upon his succeeding to the benefice, had paid the same in respect of such repairs and dilapidations.”

Postponement of works may be allowed on payment of a sum to meet probable further dilapidations.

Sect. 53. “No sum shall be recoverable for dilapidations in respect of any benefice . . . to which this act shall be applicable, unless the claim for such sum be founded on an order made under the provisions of this act.”

No sum recoverable for dilapidations except on a surveyor's report.

As to insurance (y) :—

Sect. 54. “The incumbent of every benefice shall insure, and during his incumbency keep insured, the house of residence and farm and other buildings for the time being standing on the lands belonging to such benefice, and the outbuildings and offices respectively belonging thereto, and also the chancel of the church when the incumbent is liable to repair the chancel, against loss or damage by fire, in some office or offices for insurance against loss or damage by fire, to be selected by such incumbent, to the satisfaction of the governors, in at least three-fifths of the value thereof.”

Insurance of buildings of a benefice by the incumbent.

Sect. 55. “Every such insurance shall be effected in the joint names of the incumbent and the governors, and the incumbent shall cause the receipt for the premium for such insurance for each year to be exhibited at the first visitation of the bishop or archdeacon next ensuing after the same shall become payable; and the following questions shall be added to those annually sent to incumbents under the provisions of” 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106 (z),

Filing of annual receipts for the premium.

(y) Vide supra, pp. 1135, 1137, 1146, as to insurance on residence houses built under the provisions of the acts there mentioned.

"that is to say, 'In what office and for what amount are the buildings of your benefice insured against fire?' and 'What was the amount and date of the last annual payment for such insurance?'"

Sums received from insurance office on destruction of buildings by fire to be expended in restoring them, &c.

Sect. 56. "In case any building belonging to any benefice, and insured in pursuance of this act, shall be destroyed or damaged by fire, and the office in which the same shall be insured shall elect to pay the sum insured instead of causing the buildings to be reinstated at the expense of the office, the sum so paid shall be paid to the governors and dealt with in the same manner as moneys standing to the credit of a dilapidation account."

Destruction of buildings not insured.

Cost of restoring to be paid by the incumbent, and to be recoverable by sequestration.

By sect. 57, if, when a building shall be destroyed or damaged by fire, such building shall not be insured for an amount sufficient to reinstate the same, the surveyor shall give to the bishop a certificate (in triplicate) specifying the sum which will be required, in addition to the insurance money, for reinstating the building, one of which triplicates shall be filed in the bishop's registry, another sent to the incumbent or sequestrator, and another to the governors; and the incumbent or sequestrator shall have the same opportunity of making objections, and the bishop the same power of consulting another surveyor or taking the opinion of counsel, as are given in sect. 16 (a); and the incumbent, if the benefice is not under sequestration, shall pay the amount so specified to the governors within three months from the date of such certificate; and if the amount is not paid, the bishop may raise the same by sequestration; and the amount so raised shall be paid to the governors, and the moneys paid to the governors shall be dealt with in the same manner as moneys standing to the credit of a dilapidation account, and the incumbent shall cause the building to be forthwith reinstated, and the cost thereof shall be paid as the works progress, on certificates, in the manner specified in sect. 44 (b); and if the incumbent shall refuse or neglect to reinstate such building, it may be reinstated as if it were a building belonging to a benefice under sequestration.

If the benefice is under sequestration the sum stated in the certificate of the surveyor shall be a charge upon the moneys from time to time received by the sequestrator as mentioned in sect. 20; and the provisions in sects. 20 and 21 (c), with respect to the payment of the profits of the benefice to the governors and the application of the money, shall apply to this section.

The following are miscellaneous provisions:—

Providing for case of buildings of benefice when let on lease.

Sect. 58. "The provisions contained in this act in regard to buildings standing on the lands belonging to any benefice shall not be applicable to the buildings (if any) belonging to the benefice, which shall be comprised in any lease for years or lives, for the time being subsisting, so long as such lease shall be subsisting, except so far as the lessee shall not, by virtue of such lease, be liable to insure, rebuild, or repair such buildings; but it shall be lawful for the surveyor to inspect the buildings comprised in any such lease."

By sect. 59, when such an exemption is claimed the lease or counterpart shall be produced, unless it has already been deposited in the bishop's registry or with the ecclesiastical commissioners.

By sect. 60, every sum of money raiseable by the bishop by sequestration shall be deemed a debt due from the incumbent; and any money which shall not be recovered by sequestration or otherwise during an incumbency shall continue to be due from the incumbent; and in case of his death while he shall be incumbent, so much thereof as shall remain due shall be paid by his personal representatives.

Remedy on death of incumbent.

Sect. 61. "All moneys which respectively would have been raiseable by the bishop by sequestration during an incumbency, and which shall be paid by a succeeding incumbent, or shall be recovered by sequestration during such succeeding incumbency, shall be a debt due from such prior incumbent or his estate to the incumbent by whom or out of whose income, derived from the benefice, the same shall be paid, and shall be recoverable as such at law or in equity."

Moneys paid to bishop by succeeding incumbent to be a debt due from prior incumbent.

Sect. 62 gives a form of security (d), and provides that the certificate of the treasurer to the governors of any sum having been placed to the credit of the account mentioned in the certificate shall be conclusive evidence of the fact; that the governors shall, for the recovery of the sums due upon the said security, have the same remedies as if the advance had been made for repairing or rebuilding under the provisions of the following acts:—17 Geo. 3, c. 53; 21 Geo. 3, c. 66; 7 Geo. 4, c. 66; 1 & 2 Vict. c. 23; 28 & 29 Vict. c. 69 (e); and that the receipt of the treasurer of the governors shall be a discharge for all moneys paid to them.

Form and effect of security.

Sect. 63. "Before the governors shall lend any money on the security of the possessions of the benefice under the provisions of this act they shall require the incumbent to furnish them with a just and particular account in writing, signed by him and verified by his oath or statutory declaration, of the annual profits of the living, and shall procure the consent in writing of the bishop and patron under their respective hands, or, if the patron shall be a corporation aggregate, under the common seal of such corporation."

Incumbent to furnish particulars of the value of the benefice.

Patron and ordinary to consent.

By sect. 65, moneys paid in to a dilapidation account may be invested; if any surplus remain after paying for the repairs, it shall be applied to pay the principal of any mortgage on the benefice, and subject to this it shall be paid to the incumbent or sequestrator. The governors may from time to time, with the consent of the treasury, frame a scale of percentages on the sums paid to them, to be retained by them for office expenses (f).

Providing for death or change of surveyor during repairs.

Sect. 66. "In case of the death, removal from office, or resignation of a surveyor after making an inspection and before granting his final certificate of the completion of the necessary repairs, the previous acts of such surveyor in regard to such inspection, including his report (if any), shall be adopted by the surveyor appointed to act in his place, who shall proceed in the matter of such inspection, report, and certificate in the same manner as if the inspection had originally been made by him."

Power of surveyor to enter.

Sect. 67 gives power to the surveyor and his servants to enter and inspect the buildings of any benefice, and to execute the works, at seasonable times and hours.

Form of bishop's order and delivery of notices.

Sect. 69. "Every consent by or authority from a bishop under this act shall be in writing under his hand, and all notices, letters, reports, and other documents by this act directed to be sent, delivered, or otherwise notified or given to or left with any bishop, incumbent, officiating clergyman, or person, shall be deemed to have been duly sent, delivered, notified, given, or left respectively, if sent through the post in a prepaid letter, addressed, in the case of an incumbent or officiating minister, to the house of residence of the benefice, or if there shall be no such house of residence, then to one of the churchwardens at his usual place of residence, and in all other cases to the usual or last known place of residence in England of the party."

Existing incumbents (if the bishop consents) not liable to dilapidations for substitution of buildings of equal or greater value. No existing incumbent liable for dilapidations as to buildings pulled down by prior incumbents unless amounts recoverable from prior incumbent.

Sect. 70. "If an incumbent holding a benefice at the time of the commencement of this act shall, prior thereto (without due authority), have caused any buildings belonging to such benefice to be pulled down, and shall have substituted other buildings of equal or greater value, such incumbent shall (if the bishop of the diocese consent) not be liable to dilapidations in respect of the buildings so pulled down, provided such substituted buildings shall have been insured pursuant to this act; and no incumbent holding a benefice at the time of the commencement of this act shall be liable for dilapidations in respect of any buildings which shall have been pulled down by a preceding incumbent, unless the incumbent so holding such benefice shall have received or shall be entitled to recover at law or in equity from the last preceding incumbent or his estate the amount chargeable on account of such dilapidations, and in such case the liability of the existing incumbent shall be limited to the amount so received or recoverable at law or in equity."

Removal of unnecessary part of any glebe house.

Sect. 71. "Wherever it shall appear that any building belonging to or forming part of any house of residence is unneces-

(f) See the London Gazette of April 9, 1872, where is set out a resolution of the governors to retain 1 per cent. of loans for expenses, but never less than ten shillings, or more than five pounds.

sary, it shall be lawful for the bishop, upon the application of the incumbent and with the consent in writing of the patron of the benefice, to authorize by a written instrument under his hand the removal of the said building; and the proceedings, if any, of such removal shall be applied to the improvement of the benefice in such manner as the bishop of the diocese and the patron of the benefice may agree on" (g).

Sects. 72 and 73 save all the powers previously possessed by the bishop, archdeacon, or other ordinary, and the powers and provisions contained in the acts mentioned above under sect. 62 (h). Saving of powers.

By 35 & 36 Vict. c. 96, s. 1, where the powers of these acts are exercised concurrently, the mortgagor need only execute one mortgage deed. 35 & 36 Vict. c. 96.

The form of mortgage given in the first schedule is as follows:— Schedule.

"This indenture made the — day of —, between A. B., incumbent of the benefice of —, in the county of — and diocese of —, of the one part, and the governors of the bounty of Queen Anne for the augmentation of the maintenance of the poor clergy of the other part. Whereas the said governors, pursuant to 'The Ecclesiastical Dilapidations Act, 1871,' upon the request of the said A. B., and with the consent of the bishop and patron (testified by their having signed [or sealed] the instrument of consent hereto annexed), have agreed to advance the sum of — pounds upon the security of the said benefice: Now this indenture witnesseth that the said A. B., in consideration of the sum of — pounds having been carried in the books of the said governors to the credit of an account entitled 'The Dilapidation Account of A. B., incumbent of —,' as evidenced by the certificate hereupon endorsed and signed by the treasurer to the said governors, doth hereby grant unto the said governors all the glebe lands, tithes, rents, rent-charges, moduses, compositions for tithe, salaries, stipends, fees, gratuities, and other emoluments and profits whatsoever arising, coming, growing, renewing, or payable to the incumbent of the said benefice in respect thereof, with all and every their rights, privileges, and appurtenances thereunto belonging, to have, hold, receive, and take the said premises, with their appurtenances, unto the said governors from henceforth for and during the term of thirty-five years in as full, ample, and beneficial manner, and with such remedies and powers for obtaining and recovering the same, and every part thereof, to all intents and purposes, as the said incumbent or his successors could or might or ought to have held, Form of mortgage.

enjoyed, received, and taken the same if these presents had not been made: and the said A. B., for himself, his heirs, executors, and administrators, doth hereby covenant with the said governors that the said A. B., during the time he shall continue incumbent of the said benefice, shall and will well and truly pay or cause to be paid unto the said governors interest for the said sum of — pounds, or so much thereof as shall remain due, at the end of every year, to be computed from the day of the date of these presents, after the rate of — pounds per centum per annum, by yearly payments, the first of the said payments to be made on the — day of — next; and also shall and will, from and after the expiration of one year from the day of the date of these presents, in each and every year during such time as aforesaid, well and truly pay or cause to be paid unto the said governors one equal thirtieth part of the said principal sum of — pounds, the first of such payments to be made on the — day of —, 18 —, and shall and will continue such respective payments of the said interest, and on account of the said principal money, so long as he shall continue incumbent of the said benefice, or so long as during his incumbency anything shall remain due upon the security of these presents: provided always, and these presents are upon this condition, that if the said A. B. and his successors shall well and truly pay or cause to be paid the said principal money and interest for the same, in manner and at the times aforesaid, according to the true intent and meaning of the said act and of these presents, and also all costs and charges which shall have been occasioned by the nonpayment thereof, these presents and everything herein contained shall cease and be void: provided also, that it shall and may be lawful for the said A. B. and his successors peaceably and quietly to hold, occupy, possess, and enjoy all and singular the said glebe lands, tithes, rents, rent-charges, moduses, composition for tithes, stipends, fees, gratuities, and other emoluments and profits whatsoever arising or to arise from or in respect of the said benefice, until default shall be made by him or them, respectively, in the payment of the interest and principal or some part thereof, at the times and in the manner aforesaid. In witness, &c.” (i).

(i) This is the original statutory form; but will require modification where the provisions of 35 & 36

Vict. c. 96, s. 1, are applied. Vide supra, p. 1267.

LETTING AND ALIENATION.

- SECT. 1.—The General Law before the Statutes of Victoria.
 2.—The Exchange of Church Property.
 3.—The Leasing Statutes of Victoria.
 4.—The Sale of Glebe by the Land Commission.
 5.—The Transfer of Property to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners.
 6.—The Extinguishment of old Leasehold Interests.
 7.—The Enfranchisement of Copyholds.

SECT. 1.—The General Law before the Statutes of Victoria.

THE subjects of the actual alienation of church property and the demising or letting of it for purposes of profit are so entangled, owing to the custom of English conveyancers of turning leases into means of alienation, that the two subjects, viz., practical alienation by lease, and ordinary beneficial letting, will be discussed together in this chapter.

It should seem that leases of parsons, which are otherwise conformable to the statutes, are valid, although made by a parson de facto only, and though he is afterwards lawfully deprived of his benefice (a); but that it is different with respect to leases by a bishop de facto, although confirmed by the dean and chapter (b). If a parson make a lease for years of his tithes, it is implied “if he so long continue parson” (c); and the lease determines by his deprivation or resignation (d). But if a parson make a lease for years if he so long live, with covenants for enjoyment accordingly, if he resign, or do any other act whereby he loses the living, covenant will lie against him (e).

Subjects of chapter.

Leases by ecclesiastical persons de facto.

After deprivation or resignation.

(a) 1 Roll. Abr. p. 476, Confirmation (F.), pl. 1; 5 Vin. Abr. p. 366, Confirmation (F.), pl. 1; Costard v. Vinden, Cro. Eliz. p. 775.

(b) O'Brian v. Knivan, Cro. Jac. pp. 552, 554.

(c) Wheeler v. Heydon, Cro. Jac. p. 328; 14 Vin. Abr. p. 68, Grant, (H. 15), pl. 11; 8 Bac. Ab. p. 115, Verdict (M.).

(e) Rudge v. Thomas, 1 Roll. Rep. pp. 403, 404; 3 Bulst. p. 202; 19 Vin. Abr., Residence (D.), p. 148, n., pl. 1.

Therefore it is usual to add this clause, "and still so long continue parson or rector;" which leaves him at liberty to avoid the lease by resignation or otherwise (f). And if a lease be so made, and the parson be afterwards deprived unjustly, the lease is gone and determined, and shall have no longer continuance, although afterwards the deprivation be reversed; but if he appeal from the sentence, then pending the appeal he continues parson until sentence be given (g).

Leases by the common law.

By the common law, bishops with the confirmation of the dean and chapter, master and fellows of any college, deans and chapters, master or guardian of any hospital and his brethren, parson or vicar with the consent of the patron and ordinary, archdeacon, prebendary, or any other body politic, spiritual, and ecclesiastical might have made leases for lives or years without limitation or stint; and so might they have made gifts in tail, or estates in fee, at their will and pleasure; whereupon not only great decay of divine service, but dilapidations and other inconveniences ensued; and therefore they were disabled and restrained by several statutes (h).

By corporations aggregate.

Corporations aggregate, consisting of divers persons, as master and fellows, dean and chapter, might of themselves have made such grants, without confirmation; nor is any confirmation yet required to such leases as they may make by statute (i).

By corporations sole.

But the law did not think fit to trust a single person, or sole corporation, as an archbishop, bishop, archdeacon, prebendary, parson, vicar (k), with the disposition of estates holden in right of the church; and therefore, by way of restraint, appointed the assent and confirmation of some others, without which their grants should not be valid against the successor (l).

Who must confirm leases.

Accordingly, all leases of archbishops and bishops (to bind their successors) were to be confirmed by the dean and chapter, or deans and chapters if there be several chapters; leases of deans, by the bishop and chapter; leases of archdeacons, prebendaries, and the like, by the bishop, dean, and chapter; leases

(i) Gibs. p. 744.

(k) The fee simple of the glebe of a parsonage or vicarage is said by Lord Coke to be in abeyance, and consequently the parson or vicar cannot aliene it (1 Inst. pp.

341a, 342a). As to perpetual curates, see Doe d. Richardson v. Thomas, 9 A. & E. p. 556; 1 Per. & Dav. p. 578; supra, p. 240.

(l) Gibs. p. 744. By a constitution of Archbishop Langton all alienations by abbot, prior, archdeacon, dean, or other having any parsonage or dignity, or any inferior clerk, except according to the form of the canon, were forbidden and made void; and this constitution was to bind "the greater prelates" also: Lind. p. 149. See 1 Inst. p. 44a; Baugh v. Haynes, Cro. Jac. p. 76. For the confirmation of the grant of offices, vide supra, p. 917.

of parsons and vicars, by the patron and ordinary; and leases of the incumbent of a donative, by the patron alone; but if the king be patron of a prebend, or the like, then the king and dean and chapter, and not the bishop, ought to confirm the lease (m).

Littleton says (speaking of charges on glebe which are now forbidden by statute (n); but his remarks are equally valuable as to leases of glebe); that if the parson of a church charge the glebe land of his church by his deed, and after the patron and ordinary confirm the same grant, then such grant shall stand in its force according to the purport thereof. But in this case (as indeed in all cases) it behoves that the patron have a fee simple in the advowson; for if he has but an estate for life or in tail in the advowson, the grant shall not stand, but during his life, and the life of the parson which granted the same (o).

Confirmation subsequent.

Patron must have fee simple.

Upon which there are divers things to be noted:

(1) The confirmation of the grant; which indeed is but a mere assent by deed to the grant. And therefore it is holden, that if there be parson, patron, and ordinary, and the patron and ordinary give licence by deed to the parson, to grant a rent-charge out of the glebe, and the parson grants the rent-charge accordingly, this is good, and shall bind the successor; and yet here is no confirmation subsequent, but a licence precedent.

Requisites for confirmations of grants.

(2) The ordinary alone, without the dean and chapter, may agree thereunto, either by licence precedent or confirmation subsequent; for the dean and chapter has nothing to do with that which the bishop does as ordinary in the lifetime of the bishop.

(3) But if the bishop be patron, there the bishop cannot confirm alone, but the dean and chapter must confirm also; for the advowson or patronage is parcel of the possession of the bishopric; and therefore the bishop, without the dean and chapter, cannot make the grant good, but only during his own life, after the decease of the incumbent, either by licence precedent or confirmation subsequent.

(4) He that is patron must be (as stated above) patron in fee simple; for if he be tenant in tail or tenant for life, his confirmation or agreement is not good to bind any successor, but such as come into the church during his life. But if the estate tail be barred, it shall stand good for ever (p).

For a confirmation, being in the nature of a charge upon the advowson, can operate no further, in order to the binding of the successor, than according to the degree of estate or interest which the patron has who confirms. And therefore where a tenant in tail is patron, to render the confirmation valid, the issue in tail must also confirm; otherwise the presentee of such issue shall hold the benefice discharged of such lease (q).

In like manner, if the patron who confirms has granted the next avoidance, the clerk of such grantee shall not be bound without the grantee's joining in the confirmation (r).

And so where there are coparceners or tenants in common of an advowson, they must all join in the confirmation to bind the next incumbent, unless they have agreed before to present by turns (s).

How corporation should confirm.

Where the confirmation required is that of a chapter, it is enough that it be, by the major part of such body corporate, as it is enacted by 33 Hen. 8, c. 27 (t). But such major part are to attend in person, and to be present together at the executing of such act; thus in the case of the Dean and Chapter of Fernes, in Ireland, which was concerning the confirmation of a lease made by the bishop, it was adjudged that the confirmation was ill, because the dean was not only not present, but acted by a proctor, who was a stranger to the chapter, and not of the body (u). Agreeable to which are the rules of the civil law, that the dean shall make no deputation in such a case but to one of the chapter only.

And in the same case it was said further, upon the authority of the Year Books, that neither would this, nor any other act that had charged the revenues of the church, have been good, though the dean had done it by one of the chapter as his commissary; for (as is there alleged) though the dean may have his president or commissary to execute his spiritual jurisdiction, yet such commissary cannot charge the possessions of the church. And therefore, besides the authority of the president, sub-dean or the like, for the exercise of the decanal office, a distinct proxy to one or more members of the chapter, who may represent him in the passing of grants, confirmations, and other chapter acts, is necessary to make them good and valid in law.

And their assent must be given by each member singly, and not in a confused and uncertain manner; and this must be, when they are capitulary assembled in one certain place; and not a consent given by the members, in several places, and at several times. Which was the case of the last cited act of the dean and chapter of Fernes. The chapter consisted of ten persons, and only three were present (together with the dean's proctor), when the chapter seal was fixed to the confirmation; afterwards three others of the prebendaries subscribed it: and this was adjudged ill, as being the act of particular persons only, and not of the corporation, by reason they were not assembled in one place, and in a capitular manner, that is, the act was not done simul et semel, at the same time and place, as the law requires.

But it was there agreed and acknowledged, that in case the dean and chapter be capitularly assembled in any place, their acts shall be good, though such assembly is not holden in the chapter-house; and the act of the dean and major part of the chapter so assembled is properly the act of the corporation, although the rest do not agree, or be absent through their own default.

Where a bishop has two chapters, a lease must be confirmed by both, except where the act of union is not extant, and there has been immemorial usage to the contrary.

Where two chapters.

A confirmation after the death of the bishop is void.

When too late.

Where the patron is himself the holder of a benefice, his confirmation is of no avail without the further confirmation of his patron, the patron paramount. Thus in Doe d. Brammall v. Collinge (c), the perpetual curate of a curacy augmented by Queen Anne's Bounty granted a lease for years of unopened mines, which had not before been leased, with the confirmation of the ordinary and of the immediate patron, who was the rector of the parish, but without the consent of the patron of the parish; and it was holden void for want of confirmation by the patron paramount.

Confirmation by patron paramount.

Sole corporations, however, as archbishops, bishops, archdeacons, prebendaries, and the like (parsons and vicars only excepted), were enabled by 32 Hen. 8, c. 28, hereafter following, to let leases for twenty-one years or three lives, without confirmation: provided that in such leases the conditions and limitations of the said act, as to the expiration of the old lease, the commencement of the new, the reservation of rent, and the like, were punctually observed; but if not, confirmation remained necessary, as before, in order to bind the successor. And with confirmation, long leases of sole corporations continued (so far as that act is concerned) to be good against the successor, as they had been at the common law (x).

Enabling act 32 Hen. 8, c. 28.

Afterwards, by 1 Eliz. c. 19; 13 Eliz. c. 10; and 18 Eliz. c. 11, all corporations, whether sole or aggregate, were disabled from making leases for more than twenty-one years or three lives; and all (except bishops) from making any new lease where the old was not expired or surrendered or ended within three years. In which cases, confirmation was excluded, and could avail nothing; and thenceforward confirmation was of real effect only to two sorts of sole corporations, viz., to parsons and vicars (y), who being specially excepted out of 32 Hen. 8, c. 28, could not bind their successors without confirmation; and to bishops, who being not included in the restraint of 18 Eliz. c. 11, hereafter mentioned, against concurrent leases, might grant such leases at any time, with confirmation. But leases by bishops are now regulated by 23 & 24 Vict. c. 124 (z).

Old law nearly obsolete.

The law of leasing, whether enabling or disabling, has been set on a new footing by the statutes of Victoria hereafter set forth, and much of what immediately follows here is of slight present import. It is thought however desirable to retain it, partly because of its analogical value in many questions that may arise on the new law, and partly because there may still be vested interests which are governed by it.

32 Hen. 8,
c. 28.

By 32 Hen. 8, c. 28, s. 1, it was provided as follows:—"That all leases hereafter to be made of any manors, lands, tenements, or other hereditaments, by writing indented, under seal, for term of years, or for term of life, by any person or persons being of full age of twenty-one years, having any estate of inheritance either in fee simple or in fee tail, in their own right, or in the right of their churches, or wives, or jointly with their wives, of an estate of inheritance made before the coverture or after, shall be good and effectual in the law against the lessors, their wives, heirs, and successors, and every of them, according to such estate as is comprised and specified in every such indenture of lease, in like manner and form as the same shall have been, if the lessors thereof, and every of them, at the time of the making of such leases, had been lawfully seised of the same lands, tenements, and hereditaments comprised in such indenture, of a good, perfect and pure estate of fee simple thereof, to their own only uses" (a).

Sect. 2. "Provided always that this act or anything contained shall not extend (1) to any leases to be made of any manors, lands, tenements, or hereditaments, being in the hands of any farmer or farmers, by virtue of any old lease, unless the same old lease be expired, surrendered, or ended within one year next after the making of the said new lease; (2) nor shall extend to any grant to be made of any reversion of any manors, lands, tenements, or hereditaments; (3) nor to any lease of any manors, lands, tenements, or hereditaments which have not most commonly been letten to farm, or occupied by the farmers thereof by the space of twenty years next before such lease thereof made; (4) nor to any lease to be made without impeachment of waste; (5) nor to any lease to be made above the number of twenty-one years or three lives at the most from the day of the making thereof; (6) and that upon every such lease there be reserved yearly during the same lease, due and payable to the lessors, their heirs and successors to whom the same lands should have come after the deaths of the lessors, if no such lease had been made thereof, and to whom the reversion thereof shall appertain, according to their estates and interests, so much yearly farm or rent, or more, as hath been most accustomedly yielded or paid for the manors, lands, tenements and hereditaments so to be letten within twenty years next before such lease thereof made; (7) and that every such person or persons to whom the reversion of such manors, lands, tenements, or hereditaments so to be letten shall appertain, as is aforesaid, after the death of such lessors or their heirs shall and may have like remedy and advantage to all intents and purposes against the lessees thereof, their executors and assigns, as the same lessor should or might have had against the same lessees; (8) so that if the lessor were seised of any special estate tail of the same hereditaments at the time of such lease, that the issue or heir of that special estate shall have the reversion, rents and services reserved upon such lease after the death of the said lessor, as the lessor himself might or ought to have had if he had lived."

Sect. 4. "Provided also, that this act extend not to give any liberty or power to any parson or vicar of any church or vicarage, or to make any lease or grant of any of their messuages, lands, tenements, tithes, profits, or hereditaments belonging to their churches or vicarages otherwise or in any other manner than they should or might have done before the making of this act, anything contained in this act to the contrary notwithstanding."

Of any Manors, Lands, Tenements, or other Hereditaments.—Of what things.
It must be of lands, tenements, or hereditaments, manurable or corporeal, which are necessary to be letten, and whereout a rent by law may be reserved; and not of things that lie of grant, as advowsons, fairs, markets, franchises and the like, whereout a rent cannot be reserved (b).

For the better understanding of which rule it will be necessary to take notice of some distinctions which plainly arise out of the books. As, first, all the books agree, that a lease for three lives, of tithes or other incorporeal inheritance, will not bind the successor, because he would then be without the tithes or other such incorporeal inheritance, and have no remedy for the rent thereon reserved; for distrain he could not, because there would be no place wherein to take any distress, the things leased or granted being perfectly incorporeal, and invisible; an assize he could not have, because either he had not seisin, or if he had yet there would be nothing to put in view of the recognitors; and an action of debt he could not maintain during the lease, because being for three lives, that is an estate of freehold, which will endure no action of debt so long as it continues, and so the successor in such case would have no manner of remedy for the rent reserved, which would be against the express provision and intent of the several acts. Secondly, it is holden in some books, that a lease for twenty-one years of such incorporeal inheritance, though they have been usually demised, and the ancient rent be thereout reserved, is yet voidable by the successor within these statutes; because, though the rent reserved be good by way of contract between the lessor and lessee, and an action of debt may be maintained for the recovery thereof, yet they say it is not such a rent as is incident to the reversion, nor shall pass with it to the successor; and therefore the successor, having no remedy for the rent, shall not be bound by the lease (c).

Leases of tithes were formerly deemed void against successors.

(b) 1 Inst. p. 44. See Gibs. p. 732.

The doctrine of the common law, that incorporeal hereditaments could not be distrained for, having no locality (d), was carried to this extent, that an acceptance of rent by the succeeding bishop did not substantiate a freehold demise of tithes, because if the rent afterwards became in arrear, he could not bring either an action for debt and distress, or the species of real action called an assise of rent (e).

Contrary
resolutions.

Yet this doctrine seems to have been shaken by contrary resolutions. For some books expressly hold such lease for years to be good against the successor, because they say he has remedy for the rent by action of debt, and say it has been so judged, and take the diversity between such lease for years and a lease for life. Also they say that the rent issues out of the tithes in point of render, though not in point of remedy, because no distress can be taken for it, but that is supplied by the action of debt which lies for such rent, and shall devolve on the successor; and that such rent does not lie only in privity of contract, as a sum in gross, but is incident to the reversion, otherwise the successor could not have it, being only privy to the estate, not to the personal contracts of his predecessor. And to this opinion the court in one case inclined, but thought it a point of great consequence, and therefore, to avoid it, gave judgment on another point which was clear. Thirdly, all the books agree that a lease for three lives or twenty-one years of a manor with the advowson appendant, or of lands or houses and of tithes, usually let therewith, reserving the ancient rent and the like, is good and shall bind the successor; for though the rent does not issue out of the advowson or tithes, in point of remedy, yet the rent is greater in respect thereof, and the successor has his remedy for the whole rent upon the lands or other corporeal inheritance let therewith. And Vaughan proves this from the express words of 13 Eliz. c. 10, which are, that all leases by any spiritual or ecclesiastical persons, having any lands, tenements, tithes or hereditaments (other than for twenty-one years or three lives), shall be void. So that the statute plainly shows that, some way or other, tithes may be leased for twenty-one years or three lives: and if they cannot be leased singly, it must be with lands usually let therewith (f).

But now, by 5 Geo. 3, c. 17, ss. 1—3, “Whereas it may be doubtful, whether by the laws now in being, archbishops or bishops, master and fellows, or any other head and members of colleges or halls, deans and chapters, precentors, prebendaries, masters and guardians of hospitals, or any other person or persons having any spiritual and ecclesiastical promotions, heretofore had, or now have, any power to make or grant any lease or leases of tithes, or other incorporeal hereditaments only, which lie in grant, and not in livery, for one, two, or three lives, or for any term or terms of years not exceeding twenty-one, although the ancient rent or yearly sum is thereby mentioned to be reserved, and all other requisites prescribed by the acts of parliament now in being to that end, or any of them, were or are justly and truly observed and performed, by reason that there is generally no place wherein a distress can be had or taken for such rent or yearly sum; and it may be also doubtful whether, in cases of such leases for life or lives, there is any remedy in law for such ecclesiastical or other persons, by action of debt or otherwise, for recovering the rent or yearly sum due and in arrear which is mentioned to be reserved on such leases for life or lives. Therefore, for obviating all doubts touching the same, and enabling the said archbishops and bishops, masters and fellows, or other heads and members of colleges or halls, deans and chapters, precentors, prebendaries, masters and guardians of hospitals, and other ecclesiastical persons, to make valid leases of such their incorporeal hereditaments, and to recover the rent or yearly sum mentioned to be reserved on any leases already granted or to be granted for one, two, or three lives as aforesaid, and also to make good and effectual all such leases as have been already granted by them, or any of them,” it is enacted, “that all leases for one, two, or three lives, or any term not exceeding twenty-one years, already made and granted, or” hereafter to be made or granted, “of any tithes, tolls or other incorporeal hereditament solely and without any lands or corporeal hereditaments,” by any such persons as aforesaid, shall be good and effectual in law, against such persons and their successors, “as any lease or leases already made or to be made” by such persons “of lands or other corporeal hereditaments,” now are, by virtue of 32 Hen. 8, c. 28, or any other act . . . and that in case the rent or rents, or yearly sum or sums reserved or made payable in or by such lease “shall be behind or unpaid by the space of twenty-eight days,” any . . . the said lessors, their executors, administrators and successors respectively may bring “an action or actions of debt against the lessee or lessees . . . his heirs, executors, administrators or assigns, for recovering” the same, as any landlord or lessor or other person may do

But under 5 Geo. 3, c. 17, ecclesiastical persons may now bring action of debt for rent under leases of tithes; and such leases are to be good.

for recovering of arrears of rent due on any lease for life, lives or years, by the laws now in being.

But, by sect. 2, masters and fellows of colleges, deans and chapters, &c., are disabled from granting leases for any longer term than their statutes allow.

Other cases in which actions for rent will lie.

An action of debt lies against the assignee of lessee for years of tithes at common law (g).

And it seems also that a lay impropiator may bring an action of debt against the assignee of a lessee for years, because 32 Hen. 8, c. 7, s. 5, puts tithes in the hands of lay impropiators upon the same footing with their corporeal hereditaments, but it does not seem certain that he has the same remedy as to leases for life (h).

Leases must be by deed.

Returning to our commentary on 32 Hen. 8, c. 28.

By Writing indented.]—The lease must be by deed indented, and not by deed poll, or by parol (i). But a contract in the nature of a demise may enure with apt words for that purpose by way of discharge from tithes (k). An agreement, however, not under seal to demise a rectory and tithes, and a messuage used as a homestead for collecting the tithes, at an entire rent, has been holden void as to the whole (l).

Who are within this statute.

In the Right of their Churches.]—Yet a bishop that is seised in the right of his bishopric, a dean of his sole possessions in the right of his deanery, an archdeacon in the right of his archdeaconry, a prebendary, and the like, are within this statute; for every of them generally is seised in jure ecclesie (m).

And in general, all sole corporations whatsoever (parsons and vicars only excepted) are included within this statute, and are thereby enabled to bind their successors. Accordingly it has been adjudged, on several occasions, that precentors, chancellors, and treasurers of churches, are within the benefit of this statute; only, as to precentors, it has been determined that though there are persons of inferior rank in several churches, who are commonly so called, yet they are not within this statute; but only those dignitaries of that denomination who are properly so called, and who are next to the deans in place and order (n).

Unless the same old Lease be expired, surrendered or ended within one Year next after the making of the said new Lease.—This surrender must be absolute, and not conditional; for the intent of the makers of the act was, to have a continual and absolute surrender, and not an illusory surrender, which might be avoided the next day (o). Expiry of former lease.

But in Wilson d. Eyre v. Carter, where the objection was, that the surrender made of the former lease was with a condition, that if the then prebendary did not within a week after grant a new lease for three lives, the surrender should be void; whereby (as was contended for the plaintiff) the old term was not absolutely gone, but the lessee reserved a power of setting it up again, it was holden by the court that the lease was valid, this being within the intent of the statute, which was, that there should not be two long leases standing out against the successor. Here the new lease was made within the week, and from thence it became an absolute surrender both in deed and in law. And the whole was out of the lessee, without further act to be done by him (p).

Within one Year next after the making of the said new Lease.—This, as to corporations sole inferior to bishops, is extended by 18 Eliz. c. 11, to three years; and as to bishops themselves, it holds only where they make a new lease without confirmation; for if it be confirmed by the dean and chapter, the years to come in the old lease are not material (q).

Nor to any Lease of any Manors, Lands, Tenements or Hereditaments, which have not most commonly been letten to Farm or occupied by the Farmers thereof by the space of twenty Years next before such Lease made.—So that if it be letten for eleven years (Lord Coke says), at one or several times within these twenty years, it is sufficient (r). Lands usually letten.

Letten to Farm.—A grant by copy of court roll in fee for life or years, is a sufficient letting to farm within this statute, for he is but tenant at will according to the custom, and so it is of a lease at will by the common law, but those lettings to farm must be made by some seised of an estate of inheritance, and not by a guardian in chivalry, tenant by the curtesy, tenant in dower, or the like (s).

Nor to any Lease to be made without Impeachment of Waste.—Therefore if a lease be made for life, the remainder to another for life, remainder to a third for life; this is not warranted by the statute, because the remainders make the present tenants dispunishable of waste: but if a lease be made to one during three lives, this is good: for the occupant, if any happen, shall be punished for waste (t).

And although this condition of a good lease is not expressed in 1 Eliz. c. 19, and 13 Eliz. c. 10, yet are both bishops and clergy restrained by the equity of the said statutes from making leases dispunishable of waste; for the statutes were made against unreasonable leases; and it is unreasonable that a lessee shall at his pleasure do waste and spoil (u).

Length of lease.

Nor to any Lease to be made above the Number of Twenty-one Years, or Three Lives at the most, from the Day of the making thereof.]—There must not be double leases in being at one time; as if a lease for years be made according to the statute, he in reversion cannot expulse the lessee, and make a lease for life or lives according to the statute; nor è converso: for the words of the statute be, to make a lease for twenty-one years or three lives, so as one or the other may be made, and not both (x).

Or Three Lives.]—That is, for three lives, to be all wearing together; and not to one for life, the remainder to a second for life, the remainder to a third for life; which would be a void lease; as it would be, if a lease were let for ninety-nine years, determinable upon three lives. But a lease to one for the lives of three others, or to three for their three lives, is good (y).

At the most.]—It must not exceed three lives, or one and twenty years from the making of it; but (according to Lord Coke) it may be for a lesser term or fewer lives (z).

Date of lease.

From the Day of the making thereof.]—1 Eliz. c. 19, and 13 Eliz. c. 10, are from the making, and not from the day of the making; and the distinction seems to be this: where the habendum is for twenty-one years from the making, the day of delivery (which is the making) shall be included; but where it is from the day of the making, or from the day of the date, that day shall not be included as part of the term, but the twenty-one years shall begin on the day following (a).

Rent reserved.

And that upon every such Lease there be reserved yearly.]—If the accustomed rent had been payable at four days or feasts of the year; yet if it be reserved payable at one feast, it is sufficient: for the words of the statute be, reserved yearly (b).

So much yearly Farm or Rent, or more, as hath been most accustomedly paid for the same.]—Where not only a yearly rent was formerly reserved, but things not annual, as heriots, or any fine or other profit at or upon the death of the farmer; yet if the yearly rent be reserved upon a lease made by force of this statute, it suffices by the express words of the act (c). But if a couple of capons, or the like, have been expressly reserved in kind or in money, over and above the rent; a subsequent lease not reserving these shall be void (d). And so it shall be, where all the great trees have been usually excepted, and then are omitted; because by this means every successor cannot have the benefit of boughs and fruits yearly renewing (e).

Or more.—Therefore if more than the accustomed rent be reserved, it is good, by the express letter of the act (f).

As hath been most accustomedly paid for the same.—If twenty acres of land have been accustomedly letten, and a lease is made of those twenty, and of one acre which was not accustomedly letten, reserving the accustomed yearly rent, and so much more as exceeds the value of the other acre; this lease is not warranted by the act, for that the accustomed rent is not reserved, seeing part was not accustomedly letten, and the rent issues out of the whole (g).

But Lord Coke says if tenant in tail let part of the land accustomedly letten, and reserve a right pro rata, or more, this is good; for that is in substance a customary rent (h); and the same rule should apply to a lease by an ecclesiastical person.

Provided that Nothing herein shall extend to give any Liberty or Power to any Parson or Vicar.—Therefore if either of them make a lease for twenty-one years or three lives, of lands accustomedly letten, reserving the accustomed rent, it must also be confirmed by the patron and ordinary; because it is excepted out of this act, and not restrained by 1 Eliz. c. 19, or 13 Eliz. c. 10 (i).

By 1 Eliz. c. 19, s. 5, “. . . all gifts, grants, feoffments, fines, or other conveyance or estate . . . to be had, made, done or suffered by any archbishop or bishop, of any honours, castles, manors, lands, tenements or other hereditaments, being parcel of the possessions of his archbishopric or bishopric, or united, appertaining or belonging” to the same; “to any person or persons, bodies politic or corporate, other than to the” crown (and by 1 Jac. 1, c. 3, not to the crown either); whereby any estate or estates should or may pass from the same archbishops or bishops, other than for the term of twenty-one years or three lives, from such time as any such lease, grant, or assurance shall begin, and whereupon the old accustomed yearly rent or more shall be reserved and payable yearly during the said term of twenty-one years or three lives, shall be utterly void and of none effect, to all intents, constructions and purposes; any law, custom or usage to the contrary in any wise notwithstanding.

All Gifts, Grants, &c.—Neither this act, nor 13 Eliz. c. 10, which are called the disabling acts, nor any other act or statute whatsoever, do in any sort alter or change the enabling statute of 32 Hen. 8, c. 28, aforegoing; but leave it for a pattern in many things, for leases to be made by others. And no lease made according to the limitations of this statute of 1 Eliz. c. 19, or of 13 Eliz. c. 10, here next following, and not warranted by the statute of the 32 Hen. 8, c. 28, if it be made by a bishop or any sole corporation, but must be confirmed by the dean and chapter, or others that have interest; as has been said in the case of the parson and vicar (k).

As to copy-holds.

Gifts, Grants, Feoffments, Fines, or other Conveyance, or Estates.—Neither bishops by this act, nor other ecclesiastical or collegiate corporations by 13 Eliz. c. 10, were restrained from making grants of copyholds in fee, in tail, or for lives, or for any number of years, according to the custom of the manor; nor was confirmation necessary to make such grants good, though it be made by a sole corporation, as by bishop, prebendary, or the like (l). But grants and leases of copyholds by copy of court roll are now prohibited (m).

Meaning of accustomed rent.

Whereupon the old accustomed yearly Rent or more shall be reserved.—It was holden by Hale, C.J., that the accustomed rent mentioned in this statute, and in the following statute of 13 Eliz. c. 10, ought to be understood of the rent reserved upon the last lease, and not upon the first; for that rent having been altered since cannot be called the accustomed rent (n).

Shall be utterly void.—Forasmuch as this and 13 Eliz. c. 10, make all such leases other than for the term of twenty-one years or three lives to be utterly void; therefore, generally speaking, at this day, no ecclesiastical person, or corporation, can aliene any of their manors, lands or tenements; for though before these statutes they might have aliened, yet by the said statutes they are now restrained (o).

Grants good against grantor.

Shall be utterly void and of none Effect.—Yet they are good against the lessor, if it be a sole corporation; or so long as the dean or other head of the corporation remains, if it be a corporation aggregate of many; for the statute was made in benefit of the successor (p).

When voidable lease may be confirmed by successor's acceptance of rent.

To all Intents, Constructions and Purposes.—Nevertheless, the acceptance of rent by the successor, may affirm a lease (otherwise voidable) for his own time (q).

It is indeed regularly true, that where the successor accepts a rent after the death of the predecessor, upon a void lease made by the predecessor, such acceptance will not affirm the lease; but this rule must be understood of such a lease as is void ipso facto, without entry or any other ceremony; and therefore, if a parson, vicar or prebendary make a lease not warrantable by the statutes, for twenty-one years, rendering rent, and dies, here no acceptance of rent by the successor will affirm this lease, because the same was void without entry or other ceremony; but if a parson, vicar or prebendary make a lease not warrantable within the before-mentioned statutes, for life or lives, reserving rent, and dies, and the successor before entry accept the rent, this lease shall bind him for the time, for this being an estate of freehold, could not be void before entry (r).

But if a bishop, who has the inheritance in fee simple in him, make a lease for lives or years not warranted by the said statutes, not being absolutely void by his death, but only voidable by the entry of the successor; if the successor accept the rent before entry, be it for lives or years, he affirms the lease for his life (s).

But whosoever the acceptance of rent binds, whether a sole or aggregate corporation, it must, in order to such binding, appear to be their own act; and therefore in such case, if the bailiff of a bishop accepts the rent, without order, this binds not the bishop. But if he acquaints the bishop that several rents are in arrear, and has an order from him to receive them, and receives (among others) the rent of a voidable lease, and pays all the rents to the bishop, without giving him notice of the said voidable lease, this has been judged such an acceptance as affirms a lease; because the bishop of himself ought to take notice what leases were made by his predecessor (t).

Not so, when acceptance is that of unauthorised agent.

In like manner, with regard to a corporation aggregate, where the master of a college accepted rent, having no express authority from the corporation to accept it, it was adjudged that this did not affirm a voidable lease during the continuance of such master; because the act of the head singly cannot divest the members of their right (u).

Where a voidable lease may be affirmed by the acceptance of rent, it may be affirmed by distraining, or bringing an action for rent, after the death of the predecessor; and also by bringing an action of waste against the lessee (x).

But no acceptance of rent by the successor avails (as has been said) where the lease is absolutely and ab initio void (y).

When lease void cannot be confirmed.

In Doe d. Pennington v. Taniere (z) a dean and chapter were empowered by a local act to grant building leases of certain lands for ninety-nine years, provided that in every such lease there was a covenant by the lessee to build. They granted a lease for ninety-nine years, omitting the covenant. During the supposed term, after the death of the dean under whom the lease had been granted, the lessee remained in possession and continued to pay the reserved rent to the succeeding deans and chapter, who distributed it among themselves. The Court of Queen's Bench held, that if the lease was voidable only, it was made good, as against each successive dean and chapter, for their own times respectively, by such their receipt and distribution of the rent. And that, if the lease was absolutely void, such receipt and distribution were evidence from which, without proof of any instrument under seal, a demise from year to year might be presumed against them; the presumption in such a case being the same against a corporation aggregate as against an ordinary person. The same conclusion was arrived at in practically the same circumstances by the Court of Exchequer in Pennington v. Cardale (a).

*Doe d.
Bramall v.
Collinge.*

But in Doe d. Bramall v. Collinge (b), decided about the same time, the Court of Common Pleas held that a void lease was not set up against the lessor's successor by his acceptance of rent; such acceptance only making a tenancy from year to year. In this case the tenancy was treated as one from year to year, and the tenant received six months' notice to quit before the action was brought.

*Magdalen

And the authority of the other two cases must be considered as a good deal shaken by the House of Lords in Magdalen Hospital v. Knotts (c).

13 Eliz. c. 10.

By 13 Eliz. c. 10, s. 3, “. . . all leases, gifts, grants, feoffments, conveyances, or estates to be made, had, done, or suffered by any master and fellows of any college, dean and chapter of any cathedral or collegiate church, master or guardian of any hospital, parson, or any other having any spiritual or ecclesiastical living, of any houses, lands, tithes, tenements or other hereditaments, being any parcel of the possessions of any such college, cathedral church, chapel, hospital, parsonage, vicarage, or other spiritual promotion, or any ways appertaining or belonging to the same or any of them, to any person or persons, bodies politic and corporate (other than for the term of one and twenty years, or three lives, from the time as any such lease or grant shall be made or granted, whereupon the accustomed yearly rent or more shall be reserved and payable yearly during the said term), shall be utterly void and of none effect to all intents, constructions, and purposes . . .” (d).

All Leases, Gifts, Grants, &c.—Corporations aggregate might always let long leases without any confirmation; and so might sole corporations, with confirmation, until 13 Eliz. c. 10, none but bishops being restrained by the 1 Eliz. c. 19. But by 13 Eliz. c. 10 all other corporations, sole and aggregate, are put under the same restraint that bishops were; and the two acts being of the same tenor and form, what has been observed upon the former act will help towards the right understanding of several clauses in the latter act also (f).

Master and Fellows of any College.—This includes all colleges, by what name soever incorporated, and of what nature soever the foundations be, ecclesiastical, temporal or mixed; the statute being construed most largely and beneficially against long and unreasonable leases (g).

Who included under statutes.

Dean and Chapter of any Cathedral or Collegiate Church.—For the same reason, though it is said dean and chapter, it extends to chapters where there are no deans (h).

Master or Guardian of any Hospital.—In like manner, this shall extend to all manner of hospitals, be the hospital incorporated by any other name or be it a sole corporation, or corporation aggregate (i).

Or any other having any Spiritual or Ecclesiastical Living.—That this is a general law, as it concerns all the clergy, has been often declared and adjudged, though at first much doubted. But it was always agreed, notwithstanding this general clause, that bishops were not included, because the statute begins with an order inferior to them (k).

Bishops not included.

nine years at the rent of "one peppercorn." The only covenants on the part of the lessee were to indemnify the governors from all taxes, &c., during the term, and to surrender the premises at its end; and, on the part of the governors, for quiet enjoyment. No act had been done until the commencement of the litigation to avoid the lease, or to interfere with the persons holding the land. In July, 1876, the governors brought an action to recover possession of the land thus leased. It was holden that the lease was absolutely void within the provisions of the statute 13 Eliz. c. 10: that, consequently, the right of the governors to re-enter on the land existed from the moment of the execution of the lease, and that right not having been previously sought to be enforced, was barred by the Statute of Limitations. Lord Selborne said that if any rent, however small, had been reserved and received, it would have created the legal relation of a tenancy from year to year, and the Statute of Limitations would not have run.

houses

Of any Houses.]—But by 14 Eliz. c. 11, s. 5, this shall not extend to any grant, assurance, or lease of any houses belonging to any persons or bodies politic or corporate aforesaid, nor to any grounds to such houses appertaining, which houses be situate in any city, borough, town corporate or market town, or the suburbs of any of them; but all such houses and grounds may be granted, demised and assured, as by the laws of this realm, and the several statutes of the said colleges, cathedral churches, and hospitals, they lawfully might have been before the making of 13 Eliz. c. 10, or lawfully might be if the said statute were not; so always that such house be not the capital or dwelling-house used for the habitation of the persons abovesaid, nor have ground to the same belonging above the quantity of ten acres; provided, that no lease of any such houses shall be permitted to be made by force of this act, in reversion, nor without reserving the accustomed yearly rent at the least, nor without charging the lessee with the reparation, nor for longer term than forty years at the most; nor any houses shall be permitted to be aliened, unless that in recompense thereof there shall be good, lawful, and sufficient assurance made in fee simple absolutely to such colleges, houses, bodies politic or corporate, and their successors, of lands of as good value, and of as great yearly value at the least, as so shall be aliened, any statute to the contrary notwithstanding (n).

being the vicar's house of habitation, nor having ground attached above ten acres, made within three years of the expiration of the existing lease has been holden valid (o).

But this statute also, referring only to such persons or bodies corporate as were specified in the statute of 13 Eliz. c. 10, does not extend unto bishops; and bishops had no power to let houses, otherwise than according to the said statute of 1 Eliz. c. 19 (p). Bishops not included.

And by the express words of the act, no lease of any such houses shall be made in reversion; for which reason, when the dean and chapter of St. Paul's made a lease of a house for forty years, which house was then in lease for ten years to come, to a stranger, it was adjudged, without argument, not to be a good lease, because in reversion; but otherwise, if both leases had been to the same person, because the acceptance of the second lease by the lessee would have made the first lease void (q).

Concurrent leases were valid under the 13 Eliz. c. 19, till restrained by the 18 Eliz. c. 11 (r), the reason being, that the inheritance is not charged upon the whole with more than twenty-one years (s). Concurrent leases.

In all cases where concurrent leases are made, the new lease, although it may be made a die confectionis, is not to take effect in interest till the old lease be expired, surrendered or ended, that is, the new lessee cannot enjoy the land till such time, for the new lease commences presently by estoppel only, not in interest; yet it seems that the rent is due from the first commencement of the lease, so that the bishop or other being lessor is entitled to two rents, and may bring an action of debt to recover the rent reserved upon the second lease, during the continuance of the former; for the rent must be reserved and made payable during the term, and not from the determination of the former lease, else such concurrent leases will be void, as contrary to the statute (t).

A bishop could not make a concurrent lease for years to bind his successor where there is a precedent lease for a life in being, nor could he make a concurrent lease for life to bind the successor where there is a precedent lease for years in being, because the words of the statute enjoin that upon leases made by bishops the ancient rent must be reserved and yearly payable; and the rent reserved upon the grant for three lives in reversion, although it be due, yet the successor had no remedy for it during the lease for years by distress, nor by action for debt, before 5 Geo. 3, c. 17 (u), because it was reserved upon a lease for life, and so it is not due or payable according to the intent of the statute (x).

But where the second lease is made to the same person to whom the former lease was made, and not to a stranger, it seems that the former lease is wholly vacated by the same person accepting the concurrent lease (y).

So if a lease for lives be made to the lessee for years, the former will merge in the latter lease, or rather the lease for years would be surrendered by accepting the lease for life, and the successor would be bound by it (z).

Sect. 4. "Provided, nevertheless, that in cases where it shall be certified in manner hereinafter mentioned, that for ten years now last past it hath been the usual practice (such practice having in the case of a corporation sole, commenced prior to the time of the person for the time being representing such corporation) to renew such leases for forty, thirty, or twenty-one years respectively, at shorter periods than fourteen, ten, or seven years respectively, nothing herein contained shall prevent any archbishop, bishop, ecclesiastical corporation sole or aggregate, dignitary, canon, prebendary, spiritual person, master or guardian, from granting a new lease conformably to such usual practice; provided that such usual practice shall be made to appear to the satisfaction of the archbishop of the province, in the case of a lease granted by such archbishop or by a bishop, and in the case of a lease granted by any other corporation or person, to the satisfaction of such archbishop, and also of the bishop having jurisdiction over such corporation or person, and shall, before the granting of such lease, be certified in writing under the hand of the archbishop in the one case, and of the archbishop and bishop in the other case; the certificate so signed by an archbishop only to be afterwards deposited in the registry of such archbishop, and the certificate so signed by an archbishop and also by a bishop to be afterwards deposited in the registry of such bishop, which certificate shall be conclusive evidence of the facts thereby certified."

"Provided also that nothing in this act contained shall prevent a lease from being granted, with a view to confirm any title or otherwise, for the life or lives of the same person or persons, or for the lives or life of the survivors or survivor of them, or for the same term of years, and commencing at the same period, as the lease last granted for a life or lives, or a term of years respectively."

Act not to render valid illegal leases.

Sect. 8. "Provided also that no lease not authorized by the laws and statutes now in force shall be rendered valid by anything in this act contained."

Leases contrary to this act void.

Sect. 9. "If any lease contrary to this act shall have been granted since the first day of March," 1836, "or shall be granted after the passing of this act, every such lease shall be void to all intents and purposes whatsoever: Provided always, that nothing in this act contained shall be deemed or taken to affect any lease granted or to be granted pursuant to any covenant or agreement entered into previously to the first day of March," 1836.

A statute passed in the same session (c), enacts that leases granted under this last act are not to be void by reason of not containing the several recitals mentioned in section 2. 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 64.

By 18 Eliz. c. 11, s. 2, it is enacted, that every bond and covenant for renewing or making of any lease or leases, contrary to the true intent of the said act of the 18 Eliz. c. 11, or of the act of the 13 Eliz. c. 10, shall be utterly void. 18 Eliz. c. 11. Bonds to defraud the disabling statutes.

In Rudge v. Thomas (d), a parson covenanted with another, that he should have his tithes for thirteen years; afterwards he resigned, and another parson was inducted; the lessee brought an action of covenant against the lessor, and the defendant pleaded 18 Eliz. c. 11, in bar. But Coke, Dodderidge, and Haughton agreed, that the covenant was not made void by this statute; which was only intended to void bonds and covenants contrary to 13 Eliz. c. 10, but does not extend to bonds and covenants made for the enjoyment of leases which become void by the common law, as leases do by resignation, or the like. Rudge v. Thomas.

But when a dean and canons made bonds among themselves, to ascertain to each other the benefit of particular leases, and the whole body engaged, under such and such forfeitures, to make the leases respectively as there should be occasion; such bonds were declared to be void by this statute. And so it was, where the dean and chapter obliged themselves to make to one a lease of lands, which were then in lease to another for fifteen years to come: the covenant was declared void upon this statute (e).

But this statute does not avoid bonds and covenants touching leases of houses in cities, boroughs, corporations or markets, according to 14 Eliz. c. 11, s. 5 (f).

Besides the restrictions above mentioned, it is enacted by 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106, s. 59, that all contracts for letting houses in which any spiritual persons are required by the bishop to reside shall be void; and a penalty of 40s. a day is imposed on all persons attempting to hold possession contrary to that act (g). 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106. Leases of houses of residence.

By 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 80, archbishops, bishops, deans and chapters, and cathedral dignitaries were empowered to make special arrangements with their tenants for ascertaining by arbitration the boundaries between church lands so let and lands of the tenant's own (h). 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 80. Ascertainment of boundaries.

It should be here observed that by virtue of 11 Geo. 2, c. 19, s. 15, 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 22, and lastly 33 & 34 Vict. c. 35, all rents and other periodical payments are due from day to day, and are apportionable where the incumbent lessor dies or vacates 11 Geo. 2, c. 19. 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 22. 33 & 34 Vict. c. 35.

SECT. 2.—The Exchange of Church Property.

17 Geo. 3,
c. 53.

Where new residence house is necessary for incumbent, ordinary, patron and incumbent may purchase convenient house within one mile of the church; and two acres of land.

The statute 17 Geo. 3, c. 53, an act primarily intended to facilitate the erection and improvement of houses of residence for the parochial clergy (i), has the following provisions relating to this subject (k):

Sect. 10. "Provided always . . . that where new buildings are necessary to be provided or erected for the habitation and residence of the rector, vicar, or other incumbent, pursuant to the authority hereby given, it shall and may be lawful for the ordinary, patron, and incumbent of every such living or benefice, to contract, or to authorize, if they shall think fit, the person so to be nominated by them as aforesaid, to contract, for the absolute purchase of any house or buildings, in a situation convenient for the habitation and residence of the rector or vicar of such living or benefice, and not at a greater distance than one mile from the church belonging to such living, benefice, or chapelry; and also to contract for any land adjoining or lying convenient to such house or building, or to the house or building belonging to any parochial living or benefice, having no glebe lying near or convenient to the same, not exceeding two acres, if the annual value of such living, to be ascertained as aforesaid, shall be less than one hundred pounds per annum, nor two acres for every one hundred pounds per annum, if of greater value, and to cause the purchase-money for such house or buildings to be paid out of the money to arise under the powers and authorities of this act; in all which cases the said buildings and lands shall be conveyed to the patron of such living or benefice, and his heirs, in trust, for the sole use and benefit of the rector, vicar, or other incumbent of such living or benefice for the time being, and their successors, and shall be annexed to such church or chapel, and be enjoyed and go in succession with the same for ever; but no contract so made by the nominee shall be valid, until confirmed by the ordinary, patron, and incumbent, by writing under their hands; and every such purchase deed shall be in the form or to the effect contained in the schedule hereunto annexed, and shall be registered in such manner, and in such office, as the other deeds are hereby directed to be registered."

Sect. 11. "Provided also . . . that when any such land lying near to the parsonage house and buildings belonging to such living or benefice, or to be so purchased or exchanged as aforesaid, shall be thought fit to be taken and used as a convenience for the same, the purchase-money or equivalent for such land shall be raised and had by sale or exchange of some part of the glebe or tithes of such living or benefice, which shall appear to the said ordinary, patron, and incumbent most convenient for that purpose; and every such sale or exchange shall be by deed, in the form or to the effect contained in the schedule hereunto annexed, and registered as hereinbefore directed."

Purchase-money for such land to be raised by sale, or exchange of part of glebe or tithes.

These provisions were much extended by 55 Geo. 3, c. 147. That act, reciting that glebe lands, or some parts thereof, sometimes lie at a distance from the parsonage houses; and that many parsonage houses are mean and inconvenient; and that it would tend to the accommodation, and thereby also to promote the residence of the incumbents, if the glebe lands and parsonage houses could be exchanged for other lands of greater value, or more conveniently situated, and for other and more convenient houses: and also reciting that there are lands and tenements which have been accustomed to be granted or demised by the incumbent for one, two, or three lives, or for a term or terms of years absolutely or determinable on a life or lives, as being holden by copy of court roll or otherwise, under some manor or lordship belonging to the benefice, and that it would be advantageous if these lands were annexed as glebe to the benefice to which they belong: enacts, in sect. 1, "that it shall be lawful for the parson, vicar, or other incumbent for the time being, of any ecclesiastical benefice, perpetual curacy, or parochial chapelry, by deed indented, and to be registered in manner hereinafter mentioned, and with the consent of the patron of such benefice, perpetual curacy, or parochial chapelry, and of the bishop of the diocese wherein the same is locally situate (to be signified as hereinafter is mentioned), to grant and convey to any person or persons, and to his, her, or their heirs and assigns, or otherwise, as he or they shall direct or appoint, or to any corporation sole or aggregate, and his or their successors, the parsonage or glebe house, and the outbuildings, yards, gardens, and appurtenances thereof, and the glebe lands, and any pastures, feedings, or rights of common or way appendant, appurtenant, or in gross, or any or either of such house, outbuildings, yards, gardens, and glebe lands, pastures, feedings, or rights of common or way, or any part or parts thereof, belonging to any such benefice, perpetual curacy, or parochial chapelry, in lieu of and in exchange for any house, outbuildings, yards, gardens, and appurtenances, and any lands, or any or either of them, whether lying within the local limits of such benefice, perpetual curacy, or parochial chapelry or not, but so as that the same be situate conveniently for actual residence or occupation by the incumbent thereof, the same also being of greater value or more conveniently situated than the premises so to be given in exchange, and being of freehold tenure, or being copyhold of inheritance, or for life or lives, holden of any manor belonging to the same benefice, and also for the parson, vicar, or incumbent for the time being of the same benefice, perpetual curacy, or parochial chapelry, by the same or a like deed, and with the like consent, and testified as aforesaid, to accept and take in exchange to him and his successors for ever, from any person or persons, or corporation sole or aggregate, any other house, outbuildings, yards, gardens, easements, and appurtenances, and any other lands, or any or either of such house, outbuildings, yards, gardens, lands, easements, and appurtenances, the same respectively being of freehold tenure, or being copyhold of inheritance, or for life or lives, holden of any manor belonging to the same benefice, and being of greater value or more conveniently situated, in lieu of and in exchange for such parsonage or glebe house, outbuildings, yards, gardens, glebe lands, and appurtenances, and such pastures, feedings, and rights of common, or way, or any or either of them, so to be granted and conveyed, and which said house, outbuildings, yards, gardens, lands and appurtenances so to be accepted and taken in exchange, by any parson, vicar, or other incumbent, shall for ever, from and after such grant and conveyance thereof, be the parsonage and glebe house and glebe lands and premises of the said benefice, perpetual curacy, or parochial chapelry, to all intents and purposes whatsoever, and shall become annexed to the said benefice, perpetual curacy, or parochial chapelry, to all intents and purposes whatsoever, and be holden and enjoyed by such incumbent and his successors accordingly, without any licence or writ of ad quod damnum; and the whole, or any part or parts of the said house, outbuildings, lands, and premises so to be annexed, which before such annexation were of copyhold tenure, shall for ever, from and after such annexation, become and be of freehold tenure; the statute of mortmain, or any other statute or law to the contrary notwithstanding (1); Provided also that in all cases when such exchange shall be made by any owner or owners having any less estate or interest than in fee simple of or in the messuage, buildings, lands, and premises so to be by him, her, or them granted or conveyed in exchange, or being any corporation aggregate or sole, or person or persons under any legal disability, the parsonage house, outbuildings, and glebe lands respectively to be so taken in exchange as aforesaid, shall at the time of making such exchange be of equal value with, or not of less value than the said messuage, buildings, lands, and premises respectively so to be granted and conveyed in exchange to such parson, vicar, or other incumbent.”

(1) The proviso here omitted was repealed by 6 Geo. 4, c. 8, s. 2.

By sect. 2, the premises given in exchange are to be subject to the same tithes as those taken in exchange (unless it be agreed between the parties to such exchange that the same shall become and be subject to the render or payment of tithes in kind) from and immediately after such conveyance in exchange, in case such first-mentioned lands are situate in the same parish, vicarage, or parochial chapelry, with the said lands or premises before glebe thereof, or belonging thereto, but not otherwise.

Tithes of exchanged lands.

Sect. 3 provides for cases where the title of the person conveying the lands in exchange is disputed, and enacts that after the exchange the incumbent is not to be evicted.

Incumbent not to be evicted.

By sect. 4, "It shall and may be lawful to and for the parson, vicar, or other incumbent of any ecclesiastical benefice, perpetual curacy, or parochial chapelry, of or to which benefice, perpetual curacy, or parochial chapelry, any manor or lordship is parcel or appurtenant, and as parcel of or belonging to which manor or lordship any lands or tenements are or have been usually granted or demised, or grantable or demisable by copy of court roll, or otherwise, for any life or lives, or for any term or number of years absolutely or determinable on any life or lives, by deed indented (and to be registered as hereinafter mentioned) with the consent of the patron and bishop (to be testified as hereinafter mentioned) to annex to the said benefice, perpetual curacy, or parochial chapelry, as and for glebe land, or parsonage or glebe house or houses and buildings thereof, all or any part or parts of such lands or tenements, whether lying within the local limits of such benefice, perpetual curacy, or parochial chapelry, or not, and from and after such annexation the said lands and tenements so annexed shall cease to be thereafter grantable or demisable by any incumbent of the said benefice, perpetual curacy, or parochial chapelry (otherwise than as glebe lands are or shall be by law grantable or demisable), but shall from thenceforth be and become, and be deemed and taken to be the glebe lands and parsonage or glebe house or houses of and annexed to such benefice, perpetual curacy, or parochial chapelry, for ever, to all intents and purposes whatsoever, without any licence or writ of ad quod damnum, the statute of mortmain, or any other statute or law to the contrary notwithstanding: Provided always, that no such annexation shall in any wise annul, determine, or affect any grant or demise then previously made and actually existing of the said lands and tenements so to be annexed as last aforesaid" (m).

Power to annex premises belonging to manors, and heretofore grantable and demisable as copyhold or otherwise.

Such annexations not to annul existing grants or demises.

By sect. 5, "Where there shall be no existing parsonage or glebe house on any ecclesiastical benefice, perpetual curacy, or parochial chapelry, or where the existing parsonage or glebe house, or the outbuildings thereof, on any such benefice, perpetual curacy, or parochial chapelry, shall be inconvenient or too small or incommodiously situate, it shall be lawful from and after the passing of this act for any person or persons, being owners in fee simple, or for any corporation sole or aggregate, with or without confirmation, as the case may require, and by and with such consent, and to be signified as hereinafter mentioned, of the incumbent, patron, and bishop, to give, grant, and convey, by deed indented, and to be registered as hereinafter is mentioned, to any parson, vicar, or other incumbent of such benefice, curacy, or chapelry, for the time being, who shall also have power to accept the same, any messuage, outbuildings, yard, garden, orchard, and croft, or any of them, with their appurtenances, or any right of way, or other easement, whether lying within the local limits of such benefice, perpetual curacy, or parochial chapelry or not, but so as that the same be conveniently situate for actual residence or occupation by the incumbent thereof; and which messuage, outbuildings, yard, garden, orchard, and croft, with their appurtenances or right of way, or other easement, shall for ever from and after such grant and conveyance thereof be and become annexed to and be deemed and taken to be the parsonage or glebe house, outbuildings, yard, garden, orchard, croft, appurtenances and right of way or other easement of the said benefice, curacy, or chapelry, to all intents and purposes whatsoever, and be holden and enjoyed by the said incumbent and his successors accordingly, without any licence or writ of ad quod damnum, the statute of mortmain, or any other statute or law to the contrary notwithstanding; and from and after such grant and annexation it shall be lawful for the incumbent for the time being of the said benefice, curacy, or chapelry, to which such grant and annexation shall have been made (with the consent in writing of such patron and bishop under their hands and seals to be duly registered as hereinafter is mentioned), to take down and remove any parsonage or glebe house, and outbuildings, or any part thereof, which before such annexation belonged to the said benefice, curacy, or chapelry (if the same or part thereof cannot be better applied to the permanent advantage of such benefice, curacy, or chapelry), and with the like consent as aforesaid, to apply the materials, or the produce thereof, if sold, towards some lasting improvement of the said benefice, curacy, or chapelry: Provided always, that nothing herein contained shall extend to enable any persons being infants or lunatics, or femes covert without their husbands, to make any such gift, grant, or conveyance; anything in this act contained to the contrary in anywise notwithstanding."

Power to take down parsonage house in certain cases.

Persons not sui juris excluded from granting.

By sect. 6, reciting 17 Geo. 3, c. 53, and 21 Geo. 3, c. 66, "and that there are many ecclesiastical benefices, perpetual curacies, and parochial chapelries to which no glebe land, or only a small portion of glebe land is belonging; and it is therefore expedient to enable the making provision by purchase, for the annexation of glebe land to such benefices, perpetual curacies and parochial chapelries;" it is enacted, that "it shall be lawful for the parson, vicar, or other incumbent for the time being, of any ecclesiastical benefice, perpetual curacy, or parochial chapelry, the existing glebe whereof shall not exceed five statute acres, with the consent of the patron and bishop, to be signified as hereinafter mentioned, to purchase any lands not exceeding in the whole twenty statute acres, with the necessary outbuildings thereon, whether being within the local limits of the said benefice, perpetual curacy, or parochial chapelry, or not, but so as that the same be situate conveniently for building a parsonage or a glebe house and outbuildings, and for gardens and glebe thereof, or for any of the said purposes, and for actual residence and occupation by the incumbent thereof, such land being of freehold tenure, or being copyhold of inheritance, or for life or lives, holden of any manor or lordship belonging to the same benefice, perpetual curacy, or parochial chapelry; and which lands so purchased shall for ever, from and after the grant and conveyance thereof, be and become annexed to and glebe of such benefice, perpetual curacy, or parochial chapelry, to all intents and purposes whatsoever, and be holden and enjoyed by such incumbent, and his successors accordingly, without any licence or writ of ad quod damnum; and the whole or any part or parts of the said lands, which before such annexation were or was of copyhold tenure, shall for ever, from and after such annexation, become and be of freehold tenure; the statute of mortmain or any other statute or law to the contrary notwithstanding."

Power to purchase land, to be annexed to benefices as glebe land.

Copyhold land so purchased to be holden as freehold.

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 8, s. 3, it is further provided, that "It shall and may be lawful for the parson, vicar or other incumbent for the time being of any ecclesiastical benefice, perpetual curacy or parochial chapelry, to grant and convey, in the manner, and by and under the several powers, provisions, conditions, and restrictions contained in the" 55 Geo. 3, c. 147, and in 56 Geo. 3, c. 52, "and in this act, to any such person or persons, or corporation, as in the said first-mentioned act are described, any such lands or tenements as are described in the same act belonging to his benefice, in lieu of and in exchange for any lands or tenements of the description mentioned in the said first-mentioned act, as those which are thereby authorized to be accepted and taken in exchange by any such parson, vicar or other incumbent, although such last-mentioned lands or tenements may be copyhold of inheritance holden of a manor not belonging to such ecclesiastical benefice, perpetual curacy or parochial chapelry: Provided always, that no such exchange be made without the consent of the lord of the manor of which the lands to be taken in exchange are holden: Provided always, that from and immediately after such conveyance, the lands or tenements accepted and taken in exchange by any such parson, vicar or other incumbent, shall become and be of freehold tenure, and the lands or tenements by him granted and conveyed, and which before such conveyance belonged to his benefice, perpetual curacy

By sect. 15 of 55 Geo. 3, c. 147, "Whenever any exchange or purchase is intended to be made under the authority of this act, a map or maps under an actual survey, on oath (which oath any justice of the peace is hereby authorized to administer) by some competent surveyor to be approved of by the patron, bishop, and incumbent, shall in cases of exchange be made and taken of the whole of the said glebe lands, or of such part or parts thereof as will sufficiently enable the bishop to judge of the convenience and expediency of the proposed exchange, and also of the glebe or parsonage house, buildings, and premises, any part of which it is proposed to exchange, as well as of the other lands, house, buildings, and premises, proposed to be taken in exchange; and shall in cases of purchase be made and taken of the whole of the lands or hereditaments so to be purchased; and in cases of exchange the same surveyor shall in like manner make a valuation on oath (to be administered as aforesaid) of the said glebe lands and glebe or parsonage house, buildings, and premises, and also of the lands, house, buildings, and premises intended to be taken in exchange, and in cases of purchase the same surveyor shall in like manner make a valuation on oath of the lands or hereditaments so intended to be purchased; and every such valuation shall include and distinctly specify the value of all timber and other trees growing thereon, and of the rights of common, and of all mines, minerals, and quarries (if any), and of all other rights, profits, and advantages whatsoever (if any) to the said premises, or either of them, or any part or parcel of the same, respectively belonging."

By sect. 16, "Provided also, that in all cases, as well of exchange as of purchase under this act, the bishop, on receiving such map or maps and valuation, shall, if he shall in the first instance so far approve of the said exchange or purchase, issue a commission of inquiry under his hand and seal, directed to such persons as he shall think proper, not being fewer than six in number, and of whom three at the least shall be beneficed clergymen actually resident in the neighbourhood of the benefice, perpetual curacy, or parochial chapelry, whereto it shall be proposed to annex any buildings or lands by exchange or purchase under the authority of this act, and of whom one shall be a barrister at law of three years' standing at the least, to be named by the senior judge in the last preceding commission of nisi prius for the county in which the said benefice, perpetual curacy, or parochial chapelry, shall be situate⁽ⁿ⁾, and the return to which commission of inquiry shall be made and signed by a majority of the persons therein named, after an actual inspection by them of all the premises, with such map and valuation before them, and not otherwise, and three at least of the persons making and signing the same shall be either three such beneficed clergymen actually resident as aforesaid, or two at least of such beneficed clergymen resident as aforesaid, together with such barrister as aforesaid; and in no case whatever shall any exchange or purchase be effected under the authority of this act, unless such commission shall have been previously issued and returned, and unless the return to such commission, so made and signed as aforesaid, shall certify that, after an actual inspection and examination of the premises, such exchange or purchase, in the judgment of the persons making the said return, is fit and proper to be made, and will promote the permanent advantage or convenience of the incumbent of such benefice, perpetual curacy, or parochial chapelry, and his successors in the same."

necessary, bishop may purchase any conveniently situated house, and a certain portion of land.

Sect. 71. "The buildings and lands so to be purchased shall be conveyed to the patron of such benefice and his heirs or successors, as the case may be, in trust for the sole use and benefit of the incumbent of such benefice for the time being and his successors, and shall be annexed to such benefice, and be enjoyed and go in succession with the same for ever; but no contract of purchase made by the nominee shall be valid until confirmed by the bishop by writing under his hand; and every such purchase deed shall be in the form or to the effect contained in the schedule hereunto annexed, and shall be registered in such manner and in such office as the other deeds are hereby directed to be registered."

Buildings and lands to be conveyed to patron in trust for the incumbent for the time being.

By 1 & 2 Vict. c. 23, s. 6, "When it shall happen that any existing house and offices belonging to any benefice shall be unfit for the residence of the incumbent thereof, and shall be incapable of being enlarged or repaired so as to be rendered fit for his residence; and it shall be so certified to the bishop of the diocese wherein such benefice shall be situate by some competent surveyor or architect, and that it will be advantageous to the benefice that such house and offices should be suffered to remain, it shall be lawful for such incumbent, with the consent in writing of such bishop (such consent to be registered in the Power to incumbent (with consent of patron and ordinary and archbishop) to sell house of residence with contiguous land not exceeding twelve acres if house inconveniently situated or under special circumstances.

Sect. 7. "Where the residence house, gardens, orchard, and appurtenances belonging to any benefice shall be inconveniently situate, or for other good and sufficient reasons it shall be thought advisable to sell and dispose thereof, it shall and may be lawful for the incumbent of such benefice, and he is hereby authorized and empowered, with the consent and approbation of the ordinary and patron thereof, and of the archbishop of the province, to be signified by their executing the deed or conveyance hereby authorized to be made, absolutely to sell and dispose of such house, gardens, orchard, and appurtenances, any or either of them, with any land contiguous thereto not exceeding acres, to any person or persons whomsoever, either altogether or in parcels, and for such sum or sums of money as to such ordinary and patron and archbishop shall appear fair and reasonable, and upon payment of the purchase-money for the same as hereinafter mentioned by deed indented to convey and assure such house, gardens, orchard, land, and appurtenances unto and to the use of the purchaser or purchasers thereof, his or their heirs or assigns, or as he or they shall direct or appoint" (n).

By sect. 14, in case of the purchase of land for the purposes of that act the powers and provisions of 7 Geo. 4, c. 66, enabling persons under disability to sell lands, were to be applied. This act has, however, practically been superseded by the larger provisions of 28 & 29 Vict. c. 69, s. 4, which are as follows:—

Purchase from persons under disability.

28 & 29 Vict. c. 69.

“It shall be lawful for the principal officer of any public department holding any messuages, buildings, lands, tenements, or hereditaments for or on behalf of her Majesty, or otherwise for the public use or the use of such department, and for every body politic, corporate, or collegiate, and corporation aggregate or sole, and for all trustees, guardians, commissioners, or other persons having the control, care, or management of any hospital, school, charitable foundation, or other public institution, and for all other persons by the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (q), empowered to sell and convey or release lands by any assurance under the hand and seal or under the common seal, as the case may be, of such principal officer, body, or corporation, or under the hands and seals, or hand and seal, of such trustees, guardians, commissioners, or other persons or person, to grant and convey or release, either by way of voluntary gift or of sale, to the said governors (v), in fee simple or otherwise, any messuages, buildings, lands, tenements or hereditaments to be used as and for parsonages or residences for incumbents of benefices, or the outbuildings, yards, gardens, or appurtenances thereto, or as and for sites or for enlarging sites for such parsonages or residences or the outbuildings, yards, gardens, or appurtenances thereto; and all such assurances may be made according to the form contained in the 20th section of the act” 1 Vict. c. 20, “or as near thereto as the circumstances of the case will admit, or in any other form which the said governors may approve; but no such assurance or assurances from the same body or persons, otherwise than upon a sale for the fair value, shall comprise (including the site of any buildings) more than one acre, and upon every such assurance by way of sale the purchase-money may be paid to the seller or sellers, or as

Power of sale
given by 1 & 2
Vict. c. 23,
extended.

By 2 & 3 Vict. c. 49, s. 17, "In any case in which any dwelling house, shop, warehouse, or other erection or building (other than the house of residence) belonging to any benefice shall be so old and ruinous as that it would be useless or inexpedient to expend money in repairing and maintaining the same, or for other good and sufficient reasons it shall be thought advisable to sell and dispose of the same, it shall and may be lawful for the incumbent of such benefice, and he is hereby authorized and empowered, with the consent and approbation of the ordinary and patron thereof and of the archbishop of the province, to be signified in the manner prescribed by the last-mentioned act, absolutely to sell and dispose of such dwelling house, shop, warehouse, or other erection or building, with the yards, gardens, orchard, croft, and appurtenances thereto belonging, or any of them, to any person or persons whomsoever, either altogether, or in parcels, and for such sum or sums of money as to such ordinary, patron, and archbishop shall appear fair and reasonable, and upon payment of the purchase-money for the same as hereinafter mentioned, by deed indented, or in the case of copyhold or customary hereditaments by surrender or other customary mode of assurance, to convey and assure the hereditaments which shall be so sold unto and to the use of the purchaser or purchasers thereof, his or their heirs or assigns, or as he or they shall direct or appoint" (q).

By sect. 18, the purchase-monies are to be paid to the governors of Queen Anne's bounty.

governors to such benefice out of the general funds and profits of the said governors, or otherwise, for the benefit and augmentation thereof."

Sect. 20. "In any case in which upon the sale of any such lands or hereditaments as aforesaid, the patronage of the benefice to which the same shall belong shall be in the crown, or the advowson and right of patronage of such benefice shall be part of the possessions of the duchy of Cornwall, or the patron of such benefice shall be a minor, idiot, lunatic or feme covert, then and in every such case the consent required by this act on the part of the patron of such benefice shall and may be testified by the execution of such deed or assurance or other writing as aforesaid by such and the same persons as by" 1 & 2 Vict. c. 23 (r) "are in like cases directed or authorized to testify the consent of the patron to the exercise of the several powers given by the said act, or by certain other acts therein mentioned or referred to; and in all other cases the consent required by this act on the part of the patron of any benefice shall be given by the person or persons who would be entitled to present or nominate or to collate to such benefice in case the same were actually vacant at the time of giving such consent."

Who are to consent as patrons.

As to the resale of lands formerly purchased or annexed by or with the consent of the governors to particular benefices, where such lands "are situate elsewhere than within the parish or parishes of such benefice, or some adjoining parish or parishes," it is provided by sect. 15, that it shall be lawful for the incumbent of the benefice (with the consent of the governors, ordinary and patron) "absolutely to sell and dispose of the said lands or hereditaments, or any part thereof, to any person or persons whomsoever, either together or in parcels, and either by public sale, or by private contract, for such sum or sums of money as to the said governors, ordinary, and patron shall seem fair and reasonable; and upon payment of the purchase-money for the same, as hereinafter directed, by deed indented, or, in the case of any lands or hereditaments of copyhold or customary tenure, by surrender or other customary mode of assurance, to convey and assure the lands or hereditaments comprised in such sale, unto and to the use of the purchaser or purchasers thereof, his, her, or their heirs, executors, administrators or assigns respectively, or as he, she, or they shall direct or appoint." The consent of the patron and ordinary is to be testified by their executing the conveyance, except in the case of copyhold or customary freeholds, where it may be testified by writing under hand and seal to be produced to the lord or steward of the manor.

Re-sale of lands purchased by Queen Anne's bounty, or otherwise annexed to benefice.

By sect. 16, this power is extended to cases where the lands "shall be situate within the parish or parishes of such benefice, or some adjoining parish or parishes, but on account of any special circumstance or circumstances a sale of the said lands or

Powers for defining and exchanging glebe.

By 5 & 6 Vict. c. 54 (one of the Tithe Redemption Acts), sect. 5, "For the purpose of defining and settling the glebe lands of any benefice, on the application of the spiritual person to whom the same belongs in right of such benefice, and with the consent of the landowner or landowners having or claiming title to the land so defined as glebe, and being in possession thereof, the tithe commissioners shall, during the continuance of the commission, as well before as after the completion of any commutation, have the same powers which they have for ascertaining, drawing, and defining the boundaries of the lands of any landowners on their application; and also upon the like application of any spiritual person the said commissioners shall have power to exchange the glebe lands, or any part thereof, for other land within the same or any adjoining parish, or otherwise conveniently situated, with the consent of the ordinary and patron of the benefice and of the landowner or landowners having or claiming title to the land so to be given in exchange for the glebe lands, and being in actual possession thereof as aforesaid, such consent to be testified as their consent under the first-recited act (s) is testified to anything for which their consent is therein required; and in every such case the tithe commissioners shall make an award in like manner as awards are made, under the first-recited act (s), setting forth the contents, description and boundary of the glebe lands, as finally settled by them, and of the lands awarded to the several parties to whom any lands theretofore part or reputed part of the glebe lands are to be awarded; and every such award shall have all the incidents of an agreement confirmed by the said commissioners for giving land instead of tithes, and in every case of exchange shall operate as a conveyance of the lands theretofore part or reputed part of the glebe lands to the several persons to whom the same shall be awarded, and to their heirs and successors, executors and administrators, as the case may be; and such lands shall thereupon be holden by the same tenure, and upon the like uses and trusts, and subject to the like incidents, as the land awarded as glebe in exchange for the same was formerly holden; and the expense of so defining, exchanging, and settling any glebe lands shall be borne in such manner as the tithe commissioners shall think just."

his benefice and charged upon or payable out of any lands or tithe rentcharge."

By 9 & 10 Vict. c. 73, s. 22, the provisions of 5 & 6 Vict. c. 54, "for the exchange of glebe lands for other lands shall authorise and be deemed to have authorised the exchange of glebe lands for other lands, although at the time of such exchange, or of the applications in relation thereto, no proceedings for or concerning the commutation of tithes in the parish in which such glebe lands may be situate shall have been pending, and whether the commutation of tithes in such parish shall or shall not have been completed."

9 & 10 Vict. c. 73.

Glebe lands may be exchanged although no commutation be pending.

By 23 & 24 Vict. c. 93, s. 41, "So much of the said recited acts (v) as provides that the land given to any spiritual person in exchange for glebe of any benefice shall be free from incumbrances, and shall not be of copyhold or customary tenure, subject to arbitrary fine or the render of heriots, shall be repealed, and all conditions, charges, incumbrances and every other incident affecting the land so given shall upon such an exchange be transferred to the said glebe taken in exchange for the same land; and the glebe land taken in exchange for any copyhold or customary land shall be held of the lord of the same manor, under the same rent, custom and services, as the said copyhold or customary land previously was or ought to have been held, and without any new admittance in respect thereof, but the consent of the lord of the same manor shall be necessary to any exchange in which any land of copyhold or customary tenure shall be included."

23 & 24 Vict. c. 93.

Copyhold and other lands may be exchanged for glebe.

By 3 & 4 Vict. c. 113, s. 68 (x), for the purposes of that act, and with the consent of the bishop or chapter as the case may be, lands and hereditaments belonging to any bishop or chapter may be sold or exchanged by the ecclesiastical commissioners.

3 & 4 Vict. c. 113.

Lands of bishops, deans and chapters.

By 5 & 6 Vict. c. 26, s. 8, these provisions are extended and may be put in force for procuring new residence houses for bishops, deans, or canons under that act.

SECT. 3.—The Leasing Statutes of Victoria (y).

These statutes are 5 & 6 Vict. c. 27; 5 & 6 Vict. c. 108, and 21 & 22 Vict. c. 57.

By 5 & 6 Vict. c. 27, provision is made for the letting of glebe lands on agricultural leases by the incumbents as follows:—

5 & 6 Vict. c. 27.

Agricultural leases.

By sect. 1, any incumbent may by deed, with the consent of the patron and bishop (and of the lord of the manor where the lands, being copyhold, &c., could not usually be let without his licence), who are to be parties to the deed, let any part of the glebe with the buildings and cottages thereon, for a term not exceeding fourteen years in possession. The best rent is to be gotten, to be paid quarterly; and the lessee is to covenant for payment of the rent, rates and taxes, not to assign or underlet the premises without the consent of the incumbent, patron and bishop, to cultivate the lands according to the best system of husbandry, to leave the premises in good repair, to insure against fire, and to lay out the insurance monies, when there is a fire, in rebuilding. All timber and minerals are to be reserved, and there is to be a power of re-entry for non-payment of rent and in case of felony, bankruptcy, &c., or breach of covenant by the lessee. Leases for twenty years may be granted where a more expensive mode of cultivation is to be entered on, or where draining or building is to be done.

Restrictions on powers of letting.

By sect. 2, the house of residence and ten acres of ground round it, if there be so much land within five miles of it, otherwise all the land within five miles of it, are excepted from the provisions of this act.

Appointment of surveyors.

By sect. 3, before any lease is made a surveyor is to be appointed by bishop, patron and incumbent, who shall make a map of the lands intended to be let and the other lands of the benefice, so that the bishop and patron may have full opportunities of judging of the situation and convenience for actual occupation of the lands intended to be reserved, and shall certify that the lands are fit to be let, and what is the best way of cultivating or improving them and the best rent to be gotten; and his map and report is to be signed by him, verified before a justice of the peace and delivered to the bishop; but an old map may be used.

Evidence of compliance.

By sect. 4, an acknowledgment in writing by the incumbent shall be evidence of the execution of the counterpart of the lease, and the execution of the lease by bishop and patron that the other conditions required by the act have been complied with.

Surrender of leases.

By sect. 5, no surrender of any lease made under this act shall be valid for any purpose unless the bishop, patron, and incumbent are parties to and execute the instrument of surrender, and a surrender shall only have force from the time when the instrument is so executed.

Peculiars.

Sect. 6 enables bishops having jurisdiction over peculiars to execute in those peculiars the powers given by this act to the bishop of the diocese; but where there are peculiars not belonging to any bishop or archbishop, the powers are to be executed by the bishop of the diocese within which such peculiars are locally situate.

Consent of patrons.

Sects. 7—11 make provision for the giving of the consent of the patron where he is under legal disability or beyond seas, or where the patronage is in the crown, the duke of Cornwall, corporations, or more than one set of patrons.

By sect. 12, where one person happens to fill more than one of the positions of bishop, patron, lord of the manor, or incumbent, he may consent and act once for all his several capacities. Consent in several capacities.

By sect. 13, the provisions of this act are extended to the case of lands vested in trustees, whereof at least three-fourths of the net income are payable to an incumbent authorized to lease under this act; and the trustees are to execute the lease. Lands holden in trust.

By sect. 14, provision is made for the deposit of documents in the registry of the diocese or peculiar, and for making copies of such documents evidence. Documents.

In the case of Green v. Jenkins (z), it was holden by the Lord Chancellor (Lord Campbell) and Lord Justice Turner (dissentiente Lord Justice Knight Bruce) that this statute does not operate to restrict any power of leasing possessed by incumbents under the old law. Green v. Jenkins.

By 5 & 6 Vict. c. 108, The Ecclesiastical Leasing Act, 1842, all ecclesiastical corporations, aggregate or sole (except colleges or corporations of vicars choral, priest vicars, senior vicars, custos and vicars or minor canons, and ecclesiastical hospitals or the masters thereof), are empowered to lease by deed any lands or houses for any term of years not exceeding ninety-nine in possession only "to any person who may be willing to improve or repair the present or any future houses thereon, or any of them, or to erect other houses instead thereof, or to erect any houses or other buildings on any lands whereon no building shall be standing, or who shall be willing to annex any part of the same lands to buildings erected or to be erected on the said lands, or any part thereof, or otherwise to improve the said premises or any part thereof." The lessee may be allowed to take down and sell the old buildings, and may make ways, passages, drains, reservoirs, yards, etc., and may dig up and carry away earth, clay or gravel in order to build or repair. The best rent is to be reserved, payable half-yearly; and there are to be covenants to build or repair within a specified time, to keep in repair, to pay rent, rates and taxes, to insure in special insurance offices, to use the insurance money, when there has been a fire, in rebuilding, to yield up possession at the end of the term, and to give a copy of any assignment of the lease to the reversioner within twenty-one days after it has been made; and there are to be powers of entry to inspect the premises and of re-entry for non-payment of rent or breach of covenants. Counterparts of the leases are to be executed by the lessees. 5 & 6 Vict. c. 108.

Building leases.

By sect. 2, for the first six years, or any other six years to be specified, a smaller rent may be reserved than is afterwards or at other times during the term reserved. Less rent for six years.

By sect. 3, the ecclesiastical corporation may lay out and appropriate any part of the ground which they are empowered Dedication of squares and gardens.

(z) 1 De G. F. & J. p. 454; 6 Jur., N. S. p. 515; Jenkins v. Green (No. 1), 27 Beav. p. 440; 28 Beav. p. 87; 5 Jur., N. S. p. 906.

to lease for streets, avenues, gardens, squares or manufacturing yards, either in such manner as shall be provided in the lease or by a general deed enrolled within six months after execution in one of the Courts of Record at Westminster.

Way and water leases.

By sect. 4, ecclesiastical corporations may in the same manner grant licences or privileges with respect to any water flowing in or through their lands, and may let any wayleaves, waterleaves, canals, watercourses, tramroads or railways for a term not exceeding sixty years in possession only, for the best rent or toll to be paid half-yearly; so that there be a power of re-entry or making void the licence or lease for non-payment of rent, and so that the grantee or lessee execute a counterpart of the grant or lease. And there may be a condition in the grant or lease compelling the grantee or lessee to repair or help to repair any ways, and to keep open any watercourses.

Mining leases.

By sect. 6, ecclesiastical corporations may in the same manner let for a term not exceeding sixty years in possession only mines, minerals, quarries or beds, with the right of opening the same, or of working any other mine from them, with such portions of land and such facilities of way or passage as may be expedient for getting the minerals or stone. No premium or fine is to be taken for the lease, and the lease is to reserve such rents or royalties, and have such powers and covenants as may be approved by the ecclesiastical commissioners, having due regard to the custom of the district.

Confirmation of void leases.

By sect. 5, where a void lease has been granted, an ecclesiastical corporation may, in the same manner as they might grant a lease, or by general deed purporting to have been granted under this act, and with the consent hereafter required, confirm such void lease. In the same manner a surrender of any lease under this act may be accepted; and upon such surrender mines or quarries may be leased afresh for the full term of this act; so may land or houses, if less than a quarter of the old term remains unexpired; if, however, a quarter or more remains unexpired, they may only be let again for a term not exceeding the old unexpired term, and at not less than the old rents: but the old lease may be divided, and separate leases at apportioned rents may be made of the property, so long as such apportioned rent is in no case less than 40s. or more than one-fifth of the rack-rent value of the land and houses comprised in it when built and finished.

No fine or premium, however, may be asked for any confirmation or for a surrender or re-grant of any lease, and the lessee is to consent to any such confirmation or new lease and to execute a counterpart.

Effect on existing powers.

By sect. 8, this act is not to affect any existing powers of leasing, except that where once this act has been put in force, every lease granted otherwise than under it shall reserve the best improved rent, payable half-yearly.

Restrictions

By sect. 9, the houses of residence of any corporation sole, or member of a corporation aggregate, with the offices, appurtenances, pleasure grounds, &c., are not to be leased; nor is any grant of minerals, ways or watercourses which might lessen the enjoyment of any such house of residence to be made; and the act is not to be construed to enable persons disabled from leasing by any local or private act of parliament.

By sect. 7, the execution of the lease, grant or general deed by the persons required to consent thereto is to be evidence that all the conditions required by the act have been complied with. Evidence.

By sects. 16, 17, it is provided that leases granted otherwise than under the act may be surrendered, and new leases according to the act granted at once upon such surrender to the surrenderor or to any other person. Provisions are made for deducting the value of the interest surrendered from the rents or royalties which would otherwise have been payable on a lease granted under the act, and for the interests of under-lessees. Surrender of old leases.

By sect. 19, no person shall be liable for dilapidations in respect of any houses or buildings let on lease under the act (a). Dilapidations.

By sects. 20, 21, the parties who are to consent to all leases, grants or general deeds are defined, and their consent is ordered to be evidenced by executing the deed. These consenting parties are the ecclesiastical commissioners in all cases; the patron also where a lease is granted by the incumbent of a benefice; and the lord of the manor where the lands or hereditaments to be leased are of copyhold or customary tenure and the lease is such as would in ordinary cases require his licence. Consent to leases.

By sects. 22—28, the same provisions as to the consent of patrons in special circumstances, the power of consenting in more than one character, and the extension of the act to lands held in trust for ecclesiastical corporations, are enacted as in the act preceding, 5 & 6 Vict. c. 27.

By sect. 29, provision is made for the deposit of the counterparts of the leases, grants, or general deeds with the ecclesiastical commissioners and for making copies thereof evidence. Documents.

Sect. 30 makes absolutely void any lease, grant, or confirmation for which any fine or premium directly or indirectly shall have been given (b). As to fines.

By sects. 10—13, it was provided that the ecclesiastical commissioners should either receive directly, or gain to the extent of having a smaller sum to pay to the bishop in consequence of, any improvement in the value of any see arising from leases granted under this act (c); and it is declared that they shall receive any increase in the incomes of any cathedral chapter from improved value of the chapter property which shall give to the dean and canons of such chapter more than is allowed by 4 & 5 Vict. c. 39 to the deans and canons of St. Paul's, Westminster Application of increased income.

and Manchester (c); that they shall receive the improved value of all archdeaconries over an annual income of 500*l.*; and that they may by order in council within three years from the date of any lease, after giving notice to the patron and allowing him to be heard before the privy council, appropriate any part of the rents or royalties payable on any lease made by the incumbent of a benefice, "in making additional provision for the cure of souls." But the annual income of the benefice is never to be left at less than 300*l.*, or less than 500*l.* if the population amount to 1,000, or 600*l.* if to 2,000.

Reservation in mining leases.

By sect. 14, where the lease is one of minerals or quarries, in all cases from three-fourths to a moiety, as may be determined by order in council, of the improved value shall be paid to the ecclesiastical commissioners and "shall be subject to the provisions relating to moneys payable to them," and the remainder only shall be deemed the "improved value" for the purpose of the foregoing sections (d).

21 & 22 Vict.
c. 57.

Leases in consideration of premiums.

By 21 & 22 Vict. c. 57, the Ecclesiastical Leasing Act, 1858, s. 1, the provisions of the preceding act are much altered and are extended to enable all ecclesiastical corporations with the consents required, if it shall seem to the ecclesiastical commissioners to be for the permanent advantage of the estate of the corporation, to lease their lands, houses, mines, minerals or other property, either in consideration of premiums or partly of premiums or not, and for any term and subject to such covenants, stipulations, conditions, and agreements on the part of the lessee as the ecclesiastical commissioners may think proper: and further, with the same consents (except the consent of the lord of the manor in cases of copyhold) to sell, exchange and make partition of their property for an equivalent in money, lands or hereditaments, or partly in one and partly in the other or otherwise. Provided only that where a sale is to be made of lands belonging to the incumbent of a benefice three months' notice must first be given to the bishop of the diocese.

Sale, exchange, and partition.

Payment to ecclesiastical commissioners.

By sect. 2, all sums of money payable in respect of premiums on the granting of leases or on sales, exchanges, or partitions, and all rents, royalties and other reservations reserved or made payable by any lease (except "moneys which in respect of any sale shall become due and payable by way of perpetual annual chief or other rent or rent-charge" (e)), are to be paid to the ecclesiastical commissioners. The commissioners may leave the money on mortgage of the lands, or may invest it in the public stocks or funds. And the money is to be applied by them in the purchase of other lands and hereditaments; and the lands and hereditaments so purchased or received by way of partition and exchange are to be conveyed to the ecclesiastical corporation, and to be subject to the same powers of lease, sale, exchange and partition as the original lands.

By sect. 3, in order to raise money to pay for equality of exchange or partition, or to purchase land or any outstanding leasehold interest in land belonging to any ecclesiastical corporation, the corporation with the consent of the ecclesiastical commissioners may borrow on mortgage.

Power to mortgage.

By sects. 4, 5, power is given to enter into and vary contracts, to grant licences or permissions to search for mines, to accept surrenders of leases and release breaches of covenant by lessees: and the expenses incurred in putting these provisions in operation may be charged on the property of the corporation, if at least one-twentieth of the principal be paid off every year.

Subsidiary powers.

By sect. 8, where the interest of a lessee under any ecclesiastical corporation in part of the lands in his lease is determined by sale or purchase under the act, the ecclesiastical commissioners may by a memorandum in writing apportion the old rent between the land so sold or purchased and the lands still retained under the lease, and such apportioned rent becomes the ancient and accustomed rent for these latter lands.

Apportionment of rents.

By sect. 10, all the provisions contained in the 5 & 6 Vict. c. 108, as to the improved value of any (f) dignities, offices, or benefices, are extended to improved values gained under the act: and it is further provided (in extension of sect. 13 of that act) that, where any improvements are made in the income of any benefice, the ecclesiastical commissioners may, in the manner indicated and after the notice to the patron required in the former act, at any time or times after the beginning of the improvement, without regard to the limit of three years imposed by the former act, cause such portion of the improved income as they shall think expedient to be paid to them. This however is not to operate retrospectively, nor to affect the incumbent in possession at the time of the granting of the lease.

Provisions as to increased value.

By the same section incumbents of benefices with cure of souls are exempted from the operation of sect. 14 of the former act.

By sect. 9, "No lease of any lands purchased or acquired, or in which the estate or interest of a lessee, or of a holder of copyhold or customary land, shall be purchased or acquired by any ecclesiastical corporation under the act, shall (except under the express power contained in 5 & 6 Vict. c. 108, or in this act) be made or granted otherwise than from year to year, or for a term of years in possession, not exceeding fourteen years, at the best annual rent that can be reasonably gotten, without fine, and the lessee not to be made dispunishable for waste or exempted from liability in respect of waste."

No lease to be granted of land acquired under the act, except at rack-rent.

(f) It is presumed that these words do not include bishoprics, which were exempted from the operation of the former act by the now repealed act, 13 & 14 Vict. c. 94, s. 16.

Relation of 21 & 22 Vict.
c. 57, to
14 & 15 Vict.
c. 104;

The 21 & 22 Vict. c. 57, in many of its provisions, especially those contained in sects. 4 and 8, runs parallel with those contained in 14 & 15 Vict. c. 104, and its amending acts, which will be mentioned shortly.

There is, however, this peculiarity that what is authorized under the one set of acts to be done by the ecclesiastical commissioners is required by the other set of acts to be done by the church estates commissioners.

Sect. 6, however, of 21 & 22 Vict. c. 57, provides that no sale, exchange, or partition shall be made under that act which could be made under 14 & 15 Vict. c. 104, so long as the last-mentioned act (which was a temporary one, continued from time to time) is in force.

to other enabling acts.

Sect. 7 provides that nothing in the act shall repeal any powers or provisions vested in the ecclesiastical commissioners by 6 & 7 Vict. c. 37, or by any acts relating to the ecclesiastical commissioners, or in the acts relating to the enfranchisement of copyholds or the inclosure of lands, or in the Church Building Acts; but the act shall be cumulative thereof or alternative therewith.

29 & 30 Vict.
c. 81.

By 29 & 30 Vict. c. 81, neither 21 & 22 Vict. c. 57, nor 5 & 6 Vict. c. 108, were to apply to the Isle of Man.

How leases of lands acquired by any corporation under the act may be made.

By 14 & 15 Vict. c. 104, s. 9 (g), "No lease of any lands purchased or acquired or in which the estate or interest of a lessee, or of a holder of copyhold or customary lands, is purchased or acquired by any ecclesiastical corporation under the act, shall, except as hereinafter provided, be granted by such ecclesiastical corporation, otherwise than from year to year, or for a term of years in possession not exceeding fourteen years, at the best annual rent that can be reasonably gotten, without fine, the lessee not to be made dispunishable for waste or exempted from liability in respect of waste: provided always, that it shall be lawful for such ecclesiastical corporation, with the approval of the church estates commissioners, from time to time to grant mining or building leases of any such lands, for such considerations, upon such terms, and generally in such manner as such commissioners, under the circumstances of each case, may think fit; and it shall be lawful for such commissioners to require that any portion of the rent received on any such lease shall be invested and disposed of in like manner as herein provided with respect to monies to be received on the sale of any lands by any such corporation."

Lands as-

By 23 & 24 Vict. c. 124, providing for the assignment of new estates, in lieu of the old ones, to archbishops and bishops:—

By sect. 8. "No lands assigned or secured as the endowment of any see under this act shall be granted by the archbishop or bishop otherwise than from year to year, or for a term of years in possession not exceeding twenty-one years, at the best annual rent that can be reasonably gotten, without fine, the lessee not to be made punishable for waste or exempted from liability in respect of waste, and so that in every such lease such or the like covenants, conditions and reservations be entered into, reserved, or contained with or for the benefit of the archbishop or bishop and his successors" as under 5 & 6 Vict. c. 27, s. 1, "are to be entered into, reserved, or contained in a lease granted under that enactment to or for the benefit of the incumbent and his successors, or as near thereto as the circumstances of the case will permit; but where, under the said section of the last-mentioned act, any consents are provided for or required, the consent only of the archbishop or bishop for the time being shall be requisite: provided always, that it shall be lawful for the archbishop or bishop, with the approval of the estates committee of the ecclesiastical commissioners testified under the common seal of the said commissioners, which the said committee are hereby empowered to affix to any lease for this purpose, from time to time to grant mining or building or other leases of any such lands, for such periods, for such considerations, upon such terms, and generally in such manner as such committee under the circumstances of each case may think fit, and it shall be lawful for such committee to require that any portion of the rent reserved on any such lease shall be payable to the said ecclesiastical commissioners."

Sect. 11. "The estates committee shall, when required by any archbishop or bishop to whom lands may have been assigned as an endowment under this act, undertake the management of such lands, and receive the rents and profits thereof during the incumbency of the archbishop or bishop; and in every such case as aforesaid the estates committee, during their management, may grant all such leases as might have been granted by such archbishop or bishop if the lands had continued under his or their management, and may, with the approval of such archbishop or bishop, grant such other leases as might have been granted by him or them, with the approval of the estates committee; and the commissioners shall, during the time such lands are under the management of the said estates committee, pay to such archbishop or bishop the annual income to secure which the lands may have been assigned."

Estates committee, where required, to manage the lands assigned.

By 31 & 32 Vict. c. 114 (which provides for the vesting of capitular estates in the ecclesiastical commissioners in any case where it may be expedient (h)), sect. 9, "After the passing of this act none of the deans and chapters mentioned in the schedule to 31 Vict. c. 19, and no dean and chapter after the making of any order in council respecting them in pursuance of this act, shall demise any lands vested in them otherwise than from year to year, or for a term of years in possession, not exceeding twenty-one, at the best annual rent that can be

By sect. 11, however, "The provisions contained in this act or in the act," 23 & 24 Vict. c. 124, "shall not affect any of the provisions relating to leases, appropriations, sales or exchanges contained in the Ecclesiastical Leasing Acts."

Agricultural holdings.

The Agricultural Holdings (England) Act, 1883 (46 & 47 Vict. c. 61), which allows tenants to execute certain improvements, with consent of the landlord, and provides for the tenant receiving compensation for these improvements executed after such consent, and for improvements by drainage after notice, and of a third class of improvements, executed without consent, and which further allows the landlord and tenant to agree as to the amount and mode and time of payment of compensation, and gives the landlord power to obtain a charge on the land for the compensation which he has paid to the tenant, contains the following provisions as to ecclesiastical landlords:—

Effect where landlord, archbishop or bishop.

Sect. 38. "Where lands are assigned or secured as an endowment of a see, the powers by this act conferred on a landlord shall not be exercised by the archbishop or bishop in respect of those lands, except with the previous approval in writing of the Estates Committee of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners for England."

Where landlord incumbent of benefice.

Sect. 39. "Where a landlord is incumbent of an ecclesiastical benefice the powers by this act conferred on a landlord shall not be exercised by him in respect of the glebe land, or other land belonging to the benefice, except with the previous approval, in writing, of the patron of the benefice (that is, the person, officer or authority who in case the benefice were vacant would be entitled to present thereto) or of the Governors of Queen Anne's Bounty (that is, the Governors of the Bounty of Queen Anne for the augmentation of the maintenance of the poor clergy).

"In every such case the Governors of Queen Anne's Bounty may, if they think fit, on behalf of the incumbent, out of any money in their hands, pay to the tenant the amount of compensation due to him under this act; and thereupon they may, instead of the incumbent, obtain from the county court a charge on the holding in respect thereof in favour of themselves. Every such charge shall be effectual, notwithstanding any change of the incumbent."

Earlier acts.

Similar provisions were contained in the earlier act, 38 & 39 Vict. c. 61, as amended by 39 & 40 Vict. c. 74, both now repealed.

SECT. 4.—The Sale of Glebe by the Land Commission.

By the Glebe Lands Act, 1888, 51 & 52 Vict. c. 20, a further step has been taken, and sales of glebes are now authorized under the following conditions :—

Sect. 2. "The incumbent of any benefice may from time to time, after the prescribed notice to the bishop of the diocese and the patron of the benefice, apply in the prescribed manner (i) to the Land Commissioners (j) to approve the sale of the glebe land (k) of such benefice, or any part thereof, except the parsonage house and such land appurtenant thereto as herein-after mentioned."

Application by incumbent to Land Commissioners for sale of glebe.

Sect. 3. "(1.) If the Land Commissioners, on an application being made to them to approve the sale of any glebe land under this Act, think fit to entertain the application, and are satisfied that the application has been duly made by an incumbent authorised to apply, and that the prescribed notice has been given to the bishop of the diocese and the patron of the benefice (l), and that an objection to the sale either has not been made by the bishop or patron, or if made ought not to prevent the sale, and that the sale will be for the permanent benefit of the benefice, they may approve the sale of the said land, subject to the provisions of this Act, and the incumbent, with such approval, may sell the said land; but the land commissioners shall not approve the sale of any land occupied by the parsonage house, or the outbuildings, garden, or other appurtenances thereof, or such part of the glebe land as they consider to be necessary for the convenient enjoyment of such house, and the opinion of the said commissioners in respect of such matters shall be conclusive.

Sale of glebe with approval of Land Commissioners.

"(2.) If upon notice of a proposed sale under this Act the bishop of the diocese or patron objects to the sale, and the Land Commissioners are satisfied that such objection ought not to prevent the sale, the Land Commissioners shall inform the bishop or patron, as the case may be, in writing, of their reasons for being so satisfied."

Sect. 4. "(1.) Upon the sale under this Act of the glebe land of any benefice, the purchaser shall pay the purchase money to the Land Commissioners, and the prescribed receipt of the Land Commissioners for such money shall be a sufficient discharge to the purchaser.

Payment and application of purchase-money.

"(2.) The Land Commissioners shall apply the purchase money so paid in defraying the prescribed expenses of or incident to the sale of such land and the investment of the purchase money, and (subject to the provisions of this act as to incumbrances) shall invest the residue in such one or more of the modes herein-after mentioned as may be selected by the incumbent of the benefice, with the approval of the Land Commissioners, or (in default of such selection) by the Land Commissioners; namely

- (a.) in purchase of any of the following securities, namely, government securities, the debenture stock of any railway company in Great Britain or Ireland incorporated by special Act of Parliament, and having for at least ten years next before the date of investment paid a dividend on its ordinary stock or shares, stock of the Metropolitan Board of Works, and that stock of any county or municipal borough in which trustees are by law authorised to invest either generally or whenever they have power to invest in railway debenture stock, if such county or municipal borough had, according to the census last published next before the date of the purchase, a population exceeding one hundred thousand; and
- (b.) in redemption of land tax, chief rent, or quitrent charged on any part of the glebe which is not sold, so that the same may merge in the glebe; and
- (c.) in the purchase of any land adjacent to the parsonage house the possession of which in the judgment of the Land Commissioners would be for the benefit of the benefice and for the convenient enjoyment of such house.

“(3.) An investment in any securities shall be made in the name of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners for England, and any such investment may from time to time, with the approval of those commissioners, be varied on the application and at the expense of the incumbent.

“(4.) Securities bought out of the purchase-money under this act of the glebe of any benefice and held by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners” are to be entered in the books kept in relation to those securities in the name of those commissioners, but on a separate account ex parte the benefice. Those commissioners are, however, to be treated as the owner of the securities. Dividends may be paid either by dividend warrants sent through the post or otherwise, “to such persons as may be directed by those commissioners, and the enactments relating to dividend warrants shall apply to the warrants sent to any such person in like manner as if they were sent to the holder of the securities at his request.”

“(5.) The Ecclesiastical Commissioners for England are to hold the securities . . . on the same trusts and for the same purposes on and for which the land sold was held; and may from time to time, if occasion requires, sell such securities and apply the proceeds on the said trusts and for the said purposes, and shall cause the income arising from such securities to be paid or applied in such manner (if any) as may be directed in pursuance of this act, and subject thereto, in such manner as the income of the said land sold would have been payable or applicable if such sale had not taken place.

“(6.) Any land purchased with money arising from a sale under this act of the glebe land of any benefice shall be conveyed to the incumbent of that benefice, and shall be held by the incumbent for the time being as part of the glebe of the benefice, and the income arising from the land shall be paid or applied as the income of the land sold would have been payable or applicable if the sale had not taken place.”

Sect. 5. “(1.) Before approving the sale of any land under this act the Land Commissioners shall ascertain whether the amount of the purchase-money is or is likely to be diminished by reason of any dilapidations which the incumbent is by law liable to make good, and, where they are of opinion that the purchase-money is or is likely to be so diminished, shall provide for such sum as appears to them to be equal to the amount of such diminution being recouped to the benefice, either by payment of such sum by the incumbent or by the application of all or part of the income of the purchase-money towards recouping such sum, and the amount paid towards such recoupment shall be dealt with as purchase-money of the land under this act, but until such sum is fully recouped, nothing in this section shall discharge the incumbent from his liability to make good the said dilapidations.

Restrictions
as to sales.

“(2.) Nothing in this act shall empower the Land Commissioners to approve the sale—

- (a.) Of any land subject to a lease originally created for a term exceeding twenty-one years; or
- (b.) Of any land let for any term whatever where by reason of the rent reserved on the lease being less than two-thirds of the full annual value of the land, or for any other reason, the incumbent is not in possession of the full rents and profits of the land; or
- (c.) Of any mines or minerals in any case where it appears to them that such mines or minerals are or may become of considerable value.”

Sect. 6. “(1.) Where any glebe land sold under this act, or the benefice to which it belongs, is subject to any mortgage or other debt, the land when conveyed to the purchaser shall vest in him free from such mortgage or debt, but such mortgage or debt, if not discharged, shall attach to the purchase-money of the land and to any securities or land in or in connection with which such purchase-money is invested, and the mortgagee or creditor shall have the like remedies as nearly as may be in relation to such purchase-money, securities, and land as he would have had if the land had not been sold.

Provision
where land is subject to mortgage or other debt.

“(2.) The prescribed notice of the proposal to sell any such glebe land shall be given to the mortgagee or creditor, and the mortgagee or creditor may, within the prescribed time after such notice, object to the sale on the ground that his security will be damaged by the sale, and before the Land Commissioners approve the sale they shall be satisfied that such notice has been duly given, and that either such an objection to the sale has not been made by the mortgagee or creditor, or if an objection has been made that the mortgagee or creditor will not be damaged by the sale; and the Land Commissioners may, if it seems to them necessary, make provision either for securing the rights of the mortgagee or creditor, or for the discharge of the mortgage or other debt: Provided that any mortgage created for a limited term, and which is by statute only repayable by annual instalments out of the income of the benefice within such term, shall be discharged in the same instalments out of the interest of the purchase-money of land sold under this act, and that nothing shall be done which will prejudice the future interest of the benefice, and such provision, and any provision which the Land Commissioners may make for preventing any prejudice to the future interest of the benefice, shall be binding on the incumbent for the time being of the benefice.

“(3.) The Land Commissioners may require the mortgagee or creditor to accept payment of the principal and interest due together with such additional sum (if any) as seems necessary in order to dispense with any notice which would otherwise be required for such payment.”

Provision as to annual charges on benefice.

Sect. 7. “Where any glebe land sold under this act, or the benefice to which it belongs, or any part of the endowment of such benefice, is subject to a permanent annual charge in favour of the incumbent of any other benefice, the land when conveyed to the purchaser shall vest in him free from such annual charge, but the annual charge shall attach to the purchase-money, and to any securities or land in or in connexion with which such purchase-money is invested,” and the ecclesiastical commissioners may “set apart an adequate portion of such securities for the purpose of meeting such charge, or any part thereof, and shall thereupon discharge the said benefice and the endowment thereof from the liability to the annual charge or the said part thereof, and the securities so set apart shall be placed to a separate account or otherwise set apart in such manner as these commissioners may direct.”

Supplemental provisions as to sale.

Sect. 8. “(1.) For the purpose of facilitating the acquisition of land by cottagers, labourers, and others, it shall be the duty of the Land Commissioners in giving their approval of a sale under this act, either to require as a condition thereof that the land or some part thereof shall be offered for sale in small parcels, or to the sanitary authority of a sanitary district for the purposes of the Allotments Act, 1887 (m), or to satisfy themselves that such offer is not practicable without diminishing the price which can be obtained for the glebe land on a sale.

“(2.) Before approving of a sale under this act of glebe land of any benefice, the Land Commissioners shall require such notice of the proposed sale to be given as they think sufficient to give information thereof to the parishioners.

“(3.) The approval of the Land Commissioners of a sale under this act may be signified in the prescribed manner, and shall be conclusive evidence that the requirements of this act with respect to the sale have been complied with.

“(4.) Subject to the provisions of this act, the provisions of the Settled Land Act, 1882 (n), with respect to the sale of land by a tenant for life shall, so far as circumstances admit, apply to a sale under this act by an incumbent in like manner as if he were the tenant for life of the land, and accordingly he shall have the like power with respect to contracts as a tenant for life under that act, and may do all things necessary and proper for carrying into effect a sale under this act.”

Sect. 9 gives power to the land commissioners with the approval of the Lord Chancellor, and, “where any rule affects any costs payable out of the Exchequer, with the further consent of the Commissioners of Her Majesty’s Treasury,” to “from time to time make, and when made alter and rescind, rules with respect to the proceedings of the Land Commissioners under this act, and the procedure to be observed by applicants and others in relation to such sales, and with respect to the forms to be used for the purposes of this act, and with respect to any matter which by this act is authorised or required to be prescribed, or which appears to be necessary or proper for carrying this act into effect.”

Power to make rules.

The Commissioners of the Treasury may also make, alter and rescind, rules fixing the fees to be paid to the land commissioners, and the mode in which such fees are to be taken.

Rules made by the land commissioners are to be judicially noticed, and laid before Parliament.

By sect. 10, “(1.) Where any act is authorised or required to be done or any notice is required to be given by or to any patron or person for the purpose of this act, such act and notice may, in the case of the patrons mentioned in” sects. 126 and 127 of 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106 (o), “be done and given, so far as may be, by and to the persons and in the manner provided by those enactments in like manner as if such act were a consent, and in the case of any matters to which those enactments do not apply and of any patrons or persons other than the patrons mentioned in the said enactments, or the Duke of Cornwall, shall be done and given in the prescribed manner.”

As to action by patron.

The section goes on to provide, that “where the advowson of any benefice is part of the possessions of the Duchy of Cornwall, any notice required to be given to the patron of such benefice for the purposes of this act may be given to the keeper of the records of the Duchy of Cornwall, and any act authorised or required to be done by the patron of such benefice for the purposes of this act may be done under the seal of the Duchy of Cornwall." There is a further provision, "in the event of the Duke of Cornwall being under the age of twenty-one years, or of there being no Duke of Cornwall."

(n) 45 & 46 Vict. c. 38.

Saving for Ecclesiastical
Leasing Acts.

Sect. 11. Such notice to the bishop of the diocese as may be prescribed for the purposes of this act shall be substituted for the period of three months' notice which, in pursuance of sect. 1 of the Ecclesiastical Leasing Act, 1858 (p), is required to be given to the bishop of the diocese on every proposed sale of glebe lands under the provisions of that act, but, save as aforesaid, nothing in this act shall limit or prejudice the powers and provisions contained in the Ecclesiastical Leasing Acts or in the acts administered by the Governors of Queen Anne's Bounty.

SECT. 5.—The Transfer of Property to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners.

It should now be mentioned that by force of various statutes promoted by the ecclesiastical commissioners and orders in council made thereunder (q) the estates of all archbishops and bishops, and most of the cathedral and collegiate deans and chapters, have become vested in the ecclesiastical commissioners. The commissioners are then to restore to the bishop or dean and chapter sufficient lands to produce the income now appointed for them. In the case of bishops the estates committee of the ecclesiastical commissioners may be required by the bishop to manage the lands for him, and the arrangements are to be revised from time to time on each avoidance. Till sufficient new lands have been transferred by the ecclesiastical commissioners to the see or dean and chapter, they are to pay to the bishop or dean and chapter a fixed annual income instead thereof.

As to bishops, deans and chapters.

As to minor cathedral
corporations.

By 27 & 28 Vict. c. 70, minor cathedral corporations may with the consent of their visitor transfer all their property to the ecclesiastical commissioners in consideration of a fixed annual income.

Vict. c. 111; 31 Vict. c. 19; 31 & 32
Vict. c. 114.

The whole subject will be treated more fully in the chapter on "The Ecclesiastical Commissioners" (r).

SECT. 6.—The Extinguishment of old Leasehold Interests.

Besides the foregoing provisions another set of enactments have been passed enabling ecclesiastical corporations, or the ecclesiastical commissioners in their right, to do away with the old system of leasing ecclesiastical property; and for this purpose either to buy up the interest of lessees or to sell the reversion to them or to make exchange of interest in different lands.

Statutes relating to this subject.

The acts are 14 & 15 Vict. c. 104, and its continuing acts, 17 & 18 Vict. c. 116, and 23 & 24 Vict. c. 124.

By 14 & 15 Vict. c. 104, entitled "An Act to facilitate the Management and Improvement of Episcopal and Capitular Estates in England," sect. 1, every ecclesiastical corporation sole or aggregate, with the approval in writing of the church estates commissioners (whose consent alone is to be sufficient by sect. 5), may sell to any lessee of lands under them their reversion, estate and interest in such lands, for such consideration, upon such terms and in such manner as they may think fit; and they may, with the like approval, enfranchise copyhold or customary lands holden of any manor of theirs; or exchange with any lessee of lands under them all or any of the lands comprised in such lease, or their reversion, estate and interest therein for any other lands of freehold, copyhold or customary tenure, or for the estate and interest of the lessee in any other of their lands; and may receive or pay money by way of equality of exchange. They are also empowered with the like approval to purchase the estate and interest of any lessee of lands under them, or any holder of copyhold or customary land in their manors. The church estates commissioners are to "pay due regard to the just and reasonable claims of the present holders of lands under lease or otherwise arising from the long-continued practice of renewal."

14 & 15 Vict. c. 104.

Ecclesiastical corporations may sell, exchange and enfranchise.

By sect. 2, where the lessee surrenders his estate or interest in part of the lands holden by him under the ecclesiastical corporation, the church estates commissioners may, by a memorandum in writing, apportion the old rent between the lands surrendered and the lands still retained under the lease, and such apportioned rent becomes the ancient and accustomed rent for these latter lands.

Apportionment of rent.

By sects. 3, 4, the interest acquired by any lessee under this act is to be deemed in equity to be acquired in respect of his lease, and shall be subject to the same trusts and charges and covenants for renewal with and other rights of the sub-lessee as the former lease or a renewal of it would have been. And where lands have been sub-let, and notice of such underlease is given to the ecclesiastical corporation, the interest of the lessee shall not be purchased by them without the consent of the sub-lessee.

Payment to ecclesiastical commissioners.

By sects. 6, 7, all moneys to be received by any ecclesiastical corporation for sale, exchange, or enfranchisement under the act may be allowed to remain on mortgage of the lands in question; but when paid are to be paid into the Bank of England to an account to be appointed by the church estates commissioners, and are to be applied in payment for equality of exchange, or in the purchases authorized by the act, or in buying other lands for the corporation. The moneys may be invested in government stocks till they are required; and any other moneys applicable to the purchase of lands for the corporation may be applied for the purposes of this act.

Provisions
where increase or diminution of income.

By sect. 8, if any person being a corporation sole or member of a corporation aggregate shall receive an increase of his income in virtue of his office in consequence of what has been done under the act, the church estates commissioners may require and enforce payment at any time of such annual or other sum by such person in respect of his increased income as they may think fit: and they may, if they please, make such payment a condition of their approval under the act. And where any person suffers diminution of income they are to compensate him "out of any moneys received by them under the act on behalf of such corporation or the investments thereof."

Definitions.

By sect. 11, tithes, but not advowsons, are to be deemed to be included under the word "lands;" and the expression "ecclesiastical corporation" is to include archbishops, bishops, deans and chapters, deans, archdeacons, canons, prebendaries and other dignitaries or officers of, and minor ecclesiastical corporations in, cathedral or collegiate churches; but is not to include Christ Church, Oxford, or any college or hospital, or "any parson, vicar, or perpetual curate or other incumbent of any benefice" (s).

This act was originally limited to three years; but has since been continued by various acts, the last being 57 & 58 Vict. c. 48.

17 & 18 Vict.
c. 116.

Extension of sect. 2 of previous act.

By 17 & 18 Vict. c. 116, s. 2, the provisions as to apportionment of rent, where a portion of the lands holden under a lease are surrendered by the lessee under sect. 2 of 14 & 15 Vict. c. 104, are extended to all cases where a portion of the lands holden under a lease are sold, exchanged or enfranchised, if the church estates commissioners deem it expedient to apportion the rent.

(s) This provision is repealed by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 105, s. 3; and the same power of sale is given to incumbents of benefices as to other ecclesiastical corporations.

By sect. 3, trustees of leases or other interests under ecclesiastical corporations, who are empowered to raise money for purchasing the renewal of leases, may raise money for purchasing the reversion or for enfranchisement under these acts. Trustee may raise money.

By sect. 4, upon any treaty for sale, purchase or exchange under these acts the value of the fee simple of the estate and the annual value thereof may be referred to arbitration, and the finding of the arbitrators shall be adopted in computing the terms of the sale, purchase or exchange, "regard being had, in the final settlement of such terms, in every such case, to the just and reasonable claims of the present holders of land under lease or otherwise, arising from the long continued practice of renewal." Provision is made for the appointment of arbitrators. Arbitration.

By sect. 10, the same provisions as to arbitration are extended to cases where the ecclesiastical commissioners have become the owners of the lands formerly belonging to ecclesiastical corporations and wish to deal with the lessees under them.

By sects. 6, 7, money paid into the Bank of England under the 6th section of 14 & 15 Vict. c. 104, is to be apportioned by the church estates commissioners in such a manner as to set apart for the permanent endowment of the ecclesiastical corporation a sum, which will secure to that corporation a permanent net income equal to that which they would have received from the lands had they not been dealt with under these acts; and the residue is to be handed over to the common fund of the ecclesiastical commissioners. And where an ecclesiastical corporation takes land under these acts they may be required to pay over to the church estates commissioners a sum of money "equivalent to the surplus share thereof." Distribution of money.

Sect. 11. "In computing the due regard to be paid to the just and reasonable claims of the present holders of lands under lease or otherwise, arising from the long continued practice of renewal, the basis of compensation may, at the discretion and with the approval of the church estates commissioners, be that laid down by the episcopal and capitular revenues commissioners in their report of 1850 or according to the recommendations laid down in the lords' report on the same subject in 1851." Basis on which claims are to be computed.

By sect. 12, the expectation of a life shall not be calculated according to the Northampton tables, or upon any tables less favourable to the duration of life than those appended to the twelfth report of the registrar general of births, deaths and marriages, or any others to be from time to time issued by authority.

Provision is also made by sect. 5 of this act for determining by trial at law the right of renewal of any lands held for a life or lives or for years by copy of court roll from or under any ecclesiastical corporation, whenever such corporation or the ecclesiastical commissioners dispute the right, or the person claiming the right desires to have the question decided. Provision for determining right of renewal.

The act 23 & 24 Vict. c. 124, dealing more especially with relations between the ecclesiastical commissioners and former tenants under ecclesiastical corporations, has completed the series of enactments with reference to the extinguishment of the old system of ecclesiastical leases.

Power to corporations, with approval of the church estates commissioners, to sell lands in possession, for facilitating negotiations with lessees.

By sect. 16 of the last-mentioned act, "Where it appears to the church estates commissioners that inconvenience is occasioned in the negotiations between any ecclesiastical corporation, sole or aggregate, and its lessees (in relation to property which it is now authorized to dispose of) by reason of its disability to sell or exchange intermixed or other lands held by such corporation in possession, or for some other estate which it is not now authorized to dispose of, it shall be lawful for such ecclesiastical corporation, with the approval in writing of the said church estates commissioners, to sell any such lands (whether of freehold or copyhold or customary tenure), or to exchange any such lands for other lands or any estate or interest therein; and all the provisions of the act" 14 & 15 Vict. c. 104, as amended by the act 17 & 18 Vict. c. 116, "and this act, authorizing the receiving or paying of money by way of equality of exchange, and concerning the payment, application, and investment of any money payable to or for the benefit of any such corporation on any such sale, exchange or enfranchisement as is mentioned in the said act" 14 & 15 Vict. c. 104, "and all other the provisions of the said acts in anywise applicable for effectuating any such sale, exchange or enfranchisement or in consequence thereof, shall, so far as the nature of the case may require, extend and be applicable to and in consequence of any sale or exchange authorized by this act."

Schools and incumbents of benefices.

By sect. 17, small portions of lands holden under leases usually renewed for schools may be conveyed to trustees for the schools without consideration. By sects. 18, 19, a similar course may be taken with respect to lands usually leased for no or merely nominal fines for the endowment of the incumbent of any parish or chapelry, and with respect to rents or other annual payments usually reserved by any such corporation on any lease for the benefit of any such incumbent.

Trustees and others having power to raise money for renewals may raise money for enfranchisements.

By sect. 20, "In any case in which any estate or interest under any lease or grant made by any such ecclesiastical corporation may be vested in any person or persons as a trustee or trustees, whether expressly or by implication of law, with power to raise money for the purpose of procuring a renewal of such lease or grant, and in every other case in which a power is vested in any person or persons for that purpose, it shall be lawful for such person or persons to raise money for the purpose of purchasing the reversion of or otherwise enfranchising the property comprised in such lease or grant, and to apply the same accordingly, in the same manner, and subject to the same conditions, mutatis mutandis, so far as the same may be applicable to the case, as such person or persons might by virtue of such power have raised money for the purpose of renewing such lease or grant and have applied the same accordingly."

The effect of this and other sections upon settlements of and other dealings with the leasehold estates by the lessees, and the respective rights of tenants for life and remaindermen under such settlements, were fully considered in the cases of Hayward v. Pile (t), Re Wood's Estate (u), Hollier v. Burne (x), Madely v. Hale (y), and Re Lord Ranelagh's Estate (z).

Cases on construction of act.

By sects. 26, 27, provision is made for the rights of lessees and underlessees inter se.

By sect. 28, the powers and provisions in 14 & 15 Vict. c. 104, s. 2, and 17 & 18 Vict. c. 116, s. 2, as to apportionment shall extend to authorize the apportionment of heriots and fines certain and the substitution of money payments for heriots; and shall extend to all cases of surrender, conveyance or assignment to the ecclesiastical commissioners of lands in which they have a reversionary interest, and all cases of sale, exchange and enfranchisement of a part of the lands comprised under any lease, grant or copy of court roll.

Apportionment.

By sect. 29, where there is a difficulty in making out the lessee's title the ecclesiastical commissioners may pay the money into the Bank of England as under the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (a).

Payment into bank.

Sect. 30 preserves the rights and obligations imposed by special acts in particular cases.

Sects. 31, 32, extend the power of partition and confirm the powers of partition and exchange.

The following provisions are made in the act for ascertaining the interests of lessees:—

Sect. 21. "In estimating, for the purposes of any sale, purchase, or exchange, under the said acts of" 14 & 15 Vict. c. 104, and 17 & 18 Vict. c. 116, "and this act, or any of them, the value of the estate or interest of any lessee of any lands holden of any archbishop or bishop, or of the ecclesiastical commissioners, under any lease granted for a term of twenty-one years, an extension of the unexpired term to the 11th day of October, 1884, at the accustomed rate of fine, shall, as a rule, be allowed, and a like extension at the accustomed rate of fine shall, for the purposes of sale, purchase or exchange, be allowed in the case of any lease for lives, the extent and value of which shall be computed by arbitrators in default of an agreement between the parties to be less than the extent and value of a term ending on the said 11th day of October, 1884."

In estimating value of 21 years' leases an extension to 11th October, 1884, to be allowed.

Sect. 22. "The said ecclesiastical commissioners, or any ecclesiastical corporation aggregate or sole, in carrying out the powers of leasing mines and minerals vested in them, shall, in the granting to the lessees of mines and minerals holden of the ecclesiastical commissioners or any ecclesiastical corporation

In estimating the value of mining leases an extension to 1884 to be allowed.

aggregate or sole, whether for years or for lives, an extended term or estate therein, and fixing the terms of such grant, have regard to the value of the estate and interest of the lessees of all such mines and minerals under any lease or leases heretofore ordinarily renewable on the payment of a fine, and shall as a rule in computing such value estimate and include an extension of the existing unexpired term or estate of the lessees to the 11th day of October, 1884, at the accustomed rate of fine, and in the case of such of the said leases for lives as, according to the expectancy of human life according to the life tables which are appended to the twelfth annual report of the registrar general of births, deaths, and marriages in England, would not determine until after the said 11th day of October, 1884, shall have regard to the actual value of the estate and interest of the lessees."

Differences between mining lessees and lessors to be referred to arbitration.

Sect. 23. "In case any such lessees shall require any extended term in such mines and minerals to be granted to them, and any difference shall arise between the said ecclesiastical commissioners or other ecclesiastical corporation and such lessees thereupon, or as to the value so to be estimated, or as to the rents to be reserved, or the term of years to be granted, or other the terms and conditions on which such lease for any extended term or estate shall be granted, it shall be lawful for either party to require the other party to join in referring to arbitration the matter or matters so in difference, and the same shall be referred to arbitration."

Upon treaty for sale, &c., either party may require reference to arbitration.

Sect. 24. "In any case where a treaty shall have been or shall be entered into under the said acts" 14 & 15 Vict. c. 104, and 17 & 18 Vict. c. 116, "and this act, or any of them, for any sale, exchange or purchase, it shall be lawful for either party to require the other party to join in referring to arbitration the finding of the annual value of the property comprised in the lease or grant, and of the value of the fee simple, and when such values have been found it shall be binding on both parties if either party require to proceed to such sale, exchange or purchase, on terms to be computed according to such finding: Provided always, that whenever the ecclesiastical commissioners shall decline to enter into a treaty with a lessee for either the sale of the reversion or the purchase of the term of or in the lands held by such lessee, it shall nevertheless be lawful for such lessee, at any time within two years after the said commissioners shall have so declined to treat, to require that his estate and interest therein shall be purchased by the ecclesiastical commissioners so declining to treat as aforesaid, and that the value of such estate and interest shall be ascertained by such methods and with such extension of the unexpired term on his said lease as are by this act provided in respect of other leaseholds."

Valuation of lands and houses.

Sect. 25. "Provided always, that under any arbitration under the said act of" 17 & 18 Vict. c. 116, "or this act, where any lease shall relate to lands (except building ground or houses), the beneficial interest of the lessee shall be valued at the same rate of interest at which the value of the fee simple has been determined, and where such lease shall relate to houses or to building ground it shall be lawful for the arbitrator or arbitrators, or umpire, as the case may be, simply to find the gross sum to be paid for such sale or enfranchisement, in such manner as he or they may deem just: provided also, that regard shall be had to any consideration given to the lessee by this act on account of the long continued practice of renewal: provided further, that in the case of houses the umpire shall, notwithstanding anything in the last-mentioned act or this act contained, be appointed by her Majesty's principal secretary of state for the Home Department."

Sect. 35. "And whereas in some cases leases or grants made by ecclesiastical corporations are in settlement, or held in trust, without power to raise money for renewals, or the manner prescribed for raising money for renewals may not be applicable for raising the money required for purchase or enfranchisement: it shall be lawful for any person or persons being a trustee or trustees, expressly or by implication of law, of any such lease or grant, or any person being under any will or other settlement in the actual possession or receipt of the rents and profits of the lands comprised in such lease or grant, upon purchasing the reversion or otherwise procuring the enfranchisement of such lands, to charge such lands (or where the whole thereof is settled to the same uses, trusts, or purposes, any part thereof, exclusively of the residue thereof,) with the payment to any person advancing any money paid for such purchase or enfranchisement, and for the expenses incident to such purchase or enfranchisement, or for either of those purposes, of the money so advanced, with interest thereon at a rate not exceeding five pounds per centum per annum, and to convey or cause to be conveyed such lands by way of mortgage for securing such payment accordingly; and such charge shall be effectual, as well on the subsisting term or estate under such lease or grant as on the reversion or interest acquired by such purchase or enfranchisement, and not only against the person making the same, and all persons claiming through him or for whom he may be a trustee, but also against all persons claiming any estate or interest in the same lands through or under the same will or settlement, but so as not to prejudice any prior charge or incumbrance, under-lease, or tenancy affecting such lands; and, subject and without prejudice to such charge and mortgage so made as aforesaid, the interest acquired by such purchase or enfranchisement shall be subject in equity as is provided by section three of the said act" 14 & 15 Vict. c. 104 (b), "concerning the interest in land acquired by any lessee under that act."

Power to trustees and persons having interests to charge enfranchisement moneys on the lands enfranchised, &c.

lease or grant may be vested in any trustee or trustees, either expressly or by implication of law, and any moneys, stocks, funds, or securities for money are vested in the same trustees or trustee, upon the same or like trusts, it shall be lawful for such trustees, or trustee, with the consent of the person or persons entitled for the time being to the beneficial receipt of the dividends or annual proceeds of such moneys, stocks, funds, or securities, if such person or persons shall be capable of giving consent, or if there shall be no person capable of giving consent, or if such consent shall be withheld, and the trustee or trustees shall consider such a course essential to the interest of the parties entitled under the settlement, then with the sanction and approbation of the Court of Chancery, to be obtained on petition to the said court, to raise out of such moneys, or by sale of such stocks, funds, or securities, a sufficient sum for the purpose of purchasing the reversion of, or otherwise enfranchising, the property comprised in such lease or grant, and of procuring, if necessary for the purpose of enfranchisement, the renewal of such lease or grant, and to pay and apply the same accordingly, and all payments and applications of moneys, or of the proceeds of the sale of such stocks, funds, or securities so made as aforesaid, shall be valid and binding on all persons interested under the trust, will, or settlement under or by which such moneys, stocks, funds, or securities for money may be held in trust or settled as aforesaid."

Lands in the lease or other lands settled to like uses may be sold or mortgaged to raise money for purchase of reversion under direction of the Court of Chancery.

Sect. 37. "Where any such lease or grant may be vested in any person or persons as a trustee or trustees, whether expressly or by implication of law, and other lands, whether freehold, copyhold, or leasehold, are vested in the same trustees or trustee upon the same or like trusts, or are settled to the same uses or purposes, or as near thereto as the different tenures of the lands admit, or where any person is under any will or settlement in the actual possession or receipt of the rents and profits of the lands comprised in such lease or grant and of other lands settled to like trusts or uses as aforesaid, it shall be lawful for such trustees or trustee, or such person as aforesaid, with the sanction and approbation of the Court of Chancery, to be obtained on petition to the said court, to raise money, either by sale or mortgage of all or any part of the property comprised in the lease or grant, and the other lands, whether freehold, copyhold, or leasehold, vested in such trustee or trustees, or settled as aforesaid, as the said court shall direct, for the purpose of purchasing the reversion of or otherwise enfranchising the property comprised in such lease or grant, in such manner, and subject to such provisions for protecting or adjusting the equities arising under such purchase or enfranchisement and such mortgage or sale as aforesaid, as the court shall think fit; and all sales and mortgages effected for the purposes aforesaid shall be valid and binding on all persons interested under the trust, will, or settlement under which such lands may be held in trust or settled as aforesaid."

Sect. 38. "In any case in which the estate and interest under any lease or grant made by any ecclesiastical corporation may be vested in any trustee or trustees, and such trustee or trustees shall not have power to sell, it shall be lawful for such trustee or trustees, with the consent in writing of the person or persons entitled for the time being to the beneficial receipt of the rent or annual proceeds thereof, if such person or persons shall be capable of giving consent, or if there shall be no person capable of giving consent, or if such consent shall be withheld and the trustee or trustees shall consider a sale essential to the interests of parties entitled under the settlement, then, with the sanction and approbation of the Court of Chancery, to be obtained on petition to the said court (c), to sell and dispose of all or any part of such property; and in every such case the purchase-money shall be paid to such trustee or trustees, whose receipt shall be a good discharge for the same, and the money so paid to such trustee or trustees shall be invested and be held by him or them upon the same trusts, as far as the circumstances of the case will admit, as the leasehold property, if not sold, would have been subject to; and such investment may, with the sanction and approbation of the Court of Chancery, be made in the purchase of other leasehold estates, whether held under any ecclesiastical corporation or not."

Trustees empowered to sell estates held under lease.

Sect. 39. "Any person authorized under this act or otherwise to raise any money for the purchase of the reversion of any lease or grant may exchange with the corporation by which such lease or grant was made, or with the ecclesiastical commissioners, any part of the lands comprised in such lease or grant, for the reversion, estate, or interest of such corporation or the ecclesiastical commissioners in any other part of the lands comprised therein, or may exchange such lands or any part thereof for the reversion, estate, or interest of the corporation by which any lease or grant was made in any lands comprised in any other lease or grant held under the same trusts, or settled to the same uses, trusts, or purposes."

Persons empowered to raise money for enfranchisement may give lands in exchange for reversion.

Sect. 41. "Where by this act it is provided that any matter in difference shall be referred to arbitration, or where any difference shall arise between the commissioners and any body or person touching the annual or other sums of money to be paid to any archbishop or bishop as herein directed, or touching the value or nature of the estates proposed to be assigned as endowment for any archbishop or bishop, the matter in difference shall be referred to two arbitrators, one to be appointed by each party, and all the provisions of 'The Common Law Procedure Act, 1854' (d), applicable in the case of such an arbitration,

SECT. 7.—The Enfranchisement of Copyholds.

General copy-
hold acts.

Ecclesiastical persons or corporations, when lords of manors, were subject like all other lords of manors to the provisions for compulsory enfranchisement of copyholds in certain cases, as provided by the various copyhold acts of the earlier part of the present reign.

These acts were in fact cumulative of the powers of enfranchisement specially given to ecclesiastical corporations by the statutes mentioned in the last section.

21 & 22 Vict.
c. 94.

Copyhold acts not to

Afterwards, however, it was provided by 21 & 22 Vict. c. 94, s. 4, that "the copyhold acts shall not extend to any manors belonging, either in possession or reversion, to any ecclesiastical corporation, or to the ecclesiastical commissioners for England, where the tenant hath not a right of renewal." The 21 & 22 Vict. c. 94 act then proceeded to enact certain provisions as to the enfranchisement of ecclesiastical copyholds and the application of the enfranchisement moneys, all of which have again been superseded and repealed by the Copyhold Act, 1894 (57 & 58 Vict. c. 46).

extend to ecclesiastical manors, where tenant has not a right of renewal.

57 & 58 Vict. c. 46.

This last act provides as follows :

Sect. 72.—“(1.) An agreement for an enfranchisement shall not be valid—

Consent of ecclesiastical corporations, &c., required to dealings with manors in which they are interested.

- (a) where the manor or land to be affected by the enfranchisement is held under an ecclesiastical or other corporation (f) ; or
- (b) where any such corporation or the patron of a living is interested in the manor or land to the extent of one-third of the value thereof ; or
- (c) where in the opinion of the Board of Agriculture any such corporation would be affected by the enfranchisement, unless the agreement is made with the consent in writing of that corporation or person.

“(2.) A consent under this section must, in the case of a corporation aggregate, be under the seal of the corporation, and in other cases be signed by the person giving it, and must in every case be annexed to the agreement to which it relates.”

Sect. 73. “Where land proposed to be enfranchised under the provisions of this act with respect to compulsory enfranchisement is held of a manor belonging either in possession or reversion to an ecclesiastical corporation, the Ecclesiastical Commissioners shall have notice of the proceedings, and shall have the like power of expressing assent to or dissent from the proceedings as is provided by this act with respect to a person entitled in reversion or remainder, and the provisions of this act with respect to the notice, and the proceedings thereon, shall apply accordingly.”

Notice to ecclesiastical commissioners in certain cases.

Sect. 74.—“(1.) Any compensation or consideration money to be paid under this act for the use of any spiritual person in respect of his benefice or cure may at the option of the lord be paid to Queen Anne's Bounty, and the receipt of the treasurer shall be a sufficient discharge.

Enfranchisement money for use of spiritual person may be paid to Queen Anne's Bounty.

“(2.) Money paid under this section shall be applied by the Bounty as money in their hands appropriated for the augmentation of the benefice or cure, as the case may be.”

Sect. 75. “Where on an enfranchisement under this act it appears to the Board of Agriculture that the enfranchisement might have been effected under the Episcopal and Capitular Estates Act, 1851, or any act amending the same—

Application of enfranchisement money where enfranchisement might under 14 & 15

Vict. c. 104.

- (a) the consideration for the enfranchisement shall be paid and applied in like manner as if an enfranchisement had been effected under the said Episcopal and Capitular Estates Act and the acts amending the same; and
- (b) the Church Estates Commissioners and Ecclesiastical Commissioners respectively shall have the same powers over the consideration money and the interest thereon, and over any land, rent-charges, or securities acquired in respect of the enfranchisement, and over or against any ecclesiastical corporation interested therein respectively, as they would have had if the enfranchisement had been effected with the consent of the Church Estates Commissioners under the said acts:

Provided that where an ecclesiastical corporation or the Ecclesiastical Commissioners have only a reversionary interest in the manorial rights extinguished by the enfranchisement, the consideration, if it is a gross sum, shall be paid into court or to trustees, and applied under this act accordingly until the time when the reversionary interest would if it were not extinguished have come into possession, and the consideration money and the investments thereof shall then be paid or transferred to the Church Estates Commissioners as persons absolutely entitled thereto."

Sect. 78 has special provisions for manors belonging to the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge, the colleges therein, and the colleges of Eton and Winchester.

By sect. 94, an "ecclesiastical corporation" "means an ecclesiastical corporation within the meaning of the Episcopal and Capitular Estates Act, 1851" (14 & 15 Vict. c. 104), "and the acts amending the same."

By sect. 95 "Nothing in this act . . . shall extend to manors belonging either in possession or reversion to any ecclesiastical corporation or to the ecclesiastical commissioners where the tenant has not a right of renewal."

24 & 25 Vict.
c. 105.

By sect. 1 of 24 & 25 Vict. c. 105, after a recital that there are ecclesiastical benefices to which belong manors, lands and hereditaments which by custom the incumbents have had power to lease for lives or long terms of years, it is enacted that no prebendary of any prebend, not being a prebend in any cathedral or collegiate church, and no rector, vicar, perpetual curate or incumbent, who becomes, after the passing of the act, entitled to any manors, lands or hereditaments, shall make any grant thereof by copy of court roll (f) or lease in consideration of any fine, premium or foregift; but the same may be dealt with under 5 & 6 Vict. c. 27, 5 & 6 Vict. c. 108, and 21 & 22 Vict. c. 57 (g).

Prohibits any lease by copy of court roll for fine or premium.

Not to interfere with present interests.

By sect. 2, nothing in the act is to interfere with the right of any then present incumbent, or affect any grant heretofore made, or any right of renewal or tenant right if any such there be; nor prejudice any existing power of sale, exchange or enfranchisement under any statute then in force, or any right of admission of any person to copyholds according to the custom of the manor.

By sect. 3 the provisions of 23 & 24 Vict. c. 124, so far as they "relate to powers for the raising or application of money by trustees, allowances to lessees, arbitration, valuation, rate of interest, apportionment of rent, and substitution of title on exchange," shall be applied mutatis mutandis to cases under 24 & 25 Vict. c. 105, relating to rectors, vicars and perpetual curates. But the proceeds of any sales or enfranchisements and any moneys received by way of equality of exchange shall be applied according to the provisions in 5 & 6 Vict. c. 108, and 21 & 22 Vict. c. 57.

Provisions in 23 & 24 Vict. c. 124, applied to this act.

By 25 & 26 Vict. c. 52, s. 1, the prohibition contained in the previous act shall extend not only to cases where a fine or premium is asked for the grant or lease, but to all cases where the grant or lease is made for a longer term or in a different manner from that prescribed by 5 & 6 Vict. c. 27; 5 & 6 Vict. c. 108, and 21 & 22 Vict. c. 57.

25 & 26 Vict. c. 52.

By sect. 2, the provisions in sect. 3 of the previous act are extended to prebendaries of any prebend not being a prebend of a cathedral or collegiate church.

CHAPTER VII.

CHARGES ON BENEFICES.

Special restraint on charging benefice with cure.

BESIDES the general restraints imposed by law upon the waste or dilapidation of ecclesiastical property, the alienation of it by sale or lease or exchange, or the burdening of it, in the hands of the successor, by the grant of new and unnecessary offices, a special enactment has been made as to benefices with cure of souls, forbidding the imposition of any charge thereon by their incumbents; so that, even during the tenure of the incumbency, such a benefice cannot be charged with payments to other persons, and such charges if made are absolutely void.

13 Eliz. c. 20. The enactment in question is 13 Eliz. c. 20, intituled "An Act touching Leases of Benefices and other Ecclesiastical Livings with Cure."

How long the lease of a benefice shall endure.

Sect. 1. "That the livings appointed for ecclesiastical ministers may not by corrupt and indirect dealings be transferred to other uses; be it enacted by the authority of this present parliament, that no lease after the fifteenth day of May next following the beginning of this parliament, to be made of any benefice or ecclesiastical promotion with cure, or any part thereof, and not being impropriated, shall endure any longer than while the lessor shall be ordinarily resident and serving the cure of such benefice without absence above fourscore days in any one year; but that every such lease, so soon as it or any part thereof shall come to any possession or use above forbidden, or immediately upon such absence, shall cease and be void; and the incumbent so offending shall for the same lose one year's profit of his said benefice, to be distributed by the ordinary among the poor of the parish; and that all chargings of such benefices with cure hereafter with any pension, or with any profit out of the same to be yielded or taken, hereafter to be made, other than rents to be reserved upon leases hereafter to be made according to the meaning of this act, shall be utterly void."

No pension or profit to be charged.

Act repealed and re-enacted.

43 Geo. 3, c. 84, wholly repealed the above act (a), but 57 Geo. 3, c. 99, repealed 43 Geo. 3, c. 84, and revived 13 Eliz. c. 20.

(a) See Doe v. Somerville, 6 B. & C. p. 126; 9 D. & R. p. 100.

In Saltmarshe v. Hewett and Skrine v. Hewett (b), attempts had been made to evade this statute, the incumbent Hewett, who desired to borrow money, purporting to grant annuities on his life. In the first case the annuity was secured by a bond for 3,600*l.* and an indenture charging the annuity upon the rectory of Rotherhithe and the glebe lands, and further secured by a warrant of attorney from Hewett to confess judgment for 3,600*l.* It was declared that the judgment on the warrant of attorney was to be entered up as a collateral security only for payment of the annuity, and that no execution should issue on such judgment unless and until the payment of the same or some part thereof should be twenty-one days in arrear after any of the specified days of payment; but that, in case of such arrear, it should be lawful for Saltmarshe to sue out execution on the judgment, and also to sequester the rectory and the glebe lands, or any other benefice or benefices which Hewett might take in lieu thereof, and for that purpose to instruct counsel, &c., to act for both the parties in such proceedings as should be necessary to obtain an immediate sequestration of the said rectory or other ecclesiastical preferment, to the intent that, by virtue of all or any of the ways aforesaid, Saltmarshe might recover the arrears of the said annuity and his costs.

*Saltmarshe v.
Hewett and Skrine v.
Hewett.*

In Skrine v. Hewett, there was a similar warrant of attorney and an annuity deed, whereby the annuity was to be charged and chargeable upon, and issuing and payable out of, the rectories of Ewhurst and Rotherhithe, and whereby it was also declared that the judgment was to be considered as a security for the annuity; that in case default should be made in the payment thereof for twenty-one days, it should be lawful for Skrine to issue thereupon one or more writs of fi. fa. de bonis ecclesiasticis, and such other writ or writs as he should think fit to ground the same, in order that Skrine might sequester the glebe lands, &c., belonging to the rectories, and thereby be in possession in trust for better securing to him all arrears then due on the said annuity, and all future payments thereof.

The Court of Queen's Bench, thought it "hardly to admit of a doubt but that the rectory of Rotherhithe is charged with the payment of the annuity in the event of its being in arrear, or in other words, that the said benefice is charged with a 'profit, out of the same to be yielded and taken;' " and after considering the cases, was "of opinion that enough appears to show that the warrant of attorney was given 'to charge the benefice,' and is, therefore, void by the statute," and that, upon the whole, the security could not be supported in either case.

In Alchin v. Hopkins, it was holden that a composition with a clergyman in consideration that his future income might be received by a trustee, and applied in liquidation of his debts, after providing for a curate, is void under the above act (c).

*Alchin v.
Hopkins.*

(c) 4 Moo. & S. p. 615; 1 Bing. N. C. p. 99. See also Johnson v.

*Walthev v.
Crafts.*

In a later case, Walthev v. Crafts, to a declaration in covenant by a sequestrator for rent due under a lease, whereby a rector demised to the defendant the rectory and parsonage, with the tithes, except the parsonage house, for a term of fourteen years, if the rector should so long live, at the yearly rent of 980*l.*, the defendant pleaded, that, before the execution of the lease, the rector was indebted to V. and M. and others, and in consideration thereof, and of a further sum to be lent by V., and of the defendant consenting to be V.'s agent, the rector agreed with the defendant and V. to charge the rectory with that sum and the others, by making the lease in the declaration mentioned, and appointing the defendant receiver of the tithes, rents, &c., in order that he might apply the rent reserved by the lease in payment of the moneys so to be charged on the benefice; that the money was advanced by V., and that the rector in pursuance of the agreement, and in order to charge the benefice, executed the lease, and also an indenture appointing the defendant receiver; that the lease was part of the same transaction, and was a charging of the benefice contrary to the statute. On demurrer to this plea:—It was holden that, under the second indenture, there was an equitable assignment or valid appropriation of so much of the rent as was necessary to pay V. and M. their debts; and that such assignment was a charge upon the benefice, and therefore the lease, which was part of the same transaction, was void under the act (d).

Long v. Storie.

And in Long v. Storie, where a rector, who was also the patron of a living, gave warrants of attorney to various creditors, who had mortgages on the advowson, subject to an agreement that the judgment to be entered up by the first mortgagee should have priority over the rest, whenever execution should be issued:—It was holden, that the agreement pointed so particularly to making the judgments charges on the living, that the court could not give effect to it by granting an injunction and a receiver (e).

Gathercole.*

And in spite of the language in 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, s. 13, now modified by later acts, providing that all judgments of the Superior Courts at Westminster entered up and registered against any person should operate as a charge upon all lands, rectories, advowsons, tithes, and other hereditaments of or to which the person should be seised, entitled or possessed for any estate or interest, it was holden by the lords justices, reversing a decision of Lord Cranworth, when vice-chancellor, that a judgment so entered up and registered against a clergyman does not create a charge upon his benefice entitling the judgment creditor to the appointment of a receiver (f).

Where pew-rents can legally be imposed, the incumbent cannot charge them any more than he could any other revenues of his benefice (g).

Charge on pew-rents.

Charges, however, may in certain cases be made by the incumbents on benefices with cure.

What charges may be made

We have seen that such charges may be made for the purpose of building or repairing the house of residence, or for buying plots of land convenient to be annexed to the glebe (h).

for residence
houses,

In these cases the charges can only be made with the consent of certain persons specified in the statutes authorizing them, and where one of the persons to consent, e. g. the bishop of the diocese, himself takes the charge, the transaction will be considered contrary to the principles of equity, and the charge will be holden void in his hands (i).

By 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71, ss. 77, 78, and 2 & 3 Vict. c. 62, ss. 16, 17, incumbents were empowered to charge the expenses, to which they as tithe owners were put in obtaining a proper tithe commutation, on the lands of the benefice for a certain number of years (k).

commutation,

Benefices may now be charged with pensions to previous incumbents under the provisions of the Incumbents Resignation Acts (l).

on resignation,

Incumbents are also by 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 21, and 28 Vict. c. 42, empowered to charge their benefices for the benefit of chapels and district churches within the limits of their parishes (m).

for benefit of churches,

By 3 & 4 Vict. c. 113, s. 74, it is enacted, that arrangements may be made by an Order in Council framed upon a scheme of the ecclesiastical commissioners, "for the apportionment of the income of two benefices belonging to the same patron between the incumbents or ministers of such benefices, or the churches or chapels connected therewith; provided that no such arrangement shall be made with respect to benefices in lay patronage without the consents of the respective patrons, nor in any case so as to prejudice the interests of any existing incumbent, nor without the consent of the bishop of the diocese, nor, in the case of benefices lying in more than one diocese, without the consent of the bishop of each diocese; nor where a bishop is himself one of the patrons, without the consent of the archbishop also" (n).

Charges on glebe for drainage and improvements.

Charges may be made of glebe as of other lands for drainage and improvements under the General Land Drainage and Improvement Company Act, 1849 (12 & 13 Vict. c. xci.) (o); and where a rent-charge created by the Inclosure Commissioners under that Act was in arrear, the Chancery Division of the High Court of Justice ordered a sale of the glebe lands to satisfy the charge (p).

Charges may also be made by the Inclosure Commissioners under the Improvement of Land Act, 1864 (27 & 28 Vict. c. 114).

Ecclesiastical funds not to be charged for improvements without consent of patron and bishop.

But now, by 47 & 48 Vict. c. 67, s. 1, "The Commissioners shall not sanction any improvement of any land held in right of any church, chapel, or other ecclesiastical benefice unless and until the patron of such benefice, and the bishop of the diocese in which such lands are situate, shall signify to the Commissioners by writing under their hands their consent respectively to such application, nor shall any charge upon any such land of money expended, or purporting to be expended, for the improvement thereof, whether under any general or local act, or any contract or agreement, be valid or effectual, and whether with or without the sanction of the Commissioners, unless and until the patron of the benefice and the bishop of the diocese shall have respectively signified their consent in writing thereto. Provided that nothing herein contained shall invalidate, or prejudicially affect, any charge which may have been validly and effectually made before the passing of this act."

Under Agricultural Holdings Act.

Charges under the Agricultural Holdings (England) Act, 1883 (46 & 47 Vict. c. 61) have been already mentioned (q).

SECT. 2.—Benefices without Cure.

Benefices without cure may be charged.

The act 13 Eliz. c. 20, applies only to benefices with cure of souls; and it has been in fact holden that a canonry of Windsor having no cure of souls attached may be assigned, and that, on a bill filed by a mortgagee, a receiver would be appointed (r).

Butcher v. Musgrave.

In Doe d. Butcher v. Musgrave, being an action by another mortgagee of the same canonry, the Court of Common Pleas on the 23rd June, 1840, decided that an action of ejectment would not lie for the canonry in question, it being a mere office, of which the sheriff could not give possession; and that ejectment did not lie for the residentiary house in which the canon resided, as it appeared to be vested in the corporation, and not in the canon (s).

CHAPTER VIII.

PUBLIC IMPOSTS.

SECT. 1.—*First Fruits and Tenths.*2.—*Land Tax.*3.—Rates.

THIS Chapter is intended to comprise the several charges or taxes imposed by the State on the revenues arising from the property of the church. The first class of charges are now, since the reign of Queen Anne, returned to the church, though distributed to different ecclesiastical corporations.

SECT. 1.—First Fruits and Tenths.

Annates, primitiæ, or first fruits, were the value of every spiritual living by the year, which the pope, claiming the disposition of all ecclesiastical livings within Christendom, reserved out of every living (a). First fruits.

What pope first imposed first fruits may be doubtful (b). History.
Hume, in his history of Edward I., says “the levying of first fruits was also a new device begun in this reign, by which his holiness thrust his fingers very frequently into the purses of the faithful; and the king seems to have unwarily given way to it.” Blackstone, discoursing of first fruits and tenths (c), says, “these were originally a part of the papal usurpations over the clergy of these kingdoms; first introduced by Pandulph, the pope’s legate, during the reigns of King John and Henry III. in the see of Norwich; and afterwards attempted to be made universal by the popes Clement V. and John XXII. about the beginning of the fourteenth century. The first fruits, primitiæ, or annates, were the first year’s whole profits of the spiritual preferment, according to a rate or valor made under the direction of pope Innocent IV. by Walter, bishop of Norwich, in 38 Hen. 3, and afterwards advanced in value by commission from pope Nicholas the third, A.D. 1292, 20 Edw. 1, which valuation of pope Nicholas is still preserved (d). The tenths, or decimæ, were the tenth part of the annual profit of each living by the same valuation." When the first fruits and tenths were transferred to the king by 26 Hen. 8, c. 3, confirmed by 1 Eliz. c. 4, commissioners were appointed in each diocese to make a new valor beneficiorum, by which the clergy are at present rated. This is commonly called the King's Books, and a transcript of it is given in Ecton's Thesaurus, and Bacon's Liber Regis (e). The reason alleged by the canonists for the exaction of these first fruits by the pope was, pro conservando decenti statu suo, ut qui omnium curam habet de communi alatur (f).

Tenths.

Tenths, decimæ, are the tenth part of the yearly value of all ecclesiastical livings (g).

These tenths the pope (after the example of the high priest among the Jews, who had of the Levites a tenth part of the tithes), claimed as due to himself by divine right. And this portion or tribute was by ordinance yielded to the pope in the 20 Edw. 1, and a valuation then made, as already stated, of the ecclesiastical livings within this realm, to the end the pope might know and be answered of that yearly revenue; so as the ecclesiastical livings chargeable with the tenth (which was called spiritual) to the pope were not chargeable with the temporal tenths or fifteenths granted to the king in parliament, lest they should be doubly charged; but their possessions acquired after that taxation were liable to the temporal tenths or fifteenths, because they were not charged to the other. So as the tenths of ecclesiastical livings were not yielded to the pope de jure after the example of the high priest among the Jews, for then he should have had the tenths of all ecclesiastical livings whensoever they were acquired, but he contented himself with what he had got, and never claimed more; and that he might the better keep and enjoy that which he had got, the popes did often after grant the same for certain terms to divers of the kings of England, as by our historians appears (h).

enjoy from time to time, to endure for ever, of every such person and persons which . . . shall be nominated, elected, prefected, presented, collated, or by any other means appointed to have any archbishopric, bishopric, abbacy, monastery, priory, college, hospital, archdeaconry, deanry, provostship, prebend, parsonage, vicarage, chauntry, free chapel, or other dignity, benefice, or promotion spiritual, within this realm . . . of what name, nature or quality so ever they be, or to whose foundation, patronage, or gift so ever they belong, the first fruits, revenues and profits for one year of every such archbishopric, bishopric, &c.”

Sect. 8. And he “shall yearly have, take, enjoy, and perceive united and knit to his imperial crown for ever, one yearly rent or pension amounting to the value of the tenth part of all the revenues, rents, farms, tithes, offerings, emoluments, and of all other profits as well called spiritual as temporal, now appertaining, belonging, or that hereafter shall belong to any archbishopric, bishopric, abbacy, monastery, priory, archdeaconry, deanry, hospital, college, house collegiate, prebend, cathedral church, conventual church, parsonage, vicarage, chauntry, free chapel, or other benefice or promotion spiritual, of what name, nature or quality so ever they be, within any diocese of this realm or in Wales” (i).

By sect. 1, every person, before any actual or real possession or meddling with the profits of his benefice, shall pay or compound for the first fruits to the king's use, at reasonable days, and upon good sureties.

Compounding for and payment of first fruits.

By sect. 4, “. . . if any person or persons which . . . shall be nominated, elected, prefected, presented, collated, or by any other means appointed to any of the dignities, offices, benefices, or other promotions spiritual before mentioned, do enter into the actual or real possessions thereof or meddle with the profits thereof, before they shall have truly satisfied and paid to the king's use the first fruits and profits thereof for one year, or else shall have agreed or compounded of the same at reasonable days upon good sureties in manner and form as by this act is above specified, that then every such person or persons so doing and offending and being thereof convict by presentment, verdict, confession or witness, before the said lord chancellor, or such other as shall have authority by commission to compound for ‘the same,’ shall be accepted and taken an intruder upon the king's possession,” and shall forfeit double value.

Penalty on not paying or compounding.

In order to ascertain the valuation, it was enacted by sects. 9, 10, that the chancellor of England should have power to direct into every diocese commissions in the king's name under his great seal, as well to the archbishop or bishop as to such other persons as the king should appoint, commanding them to examine and inquire of the true yearly values of all the manors, lands, tenements, hereditaments, rents, tithes, offerings, emoluments, and all other profits as well spiritual as temporal, appertaining to any such benefice or promotion; with a clause to be contained in every such commission, that they should deduct and allow these deductions following and none other, that is to say, the rents resolute to the chief lords, and all other annual and perpetual rents and charges which any spiritual person is bound yearly to pay to any person, or to give yearly in alms by reason of any foundation or ordinance, and all fees for stewards, receivers, bailiffs and auditors, and synods and proxies; and with another clause to be contained in their commission, that they should certify under their seals, at such days as should be limited by the said commissions, as well the whole and entire value as the deductions aforesaid.

Sect. 25. "Provided also that all such fees which any archbishop, bishop, or other prelate of the church is bounden yearly to pay to any chancellor, master of the rolls, justices, sheriffs, or other officers, or ministers of record, for temporal justice to be done or ministered within their diocese or jurisdictions, shall be allowed and deducted by the commissioners in and upon the valuation of the dignities, monasteries, or churches chargeable with such fees: anything in this act to the contrary thereof notwithstanding."

diocese to be rated.

And by sect. 12, every archbishopric, bishopric, and other benefice and promotion above specified, shall be severally and distinctly rated in the proper diocese where they be, wheresoever their possessions or profits shall happen to lie.

28 Hen. 8,
c. 11.
Year when to commence.

By 28 Hen. 8, c. 11, s. 1, the year in which the first fruits shall be paid, shall begin and be accounted immediately after the avoidance; and the profits belonging to any archdeaconry, deanery, prebend, parsonage, vicarage, or other spiritual promotion, benefice, dignity, or office during the vacation (chauntries only excepted), shall go to the successor towards the payment thereof.

26 Hen. 8,
c. 3.
Incumbent
dying.

By 26 Hen. 8, c. 3, s. 23, a person presented or collated to a parsonage or vicarage, not exceeding eight marks a year (that is, according to the valuation then to be made), was not to pay first fruits except he lived three years after his admission; and in the composition there was to be a clause, that if the incumbent died within three years, the obligation should be void.

2 & 3 Phil. &
Mar. c. 4.

By the statute 2 & 3 Phil. & Mar. c. 4, the payment of first fruits and tenths to the crown ceased, until the repeal of that statute by 1 Eliz. c. 4, when the above-mentioned statutes of Hen. 8 were revived, and the law with respect to such payments to the crown, subject to any alterations made by 1 Eliz. c. 4, again brought into force as it existed under such statutes, and 1 Mar. sess. 2, c. 10.

1 Eliz. c. 4.

By 1 Eliz. c. 4, s. 6, "if an incumbent live to the end of half a year next after the avoidance," "so as he hath received or without fraud might lawfully have received or enjoyed the rents and profits of that half year, and before the end of the other half year then next following shall die or be lawfully evicted, removed, or put from the said promotion spiritual, by judgment at common law without fraud or covin"; he, his heirs, executors, administrators or sureties "shall be charged and chargeable but only with a fourth part of the said first fruits due to be paid for such his promotion, and no more of the said first fruits; anything in this act contained, or any bond or writing to be made for the payment of the said first fruits, or other matter to the contrary notwithstanding. And if he live for one whole year next after such avoidance, and before the end of half a year then next following shall die or be removed as aforesaid, he shall be charged but with half of the first fruits. And if he live to the end of one whole year and a half, and before the end of six months then next following shall so die or be removed, he shall be charged, but only with three parts of the first fruits. And if he shall live to the end of two whole years, and not be lawfully evicted, removed, or put out as aforesaid, he shall pay the whole."

By 6 Ann. c. 54, s. 5 (k) ". . . every archbishop and bishop shall have four years allowed him, when he or they shall compound for the same, for the payment of his first fruits, which shall commence from the time of restitution of his temporalities; and . . . in every year he shall pay one fourth part of the whole sum; and if it shall please God he shall die or be removed before the full term of four years shall be expired, he, his heirs, executors, or administrators shall be discharged of so much as did not become due or payable at or before the time or times of his death or removal, in like manner as the heirs, executors and administrators of rectors and vicars are authorized to do."

By 6 Ann. c. 54, s. 6, "all deans, archdeacons, prebendaries, and other dignitaries, shall compound for their first fruits in such manner and form as rectors and vicars have been accustomed to do; and in case of death or removal within the time usually allowed to rectors and vicars for payment of their said first fruits, they, the said deans, archdeacons, prebendaries, and other dignitaries shall be in the like condition, and have the same benefit as is allowed to rectors and vicars by 1 Eliz. c. 4."

And whereas by 26 Hen. 8, c. 3, there was no provision for deduction of the tenths of that same year for which the first fruits were due to be paid, whereby there became a double charge; therefore by 27 Hen. 8, c. 8, ss. 1, 2, 3, it is enacted as follows: viz. "for reformation thereof, the King's Highness, for the entire and hearty love that his Grace bears to the prelates and other incumbents chargeable to the payment of the said tenth and first fruits, of his excellent goodness is pleased and contented that it be enacted that" . . . at the composition for the payment of the said first fruits, allowance and deduction shall be made "of the tenth part of the whole out of the sum to be paid for the said first fruits," which tenth shall be paid to the king for that first year.

1 Eliz. c. 4.
Grants of exemption from first fruits and tenths to continue.

What livings are exempted from first fruits according to the valuation in the king's books.

By 1 Eliz. c. 4, s. 7, all grants made to the universities or any college or hall therein, and to the colleges of Eton and Winchester, by any kings of this realm or by act of parliament, for the discharge of first fruits and tenths, shall remain in force.

By 1 Eliz. c. 4, s. 5, vicarages not exceeding the yearly value of 10*l*. after the rate and value upon the records and books of the rates and values for the first fruits and tenths remaining in the exchequer (according to the valuation made in the 26 Hen. 8), and parsonages not exceeding the like yearly value of ten marks, shall be discharged of first fruits.

And the reason why vicarages not exceeding 10*l*. should be freed of this charge, and parsonages of ten marks should pay, was because the vicarages in former times, and when the valuation was taken, had a great income by voluntary offering, which falling to little or nothing upon the dissolution of monasteries this favour was afforded them in their first fruits (l).

6 Ann. c. 24.
Grant of first fruits and tenths to the Corporation called Queen Anne's Bounty.

Small benefices discharged from tenths and first fruits.

By 6 Ann. c. 24, reciting that, pursuant to 2 & 3 Ann. c. 11, her then Majesty did establish the Corporation of the Bounty of Queen Anne for the augmentation of the poor clergy, and did by letters patent bearing date the 3rd day of November, in the third year of her Majesty's reign, give and grant to the said governors all the revenues of first fruits and tenths payable to her Majesty under 26 Hen. 8, c. 3, and 1 Eliz. c. 4, it is provided (sect. 2), that all ecclesiastical benefices with cure of souls not exceeding the clear yearly value of 50*l*. by the improved valuations of the same (the tenths whereof are by the said recited charter vested in the said corporation), shall be free and clearly discharged and acquitted for ever of the said first fruits and tenths.

Except where previously granted away.

Sect. 4. "Provided always . . . that this act or anything herein contained shall not extend to discharge any benefices with cure of souls the tenths whereof were granted away by any of her Majesties predecessors to any person or persons, bodies politic or corporate in perpetuity, before the said third day of November, in the third year of her Majesties reign."

Special provisions where charges on first fruits and tenths of any diocese would be insufficient.

Sect. 7. Provided nevertheless that this act or any thing herein contained shall not extend, or be construed to extend, to avoid or diminish any annual sum, stipend, pension or annuity, now in being, which hath heretofore been granted to any person or persons, body politic or corporate, and charged upon the said revenues of first fruits and tenths or any part thereof, but in case it shall so happen that by discharging such small livings or benefices with cure of souls . . . the first fruits and tenths which hereafter shall be collected in any diocese or dioceses "shall not be sufficient to pay such annual sums as they now stand charged with" the whole revenues of the first fruits and tenths throughout the kingdom shall be liable to make good such deficiency, during the continuance of such grants.

And for ascertaining the said clear yearly value, the bishops of every diocese or guardians of the spiritualties (sede vacante), and the ordinaries of peculiars and places of exempt jurisdiction, were required by the act of 6 Ann. c. 24, s. 3, as well by the oaths of witnesses as by other lawful means, to inform themselves of the clear improved yearly value of every benefice with cure of souls within their respective jurisdictions, the clear improved yearly value whereof did not then exceed 50%, and were to certify the same under hand and seal into the exchequer, which certificate being made and filed in the said court, was to ascertain the clear yearly value of such benefices to be discharged.

And by 6 Ann. c. 54, s. 1, all ecclesiastical benefices with cure of souls, not exceeding the clear yearly value of 50% by the improved valuation of the same, the tenths whereof are not vested in the corporation of the governors of Queen Anne's Bounty, shall be discharged for ever from the first fruits.

Also, by 1 Eliz. c. 4, s. 8, the dean and canons of the free chapel of St. George within the Castle of Windsor, and all the possessions thereof, shall be discharged of tenths and first fruits.

By 1 Eliz. c. 4, s. 13, also, nothing therein shall charge any hospital or "the possessions thereof employed for the relief of poor people, or any school or schools, or the possessions or revenues of them or any of them, with the payment of any tenths or first fruits . . ."

By 26 Hen. 8, c. 17, farmers and lessees of any manors, lordships, lands, parsonages, vicarages, portions of tithes, or other profits or commodities belonging to any archbishop, bishop, or other prelate or spiritual person, or spiritual body corporate or politic, shall be discharged of first fruits or tenths; but the lessors and owners shall pay the same.

There were in 1837 two archbishoprics and twenty-three bishoprics liable to first fruits, but only eighteen bishoprics liable to tenths; and out of 10,498 benefices with or without cure of souls, there were only 4,898 which remained liable to tenths, and of that number 4,500 were also liable to first fruits (n).

By 1 & 2 Vict. c. 20, the old Office of First Fruits and Tenths is abolished, and the treasurer of Queen Anne's Bounty is made sole collector (n).

By sect. 8 of the last-mentioned act, "The treasurer for the time being of the bounty of Queen Anne shall, upon or immediately after the receipt of every return of institutions made

Sect. 9. "When and as often as it shall appear to the treasurer for the time being of the governors of the bounty of Queen Anne that any person liable to the payment of first fruits or tenths shall have omitted or neglected to pay the same respectively for one calendar month over or after the proper time for such payment, the said treasurer for the time being shall thereupon give to each such person a notice in writing, or transmit the same by the post addressed to him at the place of residence belonging to the benefice or other ecclesiastical preferment in respect of which such payment is required, or other his usual place of residence, if known to the said treasurer, stating the amount then appearing to be due from such person for or in respect of first fruits and tenths respectively; and such notice shall from time to time be repeated as often as the said treasurer may deem expedient; and in particular between the twenty-ninth day of September and the twenty-fifth day of December in every year such a notice shall be given, sent or transmitted as aforesaid to every archbishop, bishop, or other dignitary, rector, vicar or other person from whom any first fruits or yearly tenths or any sum or sums of money in respect thereof, may then appear to be due, to the end that the payments of such first fruits and tenths may in no case be omitted or neglected through ignorance or inadvertence."

Sect. 10. "All the laws, statutes and provisions touching or concerning the said revenues of first fruits and tenths, and the imposing, charging, assessing and levying, and the true answering and payment of the said first fruits and tenths, or touching the charge or discharge or alteration of them or any of them, or any matter or thing relating thereto, which were in force immediately before the passing of this act, and which are not hereby or hereinbefore altered or repealed, shall be, remain and continue in their full force and effect, and shall hereafter be observed and put in due execution according to the tenor or purport of the same and every of them in all things, excepting such as are in or by this act altered or repealed."

By 26 Hen. 8, c. 3, s. 8, the tenths are to become due yearly at the feast of the Nativity of our Lord God.

And by 3 Geo. 1, c. 10, s. 3, if any person charged with the payment of tenths shall not pay or duly tender the same yearly before the last day of April succeeding the feast of the Nativity whereon the same shall become due; then upon certificate thereof made by the collector or receiver, on or before the first day of June following, he shall be allowed upon his account all such sums as any persons against whom such certificates shall be made should or ought to have paid. And in every such case the treasurer, chancellor and barons of the exchequer shall issue upon every such certificate such process as to them shall seem proper and reasonable, against every such person against whom such certificate shall be made, his executors or administrators, whereby the same may be truly levied and paid to the said collector or receiver. And every sum so levied and paid the collector or receiver shall bring to account, and charge himself therewith in his next account.

By 26 Hen. 8, c. 3, s. 15, and 2 & 3 Edw. 6, c. 20, persons making default in payment were to be deprived of their benefice.

But now by 3 Geo. 1, c. 10, s. 2, persons making default of payment shall forfeit double value of the tenths.

By 26 Hen. 8, c. 3, s. 12, the bishops were charged to collect the tenths, and upon their certificate into the exchequer on non-payment by any incumbent, process was to be issued out of the said court against such incumbent, his executors and administrators; or for insufficiency of them, against the successors of such incumbent; whereby the king might be truly answered and paid.

And by 27 Hen. 8, c. 8, s. 4, in cases whereby the successor shall be chargeable to the payment of tenths unpaid in the time or life of his predecessor, he may distrain such goods of his predecessor as shall be upon the premises, and retain the same till the predecessor, if he be alive, and if he be dead till his executors or administrators, shall pay the same; and if the same shall not be paid in twelve days, then he may cause the goods to be appraised by two or three indifferent persons to be sworn for the same; and according to the same appraising may sell so much thereof as shall pay the same and also the reasonable costs that shall be spent by the occasion of distraining and appraising the same; and if no such distress can be found, then such predecessor if he be alive, and if he be dead his executors or administrators, may be compelled to the payment thereof by bill in chancery, or by action or plaint of debt at common law.

But by 3 Geo. 1, c. 10, s. 1, the bishops are discharged from the said collection: nevertheless, all former statutes for the imposing, charging, assessing and levying, and the true answering and payment of the first fruits and tenths, not altered by the said statute of 3 Geo. 1, shall continue in force.

And by 7 Edw. 6, c. 4, s. 3, if any promotion spiritual should chance to be or remain in such sort void, that no incumbent could be conveniently provided, the bishops were to certify the same specially; in which case it is enacted, that the king may levy and take all the glebe lands, tithes, issues or profits of such benefice, until he be paid the whole arrearages of the tenths.

By 26 Hen. 8, c. 3, s. 22, in cathedral churches and colleges, every distinct head and member shall pay according to his own respective salary, and not for any others.

By 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 77, one of the objects of the act, which is to be carried into effect by the ecclesiastical commissioners, is, that on the alteration of the incomes of the several sees made according to that act the first fruits shall be apportioned, so as to leave the same aggregate sum payable to the governors of Queen Anne's Bounty, but so as to divide that sum pro rata according to the new incomes of the several sees, throwing also a portion of the charge on the excess of income of the sees of Durham and Ely, which is received by the commissioners for the purposes of their general fund.

The same rule was to be applied to the tenths.

By 4 & 5 Vict. c. 39, s. 4, where the estates of holders of dignities, prebends and offices are vested in the commissioners, the holders thereof are to be discharged from all liability to pay first fruits and tenths; and the commissioners are yearly to pay over to the treasurer of Queen Anne's Bounty one twentieth of the estimated first fruits of the estates as an average compensation for the loss of the first fruits; and are also to pay the regular tenths of all these offices and of the sinecure rectories in their possession annually to the said treasurer.

Present application of first fruits and tenths.

It will be shown hereafter how the receipt and management of all first fruits and tenths has now been given to the governors of Queen Anne's Bounty (o). The use of the funds by way of loans to the incumbents of benefices for the building and repairing of their houses, the purchase of small portions of glebe, &c., has been already mentioned (p). The ultimate application of the funds to the augmentation of the poorer benefices and otherwise to the relief of spiritual destitution will also be mentioned hereafter (q).

SECT. 2.—Land Tax.

Besides the liability to first fruits and tenths, ecclesiastical property in England, in common with all other real estate, is subject to land tax.

History of tax.

33 Geo. 3,
c. 5.

This tax has been often imposed at various periods of our history, but the act which first put the tax and the assessment of it on a regular footing was 38 Geo. 3, c. 5. This act expressly (by sect. 4) charged all manors, lands, tithes, annuities and other yearly profits and all hereditaments; and special provision is made for the seizing and sale of tithes, where the tax on them is unpaid (by sect. 42).

- (o) Vide infra, Part IX., Chap. II. and Chap. VI., sect. 2.
(q) Vide infra, Part IX., Chap. II.

(p) Vide supra, Part V., Chap. II.

By 38 Geo. 3, c. 60, various provisions were made for the redemption of land tax by persons having any interest in the land, and for keeping the tax on foot as an annuity in favour of the person making the redemption, where his interest was only a partial one (sect. 37). But these provisions, except as to contracts already made or begun, are repealed by 42 Geo. 3, c. 116. There was also an act, 39 Geo. 3, c. 21, which was repealed by the same act.

38 Geo. 3,
c. 60.
Redemption
of land tax.

In Wilson v. Grey (r), a contract for the sale of lands, with their appurtenances, belonging to a rectory, was entered into under the 38 Geo. 3, c. 60, and 39 Geo. 3, c. 6, which enabled ecclesiastical corporations to sell lands for the redemption of land tax. Before the payment of the purchase-money into the Bank of England, as directed by the acts, and the execution of the conveyance, the 39 Geo. 3, c. 21 was passed, which enacted that no minerals under lands belonging to any ecclesiastical corporation which should be sold should pass to the purchaser; and that the provisions of this act should, in the execution of the former acts, be applied as if they had been specially enacted in those acts:—The conveyance did not pass the minerals except by general words. It was holden, nevertheless, that the minerals passed to the purchaser.

Wilson v.
Grey.

By 42 Geo. 3, c. 116, s. 9, “ . . . it shall be lawful for all bodies politic and corporate, and companies, notwithstanding any statutes of mortmain or other statutes or acts of parliament to the contrary, and for all feoffees or trustees for charitable or other public purposes, having any estate or interest in any manors, messuages, lands, tenements, or hereditaments whereon any land tax shall be charged, to contract and agree for the redemption of such land tax or any part thereof.”

42 Geo. 3,
c. 116.

purposes may redemption of land tax.

Sect. 10. “ . . . it shall also be lawful for all other persons having any estate or interest in any manors, messuages, lands, tenements, or hereditaments whereon any land tax shall be charged (except tenants at rack rent for any term of years, or from year to year, or at will, and except tenants holding under the crown any lands or tenements within the survey and receipt of the exchequer or the duchy of Lancaster, or, under the duke of Cornwall, any lands or tenements belonging to and parcel of the duchy of Cornwall, for any term of years, or from year to year, or at will), to contract and agree for the redemption of such land tax or any part thereof.”

All persons (except tenants at rack rent or of crown lands,
&c.) may contract for redemption of land tax.

It was holden in a case turning on a similar section in the act of 38 Geo. 3, c. 5, that an incumbent of a benefice is a person entitled to redeem the land tax, and that the tax may

(r) L. R., 3 Eq. p. 117. In Whidborne v. Ecclesiastical Commissioners (7 Ch. D. p. 375), a curious question of construction of an exception upon a reservation of minerals, and of an act of 57 Geo. 3, c. 100, confirmed invalid sales for redemption of land tax arose; but the circumstances were very special, and no general principle can be deduced from the decision.

Queen Anne's

Patrons of livings may

What consideration to be paid for the redemption.

By 42 Geo. 3, c. 116, s. 15, " . . . it shall be lawful for the governors of the bounty of Queen Anne for the augmentation of the maintenance of the poor clergy to contract and agree for the redemption of the land tax charged or hereafter to be charged upon the lands, tithes, or other profits arising from any living or livings within the meaning of the charter granted in the reign of Queen Anne, or any act or acts now in force directing the application of such bounty, which shall not have been contracted for by the incumbent or incumbents thereof."

Sect. 16. " . . . it shall be lawful for the trustees for the time being of any trust property heretofore given by any will for the purpose of being laid out in the purchase of lands or impropriate tithes for the benefit of the poor clergy in England, with such consent as is required by such will, to contract and agree for the redemption of the land tax charged or hereafter to be charged upon the lands, tithes, or other profits arising from such living or livings belonging to the Church of England as the trustees for the time being, with such consent as aforesaid, shall think fit."

Sect. 17. " . . . where the land tax charged upon the glebe lands, tithes, or other profits of any living or livings, in the patronage of any college, cathedral church, hall, or house of learning in either of the universities of Oxford or Cambridge, or in the patronage of either of the colleges of Eton or Winchester, or of any trustee or trustees for any such college, cathedral church, hall, or house of learning as aforesaid, or in the patronage of any other bodies politic or corporate, or companies, or feoffees or trustees for charitable or other public purposes, or other person or persons, shall not then have been redeemed by the incumbent or incumbents of such living or livings, it shall be lawful for the corporations of such colleges, cathedral churches, halls, or houses of learning respectively, or for such other bodies politic or corporate, or companies, or other person or persons aforesaid in whose patronage any such living or livings shall be, to contract and agree for the redemption of such land tax, upon the same terms and with the same benefits and advantages as the incumbent or incumbents of such living or livings could or might have contracted to redeem the same."

By sect. 22, the consideration to be given for the redemption of any such land tax was to be so much Consolidated or Reduced Annuities as would yield an annuity or dividend exceeding the amount of the land tax so to be redeemed as aforesaid by one tenth part thereof, such capital stock to be transferred to the commissioners, for the reduction of the national debt, in trust for the purposes of this act (t).

By sect. 44, " . . . it shall be lawful for the governors of the bounty of Queen Anne for the augmentation of the maintenance of the poor clergy from time to time to apply any sum or sums of money or other funds which under or by virtue of any laws now in force, or of the charter granted in the reign of Queen Anne, now is or are or hereafter shall be applicable towards the augmentation of any living or livings within the meaning of such laws or charter respectively, in and for the redemption of the land tax charged or hereafter to be charged upon the lands, tithes, or other profits arising from any such living or livings which at any time before or on or after the 24th day of June, 1802, shall have been or shall be contracted for by the incumbent or incumbents of such living or livings (with the consent of the said governors), or which may be contracted for by the said governors in pursuance of this act, and the transfer or payment of the consideration for such redemption by the said governors, or by their order or direction, shall, from the quarter day next preceding the making thereof, wholly exonerate and discharge the lands, tithes, or other profits of such living or livings from such land tax, which shall from thenceforth sink and be extinguished for the benefit of such living or livings; and it shall also be lawful for the said governors from time to time to apply any such sum or sums of money, or other funds as aforesaid, in, for, and towards the purchasing any rent-charge or rent-charges which shall have been or shall be granted under the authority of any of the said recited acts or of this act, by any incumbent or incumbents of any living or livings which the said governors have already agreed or shall hereafter agree to augment; and every such rent-charge, when so purchased, shall be surrendered to the incumbent for the time being of the living upon which the same shall have been charged, to the intent that the same may sink and be extinguished for the benefit of such living or livings."

Governors of Queen Anne's Bounty may lay out money in redeeming land tax on livings and in purchasing rent-charges granted by incumbents.

Sect. 45. " . . . It shall be lawful for the trustees for the time being of any trust property heretofore given by any will for the purpose of being laid out in the purchase of lands or impropriate tithes for the benefit of the poor clergy in England (with such consent as is required by such will) to apply from time to time any sum or sums of money or other funds which by virtue of such will now is or are or hereafter shall be applicable for the purpose aforesaid, in, for, or towards the redemption of any land tax charged or to be charged upon the lands, tithes, or other profits arising from any living or livings belonging to the Church of England which at any time before or on or after the said 24th day of June, 1802, shall have been or shall be contracted for by the incumbent or incumbents of such living or livings, with the consent of the said trustees, or of such other persons whose consent is required by such will, or which may be contracted for by the said trustees, in pursuance of this act; and the transfer or payment of the consideration for such redemption by the said trustees, or by their order or direction, shall, from the quarter day next preceding the making thereof, wholly exonerate and discharge the lands, tithes, or other profits of such living or livings from such land tax, which shall from thenceforth sink and be extinguished for the benefit of such living or livings; and every such redemption of land tax by virtue of this act, for the benefit of such living or livings, shall be deemed valid and effectual in the law, and equivalent, to all intents, constructions, and purposes, to a purchase or purchases of lands or tithes for that purpose under the trusts of such will, any statutes of mortmain or other statute or law to the contrary notwithstanding."

Power for redemption of land tax to sell; or mortgage;

or charge;
or enfranchise;

or cut timber.

Power of charity for relief of clergymen's widows to sell for redemption.

Where the land tax on any glebe, &c. of any living belonging to colleges, &c. shall be redeemed, it may be provided for by sale of any lands belonging thereto, or

By sect. 51, for the purpose of redeeming the land tax on lands belonging to persons (other than corporations, feoffees, or trustees), the persons in possession, but who shall not have the absolute estate (except tenants at rack rent), may sell part of the lands and heriots, for redemption of the land tax, and also rents reserved out of lands granted for beneficial leases, or by copies of court roll, or may mortgage the lands, or grant any rent-charge to the amount of the land tax (x).

By sect. 60, similar powers are given of enfranchising copyhold or customary estates with the approbation of the Court of Chancery.

By sect. 67, timber may be cut down, with the approbation of the Court of Chancery, and the produce applied in the redemption of the land tax, as in cases of real estate, and the land tax shall merge in the lands, unless otherwise ordered by the courts.

By sect. 77, the governors of the charity for the relief of the widows and children of clergymen, with the consent of the commissioners appointed according to sect. 72 (which section is, however, now repealed (y)), for regulating and approving all sales made by corporations, may sell lands given by will for redeeming the land tax on other lands vested in them.

Sect. 78. "That where the land tax charged upon the glebe lands, tithes, or other profits of any living or livings in the patronage of any college, cathedral church, hall, or house of learning, in either of the universities of Oxford or Cambridge, or in the patronage of either of the colleges of Eton or Winchester, or of any trustee or trustees for any such college, cathedral church, hall, or house of learning, or in the patronage of any other corporation aggregate, shall have been or shall be redeemed by or on the behalf of any such college, cathedral church, hall, or house of learning, or by any such corporation aggregate, by virtue of any of the provisions of the said recited acts or of this act, it shall be lawful for any such college, cathedral church, hall, or house of learning, or for any such trustee or trustees thereof respectively as aforesaid, or for any such corporation aggregate, to provide for such redemption by sale of any lands, tenements, or hereditaments belonging to such corporations respectively, or by the grant of any rent-charge which they could or might respectively lawfully make for the redemption of any land tax charged on the lands belonging to such corporations, and the land tax so redeemed shall be forthwith extinguished; but every such college, cathedral church, hall, or house of learning respectively, or such corporation aggregate, shall nevertheless be entitled to an annual rent-charge issuing out of such living equivalent to the amount of the land tax redeemed, unless it shall be declared in writing under the common seal of the body or bodies having such right of patronage or nomination, at the time of presenting or nominating any clerk or clerks to such living or livings, that such rent-charge shall be suspended during his or their incumbency or respective incumbencies, which declaration the body or bodies entitled to nominate to such living or livings shall from time to time be competent to make: Provided always, that such suspension shall be without prejudice to the right of the said body or bodies respectively to recover such rent-charge after the next or any future avoidance: provided also, that any declaration made by any such body at the time of redeeming the said land tax shall be as available during the incumbency of the then rector, vicar, or curate, as if it had been made at the time of his being preferred to such living."

Sect. 79. "That where any ecclesiastical rector shall in right of his rectory be entitled to the patronage or donation of or to any vicarage or perpetual curacy, and there shall not be any glebe land belonging to such vicarage or perpetual curacy which shall be eligible or proper to be sold for the purpose of redeeming the land tax charged on the glebe lands, tithes, or other profits thereof, and such land tax shall have been or shall be redeemed by such ecclesiastical rector, then and in such case it shall be lawful for such ecclesiastical rector, whether he shall be also incumbent of the vicarage or perpetual curacy or not, to provide for the redemption of such land tax by sale of part of the glebe lands belonging to such rectory in the same manner in all respects as he could or might provide for the redemption of the land tax charged on the glebe lands, tithes, or other profits thereof, and the land tax so redeemed shall be forthwith extinguished; but whenever and so long as such rectory and vicarage or perpetual curacy respectively shall be held by different incumbents, the incumbent for the time being of such ecclesiastical rectory shall be entitled to an annual rent-charge issuing out of the vicarage or perpetual curacy equivalent to the grant of a rent-charge, but such college, &c. shall be entitled to a rent-charge out of the living, unless it be declared otherwise at the time of presentation.

Where any rector shall be entitled to the patronage of any vicarage or perpetual curacy, and the land tax on the glebe, &c. shall be redeemed by him, he may provide for such redemption by sale of part of the glebe belonging to the rectory, but the incumbent of the rectory, when not holding the vicarage, &c. shall be entitled to an annual rent-charge out of the vicarage.

Sect. 80. "That no mines or minerals, or seams or veins of coal, metals, or other profits of the like nature, belonging to any manors, messuages, lands, tenements, or hereditaments, which shall be sold by any bishop or other ecclesiastical corporation aforesaid, for the purpose of redeeming any land tax, whether the same shall be opened or unopened, nor any right, title, or claim to open or work the same, nor any advowson or right of patronage or presentation to any living or ecclesiastical benefice, or right of nomination to any perpetual curacy, shall pass by any conveyance of such manors, messuages, lands, tenements or hereditaments, either by express or general words in such conveyance, although such advowson, right of patronage or presentation or nomination, may be appendant or appurtenant to such manors, messuages, lands, tenements, or hereditaments; and such mines or minerals, seams or veins of coal, metal or other profits aforesaid, together with all proper and necessary powers for opening and working the same, and such advowsons, rights of patronage or presentation, or nomination, shall be always absolutely excepted and reserved to such bishops or other ecclesiastical corporations aforesaid, as fully and effectually, to all intents and purposes, as if the same were in such conveyance expressly excepted and reserved."

When redeemed by bishops.

Sect. 88 made provision as to the land tax when redeemed by bishops or other ecclesiastical corporations on lands customarily let by them, and as to the mode of estimating the future rent on these lands.

When by reversioners.

By sect. 123, where any person having an estate other than of inheritance shall redeem the land tax out of his own property, the estate shall be chargeable with the amount of the stock transferred or money paid, and a yearly sum by way of interest equal to the land tax redeemed; but reversioners shall be liable to payment of the interest only from the time of their coming into possession; and when the land tax has been redeemed by reversioners they shall be entitled to a yearly sum equal thereto until the estates vest in them (z).

Queen Anne's Bounty and trustees of property given for the benefit of the poor clergy may purchase land tax for augmenting livings, which shall issue as a fee-farm out of the lands.

Sect. 161 is in part repealed (a), but the unrepealed portion of it provides as follows: "It shall also be lawful for the said governors of the bounty of Queen Anne, notwithstanding any such statutes or law to the contrary, to accept and take any land tax which shall have been so purchased as a fee-farm rent as aforesaid, and which shall be given or bequeathed to them by any deed, will or otherwise, for the purpose of augmenting any such living or livings as aforesaid, and to apply the same for or towards the augmentation of such living or livings accordingly, and the incumbent or incumbents for the time being of such living or livings shall hold and enjoy such land tax, and all powers and remedies for the recovery thereof, in the same manner as if such land tax had been purchased by the said governors, and annexed to such living or livings in pursuance of this act."

Sect. 162. "That every gift or disposition of any land tax which shall have been redeemed under the provisions of the said recited acts, or which shall be redeemed or purchased under the provisions of this act, made by the person or persons entitled thereto by deed, will, or otherwise, for the augmentation of any living or livings whatever, shall be valid and effectual; and such land tax shall be held and enjoyed by or for the benefit of the incumbent or incumbents for the time being of the living or livings which shall be so augmented thereby, according to the tenor of such deed, will, or instrument of gift; any statutes of mortmain or other statute or law to the contrary notwithstanding."

Gifts of land-tax redeemed for the augmentation of any living shall be valid.

By 54 Geo. 3, c. 173, s. 6, "That for the purpose of redeeming any land tax by any rector or vicar, or for the purpose of raising any money for reimbursing the stock or money previously transferred or paid for the redemption of such land tax, or for purchasing an assignment of such land tax, under the powers and provisions of the said acts, or any of them, the land sold or proposed to be sold for those purposes, or any of them, under the powers of the said acts or any of them, shall not necessarily be confined to such a quantity of any lands belonging to such rector or vicar as shall appear to the commissioners authorizing the same necessary to be sold for such purposes, but that any sale of lands hereafter to be made for any of the purposes aforesaid shall be deemed and considered good and effectual sales, notwithstanding the restrictions contained in any of the said acts, although the lands so sold, or proposed to be sold, shall appear to the said commissioners more than shall be necessary for the purposes thereof; provided the said commissioners shall be satisfied that such proposed sale shall, under all circumstances, be beneficial or likely to prove beneficial to the rector or vicar making such sale, and to their respective successors; and provided the ordinary shall signify his consent to such sale, by any writing under his hand, to be produced before the said commissioners."

54 Geo. 3, c. 173.
Sales by rectors and vicars.

By the last mentioned act and many previous ones provision was made for exempting from the land tax in certain cases benefices or charitable institutions having an annual income of less than 150*l*. This provision was greatly extended by 57 Geo. 3, c. 100, which, after reciting what had been done towards the exoneration of small livings and charities under the acts above referred to and others now expired, and further reciting that "it may be expedient to augment the incomes of other small livings or other ecclesiastical benefices and of charitable institutions not already exonerated from land tax," proceeds to enact that two or more of the commissioners appointed under the great seal pursuant to 54 Geo. 3, c. 173, might "direct the exoneration and discharge of the land tax charged upon the messuages, lands or other hereditaments belonging to any livings or other ecclesiastical benefices or charitable institutions, in cases where the whole clear annual income of such livings or other ecclesiastical benefices or charitable institutions respectively shall not exceed the sum of 150*l.*, without the transfer or payment of any consideration for the same, in the manner and under the directions and restrictions in this act mentioned."

By sects. 2, 3, incumbents were to send in statements of the value of their livings for this purpose.

By sects. 4, 6, the commissioners were to certify what lands are discharged of land tax.

By sect. 5, these provisions were to extend to exonerate farms with which two or more livings have been jointly augmented through the assistance of Queen Anne's bounty.

By sect. 7, small livings never yet assessed to the land tax might be exonerated from liability to assessment.

Sect. 9 had a provision in aid of tenants at rack rent of lands holden under such small livings.

Sects. 1 to 11 and 25 of this act are repealed as obsolete by 36 & 37 Vict. c. 91.

By sect. 17 of the same act,—

Surplus stock arising by sales, &c. made by archbishops, &c. may be applied in purchasing assignments of land tax redeemed.

"... where the land tax charged upon any lands, tithes, or other hereditaments belonging to any archi-episcopal or episcopal see, or to any rectory or vicarage, shall have been redeemed by any archbishop, bishop, rector or vicar for the time being, by and out of the private moneys belonging to such archbishop, bishop, or rector or vicar, and it shall happen that any stock shall be standing in the names of the commissioners for the reduction of the national debt, or in the name of the accountant-general of the Court of Chancery, or in the names or name of any trustees or trustee on account or for the use of any such archi-episcopal or episcopal see, or rectory or vicarage, which shall have arisen from any sale, mortgage, or grant, and which shall not have been applied for the purposes for which such sale, mortgage or grant, shall have been made, it shall be lawful for the archbishop or bishop, or rector or vicar for the time being, by and under the direction and authority of the commissioners appointed or to be appointed by letters patent under the great seal, to treat and agree with the archbishop, bishop, rector or vicar, who shall have so redeemed such land tax, or with the executors, administrators, or assigns of such archbishop, bishop, rector or vicar, for the purchase of an assignment from them respectively of the land tax so redeemed; and for the purpose of completing the purchase of such assignment, it shall be lawful for the said last-mentioned commissioners or any two or more of them to order and direct that the consideration for such purchase shall be paid or transferred by sale or transfer of a sufficient part of such stock; and the governor and company of the Bank of England and the said commissioners for reduction of the national debt, and the said accountant-general and also such trustees or trustee as aforesaid, are hereby respectively authorized and required, upon the production of such order, signed by any two or more of the said commissioners under the great seal, by sale or transfer of a sufficient part of such stock, to pay or transfer to the person or persons assigning such land tax the money or stock specified in such certificate; and the receipt or receipts of such person or persons shall be sufficient discharges for the money or stock so to be paid or transferred; and upon any such payment or transfer being made as hereby is directed, and upon an assignment being made of such land tax to the archbishop, bishop, rector or vicar for the time being (and which assignment shall not be liable to any stamp duty), such land tax shall forthwith become merged and extinguished for the benefit of the see or living, the hereditaments belonging to which respectively or any of them shall have been charged with the said land tax."

Sect. 25 of the Act confirms invalid titles on sales under the act "provided such conveyances shall appear to have been executed under the authority and with the consent and approbation of the commissioners for the time being authorized to consent to sales . . ."

The extraordinary rent-charge levied under 49 & 50 Vict. c. 54, is not liable to land tax (b). 49 & 50 Vict. c. 54.

SECT. 3.—Rates.

It has been said already that by the common law ecclesiastical persons were to be quit of tolls, pontage, &c. for their ecclesiastical goods: and that, according to the old view of the law, they were not, unless expressly charged, made chargeable for any of the general burdens imposed upon the subjects of the realm, as to highways, bridges, gaols, &c.; but that the modern view is otherwise (c). By common law.

It has been long holden, though the law at first was uncertain, that incumbents of benefices are liable to the rates for the relief of the poor according to 43 Eliz. c. 2 (d). Poor rates.

These rates have been imposed on them not only in respect of their glebes, but also in respect of tithes, even tithes of fish, and apparently even oblations (e) and pensions (f).

Tithe rent-charge.

6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71.

Tithe rent-charge liable to rates.

What deductions are to be made in rating a tithe commutation rent-charge.

Rex v. Joddrell.

The house and glebe lands of the incumbent will, it seems, be rated in the same manner as other lands in the parish.

There does not appear, however, to be any authority for the rating of surplice fees.

And the extraordinary rent-charge levied under 49 & 50 Vict. c. 54, is rendered by sect. 4 exempt from all rates (g).

An incumbent is not liable to be rated in respect of his church, though the freehold be in him (h).

It will be seen that several questions have arisen and several cases decided which require consideration as to the way in which tithe or tithe commutation rent-charge is to be assessed.

By 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71, s. 69, "every rentcharge payable as aforesaid instead of tithes shall be subject to all parliamentary, parochial, and county and other rates, charges and assessments in like manner as the tithes commuted for such rent-charge have heretofore been subject."

The principles upon which tithe, or corn rents in lieu of tithe, used to be valued were thus laid down in the case of Rex v. Joddrell (i). In that case by an act of parliament the tithes in a parish were extinguished, and in lieu thereof the rector was entitled to a corn rent. In a rate for the relief of the poor, he was assessed for the full amount of that corn rent, after deducting the amount of parochial dues levied on the rector. The farmers in the parish, who paid the corn rent to the rector, were rated upon the bonâ fide amount of the rack rent paid by them to their landlords. It was holden, that as the tithe is an outgoing, the corn rent or compensation for tithes was not to be added, as required by the rector, to the amount upon which the farmer is rateable; and in respect of that portion of the annual profit or value, consisting of corn rent, the rector was to be assessed. Another objection was, that the farmer's share of the profit ought to have been rated, or that the rector should have been rated proportionably less; and this objection prevailed on the ground of inequality, because the farmer was rated, not for the full value of the land which comprised the landlord's and tenant's profit, but for the rack rent, which was the landlord's profit only, while the rector was rated for the full value of his corn rent; for it was said, that the ratio which the rent of land bears to its average annual profit or value ought to have been ascertained, and that the rector ought to have been assessed for his tithe rent in the same ratio. It was holden, that in estimating the amount at which the rector ought to be rated, the land-tax ought to be deducted from the full amount of his corn rent, provided the tenants of the other lands in the parish paid the land-tax without being allowed for it by the landlord, but not if such allowance was made. It was also holden, that the ecclesiastical dues, including tenths, synodals, &c., ought to be

(g) Vide supra, p. 1186.

(h) Vide infra, Part VI., Chap.

II., Sect. 1.

(i) 1 B. & Ad. p. 403.

deducted, because they are payable in respect of the rectory, the profits of which constitute the only fund out of which they can be paid; but it was further holden, that the expenses of providing for the duties of the incumbency, in respect of which the rector claimed a deduction, were not to be allowed, because such duties ought to be performed personally by the rector.

By sect. 1 of the act to regulate parochial assessments, 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 96, passed in the same year as the first Tithe Commutation Act, no rate for the relief of the poor shall be of any force, "which shall not be made upon an estimate of the net annual value of the several hereditaments rated thereunto; that is to say, of the rent at which the same might reasonably be expected to let from year to year, free of all usual tenants' rates and taxes and tithe commutation rent-charge, if any, and deducting therefrom the probable average annual costs of the repairs, insurance and other expenses, if any, necessary to maintain them in a state to command such rent: Provided always, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to alter or affect the principles or different relative liabilities (if any) according to which different kinds of hereditaments are now by law rateable."

6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 96.

All rates to be made on the net annual value of the property.

Many of the deductions specified in this section are inapplicable to tithe rent-charge; while a tithe-owner is subject to other charges and outgoings which are not mentioned in this section. The exceptions contained in this section must therefore be taken as instances applicable to one class of property, and applied by analogy to other classes of property (j).

Exemptions not universally applicable.

Shortly after this act was passed came the decision in Rev v. Capel (k). This decision established that tithes are hereditaments under 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 96, s. 1, and that a tithe-owner is rateable at their net annual value, i.e. at such a sum as the tithes might reasonably be expected to let for from year to year, free of the usual tenants' rates and taxes, and deducting the amount of ecclesiastical dues payable in respect thereof.

Decisions as to meaning of net annual value.

Rev v. Capel.

The next case on this subject, which decided many important points, is that of Reg. v. Goodchild (l). This case decided that the following are proper deductions to be made from the rent-charge:—estimated loss by non-payment; estimated law expenses in enforcing payment; other estimated expenses of collection; all usual tenants' rates and taxes, including therein tenants' property tax, and, where they are charged, lighting rate and general rate; first-fruits; tenths; and ecclesiastical dues. The following deductions, however, were not to be made:—land-tax, and any claim in respect of the personal services of the incumbent or expenses of providing for the duties of the incumbency. This last deduction had previously been disallowed in Reg. v. Joddrell (m).

In the case of Reg. v. Goodchild, two other claims were made—for the salary of a curate (that is, an assistant to, not a substitute for, the incumbent), and for the amount paid towards the salary of a minister of a district church or chapel in the parish; and, it was holden by the court, that where the circumstances were such as to make the employment of an assistant curate morally necessary, his reasonable stipend should form a deduction; and that if the salary of the minister of the district church was compulsorily payable by the incumbent of the mother church, the incumbent might make this a deduction.

Lastly, a claim was made in the case for a deduction in respect of tenants' profits, i.e. that profit which a tenant would expect for undertaking the trouble and cost of collection and the risk of loss, and guaranteeing the payment of a fixed rent to the owner of the rent-charge. This question was not decided on the first hearing; but the case being afterwards re-argued, the court held, that the question whether any allowance in respect of this should be made, and the amount of such allowance (if any), depended on the particular facts of each case, and must be a question to be determined by the sessions (n).

Hawkins.*

In the case of Reg. v. Hawkins (o), argued and decided at the same time as Reg. v. Goodchild, it was holden, that no deduction should be made in respect of moneys paid annually to Queen Anne's bounty for liquidation of principal and interest of a mortgage debt, borrowed for the purpose of rebuilding or repairing the residence house.

Two of the points, however, decided in the case of Reg. v. Goodchild have since been otherwise decided.

*Frend v.
The Churchwardens of Tolleshunt
Knights.*

In the case of Frend v. The Churchwardens of Tolleshunt Knights (p), it was holden, that the minister of a district chapel, part of whose endowment consisted in a rent-charge granted under the powers of several statutes by the incumbent of the mother church out of all his rectory, with powers of distress and entry in the event of non-payment, was not liable to be rated in respect of this rent-charge; though, if he had exercised his power of entry and possessed himself of the tithes, he would have been rateable.

*Lawrence v.
The Overseers of Tolleshunt
Knights.*

And in the subsequent case of Lawrence v. The Overseers of Tolleshunt Knights (q) it was expressly holden, thereby overruling part of the judgment in Reg. v. Goodchild, that the incumbent of the mother church was rateable in respect of the whole rent-charge received by him, without deduction for the amount compulsorily paid over by him to the minister of the district church.

In Reg. v. Sherford, the Queen's Bench (r), holding that the principle of the decision of the House of Lords in The Mersey Docks Case (s) is, that all property capable of beneficial occupation is to be assessed to the poor rate irrespectively of the amount of remunerative value to the particular occupier, and that this principle is not consistent with the decision in Reg. v. Goodchild, in which, on rating a tithe rent-charge, a deduction was allowed to the incumbent in respect of the salary of a curate whose services were necessary, in addition to those of the incumbent himself, to the due discharge of the duties of the benefice, and which can only be supported on the ground, that the incumbent was bound to employ a curate whom he had to pay out of the subject matter in respect of which he was rated, and the occupation by him of the rent-charge was rendered pro tanto less beneficial, decided that the latter case must, therefore, be taken as overruled, and such a deduction ought not to be allowed.

On the other hand, in Stevens v. Bishop (t), it was holden that the annual value of tithe rent-charge for the purpose of the Income Tax acts, and the case would be the same or a fortiori as to the assessment for rates, must be ascertained after deduction of the sum necessarily and properly incurred in the collection of the tithe rent-charge.

For the purpose of pensions granted under the Incumbents' Resignation Acts, 1871 and 1887, the annual value of a benefice is to be ascertained after deducting all rates, taxes, and charges (u).

It seems to be a question turning on the construction of the particular statute in each case whether corn rents, annuities, or land given in lieu of tithes by some local act of parliament are rateable to the poor or not. In the cases of Lowndes v. Horne (x), Rex v. Boldero (y), and Rex v. Wistow (z), it was holden that the corn rents were rateable. In Hackett v. The Overseers of Long Bennington (a), land given in lieu of tithes was holden to be rateable.

But annuities given in lieu of tithes and charged on land, where the tithes were not extinguished in specie, were holden not to be rateable in the cases of Rex v. Great Hambleton (b), and Reg. v. Shaw (c).

And where it is expressly provided by the statute that the corn rent shall be free and clear of all taxes and deductions, it is not rateable (d).

The rate levied in lieu of city tithe under the St. Botolph Aldgate Act (44 & 45 Vict. c. cxvii.) was holden not rateable in Esdaile v. The Assessment Committee of The City of London Union (e). And the Falmouth rector's rate was holden not rateable in Reg. v. Christopherson (f).

Highway rates.

It has been said that by the old law incumbents were not considered to be rateable in respect of their benefices to the repair of the highways (g). Ever since, however, the Highway Act of 13 Geo. 3, c. 78, they have been holden rateable in respect of their benefices to the repair of the highways (h).

5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50.

The Highway Act, 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50, by sect. 27, expressly charges "all property now liable to be rated and assessed to the relief of the poor," with the highway rates (i).

Sewers rates.

It does not seem a settled point whether tithe, or rent-charge in lieu of tithe, is liable to be rated by the commissioners of sewers (k).

In Reg. v. Goodchild (l), in the particular circumstances of the case, the rent-charge was holden not to be liable to sewers rate. Apparently, wherever tithe was not charged to sewers rate, the rent-charge in lieu of it is not chargeable; but in cases where tithe was charged to sewers rate, a question may still arise whether the fixed rent-charge in lieu of tithe is or is not now chargeable (m).

The glebe and house of the incumbent are apparently liable, like other land and houses, to this rate.

General and lighting rate in metropolis.

It has been decided, in the case of Reg. v. Goodchild (l), that tithe rent-charge in the metropolis is liable to the general rate, and the lighting rate imposed under the provisions of the Metropolis Local Management Act, 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, s. 161. There is, apparently, no question as to the liability of the land and house of a benefice to these rates.

By 14 & 15 Vict. c. 50, these rates were specially imposed 14 & 15 Vict. upon "tithes, tithe rent-charges, moduses, compositions real, and c. 50. other payments in lieu of tithe;" and it was provided that these tithes and rent-charges shall be rateable to the lighting rate, under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 90, in the same proportion of their annual value as land, that is, one-third of the proportion payable by houses and buildings; and to the health rate, under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 63, now repealed, in the same proportion of their annual value as land used as arable, meadow or pasture ground only, that is, one-fourth of the net annual value.

By sect. 211 of the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. 38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), sub-s. 6, "the owner of any tithes or of any tithe commutation rent-charge" shall be assessed in respect of the same to the c. 55. general district rate provided for by that Act "in the proportion of one-fourth part only of such net annual value thereof" (n).

Section 230 of the same act, providing for the mode of raising contributions from the several contributory places within the district of a rural sanitary authority, declares in similar terms that the owner of any tithes or of any tithe commutation rent-charge shall, where a special assessment is made under that section in respect of a contributory place, or part of a contributory place not forming part of a parish, be assessed in respect of one-fourth part only of the rateable value thereof, or where no special assessment is made, shall pay in respect of the said property one-fourth part only of the rate in the pound payable in respect of houses and other property.

The rector or impropriator of the great tithes is, in the ab- Church rate. sence of any legal custom to the contrary, liable to the repairs of the chancel, and was, in consideration thereof, discharged from the ordinary liability incident to every parishioner to contribute to the repairs of the body of the church, that is, to church rate.

But where money is borrowed, under 5 Geo. 4, c. 36, to repair or rebuild the church, part of the money may be expended in Rate under 5 Geo. 4, c. 36. repairing or rebuilding the chancel (o); and the rector or impropriator of the great tithes is liable to be rated towards the repayment of the money so borrowed, and cannot claim exemption from rates levied for that purpose, as he could from an ordinary church rate (p).

Recovery of rates on rent-
charge.

The following provisions for the recovery of rates on a rent-charge, and for the power of the owner of the rent-charge to appeal against the rates, are contained in the Tithe Commutation Acts.

6 & 7 Will. 4,
c. 71.

By 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71, s. 70, rates and charges were to be recovered from the occupier of the lands out of which such rent-charge issued.

7 Will. 4, and
1 Vict. c. 69.

By 7 Will. 4 and 1 Vict. c. 69, s. 8, "Rates and charges to which any rent-charge payable in lieu of tithes were liable might be assessed upon the owner of the rent-charge, and the whole or any part thereof might be recovered from any one or more of the occupiers of the lands out of which such rent-charge issued in case they were not sooner paid by the owner of the rent-charge, upon giving to such occupier twenty-one days' notice in writing previous to any one of the half-yearly days of payment of the rent-charge."

Roberts v.
Potts.

These sections, upon which the case of Lamplugh v. Norton (q) was decided, are repealed by 54 & 55 Vict. c. 67, and in the case of Roberts v. Potts (r) it was decided that they were not now even in force in respect of arrears of rates accruing due before the Tithe Act, 1891.

2 & 3 Vict.
c. 62.

Name of each occupier and sum charged on him to be specified by assessor on notice from owner.

By 2 & 3 Vict. c. 62, s. 3, "The assessor or collector of any rate or tax shall, within forty days after the receipt of a notice in writing signed by any land-owner or tithe-owner interested therein, specify in his assessment made for the purpose of collecting and levying such rate or tax the names of the several occupiers of tithes, lands, and tenements subject to such rate or tax, as well as the sum assessed on the tithes, lands, or tenements held by each such occupier."

54 & 55 Vict.
c. 8.

Rating of owner of tithe rent-charge.

The procedure as to rates enacted by the 6th section of the Tithe Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 8) is as follows:—

"1. Any rate to which tithe rent-charge is subject, shall be assessed on, and may be recovered from, the owner of the tithe rent-charge, in the like manner and by the like process as on and from any occupying ratepayer; and so much of any act as authorises any rate or tithe-rent charge to be assessed on, or recovered from, the occupier of any lands out of which the tithe rent-charge issues, is hereby repealed.

"2. If the collector of the rate satisfies the county court that he is unable to recover, in manner aforesaid, any rate assessed on the owner of any tithe rent-charge, the Court may, after such service on the owners of the tithe rent-charge, and of the lands out of which the tithe rent-charge issues, as may be prescribed, and after hearing such owners, if they appear and desire to be heard, order the owner of the lands to pay such tithe rent-charge to the collector until the amount of the rate, and any costs allowed by the court, are fully paid; and the order may be executed as if it were an order under this act for the payment of a sum due on account of the tithe rent-charge.

“ 3. The court may, if satisfied that the circumstances justify it, make such order as aforesaid in respect of any future rate, either generally or during the time limited by the order.

“ 4. The expression ‘rate’ in this section means a poor rate, highway rate, general district rate, borough rate, and every other rate assessed on an owner of tithe rent-charge by a public authority for public purposes; and the expression ‘collector’ means the overseer, surveyor of highways, rate collector, or other person authorised, for the time being, to collect the rate.”

PART VI.
FABRICS AND OFFICERS OF FABRICS OF THE CHURCH.

CHAPTER I.

INTRODUCTORY.

It remains to consider the law applicable to the following subjects:—

1. The fabric of churches and chapels, and the ground attached by consecration thereto,—apart from the questions of ornament, already treated of under the head of Liturgy and Ritual (a), and of monuments of the dead, treated of under the head of Burial (b).

2. Officers having duties connected with the fabric and the churchyards, such as—

1. Churchwardens with their Assistant Sidesmen or Questmen—and in connection therewith the Law of Vestries.
2. Trustees under the Compulsory Church Rate Abolition Act, 1868.
3. Parish Clerks.
4. Sextons.
5. Organists.
6. Lay Readers.

SECT. 1.—General Observations.

DR. BURN observes that the ancient Saxon word is cyrce, the Danish kirke, the Belgic kercke, the Cimbric kiria or kurk; probably from the Greek word Κυριακον, belonging to the Lord, or Κυρίου οίκος, the Lord's house; so that we have lost the ancient pronunciation of the word (except in the northern parts of England and in Scotland) by softening the letters c or ch, as we have done in many cases; which letters the ancient Greeks and Romans always pronounced hard, as the letter k. Origin of word.

The ancient manner of founding churches was, after the founders had made their application to the bishop of the diocese, and had his licence, the bishop or his commissioners set up a cross, and set forth the ground, where the church was to be built; and then the founders might proceed in the building of the church: and when the church was finished, the bishop was to consecrate it, but not till it was endowed; and before, the sacraments were not to be administered in it (a). Ancient manner of founding churches.

For albeit churches or chapels may be built by any of the king's subjects, yet before the law take knowledge of them to be churches or chapels, the bishop is to consecrate or dedicate the same: and this is the reason, that a church or not a church, a chapel or not a chapel, shall be tried and certified by the bishop (b).

It is to be borne in mind that the freehold of churches and churchyards is in the rector or vicar, that of the chancel in the Freehold.

(a) Degge, pt. i. c. 12; Gibs. (b) 3 Inst. p. 201.

rector. In the case of perpetual curates it is questionable whether the freehold be not in the lay impropriator (b).

But incumbent has not all the liabilities of an owner.

But the incumbent of a church, though he have the freehold, is not such an "owner" of the church as to be liable under the Metropolitan Building Act, 1855 (18 & 19 Vict. c. 122), ss. 72, 73, for the expenses incurred by a public body in removing a part of the church which was a dangerous structure within the meaning of that act (c).

Churches are not rateable.

Nor is a church rateable, nor is the incumbent liable as owner or occupier for rates upon it.

3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 30.

By 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 30, churches and chapels are exempted from the payment of poor rates.

Nor is a church to be assessed either as land or building to contribute towards the making or paving of a street under the Metropolis Management Acts (d).

38 & 39 Vict. c. 55.

Exemption of incumbent as owner of church from new street expenses.

By the Public Health Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 55), s. 151, "The incumbent or minister of any church, chapel, or place appropriated to public religious worship, which is now by law exempt from rates for the relief of the poor, shall not be liable to any expenses under the last preceding section (e), as the owner or occupier of such church, chapel or place, or of any churchyard or burial-ground attached thereto, nor shall any such expenses be deemed to be a charge on such church, chapel, or other place, or on such churchyard or burial-ground, or to subject the same to distress, execution, or other legal process; and the urban authority may, if they think fit, undertake any works from the expenses of which any such incumbent or minister is hereby exempted."

55 & 56 Vict. c. 57.

Exemption from expenses of private street works.

By the Private Street Works Act, 1892 (55 & 56 Vict. c. 57), s. 16, "The incumbent, or minister, or trustee of any church, chapel or place appropriated to public religious worship, which is for the time being by law exempt from rates for the relief of the poor, shall not be liable to any expenses of private street works as the owner of such church, chapel or place, or of any churchyard or burial-ground attached thereto, nor shall any such expenses be deemed to be a charge on such church, chapel or other place, or on such churchyard or burial-ground, or to subject the same to distress, execution or other legal process, but the proportion of expenses in respect of which an exemption is allowed under this section shall be borne and paid by the urban authority."

Power of incumbent.

It is partly a consequence of the church being the freehold of the incumbent, and partly of the law as to the use of all things connected with the church, such as the playing of the organ (f) during service and the like, being under the control of the incumbent, that the custody of the key of the church is in him, and that the ringing of bells on all occasions is subject to his control, and the ringing contrary to his order becomes an ecclesiastical offence; although, on the other hand, some authority in this matter is vested in the churchwardens. As to bells.

Thus, in Lee v. Matthews (g), Sir John Nicholl said,— As to key.
 “. . . the minister has, in the first instance, the right to the possession of the key, and the churchwardens have only the custody of the church under him. If the minister refuses access to the church on fitting occasions, he will be set right on application and complaint to higher authorities.”

In Dewdney v. Good and Ford (h), the churchwarden was ordered to deliver up a duplicate key to the church which he had obtained.

By Can. 88 of 1603, “The church-wardens or quest-men, and their assistants, shall suffer no plays, feasts, banquets, suppers, church-ales, temporal courts or leets, lay-juries, musters, or any other profane usage to be kept in the church, chapel or church-yard; neither the bells to be rung superstitiously upon holy-days or eves abrogated by the Book of Common Prayer, nor at any other times, without good cause to be allowed by the minister of the place and by themselves.” Canons as to bell-ringing.
Canon 88.

Can. 111 provides that the churchwardens shall present all persons who, by untimely ringing of bells, do hinder the minister or preacher (i). Canon 111.

By Can. 15, “. . . upon Wednesdays and Fridays, weekly, though they be not holy-days, the minister, at the accustomed hours of service, shall resort to the church or chapel, and warning being given to the people by tolling of a bell, shall say the Litany” (j). Canon 15.

Can. 67. “And when any is passing out of this life, a bell shall be tolled, and the minister shall not then slack to do his last duty. And after the party’s death (if it so fall out) there shall be rung no more but one short peal, and one other before the burial, and one other after the burial” (k). Canon 67.

“Although the churchwardens may concur in directing the ringing or tolling of the bells on certain public and private occasions, the incumbent nevertheless has so far the control over the bells of the church, that he may prevent the churchwardens from ringing or tolling them at undue hours and without just cause. Indeed, as the freehold of the church is vested in the incumbent, there is no doubt that he has a right to the custody of the keys of the church, subject to the granting admission to Opinions as to incumbent’s control of bells.

the churchwardens, for purposes connected with the due execution of their office. Proceedings may be instituted in the Ecclesiastical Court against churchwardens who have violently and illegally persisted in ringing the bells without consent of the incumbent. The citation may be as follows:—‘For violently and outrageously breaking into the belfry of the parish church of —, and without the leave and permission of the rector, and in defiance of his authority, several times ringing the bells in the said church’ ” (l).

Lord Stowell gave the following opinion on this subject:—
 “Case. Churchwardens insist they have a right at all times to ring the bells at the church, to the great annoyance of the rector and family, whose house is close to the church.—Opinion:—I think that the bells cannot be rung without the consent of the rector; the 88th Canon is precise to this point, and is, I conceive, binding upon the churchwardens. I think that the churchwardens might be articted against for breach of the canon, and permitting or directing the bells to be rung without and against the consent of the rector at times not proper or stated for that purpose. If the bells are so constantly rung as really to be what they are described—a nuisance, the parties who are guilty of that nuisance might be punished at the common law, and the mere consent of the churchwardens would not be a sufficient defence to such a prosecution. I do not know that any injunction could be obtained pending such a suit, but a fresh citation might be taken out for each offence.

“If the rector could induce them to come to some agreement as to the times of ringing, it would be the most desirable way upon the whole of settling this matter.

Decisions as to incumbent’s control of bells.

Dr. Lushington ruled to the effect above stated in Redhead v. Wait (n), and in Harrison v. Forbes and Sisson (o). In Daunt v. Crocker (p), a criminal suit promoted by the incumbent for ringing the church bells, it was holden by Sir Robert Phillimore, that it is not sufficient to allege that the ringing took place without the consent of the incumbent; it must be alleged to have been against his express wish.

Brawling.

The offence of creating a disturbance of divine service in church, or of brawling in the church or churchyard, has been dealt with in a former chapter (q).

Ornaments.

The internal ornaments and decorations of churches have also been already treated of, as incidental to the performance of divine service (r).

This chapter deals with the law relating to the several parts of a church, its structure and architectural fittings. Structure and fittings.

If a man do break and enter a church in the night of intent to steal, this is burglary, for the church is the mansion house of Almighty God (s). Robbing of churches.

And here is to be noted a diversity between a spiritual man of the church consecrated to the service of God, and goods dedicated to divine service, or merely ecclesiastical; for laying of violent hands upon a person in holy orders the Ecclesiastical Court used to have consuance, but for the violent taking away or consuming of the ornaments of the church or goods dedicated to divine service, that court (Lord Coke says) has no consuance, for that it is not given to them; as for taking away of the Bible, the Book of Common Prayer, the chalice, and the like, or for the taking away of an image out of the church; but remedy must be taken for these at the common law (t). Nevertheless I am disposed to agree with Dr. Watson, who says, a libel (or articles) may be also in the spiritual court against the offender, pro salute anime et reformatione morum, although not to recover damages (u). When Eccl. Courts have jurisdiction.

Anciently, the church and churchyard was a sanctuary, and the foundation of abjuration; for whoever was not capable of this sanctuary, could not have the benefit of abjuration; and therefore he that committed sacrilege, because he could not have the privilege of sanctuary, could not abjure. This abjuration was, when a person had committed felony, and for safeguard of his life had fled to the sanctuary of a church or churchyard, and there before the coroner of that place, within forty days, had confessed the felony, and took an oath for his perpetual banishment out of the realm into a foreign country, choosing rather to lose his country than his life; but the foreign country into which he was to be exiled might not be amongst infidels (x). Sanctuary.

And the law was so favourable for the preservation of sanctuary, that if the felon had been in prison for the felony, and before attainder or conviction had escaped and taken sanctuary in the church or churchyard, and the gaolers or others had pursued him, and brought him back again to prison, upon his arraignment he might have pleaded the same, and should have been restored again to the sanctuary (y).

But by 21 Jac. 1, c. 28, s. 7, it was enacted, that no sanctuary, or privilege of sanctuary, shall be admitted or allowed in any case. By which act, such abjuration as was at the common law, founded upon the privilege of sanctuary, was wholly taken away. 21 Jac. 1, c. 23.

Under the Riot (Damages) Act, 1886 (49 & 50 Vict. c. 38), s. 7, "Where a church or chapel has been injured or destroyed, or any property therein has been injured, stolen, or destroyed," 49 & 50 Vict. c. 38.

the churchwardens or chapelwardens, if any, or, if there are none, the persons having the management of such church or chapel, or the persons in whom the legal estate in the same is vested; . . . shall be deemed to be the persons who have sustained loss from such injury, stealing, or destruction, and claims may be made by any one or more of such persons in relation both to the building, and to the property therein, and payment to any such claimant shall discharge the liability of the police authority to pay compensation, but shall be without prejudice to the right of any person to recover the compensation from such payee."

SECT. 2.—Consecration of Churches (z).

No church till consecration.

The law (as was said before) takes no notice of churches or chapels till they are consecrated by the bishop: but the canon law supposes, that, with consent of the bishop, divine service may be performed, and sacraments administered in churches and chapels not consecrated; inasmuch as it provides, that a church shall have the privilege of immunity, in which the divine mysteries are celebrated, although it be not yet consecrated: and there are many licences to that effect (granted on special occasions) in our ecclesiastical records (a). This, however, is an exception to the general rule, "that a church is to be consecrated as soon as may be." Another exception obtained in cases of extreme necessity; for if the church was destroyed by fire, the service must be performed in chapels, tents, or in the open air, before the consecrated altar table (b).

No consecration before endowment.

And after a new church is erected, it may not be consecrated, without a competent endowment. And this was made a law of the Church of England in the 16th Canon of the Council of London, "A church shall not be consecrated, until necessary provision be made for the priest." And the canon law goes further; requiring the endowment, not only to be made before consecration, but even to be ascertained and exhibited before they begin to build. And the civil law is yet more strict; enjoining that the endowment be actually made, before the building be begun (c).

Which endowment was commonly made, by an allotment of manse and glebe by the lord of the manor, who thereby became patron of the church (d). Other persons, also, at the time of dedication, often contributed small portions of ground; which is the reason why in many parishes the glebe is not only distant from the manor, but lies in remote divided parcels (e).

By a constitution of Otho, "The dedication of churches is known to have had its beginning under the Old Testament, and was observed by the holy fathers under the New Testament; under which it ought to be done with the greater care and dignity, because that under the Old Testament were only offered sacrifices of dead animals, but under the New Testament is offered for us upon the altar by the hands of the priest, the heavenly, living and true sacrifice, the only begotten Son of God. Wherefore the holy fathers provided, that so sublime an office should not be performed (unless in case of necessity) but in places dedicated. Now because we have seen and heard, that so wholesome a mystery is contemned, or at least neglected, by some; having found many churches, and some of them cathedrals, which, although they have been built of old time, yet have not as yet been consecrated with the oil of sanctification: therefore, being desirous to remedy so dangerous a neglect, we do decree, that all cathedral, conventual, and parochial churches, which are now built and the walls thereof perfected, be consecrated by the diocesan bishops, or others authorized by them, within two years: and let it be so done within the like time, in all churches hereafter to be built. And to the end that so wholesome a mystery and ordinance may not pass into contempt; if such places be not dedicated within two years from the time of the finishing thereof, they shall be interdicted from the solemnities of the mass, until they be consecrated, unless they be excused for some reasonable cause. Moreover, by the present ordinance, we do forbid the abbots and rectors of churches to pull down ancient consecrated churches, under pretence of building larger or more beautiful, without licence and consent of the diocesan: and the diocesan shall diligently consider, whether it be expedient to grant or to deny such licence; and if he shall grant the same, let him take care that the work be finished as soon as may be" (f).

Consecration enjoined by old constitutions.

Interdicted from the solemnities of the Mass.]—That is, from the solemn or high mass; but not from the common celebration of mass, or other inferior offices (g).

And by a constitution of Othobon: "The rector or vicar of an unconsecrated church shall apply to the bishop, (if it can conveniently be done,) otherwise to the archdeacon that he may apply to the bishop, within a year after the building of the church, for the consecration thereof: upon pain that such rector, vicar or archdeacon, making default, shall be suspended from their office till they comply: and the bishop shall exact nothing therefore, but the accustomed procuration" (h).

The consecration of churches may be performed, indifferently, Time of consecration.

on any day: so it was established by a decretal epistle of Pope Innocent II. (i). And according to the calculation of learned men, Constantine's famous dedication of the church at Jerusalem, in a full synod, was on a Saturday, and not on the Sunday (k).

And this consecration ought to be in the time of divine service. The gloss upon the canon law makes a doubt whether this is not of the substance of the consecration: but, be that as it will, it is certainly very decent (l).

Form of consecration.

The Emperor Justinian, in his care of the church, has prescribed a form of consecration of churches (or rather of the ground upon which it is to be built) in this manner: his law is, "That none shall presume to erect a church, until the bishop of the diocese hath been first acquainted therewith, and shall come and lift up his hands to heaven, and consecrate the place to God by prayer, and erect the symbol of our salvation, the venerable and truly precious rood (m). The canon law also requires, that the bishop should mark out the consecrated ground, erect the cross, celebrate mass, &c. (n).

In the Church of England, every bishop is left to his own discretion, as to the form of consecrating churches and chapels: only by the statute of the 21 Hen. 8, c. 13 (o), for limiting the number of chaplains, it was assigned as one reason why a bishop may retain six chaplains because he must occupy that number in the consecration of churches.

Authority for service.

Consecration services therefore rest, as originally all services rested, on the authority of the bishop. It is to be supposed (in the view of the editor) that either consecration services are outside the scope of the acts of uniformity, or that bishops (notwithstanding the decision in Read v. Bp. of Lincoln (p)) are, when officiating, outside its scope. Otherwise it would be difficult to find legal warrant either for these well established services or for those of dedicating sacred vessels, or bells, or lifeboats, or colours, or ships about to be launched.

Special instances of forms of consecration.

Laud, when Bishop of London, used (if the reports are accurate) a very detailed and ceremonious form when consecrating (q). The form prepared by Bishop Wren and used for him by Bishop Field at the consecration of the Church of Abbey Dore in A.D. 1634 (r) is full of interest. In 1661 a form of consecration was drawn up by convocation, but was not authorized or published (s). Forms of consecration, "Office of Restauration," and "Expiation and Illustration of a Church desecrated and prophaned" are appended to the Irish Prayer-book already mentioned as published by Grierson, Dublin, 1723 (t).

In the year 1712, a form of consecrating churches and chapels and churchyards or places of burial was sent down from the bishops to the lower house of convocation, on the 2nd day of April, and was altered by the committee of the whole house, and reported to the house on the 9th day of the same month, which was agreed to, with some alterations: which form, as it did not receive the royal assent, was not enjoined to be observed; but has been since with some few variations, generally, though not necessarily, used, and is as follows:—

PREPARATIONS IN ORDER TO THE CONSECRATING OF A CHURCH.

The church is to be pewed (u), and furnished with a reading desk, Common Prayer, and great Bible, and one or more surplices, as also with a pulpit and cushion, a font, and a communion table, and with linen and vessels for the same.

Preparations in order to the consecration of a church.

The endowment, and the evidences thereof, are to be laid before the bishop, or his chancellor, some time before the day appointed, in order to the preparing of the act or sentence of consecration against that day.

An intimation of the bishop's intention to consecrate the church, with the day and hour appointed for it, is to be fixed on the church door at least three days before.

A chair is to be set for the bishop on the north side of the communion table, within the rails; and another for his chancellor without the rails, on the same side.

All things are to be prepared for a communion. The church is to be kept shut, and empty, till the bishop comes, and till it be opened for his going in.

THE FORM OF CONSECRATING A CHURCH.

The bishop is to be received at the west door, or at some other part of the church or churchyard, which is most convenient for his entrance, by some of the principal inhabitants (v).

Form of consecrating a church.

At the place where the bishop is received, a petition is to be delivered to him by some one of the persons who receive him, praying that he will consecrate the church.

The petition is to be read by the register.

The bishop, his chaplains, the preacher, and the minister who is to read divine service, together with the rest of the clergy, if any other be present, enter the church, and repair to the vestry, or (if there be no vestry) to some convenient part of the church, where, as many as are to officiate, put on their several habits; during which time the parishioners are to repair to their seats, and the middle aisle is to be kept clear.

(u) This is the old fashion; but now chairs or moveable seats may be used.

As soon as the church is quiet, the bishop and his chaplains, with the preacher, and the minister who is to officiate, and the rest of the clergy, if any other be present, return to the west door, and go up the middle aisle to the communion table, repeating the 24th psalm alternately, as they go up, the bishop one verse, and they another.

Psalm xxiv.

The bishop and the chaplains go within the rails; the bishop to the north side of the communion table, and the chaplains to the south side: the minister officiating goes to the reading desk, and the preacher to some convenient seat near the pulpit.

The bishop, sitting in the chair, is to have the instrument or instruments of donation and endowment presented to him by the founder, or some proper substitute (x): which he lays upon the communion table, and then standing up, and turning to the congregation, says—

“Dearly beloved in the Lord; forasmuch as devout and holy men, as well under the law as under the gospel, moved either by the secret inspiration of the Blessed Spirit, or by the express command of God, or by their own reason and sense of the natural decency of things, have erected houses for the public worship of God, and separated them from all profane and common uses, in order to fill men’s minds with greater reverence for his glorious majesty, and affect their hearts with more devotion and humility in his service; which pious works have been approved and graciously accepted by our heavenly Father: Let us not doubt but he will also favourably approve our godly purpose, of setting apart this place in solemn manner, to the performance of the several offices of religious worship, and let us faithfully and devoutly beg his blessing on this our undertaking.”

Then the bishop kneeling, says the following prayer:—

“O Eternal God, mighty in power, and of majesty incomprehensible, whom the heaven of heavens cannot contain, much less the walls of temples made with hands, and who yet hast been graciously pleased to promise thy especial presence in whatever place even two or three of thy faithful servants shall assemble in thy name to offer up their praises and supplications unto thee; vouchsafe, O Lord, to be present with us, who are here gathered together, with all humility and readiness of heart, to consecrate this place to the honour of thy great name; separating it from henceforth from all unhallowed, ordinary, and common uses, and dedicating it to thy service, for reading thy holy word, for celebrating thy holy sacraments, for offering to thy glorious Majesty the sacrifices of prayer and thanksgiving, for blessing thy people in thy Name, and for the performance of all other holy ordinances: Accept, O Lord, this service at our hands, and bless it with such success, as may tend most to thy glory, and the furtherance of our happiness both temporal and spiritual, through Jesus Christ our blessed Lord and Saviour." Amen.

After this, let the bishop stand up, and turning his face toward the congregation, say :—

"Regard, O Lord, the supplications of thy servants: and grant, that whosoever shall be dedicated to thee in this house by baptism, may be sanctified with the Holy Ghost, delivered from thy wrath and eternal death, and received as a living member of Christ's Church, and may ever remain in the number of thy faithful and elect children. Amen.

"Grant, O Lord, that they who at this place shall in their own persons renew the promises and vows made by their sureties for them at their baptism, and thereupon shall be confirmed by the bishop, may receive such a measure of the Holy Spirit, that they may be enabled faithfully to fulfil the same, and grow in grace unto their lives end. Amen.

"Grant, O Lord, that whosoever shall receive in this place the blessed sacrament of the body and blood of Christ, may come to that holy ordinance with faith, charity and true repentance; and, being filled with thy grace and heavenly benediction, may to their great and endless comfort, obtain remission of their sins, and all other benefits of his passion. Amen.

"Grant, O Lord, that by thy holy word which shall be read and preached in this place, and by thy Holy Spirit grafting it inwardly in the heart, the hearers thereof may both perceive and know what things they ought to do, and may have power and strength to fulfil the same. Amen.

"Grant, O Lord, that whosoever shall be joined together in this place in the holy estate of matrimony, may faithfully perform and keep the vow and covenant betwixt them made, and may remain in perfect love together unto their lives end. Amen.

"Grant, we beseech thee, blessed Lord, that whosoever shall draw near unto thee in this place, to give thee thanks for the benefits which they have received at thy hands, to set forth thy most worthy praise, to confess their sins unto thee, and to ask such things as are requisite and necessary, as well for the body as the soul,—may do it with such stedfastness of faith, and with such seriousness, affection, and devotion of mind, that thou mayest accept their bounden duty and service, and vouchsafe to give whatever in thy infinite wisdom thou shalt see to be most expedient for them : All which we beg for Jesus Christ his sake, our blessed Lord and Saviour." Amen.

The bishop sitting in his chair.

Then the sentence of consecration is to be read by the chancellor, and signed by the bishop, and by him ordered to be registered, and then laid upon the communion table.

After this, the person appointed is to read the service for the day, except where it is otherwise directed.

Proper psalms, lxxxiv., cxxii., cxxxii.

First lesson, 1 Kings, viii. from verse 22 to verse 62, inclusive.

Second lesson, Heb. x. from verse 19 to verse 26 inclusive.

After the collect for the day, the minister who reads the service stops till the bishop hath said the following prayer :—

"O most blessed Saviour, who by thy gracious presence at the feast of dedication didst approve and honour such religious services, as this which we are now performing unto thee, be present at this time with us also by thy Holy Spirit; and, because holiness becometh thine house for ever, sanctify us we pray thee, that we may be living temples, holy and acceptable unto thee; and so dwell in our hearts by faith, and possess our souls by thy grace, that nothing which defileth may enter into us; but that, being cleansed from all carnal and corrupt affections, we may ever be devoutly given to serve thee in all good works, who art our Saviour, Lord, and God, blessed for evermore." Amen.

Then the minister proceeds in the service of the day, to the end of the general thanksgiving. After which the bishop says the following prayer [if it be not one of the fifty new churches] :—

"Blessed be thy name, O Lord, that it hath pleased thee to put it into the heart of thy (y) servant N. to erect this house to thy honour and worship. Bless, O Lord (z) him, his family, and substance, and accept the work of his hands; remember him concerning this; wipe not out this kindness that he hath shewed for the house of his God and the offices thereof; and grant that all who shall enjoy the benefit of this pious work may shew forth their thankfulness by making a right use of it, to the glory of thy blessed name, through Jesus Christ our Lord." Amen.

If the church that is to be consecrated be one of the fifty new churches which are ordered to be built by the late acts of parliament (a), the bishop says :—

"Blessed be thy name, O Lord God, that it hath pleased thee by thy good Spirit to dispose our gracious sovereign and the estates of this realm, to supply the spiritual wants of thy people, by appointing this and many other churches to be erected and endowed for thy worship and service; multiply thy blessings upon them, for their pious regard to thy honour, and to the good of souls; remember them concerning this, and wipe not out the kindness they have shewed to thy church, and to the offices thereof; and grant that our gracious king may see and long enjoy the fruits of his godly zeal, in the edification of the members of our church, and in the reduction of those, in the spirit of meekness, who dissent from it; that we may all live together in the unity of the Spirit, and in the bond of peace, through Jesus Christ our Lord." Amen.

Then the minister who officiates is to go on with the prayer of St. Chrysostom, and the Grace of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Then a psalm is to be sung, viz., xxvi. 6, 7, 8, with Gloria Patri.

COMMUNION SERVICE.

The bishop standing on the north side of the communion table, as before, reads the communion service.

After the collect for the king, he says the following prayer:—

"O most glorious Lord God, we acknowledge that we are not worthy to offer unto thee any thing belonging to us; yet we beseech thee, in thy great goodness graciously to accept the dedication of this place to thy service, and to prosper this our undertaking: receive the prayers and intercessions of us, and all others thy servants, who either now or hereafter entering into this house shall call upon thee; and give both them and us grace to prepare our hearts to serve thee with reverence and godly fear: Affect us with an awful apprehension of thy Divine Majesty, and a deep sense of our own unworthiness; that so, approaching thy sanctuary with lowliness and devotion, and coming before thee with clean thoughts and pure hearts, with bodies undefiled, and minds sanctified, we may always perform a service acceptable to thee, through Jesus Christ our Lord." Amen.

The two chaplains are to read, one the epistle, and the other the gospel.

The Epistle, 2 Cor. vi. 14 to 17 inclusive.

The Gospel, John ii. 13 to 18 inclusive.

Then the bishop reads the Nicene Creed. After which, a psalm is sung, viz. Psalm c.

THE SERMON.

The sermon being ended, and all who do not receive the holy communion returned, and the doors shut, the bishop proceeds in the communion service; and he and the clergy having made their oblations, the churchwardens collect the offerings of the rest of the congregation.

After the communion, and immediately before the final blessing, the bishop says the following prayer :—

“Blessed be thy name, O Lord God, for that it pleaseth thee to have thy habitation among the sons of men, and to dwell in the midst of the assembly of the saints, upon earth ; bless, we beseech thee, the religious performance of this day : and grant that in this place, now set apart to thy service, thy holy name may be worshipped in truth and purity to all generations, through Jesus Christ our Lord.” Amen.

“The peace of God, which passeth all understanding, keep your hearts and minds in the knowledge and love of God, and of his Son Jesus Christ our Lord : and the blessing of God Almighty, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, be amongst you, and remain with you always.” Amen.

CONSECRATION OF A CHURCHYARD TOGETHER WITH THE CHURCH.

Form of consecration of a churchyard together with a church.

When the service in the church is finished, the bishop, clergy and people proceed to the churchyard. And the bishop, standing in the place prepared for the performance of the office there, the act or sentence of consecration is read by the chancellor, and signed by the bishop, and ordered to be registered.

After which the bishop says the following prayer :—

“O God, who has taught us in thy holy word, that there is a difference between the spirit of a beast that goeth downwards to the earth, and the spirit of a man which ascendeth up to God who gave it ; and likewise by the example of thy holy servants, in all ages, has taught us to assign peculiar places, where the bodies of thy saints may rest in peace, and be preserved from all indignities, whilst their souls are safely kept in the hands of their faithful Redeemer : Accept, we beseech thee, this charitable work of ours, in separating this portion of ground to that good purpose ; and give us grace, that by the frequent instances of mortality which we behold, we may learn and seriously consider, how frail and uncertain our condition here on earth is, and so number our days, as to apply our hearts unto wisdom. That in the midst of life thinking upon death, and daily preparing ourselves for the judgment that is to follow, we may have our part in the resurrection to eternal life, with Him who died for our sins, and rose again for our justification, and now liveth and reigneth with Thee and the Holy Ghost, one God world without end. Amen (b).

“The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, and the love of God, and the fellowship of the Holy Ghost, be with us all evermore.” Amen.

(b) This prayer is referred to by Sir Robert Phillimore in his judgment in Adlam v. Colthurst, L. R.,

CONSECRATION OF A CHURCHYARD SINGLY.

The ordinary service for the day is to be read at the church, except where it is otherwise ordered.

Form of consecration of a churchyard simply.

Psalms xxxix. xc.

First lesson, Gen. xxiii.

Second lesson, John v. verse 21 to verse 30 inclusive, or 1 Thess. iv. 13, to the end.

When the service at the church is over, the bishop, clergy and parishioners repair to the ground which is to be consecrated: and the bishop, standing in the place prepared for the performance of the office, says:—

“The glorious majesty of the Lord our God be upon us; prosper thou the work of our hands upon us, O prosper thou our handywork.”

Then the instrument of donation is presented to the bishop.

Next, the act or sentence of consecration is read by the chancellor, and signed by the bishop, and ordered to be registered.

This done, the bishop reads the prayer that is before directed to be used in a churchyard which is consecrated together with the church.

Then are sung two staves of the 39th psalm, viz. v. 5, 6, 7, 8.

After which the bishop lets them depart with the blessing.

“The peace of God which passeth all understanding, keep your hearts and minds in the knowledge and love of God, and of his Son Jesus Christ our Lord; and the blessing of God Almighty, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, be amongst you, and remain with you always.” Amen (c).

The Editor has compared the forms of consecration service now in use in the dioceses of London and Lincoln, and finds very few alterations from the above forms. The same prayers come in the same order. In the intercessory prayer relating to the several offices of the church, there are a few alterations, though such alterations are almost entirely verbal. Alternative lessons, epistle and gospel are given. Different psalms are used, and no lessons are read in the diocese of Lincoln at the consecration of a churchyard. The rubrical directions at the beginning of the service are rather different. In the form in use in the diocese of Lincoln the direction as to pews is omitted, and a more elaborate procession is provided for.

Forms in present use.

By 30 & 31 Vict. c. 133, s. 1, “Where any ground adjoining to an existing churchyard has been or is added thereto, the bishop of the diocese may if he thinks fit, at the churchyard or in the church to which it belongs, by his own hand, or by the hand of any bishop of the United Church of England and Ireland lawfully appointed as his commissary, sign an instrument declaring or recording the consecration of such ground, without the presence of the chancellor or registrar of the diocese being necessary; and the signature of the bishop to such instrument shall be attested by the chancellor or by a surrogate or by any two clergymen of the diocese and shall be in the following form, endorsed on a plan of the ground so added:— I., A. B., bishop —, do hereby declare and record the ground added to the churchyard of —, as on the written plan, to be consecrated ground and part of the said churchyard; and such instrument, so signed and attested, on being deposited in the registry of the diocese, shall have the same effect as a sentence of consecration ” (d).

Other churches not to be prejudiced thereby.
Procuration.

According to the general law, in the consecration of a new church, provision is to be made, that no damage accrue, in point of rights or revenues, to any other church (e).

It used to be the practice for a reasonable procuration to be given to every bishop who consecrates a church, by the person or persons praying such consecration; not for the consecration, but for the necessary refreshment of the bishop and his servants. For whereas ordinations, institutions, and other acts of the like nature, are performed by the bishop within his own walls; this draws him sometimes to a great distance from his palace, where proper accommodations cannot be procured: and therefore, as in his visitations, so also in his consecration of churches, the law provided a reasonable procuration (f). Bishops now do not take procuration, but it had long been the practice to pay fees to their officers for their work in connection with the legal and other formalities. These are now regulated by the table of fees fixed according to 30 & 31 Vict. c. 135 (g), and published in the London Gazette of March 19, 1869, as follows:—

sentence, and the approval of the draft act. The registrar's fee includes the perusal of the deeds of conveyance, the drawing and engrossing of the petition, and the sentence and the notarial act, the necessary attendance at the consecration, and the registering the deeds and the act in the register book of the diocese. The secretary's fee includes the inspection of plans and correspondence prior to the papers being sent to the registry. The apparitor's fee includes all necessary citations and attendance on the bishop at the consecration" (h).

By the common law "a consecrated church cannot ever be used as a habitation for man. . . . It cannot be let at a rent" (i). "By the consecration of a church the status of the building and of the soil is altered. The building is, by the ecclesiastical law, separated for ever from the common uses of mankind. It is dedicated thenceforth to sacred uses, and the law precludes it from being ever capable of use for ordinary secular purposes" (k).

Legal effect of consecration.

A church once consecrated, may not be consecrated again. To which general rule of the canon law, one exception was, unless they be polluted by the shedding of blood; and in that case, the canon supposes a re-consecration; though the common method in England was, a reconciliation only, as appears by many instances in our ecclesiastical records (l). But in point of ruins or decay, the only exception to the general rule, laid down in the canon, is, unless they be burnt (that is, says the gloss, for the greater part thereof, and not otherwise). And a decretal epistle of Innocent III., where the roof was consumed, is, that since the walls were entire, and the communion table not hurt, neither the one nor the other ought to be re-consecrated. Thus, a chapel in the suburbs of Hereford, which belonged to the priory of St. John of Jerusalem, had been from the time of the dissolution of monasteries applied to secular uses and profaned, by making the same a stall for cattle, and a place for laying up their hay and other provender; yet because the walls and roof were never demolished, a reconciliation was judged sufficient. In like manner, when another chapel had been long disused, and was repaired, and made fit for divine service, the tenor of the reconciliation was, "the same chapel from all canonical impediment, and from every profanation (if any there were) contracted and incurred, as much as in us lieth, and so far as lawfully we may, by the authority aforesaid we do exempt, relax and reconcile the same" (m).

Reconciliation.

(h) By 30 & 31 Vict. c. 133, ss. 2, 3, where additional land to a churchyard is to be consecrated only, no fees are to be paid except 5s. to the registrar.

In St. Paul's Cathedral, there was a reconciliation service after a suicide, on October 13th, 1890. Vide The Reconciliation Sentence and Service in St. Paul's Cathedral, Tristram, p. 164.

(m) Gibbs. p. 189.

But on the contrary, when the church of Southmallings had not only been polluted in manner as aforesaid, but was also new-built, and then used for divine offices without new consecration, Archbishop Abbot interdicted the minister, churchwardens, and parishioners, from the entrance of the church, until the said church and churchyard thereof should be again consecrated (n).

When a churchyard has been enlarged, there is a new consecration of the additional part (o).

Re-consecration.

It was decided by Dr. Robertson, Chancellor of Rochester, that an ecclesiastical court could not entertain a suit as to the allotment of seats in a place for divine worship, unless such place be a legally consecrated building; and that where the altar of a consecrated church had been removed, a re-consecration was necessary to found the jurisdiction of the ecclesiastical court (p).

Parker v.
Leach.

But in Parker v. Leach where a parishioner instituted a suit in the chancery court of York against the incumbent, for perturbation of a pew holden as appurtenant to the manor-house, and occupied by him therewith for nearly forty years, and the incumbent admitted the destruction of the pew by his orders and direction, but pleaded to the jurisdiction of the court, on the ground that the church was not in law a church, never having been re-consecrated since its general repair in 1825, the judicial committee of the Privy Council decided that, it appearing from the evidence, that the church had been repaired and rebuilt under a faculty, upon its old foundation, the tower and eastern wall and windows never having been removed, and some of the offices of the church having been performed during the repairs, it had never ceased to be a parish church, so as to require re-consecration, but remained subject to the authority of the diocesan; and that the judgment of the court below overruling the protest to the jurisdiction was right (q).

After this decision, the statute 30 & 31 Vict. c. 133 (r), was passed, which enacted as follows:—

30 & 31 Vict.
c. 133.

Where communion table has been moved, or walls of church have been partly demolished, marriages, &c. to be valid, although the church be not re-consecrated or reconciled.

Sect. 12. "Whereas doubts are entertained whether in cases where a church or chapel has been rebuilt, repaired or enlarged, and the external walls have been partly destroyed, or the position of the communion table altered, a re-consecration of such church or chapel be not necessary in order to the due and valid administration of divine offices there: be it declared and enacted, that all marriages, rites and ceremonies heretofore or hereafter celebrated or performed in a consecrated church or chapel which may have been rebuilt, repaired, or enlarged prior to such celebration or performance, and wherein such marriages, rites, and ceremonies might have been legally solemnized or performed previously to such rebuilding, repair, or enlargement, shall be valid and effectual for all purposes, notwithstanding that upon such repair or enlargement the external walls of such church or chapel may not have remained entire, or the position of the communion table may have been altered: and notwithstanding that since the rebuilding, repair, or enlargement no re-consecration of such church or chapel may have taken place."

In Clayton v. Dean (s), a faculty was granted for removing a consecrated chapel to another site; but the learned judge who granted the faculty observed, that it was possible that different legal considerations might apply to the case of a parish church. Removal of chapel.

By 59 Geo. 3, c. 134, one of the Church Building Acts, 59 Geo. 3, sect. 40, a general provision was made for the pulling down c. 134. of old parish churches and rebuilding them on new sites, as follows:—

"When any parish shall be desirous of extending and increasing the accommodation in the parish church, and it shall be found necessary or expedient to that end to take down the existing church, and to rebuild the same on the same site, or on a more convenient site, it shall and may be lawful for the churchwardens of any such parish, with the consent of the vestry, or persons possessing the powers of vestry, and with the consent also of the ordinary, patron, incumbent and lay impropriator, if any such there be, to take down such existing church, and to rebuild the same upon the same or upon a new site." Power to pull down or remove old church.

By 8 & 9 Vict. c. 70, s. 1, "where a new church has been already built, or shall hereafter be built in any parish" the ecclesiastical commissioners may, with the consent of bishop, patron, and incumbent, substitute the new church for the old one, and the bishop may issue a commission to investigate claims to pews, "and the old or existing church, if such bishop shall think fit, may thereupon be wholly or partly pulled down under a faculty." The whole matter will be found treated of more at length in the Chapter on the Building of Churches (t). 8 & 9 Vict. c. 70. Power to substitute new church in place of old church.

In a form of consecrating churches, which we meet with in a canon of the synod holden at Celchyth under Wulfred, Archbishop of Canterbury, in the year 816, it is ordained, that when a church is built, it shall be consecrated by the proper diocesan, who shall take care that the saint, to whom it is dedicated, be pictured on the wall, or on a tablet, or on the altar. And Sir William Dugdale had an old transcript of a decree made by Robert de Winchelsea, Archbishop of Canterbury, and confirmed by Walter Reynolds, his immediate successor, whereby the parishioners through that whole province were commanded to provide, that the image of that saint to whose memory the church was dedicated, should be carefully preserved in the chancel of every parish church. Dedication of church to saint.

SECT. 3.—Chancel.

Origin of name.

Chancel, cancellus, seems properly to be so called a cancellis, from the lattice-work partition betwixt the quire and the body of the church, so framed as to separate the one from the other, but not to intercept the sight.

Rubric.

By the rubric before the Order for Morning and Evening Prayer in the Prayer Book it is ordained, that the chancels shall remain as they have done in times past. That is to say, distinguished from the body of the church in manner aforesaid; against which distinction Bucer (at the time of the Reformation) inveighed vehemently, as tending only to magnify the priesthood; but though the king and parliament yielded so far, as to allow the daily service to be read in the body of the church, if the ordinary thought fit; yet they would not suffer the chancel itself to be taken away or altered (u).

Chancel screens and chancel gates.

Where the proper consents have been obtained, no doubt seems to exist at the present time as to the legality of erecting chancel screens without gates, whether in a new or old church, but notwithstanding this rubric and the construction put upon it, Dr. Lushington, in Beal v. Liddell (x), expressed his disapproval of chancel gates, though he refused to order their removal: and in Re St. Augustine's, Haggerston, Dr. Tristram stated that it had been thenceforth the practice in the Consistory of London to decline to issue faculties for chancel gates, or for screens with gates (y).

In Bradford v. Fry (z), Lord Penzance, on appeal from the Consistory of Rochester, confirmed the decision of that court, removing chancel gates put up without a faculty. And in The Rector of St. Andrew, Romford v. All Persons, etc. (a), the Chancellor of the diocese of St. Albans, considering himself bound by this decision, refused to issue a faculty for such gates.

On the other hand, in Re St. Agnes (b), the Chancellor of Liverpool authorized them, as protecting the chancel and its ornaments: and in Re St. James, Norland (c), Re Church of St. John, Isle of Dogs (d), and The Vicar and Churchwardens of St. Peter's, Eaton Square v. Parishioners (e), Dr. Tristram allowed them on the same grounds, notwithstanding the previous practice of the diocese. In The Vicar of St. John, Timberhill v. Parishioners (f), the Chancellor of the diocese of Norwich did the same. The editor has allowed them in the diocese of Lincoln.

Other names for chancel.

The chancel was originally known by a variety of names, one of the most common being $\beta\eta\mu\alpha$, or tribunal; and this word had also various significations, denoting sometimes the ambo or reading-desk, sometimes the altar, sometimes the seats or thrones of the bishops and presbyters, sometimes the whole space where these thrones and the altars stood. The name of "sanctuary" was also applied to this part of the church; and it would seem in some of the canons to have borne the name of "chorus," whence is derived our English "quire" or "choir." The highest part of the chancel had the various names of "apsis," "exedra," "conchula bematis," all words that signify any arched or spherical building (e).

It was holden by the Exchequer Chamber, affirming the judgment of the Court of Queen's Bench, that though the freehold of a parish church may be in a lay rector, the right of the possession of the church is in the minister and churchwardens; and therefore a lay rector cannot maintain trespass against the vicar of the parish for breaking open a door leading from the churchyard into the chancel (f).

SECT. 4.—Aisle.

The word "aisle" is said to proceed from the French word aile (ala), a wing; for that the Norman churches were built in the form of a cross, with a nave and two wings.

Derivation of the word.

An aisle in a church which has time out of mind belonged to a particular house, and been maintained and repaired by the owner of that house, is part of his frank tenement; and the ordinary cannot dispose of it, or intermeddle in it. And the reason is, because the law in that case presumes that the aisle was erected by his ancestors, or those whose estate he has, and is thereupon particularly appropriated to their house. But otherwise it is, if he has only used to sit and bury in the aisle, and not repaired it; for the constant sitting and burying, without reparation, does not gain any peculiar property therein; but the aisle being repaired at the common charge of the parish, the common right of the ordinary takes place, and he may, from time to time, appoint whom he pleases to sit there (h).

Aisle a private

And in the case of Corven v. Pym, in 10 Jac. 1, it was resolved, that albeit the freehold of the church be in the parson, yet if a lord of the manor, or any other, has a house within the town or parish, and he and all those whose estate he has in the mansion-house of the manor or other house, has had a seat in an aisle of the church for him and his family only, and have repaired it at its proper charges, it shall be intended, that some of his ancestors, or of the parties whose estate he has, did build and erect that aisle for him and his family only; and therefore if the ordinary endeavour to remove him, or place any other there, he may have a prohibition (k).

Francis v. Ley.

And in Francis v. Ley, in 12 Jac. 1, in the Star Chamber, it was resolved by the court, that if an inhabitant and his ancestors only have used, time out of mind, to repair an aisle in a church, and to sit there with his or their family to hear divine service, and to bury there, this makes the aisle proper and peculiar to his house, and he cannot be displaced or interrupted by the parson, churchwarden, or ordinary himself: but the constant sitting and burying there, without using to repair it, does not gain any peculiar property or pre-eminence therein. And if the aisle has been used to be repaired at the charge of all the parish in common, the ordinary may then, from time to time, appoint whom he pleases to sit there, notwithstanding any usage to the contrary (l).

Chapman v. Jones.

In Chapman v. Jones it was ruled as follows:—That the freehold of a side aisle or chapel or lesser chancel may be vested in a private person, though such chapel or chancel forms an integral portion of, and is under the same roof with, a parish church; that the enjoyment of such a chapel or chancel, and the right to its exclusive use, is not necessarily annexed to a dwelling-house (m); and that immemorial repair of a chapel or lesser chancel which is part of a parish church, coupled with other acts of ownership, is evidence of a freehold of inheritance in it being vested in those who have executed the repairs and exercised the acts of ownership (n).

Churton v. Frewen.

In Churton v. Frewen, upon a bill filed to establish a right to a side aisle or lesser chancel as part of the parish church, against the lord of the manor, who claimed it as appendant to the manor or manor-house, it appearing that the chancel was an ancient chapel, coeval with the church, and that it was a private chapel erected by the lord of the manor:—It was holden, that immemorial use and occupation, coupled with reparation, entitled the lord of the manor by prescription to the perpetual and exclusive use of the chancel; and that this right might exist, notwithstanding that the freehold might not be in the person prescribing, and although the estate or house to which the chancel was appendant might not be situate in the parish (o).

And the reason of any person's property in an aisle, is from the prescription to repair and use it alone; because it is from thence presumed, that the aisle was erected by him whose estate he has, with the assent of the parson, patron, and ordinary, to the intent to have it only to himself (p). Reason of the law.

And therefore where any person has good title to such aisle, if the ordinary places another person therein with the proprietor, the proprietor may have his action upon the case against the ordinary; and if he be impleaded in the spiritual court for the same, a prohibition will lie; or if any private person sits therein, or keeps out him that has the right, or buries his dead there without his consent, an action upon the case lies for the proprietor (q). Remedies for owner of aisle.

The case of The Duke of Norfolk v. Arbutnot (r), in which the Duke successfully maintained his claim to the Fitzalan Chapel, a building structurally, though not ritually, in the position of a chancel to the parish church, does not supply an instance of a private aisle or side chancel, though the law as to such buildings was referred to in the course of the case. The Fitzalan Chapel was, in truth, the separate chapel of a college of priests, secularized in the time of Henry VIII., and granted by that king to the Earl of Arundel. Dunster, in Somersetshire, is a parallel case. Duke of Norfolk v. Arbutnot.

SECT. 5.—Churchyard (s).

It is clear that by the common law the rector has the freehold in the churchyard, qualified undoubtedly by the rights of the parishioners, but he may bring an action for trespass if his right be unjustly invaded (t). Rector's rights in churchyard.

The Mortmain Act (15 Ric. 2, c. 5) was aimed at an invention for defeating the law against mortmain, by which "some religious persons, parsons, vicars, and other spiritual persons, have entered in divers lands and tenements which be adjoining to their churches, and of the same, by sufferance and assent of the tenants, have made churchyards, and by bulls of the bishop of Rome have dedicated and hallowed the same, and in them do make continually parochial burying without licence of the King and of the chief lords." 15 Ric. 2, c. 5.

Churchyard fence.

Generally re-pairable by parish.

By a constitution of Archbishop Winchelsea, the parishioners shall repair the fence of the churchyard at their own charge (u).

And Lord Coke says, that the parishioners ought to repair the inclosure of the churchyard, because the bodies of the more common sort are buried there, and for the preservation of the burials of those that were or should have been, while they lived, the temple of the Holy Ghost (x).

And if the churchyard be not decently inclosed, the church, which is God's house, cannot decently be kept, and therefore this the parishioners ought to do, by custom known and approved; and the consueance thereof belongs to the ecclesiastical court (y).

Custom for adjoining owners to repair.

But nevertheless, if the owners of lands adjoining to the churchyard, have used time out of mind to repair so much of the fence thereof, as adjoins to their ground; such custom is a good custom; and the churchwardens have an action against them at the common law for the same (z).

Canon 85.

By Can. 85 of 1603, “. . . . The church-wardens or questmen shall take care, and provide that the churches shall be well and sufficiently repaired. . . . The like care they shall take that the churchyards be well and sufficiently repaired, fenced, and maintained with walls, rails or pales, as have been in each place accustomed, at their charges unto whom by law the same appertaineth (a)”

13 Edw. 1,
stat. 4.

By the statute of Circumspectè agatis, 13 Edw. 1, st. 4, “Also if prelates do punish for leaving the church-yard unclosed,” “the spiritual judge shall have power to take knowledge, notwithstanding the king's prohibition” (b).

Suits to compel repair.

Nevertheless, if the churchwardens sue a person in the Court Christian, supposing by their libel, that he and all they whose estate he has in certain land next adjoining to the churchyard, have used time out of mind to repair all the fences of the churchyard which are next adjoining to the said land, a prohibition will lie; for this ought to be tried at the common law, inasmuch as this is to charge a temporal inheritance (c).

Trees growing in churchyard.

A constitution of Stratford says: “Seeing it is prohibited by the law both ecclesiastical and secular, for laymen to have power to dispose of things ecclesiastical; in order therefore that the scandal of such usurpation may be utterly abolished, whereby certain parishioners of the parishes within our province, not knowing the limits of their own power, or rather not regarding the same, have cut down, or rooted up the trees, or mowed the grass growing in the churchyards of the churches or chapels of our said province, against the will of the rectors or vicars of such churches or chapels, or others deputed by them for the custody or cure thereof, and have sacrilegiously applied the same to their own use, or to the use of the churches, or of other persons, at their will and pleasure; from whence peril of souls, contentions, and grievous scandals do arise betwixt the ministers of such churches and their parishioners: we do declare by the authority of the present council, that persons guilty of such contempt shall incur the sentence of the greater excommunication, until they shall make sufficient amends and satisfaction" (d).

Against the will of the Rectors or Vicars.]—This is, in churches where there is a rector only, or a vicar only. But if in the same church there be both rector and vicar, it may be doubted (says Lindwood) to whether of them the trees or grass shall belong. But I suppose (says he) they shall belong to the rector; unless in the endowment of the vicarage they shall be otherwise assigned (e).

Whether the trees belong to the rector or vicar.

In Bellamy's case, in 13 Jac. 1, this point, unto which of the two the trees do belong, was considered but not determined; where the vicar sued the parson impropriate in the spiritual court, for cutting them down; and the suit being for damages, and an action of trespass lying at common law, a prohibition was granted, and afterwards upon the same grounds a consultation denied; but what became of the main point, that is, to whom the trees of right belonged, appears not; only Rolle seems to make the right turn upon this, that they did belong to him who is bound to repair; which determination agrees well with what is said in the statute here following, namely, that the parson shall not cut them down, but when the chancel wants reparation (f).

Or to the Use of the Churches.]—That is, to the use of the fabric of the church; which it is not lawful to do, without the consent of the rector or vicar to whom they belong. And it is very reasonable, that neither rector nor vicar do fell such trees but for evident necessity of the reparation of the manse of the rectory, or of the chancel. But if the nave of the church want repairing, the rector or vicar will do well (says Lindwood) not to be difficult in granting leave to cut down one or two for that use (g).

By 35 Edw. 1, st. 2, or the statute Ne rector prosternat arbores in cemiterio: "Because we do understand, that controversies do oftentimes grow between parsons of churches and their parishioners, touching trees growing in the churchyard, both of them pretending that they do belong unto themselves: . . . We have thought it good, rather to decide this controversy by writing than by statute: . . . Forasmuch as a churchyard that is dedicated is the soil of a church, and whatsoever is planted belongeth to the soil; it must needs follow: . . . That those trees which be growing in the churchyard are to be reckoned amongst the goods of the church, the which laymen have no authority to dispose, but as the Holy Scripture doth testify, the charge of them is committed only to priests to be disposed of. II. And yet seeing those trees be often planted to defend the force of the wind from hurting the church; we do prohibit the parsons of the church, that they do not presume to fell them down unadvisedly, but when the chancel of the church doth want necessary reparation: neither shall they be converted to any other use, except the body of the church doth need like repair: . . . In which the parsons of their charity shall do well to relieve the parishioners, with bestowing upon them the same trees; which we will not command to be done, but we will commend it when it is done."

Rather to decide this Controversy by Writing than by Statute.]—And therefore Lord Coke calls this law a treatise only, and adds that it is but a declaration of the common law (h).

In Hilliard v. Jefferson, in 9 Will. 3, a parson was libelled against the defendant in the spiritual court of York, for having cut elms in the churchyard; and a prohibition was granted upon suggestion that they grew on his freehold (i).

On this subject of waste and felling timber, the reader is referred to the previous Chapter on Waste and Dilapidations (k).

Although the church and churchyard be the parson's and be consecrated; yet a man may prescribe to have a way through the church or churchyard (l).

No one can make a private door into the churchyard, without the consent of the minister whose freehold the churchyard is, and a faculty also for the same.

In Pew v. The Churchwardens of St. Mary Rotherhithe, in 8 Geo. 2, Pew was libelled against in the spiritual court, for nuisance and encroachment on the churchyard: to which he pleaded that he was the owner of four tenements, which formerly stood on the ground in question, and that his present building was upon the old foundation, and did not project further. And this not being a matter properly triable there, a prohibition was granted. For though interrupting the use of a churchyard, as a churchyard, is properly cognizable in the ecclesiastical court; yet the bounds of it, which is matter of freehold, ought not to be determined there (m).

The case of Adlam v. Colthurst should be mentioned here; it was on this wise—In a suit promoted by one parishioner against another for having, without lawful authority, caused human bones and portions of the soil to be removed from a churchyard to a field belonging to the defendant, the Court of Arches decreed that the defendant had offended against the laws ecclesiastical, and issued a monition to him to replace in the burial ground, before a certain day, the bones and earth so removed. The defendant failed to comply with the order, alleging that he was unable to do so by reason that the field in which the bones and earth had been placed was no longer in his occupation or possession:—It was holden, that his conduct amounted to contempt, and that unless he obeyed the monition within six days and certified his obedience, he should be pronounced in contempt, and his contempt signified (n).

Where a portion of a churchyard is taken under the powers of an act of parliament incorporating the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (8 & 9 Vict. c. 18), the rector is entitled to the interest of the purchase-money, even though the burial ground had been previously closed so that he was in receipt of no fees from burials (o). But where a churchyard is taken under similar powers, and the amount to be paid by the takers to the then incumbent is to be settled by arbitration, it has been holden that the arbitrator should not award to the incumbent an amount calculated upon the value that might be put upon the lands divested of their ecclesiastical position, but only so much as will compensate him for his actual loss (p).

In Ex parte The Vicar of St. Botolph Aldgate (q), funds representing the purchase money of part of a churchyard taken for street improvements, were applied by the court in the purchase, alteration, and repair of a house for a vicarage.

The lawfulness of building upon churchyards has been frequently a matter of judicial consideration. In the case of The Rector of St. George's, Hanover Square v. Steuart (r), a prohibition was granted to restrain the Ecclesiastical Court from granting to Mr. Steuart a faculty to erect a charity school in the churchyard, without the consent and against the will of the rector and parishioners.

But with the consent of the incumbent and the majority at any rate of the parishioners, faculties have been granted to build on churchyards—schools (s), a vestry room (t), and mortuaries, or places for the reception of dead bodies, until interment (u).

47 & 48 Vict.
c. 72.

By the Disused Burial Grounds Act, 1884 (47 & 48 Vict. c. 72), s. 3, it is not to "be lawful to erect any buildings upon any disused burial-ground, except for the purpose of enlarging a church, chapel, meeting-house, or other place of worship."

By section 4, this provision is not to "apply to any burial ground which has been sold or disposed of under the authority of any Act of Parliament."

The words "disused burial ground" are defined by sect. 2 to mean "a burial ground in respect of which an Order in Council has been made for the discontinuance of burials therein, in pursuance of the provisions of" 15 & 16 Vict. c. 85, and 16 & 17 Vict. c. 134 (v).

50 & 51 Vict.
c. 32.

But this definition has been enlarged by the Open Spaces Act, 1887 (50 & 51 Vict. c. 32); s. 4 of which makes the term "disused burial ground" in the act last recited, as well as in the act itself, mean "any burial ground which is no longer used for interments, whether or not such ground shall have been partially or wholly closed for burials under the provisions of any statute or Order in Council."

The same section prohibits as well temporary or moveable, as other buildings. Moreover, the same section gives to the term "burial ground" the same meaning as in the Metropolitan Open Spaces Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict. c. 34), s. 1, as amended by the act 50 & 51 Vict. c. 32: that is to say, the term in question is to mean "any ground, whether consecrated or not, which has been at any time set apart for the purposes of interment;" the succeeding words, "and in which interments have taken place since the year 1800," being repealed by the schedule to 50 & 51 Vict. c. 32.

44 & 45 Vict.
c. 34.

In Re The Ecclesiastical Commissioners and The New City of London Brewery Co., Limited (x), the prohibitions contained in these acts were said not to apply to building on the site of churches pulled down under 23 & 24 Vict. c. 142 (y).

Use of churchyard as open spaces or gardens.

Disused or closed churchyards had been occasionally treated in such a fashion as to make them available to some extent for walks, and as open spaces in the metropolis and other cities. But the first reported case in which this was done under ecclesiastical authority is the case, Re The Rector and Churchwardens of St. George's in the East (z), in which a faculty for laying out the churchyard as a garden for use and enjoyment by the public on certain terms, was granted by Dr. Tristram, Chancellor of the diocese of London.

A few years after this last-mentioned decision was passed the Metropolitan Open Spaces Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict. c. 34), already referred to. This Act enacts as follows:—

Sect. 4. “The owner of any churchyard, cemetery, or burial ground situate within the (a) metropolis, and closed for burials either under an order of Her Majesty the Queen in Council, or otherwise, may convey the soil of such churchyard, cemetery, or burial ground, or grant any term of years or other limited interest therein to or enter into any agreement with the Metropolitan Board or the vestry or district board of the parish or district in which such churchyard, cemetery, or burial ground, or any part thereof, is situate for the purpose of giving the public access to the said churchyard, cemetery, or burial ground, and preserving the same as an open space accessible to the public, and under the control of such board or vestry, and for the purpose of improving and laying out the same.”

Power to transfer dis-used burial grounds to local authority.

Sect. 5. “The Metropolitan Board (b) and the vestry or district board of the parish or district within which any open space, churchyard, cemetery, or burial ground, or any part thereof, is situate may, by agreement, and for valuable or nominal consideration by way of payment in gross or of rent, or otherwise, or without any consideration, take and hold the soil and freehold of, or any term of years or other limited estate or interest in, or any right or easement in or over any open space, churchyard, cemetery, or burial ground, and may, with reference to any open space, churchyard, cemetery, or burial ground, undertake the entire or partial care, management, and control thereof, whether any interest in the soil is transferred to the board or vestry or not, and may for the purposes aforesaid enter into any agreement with the persons authorised by this Act to agree with reference to any open space, churchyard, cemetery, or burial ground or with any other persons interested therein.”

Powers and duties of local authority.

“Any estate or interest in or control over any open space, churchyard, cemetery, or burial ground acquired by the Metropolitan Board (b), or any vestry or district board under the provisions of this Act, shall be held and administered by such board or vestry in trust to allow, and with a view to, the enjoyment by the public of such open space, churchyard, cemetery, or burial ground in an open condition, free from buildings and under proper control and regulation, and for no other purpose, . . . By the Open Spaces Act, 1887 (50 & 51 Vict. c. 32), already referred to, sect. 2, subsect. (2), "The playing of any games or sports shall not be allowed in any churchyard, cemetery, or burial ground in or over which any estate, interest, or control is acquired under section five of the Metropolitan Open Spaces Act, 1881.

"Provided that—

- (a) In the case of consecrated ground, the bishop, by any license or faculty granted under the Metropolitan Open Spaces Act or this Act, and
- (b) In the case of any churchyard, cemetery, or burial ground which is not consecrated, the body from which any such estate, interest, or control as aforesaid is acquired may expressly sanction any such use of the ground, and may specify any conditions as to the extent or manner of such use."

Sect. 3. "In the case of any disused churchyard, cemetery, or burial ground, at least three months before any tombstone or monument is moved, the following steps shall be taken :

Provision as to removal of tombstones and monuments.

- (a) A statement shall be prepared sufficiently describing by the name and date appearing thereon the tombstones and monuments standing or being in the ground, and such other particulars as may be necessary ;
- (b) Such statements shall be deposited with the clerk of the board or vestry, and shall be open to inspection by all persons ;
- (c) An advertisement of the intention to remove or change the position of such tombstones and monuments shall be inserted three times at least in some newspaper circulating in the neighbourhood of the burial ground, and such advertisement shall give notice of the deposit of such statement as is hereinbefore described, and of the hours within which the same may be inspected ;
- (d) A notice in terms similar to the advertisement shall be placed on the door of the church (if any) to which such churchyard, cemetery, or burial ground is attached, and shall be delivered or sent by post to any person known or believed by the board or vestry to be a near relative of any person whose death is recorded on any such tombstone or monument.

"In the case of any consecrated ground no application for a faculty shall be made until the expiration of one month at least after the appearance of the last of such advertisements as afore-said.

"Provided that on any application for a faculty, nothing shall prevent the bishop from directing or sanctioning the removal of any tombstone or monument if he is of opinion that reasonable steps have been taken to bring the intention to effect such removal to the notice of some person having a family interest in such removal."

The care of closed churchyards is vested in the churchwardens by 18 & 19 Vict. c. 128, sect. 18 (d). By the same section the costs are to be repaid by the overseers on the certificate of the churchwardens out of the poor rate. Now by the Local Government Act, 1894 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 73), sect. 6, if the churchwardens now, since the passing of that act, give such a certificate, their powers, duties, and liabilities thenceforth vest in the parish council.

Alteration of
a faculty.

In Walter v. Mountague (e), it is said of such paths: "Individuals may by prescription have a right of way; and parishioners have the same right for attendance on divine worship, vestries, and other fit occasions. . . . I apprehend that neither the rector nor the churchwardens can make a new path without a faculty from this Court. In strictness that is by law required. . . . With regard to the jurisdiction, the churchyard being consecrated ground, this Court has cognizance of the matter, and it is my duty to protect it against any unauthorized or illegal invasion whatsoever; and supposing the alterations were most convenient, still the Court would not sanction them, unless the consent of the rector had been previously given, or at least asked. If this is an ancient footpath, it is competent to any individual to proceed at law; and if the question were raised here this Court might be stopped by a prohibition." In that case the Court condemned the churchwardens in 40*l.* costs, nomine expensarum, monishing them to be more careful in future, and not considering it a good defence that the new footpath they had made through the churchyard was bonâ fide for the good of the parishioners.

c. 134.

By 59 Geo. 3, c. 134, s. 39, "It shall be lawful for the said commissioners" [now the Ecclesiastical Commissioners (f)], "if they should think fit, to alter, repair, pull down and rebuild, or order or direct to be altered, repaired, pulled down and rebuilt, the walls or fences of any existing churchyard or burial ground of any parish or chapelry, and to fence off, with walls or otherwise, any additional or new burial ground, to be set out or provided by virtue of this act; and also to stop up and discontinue, or alter or vary, or order to be stopped up and discontinued, or altered or varied, any entrance or gate leading into any churchyard or burial ground, and the paths, footways and passages into, through or over the same, as to them may appear useless and unnecessary, or as they shall think fit to alter or vary"; provided that the same be done "with the consent of any two justices of the peace of the county, city, town or place where any such entrance, gate, path or passage shall be stopped up or altered; and on notice being given in the manner and form prescribed by an act," 55 Geo. 3, c. 68.

55 Geo. 3,
c. 68.

Schedule A of that act (55 Geo. 3, c. 68) gives a form of notice of an order for stopping up an useless road, and the form states that such order will be enrolled at sessions, unless, upon an appeal against the same to be then made, it be otherwise determined.

It has been holden that 59 Geo. 3, c. 134, though incorporating 55 Geo. 3, c. 68, did not give an appeal against the order of the commissioners; for an appeal cannot be given by implication, otherwise it would not have been taken away by the repeal of 55 Geo. 3, c. 68, by 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 50, s. 11 (g).

Notice must be given before order made.

Questions have arisen as to the power of the ecclesiastical court to authorize the making of new public or private paths across churchyards, or the throwing of a portion of a churchyard into a street or roadway so as to widen it. Expressions are to be found in some older cases raising doubts as to whether this could lawfully be done (i); and very recently the Chancellor of the diocese of Rochester (k) has held that the ecclesiastical court has no jurisdiction to issue a citation in such a case (l). On the other hand it has been holden by the Chancellor of the diocese of London (m) that where the churchyard has been closed for burials, and the ecclesiastical jurisdiction is preserved and public convenience requires it, a faculty for such a purpose may be granted (n). The editor, as Chancellor of the diocese of Lincoln, has felt himself at liberty to follow this last-mentioned precedent, and to grant a faculty for the purpose of widening a street, taking care that the ecclesiastical jurisdiction is asserted and the boundaries of the churchyard marked on the pavement. Similar faculties have also been granted in the dioceses of Worcester and Chichester (o).

Throwing portions of churchyards into streets.

SECT. 6.—Repairs, Alterations and Faculties.

It is said that anciently, the bishops had the whole tithes of the diocese; a fourth part of which, in every parish, was to be applied to the repairs of the church; but upon a release of this interest to the rectors, they were consequently acquitted of the repairs of the churches (p).

Repair of church anciently by bishop.

And by the canon law, the repair of the church belongs to him who receives this fourth part, that is, to the rector, and not to the parishioners (q).

Next by rector.

But custom (that is, the common law) transferred the burden of reparation, at least of the nave of the church, upon the parishioners, and likewise sometimes of the chancel, as particularly in the city of London in many churches there, and this custom the parishioners might be compelled to observe, where such custom is (r). Where there is no such custom, the parson is to repair the chancel (s).

Finally by inhabitants.

Repair of chancel by rector.

For, generally, the parson is bound to repair the chancel. Not because the freehold is in him, for so is the freehold of the church; but by the custom of England, which has allotted the repairs of the chancel to the parson, and the repairs of the church to the parishioners; yet so, that if the custom has been for the parish, or the estate of a particular person, to repair the chancel, that custom shall be good; which is plainly intimated by Lindwood as the law of the church, and is also confirmed by the common law in the books of reports. But as to the obligation resting upon the parson, or upon the vicar, concerning that, the books of common law say nothing; and so it is wholly left upon that foot on which the law of the church has placed it (p).

Sometimes by vicar.

As to vicars, it is ordained by a constitution of Archbishop Winchelsea, that the chancel shall be repaired by the rectors and vicars, or others to whom such repair belongs (q).

Whereupon Lindwood observes, that where there is both rector and vicar in the same church, they shall contribute in proportion to their benefice (r).

Which is to be understood, where there is not a certain direction, order, or custom, unto which of them such reparation should appertain (s).

By lay rectors.

And as rectors or spiritual persons, so also lay rectors impropriators, are bound of common right to repair the chancels. This doctrine under the limitations expressed in the foregoing article is clear and uncontested; there has been some doubt as to how they shall be compelled to do it; whether by spiritual censures only, in like manner as the parishioners are compelled to contribute to the repairs of the church, since impropriations are now become lay fees; or whether by sequestrations (as it should seem, spiritual impropriators of all kinds, may be compelled) (t). The better opinion seems to be, that the spiritual court may grant sequestration upon an impropriate parsonage for not repairing the chancel (u).

Dr. Gibson observes, that impropriations, before they became lay fees, were undoubtedly liable to sequestration: that the king was to enjoy them in the same manner as the religious had done, and nothing was conveyed to the king at the dissolution of monasteries but what the religious had enjoyed, that is, the profits over and above the finding of divine service, and the repairing of the chancel, and other ecclesiastical burdens: and the general saving (he says) in the 31 Hen. 8, c. 13, may be well extended to a saving of the right of the ordinary in this particular, which right he undoubtedly had by the law and practice of the church, which said right is not abrogated by any statute whatsoever (x).

And he observes further these things: 1. That although (as was expressly alleged in the two cases above referred to) this power has been frequently exercised by the spiritual courts; yet no instances appear, before these, of any opposition made. 2. That in both the said instances, judgment was given, not upon the matter or point in hand, but upon errors found in the pleadings. 3. That one argument against the allowing the ordinary such jurisdiction, was ab inconvenienti, that such allowance would be a step towards giving ordinaries a power to augment vicarages: as they might have done, and frequently did, before the dissolution (y).

Where there are more impropriators than one (as is very frequently the case) and the prosecution is to be carried on by the churchwardens to compel them to repair, it was, in the times when church rates were levied, thought advisable for the churchwardens first to call a vestry, and there get an order made for them to sue the impropriators at the parish expense. In such a suit, which may still be brought though no longer at the cost of the parish, the court will not settle the proportion amongst the impropriators, but admonish all who are made parties to the suit to repair the chancel, under pain of excommunication. Nor will it be necessary to make every impropriator a party, but only to prove that the parties prosecuted have received tithes or other profits belonging to the rectory sufficient to repair it; and they must settle the proportion amongst themselves. For it is not a suit against them for a sum of money, but for a neglect of the duty which is incumbent on all of them, though it may be advisable to make as many of them parties as can be come at with certainty.

The sequestrator of a rectory is bound to keep the chancel in repair (z).

By sect. 54 of 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106, a part of the profits of a living sequestered by the bishop for non-residence is to be applied to the repairs of the chancel (a).

A suit was brought by the churchwardens of Clare, in the diocese of Norwich, against the Bishop of Ely, as impropriator of a portion of the great tithes, to compel him to repair the chancel. The bishop pleaded, that from time immemorial the parishioners had by custom repaired the chancel. A prohibition was granted to try the issue by jury, and their verdict was in favour of the bishop. Sir John Nicholl held the finding of the jury decisive of the case, and that custom controlled in this instance the general law,—that the parson repairs the chancel (b).

Repairing of the chancel was a discharge from contributing to the repairs of the church. This is supposed to be the known law of the church in the gloss of John de Athon, upon a constitution of Othobon (hereafter mentioned) for the reparation of chancels; and is also evident from the ground of the respective obligations upon parson and parishioners to repair, the first the chancel, the second the church; which was evidently a division of the burden, and, by consequence, a mutual disengaging of each from that part which the other took. And therefore, as it was declared in Serjeant Davies' case (c), that there could be no doubt but the impropiator was rateable to the church, for lands which were not parcel of the parsonage, notwithstanding his obligation, as parson, to repair the chancel; so, when this plea of the farmer of an impropiation (d) to be exempt from the parish rate because he repaired the chancel, was refused in the spiritual court, it must probably have been a plea offered to exempt other possessions also from church rates (e).

Repair of chapel of ease no discharge from repairs.

As a general rule, the repairing of a chapel of ease was no discharge from the repair of the church of the parish (f).

Unless by prescription.

But there were cases where the inhabitants of a chapelry might prescribe to be exempt from repairing the mother church, as where it buries and christens within itself, and has never contributed to the mother church; for in that case it shall be intended coeval and not a latter erection in ease of those in the chapelry (g).

Repairs in cases of union.

If two churches be united, the repairs of the several churches were to be made as they were before the union (h).

Duty of archdeacon.

"The archdeacon shall cause chancels to be repaired by those who are bound thereunto" (i).

Old constitutions.

By a constitution of Archbishop Reynolds: "We enjoin the archdeacons and their officials, that in the visitation of churches, they have a diligent regard to the fabrick of the church, and especially of the chancel, to see if they want repair: and if they find any defects of that kind, they shall limit a certain time under a penalty, within which they shall be repaired. Also they shall inquire by themselves or their officials in the parishes where they visit, if there be aught in things or persons which wanteth to be corrected; and if they shall find any such, they shall correct the same either then or in the next chapter" (k).

By a constitution of Archbishop Stratford: "Forasmuch as archdeacons and other ordinaries in their visitations, finding defects as well in the churches as in the ornaments thereof, and the fences of the churchyard, and in the houses of the incumbent, do command them to be repaired under pecuniary penalties; and from those who do not obey do extort the same penalties by censures, wherewith the said defects ought to be repaired, and thereby enrich their own purses to the damage of the poor people; therefore that there may be no occasion of complaint against the archdeacons and other ordinaries and their ministers by reason of such penal exactions, and that it becometh not ecclesiastical persons to gape after or enrich themselves with dishonest and penal acquisitions; we ordain that such penalties, so often as they shall be exacted, shall be converted to the use of such repairs, under pain of suspension ab officio which they shall ipso facto incur, until they shall effectually assign what was so received to the reparation of the said defects" (l).

By the statute of Circumspectè agatis, 13 Edw. 1, st. 4 (m), "Also if prelates do punish . . . for that the church is uncovered, or not conveniently decked," . . . "the spiritual judge shall have power to take knowledge, notwithstanding the king's prohibition" (n).

No prohibition in case of repairs of church.

By Can. 85 of 1603, "The church-wardens or quest-men shall take care and provide that the churches be well and sufficiently repaired, and so from time to time kept and maintained, that the windows be well glazed, and that the floors be kept paved plain and even . . ." (o).

Canon 85. Churchwardens' duty.

Where the duty of repairing church or chancel fell upon the parishioners, the funds were raised by a church rate. As to the manner of making such a rate, and the persons liable to pay it, there was much law, which has now, since the abolition of compulsory church rates by the act 31 & 32 Vict. c. 109 (p), become obsolete. The duty of parishioners to keep their church and its fittings in good repair is now, almost entirely, a moral one. The editor has used a qualified phrase, because, as will be seen, trustees may contribute out of trust funds to a church rate regularly levied, though it be not compulsory, and because there are, in many parishes, charitable funds which must be so applied by the parishioners.

Effect of abolition of compulsory church rates.

No alteration, either by way of addition or diminution in the fabric or utensils or ornaments of the church, ought, according to strict law, to be made without the legal sanction of the ordinary. That legal sanction is expressed by the issue of an instrument called a faculty, and in no other way (q).

Law as to faculties with reference to alterations.

The court, however, to use Lord Stowell's expression, is not hungry after jurisdiction in really small matters of no general moment or significance. It also often happens that a faculty issues to confirm what has been illegally but usefully done (r). It has been ruled that if the question as to the alteration comes to be litigated, the bishop's consent, unless expressed by the issue of a faculty from his court, does not bind the court before which the litigation takes place (s).

An ornament illegally put up cannot be legally taken down without the monition of the ordinary. The peace and good order of the church require this rule, which is firmly established in practice (t).

Questions of faculty belong, as a general rule, to the civil procedure of the court. Questions arising out of disobedience to a monition may, and generally do, assume a criminal shape; and a clerk in holy orders may be proceeded against criminally for making alterations without a faculty; but such a course is inexpedient.

It may be well to observe that the term "ordinary" applies in legal intendment to the bishop and the chancellor of his court.

A faculty may be granted to sell ornaments or utensils found to be unnecessary, as in the case of old bells when a new peal is set up, and the like.

It is the practice of the court to take a view of the church in cases of difficulty arising out of suggested alterations (u). This course has often been pursued.

In parish churches the opinion of the parishioners for or against a proposed alteration has great weight with the ordinary when he has to determine whether to grant a faculty; but it is not conclusive (x). Where the matter relates solely to the interior of the church, and its use for divine worship, the ordinary will not be bound by the vote of a majority in vestry, made up by the votes of Nonconformists (y).

Cathedrals.

The above provisions of the law as to faculties do not apply to alterations made in cathedrals by the authority of the dean and chapter (z).

Principal decisions.

It will be found that, in the following decisions, the principles of law just referred to are put in execution (a).

Hopton, &c. v. Minister, &c. of Kemerton.

In the case of Hopton and Quarrell v. The Minister and Churchwardens of Kemerton (b) (decided at a time when church rates were compulsory), the judge said:—"It is the bounden duty of the ordinary never to grant a faculty for expensive alterations in any church, which are professed not to be paid by a church rate, unless the judge has before him the most ample security that the funds will be otherwise provided for than by the parish" (e).

In Sieveking and Evans v. Kingsford, articles having been filed against a clergyman for making certain alterations in his church without having first obtained a legal sanction for them, he gave an affirmative issue thereto. The court then requested the archdeacon of the district in which the church was situated to inspect such alterations, and to report to it as to their nature and propriety, which he did. The court then ordered a confirmatory faculty to issue in regard to those alterations which met with the archdeacon's approval, and admonished the clergyman to restore the church in every other respect to the state it was in before he commenced the alterations (d).

*Sieveking and
Kingsford.*

In Dewdney v. Good and Ford, one of the churchwardens of the parish of G., accompanied by another parishioner, acting upon a resolution of the vestry of the parish, but against the expressed prohibition of the rector, and without any lawful authority from the bishop of the diocese, broke open with a crowbar the principal door of the parish church, and with the assistance of some workmen, proceeded to alter the position of the pulpit, and to pull down and re-arrange certain of the seats within the church. It was holden, that all who took part in these proceedings had been guilty of a grave ecclesiastical offence. They were admonished to restore that which had been altered, and condemned to pay the costs of the suit, and the churchwarden was ordered to deliver up to the rector a new key he had fitted to the door of the church (e).

In Ritchings v. Cordingley, a ledge or super-altar was placed on the holy table in a parish church by the order of the incumbent, without the consent of the ordinary; after a lapse of many months a vestry meeting was holden, at which a resolution was passed that the churchwardens should take steps to remove the super-altar; the morning after the vestry meeting the defendant, one of the churchwardens, went to the church with a workman, and found the church door locked; the workman, acting by the orders of the defendant, picked the lock, entered the church in

Cordingley.*

(c) This was also said to be the uniform practice of the Court of Arches; and the case of Roop and Clark v. Vicar, &c. of Chesterfield was referred to, where the faculty was not allowed to pass till a bond in the sum of 3,200*l.* had been given by the applicants, with sureties, for the performance of the intended alterations and the payment of all the expenses attending the same.

It is the practice now not to authorize alterations which involve pulling down or defacing the existing structure unless the court either sees that funds sufficient are in hand, or that there is a reasonable certainty of their being forthcoming.

Davids v. De company with the defendant, and pulled down the super-altar:—It was holden that the conduct of the defendant was illegal (f).

The Bishop of St. Davids v. De Rutzen is a very important case with respect both to the law as to repairs and as to the unlawfulness of removing, without a faculty, portions of the building, or ornaments, of the church.

The defendant, in that case, owned in right of his wife the greater part of three adjoining parishes, the joint population of which was very small. In 1843, a sum of money was obtained from the Public Works Loan Commissioners, on the security of a mortgage of the rates of one of the three parishes—B.—for the express purpose of building a new church in that parish; but such sum of money was appropriated towards the expenses of building a new church in another of the three parishes, and no portion of it had been repaid by the parish B. In 1844, at the instance of the defendant, the three parishes were, by an order of her Majesty in council, united for all ecclesiastical purposes. In 1843, divine service was performed in the parish church of B. for the last time, it being then in a state of great dilapidation. In the following year the roof of the church, the pews, font and other fittings were removed by the servants and by the directions of the defendant, but without any legal authority. The new church erected in the adjoining parish to B. was large enough to hold the church-going population of the three parishes, but was inconveniently placed for a large portion of them. No visitations of the archdeacon are holden in this district; and at those of the bishop, in 1851, 1854 and 1857, his attention was not particularly called to the state of the parish church of B.:—It was decided that the parishioners had a right to demand that divine offices should be celebrated in their own parish church, unless such right has been limited by lawful authority; that, notwithstanding the delay in instituting proceedings, the court was bound to order the defendant to restore the ancient parish church of B., to the state it was in when he had it dismantled, and to condemn him in the costs of the suit (g).

injunction.

In former times the Court of Chancery would grant, and now the High Court of Justice, exercising equitable jurisdiction, will grant an injunction to restrain an alteration in the fabric of the church or the walls of the churchyard, unless and until a faculty is obtained. In Marriott v. Tarpley (h) the Vice-Chancellor granted such an injunction, observing, "In my opinion this court ought in such a case to be ancillary to the ecclesiastical court, and to grant an injunction as in other cases where any act in the nature of waste is either threatened or committed." Cardinall v. Molyneux (i) was a case of a like nature.

A further provision against the making of alterations without a faculty has, since the previous edition of this book appeared, been supplied by the Legislature by a provision before cited, in the Public Worship Act (37 & 38 Vict. c. 85), s. 8 (k).

The law requiring faculties for alterations in churches applies, with certain limitations, to the setting up of tablets and monuments in churches or churchyards, the removal of human remains, and the making of vaults and brick graves (l). It applies also to the removal of houses and buildings belonging to the glebe of a parochial incumbent (m). Faculties are directed also by 8 & 9 Vict. c. 70, s. 1, in cases where churches are pulled down under that act (n).

There is now no stamp duty on faculties.

By the order in council of March, 1869, made under 30 & 31 Vict. c. 135 (a), the Court fees on faculties are fixed as follows:—

| | Vicar-General, Chancellor, Archdeacon, or Official. | Registrar or other Officer by usage perform- ing the duty. | Apparitor. |

4. "The chancellor's fee includes the perusal of the petition, the order for the notice or citation, as the case may be, the perusal of the certificate and other papers, and making the decree. The registrar's fee includes the perusal of the minutes of vestry and the petition, the drawing of the notice on citation and attending the chancellor for his order, the preparation of the certificate and attendance on the chancellor for his decree, and the drawing and signing the faculty. The apparitor's fee includes the service of the notice or citation, but is exclusive of one shilling a mile for travelling expenses if the citation is to be personally served in the country."

Under the Public Worship Regulation Act (37 & 38 Vict. c. 85), s. 14, if the judge direct that a faculty shall be applied for, such fees only shall be paid for such faculty as may be directed by the rules and orders (o).

SECT. 7.—Church Seat (p).

Origin of the distinct property in seats.

Before the age of the Reformation, no seats were allowed, nor any distinct apartment in the church assigned to distinct inhabitants, except for some very great persons. The seats that were, were moveable, and the property of the incumbent, and so in all respects at his disposal. Many wills of incumbents are to be seen, whereby they did of old bequeath the seats in the church to their successors or others as they think fit. Athon and Lindwood are, however, silent on this subject. The common law books mention but two or three cases before this time, and those relating to the chancels, and seats of persons of great quality (q).

No payment for pews.

It is clearly the law on this subject, that, where no statute has intervened, a parishioner has a right to a seat without paying for it (r).

Church Building Acts.

The Church Building Acts, however, have authorized in certain circumstances payments for pews in churches built under their provisions, having in this respect only followed the usual course of English legislation, embracing in one general act those provisions which had appeared in local acts for building individual churches since the reign of William III. (s).

Of common right to be repaired by the parishioners.

And generally, the seats in churches are to be built and repaired as the church is to be built and repaired, at the general charge of the parishioners, unless any particular person be chargeable to do the same by prescription (t).

Use of the seats in the parishioners.

And although the freehold of the body of the church be in the incumbent thereof, and the seats therein be fixed to the freehold; yet because that the church is dedicated to the service of God, and is for the use of the inhabitants, and the seats are erected for their more convenient attending upon divine service, the use of them is common to all the people that pay to the repair thereof. And for this reason, if any seat, though affixed to the church, be taken away by a stranger, the churchwardens, and not the parson, may have their action against the wrongdoer (u).

(p) The most comprehensive work on this subject is the History and Law of Church Seats or Pews, by Mr. Alfred Heales, Proctor, London, 1872; see also two very learned dissertations in the Law Magazine, vols. i. and ii.; and see "Remarks on the History of Seat Reservation in Churches," by W. T. Hardy, F.S.A., Archæologia, vol. 53, pt. 1, pp. 95—106.

Further extract from this opinion: "As all churches ought by law to be open during celebration of divine service, it is clear that no person whatever (who is not excommunicated) ought to be excluded whilst he behaves decently."

(s) Vide infra, p. 1437.

(t) Degge, pt. 1, c. 12.

(u) Wats. c. 39, p. 389.

There can be no property in pews; they are erected for the use of the parishioners. The ordinary may grant a pew to a particular person while he resides in the parish, or there may be a prescription, by which a faculty is presumed; but as to personal property in a pew, the law knows of no such thing (x). Every man who settles as a householder, has a right to call on the parish for a convenient seat (y). All the pews in a parish church are, by general law and of common right, for the use in common of all the parishioners, who are to be so provided with seats as may most conveniently and orderly accommodate all (z). It was holden that a person who had permission from the churchwardens to sit in a pew temporarily, and in order, by keeping possession for a future tenant, to carry into effect the conditions of sale of a house with which the pew had for above a century been holden under an unexpired faculty, had no possession on which he could bring a suit for perturbation against a mere intruder, such permission being illegal, as confirming the sale of the pew (a).

Non-parishioners, whether extra-parochial or residing in another parish, have no such rights; and directly an occupier of a pew ceases to be a parishioner, his right to the pew, however founded and valid during his continuance in the parish, at once ceases and determines (b).

Non-parishioners have no such rights.

But the authority of appointing what persons shall sit in each seat is in the ordinary; who is to take care to order all things appertaining to divine service, so that the service of God may be best celebrated, that there be no contention in the church, and that all things be done decently and in order; for he, having the cure of souls, is presumed by the law to be a person that will have a prudent regard to the qualities of men in this case, and to give precedence to such as ought to have it (c).

Ordinary to dispose of the same.

In Re the Pews of the Cathedral of St. Colomb, Londonderry (d), it was said by Dr. Todd, Vicar-General of the diocese of Londonderry,—that in a parish church which is also a cathedral, seats are to be allotted to the parishioners by the churchwardens, subject to the control of the ordinary, as in any other parish church. The same learned judge thought that in a cathedral, which is not a parish church, or so far as it is not a parish church, seats could only be allotted by the bishop.

In cathedrals.

With respect to this latter position, it must be observed that this is the decision of an Irish court respecting an Irish cathedral. The statutes of each cathedral must be consulted, as well as usage, as to the authority of the bishop, or dean, or dean and chapter.

Corven v. Pym.

In Corven v. Pym, it was resolved that if any man has a house in a town or parish, and he and those whose estate he has in the house, have had time out of mind a certain pew or seat in the church, maintained by him and them, the ordinary cannot remove him (for prescription makes certainty, the mother of quietness), and if he do, a prohibition lies against him. But where there is no prescription, there the ordinary, that has the cure and charge of souls, may for the avoiding of contention in the church or chapel, and the more quiet and better service of God, and placing of men according to their qualities and degrees, take order for the placing of the parishioners in the church or chapel public, which is dedicate and consecrate to the service of God (e).

Seats in the nave.

For the disposal of the seats in the nave of the church appertains of common right to the bishop of the diocese; so that he may place and displace whomsoever he pleases (f).

Parishioners are not at liberty to choose what seats they like; the distribution of seats among them rests in the discretion of the ordinary, which he generally exercises by the churchwardens, who are his officers as well as those of the parish (g). To exclude the ordinary from his jurisdiction, it is necessary not merely that a possession should be shown for many years, but that the pew should have been built and repaired time out of mind (h).

Churchwardens' power to dispose of the same.

But by custom the churchwardens may have the ordering of the seats, as in London; which, by the like custom, may be in other places (i).

For a custom time out of mind of disposing of seats by the churchwardens and major part of the parish, or by twelve or any particular number of the parishioners, is a good custom; and if the ordinary interpose, a prohibition will be granted (k).

But the churchwardens must show some particular reason why they are to order the seats exclusive of the ordinary; for a general allegation, that the parishioners have used to repair and build all the seats in the church, and by reason thereof the churchwardens have used to order and dispose of the seats, is not sufficient to take away the ordinary's power in disposing and ordering the seats; because this is no more than the parishioners are bound to do of common right, to wit, building and repairing the seats, for which they have the easement and convenience of sitting in them (l).

Their general authority must be exercised justly and discreetly (m) by the churchwardens, or they may be corrected by the ordinary (n). In churches where the seats are fixed they should place the parishioners with some regard to their rank and stations (o), and families should be seated together (p); but in no case are the higher classes to be accommodated beyond their real wants, to the exclusion of their poorer neighbours (q). Duty.

Where the seats in the church are free, the churchwardens have authority to direct, for the maintenance of order and decorum, in which of these seats certain classes of the congregation (such as the boys and young men) may and others may not sit (r). But churchwardens have no right to prevent by force a parishioner from entering church for the purpose of attending divine service because, in their opinion, there is not room for him (s). The incumbent has no authority in the seating and arranging of parishioners, beyond that of an individual parishioner, and that which his station and influence naturally give him (t).

If through the increase of inhabitants more seats be necessary, the churchwardens cannot erect them of their own head. It cannot be done without the licence of the ordinary. If there be a dispute whether more seats are necessary, or where they shall be placed, the ordinary is sole judge in that case.

A person claiming a pew against any one but a mere intruder must show either a faculty, or prescription which presupposes a faculty (u). If a pew is rightly appurtenant, the occupancy of it must pass with the house, and the individuals cannot, by contract between themselves, defeat the general right of the parish (x); even if there is a prescriptive right, it could not be exercised by transferring it to persons not inhabitants of the house or the parish (y). Where the prescription is interrupted, a jury is not bound to presume a faculty from long undisturbed possession (z).

Appropriation of a pew must be by faculty or prescription.

It will be well to deal first with the case of prescription.

Prescription.

If a person prescribe that he and his ancestors, and all they whose estate he has in a certain messuage, have used to sit in a certain seat in the nave of the church for time out of mind, in consideration that they have used time out of mind to repair the said seat; if the ordinary remove him from this seat, a prohibition lies; for the ordinary has not any power to dispose thereof, for this is a good prescription, and by intendment there may be a good consideration for the commencement of this prescription, although the place where the seat is be the freehold of the parson (a).

But if a person prescribe to have a seat in the nave of the church generally, without the said consideration of repairing the seat, the ordinary may displace him (b).

Seat may be prescribed for, as belonging to a house.

A seat in the nave or body of a church may be prescribed for as belonging to a house. Lord Kenyon said that a pew may be annexed to a house by a faculty, as well as by prescription, which supposes a faculty, and in that case may be transferred with the messuage; and that he had seen a faculty for exchanging seats in a church which were annexed to houses (c). This doctrine was heretofore doubted, and sometimes denied and overruled, with regard to the general right of the ordinary, and the jurisdiction of the spiritual authority: but it seems now to be the doctrine received. Only the reparation of it by the person pleading such prescription, and praying a prohibition thereupon, must of necessity be alleged here; because the ordinary in the body of the church primâ facie has the right: and nothing but such private reparation can divest him of that right; which right stands good and entire (notwithstanding possession and use time out of mind) if the parish have but repaired.

If the claimant repair it.

Length of time from which prescription will be inferred.

Possession for thirty-six years was holden to be presumptive evidence of a prescriptive right, in a case where the church had been rebuilt about forty years before (d). Yet in a later case, it appearing that the seat itself was built thirty-five years ago, for the accommodation of the plaintiff, and to put an end to a dispute between two families, this proof was holden to rebut the presumption which would otherwise arise from so long a possession (e).

In one case Lord Stowell said, "The strongest evidence of that kind is the building and repairing time out of mind; for mere repairing thirty or forty years will not exclude the ordinary. The possession must be ancient, and going beyond memory; and though on this subject I do not mean the high legal memory, it must be longer than appears in the circumstances of this case (f). That a house has been built only eighty years is not sufficient to establish a prescriptive right, because it might be presumed that the evidence of the grant of a faculty was not extinct in that time (g). A prescriptive right must be clearly proved ; the facts must not be left equivocal, and they must be such as are not inconsistent with the general right. In the first place, use and occupation of the pew must be shown to have gone from time immemorial, as appurtenant to a certain messuage, not to lands. Secondly, it must be shown that if any acts have been done by the inhabitants of such a messuage, they maintained and upheld the right. At all events, if any repairs have been required within memory, it must be proved that they have been made at the expense of the party setting up the prescriptive right. The onus and beneficium are supposed to go together ; mere occupancy does not prove the right (h).

The latest case as to prescriptive title to pews is that of Philipps v. Halliday. There it was holden by the House of Lords as follows :—

A pew may be annexed to a dwelling-house in the parish by a faculty, and a faculty may be presumed upon evidence of exclusive possession and repair for a long period ; and the owner of a freehold dwelling-house having brought an action in respect of the disturbance of his possession of a pew in the parish church, and there being evidence that for more than seventy years he and his predecessors in title had occupied the pew, and had kept it locked and repaired, the grant of a faculty ought to be presumed, upon the principle that a legal origin ought to be presumed if a legal origin be possible ; and that consequently the action was maintainable ; and this was so though it appeared that 200 years ago the then lessee of the house (before he became the freeholder) first acquired possession of the pew in a manner which gave no legal title, the subsequent enjoyment not being more consistent with the illegal origin than with the presumption of a later faculty. By this judgment of the House of Lords the decision of the Court of Appeal was affirmed, and that of the court of first instance reversed (i).

Where on an application for a faculty to repair and repew a church, a parishioner appeared and prayed that a faculty might not be granted without a proviso that a pew, claimed to be holden by him by prescription, should not be removed or altered, and it was ruled that a prima facie title by prescription was established, and that the faculty should issue with the proviso, it was said that evidence of repair to a pew claimed by prescription is not absolutely necessary, as no repair may have been made within the period of any one living (k). It has however been generally holden (l) that reparation from time to time is necessary to be pleaded and proved in order to make out a prescriptive right to a pew (m). Lining and putting new cushions into pews are not repairs, but mere ornament; these are not usually done by the parish (n). In the latest case on this branch of the subject Lord Penzance, sitting in the Arches Court on appeal from the Consistory Court of Ely, decided that a parishioner who claims a legal right by prescription to a pew in the nave of his parish church must, in order to displace the general right of the ordinary, not only show that the pew has been occupied by him or his predecessors in title in respect of an ancient house in the parish for a period more or less extended, but must also prove, if any alteration or repair of the pew has been necessary, that such repairs or alterations were executed at the expense of those who at the time claimed the prescriptive right to it (o).

Right to pew not an easement within Prescription Act.

It has been sometimes attempted to be said that the right to a pew is an easement within the Prescription Act (3 & 4 Will. 4 c. 71), so that user during the short fixed periods provided by that statute shall be sufficient evidence of building and repairing time out of mind; but the courts have not acceded to this view (p).

Seats cannot be claimed as belonging to the land.

A seat cannot be claimed by prescription, as appendant to land, but the claim may be as for a pew appendant to a house (q). For such a seat belongs to the house in respect of the inhabitants thereof. And yet it has been holden that a seat in an aisle may be prescribed for by an inhabitant of another parish (q); for the inhabitant may have built the aisle, and may be bound to repair it. But the court doubted if such prescription would be good for a seat in the nave of the church (r). In the Court of Exchequer it was holden, that a pew in the aisle of a church may be prescribed for as appurtenant to a house out of the parish (s).

Priority in a seat may be prescribed for.

As a seat in the church, so priority in a seat may be prescribed for. Thus it was declared in the case of Carleton v. Hutton, in 2 Cha. 1. Carleton claimed the upper place in a seat. Hutton disturbed him. The Archbishop of York sent an inhibition to Carleton, till the matter should be determined before him. But prescription was surmised, and thereupon prohibition obtained; because as well the priority in the seat, as the seat itself, may be claimed by prescription (t).

Seat not to go to a man and his heirs.

A seat may not be granted by the ordinary to a person and his heirs absolutely; for the seat does not belong to the person, but to the inhabitant; otherwise, if he and his heirs go away, and dwell in another parish, they shall yet retain the seat, which is unreasonable (u).

The right to sit in a pew may be apportioned; and therefore where by a faculty, reciting, "that A. had applied to have a pew appropriated to him in the parish church in respect of his dwelling-house," a pew was granted to him and his family for ever and the owners and occupiers of the said dwelling-house, and the dwelling-house was afterwards divided into two, it was holden that the occupier of one of the two (constituting a very small part of the original messuage) had some right to the pew, and in virtue thereof might maintain an action against a wrongdoer (x).

Apportionment of seat.

"With this experience of the mischief that has resulted from a too lavish grant of these faculties in former times, it is the duty" (says Sir J. Nicholl) "of the ordinary to prevent its recurrence, by proceeding in this whole matter with the utmost prudence and circumspection." Faculties which might with propriety have been granted a century or two ago, the present state of population may render most improper. "True it may be that, at the particular time the faculty is applied for, its issue may not be generally inconvenient: the parishioners at large may be sufficiently accommodated after, and notwithstanding, its issue. But in this even, the most favourable case, there are obvious reasons for inducing the ordinary to entertain such applications with a good deal of reserve" (y). The court should inquire, 1, whether such a grant be prejudicial to the parish; 2, whether to the persons opposing the grant: 3, whether the applicant for the grant is qualified for it by station and property in the parish (z).

Faculty. Considerations which should guide ordinary in issuing one.

The following is an extract from an opinion of Dr. Swabey, given in 1808:—"I am of opinion that the vicar and churchwardens, who were severally entitled to be cited specially, may express their dissent against any appropriation, and it would be deserving of weight in a grant which is discretionary, and not of right. I should also strongly doubt the propriety of the granting of a faculty for the appropriation of a pew to an individual for the use of his or her servants, though it may be proper that they should not be disturbed in their possession without just cause, which I think may in a great measure depend upon the sufficiency of seats for persons of high pretensions generally."

The same doctrine was laid down in Woollocombe v. Ouldridge (a), where the Court of Arches confirmed the decree of the inferior court, observing that faculties generally are matters so much within the discretion of the local judge, that there must be a considerable degree of general inconvenience to induce a reversal of his decree.

Form of grant of a faculty.

The best form of a grant of this description is "to a man and his family so long as they continue inhabitants of a certain house in the parish;" though modern usage sometimes omits "of a certain house" (b). All intimations should run "to show cause why a faculty should not be granted to appropriate," &c. (c).

Not now usual.

Faculties for pews are, however, hardly ever now granted.

How far revocable.

Butt v. Jones seems to have established that a faculty obtained by surprise and undue connivance may be revoked (d). When a faculty limited to a certain period expires, the right of the parishioners revives to the pews which were the subject of the faculty (e). Generally speaking, the faculty, if once issued, is good, even against the ordinary himself (f).

Seats in chancel.

Thus much as to seats in the nave or body of the church. Next as to the chancel.

Ordinary's disposition of seats in chancel.

Dr. Gibson asserts, that the seats in the chancel are under the disposition of the ordinary, in like manner as those in the body of the church. Which needs only to be mentioned (he says) because there can be no real ground for exempting it from the power of the ordinary; since the freehold of the church is as much in the parson as the freehold of the chancel; but this hinders not the authority of the ordinary in the church, and therefore not in the chancel. And in one of our records, he says, in Archbishop Grindal's time, we find a special licence issued, for the erecting seats in the chancel of a church, together with the rules and directions to be observed therein (g). After the parson and his family be seated, if there be room for any other seats, the bishop can grant faculties for the building and disposing of them in the chancel as well as the body of the church (h).

Part of chancel may not be granted
away.

A general grant of part of the chancel of a church by a lay impropriator to a man, his heirs and assigns, is not valid, because it would take the chancel entirely out of the jurisdiction of the ordinary. The chancel was unalienable by the rector, without consent of the ordinary, before the dissolution of the monasteries; and the general saving in 31 Hen. 8, c. 13, s. 4, leaves the right as it existed before (i).

Impropriator's seat
in chancel.

The parson or rector impropriate is entitled to the chief seat in the chancel. This was resolved by the Court of King's Bench, in 7 Jac. 1, in the case of Hall v. Ellis, that so it is of common right, in regard to his repairing the chancel; but it was declared at the same time, that by prescription another parishioner may have it (k).

In Spry v. Flood, Dr. Lushington said, "I apprehend that the rector would be entitled, according to the common law of the land, to the chief seat in the chancel, whether he be endowed rector, or spiritual rector only, unless some other person were in a condition to prescribe it for himself from time immemorial; and that the Ecclesiastical Court, in the exercise of its ordinary authority, would allot to him the possession of such sitting, and protect him against the disturbance of such right (l). Spry v. Flood.

In some places, where the parson repairs the chancel, the vicar by prescription claims a right of a seat for his family (m). Vicar's seat in chancel.

As to the right of a seat in the chancel, it was originally inherent in every vicar. For before the Reformation, the hours of the breviary were to be sung or said in the chancel (not in the body of the church) by the express words of a constitution of Archbishop Winchelsea; and this was to be done, not only on Sundays and festivals, but on other days, by another constitution of the said archbishop; and these hours were to be sung or rehearsed, not by the vicar alone, but with the consort and assistance of all the clergymen belonging to the church, which were the ecclesiastical family of the vicar. So that it is evident, that all vicars had a right of sitting there before the Reformation, and by consequence must retain this right still, unless it appear that they have quitted it; and if they have not for forty years past used the right, this breeds a prescription against them in the ecclesiastical courts. In many chancels are to be seen the ancient seats or stalls used by the vicar and his brethren in performing these religious offices, like those which remain in the old choirs of cathedral and collegiate churches; and from hence it is, that cancellus and chorus (the chancel and the choir) are words of the same signification; this being the place where the body of the clergy of every church did sing, or at least rehearsed their breviary, and if any common parishioner may prescribe to a pew in the chancel, much more may the vicar (n).

As these seats were placed at the lower end of the choir or chancel, for the daily use of the vicar, so at the upper end stood the high altar of every church, where, as the vicar, or his representative, was obliged to celebrate mass every Sunday and holiday of obligation, so he might do it every day, if there was occasion, or if he pleased; so that it is clear, the use of the chancel was entirely in the vicar, whoever repaired it; and therefore no wonder if the pavement were not to be broken up without his leave; and that thereupon he should acquire a right of receiving what fees were due on such occasions. And the Reformation left the rights of parson and vicar as it found them (o).

Difference between great chancels and lesser ones.

"It is therefore," Mr. Johnson says, "a very groundless notion with impropiators, that they have the same right in the great chancel that a nobleman hath in a lesser. These lesser chancels are supposed by lawyers to have been erected for the sole use of these noble persons; whereas it is clear the great chancels were originally for the use of clergy and people; but especially for the celebration of the eucharist, and other public offices of religion, there to be performed by the curate and his assistants. That the parsons repair these great chancels doth not at all prove their sole right to them, for they were bound originally to repair the church as well as chancel; and of common right the repairs of the church are still in the parson; it is custom only eases them of this burden. The ordinary hath no power to order morning or evening prayer to be said in noblemen's chancels, but he can order them to be said in the great chancel" (p).

Ordinary aisles.

Where seats in aisles are spoken of as having a peculiar privilege, the reference is to such aisles as form lesser chancels. Ordinary architectural aisles are, as the editor believes, in law part of the nave.

As to seats pulled down.

As to the material fabric of seats it is said, that if any seats annexed to the church be pulled down, the property of the materials is in the parson, and he may make use of them if they were placed in the church by any one of his own head, without legal authority; but for the seats erected by the parishioners by good authority, it seems that the property of the materials upon removal is in the parishioners (q).

If any persons of their own heads shall presume to build any seat in the church, without licence of the ordinary, or consent of the minister and churchwardens, or in any inconvenient place, or too high, it may be pulled down by order from the bishop or his archdeacon, or by the churchwardens with the consent of the parson: for the freehold of the church, and all things annexed to it, are in the parson; and therefore if any presume to cut or pull down any seat annexed to the church, the parson may have an action of trespass against the misdoer (though he formerly set it up), if he do it without the parson's consent, or order from the ordinary; but if the seat be set loose, he that built it may remove it at his pleasure (r).

In Gilson v. Wright, in an action of trespass brought by Gilson, for breaking and cutting in pieces his pew, and taking it away; the defendants pleaded that they were churchwardens, and that the plaintiff had built it in the church without licence.

(r) Degge, pt. 1, c. 12.

And by the court, the trespass is confessed; for though they may remove the seat, they cannot cut the timber and materials into pieces (s).

This decision has, however, been doubted (t).

All persons (says Sir J. Nicoll) ought to understand that the sacred edifice of the church is under the protection of the ecclesiastical laws as they are administered in these courts; that the possession of the church is in the minister and the churchwardens; that no person has a right to enter it when it is not open for divine service, except under their permission and with their authority; that pews already erected cannot be pulled down without the consent of the minister and churchwardens, unless, after cause shown, by a faculty or licence from the ordinary. The learned judge, in that case, condemned a lessee of an impropiator of great tithes in the costs of the proceeding, admonished him to pull down the seats he had erected, to reinstate the chancel as it was, and to certify by the first day of next term that he had complied with the sentence (u).

Power of the ecclesiastical court to punish those who illegally pull down or erect seats.

Trifling alterations, however, may be made in a pew without a faculty from the ordinary, unless some private right is infringed thereby (x).

There remains yet to be considered that sort of right to a pew which is termed "possessory" (y). This, by the common law of the church, is holden sufficient to maintain a suit against a mere disturber (z): the fact of possession implies either the virtual or actual authority of those having power to place; the disturber must show that he has been placed there by this authority. But a possessory right is not good against the churchwardens and ordinary; they may displace and make new arrangements, but they ought not, without cause, to displace persons in possession; if they do, the ordinary would reinstate them. The possession, therefore, will have weight: the ordinary would give a person in possession ceteris paribus the preference over a mere stranger (a). Possession based upon an obviously illegal title will, however, give no right (b). A possessory title is sufficient ground for resisting a faculty (c); but this right is only co-extensive in duration with actual possession, and if this be abandoned, the right wholly ceases (d). And in Spry v. Flood (e), the judge said — “It is a question whether under any circumstances the rector, or any one else, can properly be displaced from a pew except by the churchwardens, and how far churchwardens could interfere of their own authority with a possessory right, is a point upon which I do not mean to enter. It was the opinion of Lord Stowell that they could not do so without reference to the ordinary. Perhaps later cases may have extended their power, and the necessity of the times may have allowed a different practice to grow up, and it may be competent for them to act without any authority of the ordinary previously conferred.”

Possessory right to a pew.

Rights to seats, when not triable in ecclesiastical court.

Where the claim to a seat is founded on prescription, the ordinary has nothing to do, but the matter is solely determinable at the common law (f); and therefore, if a suit be commenced in the spiritual court for a seat, upon the account of prescription, a prohibition will lie for the party sued, because, whether the prescription be good or not, is not in the spiritual court to judge (g).

When triable in ecclesiastical court.

Nevertheless, for a disturbance in the seat, a man may sue in the spiritual court, and the defendant, if he will, may admit the prescription to be tried there, as a defendant does a modus or a pension by prescription (h).

The ecclesiastical court will admonish a wrongdoer not to disturb a person in possession of a pew, although he has no well-founded title to it (i). The usual method of procedure is by a suit for perturbation of seat; this is a civil suit: as also is another remedy afforded by the ecclesiastical court, that of citing the churchwardens to show cause why they have not seated certain persons suitably to their condition; this was the mode adopted in Walter v. Gunner, in which case Lord Stowell said, “I think the process has issued very properly in this case, and this is a convenient mode of proceeding” (k).

How triable in High Court of Justice.

In days when the forms of action in the courts of common law were important, it was held that trespass could not be brought for entering into a pew because the plaintiff in such cases has not the exclusive possession of the seat, the possession of the church being in the parson (l), but only liberty to use the seat (m). But the title to a seat was triable by action upon the case (n); and it is agreed that the plaintiff need not to show any reparation in his statement of claim, but he ought to prove reparation in evidence (o). And this is a probable reason for the prescription, for, per Bridgman, C.J.—Although prescriptions resemble the river Nile, in this respect, that no one can trace their origin, so that no direct reason can be given for them, for they were before the memory of man; yet some probable reason, sufficient to make the prescription reasonable, ought to be given (p).

Pew rents were specially authorized to be taken by the older Church Building Acts, for certain purposes and with certain restrictions.

By 58 Geo. 3, c. 45, s. 62, the commissioners (that is, the Church Building Commissioners), with the consent of the bishop, may arrange such part of the church as they shall think fit in pews, and the remainder not so arranged shall be free seats; and by 59 Geo. 3, c. 134, s. 6, the same is to hold good of churches for consolidated chapelries built under that Act (q).

59 Geo. 3, c. 134.

Pews are to be set apart for the minister and churchwardens, and one-fifth at least of the sittings shall be free where the church is built or assisted out of the rates (r).

The commissioners are to fix the pew rents, which might, under the earlier Acts (s), be altered with the consent of the incumbent, patron and bishop, and in some cases the vestry; now, however, by 3 & 4 Vict. c. 60, s. 5, this power is given to the commissioners and bishop.

The pews may be let to any parishioner; subscribers to the building of the church to have the first choice, and, where no parishioner is desirous of renting them, to non-parishioners. Subscribers towards building the church or procuring the site may be discharged from pew rents in consideration of their subscription (t). The rents are to be recoverable by the churchwardens (u).

Out of these rents the commissioners, with the consent of the bishop (in case of difference the matter to be settled by the archbishop), are to allot a stipend to "the spiritual person serving the church or chapel," and a salary to the clerk; or they may assign the pew rents to the churchwardens of the parish or district, who shall thereout pay the stipend and salary, so far as they are sufficient. The surplus of the pew rents is to be invested and accumulated to form a fund for building or purchasing a

Burrup.*

It seems from the case of Lloyd v. Burrup (y), that the minister can bring an action against the churchwardens for non-payment of his stipend when they have sufficient funds from the pew rents in their hands to pay it.

In that case the plaintiff was, as the minister of a district church, entitled to receive out of pew rents from the defendants, the churchwardens, a stipend of 550*l.* a year under a deed of assignment duly executed by the commissioners, whereby that sum was assigned to the minister of the church, and was ordered to be paid from Christmas, 1826, on the "four most usual feast days, viz., Michaelmas Day, Christmas Day, Lady Day, and Midsummer Day, in even and equal portions." The deed also provided that the stipend should in no case exceed the amount produced by the pew rents in any one year. At Michaelmas, 1867, two quarters were due, amounting to 275*l.*, which the plaintiff claimed of the defendants. They had in hand, at the commencement of the action, in October, 1867, only 199*l.* 10*s.* 10*d.*, of which 120*l.* 5*s.* 6*d.* was made up wholly of pew rents paid in advance for the occupation of pews after Michaelmas. They paid the 79*l.* 9*s.* 4*d.*, but this sum of 120*l.* 5*s.* 6*d.* being insufficient to meet the then accruing quarter's stipend, they refused to pay over to the plaintiff. And it was holden that under the terms of the assignment and the circumstances of the case, the plaintiff was not entitled to receive from the defendants, in respect of his stipend for the quarters previous to Michaelmas, money paid in advance for the occupation of pews after Michaelmas.

Transfer of pews.

It should be noticed that, under 59 Geo. 3, c. 134, s. 15, corporations and persons possessing a limited interest or under disability "may endow or agree to the endowment of any chapel heretofore built out of the pew rents thereof."

By 3 Geo. 4, c. 72, s. 23, the commissioners may transfer the right to any pews in an existing church belonging to any person residing in the district of a new church, with his consent and in order to increase the free seats in the old church, to such new church.

Proportion of free seats.

The Acts for enabling private persons to build churches or chapels require that every application to the bishop for leave to build such a church "shall offer to set apart such number or proportion of free seats as is required," by the previous Church Building Acts, "in cases in which churches or chapels are built or purchased under the provisions of the said recited Acts with any money advanced by the commissioners under the said recited Acts," and to provide out of the pew rents a competent salary for the minister; and no pew rents are to be taken till the chapel is consecrated (z).

Subject to this, all the provisions of the previous Church Building Acts are to apply (a).

By 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 38, s. 4, the trustees may fix and alter the scale of pew rents. 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 38.

By 1 & 2 Vict. c. 107, s. 18, where a chapel is converted into a parish church, the commissioners, with consent of the bishop, may make provision for the minister and clerk of the old and new parish church out of the pew rents of either, so long as they do not touch the rights of any persons claiming by faculty or prescription (b). 1 & 2 Vict. c. 107.
Pew-rents of chapels.

By 14 & 15 Vict. c. 97, s. 1, where a permanent endowment in lieu of pew rents to the satisfaction of the commissioners is made for any church for which pew rents have been previously fixed under any of the previous Church Building Acts, and where such pew rents have not been appropriated under any local act, the commissioners may, with the consent of the bishop, declare that pew rents shall cease for the whole or part of the church (according to the amount of the endowment), and the seats thus freed shall be at the disposal of the churchwardens like those in an "ancient parish church." 14 & 15 Vict. c. 97.

Alteration of scale.

Upon permanent endowment of any church or chapel a proportionate number of sittings to be declared free, or scale of pew-rents to be reduced.

By sect. 8, the scale of pew rents may be altered from time to time.

Sect. 7. "Upon a permanent endowment being provided for any church in which pew rents have previously been authorized to be taken, and upon such endowment being approved by the commissioners, they may thereupon, under such an instrument under their common seal as is hereinbefore mentioned, with the consent of the bishop of the diocese, make an equivalent reduction in the total amount of the rents authorized to be taken for the pews or sittings in such church, if the same shall not be appropriated by law for specific purposes, either by a reduction of the rate or scale, or by declaring certain specific pews or sittings theretofore chargeable with the rents to be absolutely free: Provided always, that if any sum or sums of money have been borrowed under the authority of any act of parliament or order in council upon the security of pew rents such instrument shall not take effect until after the repayment of all sums so charged or chargeable."

32 & 33 Vict. c. 94.

Pews or sittings may be surrendered to ecclesiastical commissioners.

By 32 & 33 Vict. c. 94, s. 2, "Whenever by virtue of any public or private act of parliament now or hereafter in force, or by virtue of any deed or instrument, the pews or sittings, or some or one of the pews or sittings, in any church or chapel, consecrated or unconsecrated, are or is or shall be subject to any trust as to the grant, demise, sale, or disposal of such pews or sittings, pew or sitting, or are, is, or shall be the private property for any estate whatsoever of any person or persons, then and in every such case it shall be lawful for the trustees of such church or chapel, or other the persons exercising powers of grant, demise, sale, or disposal as aforesaid, or for all or any persons possessing on their own behalf or on the behalf of others any rights, qualified or unqualified, of ownership, by reason of any such grant, demise, sale, or disposal as aforesaid, or for any person or persons to whom any pews or sittings, pew or sitting, in such church or chapel, shall belong, for any estate whatsoever, under or by virtue of such act of parliament, deed, or instrument as aforesaid, with or without consideration, to surrender and for ever yield up, either altogether or separately, and according to the nature and extent of their several rights and interests, to the bishop of the diocese wherein such church or chapel is situate, or to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners for England, who are hereby respectively authorized to accept every such surrender, all rights of ownership, grant, demise, sale, disposal, or other right whatsoever which they the said trustees, persons or person, may have in, over, or in respect of such pews or sittings, pew or sitting."

Sect. 3. "Every such surrender shall be made by deed executed by all the parties to the same, amongst whom shall be included the bishop of the diocese wherein the church or chapel to be affected by it is situate, and the patron or patrons of such church or chapel aforesaid; and such deed shall be registered in the registry of the said diocese."

Surrender to be by deed, executed by the parties, including bishop of diocese.

Sect. 4. "So soon as all rights and powers over or in respect of the pews or sittings in any such church or chapel shall have been surrendered to the bishop of the diocese or to the said commissioners as aforesaid, the trusts or rights of ownership, and the obligations affecting such pews or sittings, or any of them, under such act of parliament, deed, or instrument as aforesaid, shall at once and ipso facto determine, and all the provisions of such act of parliament, deed, or instrument as to pews or sittings in such church or chapel shall thenceforth be void and of none effect."

Upon surrender all rights of ownership, &c. to cease.

Sect. 5. "From and after every such surrender to the said bishop or commissioners, the pews or sittings, pew or sitting, affected thereby shall, to the extent of the rights or powers expressed to be surrendered, be subject to the same laws as to all rights and property therein as the pews and sittings of ancient parish churches are now subject to: Provided that if the church or chapel be not consecrated such pews or sittings, pew or sitting, shall belong absolutely to the bishop and his successors or to the said commissioners, as the case may be, until the consecration of the said church or chapel, and from and after the consecration thereof the right of the said bishop or commissioners shall cease, and the said pews or sittings shall be subject to the same laws as to all rights and property therein as the pews and sittings of ancient parish churches."

Upon complete surrender, all rights created by act for building church to cease.

Sect. 7. "In every case in which a complete surrender and determination of the rights, powers, obligations, and trusts affecting the pews or sittings in a church or chapel shall have been carried out as aforesaid, and in every case in which such transfer and conveyance as aforesaid of the freehold of a church or chapel, and the vaults (if any) thereof, shall have been effected, all other rights, powers, obligations, and trusts created, conferred, or enforced as to such church or chapel by the act of parliament, deed, or instrument under which such church or chapel was built, shall upon such complete surrender and determination, or (as the case may be) such transfer and conveyance, absolutely cease and determine; Provided always, that such cesser and determination shall not diminish or in anywise affect any right or rights of patronage."

35 & 36 Vict. c. 49.

Ecclesiastical commissioners may accept a church site under a grant in which it is declared that pews or seats shall not be let.

Lastly, by 35 & 36 Vict. c. 49, The Church Seats Act, 1872, it is enacted as follows:—

Sect. 2. "It shall be lawful for the ecclesiastical commissioners, in the exercise and fulfilment of the powers and duties conferred or imposed upon them by the acts administered by them or any or either of the same acts, to accept a church site under a grant or conveyance in which it is declared that the pews or seats in the church erected or to be erected on the same site, or some specified portion of the same pews or seats, shall not be let for any payment of money, and thereupon it shall be unlawful to let the same pews or seats or portion of the same for payment of money."

Securing stipend to incumbent when seats are wholly or partially free.

Sect. 3. "In every case in which it is so declared that no portion of the pews or seats shall be let for any payment of money, a sufficient endowment or stipend of not less than one hundred pounds per annum shall be secured to the incumbent by or to the satisfaction of the ecclesiastical commissioners, and in every case in which a portion only of the pews or seats may not be so let, an endowment or stipend of such amount as the said commissioners may determine, regard being had to the proportion of pews or seats which may not be so let, shall be in like manner secured."

Unions.

Where there is an union not merely of benefices, but of parishes, and one church only remains, special provisions are made for transferring old rights to seats in the church which is pulled down to the church which remains (b).

8 & 9 Vict. c. 70.

Where new church is substituted

It is provided by the Act 8 & 9 Vict. c. 70, s. 1, that . . . "where a new church has been already built or shall hereafter be built in any parish or district parish, or ancient or parochial chapelry, and where the bishop of the diocese and the patron and incumbent of such parish, district parish, or ancient or parochial chapelry shall at any time certify to her Majesty's commissioners for building new churches that it will be for the convenience of such parish, district parish, or ancient or parochial chapelry that such new church, being duly consecrated, should be substituted for the old or existing church situate therein, it shall be lawful for the said commissioners, by an instrument under their common seal, with the consent of such bishop, patron, and incumbent, under their hands and seals, to declare that such new church, being duly consecrated, shall be substituted for such old or existing church . . . and at any time within six months after the substitution of such new church for the old or existing church the bishop of the diocese may of his own mere motion issue, or, if thereunto required by any person claiming to hold a pew or seat free of rent in such old or existing church by faculty or prescription, shall issue, a commission under his hand and seal, directed to the archdeacon of the archdeaconry in which such old or existing church shall be situate, and to any two incumbents of parishes situate within such archdeaconry, and to any two laymen nominated by the churchwardens of such old or existing church, who are hereby required to nominate for such purpose two fit persons not claiming any such pew or seat as aforesaid; and such commission shall direct the commissioners thereby appointed to inquire into the rights of persons, if any, who claim to hold any such pews or seats as aforesaid; and the said commissioners, or any three or more of them, of whom the said archdeacon shall be one, shall, as soon as conveniently may be, proceed to examine into such claims, after giving fourteen days previous notice thereof, by affixing a copy of such commission on the church door of such new church; and such notice, signed by such archdeacon, shall specify the day and time and place on which such examination is to be made; and after making an examination into such claims the commissioners so appointed, or the majority of them, shall under their hands transmit in writing to the said bishop the names and residences of the persons who have substantiated their claims to such pews or seats, and if the said bishop is satisfied therewith he shall assign, under his hand and seal, to such parties respectively, convenient pews or seats in such new church, and such seats so assigned shall be held and enjoyed by the parties entitled to the same in as free and ample a manner as the pews and seats to which they had or would have been entitled in such old or existing church; and if any party shall find himself aggrieved by the finding of such commission the bishop of the diocese shall have power to afford redress, by allotting to such party seats in the new church, if the justice of the case shall in his judgment require it" for ancient parish church.

Claims of persons to seats in the old church to be investigated, and if proved such persons to have seats in the new church on the same terms as in the old one.

By sect. 4, "where any part of the cathedral church has been accustomed to be used as a parochial church," the Church Build- Where part of cathedral has been used as a parochial church, transfer of the rights and endowments belonging to such church may be made to a new church; and the same provisions shall be made as to seats as in the previous section.

ing Commissioners, with consent of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, the bishop, the dean and chapter, and also of the patron and incumbent of such church, may transfer the rights and endowments belonging to the incumbent of such church, "to any new church which has been or hereafter may be built, and which is situate in the parish where such part of such cathedral is, or is deemed to be, the parish church; and in case of such transfer the same provisions hereinbefore contained, touching the examination into the claims of parties claiming to hold pews or seats by faculty or prescription in the old parish church, and the assignment of pews or seats to those who have substantiated such claims as hereinbefore mentioned, shall apply to such new church which after such transfer shall become the parish church in lieu of the former parish church so belonging to such cathedral. . . ."

SECT. 8.—Church-way.

Subject to ecclesiastical jurisdiction.

The right to a church-way may be claimed and maintained by libel in the spiritual court. This is supposed in the several reports upon this head, by the mention of particular circumstances, without which prohibitions would not have laid (c).

When not a highway.

A church-way may commonly be claimed as a private way; and upon suggestion that it is a highway, a prohibition will be granted; so if the suggestion prove true, the right is triable at common law (d).

A way to a parish church, or to the common fields of a town, or to a village, which terminates there, may be called a private way, because it belongs not to all the king's subjects, but to the particular inhabitants of such parish, house or village, each of which, as it seems, may have an action for nuisance therein; whereas nuisances in highways are punishable by indictment, and are not actionable unless they cause a special damage to some particular person (e). Yet an indictment for stopping communem viam pedestrem ad ecclesiam de Whitby was holden good, for it was taken to be a foot-way common to all, and not merely to the parishioners, and that the church was only the terminus ad quem (f). If a way leading to a church be a private way, he who ought to repair may be compelled to repair by the ecclesiastical court, and no prohibition will lie; but otherwise, if it be a highway, though it lead to a church. If it be a highway, that is, common to all his majesty's subjects, the charge of repairing it, of common right, lies on the occupiers of lands within the parish, but may be cast on certain persons by reason of inclosure, tenure, or prescription (g).

Prescription for a church-way may be pleaded by any inhabitant in the spiritual court. This was done in 16 Jac. 1; but upon suggestion that it had been enjoyed by permission only, and not as of right, a prohibition was granted: as it was also in a case which Rolle mentions in the same year, when the churchwardens of Bithorne and Bowe sued for a church-way as appertaining to all the parishioners by prescription (h).

When and where it can be claimed by prescription.

Which case mentioned by Rolle is thus: if the churchwardens of a church sue for a way to a church that they claim to belong to all the parishioners by prescription, a prohibition shall be granted, for this is temporal (i).

In connection with the subject of paths or steps which, though leading to the church itself, are inside the church-yard, reference should be made to the cases of Walter v. Mountague (k) and Batten v. Gedge (l), treated of in sect. 5 (m) of this chapter, where also will be found a reference to the statute 59 Geo. 3, c. 134, s. 39, enabling the Church Building Commissioners, now the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, to stop or vary entrances into and paths through church-yards (n).

Church way inside church-yard.

In the diocese of Lincoln an inquiry as to church-ways has long formed a part of the visitation articles, episcopal and archidiaconal. The present form of the bishop's article is—"Are the ancient church-ways maintained free from obstruction?"

Visitation inquiries.

SECT. 9.—Church Rate.

According to the old law, rates for reparation of the church were to be made by the churchwardens, together with the parishioners, duly assembled, after due notice, in the vestry or the church.

Old law.

and stock; but the rate was a personal, not a real charge, laid upon persons in respect of their lands. It is unnecessary to state the various stages in the history of the subject, by which in our day this doctrine was practically undermined. The Braintree church rate case decided that a majority of the parishioners might refuse a rate: the question whether the recusants were punishable in the Ecclesiastical Court being left open (p).

31 & 32 Vict.
c. 109.

In the year 1868 the 31 & 32 Vict. c. 109, was passed, which rendered a compulsory church rate illegal, but provided in rather an obscure manner for a voluntary church rate, clothed with some of the characteristics of the old law.

This statute has been found generally inapplicable, and churches are now for the most part supported by voluntary contributions.

The statute, however, is as follows:—

Compulsory church rates
abolished.

Sect. 1. "No suit shall be instituted or proceeding taken in any ecclesiastical or other court, or before any justice or magistrate, to enforce or compel the payment of any church rate made in any parish or place in England or Wales."

Saving of rates called church rates, but applicable to
purposes.

Sect. 2. "Where in pursuance of any general or local act any rate may be made and levied which is applicable partly to ecclesiastical purposes and partly to other purposes, such rate shall be made, levied, and applied for such last-mentioned purposes only, and so far as it is applicable to such purposes shall be deemed to be a separate rate, and not a church rate, and shall not be affected by this act.

"Where in pursuance of any act of parliament a mixed fund, arising partly from rates affected by this act and partly from other sources, is directed to be applied to purposes some of which are ecclesiastical purposes, the portion of such fund which is derived from such other sources shall be henceforth primarily applicable to such of the said purposes as are ecclesiastical."

Provision
where money is due on security of such rates.

Sect. 3. "In any parish where a sum of money is at the time of the passing of this act due on the security of church rates, or of rates in the nature of church rates, to be made or levied in such parish under the provisions of any act of parliament, or where any money in the name of church rate is ordered to be raised under any such provisions, such rates may still be made and levied, and the payment thereof enforced by process of law, pursuant to such provisions, for the purpose of paying off the money so due, or paying the money so ordered to be raised, and the costs incidental thereto, but not otherwise, until the same shall have been liquidated: Provided, that the accounts of the churchwardens of such parish in reference to the receipt and expenditure of the monies levied under such acts shall be audited annually by the auditor of the poor law union within whose district such parish shall be situate, unless another mode of audit is provided by act of parliament."

Sect. 5. "This act shall not affect any enactment in any private or local act of parliament under the authority of which church rates may be made or levied in lieu of, or in consideration of the extinguishment or of the appropriation to any other purpose of, any tithes, customary payments, or other property or charge upon property, which tithes, payments, property, or charge, previously to the passing of such act, had been appropriated by law to ecclesiastical purposes as defined by this act, or in consideration of the abolition of tithes in any place, or upon any contract made, or for good or valuable consideration given, and every such enactment shall continue in force in the same manner as if this act had not passed (q)."

Not to affect enactments in local acts, &c. where rates are made for purposes herein named.

Sect. 6. "This act shall not affect vestries, or the making, assessing, receiving, or otherwise dealing with any church rate, save in so far as relates to the recovery thereof; but, subject to the provisions hereinbefore contained, whensoever any ecclesiastical district having within its limits a consecrated church in use for the purposes of divine worship shall have been legally constituted out of any parish or parishes, and whether such district shall or shall not be a separate and distinct parish, the inhabitants of such district shall not be entitled to vote for or in reference to a church rate or the expenditure thereof at any vestry meeting of the parish or parishes out of which the said district is formed, nor shall they be assessed to any rate made in relation to the parish church of the said parish or parishes, but such inhabitants may assemble in vestry, and, subject to the provisions of this act, may make and assess a rate in relation to the church of their own district in like manner as if such church were the church of an ancient parish: Provided that nothing in this act contained shall affect any right of burial to which the inhabitants of the district may be entitled in the churchyard of the mother church."

Act not to affect vestries, &c.

Sect. 7. "It shall be lawful for all bodies corporate, trustees, guardians, and committees who or whose cestuis que trust are in the occupation of any lands, houses, or tenements, to pay, if they think fit, any church rate made in respect of such property, although the payment of the same may not be enforceable after the passing of this act, and the same shall be allowed to them in any accounts to be rendered by them respectively."

Trustees and others under incapacity may pay voluntary rate.

Sect. 8. "No person who makes default in paying the amount of a church rate for which he is rated shall be entitled to inquire into, or object to, or vote in respect of the expenditure of the monies arising from such church rate; and if the occupier of any premises shall make default for one month after demand in payment of any church rate for which he is rated, the owner shall be entitled to pay the same, and shall thereupon be entitled, until the next succeeding church rate is made, to stand for all purposes relating to church rates (including the attending at vestries and voting thereat) in the place in which such occupier would have stood."

Church trustees.

Definition of "ecclesiastical purposes," "church rate," and "parish."

Sect. 9 refers to church trustees (q).

By sect. 10, " 'Ecclesiastical purposes' shall mean the building, rebuilding, enlargement, and repair of any church or chapel, and any purpose to which by common or ecclesiastical law a church rate is applicable, or any of such purposes ;

" 'Church rate' shall mean any rate for ecclesiastical purposes as hereinbefore defined ;

" 'Parish' shall mean any parish, ecclesiastical district, chapelry, or place within the limits of which any person has the exclusive cure of souls."

As already noticed, sect. 3 continues church rates where money has been borrowed on their security. As to this :

5 Geo. 4, c. 36.

Sect. 1 of 5 Geo. 4, c. 36, had enacted, that churchwardens and overseers of a parish may, with the consent of the vestry, of the bishop of the diocese, and of the incumbent, apply to the commissioners empowered to make advances on public works for a loan for "rebuilding, repairing, enlarging, or otherwise extending the accommodation of any church or chapel of such parish," and the commissioners, on being satisfied that the required consent has been given, may advance the loan ; which is to be applied "for the purposes mentioned in such application," and rates are to be made for the repayment of the loan.

Rippin and Wilson v. Bastin.

In Rippin and Wilson v. Bastin, the facts were these:—A loan was made under the last-mentioned act for the purpose of repairing the church of H. All the formalities required by the act were duly complied with before the loan was granted. A portion of the money was expended in repairing the chancel, and the rest in repairing the other portions of the church. Subsequently a rate was made in due form to repay the loan.

In a suit against a ratepayer for refusal to pay the rate, the defendant alleged in his answer, that it was the duty of the rector alone to repair the chancel : that the preliminary resolution of the vestry contemplated the application of a portion of the loan to the repair of the chancel ; that a portion of the loan was expended in repairing the chancel ; that the consent of the bishop, and the advance by the commissioners, were given and made respectively on the representation that the loan was wanted for purposes that did not include the repair of the chancel : and that, therefore, the rate was void :—It was ruled by Sir Robert Phillimore, in the Court of Arches, that the word "church," in the above section, included the chancel, and that, therefore, a portion of the loan might properly be expended in repairing the chancel.

It was ruled further, that even if the word "church," did not now include the chancel, yet, as all the required formalities had been observed before the loan was granted, an improper expenditure of the loan could not affect the commissioners' right to repayment; and that the rate, being duly made in form, was valid (r).

In Smallbones v. Edney and Lunn (s), the Privy Council decided, that the impropiator of the great tithes was liable to contribute to rates raised for the repayment of loans raised under the foregoing statute.

Smallbones v. Edney and Lunn.

In Regina v. The Churchwardens of Wigan (t), the House of Lords held that rates under 5 Geo. 4, c. 36, could not be made after twenty years had elapsed from the time when the money was advanced.

Reg. v. Churchwardens of Wigan.

It appears, by the case of Rose v. Watson (u), that a church rate was still in force, in the year 1894, in the parish of St. Nicholas, Harwich.

Rose v. Watson.

The former part of sect. 5 of 31 & 32 Vict. c. 109, covers a not infrequent number of cases where, by local act of parliament, tithes on houses or customary payments in lieu of tithes or offerings, have been converted into church rates or rates analogous to church rates (x). Such, for instance, is the case in St. Saviour's, Southwark (y), St. Botolph's, Aldgate (z), Halifax in Yorkshire (a), and Falmouth (b).

31 & 32 Vict. c. 109.

By 56 & 57 Vict. c. xiv, the rector's rate in St. Saviour's, Southwark, is abolished.

Church rates in lieu of tithes.

The latter part of sect. 5 of 31 & 32 Vict. c. 109, was relied upon, but in vain, in the recent case of Regina v. Vestry of Marylebone (c).

CHAPELS.

- SECT. 1.—Different kinds of Chapels.
 2.—Who may nominate to Chapels.
 3.—Modern Law as to Chapels to Public Institutions.
 4.—Chapels under Burial Acts.

SECT. 1.—Different kinds of Chapels.

Private
chapels.

THE following may be enumerated as the different kinds of chapels:—Private chapels, free chapels, chapels of ease, parochial chapels, chapels to colleges, schools and public institutions, burial ground chapels, proprietary chapels.

Private chapels (a) are such as noblemen and other religious and worthy persons have at their own private charge built in or near their own houses for them and their families to perform religious duties in. These private chapels and their ornaments are maintained at those persons' charge to whom they belong, and chaplains provided for them by themselves with honourable pensions; and these anciently were all consecrated by the bishop of the diocese, and ought to be so still (b).

A man may build a private chapel for himself and family, or for himself and his neighbours, but that will not give the parson a right to nominate his preacher (c).

Constitution of Stratford.

"We do decree," says Stratford, "that whosoever against the prohibition of the canons shall celebrate mass in oratories, chapels, houses, or other places, not consecrated, without having obtained the licence of the diocesan, shall be suspended from the celebration of divine service for the space of a month. And all licences granted by the bishops for celebrating mass in places not consecrated other than to noblemen or other great men of the realm, living at a considerable distance from the church, or notoriously weak or infirm, shall be void. Nevertheless, the heads, governors, and canons of cathedral churches, and others of the clergy, may celebrate mass in their oratories of ancient erection, as hath been accustomed. Moreover, the priests who shall celebrate mass in oratories or chapels built by the kings or queens of England, or their children, shall not incur such pain" (d).

(a) Chapels which form part of the structure of a cathedral or parish church, such as a side chapel with a second Holy Table, or lesser chancels, are not included in this chapter. For such chapels, vide supra, pp. 724, 1404; and see The Vicar of St. Peter's, Eaton Square

In Oratories.—An oratory differs from a church; for in a church there is appointed a certain endowment for the minister and others; but an oratory is that which is not built for saying mass, nor endowed, but ordained for prayer (e). Meaning of oratory.

And in the said oratories a bell might not be put up without the bishop's authority (f).

Or other Places.—As suppose, in a tent, or in the open air (g).

Without having obtained the Licence of the Diocesan.—Such oratory any one may build without the consent of the bishop; but without the consent of the bishop divine service may not be performed there. And this licence he shall not grant, for divine service there to be performed upon the greater festivals (h). Licence of the diocesan requisite.

Abundance of such licences both before and since the Reformation remain in our ecclesiastical records, not only for prayers and sermons, but in some instances for sacraments also. But the law is (as Lindwood has it in his gloss on the said canon), that such licence be granted sparingly. And these restrictions were laid on private oratories, out of a just regard to places of public worship, that while the laws of the church provided for great infirmities or great distance, such indulgence might not be abused to an unnecessary neglect of public or parochial communion (i).

At a considerable Distance.—As suppose, a mile or more; and in such case and not otherwise (says Lindwood) the bishop ought to permit service to be performed there (k).

By 2 & 3 Edw. 6, c. 1, s. 1, and 1 Eliz. c. 2, s. 4, open prayer in and throughout those acts is explained thereby to be that prayer which is for others to come unto or hear, either in common churches, or private chapels, or oratories (l). Statutory recognition.
2 & 3 Edw. 6,
c. 1; 1 Eliz.
c. 2, s. 4.

Can. 71 of 1603, "forbidding ministers to preach or administer the holy communion in any private house, except in times of necessity," goes on to provide, that "houses are here reputed for private houses, wherein are no chapels dedicated and allowed by the ecclesiastical laws of this realm. And provided also, under Canon 71.

the pains before expressed, that no chaplains do preach or administer the communion in any other places but in the chapels of the said houses; and that also they do the same very seldom upon Sundays and holidays; so that both the lords and masters of the said houses, and their families, shall at other times resort to their own parish churches, and there receive the holy communion at the least once every year" (m).

The status of the chaplains mentioned in this canon has been already treated of (n).

Free chapels.

The distinction of free chapels is grounded on their freedom or exemption from all ordinary jurisdiction (o).

Sir Simon Degge says, it is agreed on all hands, that the king may erect a free chapel, and exempt it from the jurisdiction of the ordinary, or may license a subject so to do (p). By 26 Hen. 8, c. 3, s. 1, and 1 Eliz. c. 4, s. 1, free chapels are charged with first fruits; but this the late Mr. Serjeant Hill conjectures must mean only such as were in the hands of subjects. No other chapels are expressly named in the statutes: parsonages and vicarages are expressly noticed; it seems that parochial chapels are included in those words; and chapels of ease were not supposed to have any revenue (q).

And Dr. Godolphin says, the king may license a subject to found a chapel, and by his charter exempt it from the visitation of the ordinary (r).

But Dr. Gibson observes, nevertheless, that no instances are produced in confirmation hereof. It is true, he says, that many free chapels have been in the hands of subjects; but it does not therefore follow, that those were not originally of royal foundation (s).

By the constitution of Archbishop Stratford, before mentioned, ministers who officiate in oratories or chapels erected by the kings or queens of England or their children, shall not need to have the licence of the ordinary (t).

Or their Children.—Which word children extends not further than to grandchildren; after these they are called posterity (t).

All free chapels, together with the chantries, were given to the king in the 1st year of King Edward the Sixth; except some few that are excepted in the acts of parliament by which they were given; or such as are founded by the king or his licence since the dissolution (u).

And the king himself visits his free chapels and hospitals, and not the ordinary; which office of visitation is executed for the king by the lord high chancellor (x).

Free chapels may continue such in point of exemption from ordinary visitation, though the head or members do receive institution from the ordinary (y).

In short, the sum of all is this: Free chapels (says the learned and accurate Bishop Tanner) were places of religious worship, exempt from all ordinary jurisdiction, save only that the incumbents were generally instituted by the bishop, and inducted by the archdeacon of the place. Most of these chapels were built upon the manors and ancient demesnes of the crown, whilst in the king's hand, for the use of himself and retinue when he came to reside there. And when the crown parted with those estates, the chapels went along with them, and retained their first freedom; but some lords having had free chapels in manors that do not appear to have been ancient demesnes of the crown, such are thought to have been built and privileged by grants from the crown (z).

Of chapels subject to a mother church, some are merely chapels of ease, others chapels of ease and parochial (a). But quære if they can be both at the same time.

Chapels of ease under a mother church.

A chapel merely of ease is that which was not allowed a font at its institution, and which is used only for the ease of the parishioners in prayers and preaching (sacraments and burials being received and performed at the mother church), and where commonly the curate is removable at the pleasure of the parochial minister; according to what Lindwood says, where the minister of the mother church has the cure of them both, yet he exercises the cure there by a vicar not perpetual, but temporary, and removable at pleasure; though in this case, Lindwood observes elsewhere, that there may be in other respects the rights of a parochial chapel by custom. But where a chapel is instituted, though with parochial rights, there is usually (if not always) a reservation of repairing to the mother church, on a certain day or days, in order to preserve the subordination (b).

It was ruled by Dr. Phillimore, chancellor of the diocese of Oxford, in 1849, that the consistorial court had power to grant a faculty for the removal of a consecrated chapel to another site authorized by the ordinary (c).

May be removed.

A parochial chapel is that which has the parochial rights of christening and burying; and this differs in nothing from a church, but in the want of a rectory and endowment (d).

Parochial chapels.

For the privileges of administering the sacraments (especially that of baptism) and the office of burial, are the proper rites and jurisdiction that make it no longer a depending chapel of ease, but a separate parochial chapel. For the liberties of baptism and sepulture are the true distinct parochial rites. And if any new oratory has acquired and enjoyed this immunity, then it differs not from a parish church, but (says Mr. Selden) may be styled capella parochialis. And till the year 1300, in all trials of the rights of particular churches, if it could be proved that any chapel had a custom for free baptism and burial, such place was adjudged to be a parochial church (e). Hence at the first erection of these chapels, while they were designed to continue in subjection to the mother church, express care was taken at the ordination of them, that there should be no allowance of font or bells, or anything that might be to the prejudice of the old church (f). And when any subordinate chapel did assume the liberty of burial, it was always judged an usurpation upon the rights of the mother church, to which the dead bodies of all inhabitants ought to be duly brought, and there alone interred. And if any doubt arose whether a village were within the bounds of such a parish, no argument could more directly prove the affirmative than evidence given that the inhabitants of that village did bury their dead in the churchyard of the said parish (g).

How different from chapels of ease.

A perpetual curacy or chapel has all sorts of parochial rights, as a clerk, wardens, &c., the right of performing divine service, baptism, sepulture, &c., and the curate has small tithes and surplice fees; but chapels of ease are merely ad libitum, and have no parochial rights; therefore, on the union of the two parishes, one is frequently deemed the parish church, and other as a parochial chapel, but not as a chapel of ease (h).

Sir George Lee, however, in Line v. Harris (i), says, a chapel's "having sacraments and burials did not make it cease to be such," i. e., a chapel of ease; and he cites with approval the definition, that a "chapel of ease is built for the ease of one or more of the parishioners that dwell too far from the church, and is served by some inferior curate provided at the charge of the rector" (k).

Evidence of chapelry being parochial.

The performance of baptisms, marriages, and burials in a chapel existing from time immemorial might possibly be presumptive evidence of consecration, and of a composition; aliter, as to a chapel the origin of which is ascertained (l).

It has been decided that where parishioners dwelling within a chapelry contribute to the repairs of the parish church, it is strong but not conclusive evidence that the chapel is a chapel of ease to the inhabitants of the parish, and not a separate and distinct chapelry (m).

a legal parochial chapelry—it was holden, that the statement of a witness, that he had heard from a former incumbent that the people of four townships and another parish came to the chapelry, was admissible in evidence, inasmuch as the rights of the chapel in question were sufficiently of a public nature to make reputation admissible. So, a case stated by a deceased incumbent for the opinion of a proctor, with his opinion thereon, was holden admissible, on the same principle as the statement of a deceased occupier, which qualifies his estate, is admissible. It was holden, also, that the answer of the incumbent and other clergymen, to questions sent by the bishop, for the information of the governors of Queen's Anne's bounty, at the time an augmentation was made, was admissible, as being in the nature of an inquisition on a public matter (n).

The law as to the exemption—or otherwise—of inhabitants of chapels from contributing to the repair of the parish church, and the case of Ball v. Cross (o) on this subject, have been already given (p).

Position of inhabitants of chapelry.

The Church Building Acts contain provisions that chapels of ease which have reputed townships or districts attached to them may, on being properly endowed, with consent of bishop, patron, and incumbent of parish, be made independent of the parish church, and their township or district may be made a parish (q). Chapels of ease may also be built under the authority of these acts (r).

Provisions in Church Building Acts.

It is said by Rolle, that if the question be in the Court Christian, whether a church be a parish church or only a chapel of ease, a prohibition lies (s).

Church or chapel, how to be tried.

And Dr. Watson says, if the defendant in a quare impedit shall plead that the same is a chapel and no church, this matter shall be tried by the country, and not by the bishop (t).

But Dr. Gibson says, that a chapel or no chapel ought to be tried by the spiritual judge, for a chapel is spiritual as well as a church; and when two spiritual things are to be tried, no prohibition shall be granted; in like manner, as it goes not, when a modus is pleaded in a dispute between two spiritual persons, to wit, the rector and vicar, about tithes (u).

But he says, if a question is depending as to the limits thereof, whether a chapel of ease or a parish church, or whether a chapel of ease or a parochial chapel, the same shall be tried, as to the limits, in the temporal court (x).

If a person be patron of a chapel that has parochial right, and presents thereto by the name of a church, and the presentees have been received thereto, as to a church; it is no longer a chapel but a church; and if a disturbance happen upon any avoidance thereof, the patron may have his quare impedit as to a church (y).

But on the contrary, a presentation to a church by the name of a chapel will not make it cease to be a church; for the case was, that in the time of Henry III. there were two rectories, A. and B., and the patron of A. purchased the rectory of B. After which, constantly, presentations were to the church of A. with the chapel of B. And it was resolved, that although the patron of A. ever after the said purchase, had presented only unto the said church of A. with the chapel of B., yet B. notwithstanding remained in right a church, and the freehold of it in suspense (z).

Government thereof.

Chapels of ease have the like officers for the most part as churches have, distinguished only in name (a).

Their endowment.

And are in like manner visitable by the ordinary (b).

When by long usage and custom parochial bounds became fixed and settled, many of the parishes were still so large that some of the remoter hamlets found it very inconvenient to be at so great a distance from the church; and therefore for the relief and ease of such inhabitants, this new method was practised of building private oratories or chapels in any such remote hamlet, in which a capellane was sometimes endowed by the lord of the manor or some other benefactor, but generally maintained by a stipend from the parish priest, to whom all the rights and dues were entirely preserved (c).

Consents requisite for their erection.

But in order to authorize the erecting of a chapel of ease, the joint consent of the diocesan, the patron, and the incumbent (if the church was full) were (and as it seems still are) all required (d).

By a constitution of Othobon, when a private person desires to have a chapel of his own, and the bishop for just cause has granted the same, the said bishop has always provided that this be done without prejudice to the right of any other; "agreeably whereunto we do injoin, that the chaplains ministering in such chapels, which have been granted saving the right of the mother church, shall render to the rector of the said church all oblations and other things, which, if the said chaplains did not receive them, ought to accrue to the said mother church: and if any shall neglect or refuse so to do, he shall incur the pain of suspension until he shall conform" (e).

But this is to be understood, unless a special privilege or ancient custom allows the contrary; or unless by composition with the rector of the mother church, he retains yearly the fruits arising within the chapelry, paying for the same something in certain to the said rector (f).

For a chapel may prescribe for tithes against the mother church. Thus in Sayer v. Bland (g), when the parson libelled for tithes against an inhabitant of a hamlet where was a chapel of ease, and it was showed on the other side, that time out of mind the said hamlet had found a clerk to do divine service in the said chapel, with part of their tithes, and (what was an usual composition upon the erection of a chapel) paid a certain sum of money to the parson and his predecessors for all tithes; the prescription was holden to be good, and a prohibition was granted (h).

Chapel may prescribe for tithes against mother church.

And at the consecration of a chapel, there was often some fixed endowment given to it, for its more light and easy dependence on the mother church: in some places being endowed with lands or tithes, and in some places by voluntary contributions (i).

Yet, nevertheless, at the first there were very many signs of the dependence of chapels on the mother church; of which the prime and most effectual was the payment of tithes and offerings, and all profits whatsoever, to the incumbent of the mother church. And therefore when such chapels were first allowed, a particular reserve was always made, that such a new foundation should be no prejudice to the parish priest and church. The constitutions of Egbert, archbishop of York, in the year 750, take care that churches of ancient institution should not be deprived of tithes or any other rights, by giving or allotting any part to new oratories. The same was also provided in council under King Ethelred, by the advice of his two archbishops, Alpheg and Wulstan. Which constitution is also found in an elder council of Mentz; and in the imperial capitularies. And by the laws of King Edgar, made about the year 970, it was ordained, that every man should pay his tithes to the caldan mynstre, to the elder or mother church. Only if a thain or lord should have within his own see a church, with a burial place, (that is, a parochial chapel,) he might give a third part of his tithes to it; but if it had no privilege of burial, (that is, if it were a bare appendant chapel,) then the law was, to maintain the priest out of his nine parts, that is, purely at his own charge, without laying any part of the burden on the priest of the parish church (k).

Dependence of chapels on the mother church.

Another mark of dependence on the mother church was this: The inhabitants of the village, which was thus accommodated with a chapel, were upon some festivals to repair to the mother church, as an expression of duty and obedience to it. This practice was enjoined by the 31st canon of the Council of Agatha, and recommended by a decree of Gratian, and obtained as a custom in this kingdom. Yea, when chapels were first allowed to our colleges in Oxford, it was generally provided, that such liberty should be no prejudice to the parish church; and that the scholars of every such house should frequent the said parochial church in the greater solemnities of the year. Which custom still prevails at Lincoln college, where the rector and fellows on Michaelmas-day go in their respective habits to the church of St. Michael, and on the day of All Saints to the church of All Hallows (l).

Nor did the inhabitants of any village so privileged with a chapel barely visit the mother church, and join in the divine service; but as a farther sign of subjection, they made their oblations, and paid some accustomed dues at those solemn seasons. This was sometimes done upon every one of the three greater festivals of Christmas, Easter, and Whitsunday. Sometimes those offerings were made only on the day of the dedication of the mother church. At other times and places, these solemn oblations were made only at Whitsuntide, and this chiefly in cathedral and conventual churches, where, among all parish churches that were appropriated to them, or of their patronage, the priests and people came in solemn procession within the week of Pentecost, and brought their usual offerings. Whereupon we may fairly presume, that this old custom gave birth and name to the pentecostals or Whitsun-contributions that were allotted to the bishops (m).

It was a farther honour done to mother churches, that all the hamlets and distant villages of a large parish, made one of their annual processions to the parochial church, with flags and streamers, and other ensigns of joy and triumph. This custom might possibly after the Conquest be introduced by the Normans; for among the ecclesiastical constitutions made in Normandy in the year 1080, it is decreed, that once in a year about Pentecost, the priests and capellanes should come with their people in a full procession to the mother church, and for every house should offer on the altar a wax taper to enlighten the church, or something of like value (n).

Submission of the curate of a chapel.

Moreover, the capellane or curate of a chapel was to be bound by an oath of due reverence and obedience to the rector or vicar of the mother church (o).

Repairs of.

Payments of rates for chapels as well as for churches cannot now be enforced by law (p). The old law was:—

The repairs of a chapel were to be made by rates on the land-owners within the chapelry, in the same manner as the repairs of a church, and such rates were to be enforced by ecclesiastical authority (q).

(q) Gibs. p. 209.

And there were to be the like appeals to the ordinary for unequal assessments. But all this must be intended of ancient chapels, and where this course had been used; for if there be land given for the repair of them, or any land or estate charged by prescription to the repairs of them, then the custom must be observed (r).

The nature of unconsecrated proprietary chapels was discussed in the two cases of Moysey v. Hillcoat (s) and Hodgson v. Dillon (t), already referred to. They are anomalies unknown to the ecclesiastical constitution of this kingdom, and can possess no parochial rights. The substance of the former case was as follows: a chapel being built shortly before 1735 by private subscription, and the subscribers agreeing out of the pew-rents to pay the rector of the parish a yearly stipend for performing divine service, a licence was obtained from the bishop to the rector and his successors, who from time to time performed therein parochial duties; but there being no proof of consecration, nor of any composition between the patron, incumbent, and ordinary, such chapel was holden merely proprietary, and it was decided that the minister, nominated by the rector of the parish, could not perform parochial duties therein, nor distribute the alms collected at the Lord's Supper (u). The case of Hodgson v. Dillon decided that the bishop has the power of revoking absolutely and discretionally licences to officiate in unconsecrated chapels.

It should seem that it is at any time competent to the proprietors of an unconsecrated chapel to convert it to secular purposes (x).

It was decided in the case of Bosanquet v. Heath (y), that the proprietor of a licensed chapel retains his right of property in the chapel, and may refuse to admit any person during the celebration of divine service, even the churchwarden of the parish in which the chapel is situate.

SECT. 2.—Who may nominate to Chapels.

The cure of chapels of ease, in many places, is to be performed by those that have the cure of souls in the parish (z).

And in such case the incumbent of the mother church being bound to find a chaplain there, may himself serve in the chapel as well as his curate or chaplain (a).

Custom as to nomination.

By agreement (of the bishop, patron, and incumbent) the inhabitants may have a right to elect and nominate a capellane. Otherwise, the ancient custom was, that he was either arbitrarily appointed by the vicar; or by him nominated to the rector and convent, whose approbation did admit him; or was nominated by the inhabitants (as founders and patrons) to the vicar, and by him presented to the ordinary; for custom herein was different: sometimes a capellane was to be presented by the patron of the church to the vicar, and by him to the arch-deacon, who was then obliged to admit him; at other times the lord of the manor did present a fit person to the appropriators, who, without delay, were to give admission to the person so presented (b).

Incumbent's right to nominate or veto.

Where there is no custom resting upon a lawful basis, the result of the cases is (as it seems to the Editor), that the incumbent of the parish has a right to nominate the clerk who is to serve a chapel of ease, but that if it be not a chapel of ease, his only right is of veto, relying on the general law which gives him a right to prohibit other clergy from officiating in his parish (c).

In Dixon v. Kershaw (d), Lord Northington says: "It is undoubted law, that whenever a chapel of ease is evicted, the incumbent of the mother church is entitled to nominate the minister, unless there is a special agreement to the contrary which gives a compensation to the incumbent of the mother church. A mere arbitrary agreement between parson, patron, and ordinary, without such a compensation, will not be supported." Lord Tenterden remarks on this proposition, in Furnworth v. Bishop of Chester, as follows: "Perhaps that expression requires some qualification; and where nothing is taken from the income of the incumbent, the consent of the parson, patron, and ordinary, without a compensation, may be sufficient" (e).

"Chapels," says Sir John Nicholl, in Moysey v. Hillcoat (f), "possess no parochial rights unless acquired by composition with the patron, incumbent, and ordinary." And in Bliss v. Woods (g), the same learned judge adds, "without a provision for the indemnity or compensation of the future incumbent, perhaps in all cases,—certainly if his pecuniary rights and interests are to be in any manner affected."

Incumbent can forbid stranger from officiating.

It has been already said, that there is no general principle of ecclesiastical law more firmly established than this: that it is not competent to any clergyman to officiate in any church or chapel within the limits of a parish without the consent of the incumbent.

(g) 3 Hagg. Eccl. p. 511.

Sir John Nicholl says (h), that the incumbent of a parish has a right to perform divine service in any consecrated building within the parish; and "I apprehend that by law no persons can procure divine service to be administered without the consent of the incumbent and the licence of the bishop (to which, in some instances, must be added the consent of the patron),—and that the person officiating without such consent is liable to ecclesiastical censures" (i).

In McAllister v. Bp. of Rochester (k), it was holden that while the incumbent was entitled to forbid the officiating in his parish by any other clerk, he was not entitled to nominate to any chapel, unless it was a chapel of ease.

 4.—Admission.
 5.—Official Acts of Churchwardens.

SECT. 1.—General nature of their Office (a).

IN the ancient episcopal synods, the bishops were wont to summon divers creditable persons out of every parish, to give information of and to attest the disorders of clergy and people. These were called testes synodales, and were in aftertimes a kind of impannelled jury, consisting of two, three, or more persons in every parish, who were upon oath to present all heretics and other irregular persons (b).

And these in process of time became standing officers in several places, especially in great cities, and from hence were called synods men, and by corruption sidesmen; they are also sometimes called questmen, from the nature of their office, in making inquiry concerning offences.

And these sidesmen or questmen, by canons 89 and 90 of 1603, are to be chosen yearly in Easter week, in the same manner as churchwardens (c).

But for the most part this whole office is now devolved upon the churchwardens, together with that other office which their name more properly imports, of taking care of the church and of the goods thereof, which they had of very ancient time.

Churchwardens are parochial officers for several purposes, and are to inspect the morals and behaviour of the parishioners, as well as to take care of the goods and repairs of the church (d).

Nature of churchwarden's office.

(a) Questmen, sidesmen, or assistants, are also considered in this chapter, et vide supra, Part IV., Chap. IX.

(b) Ken. Paroch. Ant. p. 649.

(c) Vide infra, pp. 1446, 1470.

(d) Governors of St. Thomas's Hospital v. Trehorne and Cove, 1 Lee, p. 129.

" . . . it is proper " (says Lord Stowell) " to consider what are their duties, and I conceive that originally they were confined to the care of the ecclesiastical property of the parish, over which they exercise a discretionary power for specific purposes. In all other respects it is an office of observation and complaint, but not of control, with respect to divine worship ; so it is laid down in Ayliffe in one of the best dissertations on the duties of Churchwardens, and in the canons of 1571. In these it is observed that Churchwardens are appointed to provide the furniture of the church, the bread and wine for the holy sacrament, the surplice and the books necessary for the performance of divine worship, and such as are directed by law ; but it is the minister who has the use. If, indeed, he errs in this respect, it is just matter of complaint, which the Churchwardens are bound to attend to, but the law would not oblige them to complain if they had a power in themselves to redress the abuse. In the service, the Churchwardens have nothing to do but to collect the alms at the offertory ; and they may refuse the admission of strange Preachers into the pulpit. For this purpose they are authorized by the canon (e), but how ? when letters of orders are produced, their authority ceases. Again, if the minister introduces any irregularity into the service, they have no authority to interfere, but they may complain to the Ordinary of his conduct. I do not say there may not be cases where they may not be bound to interpose ; in such cases they may repress, and ought to repress, all indecent interruptions of the service by others, and are the most proper persons to repress them, and they desert their duty if they do not. And if a case should be imagined in which even a preacher himself was guilty of an act grossly offensive either from natural infirmity or from disorderly habits, I will not say that the Churchwardens, and even private persons, might not interpose to preserve the decorum of public worship. But that is a case of instant and overbearing necessity, that supersedes all ordinary rules. In cases which fall short of such a singular pressure, and can await the remedy of a proper legal complaint, that is the only proper mode to be pursued by a Churchwarden—if private and decent application to the minister himself shall have failed in preventing what he deems the repetition of an irregularity at all. At the same time it is at his own peril if he makes a public complaint, or even a private complaint, in an offensive manner, of that which is no irregularity at all, and is in truth nothing more than a misrepresentation of his own " (f).

Churchwardens have only the custody of the church under the minister ; if he refuses access to the church on fitting occasions, complaint must be made to higher authorities (g). Churchwardens are the guardians or keepers of the church, and representatives of the body of the parish (h).

A parish clerk, having been dismissed from his office by the rector, though irregularly, and another appointed, the former entered the church before divine service had commenced, and took possession of the clerk's seat:—It was decided, that the churchwardens were justified in removing him from the clerk's desk, and also out of the church, if they had reasonable grounds for believing that he would offer interruption during the celebration of divine service (i).

The churchwarden of a parish has, as such, no authority in a private proprietary chapel in the parish, even though clergymen be licensed by the ordinary to officiate therein (k).

Churchwardens are a corporation for the purpose of the custody of the ornaments of the church (l).

A monition to carry into execution a report of the judicial committee, approved by her Majesty in Council, was issued against the church or chapel-wardens, to remove certain ornaments, and do other acts in the chapel, as therein directed. At the time the monition was served they had ceased to be chapel-wardens. Upon motion by the original promovent, a new monition was directed to be issued, addressed to and monishing the church or chapel-wardens, for the time being, by their official designation only, to do the acts directed by the former monition (m).

The Churchwardens of old civil parishes (n) were by statute (43 Eliz. c. 2) ex officio overseers of the poor, and divers parochial duties have been from time to time imposed by statute on them either alone or in conjunction with the overseers, which being wholly of a civil nature are not referred to in this chapter.

As regards rural parishes, these functions and duties are now taken away. It is provided by the Local Government Act, 1894 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 73), as follows:—

“Sect. 5 (2). As from the appointed day—

“(a) the churchwardens of every rural parish shall cease to be overseers, and an additional number of overseers may be appointed to replace the churchwardens; and

“(b) references in any Act to the churchwardens and overseers shall, as respects any rural parish, except so far as those references relate to the affairs of the church, be construed as references to the overseers; and Civil duties of vestry and churchwardens transferred to parish council.

"(a) The powers, duties, and liabilities of the vestry of the parish except—

"(1) as far as relates to the affairs of the church or to ecclesiastical charities; and

"(2) any power, duty, or liability transferred by this Act from the vestry to any other authority.

"(b) The powers, duties, and liabilities of the churchwardens of the parish, except as far as they relate to the affairs of the church or to charities, or are powers and duties of overseers, but inclusive of the obligations of the churchwardens with respect to maintaining and repairing closed churchyards wherever the expenses of such maintenance and repair are repayable out of the poor rate under the Burial Act, 1855 (o): Provided that such obligations shall not in the case of any particular parish be deemed to attach, unless or until the churchwardens subsequently to the passing of this Act shall give a certificate, as in the Burial Act, 1855 provided, in order to obtain the repayment of such expenses out of the poor rate.

"(c) The powers, duties, and liabilities of the overseers or of the churchwardens and overseers of the parish with respect to—

"(1) Appeals or objections by them in respect of the valuation list, or appeals in respect of the poor rate, or county rate, on the basis of the county rate; and

The same person may hold the offices of churchwarden and overseer (o). Overseers qualified;

Women may be churchwardens. and women.

All peers of the realm, by reason of their dignity, are exempted from the office of churchwarden (p). Peers exempt.

So are all clergymen, by reason of their order (q). Clergymen.

In like manner all parliament men, by reason of their privilege (r). Members of Parliament.

Sheriffs, according to the decision of Lord Stowell, in Stephen-son v. Langston (s), are exempt. Sheriffs.

If an attorney of the King's Bench were made a churchwarden of the parish, he had a writ of privilege out of the King's Bench, showing his privilege to be discharged thereof by reason of his attendance in the said court. In 14 Car. 1, Felix Wilson, being an attorney of the King's Bench, was made churchwarden of Hanwell, and he refused, and was sued in the spiritual court to take upon him the office, and a prohibition was granted. So, in like manner, in 15 Car. 1, Mr. Barber being chosen churchwarden of Aldermanbury in London, such writ was granted (t). Attorneys.

In 21 Jac. 1, Stampe, clerk of the King's Bench, was chosen churchwarden of Kingston, and had a writ of privilege to the spiritual court, requiring them not to compel him to take the oath; which writ being disobeyed, he had a prohibition (u). Clerks of Queen's Bench.

No alien born, or alien naturalized, can be a churchwarden (y). "If a parish," says Lord Stowell, "had returned a papist, Jew, or a child of ten years of age, or a person convicted of felony, I conceive the ordinary would be bound to reject" (z). In Adey v. Theobald (a), the court refused to compel a Quaker to undertake the office. Deafness is no ground of exemption (b). When a person first elected churchwarden had, on the payment of a fine, been excused, a person elected in his place, at the same vestry meeting, is bound to serve, unless some exemption is shown (c). Other cases.

No person living out of the parish, although he occupies lands within the parish, may be chosen churchwarden; because he cannot take notice of absences from church, nor disorders in it, for the due presenting of them (d). Non-residents.

But a person may be a parishioner without inhabiting a house, for he may occupy a farm (e). A partner in trade, lodging in another parish, is bound to serve in the parish wherein is his house of trade; and even a non-resident partner in a house of trade has been holden liable to serve the office of churchwarden (f).

A churchwarden who is ex officio a member of a vestry under the Metropolis Local Management Act is liable to a penalty if he sits and votes as a vestryman being a bankrupt (g). Bankrupts.

It would seem from what has been already stated that Roman Catholics, Jews, minors, aliens, and persons convicted of felony are disqualified from being churchwardens. Who disqualified.

parish, shall be chosen by the joint consent of the minister and the parishioners (i) if it may be; but if they cannot agree upon such a choice, then the minister shall choose one, and the parishioners another: and without such a joint or several choice, none shall take upon them to be churchwardens—neither shall they continue any longer than one year in that office, except perhaps they be chosen again in like manner . . .” (j).

Custom as to choice of.

The books of common law interpret this with a limitation; namely, if a custom has not been for the parishioners to choose both. In which case when two have been chosen by the parish, on pretence of custom, and one by the incumbent on the foot of this canon, and the ecclesiastical judge has refused to admit the swearing more than one of those who have been chosen by the parish, upon surmise of such custom, mandamuses have been frequently granted by the temporal courts to swear the person so elected by the parish: and also prohibitions have gone, in cases where the spiritual court has attempted to try or overrule the custom, or otherwise to do anything to the prejudice of that title. Upon which occasion it has been said, that churchwardens are lay incorporations and temporal officers; and that of common right every parish ought to choose their own churchwardens, which right is not to be overthrown but by proof of a contrary custom; and that although one is sworn, a writ may go to swear another in the same place, to the end both parties may be made capable to try the right (k).

For, by Coke, Chief Justice: “A convocation hath power to make constitutions for ecclesiastical things or persons. But they ought to be according to the law and custom of the realm. And they cannot make churchwardens that were eligible to be donative, without act of parliament; and the canon is to be intended, where the parson had nomination of a churchwarden before the making of the canon” (l).

The curate stands in the place of the parson for nominating one churchwarden (m).

In Regina v. Allen, decided in 1872, the Queen’s Bench decided that a perpetual curate would be “the minister” within the meaning of canon 89 and the custom in conformity therewith, having power, therefore, to nominate one churchwarden, when he and the parishioners cannot agree upon two persons; and that where the parishioners dispute the right of the minister to any voice in the appointment of churchwardens, he is not bound first to submit names of persons to be chosen churchwardens by agreement before he nominates his own churchwarden (n).

The mode of election is first by show of hands, and then by polling (o). When two sets of churchwardens are sworn in, the right may be settled in an action. A quo warranto will not be granted, as the office does not concern the rights or prerogatives of the crown (p). The right is now, however, most usually and conveniently tried by mandamus (q).

How election to be determined.

It has been said that the Ecclesiastical Court has no authority to determine the question of the validity of an election, and that the extent of discretion which it should exercise in swearing in or declining to swear in persons alleged to be chosen churchwardens is difficult to be defined, and that it can be tried only by an action at law (r). See, however, Anthony v. Seger (s), where the validity of the election was thus tried.

“The proper and regular mode is for the churchwardens to return two persons to succeed them: but this is not exclusive of other methods, and though customary, is not indispensably necessary, provided the court has satisfactory information of the election in any other way” (t).

To a question whether a churchwarden, in London, who had served one year as under-churchwarden, could be compelled to take the office of upper-churchwarden, the late Dr. Harris gave the following opinion:

Church-warden not generally bound to serve more than once.

“The intent of the 89th canon seems to have been to hinder the continuance of any person in the office of churchwarden for more than a year, unless under particular circumstances; and if a majority in vestry should choose the same person a second time, without good reason, and a precedent for so doing, I have no doubt but that the officer so elected would be warranted for refusing to serve, and would be excused and dismissed if prosecuted in an ecclesiastical court before the ordinary.

“But the proviso in the above-mentioned canon (except perhaps they be chosen again in like manner) must, I think, be understood to authorize a second election in special cases, and on a justifiable account; and in the present instance, as the second election of Mr. Conach for a second year is according to the constant custom of the parish of St. Ethelburg (London), I apprehend that he would be obliged to take the oath, if cited for that purpose into the ecclesiastical court by the present churchwarden, who in strictness of law does not go out of office till the new elected one has been sworn.

Customs in City of London.

Where a select vestry in the city was made up of those who had served the office of churchwarden, or had paid a fine for not serving, it was decided that a repeated re-election of the same person to the office of senior churchwarden, without any necessity for so doing, was in violation of the custom, and, consequently, void (u).

In 7 Car. 1, a prohibition was granted against the churchwarden chosen by the parson of St. Magnus nigh London Bridge, by force of the canon; upon a surmise, that the parish has a custom to choose both churchwardens (x).

And, it was said by Holt, Chief Justice: In London, generally, both the churchwardens are appointed by the parish (y).

In Warner's Case, in 17 Jac. 1, Warner, one of the churchwardens of All-Hallows, in London, prayed a prohibition; for that whereas, by the custom of the said parish, the parishioners used every year to elect one of the parish, who had borne the office of scavenger, sidesman, or constable, to be churchwarden; and that every year one who had been so elected churchwarden, was to continue a year longer, and to be the upper-churchwarden, and another was to be chosen to him, who is called the under-churchwarden, that such a choice being made in that parish of the said Warner to be churchwarden, the parson notwithstanding that election nominated one Carter to be churchwarden, and procured him to be sworn in the Ecclesiastical Court, and denied the said Warner to be churchwarden according to the election of the parishioners; and this by colour of the late canon, that the parson should have the election of one of the churchwardens; and this being against the custom, a prohibition was prayed, and a precedent shown in the common bench, in Easter term of 5 Jac. 1, for the parishioners of Walbrook, in London, where such a prohibition was granted; for it being a special custom, the canons cannot alter it, especially in London, where the parson and churchwardens are a corporation to purchase and demise their lands; and if every parson might have election of one churchwarden, without the assent of the parishioners, they might be much prejudiced thereby (z).

But although the greatest part of the parishes in London choose both the churchwardens by custom; yet in all the new erected parishes the canon takes place (unless the act of parliament, in virtue of which any church was erected, shall have specially provided that the parishioners shall choose both); inasmuch as no custom can be pleaded in such new parishes (a).

the two old churchwardens the other: but it went no further. In this case the two churchwardens could not agree, so the one presents Berwick, and the parishioners at large choose Catten. It was insisted for Berwick, that his case was like that of coparceners, where if they disagree, the ordinary may admit the presentee of which he will, except the eldest alone presents. On the other side it was said, that the cases widely differed; for in the case of a presentation the ordinary has a power to refuse, but he has not so in the case of churchwardens, for they are a corporation at common law, and more temporal than spiritual officers. And a case was cited to have been adjudged in the King's Bench, where, to a mandamus to swear in a churchwarden, the ordinary returned that he was a very unfit person; but a peremptory mandamus was granted, because the ordinary was not a judge in that case. And the court held, that by this disagreement the custom was laid out of the case; and then they must resort to the canon: under which, Catten being duly elected, they decreed for him (b).

The King v. Marsh, is a decision which shows that the custom in the parish of Berkeley in Gloucestershire was to have four churchwardens elected by the inhabitants of each tithing (c).

The King v. Marsh.

In Bremner v. Hull, the parish of Prestwich, in the county of Lancaster, formerly consisted of six several townships or hamlets, viz., Prestwich, Unsworth, Great and Little Heaton, Tongecum-Alkrington, Outwood, and Whitefield, each of which had its own churchwarden, and collected its own church rates, which afterwards formed a common fund for the parish. In 1848 Whitefield was, by order in council, created a separate rectory, and thenceforth ceased to form part of the parish of Prestwich, or to furnish a churchwarden, or to contribute any rates thereto.

Bremner v. Hull.

The evidence of the custom as to the appointment of churchwardens was as follows:—In the township of Prestwich, the outgoing churchwarden, either orally or in writing, presented to the rector the names of two persons (one of whom might be himself), of whom the rector chose one to be churchwarden for the ensuing year; in each of the other hamlets or townships the selection of the persons submitted to the rector's choice was made at a meeting of the ratepayers of the hamlet or township. As to Prestwich, this course was not always strictly adhered to; the churchwarden for the time being was sometimes, when circumstances rendered it convenient, requested by the rector to continue in office for another year.

(b) 1 Stra. p. 145. In the printed Catalogues of Processes in the High Court of Delegates, No. 808, is the following notice of this case, which was appealed to that court from York. "In 1718, Catton v. Berwick:

Upon a special case, in which it was agreed that the court should draw inferences of fact: It was holden, that the custom was valid and sufficiently proved, notwithstanding the occasional deviations; and that the severance of the hamlet of Whitefield from the rest of the parish of Prestwich, did not affect the validity of the ancient custom (d).

Declarations of a deceased rector were received as evidence of the custom (d).

Green v. The Queen.

In Green v. The Queen (e), the House of Lords, reversing the decision of the Exchequer Chamber and restoring that of the Queen's Bench, decided that a private act of parliament creating the parish of March had destroyed the old custom in the former township or hamlet of March and placed the election of churchwardens in the usual hands, the rector and parishioners.

The Vicar of St. Sepulchre v. Churchwardens of St. Sepulchre.

A case is reported as The Vicar of St. Sepulchre v. Churchwardens of St. Sepulchre, Middlesex (f), which shows that this parish, which is partly in the City of London and partly in Middlesex, has five churchwardens, three for the City and two for the county part of the parish.

Appointment by lord of manor.

In some places, the lord of the manor prescribes for the appointment of churchwardens: and this shall not be tried in the ecclesiastical court, although it be a prescription of what appertains to a spiritual thing (g).

Where no churchwardens are appointed.

In Stutter v. Freston (h), in 3 Geo. 1, a prohibition was granted to the spiritual court, where it was libelled against the defendant, for not appearing to take upon him the office of churchwarden, though thereunto appointed by the ordinary. And it was holden, that although the parishioners and parson neglect for ever so long to choose churchwardens, yet the ordinary has no jurisdiction; for churchwardens were a corporation at common law, and they are different from questmen, who were the creatures of the Reformation, and came in by the canon law. The canons say, that churchwardens shall be chosen by the parson and parishioners, and if they disagree, then one by the parson and the other by the parishioners; and otherwise they shall not be.

Status of churchwarden ceasing to reside in parish.

It seems that a churchwarden who, during the continuance of his office, ceases to reside in the parish, does not ipso facto cease to be churchwarden, although it is a good ground for appointing another in his place (i).

Holding office primâ facie proof of Proof that a party holds the office of churchwarden is primâ facie evidence of his having been lawfully appointed, even where the question turns on his title to the possession of land in his capacity of such churchwarden (k).

It remains to notice the statutory provisions as to the appointment of churchwardens in new parishes formed under the Church Building and New Parishes Acts (l).

By 58 Geo. 3, c. 45, s. 73, "Two fit and proper persons shall be appointed to act as churchwardens for every church or chapel built or appropriated under the provisions of this act, at the usual period of appointing parish officers in every year, and shall be chosen, one by the incumbent of the church or chapel for the time being, and the other by the inhabitant householders entitled to vote in the election of churchwardens, residing in the district to which the church or chapel shall belong, and of any extra parochial place by such inhabitant householders as would be entitled to vote in the election of churchwardens if such extra parochial place had been a parish; and the two persons, when so elected churchwardens, shall appear and be admitted and sworn according to law . . . and the persons so to be appointed or chosen churchwardens shall continue in their said office until others shall be chosen in like manner in their stead . . ."

It has been holden in the case of Regina v. Barrow that the vestry meeting for the purpose of choosing a churchwarden under this act need not be "convened with the formalities required by 58 Geo. 3, c. 69, s. 1 (m), as the duties and powers of such churchwarden are merely ecclesiastical."

By 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 38, s. 16, "Two fit and proper persons shall be appointed to act as churchwardens for every church or chapel built or appropriated under the provisions of this act, at the usual period of appointing parish officers in every year, and shall be chosen, one by the incumbent of the church or chapel for the time being, and the other by the renters of pews in such church or chapel; and the two persons when so elected churchwardens, shall appear, and be admitted and sworn according to law . . . and the persons so to be appointed or chosen churchwardens shall continue in their said office until others shall be chosen in like manner in their stead . . . " (n).

By sect. 25, where parishes are formed under sect. 23 by separating chapelry districts with ancient chapels of ease from the mother parish, "two fit and proper persons shall be chosen yearly at the usual time of choosing parish officers, out of the inhabitants of such new parish so constituted, being members of the established church, to act as churchwardens of the said parish, one to be chosen by the minister, and one by the persons being churchwarden.

By 6 & 7 Vict. c. 37, s. 17, “in every case of a district so becoming a new parish, two fit and proper persons, being members of the united church of England shall, within twenty-one days from the consecration of the church thereof, be chosen churchwardens for such new parish, one being chosen by the perpetual curate thereof, and the other by the inhabitants residing therein and having a similar qualification to that which would entitle inhabitants to vote at the election of churchwardens for the principal parish as aforesaid, or the majority of such inhabitants, and such election shall take place at a meeting to be summoned in such manner in all respects as such perpetual curate shall direct; and such persons shall continue such churchwardens until the next usual period of appointing parish officers following their appointment; and at the like time in every year two such persons shall thenceforward be chosen by the perpetual curate for the time being and the inhabitants assembled as aforesaid; and every person so chosen as aforesaid shall be duly admitted, and shall do all things pertaining to the office of churchwardens as to ecclesiastical matters in the said new parish; Provided always, that nothing herein contained shall render any such churchwardens liable or competent to perform the duties of overseer of the poor in respect of such their office of churchwardens”

c. 70.

By 8 & 9 Vict. c. 70, s. 6 “. . . In all cases not otherwise expressly provided for two fit persons shall be annually appointed churchwardens for the church of every district chapelry or consolidated chapelry already or hereafter to be formed under the provisions of the hereinbefore recited acts or any of them, or this act, such persons residing within the district chapelry or consolidated chapelry; and the first appointment of two such persons shall take place . . . with respect to a chapelry district or consolidated chapelry to be hereafter formed as aforesaid within two calendar months after the formation of the same; and the first appointment of such persons, in either of such cases, shall take place at a meeting of the minister of such church and the householders of the district, to be summoned in all respects as such minister shall direct, and every subsequent appointment shall take place at the usual period of appointing parish officers, at a meeting to be summoned in all respects as if such district were a parish and such meeting were a parish vestry meeting; and in each such case one of such persons shall be chosen by the then incumbent or minister serving such church, and the other by the householders, or the majority of such householders, residing in such district chapelry or consolidated chapelry; and the two persons, when so appointed and elected churchwardens, shall appear and be admitted according to law . . . and the persons so to be appointed and chosen churchwardens shall continue in their said office until others shall be appointed and chosen in like manner in their stead."

Sect. 7. ". . . In all cases not otherwise expressly provided for, two fit and proper persons shall be annually appointed churchwardens for any new church (without a district) already built or hereafter to be built upon a site whereof her Majesty's said commissioners shall have accepted the conveyance, under the provisions of the hereinbefore recited acts (g); and the first appointment of such persons shall take place within two calendar months . . . after the consecration of a church to be so hereafter built; and the next appointment of such persons, in either of such cases, shall take place at the next usual period of appointing parish officers; and in each such case one of such persons shall be chosen by the minister of such church, and the other by the renters of pews therein, or by the majority thereof, at any meeting to be summoned, in all respects as the minister of such church, or (if there shall be no minister) as the churchwardens going out of office, shall direct, and the two persons, when so appointed and elected churchwardens, shall appear and be admitted according to law . . . and the persons so to be appointed and chosen churchwardens shall continue in their said office until others shall be appointed and admitted in like manner in their stead: provided always, that if there are no rented pews in such church the minister of such church shall appoint both churchwardens: provided also, that if such new church is made the church of a distinct and separate parish, district parish, district chapelry, or consolidated chapelry, the several provisions of the hereinbefore recited acts or this act touching the appointment and election of churchwardens for the same, and their powers and duties in each such case, shall thenceforth respectively apply to such church."

Appointment of churchwardens for an additional church, the site whereof has been accepted by the commissioners.

It will be observed that the qualification expressed in 58 Geo. 3, c. 45; 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 38; and 8 & 9 Vict. c. 70, is that of the persons being "fit and proper." In 6 & 7 Vict. c. 37, there is the further explicit qualification that they shall be members of the Church of England. The editor, however, cannot conceive that for so purely an ecclesiastical office any one but a member of the church would be "fit and proper."

Qualification of churchwardens under above acts.

It has been decided in the case of Reg. v. Stevens (r), that though a district of an old parish appropriated to a new church under 58 Geo. 3, c. 45, 6 & 7 Vict. c. 37, and 19 & 20 Vict. c. 104, becomes a separate parish for all ecclesiastical purposes, yet, as it remains part of the old parish as to poor and other parochial Inhabitants of new district have right to vote for churchwardens of old parish.

rates, the inhabitants of the district have a right to vote in vestry in the election of churchwardens for the old parish.

The contrary seems to have been previously holden in the case of Varty v. Nunn (s).

6 & 7 Vict.
c. 37.
8 & 9 Vict.
c. 70.

It is provided by 6 & 7 Vict. c. 37, s. 17, and 8 & 9 Vict. c. 70, s. 8, that Churchwardens under those acts shall not be Overseers of the poor.

Duty of churchwardens to be sworn.

Any person elected to be churchwarden, and refusing to take the oath according to law, may be excommunicated for such refusal; and no prohibition will lie (t).

Donative.

In Castle v. Richardson (u), in 3 Geo. 1, there was a libel in the ecclesiastical court, for not taking upon him the office of chapel-warden. The defendant pleads, that it is a donative; and thereupon moved for a prohibition. And upon debate, the same was denied; the whole court being of opinion, that though there was a difference as to the incumbent, yet as to the parish officers there was none; for they are the officers of the parish, and not of the patron of the donative.

Constitution of Boniface.

The constitution of Boniface is, "We do decree, that laymen, when inquiry shall be made by the prelates and judges ecclesiastical for correcting the sins and excesses of such as are within their jurisdiction, shall be compelled (if need be), by sentence of excommunication, to take an oath to speak the truth" (x).

Old law.

That ordinaries were empowered by the laws of the church, to require an oath of the testes synodales, appears, not only from this constitution, but also from the body of the canon law. And the same practice of administering an oath appears in the ecclesiastical records of our own church; where it is often entered, that the presenters were charged upon their consciences, to discover whatever they knew to want amendment in things and persons; and in process of time, articles of inquiry were delivered to them, upon which to ground their presentments (y).

Contentions as to form of oath.

But as contests grew between the two jurisdictions, ecclesiastical and temporal, this was charged upon the ordinaries and other ecclesiastical judges as an incroachment, that they inserted divers things in their articles of visitation, which were not of spiritual cognizance; and that by requiring an oath from the churchwardens to present according to those articles, they did in consequence require them to take an oath, which by law they could not and ought not to perform. Upon this foundation, prohibitions were applied for and obtained, for removing those matters from the spiritual to the temporal courts. Until at length, the contests of this kind multiplying, and causing great and frequent troubles, both to the spiritual and temporal courts; an oath of a more general form was agreed on by the civilians and common lawyers, by which the churchwardens bound themselves, instead of presenting such things as were contained in the book of articles, to present such things as to their knowledge were presentable by the laws ecclesiastical of this realm (z).

Which oath of the churchwardens was this:

“ You shall swear, truly and faithfully to execute the office of a churchwarden within your parish, and according to the best of your skill and knowledge present such things and persons, as to your knowledge are presentable by the laws ecclesiastical of this realm : So help you God, and the contents of this book ” (a).

Churchwarden's oath or declaration.

And the sidesman's oath, agreed upon in like manner by the civilians and common lawyers, was as follows:

Sidesman's oath or declaration.

“ You shall swear, that you will be assistant to the churchwardens, in the execution of their office, so far as by law you are bound : So help you God ” (b).

The old oath of the churchwardens being thus modelled, was allowed and confirmed two several times in the Court of King's Bench; once in the 25th, and again in the 29th of King Charles II. : before both which judgments, it had been expressly declared in the same court, that though some things might be inserted in the articles of visitation, which were not properly of ecclesiastical cognizance; yet if the oath was conceived and tendered in those general terms, the churchwardens could not legally refuse it: inasmuch as the articles were offered only by way of direction and charge; and by the tenor of the oath, the ecclesiastical laws, and not the articles, were now become the legal rule and measure of their duty (c).

Form of oath confirmed.

And now by 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 62, s. 9, a declaration that he will faithfully and diligently perform the duties of his office is substituted for the oath in the case both of the churchwardens and the sidesmen, and no churchwarden or sidesman shall be compelled to take any oath on quitting office.

Rex v. Rice.

In Rex v. Rice (e), in 8 & 9 Will. 3, a mandamus was directed to the Archdeacon of St. Asaph, to swear and admit a person duly elected by the parish, according to the custom, to be churchwarden. To which it was returned, that he was a person unfit, being a poor dairyman, and the like. And the question was, whether the archdeacon can refuse to swear and admit the churchwarden so elected, for any cause whatsoever. And it was resolved, that he has no such power: for the churchwarden is an officer of the parish; and his misbehaviour will prejudice them, and not the archdeacon; for he has not only the custody, but also the property, of the goods belonging to the church, and may maintain actions for them; and for that reason it is an office merely temporal, and the archdeacon is only a ministerial officer. And therefore a peremptory mandamus was granted.

Which same case, as it seems, is reported by Salkeld under the name of Morgan v. The Archdeacon of Cardigan (f), as follows: Mandamus to the archdeacon, to swear a churchwarden, being duly elected. The archdeacon made this return, that he was a poor dairyman, and a servant, and unable and unfit to execute the office. And thereupon a peremptory mandamus was awarded: for the churchwarden is a temporal officer; he has the property and custody of the parish goods; and as it is at the peril of the parishioners, so they may choose and trust whom they think fit; and the archdeacon has no power to elect, or control their election.

Rex v. Simpson.

In Rex v. Simpson (g), in 11 Geo. 1, a mandamus to the Archdeacon of Colchester, to swear Rodney Fane into the office of churchwarden; he returns, that before the coming of the writ, he received an inhibition from the Bishop of London, with a signification that he had taken upon himself to act in the premises. But by the court: The return is ill. It does not appear, that the town of Colchester is within the diocese of the bishop who inhibits; besides, the archdeacon is but a ministerial officer, and is obliged to do the act, whether it be of any validity or not. And a peremptory mandamus was granted.

Rex v. White.

In Rex v. White (h), in the same year, to a mandamus directed to the archdeacon to swear a churchwarden, he returned, that he was not elected. Upon opening which Mr. Justice Fortescue said, that it was settled, and had been often ruled, that the archdeacon could not judge of the election; and therefore this return was ill, whereupon a peremptory mandamus was granted. But note (says Lord Raymond) it was certainly wrong; for the return was a good return, and has often been made to such mandamus, and actions brought upon the return and tried.

Rex v. Harwood.

In Rex v. Harwood (i), in the same year, to a mandamus directed to the defendant, Dr. Harwood, as commissary of the dean and chapter of St. Paul's, commanding him to swear William Folbigg, one of the churchwardens of the parish of St. Giles, Cripplegate, London; the defendant returned, that he was not elected. And it was insisted on the behalf of Folbigg, that the return was ill; that the archdeacon, who was only to obey the writ, could not judge of the election: and therefore upon such a return to such a writ, a peremptory mandamus was granted last Michaelmas term, in the case of Rex v. White. That the archdeacon could not judge of the qualities of a person chosen by the parish, was cited Rex v. Rice. But Raymond, Chief Justice, and Reynolds, Justice, held the return to be good. But upon the importunity of the counsel for Folbigg, and pressing the authority of that case of Rex v. White, and no counsel for the defendant appearing, a rule was made for a peremptory mandamus unless cause showed. And at another day, the counsel for the defendant coming to show cause against the rule, it was discharged. But the court not being unanimous, it was ordered to come on again in the paper. But Lord Raymond (who reports this case) says, he never heard that it was stirred again. But there can be no doubt (he says) but such return is good.

And the proper distinction, as to this point, seems to be taken in the case of Reg. v. Twitty, in 1 Anne (k). Mandamus to swear a churchwarden, suggesting that he was duly elected. The return was, that he was not duly elected. It was objected, that this was not a good return. But by Holt, Chief Justice: Where the writ is, to swear one duly elected, there a return that he was not duly elected, is a good return, for it is an answer to the writ; but where it is to swear one elected churchwarden, there a return that he is not duly elected is naught, because it is out of the writ and evasive.

In Hubbard v. Sir Henry Penrice (l), in 19 Geo. 2, to a mandamus to swear the plaintiff churchwarden of Heston in Middlesex, the defendant returned, that he was not duly elected. And in the course of the trial, the question was, where the common right of choosing churchwardens rests. The plaintiff insisted, it was in the parishioners at large as to both the churchwardens, and would therefore have left it upon the defendant, to show a custom or right in the parson to name one. The defendant, on the contrary, insisted, that of common right it was in the parson and parishioners, and therefore it lay upon the plaintiff to prove a custom in the parishioners to choose both. And of this opinion was Lee, Chief Justice, and that though there are some dictums to the contrary, yet they had never been regarded. The plaintiff therefore went on to prove a custom to choose both by the parishioners, but failed in it; it appearing, that though the parson had generally left it to the parishioners, yet he had sometimes interfered. Lee, Chief Justice, likewise held, that a curate stood in the place of the parson, for the purpose of nominating one churchwarden (l).

Rex v. Harris.

In Rex v. Harris (m), in 3 Geo. 3, a mandamus was directed to Dr. Harris, commissary of the consistorial and episcopal court of the Bishop of Winchester for the parts of Surrey, to admit and swear Henry Griffith and Thomas Garner, churchwardens of the parish of St. Olave, Southwark. And a like mandamus was also directed to him to admit and swear another set of churchwardens into the same office. Dr. Harris returns, that a cause was depending before him, in which it was disputed, which of the two sets of churchwardens had been duly elected; and till that is determined, he cannot admit either one set or the other. By Lord Mansfield and the court: The return is bad; the commissary cannot try the right. He ought to obey both writs, and it is of no prejudice to either party. It was proposed by the court, and consented to by the parties, to try the right on a feigned issue; and the execution of the peremptory mandamus to be suspended till after the trial, and then the peremptory mandamus to go to swear in those that shall prevail upon the trial.

Lord Stowell's
opinion.

But hear Lord Stowell (n). "A contrary position has indeed been intimated, and it has been said there would be ground for a mandamus—but inaccurately; for offices the most ministerial leave a discretion not to join in an illegal act; and if a parish had returned a papist, or a Jew, or a child of ten years of age, or a person convicted of felony, I conceive the Ordinary would be bound to reject. . . . And though it is the duty of the Ordinary not to take slight exceptions, he is bound, I conceive, to take care that an election, in his opinion void in itself, should have no legal effect, and this is a duty which he owes to the parish and the general law of the country."

Rex v. Williams.

In The King v. Williams, in 1828 (o), on a mandamus to the official and commissary of the parish of Hornchurch and liberty of Havering-atte-Bower in the county of Essex, to swear and admit into the office of churchwarden James Meakins, the mandamus reciting that he had been duly nominated, elected, and chosen into the place and office of churchwarden of the said parish. The official returned, that Meakins was not duly elected into the place and office of churchwarden. The court held the return to be good.

Bayley, J., referred to Rex v. White (p), Rex v. Harwood (q), Rex v. Ward (r), and Reg. v. Twitty (s), and said that these authorities show that the return in the present case is good.

Littledale, J., said: "The commissary has a right to say by the return, that he is not bound to do the thing which he is required to do by the mandamus. Here he does say so, by showing that the party was not duly elected."

Parke, J., said: "The commissary may deny any material allegation in the writ. He cannot exercise any judicial authority, but he may inquire whether the party has been duly elected, otherwise he would be bound to admit any person who presents himself for admission, even if he knew the fact to be that such person was never elected. The party who obtains the mandamus states the foundation of his right in the writ. The commissary may deny it. In this case he has done it, by showing that the party who seeks to be admitted was not duly elected. The return, therefore, is sufficient" (t).

In practice (as the editor knows) the ordinary does decide many disputed elections, though it may be asserted that his decision is not conclusive.

Where there is a prima facie case of an improper election, the High Court of Justice will award a mandamus to elect a churchwarden (u); but apparently not now without a previous rule to show cause (x).

Where improper election.

SECT. 5.—Official Acts of Churchwardens.

It has been already stated that upon the vacancy of a benefice the sequestration of the revenues is usually committed by the Diocesan Court to the churchwardens (y).

On vacancy of benefice.

The authority of the churchwardens to keep order in church and to remove offenders, or give them into custody, has already been stated in the chapter on Liturgy and Ritual, section as to attendance on, and behaviour at, public worship (z).

To keep order.

Their power and duty in allotting seats to the parishioners, which is perhaps a branch of the same authority, has also been mentioned in the chapter on Churches and Churchyards, section as to church seats (a).

To seat parishioners.

For these purposes they can, as has been already stated, seat certain classes of the congregation in particular places of the church (b); but they cannot exclude persons altogether from the church, because they anticipate that there will not be room (c).

them, and the fees to be paid, have been mentioned in the chapter on Visitations (d).

Under Public Worship Regulation Act.

Under the Public Worship Regulation Act (37 & 38 Vict. c. 85), s. 8, a churchwarden has a special status as a complainant (e).

As to repairs of chancel and
church rates.

The churchwardens are the appropriate persons to compel a lay rector to repair the chancel (f), and where church rates are still made to levy a church rate (g).

As to riots.

They receive compensation for injury to a church under 49 & 50 Vict. c. 38 (h).

As to vestries.

Their power to call a vestry, and in relation to a vestry will be mentioned in the next chapter.

To collect
pew-rents,
when lawful.

Under the Church Building Acts, where pew rents are imposed, they collect them (i).

Churchwardens a corporation.

The churchwardens are so far incorporated by law, as to sue for the goods of the church, and to bring an action of trespass for them; and also to purchase goods for the use of the parish; but they are not a corporation in such sort as to purchase lands, or to take by grant; except in London, where they are a corporation for those purposes also (j).

And therefore, if any one give land to the parish, for the use of the church, it must not be to the churchwardens and their successors, but it should be to feoffees in trust to the use intended; which must from time to time be renewed, as the trustees die away (k).

Have property in church goods.

The property in the goods of the church—any goods dedicated to God's service in a church (l), pews, or bells (m), or bell ropes (n)—is in the churchwardens; and they may sue for such property at law (o); or, as Bishop Gibson and Sir Robert Phillimore thought, also in the Ecclesiastical Court, in which latter case they would recover the specific chattel, and not get, as at law, damages (p).

And although the churchwardens may have their action for the goods of the parish, yet they cannot dispose of them without the consent of the parish; and a gift of such goods by them, without the consent of the sidesmen or vestry, is void (q). And Prideaux thinks the ordinary's licence is necessary (r).

churchwardens.

It has been laid down as a general rule that an agreement by parish officers in the course of their official duties, which is beneficial to the parish, is binding on it and succeeding churchwardens (s). A churchwarden has no authority to pledge the credit of his co-churchwarden for the repairs of the church. If he orders such repairs, without the knowledge of the other churchwarden, he will be liable individually (t).

The release of one churchwarden is in no case a bar to the action of the other; for what they have is to the use of the parish (u).

One churchwarden cannot release.

Upon the like foundation, where an obligation is made to them and their successors, and they die, their executors shall have action, and not their successors (x).

Where lands were vested in churchwardens and overseers of a parish as a quasi corporation, and the interests of the parish required possession of land to be taken, or similar acts done, it was decided that any one of the churchwardens or overseers might do it without the concurrence of the rest (y).

Taking possession of lands.

As the churchwardens may present at visitations, as already shown (z), so also they may libel, in the spiritual courts. In 2 W. & M., Newton, one of the churchwardens of St. Botolph's, London, libelled against Quilter for stopping the church door and windows by sheds, &c., built, as he supposed, upon part of the churchyard. Upon which a prohibition was prayed, and the suggestion was, that they were not built upon any part of the churchyard, but upon a lay fee. But the court agreed, that no prohibition should be granted to any suit in the spiritual court, for any nuisance or other matter done in the churchyard, upon a suggestion that the churchyard is a lay fee; for a nuisance there is properly of ecclesiastical conusance (a).

May sue in ecclesiastical courts.

By Can. 89, already cited (b), the churchwardens or questmen shall not "continue any longer than one year in that office; except perhaps they be chosen again in like manner."

Canon 89.

How long they shall continue in office.

For although, in some places, there is but one new churchwarden yearly elected (he who was junior churchwarden before being continued of course); yet in that case the books of common law, as well as the canon, suppose a new election to be made of both (c).

But by Can. 118, the office of all churchwardens and sidesmen shall be reputed to continue until the new churchwardens that shall succeed them be sworn (d).

And it has been holden, that a churchwarden remains in office, and is liable for the non-performance of the duties thereof, until his successor has made and subscribed the declaration required by 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 62, s. 9 (e).

And although a parish prescribe to choose two churchwardens, and that the person so chosen shall continue in that office for two years; yet there is considerable authority for saying that the parish may, notwithstanding the prescription, remove such churchwardens at their pleasure, and choose new ones: for, as it is said, the parish might suffer great loss, if the churchwardens should continue so long in their office contrary to their will; for in that time they might waste all the parish goods belonging to the church (f).

By Canon.
Canon 89.

By Can. 89 of 1603, . . . "And all churchwardens at the end of their year, or within a month after at the most, shall, before the minister and the parishioners, give up a just account of such money as they have received, and also what particularly they have bestowed in reparations and otherwise for the use of the church. And last of all, going out of their office, they shall truly deliver up to the parishioners whatsoever money or other things of right belonging to the church or parish, which remaineth in their hands; that it may be delivered over by them to the next churchwardens, by bill indented" (g).

A just Account.—If the custom of the parish is, for a certain number of persons to have the government thereof, and the account is given up to them, the custom is good in law, and the account given to them is a good account (h).

By Bill indented.—Lindwood, speaking of the inventory of the goods of the church, to be delivered in writing to the archdeacon, says, "It were good that these writings should be indented, so that one part might remain with the archdeacon, and the other with the parishioners:" from whence this branch of the present canon seems to have been taken (i).

*Styrrop v.
Stoakes.*

In Styrrop v. Stoakes (k), in 3 Will. & M., it was holden, that if money be disbursed by churchwardens for repairing the church, or any thing else merely ecclesiastical, the spiritual courts shall allow their accounts: but if there be any thing else that is an agreement between the parishioners, the succeeding churchwardens may have an action of account at law, and the spiritual court in such case has not jurisdiction.

Account,
when settled,
final.

If a churchwarden in any case is maliciously sued in the spiritual court for not making up his account, and is excommunicated, when in fact it has been duly made, he may have a prohibition: and also an action upon the case will lie (l).

In Snowden v. Herring (m), in 4 Geo. 2, it was said, that where churchwardens have passed their accounts at a vestry, the spiritual court shall not afterwards proceed against them to account upon oath.

In Wainwright v. Bagshaw (n), in 7 Geo. 2, the churchwardens were cited into the Court of Lichfield to account: they pleaded that they had accounted at the vestry according to law; which was rejected; and a prohibition was granted. For the ordinary is not to take the account; he can only give a judgment that they do account; and to what purpose should they be sent back to those, who have taken their account already?

In Adams v. Rush (o), in 13 Geo. 2, the court said: "The spiritual court has no jurisdiction to settle the churchwardens' accounts." And a prohibition was granted, after sentence allowing the accounts, and an appeal to the Arches.

Power of the spiritual court as to their accounts.

The spiritual court may compel the churchwardens to deliver in their account, but cannot decide on the propriety of the charges. Therefore if they take any step after the accounts are delivered in, it is an excess of jurisdiction for which a prohibition will be granted, even after sentence (p).

And if the churchwardens have laid out the parish money imprudently and improvidently, yet if it be truly and honestly laid out, they must be reimbursed again; and the parishioners can have no remedy herein, unless some fraud or deceit be proved against them; because the parish have made them their trustees. But if they be going on in an expensive way, the parishioners may complain to the ordinary, in order to give a check to them, or to procure (Dr. Gibson says) a removal of them from their office (q).

There is no general right in parishioners to inspect the churchwardens' books. Therefore the Court of Queen's Bench refused an application for a mandamus to churchwardens to allow an inspection, where the affidavit, without showing any special ground, stated that the request for inspection had been made to the churchwardens bonâ fide, and for the purpose of enabling the applicant and other ratepayers to take part in the proceedings of the vestry (r).

SECT. 6.—Proceedings by and against Churchwardens.

Cannot bring actions after their office is expired.

In Dent v. Prudence and Bond (s), in 3 Geo. 2, before the Court of Delegates, it was adjudged that the churchwardens, Prudence and Bond, could not cite the defendant Dent into the spiritual court for nonpayment of his church rate, after their year was expired; for they can only sue in their politic capacity, and cannot institute any suit after that capacity is gone. It was agreed, that if the suit had been begun within their year, they might have proceeded in it after their year was out, this being of necessity to prevent people from delays in order to wear out the year; but in regard this suit was not commenced till the year was out, and no precedents were shown to warrant this suit, the defendant Dent was dismissed. But if the action be commenced within the year, they may proceed in it after the year (t).

But their successors must do it.

If the churchwardens for the time being neglect to bring an action for any of the goods of the church taken away, their successors may bring trespass for them in respect of their office; but then the new churchwardens must say "to the damage of the parishioners" and not of themselves, though the old churchwardens, in whose time the goods were taken away, might say either (u).

And if any of the goods of the church are detained, or not delivered by the predecessor, the successor has an action against him also (x).

Churchwardens de facto.

It is said that churchwardens de facto, although the validity of their election be doubtful, may bring an action against former churchwardens for money received to the use of the parish (y).

But churchwardens are not answerable for indiscretion, but for deceit only, if they lay out more money than is needful (z). An indictment lies against them for extortion and corruption in their office (a).

When compulsory church rates were raised, churchwardens used sometimes to take proceedings in chancery to be reimbursed expenses which they had incurred (b). But the law on this subject seems now, since church rates are no longer compulsory, obsolete and unimportant.

It has been finally settled that one churchwarden alone cannot sue in the ecclesiastical court (c). One cannot sue.

But this rule does not prevent a churchwarden from doing what any parishioner may do, that is, alone or with other parishioners applying for, or opposing the grant of, a faculty (d).

By the repealed acts 7 Jac. 1, c. 5, 21 Jac. 1, c. 12, if an action be brought by and against any churchwardens or persons called sworn men, executing the office of churchwarden, for any thing done by virtue of their office, they might plead the general issue, and give the special matter in evidence; and if a verdict was given for them, or the plaintiff should be nonsuit, or discontinue, they were to have double costs. Churchwardens seem therefore to be within the Public Authorities Protection Act (56 & 57 Vict. c. 61). Their protection by law in due execution of office.

In Kerchevel v. Smith (e), in 8 Car. 1, an action upon the case was brought against the defendants, because that they being churchwardens, presented the plaintiff falsely and maliciously, upon a pretended fame of incontinency. Upon not guilty it was found for the defendants, and moved that they might have double costs, because they were troubled and vexed for matter which did concern their office. But it was resolved it was not within the statute; for it is merely ecclesiastical; and the statute was never intended but where they shall be vexed concerning temporal matters which they do by virtue of their office, and not for presentments concerning matters of fame.

In Millar and Symes v. Palmer and Kilby (f) churchwardens were criminally proceeded against for not repairing the church. Sir H. Jenner's judgment lays down the principles which govern this subject. It was laid down as law in this and a subsequent case that the repairs must be absolutely necessary to warrant such a suit; but since the Compulsory Church Rate Abolition Act, 31 & 32 Vict. c. 109, and the principle set forth in Veley v. Pertwee (g), such a suit could not be maintained. What must be shown to justify criminal proceedings against a churchwarden.

If churchwardens misbehave themselves, it seems the parishioners may remove them (h). As soon as a churchwarden ceases to inhabit a parish, his place should be supplied (i). "Churchwardens," says Blackstone, "may not waste the church goods, but may be removed by the parish" (k): and Sir John Nicholl, in Dave v. Williams (l), says, "The power of parishioners to remove their churchwardens in case of their wasting the goods of the parish (or, it may be presumed, in case Removal of churchwardens.

of their other misbehaviour), is pretty broadly laid down in many books of authority."

The following form, taken from the Appendix of Gibson's Codex, seems to confirm this doctrine (n) :

"Suspensio Guardianorum Ecclesie pro permittendo Prædicator non licentiat' ad prædicandum."

Bishop recites that her Majesty's commissioners have suspended the church-wardens for suffering an unlicensed minister to preach.

"John, by the Providence of God Bishop of London, to all and singular parsons, vicars and curates whatsoever, within the diocese and jurisdiction of London, and especially to the parson or curate of the parish of St. Clement Danes without Temple Bar, London, sendeth greeting in our Lord God everlasting. Whereas we the said John, and the right worshipful our well beloved in Christ Mr. Valentine Dale, doctor of laws, one of the masters of the request, Sir Owen Hopton, knight, and Mr. Edward Stanhope, doctor of law, our chancellor, our colleagues, her majestie's high commissioners for causes ecclesiastical, rightly and justly proceeding, have suspended John Ceely and Christopher Fisher, churchwardens of the parish church of St. Clement Danes without Temple Bar aforesaid, because that they, contrary to an intimation directed from my Lord's Grace of Canterbury, and also the aforesaid Lord Bishop of London, and others her majestie's high commissioners for causes ecclesiastical, did permit and suffer a preacher unlicensed to preach in the said parish church of St. Clement Danes, in contempt of us and our jurisdiction ecclesiastical, and have decreed the same to be published with the cause thereof on Sunday next in the time of divine service, in the said church of St. Clement Danes, by ordinary authority: These are therefore to will and require you jointly and severally, upon the next Sunday or Festival day after the receipt of these presents, in the parish church of St. Clement Danes aforesaid, at such time as divine service shall be there celebrated and as there be most assembly there congregated, to publish and declare openly that the said John Ceely and Christopher Fisher so were and are suspended from the exercise of their function or office of churchwarden for the causes aforesaid. In witness we have set the seal of our said chancellor which we use in this behalf, the third day of January, in the year of our Lord God, after the computation of the Church of England, one thousand five hundred and eighty-eight, and in the twelfth year of our translation.—Will. Blackwell" (n).

And requires the minister to publish it on the next Sunday or holyday.

Hughes' opinion.

Hughes says, "And although they have so large authority in the parish and Church under the Ordinary, yet are they not esteemed ecclesiastical persons, but are for the most part lay men, and may be removed from their offices or places by the Ordinary upon just cause of complaint made unto him, or else by the Parishioners themselves; and therefore if a parish do prescribe to have the election of their Churchwardens, and that the Churchwardens elected by them have used time out of mind to continue Churchwardens for two years together with the assent of the parishioners, yet may the parishioners themselves within the two years remove such Churchwardens and appoint others in their places; otherwise they might within the two years waste all the Church goods, for which the parishioners could have no remedy against them" (o).

And the learned Prideaux says, "if their improvidence and negligence be such as to waste the church goods in their custody or otherwise much damnify the parish, they may on proof hereof by the authority of the ordinary at any time be removed and others chosen in their stead" (p). Prideaux's opinion.

The liability of churchwardens to pay the fee of the registrar to an archdeacon is not personal, but is contingent upon their possessing funds out of which the fees may be legally paid. Therefore, where churchwardens had no funds in their hands for the repairs of the church, or for any other expense incident to their office, except by voluntary subscriptions, and were without the means of obtaining funds:—It was holden that they were not liable to pay the fee of the registrar due upon a visitation of the archdeacon (q). CHAPTER V.

VESTRIES.

- SECT. 1.—What and where to be holden.
 2.—Acts regulating.
 3.—Mode of Procedure.
 4.—Select Vestries.

SECT. 1.—What and where to be holden.

Reduced importance of vestries.

56 & 57 Vict. c. 73.

Present functions of rural vestry.

Of urban vestry.

Need of legislation.

SINCE the abolition of compulsory church rates (a) the importance of vestries in ecclesiastical matters is greatly diminished.

The Local Government Act, 1894 (56 & 57 Vict. c. 73), has taken away or transferred to the parish council all the civil powers of vestries in rural parishes (b).

The result is that in rural parishes the only functions left to a vestry are the election of churchwardens, the election in certain rare cases of the incumbent (c), in some cases of sextons (d), and possibly in some cases of organists (e); the making of a voluntary church rate, and the administration of its proceeds (f); the examination of churchwardens' accounts in so far as the churchwardens are administering any funds not raised by voluntary subscription, the examination of similar accounts when kept by trustees of ecclesiastical charities, and the information of the ecclesiastical court as to the opinions and wishes of the parishioners in contested cases of faculties (g).

In urban parishes the vestries retain their civil powers. In the larger urban parishes, however, there are not generally open vestries, consisting of the inhabitants and ratepayers at large; but there are select vestries, constituted either by custom or by 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 60, or under the Metropolis Local Management Acts, 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, and 19 & 20 Vict. c. 112, or by some local act.

It is to be regretted that the same separation of the ecclesiastical from the civil assembly, which has taken place in rural parishes, should not have been yet accomplished in urban parishes (except in London, where the vestries have become district councils), that churchwardens in urban parishes should still be ex officio overseers of the poor, while in rural parishes they have no longer this or any other temporal duty, and that advantage was not taken of the passing of the Local Government Act to put the law as to the constitution and regulation of vestries, regarded as assemblies for ecclesiastical purposes, upon a sound and consistent footing.

When a parish has been, as is so commonly the case, divided for ecclesiastical purposes, and one or more new parishes formed within the old civil area, the mother parish retains its old vestry (h), which embraces the inhabitants of the new parishes, who have truly an interest if and when the vestry is dealing with civil matters, but none when it is dealing with ecclesiastical matters; while, on the other hand, the new parishes, though requiring for certain purposes to assemble their own parishioners, have, properly speaking, no vestry, but only what is sometimes called a "meeting in the nature of a vestry" (i).

Vestry in divided parish.

In this state of things it will be necessary to remember that while the common law and practice as to vestries may be usefully applied to the regulation of the quasi vestries formed in new parishes, the statute law regulating the proceedings and determining the voters at a vestry relates only to the true vestry of an old civil parish (j).

A vestry, properly speaking, is the assembly of the whole parish met together in some convenient place, for the dispatch of the affairs and business of the parish; and this meeting being commonly holden in the vestry adjoining to, or belonging to the church, it thence took the name of vestry, as the place itself does, from the priest's vestments, which are usually deposited and kept there (k).

Definition of.

A town hall has been holden not to be an improper place to take the poll, by reason of its being private property, where no person had been prevented from voting on that account (l).

Place of.

The ecclesiastical court had jurisdiction ratione loci over the proceedings of a vestry meeting holden in a parish church (m).

Ecclesiastical jurisdiction.

By 13 & 14 Vict. c. 57, reciting that "the holding of vestry or other parochial meeting in the parish church or chapel, or in the vestry room attached to such church or chapel, is productive of scandal to religion and other great inconveniences," it was enacted (sects. 1 and 2) that the then Poor Law Commissioners, (whose powers are now exercised by the Local Government Board,) upon application in writing of the churchwardens, or, where there are no churchwardens, of the overseers of any parish in England the population whereof exceeds two thousand persons according to the then last preceding census, such application being made pursuant to a resolution of the vestry, should make an order, under which, after the expiration of twelve calendar months from its publication, "no meeting of the inhabitants of the parish for the purpose of holding a vestry, or for any other purpose than that of divine worship or some ecclesiastical or charitable object, or some other purpose approved by the bishop of the diocese, shall be holden in any parish church or chapel, or other consecrated church or chapel, nor in the chancel thereof, nor, except in case of urgency, and with the previous approval of the said commissioners, in the vestry room attached to such church or chapel, in any parish or place named in such order," any public or private act of parliament to the contrary notwithstanding.

By sect. 3, power was given to provide other places of meeting.

Sects. 4 and 5 relate to the purchase of lands for vestry rooms, and to the hiring of rooms, &c., and to the mode of borrowing money for such purposes.

SECT. 2.—Acts regulating Vestries.

58 Geo. 3, c. 69.

The statutes by which ordinary parish vestries are regulated are 58 Geo. 3, c. 69, and 59 Geo. 3, c. 85.

Three days' notice to be given of vestries; by publication in church, and affixing on church door.

The first of these acts is generally called Mr. Sturges Bourne's Act, from the name of its author; it enacts as follows:—

Sect. 1. "No vestry or meeting of the inhabitants in vestry of or for any parish shall be holden until public notice shall have been given of such vestry, and of the place and hour of holding the same, and the special purpose thereof, three days at the least before the day to be appointed for holding such vestry, by the publication of such notice in the parish church or chapel on some Sunday during or immediately after divine service, and by affixing the same, fairly written or printed, on the principal door of such church or chapel."

7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 45.

By 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 45, s. 1, no such notice is to be published in church. By sect. 2, printed or written notices are "to be affixed on or near to the doors of all the churches and chapels within such parish or place." By sect. 3, the notice on the principal door is to be signed by a churchwarden, or by the incumbent, or by an overseer (n).

58 Geo. 3, c. 69.

Chairman of vestries appointed;

By sect. 2 of 58 Geo. 3, c. 69, "In case the rector or vicar or perpetual curate shall not be present, the persons so assembled in pursuance of such notice shall forthwith nominate and appoint by plurality of votes to be ascertained as hereinafter is directed, (n) Vide supra, pp. 792, 793, for these sections in full.

one of the inhabitants of such parish to be the chairman of and preside in every such vestry; and in all cases of equality of votes upon any question arising therein, the chairman shall (in addition to such vote or votes as he may by virtue of this act be entitled to give in right of his assessment) have the casting vote; and minutes of the proceedings and resolutions of every vestry shall be fairly and distinctly entered in a book (to be provided for that purpose by the churchwardens and overseers of the poor), and shall be signed by the chairman, and by such other of the inhabitants present as shall think proper to sign the same."

to have casting vote.

Minutes to be entered and signed.

Sect. 3. "In all such vestries every inhabitant present, who shall, by the last rate which shall have been made for the relief of the poor, have been assessed and charged upon or in respect of any annual rent, profit or value not amounting to fifty pounds, shall have and be entitled to give one vote and no more; and every inhabitant there present, who shall in such last rate have been assessed or charged upon or in respect of any annual rent or rents, profit or value, amounting to fifty pounds or upwards (whether in one or in more than one sum or charge), shall have and be entitled to give one vote for every twenty-five pounds of annual rent, profit and value upon or in respect of which he shall have been assessed or charged in such last rate, so nevertheless that no inhabitant shall be entitled to give more than six votes; and in cases where two or more of the inhabitants present shall be jointly rated, each of them shall be entitled to vote according to the proportion and amount which shall be borne by him of the joint charge; and where one only of the persons jointly rated shall attend, he shall be entitled to vote according to and in respect of the whole of the joint charge."

Manner of voting in vestries.

Sect. 4. "... when any person shall have become an inhabitant of any parish, or become liable to be rated therein, since the making of the last rate for the relief of the poor thereof, he shall be entitled to vote for and in respect of the lands tenements, and property for which he shall have become liable to be rated, and shall consent to be rated, in like manner as if he should have been actually rated for the same."

Inhabitants coming into a parish since the last rate may vote.

The remaining sections, from the point of this work, are not important.

This act applies only to vestries of civil parishes. Therefore, vestries or meetings in the nature of vestries for the election of churchwardens for new parishes, such churchwardens having no civil duties, are not within the provisions of this Act, and do not require to be nominated according to the formalities prescribed (o).

Act does not apply to new ecclesiastical parishes.

relief of the poor in respect of any annual rent, profit or value arising from any lands, tenements or hereditaments situate in any parish, in which any vestry shall be holden under the said recited act, although such person shall not reside in or be an inhabitant of such parish, shall and may lawfully be present at such vestry, and such person shall have and be entitled to give such and so many vote or votes at such vestry, in respect of the amount of such rent, profit or value, as by the said act any inhabitant of such parish present at such vestry might or ought to have and be entitled to give in respect of such amount, and to all intents and purposes, as if such person were an inhabitant of such parish”

Clerk or agent of corporation, &c. may vote in vestry according to the value of the premises rated.

Sect. 2. “In all cases where any corporation or body politic or corporate or company shall be charged to the rate for the relief of the poor of such parish, either in the name of such corporation or of any officer of the said corporation, it shall and may be lawful for the clerk, secretary, steward or other agent duly authorized for that purpose of such corporation or body politic or corporate or company, to be present at any vestry to be holden in the said parish under the said recited act; and such clerk, secretary, steward or agent shall be entitled to give such and so many vote or votes at such vestry, in respect of the amount of the rent, profit or value of such lands, tenements or hereditaments, as by the said act any inhabitant assessed to such rate present at such vestry might or ought to have and be entitled to in respect of such amount”

Non-payment of rates to disqualify from being present or voting in vestry.

Sect. 3. “. . . no person who shall have refused or neglected to pay any rate for the relief of the poor which shall be due from and shall have been demanded of him, shall be entitled to vote or to be present in any vestry of the parish for which such rate shall have been made, until he shall have paid the same; nor shall any such clerk, secretary, steward or agent be entitled to be present or to vote, nor shall be present or vote, at any vestry in such parish, unless all rates for the relief of the poor which shall have been assessed and charged upon or in respect of the annual rent, profit or value, in right of which any such clerk, secretary, steward or agent shall claim to be present and vote, which shall be due, and which shall have been demanded at any time before the meeting of such vestry, shall have been paid and satisfied.”

16 & 17 Vict. c. 65.

Exception for rates not three months old.

As to plurality of votes.

By 16 & 17 Vict. c. 65, this provision excluding persons who have not paid rates from voting does not apply to any rate for the relief of the poor “which shall have been made or become due within three calendar months immediately preceding such vestry meeting.”

In a parish where the poor rates had, according to ancient custom, been always assessed without regard to the annual value of property in the parish, but according to the supposed ability of the party assessed, it was holden, that persons so rated were not entitled to the benefit conferred by this section as to the plurality of votes, although assessed in respect of property exceeding the annual value of 50*l.* (p).

By 32 & 33 Vict. c. 41, s. 19, "the overseers, in making out the poor rate, shall in every case, whether the rate is collected from the owner or occupier, or the owner is liable to the payment of the rate instead of the occupier, enter in the occupiers' column of the rate book the name of the occupier of every rateable hereditament, and such occupier shall be deemed to be duly rated for any qualification or franchise as aforesaid." The section goes on to provide a penalty for the overseers if they wilfully omit to enter any name, and then proceeds: "provided that any occupier whose name has been omitted shall, notwithstanding such omission, and that no claim to be rated has been made by him, be entitled to every qualification and franchise depending upon rating, in the same manner as if his name had not been so omitted."

32 & 33 Vict. c. 41.

Overseers to insert names of all occupiers in the rate.

Saving of franchises.

By 41 & 42 Vict. c. 26, s. 14, this last section is not to be confined to cases where the machinery of the last act for rating owners in lieu of occupiers is applied, "but shall be of general application."

41 & 42 Vict. c. 26.

Every occupier, therefore, is entitled to vote at a vestry.

Who have votes.

Outdwellers, occupying land in the parish, have a vote in the vestry as well as the inhabitants (q).

SECT. 3.—Mode of Procedure.

The right of the minister (be he rector, vicar or perpetual curate) to preside at a meeting of his parishioners seems to have been unquestioned law since the learned decision of Sir J. Nicholl in Wilson v. Macmath (r); but the minister is not an essential part of the vestry (s). If he be not there, the meeting chooses its chairman.

Who shall preside.

In Phillybrown v. Ryland (t), in 11 Geo. 1, the plaintiff brought a special action upon the case for excluding him from the vestry room, and upon demurrer the court made no difficulty but that such an action was maintainable; however, in that case they gave judgment for the defendant, it not being averred that the parish had any property in the room, or right to meet there; so that for aught appears, it might be the defendant's own house, and then he might let in whom he pleased, and refuse the rest.

Majority conclusive.

How votes are to be taken.

And when they are met, the major part present will bind the whole parish (u).

"There is no doubt of the law;" (says Lord Denman) "that the ratepayers in vestry are to elect, and that if a poll be demanded, it should be kept open for all qualified persons" (x). It should be here remarked, that where a statute directs an election by poll, the poll may be taken from the holding up of the electors' hands. But if the tellers appointed to take the numbers differ, and a poll is demanded and refused, the court will grant a mandamus to enter an adjournment of the election meeting, and to proceed to complete the election (y). A person not present at the show of hands may vote at a poll subsequently taken (z); nor is it any impeachment of the validity of the proceedings at an election that the chairman ordered a poll without first taking a show of hands; of course under 58 Geo. 3, c. 69, a show of hands would be no criterion of the number of votes (a). But where a vestry had by show of hands passed a resolution directing an illegal application of some charitable funds, and a poll had been demanded of the persons presiding at the vestry and not granted, the court refused a rule for a mandamus to compel such persons to grant a poll, observing that it ought not to grant a mandamus for the purpose of putting it to the vote whether a breach of trust should be committed (b).

Adjournment.

Stoughton v. Reynolds.

In Stoughton v. Reynolds (c), in 9 Geo. 2, it was adjudged, that the right of adjourning the vestry is not in the minister or any other person as chairman, nor in the churchwardens, but in the whole assembly, where all are upon an equal footing, and the same must be decided (as other matters there) by a majority of votes.

Baker and Downing v. Wood.

The whole law upon this subject is exhausted in the judgment of Sir Herbert Jenner in the Court of Arches, in the case of Baker and Downing v. Wood (d). The notice was as follows: "Notice is hereby given, that a meeting of the inhabitants in vestry of, and for this parish will be holden in the vestry of St. Thomas Church, at 11 o'clock in the forenoon of Thursday, the 25th of September instant, for the purpose of expunging an irregular and improper entry made in the vestry order book at a meeting held on the 7th day of August last, and for the purpose of granting the churchwardens a levy of tenpence in the pound. If a poll be demanded, the meeting will be immediately adjourned to the town hall, and the poll will commence forthwith, and be kept open till 4 o'clock in the afternoon of the said 25th of September; and the polling will be continued at the town hall aforesaid from the hours of 10 in the forenoon of Friday, the 26th of September, to the hour of 4 in the afternoon of the same day; and again at the same place from the hour of 10 in the forenoon till the hour of 12 at noon, on Saturday, the 27th day of September, when the poll will finally close."

The decision was, that an adjournment by the chairman in accordance with the notice, but without first taking the opinion of the vestry, from the vestry room to the town hall, for the purpose of the poll, was a legal adjournment.

The question of the requisite time for the duration of the poll was also much discussed in the course of his judgment. As 785 persons were the greatest number proved to have voted on any occasion, the judge, regretting that a longer period had not been allowed, held that eleven hours was a sufficient time if due diligence had been used for taking the poll (e).

The law laid down in this case is confirmed and extended by the decision of the Queen's Bench in Reg. v. D'Oyly (f). It is there said that the president of the vestry has authority to regulate the whole of the proceedings; to decide on what they shall be, so as to insure the voters of the parish a reasonable time to vote; to adjourn the vestry for the purpose of a poll, if he thinks fit, and to do all necessary acts on his own responsibility, being amenable for the propriety of his conduct to a court of justice.

General power of president of vestry.

But it has been ruled that the chairman of a vestry meeting holden for the purpose of taking a poll for the election of a churchwarden, has no power to close the poll on account of disturbance (g).

Those who summon a vestry may fix the hour of meeting; and a vestry cannot at one meeting fix the hours at which future vestries shall be holden (h).

any difference in the result, the court refused to grant a mandamus ordering a fresh election, though the persons, whose votes had been rejected, were parties to the application (i).

Close of poll.

In a case as to the election of a churchwarden, decided in the court of the Archdeacon of Middlesex: after a show of hands a poll was demanded, which by mutual agreement was commenced immediately. The chairman agreed with one of the candidates that the poll should close at seven o'clock, which was accordingly done, and thereby some qualified electors were prevented from recording their votes, and the election was holden to be void (k). In the same court it was decided that to take the vote by ballot on a poll was illegal (l).

Ballot.

Poll in writing.

In another case, at a vestry two candidates were nominated for the office of parishioners' churchwarden. The chairman refused to take a show of hands, but proceeded to take a poll in writing of all the members of the vestry present, writing down the number of votes to which each was entitled, and then declared one of the candidates elected. On motion a mandamus was refused, it being holden that, though the chairman's action was irregular, no one was shown to have been excluded from voting by it (m).

SECT. 4.—Select Vestries.

Origin of.

Select vestries seem to have grown from the practice of choosing a certain number of persons yearly to manage the concerns of the parish for that year; which by degrees came to be a fixed method, and the parishioners lost not only their right to concur in the public management as oft as they would attend, but also (in most places, if not in all) the right of electing the managers. And such a custom, of the government of parishes by a select number, has been adjudged a good custom, in that the churchwardens accounting to them was adjudged a good account (n).

In some parishes, these select vestries having been thought oppressive and injurious, great struggles were made to set aside and demolish them (o).

Batt v. Watkinson.

One of the earliest cases as to select vestries is Batt v. Watkinson (p), in 3 Will. 3, where a prohibition prayed to the spiritual court at York, on the ground that the parish of Masham (Massum) in Yorkshire was an ancient parish, and that time out of mind there were twenty-four of the chief parishioners, who all along had been called the four and twenty; and that during time immemorial, as often as any one of the said four and twenty parishioners happened to die, the rest surviving of the four and twenty did choose, and during all the same time used to choose, one other fit and able parishioner of the same parish, to be one of the four and twenty in the room of him so deceased; and that within the said parish there is, and during time immemorial there always hath been a custom, that the said four and twenty for the time being have been used and accustomed, as often as there was occasion, to make rates, and to assess reasonable sums of money upon the parishioners and inhabitants in the said parish for the time being for the repairs of the church; and that the churchwardens of the said parish, during all the time aforesaid, have used to receive all duties and dues for burials in the body or aisles of the said church; and if any of the inhabitants refuse to pay the said rates or dues for burials as aforesaid, then the churchwardens, by warrant from the twenty-four for the time being, were used to distrain the goods and chattels of the said parishioners in the said parish; and that the said twenty-four, with the consent of the vicar or curate, have used to repair the body and aisles of the said church; and that the churchwardens for the time being, during all the time aforesaid, have always used to give up their accounts to the said four and twenty, who allowed or disallowed the said accounts as they saw expedient; and that on the allowance of such account, the churchwardens have always been discharged from giving any other account in any other place; that the plaintiffs were churchwardens for the year 1680; and after that year was ended, they gave in their accounts to the four and twenty; and that though all pleas concerning prescriptions and customs ought to be determined by the common law, yet the defendant hath drawn and cited them into the spiritual court to give in and pass their said accounts there; and although the said plaintiffs have pleaded all the matters aforesaid in the said spiritual court, yet the said defendant hath refused to admit or to receive the said plea. Upon great debate of this case at several times, the court was of opinion, that the custom was good and reasonable, and a prohibition was granted.

So that prescription and constant immemorial usage seems to be the basis and only support of such a select vestry (q).

Such vestries depend on custom.

A select vestry cannot be constituted by a faculty from the bishop (r). But a custom in a parish has been holden not to be destroyed, because in 1662 the parish had accepted a faculty corroborative of its power, though the faculty was not binding in law and the vestry had power at any time to depart from its instructions. A custom that there shall be a select vestry of an indefinite number of persons continued by election of new members made by itself, and not by the parishioners, is valid in law (s); but it would appear that it must be part of such custom that there should always be a reasonable number, and that the reasonableness of that number must be decided with reference to long-established usage and to the population of the parish, and such custom must have existed from time immemorial in a parish (t).

(q) Steer, Parish Law, c. xi, p. 207, citing Shaw, Parish Law, c. 17. (r) Berry v. Banner, 1 Peake, Ca. p. 212.

Where by an ancient custom a select vestry was to consist of the rector, churchwarden, and those who had served the office of upper churchwarden, and other parishioners to be elected by the vestrymen, and the practice had been in modern times to elect as vestrymen only those parishioners who had been fined for not serving the office of upper churchwardens, it was holden that they were good vestrymen (u).

10 Anne,
c. 20.

In the act 10 Anne, c. 20, s. 20, for building fifty new churches, it is provided that the commissioners shall appoint a convenient number of sufficient inhabitants to be vestrymen; and from time to time, upon the death, removal, or other voidance of any such vestryman, the rest or majority of them may choose another.

Under local
acts.

In the several local acts for building particular churches, sometimes the minister, churchwardens, overseers of the poor, and others who have served, or paid fines for being excused from serving those offices; sometimes the minister, churchwardens, overseers of the poor, and all who pay to the poor rate; sometimes only all who pay such a sum to the poor rate; sometimes all who rent houses of so much a year;—are appointed to be vestrymen within such parishes, and no other persons.

1 & 2 Will. 4,
c. 60.

Vestries may be constituted by Sir J. Hobhouse's Act, 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 60, the distinguishing feature of which, it will be seen on reference to it, is a provision for the auditing and keeping of parochial accounts by a select body of vestrymen elected from the ratepayers. It will be observed also that it is applicable only to parishes forming part of a city or town, or containing more than 800 ratepayers, and that it in no way affects the ecclesiastical jurisdiction.

affairs of the church) are to be vested in the vestries formed under that act.

By the second act, 19 & 20 Vict. c. 112, s. 1, "Where at the time of the passing of the said act the power of making church rates, or rates of the nature of church rates, in any parish was vested in an open vestry, or in any meeting in the nature of an open vestry meeting, or in any meeting of the parishioners, inhabitants or ratepayers generally, or of such of the parishioners, inhabitants or ratepayers as were rated at or above any specified amount or value (whether such meeting or vestry were holden for the parish at large or for any liberty or district therein), such power shall not be deemed to have become vested in the vestry constituted in such parish under the said act, but shall be exercised as if the said act had not been passed."

19 & 20 Vict. c. 112.
Church rates were made in open vestry before passing of the act 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, to be so made.

Sect. 2. "Nothing in the said act or this act shall affect, or be deemed to have affected, any power of electing or appointing churchwardens or making church rates, or other power, which at the time of the passing of the said act was vested in any such open vestry or meeting as aforesaid, or any elected or other vestry, where such vestry or meeting acts exclusively for any district (by whatever denomination distinguished) created for ecclesiastical purposes only."

Nothing in this act, or in 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120, to affect ecclesiastical districts.

Sect. 3. "Save as hereinbefore otherwise provided, all the duties, powers and privileges (including such as relate to the affairs of the church) . . . which might have been performed or exercised by any open or elected or other vestry, or any such meeting as aforesaid in any parish, under any local act or otherwise, at the time of the passing of the said act of the last session, shall be deemed to have become transferred to and vested in the vestry constituted by such last-mentioned act; . . . Provided that all duties and powers relating to the affairs of the church . . . which at the time of the passing of the said act were vested in or might be exercised by any guardians, governors, trustees or commissioners, or any body other than any open or elected or other vestry, or any such meeting as hereinbefore mentioned, shall continue vested in and be exercised by such guardians, governors, trustees or commissioners, or other body as aforesaid."

Other powers of vestries and like meetings declared to have been transferred to vestries under act 18 & 19 Vict. c. 120.

The case of Carter v. Cropley (x), deciding that the right to elect their incumbent when previously vested in the inhabitants and parishioners paying rates, is not by these acts transferred to the statutory vestries, has been already mentioned (y).

CHAPTER VI.

CHURCH TRUSTEES.

Origin of.
31 & 32 Vict.
c. 109.

Power to appoint church trustees.

CHURCH trustees have their origin in the Compulsory Church Rate Abolition Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 109).

By the 9th section of this act it is provided as follows:—

“A body of trustees may be appointed in any parish for the purpose of accepting, by bequest, donation, contract, or otherwise, and of holding any contributions which may be given to them for ecclesiastical purposes in the parish.”

“The trustees shall consist of the incumbent and of two householders or owners or occupiers of land in the parish, to be chosen in the first instance, and also from time to time on any vacancy in the office by death, incapacity, or resignation, one by the patron, and the other by the bishop of the diocese in which the parish is situate.”

“The trustees shall be a body corporate, by the name of the church trustees of the parish to which they belong, having a perpetual succession and a common seal, with power to sue and be sued in their corporate name.”

“The trustees may from time to time, as circumstances may require, pay over to the churchwardens, to be applied by them either to the general ecclesiastical purposes of the parish, or to any specific ecclesiastical purposes of the parish, any funds in their hands, and the funds so paid over may be applied to such purposes and shall not be applied to any other purpose: provided always, that no power shall be thereby conferred on the churchwardens to take order with regard to the ecclesiastical purposes of the parish further or otherwise than they are now by law entitled to do: provided also, that due regard shall be had to the direction of the donors of funds contributed for any special ecclesiastical purposes; and, subject as aforesaid,”

“The trustees may invest in government or real securities any funds in their hands, and accumulate the income thereof, or otherwise deal with such funds as they think expedient, subject to the provisions of this act.”

“The trustees shall, once at the least in every year, lay before the vestry an account of their receipts and expenditure during the preceding year, and of the mode in which such receipts have been derived and expenditure incurred, together with a statement of the amount (if any) of funds remaining in their hands at the date of such account.”

It does not appear whether any instance of the application of this section has yet occurred.

As to application of section.

CHAPTER VII.

MINOR OFFICERS.

SECT. 1.—*Parish Clerks.*2.—*Sextons.*3.—*Organists.*4.—*Lay Readers.*SECT. 1.—Parish Clerks (a).

Clerk in holy orders.

Constitution of Boniface.

PARISH clerks in holy orders, under the act 7 & 8 Vict. c. 59, have been already considered (b).

A constitution of Archbishop Boniface provides as follows, "We do decree that the offices for holy water be conferred upon poor clerks" (c).

For the understanding of which constitution, it is to be observed, that parish clerks were heretofore real clerks, of whom every minister had at least one, to assist under him in the celebration of divine offices; and for his better maintenance, the profits of the office of aquebajalus (who was an assistant to the minister in carrying the holy water) were annexed unto the office of the parish clerk by this constitution; so that, in after times, aquebajalus was only another name for the clerk officiating under the chief minister.

How to be appointed.

All incumbents once had the right of nomination of the parish clerks, by the common law and custom of the realm (d).

And by the aforesaid constitution of Archbishop Boniface, "Because differences do sometimes arise between rectors and vicars and their parishioners, about the conferring of such offices, we do decree, that the same rectors and vicars, whom it more particularly concerneth to know who are fit for such offices, shall endeavour to place such clerks in the aforesaid offices, who, according to their judgment, are skilled and able to serve them agreeably in the divine administration, and who will be obedient to their commands" (e).

Canon 91.

the province of Canterbury, but by the parson or vicar; or where there is no parson or vicar, by the minister of that place for the time being: which choice shall be signified by the said minister, vicar, or parson, to the parishioners the next Sunday following, in the time of divine service. And the said clerk shall be of twenty years of age at the least, and known to the said parson, vicar, or minister to be of honest conversation, and sufficient for his reading, writing, and also for his competent skill in singing, if it may be. And the said clerks so chosen shall have and receive their ancient wages without fraud or diminution, either at the hands of the church-wardens at such time as hath been accustomed, or by their own collection, according to the most ancient custom of every parish.

Since the making of which canon, the right of putting in the parish clerk has often been contested between incumbents and parishioners, and prohibitions prayed, and always obtained, to the spiritual court for maintaining the authority of the canon in favour of the incumbent against the plea of custom in behalf of the parishioners (f).

Customary rights of appointment.

Thus, in Cundit v. Plomer (g), in 8 Jac. 1, the parishioners of the parish of St. Alphage, in Canterbury, prescribed to have the election of their parish clerk, and by the canon the election of the clerk is given to the vicar. It was adjudged in that case, that the prescription should be preferred before the canon, and a prohibition was awarded accordingly.

In Jermyn's Case (h), in 21 Jac. 1, Jermyn, rector of the parish of St. Katherine's in Coleman Street, and Hammond, as clerk there, sued in the spiritual court to have the said clerk established there, being placed there by the parson according to the late canon, where the parishioners disturbed him, upon a pretence of a custom to place the clerk there by the election of their vestry. And upon this surmise of a custom, the church-wardens and parishioners prayed a prohibition; and after divers motions a prohibition was granted; for they held that it was a good custom, and that the canon cannot take it away.

Before the union of parishes in London, effected by 22 Car. 2, c. 11, there was a custom in the parish of St. Mildred Poultry for the parishioners to join with the rector in the election of a parish clerk. By that act the parish of St. Mary Colechurch was united to that of St. Mildred Poultry, the church of the latter parish still remaining; and it was holden that the right of election after the union continued in the inhabitants jointly with the rector; and that an appointment by the rector alone, without the concurrence of the majority of such parishioners, was void. It was not decided whether the election should be made by the rector and the inhabitants of both parishes in joint vestry assembled, or by the rector with the inhabitants of St. Mildred Poultry alone, and whether the presence of the rector at the time of the election was necessary for the validity of the appointment (k).

Where incumbent is suspended curate appoints.

Where a vicar was suspended, for misconduct, by the bishop of the diocese, from performing the duties and receiving the profits of the vicarage, for the space of two years, and, further, until he should exhibit a certificate of good behaviour, and during the suspension the parish clerk died, and the curate appointed plaintiff to be parish clerk during the suspension, and the vicar, on the other hand, appointed defendant as parish clerk, who received fees in that character; plaintiff having, during the continuance of the suspension, sued the defendant, in respect of these fees, for money had and received: It was ruled—(1) that the curate had the right of appointing the parish clerk; (2) that the appointment of the plaintiff was good; but (3) that a general appointment by the curate would be more advisable than one limited to the time of the suspension (l).

Aliter, when only sequestrated.

Mode of appointment.

But when the living is sequestrated only, the incumbent does not lose his right of appointing the parish clerk (m).

A pauper was appointed a parish clerk in the following manner: The rector sent for a pauper on a Sunday, and requested him to perform duty on that day, and on coming out of the desk, the rector said to the pauper, "I shall appoint you my regular clerk and sexton, and to follow me in funerals and marriages." It was holden that this was a proper appointment of the pauper as parish clerk, and that the canon did not render it necessary to the validity of an appointment of a parish clerk that the appointment should be signified to the parishioners (n).

How to be admitted.

Parish clerks, after having been duly chosen and appointed, are usually licensed by the ordinary (o); but this does not seem to be absolutely necessary (p).

And when they are licensed, they are sworn to obey the minister (q).

And if a parish clerk has been used time out of mind to be chosen by the vestry, and after admitted, and sworn before the archdeacon, and he refuse to swear such parish clerk so elected, but admits another chosen by the parson, a writ may be awarded to him commanding him to swear him (r).

In Rex v. Henchman (s), official of the consistory court of the Bishop of London, a mandamus was granted to admit one Robert Trott to the office of parish clerk of Clerkenwell, he being elected by the parish, and it being shown that the official had usually admitted to that office.

By the aforesaid constitution of Archbishop Boniface, "If the parishioners shall maliciously withhold the accustomed alms from the aquabajalus, they shall be earnestly admonished to render the same; and if need be, shall be compelled by ecclesiastical censure" (t). His salary.

Alms.]—By which word we may understand that such clerks cannot claim anything by way of a certain allowance or endowment by reason of their office of aquabajalus: but their sustentation ought to be collected and levied according to the manner and custom of the country (t).

Accustomed Alms.]—For this custom ought to be considered according to the manner anciently observed; which also, inasmuch as it concerns the increase of divine worship, ought not to be changed at pleasure: but hereunto the parishioners may be compelled by the bishop (u).

And a custom of this kind is good and laudable, that every master of a family (for instance) on every Lord's day, give to the clerk bearing the holy water somewhat according to the exigency of his condition; and that on Christmas day he have of every house one loaf of bread, and a certain number of eggs at Easter, and in the autumn certain sheaves. Also that may be called a laudable custom, where such clerk every quarter of the year receives something in certain in money for his sustenance, which ought to be collected and levied in the whole parish. For such laudable custom is to be observed, and to this the parishioners ought to be compelled; for having paid the same for so long a time, it shall be presumed that at first they voluntarily bound themselves thereunto (x).

Admonished.]—Not only by the ministers, but also and more especially by the ordinary of the place (y).

By Can. 91, already quoted (z), the clerks are to receive "their ancient wages, without fraud or diminution, either at the hands of the churchwardens, at such times as hath been accustomed, or by their own collection, according to the most ancient custom of every parish." Canon 91.

Ancient Wages.]—In case such customary allowance is denied, the foregoing constitution, and the practice thereupon, direct where it is to be sued for, viz. before the ordinary in his ecclesiastical court. That constitution (as we see) calls those wages accustomed alms: and in the register there is a consultation provided in a case of the same nature, for what the writ Where to be sued for.

calls largitio charitativa (as being originally a free gift), which by parity of reason may be fairly extended to the present case (y).

But by the common law, if a parish clerk claim by custom to have a certain quantity of bread at Christmas of every inhabitant of the parish, or the like, and sue for this in the spiritual court, a prohibition lies (z).

*Parker v.
Clerke.*

In Parker v. Clerke (a), in 3 Anne, the clerk of a parish libelled against the churchwardens, for so much money due to him by custom every year, and to be levied by them on the respective inhabitants in the said parish; and after sentence in the spiritual court, the defendants suggested for a prohibition, that there was no such custom as the plaintiff had set forth in his libel. It was objected against granting the prohibition, that it was now too late, because it was after sentence, especially since the custom was not denied; for if it had been denied, and that court had proceeded, then and not before, it had been proper to move for a prohibition. But by Holt, Chief Justice: It is never too late to move the King's Bench for a prohibition, where the spiritual court had no original jurisdiction, as they had not in this case, because a clerk of a parish is neither a spiritual person, nor is this duty in demand spiritual, for it is founded on a custom, and by consequence triable at law; and therefore the clerk may have an action on the case against the churchwardens for neglecting to make a rate, and to levy it, or if it had been levied and not paid by them to the plaintiff.

Evans.*

In Pitts v. Evans (b), in 12 Geo. 2, a prohibition was granted to a suit in the spiritual court by the clerk of St. Magnus for 1*s.* 4*d.*, assessed on the defendant's house at a vestry in 1672, to be paid to the parish clerk. For, by the court, he is a temporal officer, or if not, yet he could not sue there for such a rate; for if it is due by custom, he may maintain an assumpsit, if not a quantum meruit, or a bill in equity.

Fees.

Besides being paid a salary or stipend, parish clerks are paid by fees, especially on marriages (c) and burials (d).

Office cannot be assigned.

It has been holden that the office of parish clerk cannot be assigned, and that the assignor was therefore still parish clerk and could sue for his fees (e).

A parish clerk receiving more than 40*s.* a year from burial fees was said not to have thereby acquired a 40*s.* freehold, so as to entitle him to the parliamentary suffrage (f).

If necessity arises, the parish clerk ought to be deprived by him that placed him in his office; and if he is unjustly deprived, a mandamus will lie to the churchwardens to restore him; for the law looks upon him as an officer for life, and one that has a freehold in his place, and not as a servant, and therefore will not suffer the ecclesiastical court to deprive him, but only to correct him for any misdemeanor by ecclesiastical censures (h).

How parish clerk to be removed from his office.

In Townshend v. Thorpe (i), in 13 Geo. 1, the plaintiff declared in prohibition, that he was indicted for an assault with intent to commit sodomy, notwithstanding which he was proceeded against in the spiritual court for the same offence, and for drunkenness. The defendant pleaded, that the plaintiff was a parish clerk, and that the suit there was not only to punish him for the incontinency, but also to deprive him of his office. Demurrer thereupon. And as it was going to be argued, the court proposed to stay till the indictment was tried; and it having been tried, and the defendant convicted and pilloried, the court without ordering the declaration to be amended, granted a consultation as to the proceeding to deprive, and confirmed the prohibition as to any other punishment. They said, he was an ecclesiastical officer as to everything but his election.

Townshend v. Thorpe.

In Peak v. Bourne (k), in 6 Geo. 2, the plaintiff declared in prohibition, that he was sued in the spiritual court for executing the office of deputy parish clerk, without the licence of the ordinary. On demurrer, three points were made: 1. Whether a parish clerk be a temporal or a spiritual officer. 2. Whether he can make a deputy. 3. Whether the licence of the ordinary is requisite. It was argued three several times upon all the points. But the court in giving judgment founded themselves only upon the last; as to which they held, that a licence was not necessary, and therefore gave judgment for the plaintiff in prohibition. They said the canon did not require it, and indeed it would be a transferring the right of appointment to all intents and purposes to the ordinary. As to the two other points, the court strongly inclined that he was a temporal officer as to the right of his office, and that he might make a deputy. And as to the first, when the court were pressed with their own authority in Townshend v. Thorpe, they said it was a hasty opinion, into which they were transported by the enormity of the case (l).

made for a prohibition to the consistory court of York, to stay their proceedings against Tarrant, the parish clerk of St. Osith in York; which proceedings were there instituted at the instance of Haxby, the deprived parish clerk, for the restoration of the said Haxby. It was urged that the office is temporal, and therefore that the spiritual court has no jurisdiction concerning his deprivation. This Haxby, they said, was deprived by the parson and the whole parish, for drunkenness during divine service and other misdemeanors: Whereupon the parson appointed Tarrant in his room. Against whom Haxby libelled in the consistory court, where there was a monition, and they were proceeding to restore Haxby. And all this was suggested. Upon which a rule was granted to show cause. And now cause was to have been shown. But the counsel, being satisfied that it was too strong against them, gave it up. And the rule for the prohibition was made absolute.

restore.

In Rex v. Erasmus Warren (n), in 16 Geo. 3, cause was shown against a mandamus to restore William Readshaw to the office of parish clerk of Hampstead. It was stated, that the clerk was appointed by the minister; that he had since become bankrupt, and had not obtained his certificate; that he had been guilty of many omissions in his office; was actually in prison at the time of his amoval; and had appointed a deputy who was totally unfit for the office. Against which it was insisted, that the office of parish clerk is a temporal office during life; that the parson cannot remove him; and that he has a right to appoint a deputy. Lord Mansfield then said, there was an application of this sort in a cause of Rex v. Proctor, in 15 Geo. 3, where the parson removed a parish clerk appointed by the former incumbent. There the right of amotion was in question, and all agreed it must be somewhere, but that case was not decided. Lord Mansfield asked, what remedy is there in Westminster Hall to remove him? He certainly has his office only during his good behaviour. But though the minister may have a power of removing him on a good and sufficient cause, he can never be the sole judge and remove him at pleasure, without being subject to the control of this court. By Mr. Justice Aston: As long as the clerk behaves himself well, he has a good right and title to continue in his office. Therefore if the clergyman has any just cause for removing him, he should state it to the court. Accordingly, the court enlarged the rule, that affidavits might be made on both sides, of the cause and manner of amotion. And now on this day, upon reading the affidavits, Lord Mansfield said, it was settled in the case of Rex v. Ashton, in 28 Geo. 2, that a parish clerk is a temporal officer, and that the minister must show ground for turning him out. Now in this case, there is no sufficient reason assigned in the affidavits that have been read, upon which the court can exercise their judgment, nor is there any instance produced of any misbehaviour of consequence;

therefore the rule for a mandamus to restore him must be made absolute.

In Reg. v. Smith, a mandamus had issued to a vicar to restore a man to the office of parish clerk. The vicar returned that he had on several specified occasions misconducted himself by designedly irreverent and ridiculous behaviour in his performance of his duty; by appearing in church drunk, so as to be incapable of performing it; and by indecently disturbing the congregation during the administration of the sacrament. The return stated that the alleged acts were done in the view and presence of the defendant, and after repeated reproof, whereupon the defendant removed him from his office of clerk. To this return there was a plea stating that the clerk had not been summoned to answer for his conduct before his removal. And it was ruled, that the return was bad for not showing such summons (o).

Duty to hear
removal.

But a mandamus does not lie to restore one to the office of deputy parish clerk (p). It has been holden, as we have seen, that it lies to a minister to restore a parish clerk removed by him without just cause. And the court will not judge of the justice of the cause of the removal upon the ex parte statement of the minister; he must state it in his return to the mandamus, and give to the clerk an opportunity of answering it (q). But Sir G. Lee said, that where a parish clerk was appointed by the parishioners by custom, he had been holden to be a temporal officer; but where he was nominated by the parson he was a spiritual officer, and that all proceedings to deprive a clerk in the ecclesiastical court must be plenary and by articles (r).

persons entitled to the possession of such house, building, land, or premises as aforesaid, who may thereupon go before any neighbouring justice of the peace; and such justice, upon production of such certificate, and proof of such wrongful retention of possession as aforesaid, shall and he is hereby required to issue his warrant under his hand and seal, directed to the constables or other peace officers of the district, parish, or place within which such house, building, land, or premises is or are situate, or to the constables or other peace officers of any neighbouring district, parish, or place, requiring them forthwith to expel and remove from the said house, building, land or premises, and from every part and parcel thereof, the person so wrongfully retaining possession thereof, and to deliver the peaceable possession thereof to the person or persons so entitled to the same as aforesaid; and such constables or other peace officers shall and they are hereby required promptly and effectually, to obey and execute such warrant, according to the exigency thereof, and thereupon it shall be lawful for them also to levy, upon the goods and chattels of the person so by them expelled and removed as aforesaid, the necessary costs and expenses of executing such warrant, the amount whereof, in case the same shall be disputed, shall be forthwith settled and determined by the said justice of the peace by whom the said warrant was so issued as aforesaid, or by any other justice of the peace residing in or near to the said district, parish, or place, whose decision thereupon shall be final, and who is hereby authorized to make such order in that behalf as to him shall seem reasonable."

By 10 & 11 Vict. c. 65, s. 34, cemetery companies, with consent of the chaplains of the cemeteries, may appoint clerks, and allow them such stipends as they think proper, and may remove them at their pleasure (t).

In cemeteries.

The rights of parish clerks and sextons in certain cases to officiate in cemeteries and claim fees for their services, have been mentioned in the chapter on Burial (u).

Parish clerks and sextons belonging to churches built under the Church Building and New Parishes Acts are regulated by the enactments following:—

By 58 Geo. 3, c. 45, s. 64, the Church Building Commissioners might assign out of the pew-rents salaries to the clerks of any churches or chapels built under that act.

Districts assigned to chapels do not come under this clause.

Appointment of clerk by the minister of the church or chapel.

19 & 20 Vict. c. 104.

Clerk to be appointed by incumbent, and removed with bishop's consent.

Jackson v. Courtenay.

The words "district or division of any parish divided under the provisions of the above-recited act," do not include districts assigned to chapels under sect. 16 of the 59 Geo. 3, c. 134 (x).

By sect. 29 of 59 Geo. 3, c. 134, "The clerk in every church and chapel erected, built or acquired, or appropriated, under the provisions of the above-recited act (y) or this act, shall be annually appointed by the minister of the church or chapel."

By 19 & 20 Vict. c. 104, s. 9, "The parish clerk and sexton of the church of any parish constituted under the said recited acts (z) or this act shall, and may be appointed by the incumbent for the time being of such church and be by him removable, with the consent of the bishop of the diocese, for any misconduct."

In Jackson v. Courtenay (a), a consecrated chapel built under two local acts had a district assigned to it under 59 Geo. 3, c. 134, s. 16, and 2 & 3 Vict. c. 49, s. 3, by an order in council made in 1854. By 8 & 9 Vict. c. 70, s. 17, the district chapelry became a perpetual curacy. The incumbent having given notice to the parish clerk that he would not require his services after a short date; it was holden that the appointment was an annual one, and could only be terminated during the year for good cause, and after giving the parish clerk a hearing.

SECT. 2.—Sextons.

Nature of office.

The sexton, segsten, segerstane, sacristan, (sacrista, the keeper of the holy things belonging to the divine worship,) seems to be the same with the ostiarius in the Roman Church, and is appointed by the minister or others, and receives his salary according to the custom of each parish.

It has been adjudged that a mandamus lies to restore a sexton ; Mandamus for. though as to this the court at first doubted, because he was rather a servant of the parish than an officer, or one that had a freehold in his place ; but upon a certificate shown from the minister and divers of the parish that the custom was to choose a sexton, and that he held it for his life, and that he had 2d. a year of every house within the parish, they granted a mandamus directed to the churchwardens to restore him (b).

In Olive v. Ingram (c), in 12 Geo. 1, in assumpsit for money Women may be sextons. had and received to the plaintiff's use, a case was made at nisi prius for the opinion of the court, that there being a vacancy in the office of sexton of the parish of St. Botolph without Aldersgate, in the city of London, the plaintiff and Sarah Bly were candidates ; and Sarah Bly had 169 indisputable votes, and 40 which were given by women who were housekeepers and paid to the church and poor ; that the plaintiff had 174 indisputable votes, and 22 other votes given by such women as aforesaid : that Sarah Bly was declared duly elected ; upon which the plaintiff brought a mandamus, and was sworn in, and the defendant had received 5s. belonging to the office. In this case two points were raised : 1st, whether a woman was capable of being chosen sexton ; and 2nd, whether women could vote in the election. As to the first, the court seemed to have no difficulty about it, there having been many cases where offices of greater consequence have been held by women, and there being many women sextons at that time in London. In the second year of Queen Anne a woman was appointed governor of Chelmsford workhouse ; Lady Broughton was keeper of the Gatehouse ; Lady Packington was the returning officer for members at Ailesbury. As to the second point, it was shown that women cannot vote for members of parliament or coroners, and yet they have freehold, and contribute to all public charges ; and though they vote in the monied companies, yet that is by virtue of the acts which give the right to all persons possessed of so much stock ; that military tenures never descended to them. But the court notwithstanding held, that this being an office that did not concern the public, or the care and inspection of the morals of the parishioners, there was no reason to exclude women who paid rates from the privilege of voting ; they observed, here was no usage of excluding them stated, which perhaps might have altered the case ; and that as this case was stated, the plaintiff did not appear to have been duly elected, and therefore there ought to be judgment against him.

In Rex v. The Churchwardens of Thame (d), in 5 Geo. 1, an application was made to the Court of King's Bench for a mandamus to restore John Williams to the office of sexton. A Mandamus refused for office. return was made that he held it at pleasure. The court refused the mandamus without a certificate that he was chosen for life.

Quo warranto. It has been said, that the common law considers sextons to have a freehold in their office, and has never decided that a writ of quo warranto would not lie in the case of a sexton (e).

When office full and right to elect doubtful. In 1836 a mandamus was applied for on affidavits making a prima facie case of right in the inhabitants to elect a sexton for the parish of Stoke Damerel in Devonshire. Affidavits were filed in answer, stating facts to show that the right was in the rector, who had filled up the appointment. The office being full, a question arose as to whether the proper remedy was not by "quo warranto," instead of "mandamus." Mr. Justice Patteson (agreeing with Lord Chief Justice Denman, Williams and Coleridge, Justices, said (f), "I am of the same opinion. I cannot at present find any reported case in which a mandamus has been granted to elect, where the office was already filled by a void election; but I am sure, from my recollection, that the practice is so, if the court is satisfied of the election being void (g). . . . But I am confident that, if the question cannot be tried by a quo warranto, the course is to grant a mandamus for a new election, where the court is satisfied that the first election is void. Where there is any other mode of trying the right, a mandamus ought not to go. Here, prima facie, the appointment is right, being made by the rector, who, by the general law, is the proper person to make it. Strong evidence would be necessary to disprove his authority. There is, on the other hand, a custom alleged for the parishioners to elect; and some evidence, not conclusive, but amounting to a prima facie case, has been given to show that the last election was by them. The office, however, is now full by the rector's appointment. If there were no other remedy, I should say that a mandamus ought to go; but there is such a remedy, by refusing the fees, or bringing an action for money had and received if they are taken. It cannot be supposed that the sexton will go on for five or six years refusing his fees, to prevent a trial of the right; at least the probability of it is not one which we can enter into. The rule must therefore be discharged."

Appointment of. General law. The appointment to the office of sexton, prima facie, is not vested in the inhabitants of the parish at large. Where the duties of that office consist in the care of the sacred vestments and vessels, in the care of the church, by keeping it clean, in ringing the bells, and in opening and closing the doors for divine service, the presumption is, that the churchwardens have the right of appointment; and where the duties are confined to the churchyard, in digging graves, &c., the presumption is, that the appointment is in the incumbent; and where the office embraces both the above-mentioned duties, the presumption is, that his appointment is vested in the churchwardens and incumbents jointly (h).

Presumption of law.

Sextons have rights to fees at burials for performing their office (i).

Fees.

The rights of sextons and parish clerks in certain cases to officiate in cemeteries and claim fees for burials have been already mentioned (k).

Rights in cemeteries and new parishes.

So have their rights (together with the rights of parish clerks), under some of the Church Building Acts, been already referred to (l).

It was holden, however, in White v. Norwood Burial Board (m), that where a parish is divided under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 37, the sexton of the mother or old parish has no vested rights in the new parish.

SECT. 3.—Organists.

The organist has become of late years an important officer in parish churches, though formerly his duties were chiefly confined to cathedrals and the churches of large towns.

His duties.

Something has been said about organists and organs in the Chapter on Liturgy and Ritual (n).

It has also been said that the minister has the right of directing the service, e.g., when the organ shall and shall not play, and when children shall and shall not chant, though the organist is paid and the children are managed by the churchwardens (o).

Subject to control of minister.

Since the last edition of this work Sir Robert Phillimore had occasion to apply the law laid down in this paragraph in a case of Wyndham v. Cole (p). In that case the incumbent promoted a criminal suit by articles against an organist for playing on certain Sundays "a certain voluntary or piece of music on the organ in the parish church" both before and after service, and also for obstructing and interfering with the promoter in respect of his right to control and direct the use and management of the organ in the said parish church in connection with divine service.

The defendant gave in a responsive plea, of which the first paragraph was in the following terms:—

“By the ecclesiastical law of the realm the incumbent of a church has not an unlimited right to control the use and management of the organ, or to put a stop to the ordinary musical service in such church, in an arbitrary manner without reasonable and proper cause or the sanction of the ordinary. On the occasions referred to in the articles, when the promoter prohibited the defendant from playing on the organ in the said church, he did so without the knowledge or sanction of the ordinary, and without any reasonable and proper cause.”

The defendant further pleaded that the organ had been erected by the parishioners at their own cost; that he had been appointed by the vestry, and had continued to act as organist with the consent of the parishioners, and at a salary paid by the churchwardens; and, in substance, that the promoter was arbitrarily forbidding him to play the organ.

Upon objection to the admissibility to this plea, Sir Robert Phillimore held that it afforded no defence. He proceeded as follows:—

“Upon the admission of the articles I stated what I believed to be the law as to the control and responsibility of the minister in the circumstances of the present case, namely, that where there is an organ in a church or chapel of the Church of England it is not competent to the organist to play on it at any time in defiance of the directions of the minister. Now, the defendant has given in a responsive allegation, but I do not consider that it sets up any valid defence, either on the law or the facts. If the minister did arbitrarily forbid the defendant to play on the organ, I think the defendant might have appealed to the ordinary, but, in any event, he should have obeyed the directions of the minister provisionally, and until the ordinary directed the right course for the minister to follow. The responsive allegation pleads a resolution of the parishioners in vestry, but it is clear that all such averments are irrelevant to the issues raised in the suit. Rejecting as I do the responsive allegation, and the counsel for the defendant being willing to have the case decided without its again coming before the court, my duty is clear, and I must admonish the defendant not to infringe the ecclesiastical law in the manner complained of in the articles. The defendant must be condemned in the costs of the suit.”

No mandamus to elect an organist.

The Court of Queen's Bench refused to issue a mandamus to the vicar, churchwardens and inhabitants of a parish to elect an organist, even though the office of organist had always existed in the parish church beyond the time of living memory (n).

In Edwards v. Lowndes (o), it appeared that under a local act of parliament one of the purposes for which certain trustees of markets and property in the town of Burslem in Staffordshire were to apply the income of their funds was in payment of "the salary of the organist of Burslem Church"; but in the particular circumstances of that case the plaintiff, the organist, failed to recover his salary.

Appointment of, under local act.

The organist and master of the choristers is a statutory officer mentioned in the statutes of the cathedrals of the new foundation, and has twice recently, in the case of Bristol, exercised the right of appealing to the bishop as visitor. But his position, though honourable and important, does not materially differ from that of other lay officers of a cathedral, such as lay vicars or singing men (p).

In cathedrals of new foundations.

SECT. 4.—Lay Readers.

The office of reader, when exercised by a person in holy orders, has already been discussed (q).

A status has, in recent years, been given by the archbishops and bishops to the office of lay reader, which is best described by the following official statement for the diocese of Lincoln.

Office of Lay Reader of the Diocese of Lincoln.

Conformably to resolutions agreed to at a meeting of archbishops and bishops.

The bishop will issue his commission in the form following:—Edward, by divine permission Bishop of Lincoln. To our well-beloved and approved in Christ A. B., greeting. We do by these presents grant unto you our commission to execute the office of a lay reader in the parish of C., within our diocese and jurisdiction, on the nomination of the Reverend D. D., rector [or vicar] of the said parish, and we do hereby authorize you to read the holy scriptures, and to explain the same to the aged poor, sick, and such other persons in the said parish as the incumbent thereof shall direct; [to read the appointed lessons in the parish church, and also to read publicly in [the hamlet of F.] or in the school room or other place approved by us] such portions of the morning and evening service, or litany, in the book of common prayer, as we may appoint, and after such service [to expound some portions of the holy scriptures to those assembled, or] to read such godly homily or discourse as by the incumbent may be judged most suitable and edifying to their immortal souls; to hold such cottage lectures or classes for instruction as the incumbent may appoint, to superintend or assist in the Sunday school; to seek out children not baptized, and cases of sickness, for the information of the clergy; to seek opportunities in your daily conversation to check the spread of infidel opinions and misrepresentations; to explain the doctrine and discipline of the church to those who are prejudiced against it; and to do all in your power by word and example to diffuse the influence of the gospel of Christ, and to raise the standard of faith and practice among those with whom we live. And we do hereby notify and declare that this our commission shall remain valid and have full force and authority until either it shall be revoked by us or our successors, or a fresh institution to the benefice shall have been made and completed, as and after which last-mentioned time it shall be competent for an application to be made to us or our successors for a renewal or continuance of this our present commission and authority. And so we commend you to Almighty God, whose blessing and favour we humbly pray may rest upon you and your work. Given under our hand and seal this — day of —, &c.

Regulations for the Appointment of Lay Reader in the Diocese of Lincoln.

1. The incumbent proposing to maintain a reader is to write to the bishop, stating the name of the person, his age and condition in life, in what place or places he wishes him to exercise his office, and what duties within the limits of the above resolutions he wishes him to perform.
2. The incumbent will also transmit to the bishop a certificate under his hand that the person nominated is a communicant, of pious, and sober and honest life, sound in the faith as held and taught by the Church of England, and of competent knowledge of the Holy Scriptures.
3. He will also supply the bishop with the names of two or more communicants who are ready to testify to the character and fitness of the proposed reader, should confidential inquiry be made by the bishop, who may also, in any particular case, if he sees fit by himself or his chaplain, examine the person proposed touching his faith or his knowledge of holy scriptures.
4. The bishop, when satisfied, will name a time and place for the admission of a reader.

PART VII.

COUNCILS OF THE CHURCH.

CHAPTER I.

GENERAL COUNCILS.

THE earliest council of the church (a) is that recorded in the Origin of. Acts of the Apostles (A.D. 46), in which was decided the question relating to the obligation of Mosaic ordinances upon the Gentile converts. The principles that the spiritual governors of the church should meet and settle questions in dispute unprovided for by Holy Writ, and that such a meeting (b), duly convened and unanimous in its decision, may reasonably expect the guidance of the Holy Spirit (c), appear to be plain inferences from this great event.

This apostolical precedent was followed by the church during the times of her persecution, and still more when that persecution ceased and she became recognized by the state.

Moreover, the Councils or Synods (d) of the church form so

(a) Beveridge Pand.—the most complete and learned work on the subject; Mahan, Church History of the First Seven Centuries; Walter Lehrbuch, ss. 58, 65a, 74—84, 84a, 103—110, 157; Müller, Lexicon des Kirchenrechts I. Pol. bk. viii., "To call and dissolve all solemn assemblies about the public affairs of the church;" Ayl. Par. p. xxxvi. Grotius (de J. B. et P. Prolegomena, s. 51) observes, "Synodici canones qui recti sunt, collectiones sunt ex generalibus legis divinæ pronuntiatis, ad ea quæ occurrunt, aptatæ: hi quoque aut monstrant quod divina lex præcipit, aut ad id, quod Deus suadet hortantur. Et hoc veræ Ecclesiæ Christianæ est officium, ea quæ sibi a Deo tradita sunt tradere, et eo quo tradita sunt modo," &c. As to English and British councils, see especially Wilkins Concilia; Johnson's Canons; "Ancient Laws and Institutes," Record Commission, 1840; Eccles. Institutes, ed. Thorpe; Councils and Ecclesiastical Documents relating to Great Britain and Ireland," by Haddan and Stubbs—the first and third volumes and the first part of the second volume are published.

material a part of the Canon Law, that some mention of them seems proper in a work of this description.

Different kinds of.

The canonists define a Council to be an assembly of prelates and doctors to settle matters concerning religion and the discipline of the church. The clearest arrangement of them seems on the whole to be as follows:

General councils.

I. General Councils, called also Œcumenic and Plenary, composed of prelates and doctors assembled from all parts of the earth, and representing the Universal Church: "universalia concilia sunt quæ sancti patres ex universo orbe, in unum convenientes, juxta fidem evangelicam et apostolicam condiderunt" (e). As St. Augustin says, "plenaria concilia ex orbe universo." Our 21st Article says, "General Councils may not be gathered together without the commandment and will of princes. And when they be gathered together, (forasmuch as they be an assembly of men, whereof all be not governed with the Spirit and Word of God), they may err, and sometimes have erred, even in things pertaining unto God. Wherefore things ordained by them as necessary to salvation have neither strength nor authority, unless it may be declared that they be taken out of Holy Scripture."

National councils.

II. National Councils are an assembly composed of the clergy of one entire nation; such were the councils of Toledo in Spain, of Carthage in Africa, and of Orleans in France. It is said that the first national council in England was holden at Herudford, now Hertford, in the year 673. The last was holden by Cardinal Pole in the year 1555 (f).

Provincial councils.

III. Provincial Councils, composed of the metropolitan and the bishops of the province. It should be observed, however, that there are some councils which seem to be more than national, and less than general; such were the various councils convoked by the pope to heal the schisms which from time to time disturbed the peace of the western church (g). On the other hand, ecclesiastical history affords several instances of councils apparently more than provincial, without being national. Such were the councils, in which the prelates of one or more patriarchates met together by deputy.

Diocesan councils.

IV. Diocesan or Episcopal Councils, (called by the Gallican Church "Synods" (h),) in which the bishop and his clergy assembled together to confer upon matters relating to the diocese (i). These were frequently holden in England, and did not fall into desuetude till the Act of Submission, 25 Hen. 8, c. 19. Of late years some attempts have been made to revive them.

against the Iconoclasts, &c., &c.

(h) The work of Benedict XIV. (De Synodo Diocesana, Venetiis, 1787, 2 vols.) is the great work on this subject.

(i) Johns. p. 151.

Some canonists have added a fifth Council, viz. a Council of Regulars or Religious, which is more correctly denominated, as in our country, a Chapter. "Dic quod illud rectius et frequenter consueverit appellari capitulum" is the remark of Lancelot (k).

There are some really Œcumenic or General Councils, which form a part of the Canon Law.

Council of Religious.

Eight General Councils.

Seven or Eight General Councils (l).—It is remarkable that the eight General Councils on which the Eastern Church relies were convened by the authority of the Emperors of the East and West (m).

The eight General Councils of the Eastern Church are—

1. Nice, 1 A.D. 325

Convened under Constantine the Great; condemned the heresy of Arius, who denied the true Divinity of our Lord.

First four General Councils.

2. Constantinople, 1 A.D. 381

Convened under Theodosius the Elder; condemned the heresy of Macedonius, who denied the Divinity of the Holy Ghost, and that of Apollinarius, who denied that our Lord had a rational human soul.

3. Ephesus A.D. 431

Convened under Theodosius the Younger; condemned the heresy of Nestorius, Patriarch of Constantinople. His heresy related to the Divinity of our Lord, and to denying that the Blessed Virgin was Θεοτόκος, asserting her to be Χριστοτόκος only—that was, in his meaning, ἀνθρώποτοκος.

4. Chalcedon A.D. 451

Convened under the Emperor Marcianus; condemned the heresy of Eutyches, who taught the opposite error to that of Nestorius relating to the incarnation and natures of our Lord.

As to these four councils the Emperor Justinian decreed as follows:—

"Sancimus igitur vicem legum obtinere sanctas ecclesiasticas regulas, quæ a sanctis quatuor conciliis expositæ sunt aut Decree of Justinian.

(k) Quoted in Durand de Mailane, Dict. de Droit Canonique, tit. Concile.

(l) There seems to be no practical difference as to dogma between those who reckon seven and those who reckon eight. M. Michaud, one of the leaders of the old Catholics, spoke of the dogmatic decrees of the seven first councils as binding upon him: Journal des Débats, 2 Oct. 1872. Beveridge reckons eight: Beveridge, Pand. Proleg. v.

(m) Bishop Beveridge (Beveridge, Pand. Proleg. ii.) however remarks, "Hinc est quod etiamsi Imperatores multa de ecclesiasticis personis et rebus in Constitutionibus suis ediderint, nihil tamen de novo constituerunt, sed ea tantum quæ ab Ecclesiasticis synodis prius constituta fuerant, ipsi suâ etiam auctoritate confirmarunt." He cites Justinian's expression in Novel. lxxxiii. "Secundum sacras et divinas regulas quas etiam nostræ sequi non dedignantur leges." Hooker (Eccles. Pol. bk. viii.) cites St. Jerome as saying, "Dic quis Imperator hanc synodum jussit convocari?"

firmatæ, hoc est in Nicæna trecentorum decem et octo, et in Constantinopolitana sanctorum centum quinquaginta patrum, et in Ephesina prima, in quâ Nestorius est damnatus, et in Chalcedonia in quâ Eutyches cum Nestorio anathematizatus est. Prædictarum etiam quatuor Synodorum dogmata sicut sanctas Scripturas accipimus et regulas sicut leges observamus" (m).

Provisions of Decree of Gratian.

That early portion of the canon law called the Decretum, says, "Inter cætera autem Concilia quatuor esse scimus venerabiles Synodos, quæ totam principaliter fidem complectuntur, quasi quatuor evangelia, vel totidem paradisi flumina." It proceeds to enumerate the four first councils, the emperors under which they were convened, and the heresies which they condemned. "Hæ sunt quatuor Synodi principales, fidei doctrinam plenissimè prædicantes. Sed et si qua sunt alia Concilia, que sancti Patres spiritu Dei pleni sanxerunt, post istorum quatuor auctoritatem, omni manent stabilita vigore: quorum gesta in hoc opere condita continentur" (n).

1 Eliz. c. 1.

According to our English statute, 1 Eliz. c. 1, s. 17 (s. 36 in one edition) (o), heresy is to be determined "by the authority of the canonical Scriptures, or by the first four general councils, or any of them, or by any other general council wherein the same was declared heresie by the express and plain words of the said Canonical Scriptures, or such as hereafter shall be ordered, judged or determined to be heresie, by the high court of parliament in this realm, with the assent of the clergy in their convocation; anything in this act contained to the contrary notwithstanding."

The effect of these four Great Councils is thus summed up by the learned Mahan (p):—"That Jesus Christ is true God had been witnessed at Nicæa; that he is perfect man had been defined at Constantinople; that he is indivisibly One Person had been settled at Ephesus; finally, the six hundred and thirty at Chalcedon declared that 'he is one and the same Christ, the Son, the Lord, the Only-begotten in two Natures without confusion, change, division or separation.'"

5. Constantinople, 2 A.D. 553

Second four General Councils.

Convened under Justinian, having for its object to support and amplify the decrees of the Council of Ephesus; but it promulgated no canons.

The first and second councils of Constantinople have obtained from canonists the name of general councils, although not composed of prelates assembled from all countries, because having been holden by orthodox Catholic bishops of the Eastern, they were afterwards ratified by the pope and bishops of the Western, church. The Gallican as well as the Anglican church has combated the doctrine that the ratification of the pope was necessary for the validity of canons enacted by general councils. It seems that the former church (although the Councils of Constance and Basle seem to speak another language) considers such ratification as proper and becoming, inasmuch as the consent of all churches is represented by that of Rome (q), the mother of all. This doctrine is repudiated by the Church of England, and also by the Eastern church.

6. Constantinople, 3 A.D. 680

Under Constantine Pogonatus; it condemned the heresy which asserted that our Lord had only ἐν θέλημα καὶ μίαν ἐνεργείαν, after his incarnation—a development of the heresy condemned by the Council of Chalcedon. This council excommunicated and anathematized by name certain holders of the heresy condemned. Amongst others the Pope Honorius (r).

The next council, the Quini-sexan, is not numbered in the regular order. It was holden at Constantinople A.D. 680, and was the fourth there holden. It is usually called Quini-sexan, as supplying what was wanting in the fifth and sixth councils, and it is referred to by this name in the acts of the next council.

It was holden ἐν τῷ Τερούλλῳ, in Trullo, a particular room, so called from its domed shape, in the imperial palace.

A.D. 630, Theodore, Archbishop of Canterbury, presided over an English council at Hadfield (“qui Saxonico vocabulo Hæthfelth nominatur”), at which the orthodoxy of the English church respecting the Monothelite heresy, with especial regard to the Council of Constantinople holden in the same year, was asserted. At this council also, the first five general councils and canons of the Lateran council of 649, A.D. (s), were received.

7. Nice, 2 A.D. 787

Convened under Constantine and Irene; it related to the use of images in the church. It passed twenty-two canons upon this and other subjects. In the first canon it contained the decrees of the six universal councils.

8. Constantinople, 4 A.D. 869

Two synods appear to have been convened at Constantinople under Basilios Macedo, when Photius was patriarch of Constantinople. He composed what is called the “Nomocanonon,” which contained the decrees of these two synods, and the Eastern church appears on this account to consider them as part of her canon law (t).

The general councils, properly so called, end here. It will be remembered that Savonarola, Luther and Cranmer appealed to a general council, if and whenever a really free one could be convened ; but long before the period of the Reformation, in 1427, Archbishop Chichele appealed against Pope Martin V. to a future general council (u).

Later Councils
in the West.

The extent to which the canon law has prevailed in this country has been considered (y) ; but it may be as well to remark here, that the fourth council of Lateran has been often referred to by the courts as being engrafted into the ecclesiastical laws of this realm (z). The foregoing councils constitute a part of the corpus juris canonici ; but it should be observed that the councils of Carthage, although not general councils, have furnished canons for the Decretum of Gratian ; and the council of Elvira (a), holden in Spain, A.D. 304, is said to have furnished the first canons for the discipline of the church.

The seven councils, of later date, also called “general” by the Roman church, are those “quorum nulla in corpore juris mentio fit.”

The council of Trent, holden under Paul III., Julius III. and Pius V., and so celebrated in history, was never acknowledged by France as a general council (b). This was done by the ordinances of Blois and Melun, and various edicts. See Durand de Maillane, Dict. de Droit Canonique, voce “Trente.”

Vatican Council of 1870.—The doctrine of papal infallibility promulgated by this Roman council is, perhaps, the strict logical conclusion from Ultramontane tenets, as it certainly is at variance with all sound catholic teaching and principle. However, this council appears to have been wanting in some of the essential elements which all canonists require for the validity of a general council. Vatican council of 1870.

Convocation,
what.

THOUGH the word convocation (a) be in itself of a general signification, and may indifferently be applied to any assembly which is summoned or called together after an orderly manner; yet custom has determined its sense to an ecclesiastical use, and made it, if not only, yet principally, to be restrained to the assemblies of the clergy (b).

Before the Conquest.

That the bishop of every diocese had here as in all other Christian countries power to convene the clergy of his diocese, and in a common synod or council with them to transact such affairs as specially related to the order and government of the churches under his jurisdiction, is not to be questioned. These assemblies of the clergy were as old almost as the first settlement of Christianity amongst us, and, amidst all our revolutions, continued to be holden till the time of King Henry the Eighth.

Diocesan synods.

What the bishop of every diocese did within his own district, the archbishop of each province, after the kingdom was divided into provinces, did within his proper province. They called together first the bishops, afterwards the other prelates, of their provinces; and by degrees added to these such of their inferior clergy as they thought needful.

Provincial councils.

In these two assemblies of the clergy (the diocesan synods and provincial councils) only the spiritual affairs of the church were wont for a long time to be transacted. So that in this respect, therefore, there was no difference between the bishops and clergy of our own and of all other Christian churches. Our metropolitans and their suffragans acted by the same rules here, as they did in all other countries. They held these assemblies by the same power, convened the same persons, and did the same things in them.

Synods of the church common to England and other countries.

But, as will be seen, the bishops first, and then some of the other prelates (as abbots and priors) were very early brought into the great councils of the realm, or parliament; and there consulted and acted together with the laity.

Prelates in Parliament.

Thus were the greater clergy first brought into our state councils, and made a constant or established part of them.

The Convocation of the English Church became in its progress a very remarkable instance of the independence and autonomy which has always distinguished that church (c); as the liberties of the Gallican Church once distinguished it from the general subservience of the other branches of the Western Church to Rome.

Epochs in the history of Convocation.

The most remarkable epochs of the actual and legal history of Convocation are as follows:—

1. The original ecclesiastical synod, formed upon the usual model.

(c) The constitution of Archbishop Boniface says (Lind. p. 68), “Item statuimus quod Episcopi in suis Synodis et aliis Convocationibus et singuli Archidiaconi in suis Capitulis, et Capellani Ecclesiarum Parochialium in suis Ecclesiis ter in Anno denuncient,” &c.; Gloss. Synodis. “Hæ dicuntur conventus sive congregationes senum et Presbyterorum, et debent fieri per Episcopos annuatim. Et ad eas tenentur venire omnes illi qui sub illo Episcopo habent curam animarum” — aliis Convocationibus, quas ex variis causis facere potest Episcopus, viz. propter subsidium charitativum exhibendum. Propter visitationem exercendam; item propter prædicationem verbi Dei. Et in aliis quæ variis de causis possunt occurrere. Capitulis—Nota bene proprietatem terminorum, nam Episcopis tribuit synodos, Archidiaconis verò Capitula, &c.; Lind. p. 68; see also Lind. p. 298, Gloss. on Synodalibus, “Constitutionibus quæ fiunt in Synodis Episcoporum. Unde si Constitutio Synodalis ligat subditos statuentis, ita quod non licet contravenire determinatis in Synodo Episcopali; multò fortius hoc erit dicendum quoad decisa et determinata in Synodo Provinciali,” &c.

2. The summoning of the lower clergy to attend the prelates in this synod.

3. The præmunientes clause of Edward the First, summoning proctors of the clergy to parliament (c).

4. The division of the clerus into two houses or chambers.

5. The Act of Submission and legislation of Henry the Eighth. By it, inter alia, Convocation was forbidden to meet without the summons of the crown.

6. The arrangement between Lord Chancellor Clarendon and Archbishop Sheldon as to the subsidies of the clergy.

7. The accession of William and Mary, and their legislation with respect to the church.

8. The recourse of the government in 1717 to immediate prorogation, in order to prevent the Lower House of Convocation from censuring the sermons of Hoadley, Bishop of Bangor, and the refusal of this and subsequent governments during the reign of the Georges and William the Fourth to allow Convocation to discuss any subject whatever.

9. This clumsy and unworthy resource having been found to foster the evil which it was intended to prevent, like all attempts in this free country to stifle debate and discussion, whether in the civil or ecclesiastical part of the constitution, has been partially, and it may be hoped will be totally abandoned during the reign of her present majesty (d).

These are the principal divisions of the subject which the ecclesiastical historian, and to some extent the ecclesiastical lawyer, must bear in mind while considering the subject of Convocation.

The Fire of London, in 1666, consumed the "Schedules of Continuation," and probably other records of Convocation.

Atterbury's attempts.

At the beginning of the 18th century political questions mingled largely with the discussion of questions properly belonging to Convocation. Atterbury endeavoured to establish the entire independence of the Lower House, which numbered many adherents of the house of Stuart, upon the analogy of the House of Commons. It is not to be regretted that the eloquence and ingenuity of this accomplished man proved unequal to the fulfilment of this task. For the analogy was certainly false, and had it prevailed, the consequences must have been destructive of the synodical character of Convocation and of the discipline of the church.

His chief opponents were Wake, Kennett and Hody; the errors of the two former being, I incline to think, a depreciation of the synodical character of Convocation, when the crown ordered the archbishops to summon it, and too stringent a construction of the Act of Submission; but, speaking generally, their opinion of the law of Convocation was sound. The work, however, of Bishop Gibson on the subject of Convocation is facile princeps; and his conclusions thereon are for the most part adopted in this work (e).

(c) Vide infra, p. 1533.

In the provincial synods summoned by the archbishops of their own authority, the clergy taxed themselves, and gave subsidies to the crown, a practice which—though the legislation of Henry VIII. required the authority of parliament to confirm the grant of the subsidy—continued till the reign of Charles the Second; and therefore the synodical assembly dealt with questions of secular finance as well as with those of a purely spiritual character. Edward the First (1283) endeavoured to raise these subsidies by calling the clergy to parliament; the attempt failed (f). In 1294, he made another attempt to summon a national synod by writs directed to each bishop. “Thus” (Mr. Joyce observes) “was a national synod summoned, not provincially by the metropolitans, but by accumulated diocesan authority.” The attempt seems to have been unsuccessful; it was at all events not repeated. Edward II. (1314) issued an order to the metropolitans to summon provincial synods in the presence of royal commissioners, for the purpose of voting subsidies, but the experiment excited much dissatisfaction. I pass by for the moment the further attempt in 1295. In the first year of Edward III., as Mr. Joyce says, “an arrangement between the royal and archiepiscopal authority of summoning provincial synods was agreed upon, which prevails down to this day.” The prerogative of the crown was so exerted as to be consistent, as will be seen, with canonical obedience.

Subsidies voted in convocation.

It is necessary to return for an instant to the reign of Edward I. in 1295. That monarch seems to have devised a scheme for bringing the clergy, not to a provincial synod, but to parliament. He directed a writ to each bishop to attend in his place in parliament, premonishing him by a clause, known as the præmunientes clause, to bring with him to parliament the prior of his cathedral, the archdeacons, a proctor for the chapter of the cathedral, and two proctors for the diocesan clergy. This writ is issued at the present day, but never obeyed. It has been the cause of much historical error as to the origin and duties of convocation, partly because it naturally happened that the proctors for the clergy in parliament were also chosen to represent the clergy in synod or convocation. These parliamentary proctors “are (Lord Coke says (g)) procuratores cleri, and many times have appeared in parliament as spiritual assistants to consider, consult, and consent, ut supra (h), but never had voices there, because they were no lords of parliament."

Kennett's
account.

The double aspect, so to speak, of convocation is fairly represented by Kennett, who says, "The truth is, as our Convocations were intended for the king's Temporal Assistance, and the civil rights of the clergy, they were properly summoned with or near the Parliament, and so far made a part of it. And as they are still summoned with every Parliament, it is upon the old supposal, that they have some concern there, to aid the king, and maintain their own civil rights. But as our Convocations were proper ecclesiastical councils, to debate and define the matters of faith and spiritual discipline, they bore no relation to a Parliament, but were rather inconsistent with it, because the Archbishop was not inclined (and, if he were so, was sometimes expressly prohibited) to call his Suffragans and Clergy to a synod, when the king had occasion for their attendance in Parliament. So still, our Ecclesiastical Synods to be summoned by the king's writ to the Archbishop are not confined to Parliament time; they may be then held, but they may too at other seasons, if the exigence of affairs shall so require" (i).

Hody's
account.

The learned Hody says, "Upon comparing all things together, I take it præmunientes, to have been continued in the writs after it became a constant custom for the clergy to meet in a separate body by virtue of the archbishop's mandate, that hereby our kings might assert their right of calling the clergy (if they please) to parliament: which the clergy opposed as an invasion and inroad upon their liberties" (k).

In truth, however, the exact date and origin of the Lower House of Convocation is a question now of no practical moment. I agree with a recent (l) writer, who says: "It is enough that our two Convocations are legally and constitutionally both the provincial synods of the church and the representative chambers of the clergy. As such they have been summoned to meet at least ever since the Reformation; and when King William attempted to supersede them after the Revolution, he was arrested by the addresses of both houses of parliament requiring him to issue his writs for a convocation of the clergy 'according to the ancient practice and usage of this kingdom in time of Parliament'" (m).

SECT. 2.—From the Time of Henry VIII. to that of Queen Victoria.

The archbishops continued to summon provincial synods according to the exigencies of the church until the Act of Submission, 25 Hen. 8, c. 19, was made; by which it is enacted as follows: "Where the King's humble and obedient subjects the clergy of this realm of England, have not only acknowledged, according to the truth, that the Convocation of the same clergy is, always hath been, and ought to be assembled only by the king's writ, but also submitting themselves to the King's Majesty, have promised in verbo sacerdotii that they will never from henceforth presume to attempt, alledge, claim, or put in ure, enact, promulge, or execute any new canons, constitutions, ordinances, provincial or other, or by whatsoever name they shall be called, in the Convocation, unless the king's most royal assent and licence may to them be had, to make, promulge, and execute the same, and that his Majesty do give his most royal assent and authority in that behalf." It is therefore enacted, according to the said submission, "that they nor any of them shall presume to attempt, alledge, claim, or put in ure, any constitutions or ordinances provincial, or synodal, or any other canons, nor shall enact, promulge, or execute any such canons, constitutions or ordinances provincial, by whatsoever name or names they may be called, in their Convocations in time coming which always shall be assembled by authority of the king's writ, unless the same clergy may have the king's most royal assent and licence, to make, promulge, and execute such canons, constitutions, and ordinances, provincial or synodal; upon pain of every one of the said clergy doing contrary to this act, and being thereof convict, to suffer imprisonment, and make fine at the king's will."

The Act of Submission, 25 Hen. 8,
c. 19.

Accordingly, in 8 Jac. 1, it was resolved upon this statute by the two chief justices and divers other justices, at a committee before the lords in parliament: 1. That a convocation cannot assemble without the assent of the king; 2. That after their assembly they cannot confer to constitute any canons without licence of the king; 3. When they upon conference conclude any canons, yet they cannot execute any of their canons without the royal assent; 4. That they cannot execute any after the royal assent, but with these four limitations, (1) that they be not against the prerogative of the king, nor (2) against the common law, nor (3) against any statute law, nor (4) against any custom of the realm. All which appears by the said statute. And this (Coke says) was but an affirmance of what was before the said statute; for it was holden before, that if a canon be against the law of the land the bishop ought to obey the commandment of the king, according to the law of the land (n).

Judges' resolutions in 8 Jac. 1.

Convocation,
how summoned in Philip and Mary's reign.

Cardinal Pole held a convocation in the year 1557, the latter end of Queen Mary's reign; and the title of it was Convocatio sive Sacra Synodus convocata auctoritate brevis Regis Phillippi et Mariæ, &c. "Now it is not to be imagined," Gibson observes, "that either the queen or the cardinal (so remarkably tender of the privileges and immunities of their church) would have given way to a convocation upon that foot, had it been the opinion of those times that the authority of the royal writ destroyed that authoritative summons which the archbishops before the Reformation had always exercised. They knew the kings of England had often directed their writs to the archbishop before the Act of Submission was thought of, and were as constantly obeyed; and the writ being an immediate direction to the archbishop, and not to any particular member of convocation, they were so far from considering that a summons upon the authority of such writ destroyed his grace's authoritative summons, that we see they use the term even while the act was repealed, and they were by consequence under no obligation to use it" (n).

Lingard's view.

Lingard, in speaking of Henry the Eighth's reign, observes: "The ecclesiastical constitutions which had so long formed part of the law of the land now depended on his breath, and were executed only by his sufferance. The convocation, indeed, continued to be summoned: but its legislative authority was no more. Its principal business was to grant money: yet even these grants now owed their force not to the consent of the grantors, but to the approbation of the other two houses and the assent of the crown." He adds, in a note, "Journals 156, 218, 277. The first instance which I find was in 1540" (o).

Collier's
account.

Collier observes that, "... the clergy had always the privilege of taxing their own body. Neither from Magna Charta until the thirty-seventh of Henry VIII. is there any parliamentary confirmation of subsidies given by the clergy. For what reason this custom was afterwards altered is not easy to account for. It is possible it might be for the benefit of the crown, and for the better securing the payment of the money granted: For since the Reformation, the jurisdiction of the church was much sunk, and her censures less regarded. Now the convocation could proceed no further than spiritual penalties. They had no authority over the secular magistrate, neither could they command the justices of the peace to levy their subsidies by distress: And therefore that the crown might not be disappointed of the money granted by the convocation, their subsidies from the thirty-seventh of Henry VIII. downwards were generally confirmed by act of parliament. But that the clergy's granting the king a benevolence without such confirmation, exceeded their power, is more than is proved. Had the convocation pretended to tax the laity, the objection had been good. But to contest their authority for raising money upon their own body, is to cross upon custom and known privilege: Neither could the clergy without doors reckon this a grievance, for they had already given their consent for this purpose in their procuratorial letters; for in this instrument, signed and sealed by the electors for convocation, they engage themselves to allow and abide by the proceedings of their clerks and proctors. Besides, there was a precedent in Queen Elizabeth's reign in defence of this practice. For in the year 1585, the convocation granted a subsidy or benevolence, and levied the money by synodical authority, without any confirmation from the parliament; neither was this at all complained of" (p).

In the second year of James the First, the House of Lords (q) received a message from the Convocation House for a conference on ecclesiastical matters; the House of Lords declared itself willing to have conference with some select number of the bishops, but so as they might confer with them as lords of parliament, and not in such condition and quality as they are of convocation.

As to conference between House of Lords and Convocation.

It appears that in 1553, the House of Commons resolved, "that any person having a voice in the Convocation House cannot be a member of this house."

Member of Convocation ineligible to House of Commons.

In the 18 Jac. I. there was a motion that the House of Lords should not sit on Wednesdays and Fridays, as the bishops met in convocation on those days.

References in Parliament to Convocation.

In 16 Car. I. there was a motion for the adjournment of the Lords in consequence of the meeting of the Convocation House; it was refused, and the high court of parliament declared not to be subordinate to any other court. The House of Lords, however, had a report made to them relative to the days when the Convocation House usually sat.

Convocations in 1661—1663.

In 1661, the Convocation prepared the Act of Uniformity, under the direction of Sheldon, Archbishop of Canterbury, and Morley, Bishop of Worcester (s).

In 1663 convocation gave four subsidies to the crown, and this was the last time the clergy imposed a tax upon themselves, the agreement already referred to being effected soon afterwards (t).

Speaker Onslow on their cessation.

Speaker Onslow makes the following note to a passage in Burnet, containing the history of this transaction (u). "It was first settled by a verbal agreement between archbishop Sheldon and the lord chancellor Clarendon, and tacitly given in to by the clergy in general, as a great ease to them in taxations. The first public act of any kind relating to it, was an act of parliament in 1665, by which the clergy were, in common with the laity, charged with the tax given in that act, and were discharged from payment of the subsidies they had granted before in convocation; but in this act of parliament in 1665, there is an express saving of the right of the clergy to tax themselves in convocation, if they think fit; but that has never been done since, nor attempted, as I know of, and the clergy have been constantly from that time charged, with the laity, in all public aids to the crown, by the House of Commons. In consequence of this (but from what period I cannot say), without the intervention of any particular law for it, except what I shall mention presently, the clergy (who are not lords of parliament) have assumed, and without any objection enjoyed, the privilege of voting in the election of members of the House of Commons, in virtue of their ecclesiastical freeholds. This having constantly been practised from the time it first began, there are two acts of parliament which suppose it now a right. These acts are, the 10th of Anne, c. 23 (x), and 18th of Geo. 2, c. 18. And here it is best the whole of this matter should remain, without further question or consequence of any kind; as it now stands, both the church and the state have a benefit from it. . . . Gibson, Bishop of London, said to me that this was the greatest alteration in the constitution ever made without an express law."

Effect of abandonment of taxing in convocation.

The effect of this abandonment of the power of taxing the clergy has operated in the peculiar religious circumstances of this country unfavourably to the meeting of convocation.

Collier, the church historian, foresaw this effect. "And being," he observed, "in no condition to give subsidies and present the crown, 'tis well if their convocation meetings are not sometimes discontinued, if they do not sink in their significance, lie by for want of a royal licence, and grow less regarded when their grievances are offered" (y).

It may well be questioned whether this discontinuance has not worked mischief to the state as well as the church. Probably if convocation had been allowed to sit to make the reforms, both in its own constitution and generally in the administration of spiritual matters, which time had rendered necessary, the apathy and erastianism which at one time ate into the very life of our church, the spiritual neglect of our large cities at home in England, and of our colonies abroad, and the fruit of these things, the schism created by the followers of Wesley, would not have occurred, and the state would have escaped the evil of those religious divisions which have largely influenced, hampered and perplexed the legislation of her parliaments and the policy of her statesmen.

The long parliament of Charles the Second was dissolved in 1678. Convocation was summoned with the new parliament in 1680. It was dissolved in 1681. It met again in 1685, but during the troubled and eventful reign of James the Second was not allowed to act, for that king feared the censure with which it would have visited his policy. In 1689, the lords besought William "to issue forth writs as soon as conveniently may be for calling a convocation of the clergy to be advised with in ecclesiastical matters."

Convocation

II., James II. and William III.

On November 21 (z), 1689, convocation met, and immediately showed a strong disinclination to permit what was then being attempted, the alteration of the liturgy. A royal commission empowered the convocation to treat of alterations, and form canons and constitutions relative to rites and ceremonies and the ecclesiastical courts (a); but on the 24th of January next, the king dissolved (b) convocation, without allowing them to proceed to business.

Tillotson, on the deprivation of Sancroft, became Archbishop of Canterbury. During his primacy convocation did no business (c). He died in 1694, and was succeeded by Tenison. In 1697 appeared the once celebrated "Letter to a Convocation Man" (d); and in 1700, after ten years of enforced silence, convocation met again (e), for the transaction of business. The Lower House was at this time guilty of various irregularities.

The controversies carried on by Wake, Hody, Gibson, Atterbury, have been already mentioned (h).

Under Queen Anne.

In 1701, convocation was again assembled, and the disputes between the Upper and Lower House disfigure this period. After King William's death, and during Queen Anne's reign, convocation sat frequently, with licence to transact business. It censured Whiston's book (i), eight judges against four thinking that convocation had jurisdiction in cases of heresy. The queen's government allowed convocation to proceed. It extracted and censured as heretical various passages in this work. This judgment was sent to her majesty, but, whether intentionally or not, was never confirmed by her.

In 1713, convocation had royal letters of business, and considered various subjects,—penance, excommunication, forms for the visitation of prisoners, Dr. Clarke's book on the Scripture Doctrine of the Trinity, &c.

Under George I.

At the beginning of George the First's reign, 1715, convocation had letters of business, and considered, among other things, a form of consecrating churches and communion plate. In 1716-17, Hoadley published a work and preached a sermon which gave rise to the once celebrated Bangorian controversy. The action of the Lower House of Convocation affronted the government, who determined and effected their determination to punish the church by the suppression of convocation.

Prorogation of convocation.

In 1717, convocation was prorogued, and till the reign of her present majesty was never allowed to transact business—though in 1741-2 it was allowed to meet for a short time, and began to take some matters into consideration.

It has been temperately and truly said by the last historian of convocation, "It is evident that no argument can fairly be derived from Hoadley's case against the revival of convocation: for the controversy, like all the rest from the year 1689, arose out of the circumstances of the country. Yet the opponents of convocation constantly refer to the contests which took place, without caring to ascertain their cause, and then draw their inferences against synodical action. In all these matters the views of the Lower House were generally received by the great body of the clergy: and the reason is obvious, namely, that being less dependent on the crown than the bishops, it was supposed to speak with more certainty the sentiments of the church" (k).

“Shall the presbyterian kirk of Scotland have its general assembly, and the church of England be denied its convocation?” said Dr. Johnson, with characteristic indignation (l), in 1763.

This manifest injustice continued till our days. A feeling which had existed for some time that parliament, in a great measure composed of members wholly unconnected with and even necessarily hostile to the church of England, could not, to say the least, properly claim the sole legislation on matters relating to her doctrine and discipline, conspired with a general sense of wrong done to the church to procure, about 1840, a relaxation of the practice of immediately proroguing convocation after it had made (what Mr. Burke calls) “some polite ecclesiastical compliments to the king” (m).

Re-assembling of convocation.

Since this period, convocation has discussed a great variety of subjects affecting the interests of the church, and has issued valuable reports made by committees sitting during the prorogations.

It is true that convocation has not as yet been allowed to legislate by itself, except on the alteration of the subscription canons (n), and the hours of marriage (o), and the canon about sponsors in baptism (p); and even upon this last subject the legislation, owing to the course taken by the province of York, has been imperfect: but it has sanctioned the new Lectionary, subsequently adopted by parliament, and advised (as will be seen hereafter) the crown as to the adoption of a part of the last Report of the Ritual Commissioners.

Legislation by.

In 1867, a committee of convocation made an elaborate report of a proposed reform of convocation.

In 1872, the crown gave to the two convocations (1) General, and (2) Special Letters of Business. By the latter these convocations were empowered to consider the recommendations in a Report of the Ritual Commissioners.

The convocations expressed their approval of some of the recommendations, and drew up a scheme of shortened services. This scheme was afterwards sanctioned by the statute 35 & 36 Vict. c. 35 (q).

Letters of business had been given to the convocations for considering the Prayer Book framed in 1662, and sanctioned by SECT. 3.—Forms of Procedure generally and in Upper House.

Opening
convocation.

With respect to the form of opening Convocation and the proceedings, especially of the Upper House, the authority of Gibson may be relied upon (s).

On the day (he observes, speaking of the practice in his time (t)) prefixed in the archbishop's mandate for the Convocation's meeting, all the members cited thereby are obliged to be ready at St. Paul's for the coming of his grace. Thus it is, and ever has been, according to Archbishop Parker's account of the established form of opening a convocation:

Sciendum est, quod omnes qui auctoritate reverendissimi citantur ad comparandum coram eo in domo capitulari ecclesie cathedralis D. Pauli London. — die — tenentur prefixo tempore interesse atque in eadem ecclesia cathedrali prestolari adventum dicti reverendissimi.

His grace waited on at his landing by all the advocates and proctors of his court (u), is by them and his own retinue conducted to the church of St. Paul's; at the door whereof the bishops and clergy meet and receive him, and all walk in procession to the choir. Prayers and sermon ended, he with the bishops and clergy go into the chapter-house, where the Lord Bishop of London, dean of the province, exhibits a certificate that the mandate has been duly executed:

Reverendissimo ac cæteris suis coepiscopis in suis sedibus ordine consedentibus, ac reliquo clero circumstante, reverendus dominus episcopus London. mandatum sibi a dicto reverendissimo ad convocationem hujusmodi summonend. directum, una cum debito certificatorio super executione ejusdem introducere, ac debita cum reverentia eidem reverendissimo patri præsentare et tradere tenetur.

(r) Vide supra, p. 747.

(t) The first edition of his Synodus Anglicana was published in 1702.

(u) The presence of the civilians, advocates in Doctors' Commons, was, according to Bishop Andrews'

MS. note in his prayer-book (now, I think, in the British Museum), analogous to the presence of the judges in the House of Lords. They were there to advise, not to vote. This attendance of civilians has ceased since the abolition of the college of advocates.

This certificate under the episcopal seal, and directed to the archbishop, first acknowledging the receipt of his grace's mandate, recites it; and then signifies, how by virtue and authority thereof, the bishops of his province, and by them the deans, &c., have been regularly summoned: That he owns himself duly cited by the authority of the same mandate: That he has intimated to them his grace's resolution not to hold any excuse but upon good reasons to be then and there alleged: That he has also enjoined every bishop to bring with him a certificate of the execution of the foresaid mandate in his own diocese: and then, adding how he has executed it, particularly in the diocese of London, he subjoins a catalogue of the members therein. In like manner every bishop makes his return immediately to the archbishop in a formal instrument under his episcopal seal, certifying the summons of his dean, archdeacons and clergy, in virtue of his grace's letters mandatory transmitted by the Lord Bishop of London, and adding their several names and surnames.

By the archbishop's order the Bishop of London's certificate is publicly read, and one or more officers of his court appointed by him to receive in his name the certificates of the other bishops, and all the letters of proxy. Then a written schedule is put into his grace's hand, by which he pronounces all members cited, and not appearing, contumacious; reserving the punishment of their contumacy to another time.

Reservando pœnam eorum contumacie in aliquem diem competentem pro beneplacito ipsius reverendissimi (u).

In 1853, Convocation had to consider the difficult and delicate question whether the bishops who had colonial sees, were not by their patents—then supposed to have a much greater force than has since been ascribed to them—entitled to be summoned to Convocation, that is, to the Upper House. After a learned report (Feb. 16, 1853) from the vicar general, the Upper House decided against their claim (x). Colonial bishops.

Suffragan bishops, appointed about eighteen years after this report, being also archdeacons, have taken their seats in the Lower House. Suffragan bishops.

The special prayer said by Convocation at the commencement of each of their sessions is as follows:—

“Oratio pro præsentè Convocatione, sive Synodo.

Prorogation.
Consensus fratrum.

The question whether the archbishop can of his own authority prorogue Convocation, or whether it must be, according to many precedents, cum consensu fratrum, with the consent of his brother prelates, has been much discussed.

It appears to me that this consensus is necessary ; but probably, by the use of ordinary care and courtesy, the necessity for a formal decision on this matter will not again arise (z).

Blackstone's statement.

Blackstone says, Book I. ch. 7, p. 269, that "with us the convocation is the miniature of a parliament, wherein the archbishop presides with regal state : the upper house of bishops represents the House of Lords ; and the lower house, composed of representatives of the dioceses at large, and of each particular chapter therein, resembles the House of Commons, with its knights of the shire and burgesses." But this is a very loose and inaccurate statement.

Archbishops
Tenison and Marsh as to consensus fratrum.

The manuscript correspondence between Marsh, Archbishop of Dublin, and Tenison, Archbishop of Canterbury, is adverse to the absolute power of the archbishop.

Marsh, Archbishop of Dublin, wrote to the Archbishop of Canterbury in 1703, when the Irish Convocation was revived, for information ; and he asks, "Whether, if any one bishop (or two, or a major part of the bishops present) should offer any matter in y^e Upper House of Convocation to be debated, or put to the vote, y^e matter may be debated or put to the vote, although the president doth not or will not propose it. Whether the president be bound to propose all such matters so offered as aforesaid ? or whether he hath a discretional power therein ?

(y) Forma Precum in utrâque Domo Convocationis (1847), pp. 13, 14.

(z) Elaborate opinions were given by Sir F. Thesiger and Sir Robert Phillimore, the author of this work to this effect, and of Sir W. Page Wood to the contrary, in 1853. See a reference to them : Warren, Synodalia, pp. 409-416, and opinions themselves printed in a pamphlet published in 1853 by Rivingtons, entitled "Convocation — Reasons, &c." See preface to ed. 1854 of Gibson, Syn. Angl., p. xli.; and Atterbury, Rights, Powers, and Privileges of an English Convocation, pp. 13-15.

“Both which questions may be comprehended in this one, viz., What power y^e president in convocation hath in proposing matters to be debated on, and in voting whether he hath only one single voice or two? or a negative?”

Marsh proceeds, “I have one other request to your grace, which is, y^t y^u will please to order me a copy of y^e writ for proroguing a convocation, because we can find no form of such a writ here.”

Appended to this MS., which is in the handwriting of Marsh, is the reply of Tenison, unaddressed. It appears to be the draft of the letter which was sent to Ireland. It is in Tenison’s own hand, and is as follows:—

“The way to prove the right in y^e president to propose or not propose matters to y^e consideration of y^e House must be by repeated instances of his refusal to propose what has been offered by the members; and such refusals are not to be met with. Without doubt everything which the bishops debate is regularly proposed to them by the president, who easily discovers the inclinations of the majority, or may put it to the vote, whether this or that shall be proposed, in case the bishops seem to differ in their opinions. In this and all other votes previous to the final determination of business, the president has the casting vote upon an equality; but to suppose it wholly in his breast what shall be proposed or not proposed, debated or not debated, would be too great a power, greater than the king himself has in parliament.

“After any business in convocation is completed, I think the consent of the president to be absolutely necessary; and y^e president is perfectly safe in proposing what y^e majority desires, when he is sure it cannot finally be passed into an act, nor be published as such, in case he dislike it” (a).

There is no doubt that Convocation is now dissolved by the death of the sovereign.

Convocation dissolved by death of sovereign.

The Convocation of Philip and Mary’s reign is said in extracts out of the Upper House books to be soluta per mortem regine Marie; as we find afterwards (anno 1624) that the Convocation was dissolved by the death of King James the First.

“On the contrary (Gibson observes), before the Reformation,

(a) Lathbury, History of the Convocation of the Church of England, p. 466; he cites from Gibson, MSS. vol. i., Nos. 97, 98; and Lathbury adds, “In a postscript to this letter, Marsh alludes to the great storm which had caused so much mischief in England, remarking that in Ireland it was only an ordinary high wind. In the same volume is another letter from Marsh to Tenison in the same year, in which he alludes to the Irish convocation. He hopes the queen will not refuse her writ during the parliament, ‘thereby to restore the right of the church before our parliament be dissolved. For we fear, if we do not recover this old right in her majestie’s reign, our church may never be able to obtain it; and if the present opportunity of this parliament be let slip, it being uncertain when we shall have another we may be debarred that way also.’” Gibson, MSS. vol. i., No. 99.

anno 1412, we find that Archbishop Arundel summoned a convocation in obedience to the king's writ; and yet it was continued for some time after the death of Henry the Fourth. Again, anno 1460, Archbishop Bouchier issued his summons in a like obedience to the royal writ; but the same convocation, not expiring with the death of Henry the Sixth, continued in the reign of Edward the Fourth.

"The difference in this matter, before and since the Reformation, naturally arises from the foregoing construction of the Submission Act. Before that was made the archbishop had a right to hold convocations independent of the prince, and was by consequence under no obligation to discontinue them upon the death or demise of the prince; he was bound to obey the royal writ as oft as it was sent him, by exerting the summoning authority according to the tenor thereof; but he was not absolutely confined to wait for and receive such writ, in order to summon or hold; nor was a convocation, holden by the archbishop independent of the king, an illegal assembly by the laws then in being.

"But by the Statute of Submission, interpreted in its most genuine meaning, an absolute restraint is placed upon the archbishop from holding his convocation, unless authorized to do so by the royal writ. By this means, any such meeting of the bishops and clergy, holden by the archbishop without such writ, is become an illegal assembly. Now the force of the writ, directed to the archbishop to take off the restraint laid upon him by the statute, must cease and expire with the prince, in whose name and under whose seal it was issued: and when that happens, the archbishop is by law reduced to the same inability to hold a convocation, as he was under before the reception of such writ" (b).

Therefore, in 1701, when some of the clergy contended that the Convocation was not dissolved by the death of King William, the contrary was determined by the government, acting upon proper legal advice (c).

Convocation
may sit after dissolution of parliament.

On the other hand, the dissolution of parliament does not necessarily entail the dissolution of convocation. It was determined by high authority in the reign of Charles the First, "That the Convocation called by the king's writ is to continue till it be dissolved by the king's writ, notwithstanding the dissolution of the parliament" (d).

Making and promulging of Canons.

The following is an extract from the minutes of the Canterbury Convocation Upper House of Tuesday, 28th February, 1888, and gives the formal mode of making and promulging new canons (e):—

brethren the prelates present that he had given directions to have the new canons amending the 62nd and 102nd canons of the year of our Lord 1603, as agreed to by both houses in the last sessions of convocation, engrossed and prepared for the signatures of the members of convocation, and the same had been engrossed on parchment, and were now ready for publication.

Canons as to hours of marriage.

“The president directed the prolocutor to be informed that the Upper House were prepared to make and promulge the aforesaid canons, and his Grace summoned the prolocutor with the whole of the Lower House to attend the Upper House in the board room (f) aforesaid.

“The prolocutor and the clergy of the Lower House having come up, and appeared before the president, his Grace then informed both houses of convocation that the new canons, amending the 62nd and 102nd canons were ready to be signed, promulged, and executed; and the president being then seated in the tribunal, or seat of judgment, the right reverend the prelates seated on the right side of his Grace, and the prolocutor and clergy of the Lower House standing on the left side.

“The president then and there to wit in the said board room read, promulged, and published the said new canons amending the 62nd and 102nd canons, both in English and in Latin; his Grace and the prolocutor holding the parchment on which the said new canons were engrossed severally with their right hands, whilst his Grace read the same in the presence of the aforesaid right reverend the prelates and the clergy of the Lower House, and having so read, promulged, and published the said new canons severally and respectively, his Grace then and there signed the same respectively, and the right reverend the prelates also signed the same, as did the prolocutor and the clergy of the Lower House, in the presence of his Grace the president.

“The said new canons are as follows:—[The text of the new canons is then set out].”

SECT. 4.—Forms of Procedure in Lower House.

Stipendiary curates, deacons and the laity are ineligible as members by the present constitution of convocation; and only parsons, vicars, and perpetual curates are capable of giving their votes in choosing proctors for the diocesan clergy (g). Election of proctors.

If any member of the convocation, who is a proctor, dies, the archbishop issues his mandate to the bishop of that diocese to elect another, and this by virtue of the power inherent in him of the Province of Canterbury, for these minutes.

to summon his suffragan bishops : who being to obey him in all things lawful and honest, and the clergy their bishop, in the like manner, they by that command make an election to supply the place of one of their proctors (g).

In the province of Canterbury there are only two proctors returned for each diocese. In those dioceses where there are several archdeaconries, two are nominated by the clergy of each archdeaconry, and out of these, two are chosen to serve as proctors for the whole diocese. But in the province of York two proctors are sent to convocation for every archdeaconry ; otherwise the number would be so small as scarce to deserve the name of a provincial synod. By this means it comes to pass that the parochial clergy have as great an interest in convocation there, as the cathedral clergy (h).

Controverted elections.

According to Gibson (i), there is no doubt as to the right of the metropolitan, at the head of his suffragan bishops, to receive petitions touching controverted elections, or to proceed to an examination and final decision of them in the Upper House, or to enjoin members of the Lower House to examine and determine such elections ; the only question has been as to concurrent power on the part of the Lower House, for which there appears to be some colour, though not strong, of precedent ; and it is to be observed, that the prolocutor has exercised the power of examining witnesses upon oath.

Election of prolocutor.

While (Gibson (k) observes) the archbishops, bishops and clergy were used to debate in a body, the clergy, upon any emergency that required separate consultation, were directed to retire for that end. The result of their debates was to be reported above ; and that made it necessary to fix upon some one of the members to represent the opinions or resolutions of the rest : the whole body being all the while present, and he only distinguished by speaking in their name. From thence he had the style of prolocutor and organum cleri : and from his relating to the president and bishops the effect of their debates, that of referendarius.

In the year 1415, Nov. 18, a convocation was holden at St. Paul's under Archbishop Chicheley, and one Henry Ware is mentioned as prolocutor. This is said to be the first time that the name of prolocutor occurs in the registry (l).

In the year 1425 the great canonist, Lindwood, was formally elected prolocutor.

The prolocutor has sometimes been recommended by the archbishop ; and the Lower House has always had the antecedent order or leave of his Grace before proceeding to election, and this both in the beginning and during the sitting of convocation upon a vacancy occurring. The prolocutor is presented to the archbishop and bishops for confirmation. The precedents are in favour of the necessity of leave being obtained from the Upper House before the prolocutor can appoint a deputy. All messages from the Lower to the Upper House are regularly carried up by the prolocutor.

The form of electing the prolocutor in 1864 appears by the minutes of convocation to have been as follows :—

Session LXII. (m)—Tuesday, April 19, 1864. Upper House. The house met at twelve o'clock. His Grace the Archbishop presided. Prayers were read. Form of electing prolocutor in 1864.

Election of Prolocutor.

The Dean of Westminster and a large number of the members of the Lower House being in attendance,

The president, addressing them, said—"Officio Prolocutoris vacante per resignationem viri admodum Reverendi Decani Bristolensis, monemus vos, Fratres e clero inferiore, ut vosmet recipientes in cameram Hierosolymatanam ecclesiæ collegiatæ Divi Petri Westmonasteriensis Decanatu contiguam, eligatis e numero vestro virum aliquem, pietate, doctrinâ, gravitate morum ac prudentiâ conspicuum, electum vero hoc loco nobis presentatis, ut legitime approbatus, ad Prolocutoris seu Referendarii vestri munus admittatur."

The members of the Lower House then retired to the Jerusalem Chamber to elect the prolocutor.

On their return to the Upper House, Canon Wordsworth, who was chosen by the Lower House, presented the newly-elected prolocutor to the archbishop and the bishops—[His speech is given at length in the original Latin in the Chronicle of Convocation, vol. ii. p. 1445].

The president replied in the following terms :—"Approbamus, Fratres e clero inferiore, virum Venerabilem Edvardum Bickersteth, Sanctæ Theologiæ Professore, ritè et legitime e vobis electum in officium Prolocutoris vestri vacans per resignationem viri admodum Reverendi Decani Bristolensis; et illum, auctoritate nostrâ, ad Prolocutoris sive Referendarii vestri munus admittimus."

The prolocutor replied—[His Latin speech is also given in the Chronicle of Convocation].

The prolocutor and the other members of the Lower House then retired. Business in Lower House.

From the earliest account (n) of proceedings in convocation, it appears to have been usual for the clergy to lay before the archbishop, or the president and bishops, the grievances under which they laboured, and to pray redress. These were styled

(m) Chronicles of Convocation, (n) Gibs. Syn. Angl. p. 147.
vol. 2, pp. 1445—1447.

gravamina or articuli cleri, and related chiefly to matters of jurisdiction and their civil property, viz., the encroachments of lay officers, exactions, and irregularities of ecclesiastical courts, frequently called injuriæ.

Sometimes the redress of them was made a condition of the subsidy granted—sometimes their petitions were addressed to the crown, sometimes to the archbishops and bishops, sometimes to the king singly, sometimes to the king in council, sometimes to the king in parliament. When the matter to be reformed related to the common good of the church, they were addressed and presented in the names of bishops and clergy and synodically settled; these are called in the registers reformanda in convocatione. When the matter was special, the clergy presented their grievances to the Upper House for their approbation and the conveyance of them to the crown or parliament; yet the form ran in their own name only—these are properly gravamina and articuli cleri.

The Upper House has often directed the time and form at which such presentments shall be proposed and offered.

The reformanda, whether in convocatione, in parlamento, or per regem, inasmuch as they concerned the general weal of the whole church, were frequently moved and proposed by the archbishop at the opening of the convocation among the causes of his summons. The bishops and clergy were to proceed jointly to a reformation of abuses specified in a schedule.

“While” (I am, as before, citing Gibson) “the archbishop and bishops are supposed to be consulting in the Upper House, whether any regulations in the church, or in their particular diocese, be necessary at any time; the clergy in the Lower House, who are supposed to be eye-witnesses of many things that do not ordinarily reach the notice of their diocesan, have a right, either jointly or separately, to lay before their lordships an account of any disorderly persons or practices they know: and this either vivâ voce, by the prolocutor, or in schedules put into the prolocutor’s hands, in order to be severally laid before the archbishop and bishops, and to be compared and jointly considered with those of the same kind exhibited by their lordships. These reformanda, in many cases, could require no more than the strict exercise of the ordinary jurisdiction in every diocese, and were therefore answered by a solemn recommendation of them to the care of the bishops respectively. But if the abuses called for a new law, and the reformation of them required the assistance of the prince or the parliament, these schedules were reduced into articles, and upon them, as containing the general sense and request of the synod, such solicitations were set afoot as were judged necessary to bring about the reformation desired.

“The applications upon the reformanda in parlamento were usually left to the care of the archbishop, bishops, and the parliamentary prelates” (o).

In convocation, those who are absent are allowed to vote by Proxies. proxy; and the bishops, when they could have holden lesser dignities in commendam, constituted any person that was member of the Lower House to vote there as their proxy, for such deaneries or archdeaconries as they held in commendam (p).

After any matter in convocation has been duly considered, read and agreed to by the bishops and clergy severally, the prolocutor and the inferior clergy are sent for to the Upper House, and there it is passed into a synodical act (q). What a synodical act is.

The several sorts of business in convocation, however differently passed in some respects, agree in this, that the inferior clergy are sent for to the Upper House, and there the whole convocation, the metropolitan, bishops and presbyters, in a body, give their final consent (r).

The method of passing canons and constitutions before the statute 25 Hen. 8, c. 19, was the same that has ever been practised in synodical meetings, viz., by the authority of the synod, and with the sanction of the metropolitan; and these two give them their full force and effect. But now they are framed in order to be laid before the crown, as agreed on by the archbishop, bishops and clergy; and none to be "of any force, effect or validity in law, but only such and so many of them as he, by his letters patent under the great seal of England, shall allow, approve, and confirm." This is the language of the royal licence, the necessity whereof, in order to make, promulge and execute canons, &c., is an abridgment of the ecclesiastical power in these respects, and therefore the ancient sanction, which always signified a final authority, could not be continued in any matters which were not to be promulged or executed without the allowance, approbation and confirmation of the king by his letters patent under the great seal of England.

But all synodical acts to which the royal licence is not necessary receive their final authority from the sanction of the metropolitan; i.e., they still pass, in the ancient canonical way, whatever (I continue to cite Gibson) some late writers, too much bent upon the diminution of ecclesiastical power, may suggest to the contrary.

And even in canons and all other matters passing by subscription the metropolitan's ancient authority remains thus far entire, that without his concurrence the agreement of all the rest is not the act of convocation, nor can be presented as such to the prince for his royal confirmation.

Continuatio.

When the business of the day is over, the archbishop consults with his suffragans about a convenient day to which they may, to use the proper phrase, "continue" for the further prosecution of the business before them. A schedule of continuation is delivered by the registrar to his Grace, who personally or by deputy publicly reads and signs it. This reading and signing is formally attested by a public notary—whereby the Lower House is legally assured that it is his Grace's act, and are apprized of what they are to do in consequence thereof.

The use of schedules is of earlier date than the division of the two houses, and therefore than the Reformation; but there appears to be no record of a separate schedule of continuation while the two houses debated together (s).

Probably such schedules came into use when it began to be less usual for the lower clergy to stay with the bishops in the upper house throughout the debates, and so to be present at the continuation.

While the custom was to enter this continuation at large in the register, the convocation was either continued in a body as it still is in the province of York, or notice was given to the lower clergy by the prolocutor or some authorized person.

In course of time, as business increased and the separation of the two houses became more decided, the notary ceased to transcribe the continuation at length, but merely referred to the original schedule deposited in the same office with the acts of both houses. The continuation was of the whole convocation, not of the Upper House. This it was the duty of the prolocutor to convey (intimare) to the Lower House. This power of continuation belonged to the archbishop cum consensu fratrum when the two houses were united, and was preserved to him when they separated (t). The usual language was "de et cum consensu fratrum suorum continuavit et prorogavit hujusmodi convocationem sive sacram synodum provincialem."

Prorogatio.

But the prorogation is, strictly speaking, distinct from the continuation. As the archbishop, upon receiving the royal writ for calling a convocation, is bound by law to exert his summoning authority, so he is bound to prorogue and dissolve in the proper canonical form when the pleasure of the crown is signified to this effect. This is a deference which, Gibson says, has ever been paid to Christian princes. The royal order is executed by a formal declaration out of a schedule, mentioning the royal writ, but running solely in the archbishop's name, and pronounced by him in the presence of the bishops and clergy (u).

petition.

"The clergy in convocation" (Gibson observes) "have a right not only to the redress of their own particular grievances, or to interpose for the reformation of any disorders they may observe in the church, but also to offer to the archbishop and bishops all such measures as may in their opinion tend to the honour and interest of religion" (x).

Atterbury says "...; yet even subjects themselves may petition and make known whatever grievances or requests they have to offer without encroachments on any of their superiors. And that the liberty of such addresses and representations is still left to the convocation (to the Lower House only or to both jointly), I have fully showed: the Statute of Submission, even under the most rigorous interpretation of it, being scarce pretended to abridge their privileges in this respect" (y).

This position seems to be right in itself, and upon the whole not at variance with the precedents. The records show petitions:—

1. For making new canons;
 2. For the revival of old canons;
 3. For the abolition or suspension of particular laws;
 4. For the appointment of new and the enforcement of old festivals;
 5. For the intercession of the archbishop with the crown to restrain lay officers from oppressing the church, or to enforce ecclesiastical laws;
 6. For the more strict execution of ecclesiastical discipline;
- and for various other matters.

No particular time was necessarily fixed for presenting petitions to the Upper House, whether vivâ voce or in scriptis—or indeed to any other authority.

In 1853, certain standing orders were adopted by the Lower House of Convocation (z). Standing orders.

In 1854, a committee of the Lower House under the superintendence of a very eminent prolocutor, Dr. Peacock, sat upon the general question of the privileges of their own house—the fruit of their labours was the following very valuable report, in which most of the subjects discussed in this chapter were touched upon. Privileges.

"The committee of privileges of the Lower House of Convocation, appointed at its last session, met on the 14th of March, the 9th of May, the 6th and the 20th of June, and on the 19th of July, in the Jerusalem Chamber, the use of which was kindly allowed for that purpose by the dean and chapter of Westminster; and they report as follows (a):— Report of committee of privileges in 1854.

"That they have had under their consideration various points connected with the constitution, the privileges, and the practice of the Lower House of Convocation, about which doubts have been expressed and disputes have arisen, not only in ancient times, but even at our recent sessions, and which cannot remain unsettled without producing very serious inconveniences, or even endangering the harmonious co-operation of the two Houses of Convocation with each other.

“That the subjects to which they have chiefly directed their attention are, the powers of this house in complaints connected with the election of its members and the exercise of their rights; the duties and powers of the prolocutor in conducting the business of this house, in continuing or closing its debates, in acting as the organ of communication between the two houses and in the nomination of committees, whether by the authority of this house or at the command of the president; the mode of dealing with gravamina and reformanda; the business which it is competent for this house to enter upon; the general constitution and appointment of committees of the two houses, and the treatment of business committed to them; the forms of proceeding in the appointment and confirmation of the prolocutor and the nomination of a substitute; and the reception and treatment of petitions addressed to this house. They are noticed generally in the order in which they were considered by your committee.

“In the opinions they have expressed, and the recommendations they have made, they have not proposed to amend the constitution of Convocation, even in points where they may have considered it capable of amendment, but have been guided by a reference to ancient precedents, whenever these could be found of so clear and unambiguous a character as to authorize a definite conclusion; in other cases, where the precedents are doubtful or apparently at variance with each other, they have come to such conclusions as seem to be most conformable to the general constitution of Convocation.

As to adjudicating on elections.

“(1) Has this house the right of adjudicating in disputed elections of proctors?

“It is the opinion of this committee that the Lower House has no right to adjudicate in disputed elections of proctors.

“In the case of Dey against Knewstubbs, noticed at length in the acts of the Lower House for the 9th and 11th of November, 1586, where the prolocutor appoints and administers an oath to commissioners to inquire into the facts connected with the election, and adjudicates upon their report, it is probable that he acted by a commission from the president: for in the very same session in which he makes his adjudication, the decision of the president in another disputed election, that of West against Thorowgood, is made known through his registrar to the prolocutor, and by him communicated to the house.

“On the 14th of November, 1640, when it was no longer safe for the Upper House to meet in consequence of the public disturbances, the archbishop sent for the prolocutor and six of his brethren, and directed him and the rest of the clergy to inquire into a disputed election, that of Thorowgood against Porter: the bishops met no more; but the prolocutor and the Lower House, being thus authorized by the president, proceeded to adjudicate; the prolocutor, in accordance with the majority, pronounced for the election of Thorowgood.

"Representations, however, respecting disputed elections, or any irregularities connected with them, when made by any member in the form of petition or otherwise, may be taken into consideration by the Lower House, and treated like any other gravamina which are brought under their notice.

"It appears that in the Convocations of the early part of the last century committees of elections were appointed, as well as committees of privileges and of gravamina. If the object of these committees had been inquiry merely, their functions might properly have been discharged by the committees of gravamina. It is therefore probable that their appointment originated in the claim of a right to adjudicate upon disputed elections. There are obvious reasons, however, which would make us hesitate to follow any precedent of that period, unless it was supported by other authorities.

"(2) What limitations are imposed upon the appointment or use of proxies? As to proxies.

"It is the opinion of this committee that those members of the Lower House, who are so in virtue of their office, can appoint proxies: and that the president is the sole judge of the validity of such appointments.

"In the Convocation of 1689, 'it was debated what proxies each man might have from those that were absent, and it was agreed that one man might have four:' in the Convocation of 1701, this number was further limited to three, but was extended to five by the standing orders of 1722, which orders were adopted by this house at the first session of this Convocation. Though it is the opinion of your committee that this house possesses no power of limiting the number of proxies which one of its members may hold, there are many reasons to be urged in favour of a further limitation of this privilege, as the accumulation of many votes in the hands of one member might be productive of some inconveniences.

"In the Convocation of 1689, 'it was agreed that proctors for the clergy who had not appeared might appoint proxies, precedents having been found for the same:' and in the Convocation of 1701 such proxies were admitted. The table of fees signed and established by Archbishop Whitgift, which is still in force, assigns a fee to the registrar to be paid by every dean or archdeacon who appears by proxy; and it may be inferred that a corresponding fee would have been assigned to be paid by every proctor of a chapter or of the clergy, who appointed a proxy, if such appointments had been authorized. It is stated by Atterbury in his Rights, Powers, and Privileges of our English Convocation, that proctors of the clergy and of chapters were sometimes authorized by the instruments of their appointment to name substitutes, not proxies, to appear for them: thus in the 1st of Edward VI., the proctor for the clergy of Hereford named two such substitutes, and in the last year of the same king, the procuratorium of the dean and chapter of St. Paul's had a clause in it to the same effect: in an ancient memorandum relating to a Convocation held at Carlisle, in the reign of Edward I., which Atterbury has quoted in his Appendix, it is stated that Joh. de Wakerle, Clericus, Procurator Cleri Archidiacon. Surr. habens potestatem alium procuratorem substituendi, substituit loco sui Joh. de Bray, Clericum. It is probable that these were the precedents referred to by the Convocation in 1689.

As to gravamina et reformanda.

“(3) The mode of dealing with schedules of gravamina and reformanda.

“When schedules of gravamina or reformanda are presented to the house, they may be referred, upon a motion duly made and carried, to a committee of gravamina and reformanda, by which they may be recommended as proper subjects to be made articuli cleri, and, when approved by the house, to be presented as such to the Upper House, through the prolocutor: but other gravamina or reformanda, more particularly if they be of a local and special, rather than of a general, character, may be transmitted to the Upper House through the prolocutor, in the name of the member who presents them. It has been the uniform practice to require that all representations, of whatever kind, which are presented to the Upper House, should be in writing.

“It has been usual to appoint a committee of gravamina and reformanda at the beginning of every Convocation, which committee has continued to act as such, until discharged by the authority of this House.

“It is provided by the 11th of the standing orders of 1722, ‘that any members may come and propose anything to any committees of this house, but none to have liberty of suffrage except such as are deputed of the committee, unless when it is otherwise ordered by this house.’ From a discussion which arose respecting this standing order at our last session, it seemed to be the general feeling of this house, though no motion to that effect was made, that no new propositions should be allowed to be submitted to the committee of gravamina, unless they had immediate reference to the subjects under its consideration: and it is our opinion that the preceding standing order should be so modified, as to exclude from the cognizance of your committees all matters not specifically referred to them by the vote of this house.

How far Lower is dependent on Upper House.

“(4) Has the Lower House the right of declining to enter upon the consideration of business submitted to it by the Upper House, or to appoint committees when required by the president to do so?

“It appears to be most conformable to ancient precedents that the Lower House should not decline to enter upon the consideration of business committed to it by the Upper House, or to appoint committees either for special business or to meet committees of the Upper House, when required by the president to do so.

“There are two well-known precedents in which the Lower House refused to appoint committees of their members to meet committees of the Upper House—the one in 1689 and the other in 1701—and these refusals formed a principal topic in the controversies which prevailed at the beginning of the last century respecting the relations of the two houses to each other.

“Heylin, in his MS. Extracts, as quoted by Atterbury, gives another instance of such refusal in 1542. The correction of the Romish service-books was committed by the Upper House to the bishops of Sarum and Ely, taking to each of them a certain number of the Lower House such as should be appointed: and it is stated that the Lower House excused themselves from making any such appointment, and left the two bishops to proceed with the business by themselves.

“Burnet in his History relates that in the Convocation of 1712, the bishops, having agreed upon a declaration respecting lay baptism, sent it down to the Lower House, ‘but they would not,’ says he, ‘so much as take it into consideration, but laid it aside: thinking that it would encourage those who struck at the priesthood.’ The detailed reasons, however, assigned by the Lower House for the course which they adopted, were in reality equivalent to a rejection of the proposition, which was quite within their province: this case therefore does not amount to a precedent in favour of the right of refusing to take the business proposed to them into consideration.

“Whatever force may be attributed to these precedents, as establishing the abstract right of the Lower House to refuse to appoint committees when required by the president to do so, or to enter upon the consideration of business committed to it—they do not appear to be sufficient to justify such refusals.

“(5) Has the Lower House the right of entering upon the consideration of business not previously committed to it by the Upper House?

Must business be committed by Upper to Lower House?

“It is the opinion of your committee that, in conformity with ancient precedent and the constitution of convocation, more especially as limited by the Act of Submission, the Lower House has no right to enter upon the consideration of any business, with a view to a synodal act, unless previously committed to it by the Upper House: but it may suggest the consideration of any business to the Upper House by way of petition or address.

“It is very difficult to define the precise boundaries which separate the questions which are, from those which are not, forbidden by the statute 25 Henry 8, c. 19, to be considered in convocation without the royal licence. It is stated by Atterbury, ‘that in all the convocations since the 1st James 1, none of them took out licences but when they were to make canons.' His opponent Wake concurs in this statement, and adds, 'I do humbly insist upon it, that no restraint has been laid upon the clergy in convocation, but only in the point of attempting or enacting, or to express all in one word, of making canons, constitutions, orders, and ordinances provincial. In all other matters I account them still at liberty, not only to treat but to resolve too, as they did before; but in all such cases where the clergy are restrained, by the Act of Submission, from enacting, promulging, and executing without the king's licence, in the same they are also restrained from attempting, that is, from treating and conferring in order to enact.' As a natural inference from this opinion, which has been very generally held to be a correct interpretation of the statute, we should consider the house to be restrained from passing any resolution, which, if enacted, would become a canon: but the case would be different if such resolution took the form of an address or petition to the Upper House, with a view to obtain the royal licence to proceed to the consideration of such business.

"This principle is well illustrated by one of the proceedings of the Lower House of Convocation in 1709, which was the drawing up of a declaration that episcopacy was of divine and apostolical right, with an invitation to the Upper House to concur with them in pronouncing it a settled maxim of the church. 'But the bishops,' says Burnet, 'saw through their designs, and sent them for answer, that they acquiesced in the declaration already made on that in the preface to the Book of Ordinations, and that they did not think it safe either for them or for the clergy to go farther in that matter without a royal licence.' Such a proposition, even if legitimate, ought to have proceeded from the Upper and not from the Lower House, and the declaration, if agreed to, would have amounted to such an attempt to make a canon or constitution as is forbidden by the Act of Submission.

As to committees of Lower House not required by president.

"(6) What are the objects for which committees may be appointed by the Lower House when it is not required to do so by the president, and in what manner are such committees appointed?

"It appears to be consistent with ancient precedents for the Lower House to appoint committees for its own purposes, and to give such instructions to them as it may think necessary. Of this kind are committees of privileges to consider all questions concerning the rights and privileges of the Lower House, and committees of gravamina and reformanda to consider complaints and representations made by members of the house, or in petitions transmitted through them.

"The appointment of such committees has usually been proposed and agreed to by the house at the beginning of each convocation, or whenever the occasion for making them occurred; after which the members to serve upon them have been nominated by the prolocutor, and submitted to the house for its approval.

"As the deliberations of such committees are entirely confined to the regulation of the affairs of the Lower House, or to the preparation of business which it has in hand, and in no respect affect the relations of the Lower to the Upper House, it does not appear to be necessary or required by general precedent to signify the appointment of such committees to the president, or to request his approval of the names of those who are appointed to serve upon them.

"(7) For what objects may the president require the appointment of committees of the Lower House, and in what manner are such committees appointed?

For what objects president may require committees of Lower House.

"With respect to the right of the president to direct the Lower House, through its prolocutor, to name committees of its members for various specified purposes, the examination of the ancient documents would appear to lead to the following conclusions.

"The president, through the prolocutor, may direct the Lower House, as a body to consider any subject committed to it, or to appoint a committee of its members for that purpose. Sometimes the number of members of such committee was prescribed; at other times it was left to the discretion of the house. The names of the persons so selected were sometimes communicated to the president, ut deuit, (as it was said,) that is, from a sense of propriety: and there can be little doubt, from a general consideration of the tenor of the precedents, that if a return of such names had been required in any case, it would have been held to be the duty of the Lower House to comply with the order.

"Again, the president has been accustomed to direct the Lower House to appoint a certain number of its members to meet a certain number of those of the Upper House, and to return the names so appointed to the president for his approval.

"To such committees was entrusted, either a special inquiry, or the transaction of a special business, and, when the appointment was unconditional, it may reasonably be concluded that the members of the two houses possessed equal powers, and acted in every respect as one body. In other cases, they would appear to have been appointed to confer with a certain number of members of the Upper House, when it may be inferred that they were merely consulted by the latter, who were authorized to report, if they thought proper so to do, independently of them. Committees of the Lower House were also sometimes appointed to meet committees of the Upper House, when summoned, in which case it may be inferred that they met for deliberation in common, without the members of either house being pledged to adopt the opinion of the majority.

"The examination of the precedents would show many other forms in which the president could command the services of members of the Lower House; all clearly indicating that the Lower House, though possessing important prescriptive privileges of its own—in the appointment of committees for its own purposes, in its power of petition and representation, and more especially in that of a final negative upon all business committed to it—was considered as acting in general subordination to the orders of the president.

“Whilst we fully recognize the existence of precedents which lead to a contrary conclusion, we are of opinion that it is desirable that all the members of committees of the two houses, when they meet together—unless for the purpose of conference merely—should meet upon equal terms, and that the result of their joint deliberations should in all cases be reported to convocation.

“It would appear, as far as regards the Lower House, that the usual course of proceeding in the appointment of such committees has been as follows. The president directs the prolocutor to nominate the members of such committees, and to submit the names of the persons so nominated to him. The prolocutor then proceeds at once to make his nomination, without requesting the leave of the Lower House to do so: but the names so selected are submitted to the house for its approval.

“By this course of proceeding the Lower House is in no respect committed to the expression of any approval or disapproval of the object for which such joint committee is appointed, but simply accepts or rejects the names submitted to it by the prolocutor.

As to debates after schedule of proroga-
tion.

“(8) Is it consistent with ancient precedents that the Lower House should continue its debates, after the schedule of prorogation has been read?

“We are of opinion that the Lower House has no power of continuing its debates after the schedule of prorogation has been read to the house, or the fact of its having been read in the Upper House has been announced by the prolocutor; but it appears to be not inconsistent with precedents for the prolocutor to exercise a discretion in deferring the announcement of the prorogation, until the consideration of the business before the house is concluded, unless it is declared by the president that the prorogation is immediate.

How prolocutor is appointed.

“(9) The form of appointing, presenting, and confirming the prolocutor.

“The forma eligendi et præsentandi prolocutorem drawn up by Archbishop Parker in 1562, is sufficiently full and precise, and appears to have been invariably followed. This form, as well as the forma sive descriptio convocationis celebrandæ, drawn up at the same time, are stated to have been designed not merely as a rule for himself in holding the first convocation, but also as a standing pattern for his successors.

“If a prolocutor dies or vacates his office, a new prolocutor is elected, presented, and confirmed, according to the accustomed forms.

“(10) The mode of appointing a deputy prolocutor, when the prolocutor is unable to attend from illness or other causes. Deputy prolocutor.

“The prolocutor, with the sanction of the house, may name a deputy or deputies to act in his absence, but such nomination must be approved by the president.

“(11) Has the Lower House the right to receive petitions, and if so, in what form should they be addressed, or in what manner transmitted, to it? Petitions to Lower House.

“The convocation of this province, when the two houses are separated, is deemed to be held in the place where the Upper House assembles, and petitions therefore addressed to convocation generally should be transmitted to the Upper House.

“Petitions, however, addressed to the Lower House may be received in the same manner as other representations coming from the members who present them, and either referred to the committee of gravamina and reformanda, or be otherwise dealt with as may be determined. It is obviously the duty of the proctors of the chapters and clergy to present the gravamina and reformanda of those whom they represent to the consideration of the house.

“In conclusion, your committee beg to state that they have ventured to express no opinion respecting the rights and customs of the Upper House, except in their relation to those of the Lower House; and when they have spoken of the acts of the president, they have equally abstained from expressing any opinion whether they may or may not require the concurrence of his brother prelates. Nothing said as to consensus fratrum.

SECT. 5.—General Powers and Privileges.

By Can. 139 of 1603, “Whosoever shall hereafter affirm, That the sacred synod of this nation, in the name of Christ and by the king’s authority assembled, is not the true Church of England by representation, let him be excommunicated, and not restored until he repent, and publicly revoke that his wicked error.” Canon 139.

By Can. 140. “Whosoever shall affirm, That no manner of person, either of the clergy or laity, not being themselves particularly assembled in the said sacred synod, are to be subject to the decrees thereof in causes ecclesiastical (made and ratified by the king’s majesty’s supreme authority) as not having given their voices unto them, let him be excommunicated, and not restored until he repent and publicly revoke that his wicked error.” Canon 140.

By Can. 141. “Whosoever shall hereafter affirm, That the sacred synod assembled as aforesaid was a company of such persons as Canon 141.

did conspire together against godly and religious professors of the Gospel; and that therefore both they and their proceedings, in making of canons and constitutions in causes ecclesiastical by the king's authority as aforesaid, ought to be despised and condemned, the same being ratified, confirmed, and enjoined by the said regal power, supremacy and authority: let them be excommunicated, and not restored until they repent and publicly revoke that their wicked error."

No power to bind the temporalty.

Lord Coke says, a convocation may make constitutions by which those of the spirituality shall be bound, for this, that they all, either by representation or in person, are present, but not the temporalty (b).

And in Matthew v. Burdett, in 1 Anne, it was said, that, in the primitive church, the laity were present at all synods. When the empire became Christian, no canon was made without the emperor's consent. The emperor's consent included that of the people: he having in himself the whole legislative power, which our kings have not. Therefore if the king and clergy make a canon, it binds the clergy in re ecclesiasticâ, but it does not bind laymen; they are not represented in convocation, their consent being neither asked nor given (c).

And in Cox's Case, in 1700, it was said by Wright, Lord Keeper, that the canons of a convocation do not bind the laity without an act of parliament (d).

And, finally, in the case of Croft v. Middleton, in 10 Geo. 2, it was determined by the Court of King's Bench, that such canons do not proprio vigore bind the laity (e).

Nor to contravene law of land.

The convocation can do nothing against the law of the land, for no part of the law, be it common law or statute law, can be abrogated or altered without act of parliament (f).

Appeal to the Upper House.

The provisions of 24 Hen. 8, c. 12, which in all causes testamentary, matrimonial, or of tithes, depending in the ecclesiastical courts, which shall touch the king, give to the party grieved an appeal to the Upper House of Convocation, have been already discussed (g).

Trial of heresy.

There prevailed at one time considerable doubt whether the convocation might or might not try a clerk for heresy. It may be said that, even without considering the effect of the Clergy Discipline Act, 3 & 4 Vict. c. 86, s. 23, this doubt is now practically resolved, and that convocation has no such power (h).

Trial of bishop.

The power of convocation to condemn an heretical work appears to be as well established. In 1864 convocation condemned a work entitled Essays and Reviews. The following account is taken from a record of the proceedings in Convocation on that occasion :—

Condemnation of heretical book in 1864.

“The President.—If none other of my right reverend brethren are inclined to speak, I will in a very few words state my reasons for the course which I have felt it my duty to adopt throughout these proceedings. In the first place, I hold that this synod has the power, and that it is its province and function, to condemn erroneous books. If ever I entertained any doubt on that subject, that doubt has been cleared up by the opinion of Sir Hugh Cairns and Mr. Rolt. This was the case sent to those eminent gentlemen :—

“‘The Committee of the Upper House of Convocation of the province of Canterbury is now sitting, and to enable them to make a report they desire the opinion of Sir Hugh Cairns and Mr. Rolt upon the following question :—

“‘Is the convocation of the province of Canterbury, when legally assembled under the queen’s writ, estopped by the statute of 25th Henry VIII. c. 19, or by any other statute, from proceeding to pronounce synodical condemnation upon a book, not intending to proceed against the author, without receiving the special royal licence for the purpose ?’

“The opinion is this :—

“‘We are of opinion that the convocation of the province of Canterbury is not estopped by the 25th Henry VIII. c. 19, or by any other statute, from expressing by resolution or otherwise their condemnation or disapprobation of a book, although no special royal licence is given for the purpose. Exception was taken early in the last century to the proposal of convocation to pass synodical censure on a sermon preached by Bishop Hoadley ; but it was not alleged that they were disabled by statute from so doing.

Lincoln’s Inn,

“All doubt having been cleared away upon that point, it evidently being the privilege and province of this synod to condemn books, the question in my mind simply is, whether frequently did here in England proceed to the sentencing of heretics.” 1 Hale, P. C. 390. Mr. Hawkins says, “It is certain that the convocation may declare what opinions are heretical ; but it hath been questioned of late, whether they have power at this day to convene and convict the heretic.” (1 Hawk. P. C. p. 354.) And Bp. Gibson says, “How far the convocation of each province, which had once an undoubted right to convict and punish heretics in a synodical manner, doth still retain or not retain that authority, he will not presume to say, until the judges shall be clear and final in their opinions, and that point shall have received a judicial determination.” (Gibs. p. 353.)

“That the Upper House of Convocation, having received and adopted the report of the committee of the whole house appointed by them to examine the volume entitled Essays and Reviews, invite the Lower House to concur with them in the following judgment:—‘That this synod, having appointed committees of the Upper and Lower Houses to examine and report upon the volume entitled Essays and Reviews, and the said committees having severally reported thereon, doth hereby synodically condemn the said volume, as containing teaching contrary to the doctrine received by the United Church of England and Ireland in common with the whole Catholic Church of Christ’” (k).

free coming to convocation.
8 Hen. 6, c. 1.

After the clergy had furnished a tenth to Henry the Sixth (l), they obtained the statute of 8 Hen. 6, c. 1, which enacted, “Because the prelates and clergy of the realm called to the convocation, and their servants and familiars that come with them to such convocation, oftentimes be arrested, molested, and inquieted; our lord the king, willing to provide for the security and quietness of the said prelates and clergy, at the supplication of the same prelates and clergy, and by the consent of the great men and commons of the realm, hath ordained and established, that all the clergy hereafter to be called to the convocation by the king’s writ, and their servants and familiars, shall for ever hereafter fully use and enjoy such liberty or defence in coming, tarrying, and returning, as the great men and commonalty of the realm, called or to be called to the king’s parliament, do enjoy, and were wont to enjoy, or in time to come ought to enjoy.”

And in the journals of the House of Lords, we find several applications to their lordships for redress in cases where this liberty of the convocation clergy has been invaded, which their lordships have formerly granted.

PART VIII.

THE CHURCH IN HER RELATION TO CHARITIES AND TO EDUCATION.

CHAPTER I.

INTRODUCTORY.

THE sphere of the church's activity (a) and life is not confined to the performance of purely religious offices; and it was at an early date extended to institutions of a charitable but secular character. The jurisdiction of the church was founded on the maxim that it was pro salute animæ of the founder or the testator that the church should administer the charity or the bequest. It is very remarkable that the ecclesiastical courts in England, till a very recent period, retained jurisdiction over testaments and the administration of personal property (b).

Origin of the relation of the church to charities.

The great office of chancellor was always holden by ecclesiastics before the reign of Henry the Eighth, and during part of his reign; and the proceedings of the Court of Chancery were founded upon the basis of the civil and canon law (b).

Remnants of the authority of the church in charitable and educational trusts still remain.

Existing instances of ecclesiastical jurisdiction.

Gifts or bequests for the furtherance of religious objects are, according to English law, charitable, and liable to the provisions of the laws regulating charities.

The Archbishop of Canterbury still has the power of conferring medical as well as other degrees (c).

The education of the people is, and probably always will be, much guided by the teaching of the clergy under the inspection of the diocesan.

The effect of modern legislation, however, has been to sever the necessary connection between the church and education.

Severing of connection in modern times.

(a) Walter, Lehrbuch, Von der besonderen Kirchlichen Anstalten, § 337, u. s. w.

(b) Vide supra, pp. 827, 930.

(c) It is usual for the recipient of such a degree to wear the hood of that degree in the university of which the archbishop is a member.

The Toleration Acts have taken away the penalties which might at one time have been inflicted on teachers who did not profess obedience to the church. The canons that require licence from the ordinary for every teacher were not binding on the laity, and have become almost obsolete as to the clergy. Finally, in regard to the four great classes of teaching institutions, namely, the universities, the public schools, the middle class schools, and the primary schools, the University Commission Acts, and the University Tests Act, 1871; the Public Schools Act, 1868; the Endowed Schools Act, 1869, and the Welsh Intermediate Education Act, 1889, and the Elementary Education Act, 1870 (c), respectively, have either caused or recognized with a legislative sanction an increased separation between the church and education in this country.

Subject of part.

Such instances of ecclesiastical influence as still remain, which show themselves not in the mode of teaching so much as in the nature and government of the teaching institutions, will be treated of in the following pages.

CHAPTER II.

CHARITABLE TRUSTS.

SECT. 1.—*Generally.*2.—*Law of Mortmain.*SECT. 1.—Generally.

THE connection of the church with charities, which was at one time productive of most important results in the application of general principles to both, still remains and operates in some material circumstances. These may thus be classified :—

Instances of connection between church and charities.

(A.) The established church itself is a charity, and all religious uses are charitable ones, and as such are subject to the general law of charities.

(B.) The authorities of the church have certain jurisdiction over charities.

(C.) The church has, in some cases, recognized the status conferred on its members by their position in a charitable corporation.

(D.) Questions relating to charities have frequently been decided according to the principles of civil or ecclesiastical law.

(E.) By the law of the land the church has certain peculiar privileges in relation to charities.

(A.) The scope and meaning of the word “charity” as a legal term has been clearly laid down by judicial authority.

What are charities.

Charity may, “in its wildest sense, denote all the good affections men ought to bear towards each other ; in its most restricted and common sense, relief of the poor.” But in neither of these senses is it employed in a court of equity. There “its signification is derived chiefly from the Statute of Elizabeth. Those purposes are considered charitable, which that statute enumerates, or which by analogies are deemed within its spirit and intendment ; . . .” (a).

This statute of Elizabeth (43 Eliz. c. 4) provided for the issuing of certain commissions to inquire into and reform abuses and neglects of charities. Its active portion was long obsolete ;

43 Eliz. c. 4.

but the preamble was constantly referred to as a declaration of the legal sense of the word "charity," and has been since re-enacted by 51 & 52 Vict. c. 42, s. 13, sub-s. 2, in the following words:—

"Whereas by the preamble to the Act of the forty-third year of Elizabeth, chapter four (being one of the enactments hereby repealed), it is recited as follows:—

Preamble of 43 Eliz. c. 4, recited.

"Whereas landes tenementē rentes annuities pfittes hereditamentes, goodes chattels money and stockes of money, have bene heretofore given limitted appointed and assigned, as well by the Queenes moste excellent Majestie and her moste noble progenitors, as by sondrie other well disposed psons, some for releife of aged impotent and poore people, some for maintenance of sicke and maymed souldiers and marriners, schooles of learninge, free schooles and schollers in univrsities, some for repaire of bridges portes havens causwaies churches seabankes and highewaies, some for educacon and pfermente of orphans, some for or towards reliefe stocke or maintenance for howses of correccon, some for mariages of poore maides, some for supportacon ayde and helpe of younge tradesmen, handiecraftesmen and psons decayed, and others for releife or redemption of prisoners or captives, and for aide or ease of any poore inhabitantē conēninge paymente of fifteenes, settinge out of souldiers and other taxes; whiche landes tenements rents annuities pfitts hereditaments goodes chattells money and stockes of money nevtheles have not byn employed accordinge to the charitable intente of the givers and founders thereof, by reason of fraudes breaches of truste and negligence in those that shoulde pay delyver and imploy the same:’ and whereas in divers enactments and documents reference is made to charities within the meaning, purview, and interpretation of the said Act:

“Be it therefore enacted that reference to such charities shall be construed as references to charities within the meaning, purview, and interpretation of the said preamble.”

Gifts in favour of church or religious purposes, how far charities.

The term charity, as construed by the statute of Elizabeth, has, it has been said, been always holden to extend to the church and to religious purposes. Specifically, bequests for the use or ornament of a parish church, for stipends to curates, singers and organists in churches, to societies for the spread and advancement of religion, either in England or abroad (b), have all been holden to be charitable legacies (c).

It should be noticed that while gifts for the repair of the church or ornaments in it are charitable, a gift for the repair of a grave in the churchyard and not in the church, is not charitable (d).

The peculiar principles of law which govern charities may be classified as follows:—

(1.) Gifts to charities are especially favoured by the law, and every attempt is made to effectuate the charitable intention of the donor (e). Privileges of charities.

This takes place in several ways:

The courts supply any formal defects in the gift or assurance, or in the trustees who are to be the channels of the gift (f).

The courts seize on any intention of a charitable gift, however vague and uncertain the gift may be, and appropriate it to charitable purposes of some kind or other—those charitable purposes to be afterwards worked out by the court or the trustees (g).

Charities are exempted from the general rules of the law against perpetuities; and, where it is for the benefit of the charity, it will rather be construed as perpetual than otherwise (h).

One who has endowed a charity with lands is not allowed to defeat his gift by an attempted sale to a purchaser for value under 27 Eliz. c. 4 (i).

(2.) Charities are under the especial control of the High Court of Justice, which frames schemes for their administration, directs the funds, where the object of the founder has failed, to be bestowed on the nearest resembling charity on what is called the "cy-près" principle, has peculiar modes of procedure open to charities, as by information, by petition under Sir S. Romilly's Act (52 Geo. 3, c. 101), or by summary proceedings in chambers under the Charitable Trusts Act, 1853 (16 & 17 Vict. c. 137, ss. 28—31). Control of charities by Court of Chancery.

(3.) Charities are under the especial control of visitors or governors, of commissions formerly issued under the statute of Elizabeth, and, by a series of acts from 1853 onwards, of a permanent charity commission, with large administrative and judicial powers. In other ways.

(4.) Charities are subject to the doctrines of mortmain, all charities being subject to 9 Geo. 2, c. 36, while it was in force, and charitable corporations to the Statutes of Mortmain. Mortmain.

This subject will be further dealt with at greater length (k).

(B.) The authorities of the church have certain jurisdiction over charities. Jurisdiction of church over.

Cases on
43 Eliz. c. 4.

By the 43 Eliz. c. 4, already cited, the commissions issued under that act were to be awarded to the Bishop of the diocese and his chancellor. On these words it was resolved in 44 Eliz. by Egerton Popham and Anderson, and Coke, attorney-general, that the see being full at the time of sealing the commission, if the Bishop is not named commissioner, the commission is void; but if he be named, it is not requisite that he be present at the execution, for that none is of the quorum; but any four or more may execute the same without the presence of the Bishop or his chancellor (l).

It was also resolved in the last-mentioned case, that if the see of the Bishop be void at the sealing of the commission, then the bishop need not to be named a commissioner, neither his chancellor. Or if the Bishop be named a commissioner, and die before the certificate returned, this does not avoid the commission, but the other commissioners may proceed (m).

21 & 22 Vict.
c. 71.

By 21 & 22 Vict. c. 71, where the boundaries of dioceses are altered, provision is made for making the bishop within whose diocese any place is brought trustee of any local trusts in lieu of the former bishop (n).

Bishops as trustees.

The ecclesiastical authorities have also jurisdiction over spiritual hospitals (o), and had for a long time jurisdiction over grammar schools (p). The power of the Archbishop of Canterbury to visit the universities of Oxford and Cambridge is mentioned in the Chapter on Colleges (q).

Recognition
by church of status in charitable corporation.

(C.) The church has in some cases recognised the status conferred on its members by their position in a charitable corporation.

Thus, a fellowship in a college has always been considered as conferring a title to receive holy orders (r). The headship of any college or hall in either of the universities or of certain other charitable foundations is treated as a benefice for certain purposes in the statutes against pluralities (s).

The chapels of the colleges at Oxford and Cambridge, and probably of some other colleges and some hospitals, are considered as chapels dedicated and allowed by the ecclesiastical laws of this realm within the meaning of Canon 71 of 1603 (t). They are exempt from the ordinary parochial jurisdiction, and in some cases even from the ordinary episcopal jurisdiction.

By recent statutes the same has been declared to be the law concerning the chapels of public schools, endowed schools, and many other charitable foundations (u).

(D.) Questions relating to charities have frequently been decided according to the principles of civil or ecclesiastical law. Decisions according to ecclesiastical law.

This would naturally be the case, because they always came more especially under the control of the courts of equity, whose origin was ecclesiastical, and which always referred freely to the civil law in cases where the maxims of their own courts were silent (x). The decisions on analogous cases in charities proper and in ecclesiastical matters often throw light upon each other; and are frequently referred to in this book. In questions of visitation and of the powers and duties of visitors, the law for charities proper and for ecclesiastical cases has a certain similarity (y). So it is for elections into corporate bodies and for the action of such corporate bodies, as in colleges on the one hand and deans and chapters on the other (z).

(E.) By the law of the land the church has certain peculiar privileges in relation to charities. Privileges of the church.

It was laid down by Lord Eldon, C., "that if land or money were given . . . for the purpose of building a church or a house, or otherwise for the maintaining and propagating the worship of God, and if there were nothing more precise in the case, this court would execute such a trust, by making it a provision for maintaining and propagating the Established Religion of the country" (a).

By the first Charitable Trusts Act (16 & 17 Vict. c. 137, s. 46) it is provided as follows: "Nothing herein contained shall diminish or detract from any right or privilege which by any rule or practice of the Court of Chancery, or by the construction of law, now subsists for the preference or the exclusive or special benefit of the Church of England, or the members of the same church, in settling any scheme for the regulation of any charity, or in the appointment or removal of trustees, or generally in the application or management of any charity" (b).

In favour of the church also, gifts for religious purposes, not being those of the Church of England, were at one time held unlawful as "superstitious uses." By successive statutes, however, the endowments of Protestant Dissenters, Roman Catholics and Jews have been rendered lawful (c), except in cases specified in the following paragraph. Superstitious uses.

And it would seem now as if those uses only which come under the provisions of 23 Hen. 8, c. 10, 1 Edw. 6, c. 14, and 1 Geo. 1, st. 2, c. 50, being principally foundations for providing masses or prayers for the dead and supporting particular religious anniversaries, and not being protected by 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 115 (which extends only to Roman Catholic schools and

c. 134.

By 23 & 24 Vict. c. 134, s. 1, which, by sect. 10, is confined in its operation to England and Wales, special provision is made, in the case of Roman Catholic charities, for separating the superstitious from the lawful part in certain mixed charitable benefactions made by persons of that church, and for apportioning the whole sum, and applying the portion bequeathed to superstitious uses upon other lawful trusts for the benefit of persons professing the Roman Catholic religion.

City of London.

Special legislative provision has recently been made for the very extensive parochial charities of the City of London, many of which are ecclesiastical.

46 & 47 Vict.
c. 36.

Commissioners to inquire into charity property, and classify the same in two schedules, one of ecclesiastical and the other of general charity property.

By the City of London Parochial Charities Act, 1883 (46 & 47 Vict. c. 36), s. 5. "The Commissioners" (that is the Charity Commissioners) "shall as soon as may be proceed to inquire into the nature, tenure, and value of all the property and endowments belonging to the charities mentioned in the Digest of Parochial Charities of the City of London, referred to in the Thirteenth Report of the Charity Commissioners for England and Wales, and every of them, and every other charity the property or income of which is applicable or applied to or for the benefit of any parish or part of a parish within the City of London or of any inhabitant or inhabitants thereof (hereinafter called the said parochial charities), and the purposes or trusts for or upon which the same have heretofore been or are now held or enjoyed and to which the income thereof has been or is now applied, and shall classify the said property in two schedules. They shall place in one of such schedules all property (hereinafter called 'ecclesiastical charity property') which shall be proved to their satisfaction to have been originally given to or for, or to have been duly ordered by any Act of Parliament, judgment of a court, or other authority competent in that behalf, to be applied to or for, and to have been accordingly applied to or for any spiritual purpose which is now a legal purpose, or for the benefit of any spiritual person as such, or for the erection, maintenance, or repair of any ecclesiastical buildings, or for the maintenance of divine service therein, even although such purpose may now have failed; but the user of property for an ecclesiastical or any other purpose shall not be conclusive evidence that such property was originally given for such a purpose, but shall be taken into account by the Commissioners in determining whether in each case such property is or is not to be deemed to have been originally given for such a purpose; provided that no property shall be deemed to be ecclesiastical which shall not have been given or applied to or for or in connexion with the Church of England. In the other of such schedules they shall place all other charity property (hereinafter called 'general charity property'). The Commissioners shall specify in the said schedules the objects or purposes to or for which the said property is now applied, and all vested interests now existing in or upon or in anywise affecting any part of such property."

Sect. 6. "Where property scheduled by the Commissioners as ecclesiastical has been mixed with property scheduled by them as general charity property, or where the income of any property is considered by them to be partly ecclesiastical and partly general, the Commissioners shall determine and state how much of such property or income, as the case may be, shall be taken to be ecclesiastical, and how much of the same shall be taken to be general."

Where property is mixed, Commissioners to apportion ecclesiastical and general.

Sects. 7 to 10 provide for the safe guarding of vested interests, and those of persons having not strictly vested interests, but claims on moral grounds to receive emoluments.

The act then provides for the future application of the charity funds.

Sect. 11. "The Commissioners shall, as soon as may be after the publication of the statement or statements aforesaid, proceed to prepare a scheme or schemes for the future application and management of the charity property and endowments so classified by them as hereinbefore directed."

Commissioners to frame schemes for charity property.

Sect. 12. "In every such scheme the Commissioners shall provide for the following objects, that is to say,

Provisions to be inserted in all schemes.

- (a.) For the vesting in the official trustee of charity lands appointed under the Charitable Trusts Acts, 1853 to 1869, of all real property and chattels real belonging to the charity or charities dealt with in the scheme, and for the vesting in the official trustees of charitable funds appointed under the last-mentioned acts of all personal property belonging to the charity or charities dealt with in the scheme, upon trust to hold the same real and personal property respectively as in the said acts and hereinafter provided, but subject to all quit-rents, leases, tenancies, equities, reservations, charges, and all other incumbrances and liabilities affecting the same :
- (b.) For carrying over to a separate account a sum of money out of the charity property and endowments dealt with by the scheme to answer and provide for the expenses incurred by the Commissioners in carrying out this act :
- (c.) For saving the vested interest of or making due compensation to every person whom the Commissioners may have declared entitled to any vested interest which may be prejudiced by the scheme, and for making compensation to any person whom the Commissioners may have considered as aforesaid to have a fair or equitable claim to any emolument taken away by the scheme."

Provisions to be inserted in schemes relating to parishes in First Schedule.

Sect. 13. "In every scheme relating to the charity property or endowments belonging to or now applicable in the parishes enumerated in the first schedule to this act, the Commissioners shall, subject to the carrying over, and to the provision for saving or making compensation hereinbefore contained, provide for the following objects; that is to say,

- (a.) For the application of the property scheduled as ecclesiastical charity property, or any part of the income thereof, to the maintenance of the fabric and the services of the church, or to such other of the ecclesiastical purposes to which the same is now applied as are, in the opinion of the Commissioners, still beneficial to the inhabitants of each of the said parishes, or to any class thereof; and, subject thereto, to such other ecclesiastical purposes within the parish to which such property and endowments belong as the Commissioners may think most conducive to the spiritual benefit of the inhabitants of the said parish:"
- (b.) [This sub-section relates to funds and purposes not ecclesiastical, and is therefore omitted.]

Provisions to be inserted in schemes relating to parishes in Second Schedule.

Sect. 14. "In every scheme relating to the property or endowment belonging to or now applicable in the parishes enumerated in the second schedule to this act, the Commissioners shall, subject to the carrying over and to the provision for saving or making compensation hereinbefore contained, provide for the following objects; that is to say,

- (a.) For the application of the property, or any part of the income thereof, scheduled as ecclesiastical charity property, to the maintenance of the fabric and the services of the church, if any, in each parish possessed of ecclesiastical charity property applicable to such purposes or to such other of the ecclesiastical purposes to which the same is now applied as are, in the opinion of the Commissioners, still beneficial, and to the maintenance of the fabric and monuments of any churches within the City of London of architectural or historical interest which may not already possess sufficient funds available for that purpose; and, subject thereto, for payment to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners of the surplus income of the said ecclesiastical property, to be by them applied to the maintenance of the fabric of churches, or to the better endowment of existing benefices, or to giving theological instruction to persons preparing for holy orders, or generally to extending the benefit of clerical or spiritual ministrations in accordance with the doctrines or by the ministers of the Church of England as by law established in the more populous districts of the metropolis:”

(b.) and (c.) [These sub-sections relate to funds and purposes not ecclesiastical, and are therefore omitted.]

The act contains a series of clauses as to procedure upon the schemes being framed by the Charity Commissioners, which may be objected to by petition to the Privy Council, and must be finally laid before Parliament. Procedure upon schemes.

The first schedule contains the names of five parishes, those of St. Andrew, Holborn; St. Botolph, Aldgate; St. Botolph, Bishopsgate; St. Bride, Fleet Street; St. Giles, Cripplegate. The second schedule has a long list of, presumably, all the other parishes in the City. Schedules.

By sect. 21, “No scheme shall be so framed as to affect, or shall affect any endowment or part of an endowment (as the case may be) originally given to charitable uses less than fifty years before the commencement of this act, unless the governing body of such endowment assent to the scheme.” Saving for endowments less than fifty years old.

By sect. 50, “In all schemes framed under this act affecting general charity property which is not expressly limited, by the deed of foundation, to spiritual purposes of any religious denomination, no preference shall be shown to any person on account of membership of any church, nor shall conformity to any church be made the condition of enjoying any benefits, nor shall it be made a condition in appointing a master or mistress to any school founded or reformed under this act, that he or she shall be a member of any church, nor shall endowments under this act be attached to any institution, admission to which, or to the governing body of which, is limited to the members of any denomination.” Schemes for general charity property to contain no preference for any religious denomination.

By virtue of 56 & 57 Vict. c. 73 (the Local Government Act, 1894), ss. 5 and 6, “The legal interest in all property vested either in the overseers or in the churchwardens and overseers of a rural parish” . . . in property “connected with the affairs of the church, or held for an ecclesiastical charity,” does not vest in the parish council; and for all such affairs, the powers, duties, and liabilities of the vestry remain (e). 56 & 57 Vict. c. 73.

SECT. 2.—Mortmain.

The legal personality of the church, and its consequent capacity of inheriting (f), is a principle incorporated into the Capacity of church to inherit.

The effect of these statutes was to forbid the alienation of land to corporations, and to prevent corporations, religious, charitable, or otherwise, from holding land except with the licences of the Crown and of the chief lord.

7 & 8 Will. 3,
c. 37.

By 7 & 8 Will. 3, c. 37, the Crown was given power to give licence to alien in mortmain and to take and hold in mortmain. This Act has also been repealed by 51 & 52 Vict. c. 42.

Statutory exemptions in favour of church.

The church was, however, exempted from the Mortmain Acts in many respects by later statutes. They may be enumerated as follows (i) :

17 Car. 2, c. 3; 29 Car. 2, c. 8; 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 45, and 13 & 14 Vict. c. 94, s. 23, enabling owners of tithes to grant them or part thereof for augmenting the benefice of the parish in respect of which they arise.

2 & 3 Ann. c. 20, ss. 4, 5, enabling gifts to the governors of Queen Anne's Bounty.

42 Geo. 3, c. 116, s. 50, enabling bequests by will for the redemption of land tax on all charities.

43 Geo. 3, c. 108, enabling persons by deed enrolled or by will executed three months before their death, to give land not exceeding five acres, or goods and chattels not exceeding in value 500*l.*, for building churches, providing mansion houses, or augmenting glebes in certain cases.

51 Geo. 3, c. 115, enabling lords of the manor to grant five acres of the waste for the same purposes.

58 Geo. 3, c. 45, ss. 33, 36, 52, enabling conveyances of lands not in mortmain to be made to the Church Building Commissioners as sites for churches, &c.

3 Geo. 4, c. 72; 5 Geo. 4, c. 107; 1 & 2 Vict. c. 107; 3 & 4 Vict. c. 60, and 7 & 8 Vict. c. 65, extending this last provision.

6 & 7 Vict. c. 27, ss. 12, 22, enabling ministers or incumbents created under that act to receive and take lands and goods.

14 & 15 Vict. c. 97, s. 8, enabling grants to create a repair fund for churches built under the Church Building Acts.

29 & 30 Vict. c. 111, s. 9, enabling the Ecclesiastical Commissioners to take and hold lands "which they may consider suitable and convenient for annexation to any benefice with cure of souls."

36 & 37 Vict. c. 50, enabling sites to be granted for churches and residence houses.

And 41 & 42 Vict. c. 68, s. 2, enabling gifts of real property to be made to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners for the endowment funds of the new bishoprics to which that act refers (l).

By 18 & 19 Vict. c. 124 (The Charitable Trusts Amendment Act, 1855), s. 35, any incorporated charity might with the consent of the Charity Commissioners "Invest money arising from any sale of land belonging to the charity, or received by way of equality of exchange or partition, in the purchase of land, and may hold such land or any land acquired by way of exchange or partition, for the benefit of such charity, without any licence in mortmain."

Investment on mortgage.

United Kingdom holding moneys in trust for any public or charitable purpose might "invest such moneys on any real security authorized by or consistent with the trusts on which such moneys are held, without being deemed thereby to have acquired or become possessed of any land within the meaning of the laws relating to mortmain, or of any prohibition or restraint against the holding of land by such corporations or trustees contained in any charter or act of parliament."

Sect. 2, provides for a sale of the premises instead of a foreclosure being decreed in any suit relating thereto.

9 Geo. 2, c. 36.

The act 9 Geo. 2, c. 36, did not strike at the granting of land to corporations, or at the holding of land by corporations, but at the gift of land or of money to be laid out in land, by will or shortly before death.

By sect. 1 of that act, no lands, or stock, or money to be laid out in lands was to be given for charitable uses, unless by deed indented, executed before two witnesses twelve months before death of donor, and inrolled in Chancery; or unless in the case of stock there had been a transfer six months before death; and in every case unless the transfer were to take effect for the charitable use intended immediately in possession.

By sect. 2, this condition of execution of the transfer twelve months or six months before the death was not to apply to bonâ fide sales.

Sect. 3 made all gifts, otherwise than according to the act, void.

Sections 4 and 5 made exceptions in favour of the universities and colleges.

Exemptions
from this last statute.

By 43 Geo. 3, c. 107 (m), this act was not to extend to lands, &c. bequeathed to the governors of Queen Anne's Bounty.

Several charities not particularly connected with the church have by special acts obtained exemption from the restrictions of this statute (n).

Many of the acts, moreover, which have been already cited (o), and which have been passed since 9 Geo. 2, c. 36, exempt the charities to which they apply from the operation of this act, as well as from the operation of the older statutes of mortmain.

Purchasers for value.

Purchasers for valuable consideration, who had not complied with all the formalities of 9 Geo. 2, c. 36, were protected by 9 Geo. 4, c. 85, and 24 Vict. c. 9 (p). The latter statute was extended to purchases completed before May 17, 1866, by 27 Vict. c. 13, and to leases, by 26 & 27 Vict. c. 106, and still further by 29 & 30 Vict. c. 57.

educational and other charitable purposes might be granted for valuable consideration, and were not to be avoided by the death of the grantor within six months.

The act of 34 & 35 Vict. c. 13, introduced a new system, that of enrolment in the books of the charity commissioners twelve months before death; by which method lands to a certain amount might be given for public parks, schools or museums, notwithstanding the act 9 Geo. 2, c. 36.

The act of 9 Geo. 2, c. 36, received a most extensive interpretation from the courts. The decisions on this subject may be divided into two classes:—

34 & 35 Vict.
c. 13.

Construction of 9 Geo. 2,
c. 36.

(a) What might not be bequeathed;

(b) For what purposes chattels in themselves lawfully bequeathable might not be bequeathed.

(a) Under the first head, everything savouring of realty, sometimes called impure personalty, has been holden to be within the intention of the statute, and to be incapable therefore of being bequeathed upon charitable trusts. This rule was holden to comprise, among other things, bequests of growing crops, leaseholds, mortgages of all kinds, money secured by a vendor's lien, legacies charged on land, judgment debts secured on real estate, money secured by mortgage of turnpike and harbour tolls, and money to arise from the sale of real estate (q).

What may not be bequeathed.

The decisions varied as to money secured on mortgage of municipal corporation property, including and principally consisting of rates; but the later cases tended to treat such money as pure personalty (r).

Where a bequest was made to a charity out of a mixed fund, consisting partly of pure personalty and partly of personalty savouring of realty, the assets were not marshalled so as to make the charitable bequest come out of the pure personalty, but the charity had its bequest out of both funds rateably, and lost all that portion of the bequest which would come out of the impure personalty (s).

(b) As to the second head: money or other lawful objects of bequest to charities could not be bequeathed to them to be laid out in land, or for buildings which would require land for their sites, or for paying off incumbrances on land holden by charities (t).

For what purposes bequests may not be made.

Money might, however, be bequeathed for erecting or repairing buildings on land already in mortmain (u), or for building a charitable institution, if lands were given by some other person

(s) Tudor, Law of Charitable Trusts, ed. 3, p. 58; Tyssen, Law of Charitable Bequests, Chap. 36;

Re Somers Cocks, Wegg Prosser v. Wegg Prosser, 2 Ch. 1895, p. 449, is perhaps the latest case.

(t) Tudor, Law of Charitable Trusts, ed. 3, pp. 409—412; Tyssen, Law of Charitable Bequests, Chap. 24.

for the site of it (v) ; but money might not be given to trustees of a charity on condition of their finding lands on which an institution might be built (x).

Where bequest upheld.

Where a bequest could be applied in a legal or in an illegal way, the bequest will be upholden on the supposition that it will be applied for the lawful purposes (y). And the court has gone so far as to hold that a bequest of residue to trustees, to be applied by them "in aid of erecting or of endowing an additional church at A.," is good, and that the trustees are for this purpose entitled to take the whole of the residuary pure personalty and 500*l.* out of the impure personalty under 43 Geo. 3, c. 108 (z).

Thus much has been said upon the statute of 9 Geo. 2, c. 36 ; partly because cases still arise in the administration of estates where the testator has died before the recent legislation, presently to be noticed, and where therefore the old law has still to be applied.

The law of mortmain in its stricter sense and as applied by 9 Geo. 2, c. 36, has, in recent years, been first codified and then amended.

51 & 52 Vict.
c. 42.

First came The Mortmain and Charitable Uses Act, 1888 (51 & 52 Vict. c. 42), which repealed 9 Geo. 2, c. 36, and enacted as follows (a) :—

PART I.

MORTMAIN.

Forfeiture on unlawful assurance or acquisition in mortmain.

Sect. 1.—“(1.) Land (b) shall not be assured to or for the benefit of, or acquired by or on behalf of, any corporation in mortmain, otherwise than under the authority of a licence from Her Majesty the Queen, or of a statute for the time being in force, and if any land is so assured otherwise than as aforesaid, the land shall be forfeited to Her Majesty from the date of the assurance, and Her Majesty may enter on and hold the land accordingly :

(2.) Provided as follows :

(i.) If the land is held directly of a mesne lord under Her Majesty, that mesne lord may enter on and hold the land at any time within twelve months from the date of the assurance :

(ii.) If the land is held of more than one mesne lord in gradation under Her Majesty, the superior of those mesne lords may enter on and hold the land at any time within six months after the time at which the right of the inferior lord to enter on the land expires :

(iii.) If a mesne lord is at the time when his right of entry accrues under this Act a lunatic or otherwise under incapacity, his right of entry may be exercised by his guardian or the committee of his estate, or by such person as Her Majesty's High Court of Justice may appoint in that behalf :

(iv.) If the right of entry under this Act is exercised by or on behalf of a mesne lord, the land shall be forfeited to that lord from the date of the assurance instead of to Her Majesty."

Sect. 2. "It shall be lawful for Her Majesty the Queen, if and when and in such form as she thinks fit, to grant to any person or corporation a licence to assure in mortmain land in perpetuity or otherwise, and to grant to any corporation a licence to acquire land in mortmain and to hold the land in perpetuity or otherwise."

Power to Her Majesty to grant licences in mortmain.

Sect. 3. "No entry or holding by or forfeiture to Her Majesty under this Part of this Act, shall merge or extinguish, or otherwise affect, any rent or service which may be due in respect of any land to Her Majesty or any other lord thereof."

Saving for rents and services.

By Sect. 12. "Nothing in this Act shall affect the operation or validity of any charter licence or custom in force at the passing of this Act enabling land to be assured or held in mortmain."

PART II.

CHARITABLE USES.

Sect. 4.—"(1.) Subject to the savings and exceptions contained in this Act, every assurance of land (c) to or for the benefit of any charitable uses, and every assurance of personal estate to be laid out in the purchase of land to or for the benefit of any charitable uses, shall be made in accordance with the requirements of this Act, and unless so made shall be void.

Conditions under which assurances may be made to charitable uses.

(2.) The assurance must be made to take effect in possession for the charitable uses to or for the benefit of which it is made immediately from the making thereof.

(3.) The assurance must, except as provided by this section, be without any power of revocation, reservation, condition, or provision for the benefit of the assurator or of any person claiming under him.

(4.) Provided that the assurance, or any instrument forming part of the same transaction, may contain all or any of the following provisions, so, however, that they reserve the same

(c) "Land," as it will be seen, had a very extensive definition given to it by s. 10; but this definition was much modified by 54 & 55 Vict. c. 73, s. 3.

benefits to persons claiming under the assurator as to the assurator himself, namely,

- (i.) The grant or reservation of a peppercorn or other nominal rent ;
 - (ii.) The grant or reservation of mines or minerals ;
 - (iii.) The grant or reservation of any easement ;
 - (iv.) Covenants or provisions as to the erection, repair, position, or description of buildings, the formation or repair of streets or roads, drainage or nuisances, and covenants or provisions of the like nature for the use and enjoyment as well of the land comprised in the assurance as of any other adjacent or neighbouring land ;
 - (v.) A right of entry on non-payment of any such rent or on breach of any such covenant or provision ;
 - (vi.) Any stipulations of the like nature for the benefit of the assurator or of any person claiming under him.
- (5.) If the assurance is made in good faith on a sale for full and valuable consideration, that consideration may consist wholly or partly of a rent, rent-charge, or other annual payment reserved or made payable to the vendor, or any other person, with or without a right of re-entry for non-payment thereof.
- (6.) If the assurance is of land, not being land of copyhold or customary tenure, or is of personal estate, not being stock in the public funds, it must be made by deed executed in the presence of at least two witnesses.
- (7.) If the assurance is of land, or of personal estate, not being stock in the public funds, then, unless it is made in good faith for full and valuable consideration, it must be made at least twelve months before the death of the assurator, including in those twelve months the days of the making of the assurance and of the death.
- (8.) If the assurance is of stock in the public funds, then, unless it is made in good faith for full and valuable consideration, it must be made by transfer thereof in the public books kept for the transfer of stock at least six months before the death of the assurator, including in those six months the days of the transfer and of the death.
- (9.) If the assurance is of land, or of personal estate other than stock in the public funds, it must, within six months after the execution thereof, be enrolled in the Central Office of the Supreme Court of Judicature, unless in the case of an assurance of land to or for the benefit of charitable uses those uses are declared by a separate instrument, in which case that separate instrument must be so enrolled within six months after the making of the assurance of the land " (d).

(d) This section, so far as it applies to wills, is inconsistent with, and is repealed by 54 & 55 Vict.

c. 73, s. 5: Hume v. Forbes, 1 Ch. 1895, p. 422 (infra, p. 1586).

Sect. 5.—(1.) “Where an instrument, the enrolment whereof is required under this Part of this Act for the validation of an assurance, is not duly enrolled within the requisite time, Her Majesty’s High Court of Justice, or the officer having control over the enrolment of deeds in the Central Office, may, on application in such manner and on payment of such fee as may be prescribed by rules of the Supreme Court, and on being satisfied that the omission to enrol the instrument in proper time has arisen from ignorance or inadvertence, or through the destruction or loss of the instrument by time or accident, and that the assurance was of a nature to be validated under this section, order or cause the instrument to be enrolled.

Power to remedy omission to enrol within requisite time.

(2.) Thereupon, if the assurance to be validated was made in good faith and for full and valuable consideration, and was made to take effect in possession immediately from the making thereof without any power of revocation, reservation, condition, or provision, except such as is authorized by this Act, and if at the time of the application possession or enjoyment was held under the assurance, then enrolment in pursuance of this section shall have the same effect as if it had been made within the requisite time:

(3.) Provided that if at the time of the application any proceeding for setting aside the assurance, or for asserting any right founded on the invalidity of the assurance, is pending, or any decree or judgment founded on such invalidity has been then obtained, the enrolment under this section shall not give any validity to the assurance.

(4.) Where the instrument omitted to be enrolled in proper time has been destroyed or lost by time or accident and the trusts thereof sufficiently appear by a copy or abstract thereof or some subsequent instrument, such copy, abstract, or subsequent instrument may be enrolled under this section in like manner and with the like effect as if it were the instrument so destroyed or lost.

(5.) An application under this section may be made by any trustee, governor, director, or manager of, or other person entitled to act in the management of or otherwise interested in, any charity or charitable trust intended to be benefited by the uses declared by the instrument to be enrolled.”

PART III.

EXEMPTIONS.

Sect. 6. “(1.) Parts One and Two of this Act shall not apply to an assurance by deed of land of any quantity or to an assurance by will of land of the quantity hereinafter mentioned for the purposes only of a public park, a schoolhouse for an elementary school, a public museum, or an assurance by will of personal estate to be applied in or towards the purchase of land for all or any of the same purposes only:

Assurances for a public park, elementary school, or public museum.

(2.) Provided that a will containing such an assurance, and a deed containing such an assurance and made otherwise than in good faith for full and valuable consideration, must be executed not less than twelve months before the death of the assurator, or be a reproduction in substance of a devise made in a previous will in force at the time of such reproduction, and which was executed not less than twelve months before the death of the assurator, and must be enrolled in the books of the Charity Commissioners within six months after the death of the testator, or in case of a deed the execution of the deed.

(3.) The quantity of land which may be assured by will under this section shall be any quantity not exceeding twenty acres for any one public park, and not exceeding two acres for any one public museum, and not exceeding one acre for any one school house."

The section proceeds to define the objects above mentioned. The definition of "elementary school" and "school house" are as follows:—

"Elementary school" means a school or department of a school at which elementary education is the principal part of the education there given, and does not include any school or department of a school at which the ordinary payments in respect of the instruction from each scholar exceed ninepence a week;

"School house" includes the teacher's dwelling-house, the playground (if any), and the offices and premises belonging to or required for a school.

Sect. 7. "Part Two of this Act shall not apply to the following assurances:

(i.) An assurance of land, or personal estate, to be laid out in the purchase of land, to or in trust for any of the Universities of Oxford, Cambridge, London, Durham, and the Victoria University, or any of the colleges or houses of learning within any of those universities, or to or in trust for any of the Colleges of Eton, Winchester, and Westminster, for the better support and maintenance of the scholars only upon the foundations of those last-mentioned colleges, or to or in trust for the warden, council, and scholars of Keble College:

(ii.) An assurance, otherwise than by will, to trustees on behalf of any society or body of persons associated together for religious purposes or for the promotion of education, art, literature, science, or other like purposes, of land not exceeding two acres for the erection thereon of a building for such purposes, or any of them, or whereon a building used or intended to be used for such purposes, or any of them, has been erected, so that the assurance be made in good faith for full and valuable consideration:

Provided that the trustees of the instrument containing any assurance to which this section applies, or declaring the trusts thereof, may, if they think fit, at any time cause the instrument to be enrolled in the Central Office of the Supreme Court of Judicature."

Sect. 8. "Where by any statute now in force any provision of the enactments hereby repealed is excluded either wholly or partially from application, or is applied with modification, in every such case the corresponding provision of this act shall be excluded or applied in like extent and manner."

Substitution of provisions of Act for corresponding repealed enactments.

PART IV.

SUPPLEMENTAL.

Sect. 9. "Any assurance of land which is by this act required to be made by deed may be made by a registered disposition under the provisions of the Land Transfer Act, 1875, or of any act amending the same, and any assurance so made shall be exempt from the provisions of this act as to execution in the presence of witnesses, and as to enrolment in the Central Office of the Supreme Court."

Adaptation of law to system of land registration.

Sect. 10. "In this act, unless the context otherwise requires,— Definitions.

(i.) 'Assurance' includes a gift, conveyance, appointment, lease, transfer, settlement, mortgage, charge, incumbency, devise, bequest, and every other assurance by deed, will, or other instrument; and 'assure' and 'assuror' have meanings corresponding with assurance.

(ii.) 'Will' includes codicil.

(iii.) 'Land' includes tenements and hereditaments, corporeal and incorporeal, of whatsoever tenure, and any estate and interest in land.

(iv.) 'Full and valuable consideration' includes such a consideration, either actually paid upon or before the making of the assurance or reserved, or made payable to the vendor or any other person by way of rent, rent-charge, or other annual payment in perpetuity, or for a term of years or other period, with or without a right of re-entry for non-payment thereof, or partly paid and partly reserved as aforesaid."

The Act just given was intended to codify and not to alter the previous law. Its definition of land apparently re-introduced the old decisions upon the Statute of 9 Geo. 2, c. 36, as to personalty savouring of realty (d).

Effect of Act.

But the next Act on the same subject, The Mortmain and Charitable Uses Act, 1891 (54 & 55 Vict. c. 73), made a great change. The word land was restricted to its usual legal meaning; and the revolution of public feeling since 9 Geo. 2, c. 36, has had the effect of causing a repeal of the provisions of that act. Land may now be left by will to a charity, but being left it must be sold (e). The following are the more material sections of the act of 1891:—

“land.”

Sect. 3. “‘Land’ in the Mortmain and Charitable Uses Act, 1888, and in this Act, shall include tenements and hereditaments, corporeal or incorporeal, of any tenure, but not money secured on land or other personal estate arising from or connected with land; and the definition of land contained in the Mortmain and Charitable Uses Act, 1888, is hereby repealed.”

Meaning of “assurance.”

Sect. 4.—“In this Act the word ‘assurance’ shall have the same meaning as in the Mortmain and Charitable Uses Act, 1888.”

Land assured by will for a charitable purpose to be sold.

Sect. 5. “Land may be assured by will to or for the benefit of any charitable use, but, except as hereinafter provided, such land shall, notwithstanding anything in the will contained to the contrary, be sold within one year from the death of the testator, or such extended period as may be determined by the High Court, or any judge thereof sitting at chambers, or by the Charity Commissioners” (f).

Land after expiration of time limited for sale to be sold by order of Charity Commissioners.

Sect. 6. “So soon as the time limited for the sale of any lands under any such assurance shall have expired without completion of the sale of the land, the land unsold shall vest forthwith in the official trustee of charity lands, and the Charity Commissioners shall take all necessary steps for the sale or completion of the sale of such land to be effected with all reasonable speed by the administering trustees for the time being thereof, and for this purpose the said Commissioners may make any order under their seal directing such trustees to proceed with the sale or completion of the sale of the said land or removing such trustees and appointing others, and may provide by any such order for the payment of the proceeds of sale to the official trustees of charitable funds in trust for the charity, and for the payment of the cost and expenses incurred by the said administering trustees in or connected with such sale, and every such order shall be enforceable by the same means and be subject to the same provisions as are applicable under the Charitable Trusts Act, 1853, and the Acts amending the same, respectively, to any orders of the said Commissioners made thereunder.”

Personal estate by will directed to be laid out in land not to be so laid out.

Sect. 7. “Any personal estate by will directed to be laid out in the purchase of land to or for the benefit of any charitable uses shall, except as hereinafter provided, be held to or for the benefit of the charitable uses as though there had been no such direction to lay it out in the purchase of land.”

Power to retain land in certain cases.

Sect. 8. “It shall be lawful for the High Court, or any judge thereof sitting at chambers, or for the Charity Commissioners, (e) And accordingly it has been holden since the passing of this act that the gift by will of a reversionary interest in land to a charity is valid.

CHAPTER III.

HOSPITALS.

Division of corporations.

It is laid down in the books that corporations are of two kinds—ecclesiastical and lay. Ecclesiastical corporations are those of which not only the members are spiritual persons, but of which the object of the institution is also spiritual (a). Lay corporations are again divided into civil and eleemosynary. The universities are civil corporations; so is the College of Physicians (b). Eleemosynary corporations are of two general descriptions—colleges and hospitals.

Colleges and hospitals.

“Now there is no manner of difference between a college and an hospital, except only in degree; an hospital is for those that are poor, and mean, and low, and sickly, a college is for another sort of indigent persons; but it hath another intent—to study in, and breed up persons in the world, that have not otherwise to live, but still it is as much within the reasons of hospitals. And if in an hospital the master and the poor are incorporated, it is a college having a common seal to act by, although it hath not the name of a college, (which always supposeth a corporation,) because it is of an inferior degree; and in the one case and in the other there must be a visitor, either the founder and his heirs, or one appointed by him; and both are eleemosynary” (c).

Ecclesiastical
hospitals.

There are, however, some hospitals which are spiritual corporations; and these are either visitable by the ordinary, or, where they were formerly exempt from visitation by him and subject to the pope alone, visitable now by commission from the king under the great seal by force of 25 Hen. 8, c. 21, s. 14. It seems, however, that these hospitals are very few in number. In the case of The Attorney-General v. St. Cross Hospital (d), it was holden, that a hospital for the poor without cure of souls is a lay foundation, although the master is required to be in holy orders.

3 & 4 Vict.
c. 113.

Inquiry into hospitals which were

of King Henry the Eighth; and in those cases in which it may appear, upon such inquiry, that the endowments of such hospitals are capable, after satisfying the objects of the founder's bounty, of affording a better provision for the cure of souls in the parishes with which they are connected, the said commissioners may in their report make such suggestions as they may deem advisable for effecting such provision."

spiritual in the reign of King Henry the Eighth.

By 3 Jac. 1, c. 13, papists are deprived of the right of collating or nominating to any free school, hospital or donative (e). Hospitals are not included under the definition of "preferment" in 3 & 4 Vict. c. 86, s. 2 (f); or that of "benefice" in 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106, s. 124 (g).

When considered benefices.

"Of hospitals, some are corporations aggregate of many; as of master or warden, and his confreres; some, where the master or warden has only the estate of inheritance in him, and the brethren or sisters power to consent, having college and common seal; some, where the master or warden has the state in him, but has no college and common seal: and of these hospitals, some be eligible, some donative, and some presentable" (h).

Divers kinds of hospitals.

14 Eliz. c. 14, especially confirms the foundations of Christ's Hospital, Bridwall Hospital, the Hospital of St. Thomas the Apostle, and St. Bartholomew's Hospital, and all gifts and devises to any hospital then existing, notwithstanding any misnomer of the corporation of the hospital in the gift or devise.

14 Eliz. c. 14.

By 39 Eliz. c. 5 (made perpetual by 21 Jac. 1, c. 1), "all and every person and persons . . . seised of an estate in fee simple at his will and pleasure shall have full power, by deed enrolled in the High Court of Chancery, to erect, found, and establish one or more hospitals, measons de dieu, abiding places, or houses of correction, as well for the finding, sustentation and relief of the maimed poor needy or impotent people, as to set the poor to work, to have continuance for ever; and from time to time, to place therein such head and members, and such number of poor as to him, his heirs and assigns, shall seem convenient," and such hospital so founded "shall be incorporated, and have perpetual succession for ever;" by such name as the founder, his heirs, executors or assigns, shall appoint; and shall by the name of incorporation have capacity to purchase and hold any goods or freehold lands, not exceeding 200*l.* a year above reprises; without licence or writ of ad quod damnum; the Statute of Mortmain, or any other statute or law to the contrary notwithstanding. endowed for ever, with lands, tenements, or hereditaments of the clear yearly value of 10*l*. And finally such constructions shall be made of this act, as shall be most beneficial for the maintenance of the poor, and for repressing and avoiding of all acts and devices to be invented or put in ure contrary to the true meaning of this act.

Also goods and chattels (real or personal) they may take of what value soever (k).

It is understood that hospitals may at this time be founded and endowed under this statute.

Visitation and government.

By 39 Eliz. c. 5, s. 1, the hospitals, so founded, shall be ordered and visited by such person or persons, as shall be assigned by the founder, his heirs or assigns, in writing under his or their hand and seal, not being repugnant or contrary to the laws and statutes of this realm.

If no such person be named, the visitorial power, in eleemosynary lay foundations, is, by law, thrown upon the founder and his heirs, whom failing, it devolves upon the crown, to be exercised by the lord chancellor (l).

2 Hen. 5,
st. 1, c. 1.

If the founder makes no appointment, then it is enacted by the 2 Hen. 5, statute the first, c. 1, as follows: "First, forasmuch as many hospitals within this realm, founded as well by the noble Kings of this realm, and lords, and ladies, both spiritual and temporal, as by divers other estates, to the honour of God and of his glorious mother, in aid and merit of the souls of the said founders, to the which hospitals the same founders have given a great part of their moveable goods for the building of the same, and a great part of their lands and tenements, therewith to sustain impotent men and women, lazars, men out of their wits, and poor women with child, and to nourish, relieve and refresh other poor people in the same, be now for the most part decayed, and the goods and profits of the same by divers persons as well spiritual as temporal, withdrawn and spent in other use, whereby many men and women have died in great misery, for default of aid, living and succour, to the displeasure of God, and peril of the souls of such manner of disposers;" it is ordained and established, "that as to the hospitals which be of the patronage and foundation of the King, the ordinaries, by virtue of the King's commissions to them directed, shall inquire of the manner and foundation of the said hospitals, and of the governance and estate of the same, and of all other matters necessary and requisite in this behalf, and the inquisitions thereof taken shall certify in the King's Chancery. And as to other hospitals which be of another foundation and patronage than of the King, the ordinaries shall enquire of the manner of the foundation, estate, and governance of the same, and of all other matters and things necessary in this behalf, and upon that make thereof correction and reformation, according to the laws of Holy Church, as to them belongeth."

Hospitals which have special visitors or governors were exempted from 43 Eliz. c. 4 (m).

When an hospital is incorporated as a distinct body and governors are appointed, they are the visitors (n). The case of Sutton's Hospital, mentioned by Lord Coke, is no exception to this rule, for it depended upon the express words of an act of parliament (o).

By 39 Eliz. c. 5, s. 1, in the hospitals so founded as aforesaid, they shall be placed, or upon just cause displaced, by such person or persons as shall be assigned by the founder, his heirs or assigns, by writing under his or their hand and seal, not being repugnant or contrary to the laws and statutes of this realm.

Of elections in hospitals (p).

And by the same section in the same statute, it shall be lawful to the founder, his heirs or assigns, upon the death or removing of any head or member, to place one other in the room of him that dies or is removed, successively for ever (p).

And by 31 Eliz. c. 6, ss. 1 and 2, if any person shall take any reward for nominating to an hospital, his place (if he shall have any) in such hospital shall be void. And any person receiving any reward for resigning his place in any such hospital, shall forfeit double the sum, and the person for whom he resigns shall be incapacitated (q).

31 Eliz. c. 6.

It was said by Holt, Chief Justice, that hospital lands are chargeable to the poor as well as others; for no man by appropriating his lands to an hospital, can discharge or exempt them from taxes to which they were subject before, and throw a greater burden upon his neighbours (r).

Poor rate.

But in the case of Rex v. St. Luke's Hospital, it was determined, that the said hospital was not chargeable to the parish rates; and that in general no hospital is so, with respect to the site thereof, except those parts of it which are inhabited by the officers belonging to the hospital, as the chaplain, physician, and the like in Chelsea Hospital. And these apartments are to be rated as single tenements, of which the said officers are the occupiers. The reason why the apartments in this hospital, of the sick or mad persons, are not to be rated, is, that there are no persons who can be said to be the occupiers of them, and it is upon the occupiers of houses that the rate is to be levied. For it would be absurd to call the poor objects so with respect to this purpose; and the lessees of the hospital in trust for the charitable purposes to which it is applied cannot with any propriety be considered as the occupiers of it; nor, lastly, can the servants of the hospital, who attend there for their livelihood; and no other persons, said Lord Mansfield, Chief Justice, can with any shadow of reason be considered as the occupiers of it (s).

38 Geo. 3, c. 5.
Land tax.

By 38 Geo. 3, c. 5, an act for raising the land tax, it is provided, by sects. 25—29, that the same shall not extend to charge any college or hall in the Universities of Cambridge or Oxford, or the Colleges of Windsor, Eton, Winton, or Westminster, or the corporation of the governors of the charity for the relief of the poor widows and children of clergymen, or the college of Bromley, or any hospital, for or in respect to the site of such hospital, or any of the buildings within the walls and limits thereof; or to charge any of the houses or lands, which on or before March 25, 1693, did belong to Christ's Hospital, St. Bartholomew, Bridewell, St. Thomas, Bethlehem hospitals in London and Southwark; or to charge any other hospitals or alms-houses, for or in respect only of any rents or revenues, which on or before March 25, 1693, were payable to the said hospitals or alms-houses being to be received and disbursed for the immediate use and relief of the poor of the said hospitals and alms-houses only (t).

Provided that no tenants that hold any lands or houses, by lease or other grant from any of the said hospitals or alms-houses, do claim any exemption; but that all the houses and lands which they so hold, shall be rated for so much as they are yearly worth, over and above the rents reserved and payable to the said hospitals or alms-houses, to be received and disbursed for the immediate support and relief of the poor of the said hospitals and alms-houses. Provided, that nothing herein shall be construed to extend to discharge any tenant of any of the houses or lands belonging to the said corporations, or hospitals or alms-houses, who by their leases or other contracts are obliged to pay all rates, taxes and impositions whatsoever; but that they shall be rated, and pay all such rates, taxes and impositions. And if any question shall be made, how far any lands or tenements belonging to any hospital or alms-house, not exempted by name, ought to be assessed and charged, the same shall be determined by the commissioners upon the appeal day. And there is, further, a general clause in the statute, that all such lands, revenues, or rents belonging to any hospital or alms-house, or settled to any charitable or pious use, as were assessed in the fourth year of William and Mary, shall be liable to be charged: and that no other lands, tenements, or hereditaments, revenues or rents whatsoever, then belonging to any hospital or alms-house, or settled to any charitable or pious uses, as aforesaid, shall be charged.

The hospital of St. Katherine was founded or refounded by charter of Queen Eleanor, dowager of Henry III., confirmed by charters of Edward II. and Edward III., which reserved the appointment of a master to the queen and all succeeding queens of England (u). The hospital of St. Katherine.

As to dealings with their estates, hospitals founded under the provisions of 39 Eliz. c. 5, are, by sect. 2 of that act, prevented from making any grants or leases exceeding the number of twenty-one years, and that in possession, and then only when the accustomed yearly rent, according to that reserved for the last twenty years, be reserved: and, by sect. 6, there is a general restraint against alienation. 39 Eliz. c. 5.
Dealings with estates.

Hospitals, moreover, come within the restraining provisions of the several acts of Elizabeth—13 Eliz. c. 10; 14 Eliz. c. 11; 18 Eliz. c. 11 (x).

Since the passing of these acts, it is very doubtful whether a corporate hospital can alienate lands for more than twenty-one years or three lives—even with the consent of the Charity Commissioners.

The point was raised, but not decided, in The Governors of St. Thomas' Hospital v. The Charing Cross Railway Company (y).

"Ecclesiastical hospitals" and "the masters thereof" are specially exempted from the provisions of 5 & 6 Vict. c. 108, 14 & 15 Vict. c. 104, 17 & 18 Vict. c. 116, 21 & 22 Vict. c. 57, and 28 & 29 Vict. c. 57, the modern acts relating to leases and sales of ecclesiastical property (z).

CHAPTER IV.

COLLEGES AND UNIVERSITIES.

Position of this subject in
work.

IN the last edition of Dr. Burn's Ecclesiastical Law, considerable space was devoted to the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge and the colleges therein, on account of their intimate connection with the church.

Changes in relation to church.

Since that time great changes have been made in the law, and much has been done to divest the universities, more particularly, but also the colleges to a certain extent, of the distinctive ecclesiastical features which they formerly possessed. Again, while the colleges still retain much of their ecclesiastical origin or position, their influence on the university has been largely diminished; individuals and societies have been allowed to enter into relations with the university apart from the colleges, and the universities are no longer mere aggregations of colleges and halls.

Many of these changes have been directly effected by express parliamentary legislation; some have been brought about by the ordinances of the commissioners appointed by statute; many more by the action of the universities themselves, with the new powers and under the new influences conferred or inspired by parliamentary legislation.

University
commissions.

The commission for enlarging "the powers of making and altering statutes and regulations now possessed by the University of Oxford and the colleges thereof," and for making and enabling to be made "further provision for the government and for the extension of the said university, and for the abrogation of oaths now taken therein, and otherwise for maintaining and improving the discipline and studies of the good government of the said University of Oxford and the colleges thereof," was created by 17 & 18 Vict. c. 81. Its powers were confirmed and extended by 19 & 20 Vict. c. 31, 20 & 21 Vict. c. 25, and 23 & 24 Vict. c. 23.

The acts for the Cambridge commission were 19 & 20 Vict. c. 88 and 22 & 23 Vict. c. 34. The college of St. Mary of Winchester, at Winchester, is included under the Oxford Act; and that of King Henry the Sixth at Eton, under the Cambridge Act. These colleges have, however, since been dealt with further as schools under the Public Schools Act, 1868 (31 & 32 V. c. 118) (a).

Further commissions, one for either university, were established by the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge Act, 1877 (40 & 41 Vict. c. 48).

One result of this legislation has been to create a large and increasing class of persons, whose main or only status is an university one, quite apart from the colleges, and to reduce the colleges to somewhat of their old position as societies in, but not constituent parts of the university.

Effect on colleges.

As regards the ecclesiastical aspect of the universities, the principal direct changes made by the early University Commission Acts was the abolition of the oaths and subscriptions, most of them of a religious nature, formerly required at matriculation and on taking the degree of bachelor in any faculty except that of divinity (b).

Ecclesiastical effect.

This provision has since been extended by the Universities Tests Act, 1871 (34 & 35 Vict. c. 26); and the result is that the universities and all the degrees except divinity degrees are now open to persons who are not members of the church.

By the last-mentioned act, reciting as follows:—

“Whereas it is expedient that the benefits of the universities of Oxford, Cambridge, and Durham, and of the colleges and halls now subsisting therein, as places of religion and learning, should be rendered freely accessible to the nation:

34 & 35 Vict. c. 26.

And whereas, by means of divers restrictions, tests, and disabilities, many of her majesty's subjects are debarred from the full enjoyment of the same:

And whereas it is expedient that such restrictions, tests, and disabilities should be removed, under proper safeguards for the maintenance of religious instruction and worship in the said universities and the colleges and halls now subsisting within the same:”

It is enacted as follows:—

Sect. 3. “No person shall be required, upon taking or to enable him to take any degree (other than a degree in divinity) within the Universities of Oxford, Cambridge, and Durham, or any of them, or upon exercising or to enable him to exercise any of the rights and privileges which may heretofore have been or may hereafter be exercised by graduates in the said universities or any of them, or in any college (c) subsisting at the time of the passing of this act in any of the said universities, or upon taking or holding or to enable him to take or hold any office (d) in any of the said universities or any such college as Persons taking lay academical degrees or holding lay academical or collegiate offices not to be required to subscribe any formulary of faith, &c.

(a) Vide infra, Part VIII., Chap. V.

(b) 17 & 18 Vict. c. 81, ss. 43, 44; 19 & 20 Vict. c. 88, ss. 45, 46.

(c) “College,” by sect. 2, includes Christ Church and any hall not being a private hall under 17 & 18 Vict. c. 81, or a hostel under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 88.

(d) By sect. 2, “Office” includes aforesaid, or upon teaching or to enable him to teach within any of the said universities or any such college as aforesaid, or upon opening or to enable him to open a private hall or hostel in any of the said universities for the reception of students, to subscribe any article or formulary of faith, or to make any declaration or take any oath respecting his religious belief or profession, or to conform to any religious observance, or to attend or abstain from attending any form of public worship, or to belong to any specified church, sect, or denomination; nor shall any person be compelled, in any of the said universities or any such college as aforesaid, to attend the public worship of any church, sect, or denomination to which he does not belong: Provided that—

(1.) Nothing in this section shall render a layman or a person not a member of the Church of England eligible to any office or capable of exercising any right or privilege in any of the said universities or colleges, which office, right, or privilege, under the authority of any act of parliament or any statute or ordinance of such university or college in force at the time of the passing of this act, is restricted to persons in holy orders, or shall remove any obligation to enter into holy orders which is by such authority attached to any such office.

(2.) Nothing in this section shall open any office (not being an office mentioned in this section) to any person who is not a member of the Church of England, where such office is at the passing of this act confined to members of the said church by reason of any such degree as aforesaid, being a qualification for holding that office."

As to Hertford College.

This act applies to colleges in existence before it was passed, and does not apply to Hertford College, Oxford (c). As to the foundation of this college, see 37 & 38 Viet. c. 55.

Act not to interfere with lawfully established system of religious instruction, worship and discipline.

Sect. 4. "Nothing in this act shall interfere with or affect, any further or otherwise than is hereby expressly enacted, the system of religious instruction, worship, and discipline which now is or which may hereafter be lawfully established in the said universities respectively, or in the colleges thereof or any of them, or the statutes and ordinances of the said universities and colleges respectively relating to such instruction, worship, and discipline."

Religious instruction.

Sect. 5. "The governing body of every college subsisting at the time of the passing of this act in any of the said univer-every professorship other than professorships of divinity, every assistant or deputy professorship, public readership, prolectorship, lectureship, headship of a college or hall, fellowship, studentship, tutorship, scholarship, and exhibition, and also "any office or emolument not in this section specified, the income of the which is payable out of the revenues of any of the said universities, or of any college within the said universities, or which is held or enjoyed by any member as such of any of the said universities, or of any college within any of the said universities."

sities shall provide sufficient religious instruction for all members thereof in statu pupillari belonging to the Established Church" (f).

Sect. 6. "The Morning and Evening Prayer according to the Order of the Book of Common Prayer shall continue to be used daily as heretofore in the chapel of every college subsisting at the time of the passing of this act in any of the said universities; but notwithstanding anything contained in" 14 Car. 2, c. 4, "or in this act, it shall be lawful for the visitor of any such college, on the request of the governing body thereof, to authorise from time to time, in writing, the use on week days only of any abridgment or adaptation of the said morning and evening prayer in the chapel of such College instead of the Order set forth in the Book of Common Prayer" (g).

Morning and evening prayer to be used as heretofore, but an abridgment may be used on week days on request of governing body.

Sect. 7. "No person shall be required to attend any college or university lecture to which he, if he be of full age, or, if he be not of full age, his parent or guardian, shall object upon religious grounds."

Attendance at lectures.

As to the colleges, the only direct change in the nature of secularizing these institutions made by the early University Commission Acts was in giving them power, with certain sanctions, to separate ecclesiastical benefices which had become united to the headship, or to any particular membership in the college, and to sell the advowsons and apply the proceeds of the sale for the benefit of the officer who would otherwise have holden the benefice (h), so that such officer need now no longer be an ecclesiastical person; and also in enabling them, with the sanction of the visitor, to apply funds holden in trust for the purchase of advowsons, "to other purposes for the advancement of religion, learning and education within the college" (i).

Effect of modern legislation on colleges.

Indirectly, the commissioners, both on the first and on the second commission, in the exercise of the powers given them by parliament, made ordinances throwing open a vast number of fellowships and other emoluments, formerly holden by clerical persons only, to laymen; and, by consequence, largely diminished the ecclesiastical element till then dominant in the governing bodies of the different colleges.

Then came the Universities Tests Act, 1871, opening headships and fellowships to persons not members of the church.

The colleges, however, still remain for very many purposes ecclesiastical, as is shown in sections 4, 5 and 6 of that act.

The only ecclesiastical elements that seem to be left in the universities are the divinity degrees and certain professorships of divinity; the public prayers, sermons and religious ceremonies, and the examinations in certain matters of religion at present

Ecclesiastical elements in the universities.

(f) Vide 40 & 41 Vict. c. 48, s. 59, infra, p. 1598.

maintained by either university; certain positions and privileges accorded by the Church to graduates of the universities; and the right of presenting to livings whereof the advowsons are in the hands of papists (k).

40 & 41 Vict.
c. 48.

By 40 & 41 Vict. c. 48, s. 57, nothing in that act is to interfere with the Universities Tests Act, 1871 (l). Other sections of 40 & 41 Vict. c. 48 contain the following provisions:—

Provision for education, religion, &c.

Sect. 15. "The commissioners, in making a statute for the university or a college or hall, shall have regard to the interests of education, religion, learning, and research, and in the case of a statute for a college or hall shall have regard in the first instance to the maintenance of the college or hall for those purposes."

Objects of statutes for university.

Sect. 16. "With a view to the advancement of art, science, and other branches of learning, the commissioners, in statutes made by them for the university, may from time to time make provision for the following purposes, or any of them: . . .

(14.) For regulating presentations to benefices in the gift of the university:

(15.) For regulating the application of the purchase-money for any advowson sold by the university."

was and still is subject to the jurisdiction of the bishop as visitor, and the dean and chapter as governors, and had once a specially ecclesiastical character (n).

By 24 & 25 Vict. c. 82, "An act for making provision for the good government and extension of the University of Durham," commissioners were appointed with full powers for making ordinances of all kinds in relation to the university and its colleges, so long as such ordinances were not inconsistent with an Act, 2 & 3 Will. c. xix., and the charter granted to the university on the 1st of June, 1837; "but the admission of persons other than those belonging to the Established Church to the emoluments of the university shall not be deemed inconsistent with the said act or charter" (sect. 7). Durham is expressly made subject to the Universities Tests Act, 1871 (o).

The other universities in England are purely secular.

In this chapter colleges (p) will be generally treated of, such mention only being made of the universities of Oxford and Cambridge as seems required by their present ecclesiastical position and their relation to the colleges (q).

Brief Historical Notices of the In-

Origin of Oxford and Cambridge.

According to the generally received opinion the first authentic records of the universities of Oxford and Cambridge belong to the twelfth century: they seem in their origin to have been voluntary associations (o) of the clergy, for the purpose of promoting the study of whatever arts and sciences were then known to Western Europe. Limited in the first place, probably, to one or two branches of knowledge, they gradually came to include distinct Faculties (p) of arts, medicine, law and theology,—the latter being justly considered the ultimate object of the human intellect. By a similar process, the voluntary acknowledgment of merit passed into formal recognitions of it by Degrees; while the Church, within whose bosom, and from the concourse of whose members the institutions had sprung up, silently incorporated them into her system, subjected them to her discipline, and gave authority and universal reception to their honorary distinctions (q).

members might prosecute their studies to greater advantage under the more famous teachers in the universities; prelates and other benefactors gave stipends for assistance of the secular students; and while the former class were supported and superintended within seminaries dependent upon the mother house, the latter associated together in small bodies, and were domiciled during their studies in "Hostelries" or "Halls," under the superintendence of particular teachers.

It was soon found, however, that uncertainty in the means of support, and the want of domestic discipline, exposed those of the students, who were not under the protection of the monastic system, to distress on the one hand, and irregularity of conduct on the other; and hence the origin of the present colleges (r).

Of those institutions, in their complete and formal character

Walter de Merton's college.

(r) The word "Collegium," like "Universitas," is in itself merely a corporate title; and thus in our earlier law books, "College and Common Seal" are not unfrequently used to denote incorporation. "Hospitium," or "Hostelry," was a term applied to the burgher's houses in which students lodged; Lind. p. 285. "Aula" meant a locality wholly in possession of the students, or, as Lindwood (ib.) calls it, "Habita-culum Scholarium;" and this might be occupied either by an unincorporated body, as was the case in what are called "Halls" at Oxford, or by a "Collegium," or incorporated company. In the latter case, the body was designated either from its place of abode (as various colleges are at Cambridge), or (as is more common at Oxford) by its title as a corporation. This circumstance is well illustrated in the foundation deed "Aulæ Annunciationis Beatæ Mariæ in Cantab.," which runs "et volumus quod dictum collegium vocetur Collegium Annunciationis B. M., et domus quam inhabitabit dictum collegium nominetur Aula Annunciationis B. M. in Cantab." Gough's MSS. Camb. 23, in Bib. Bodl.

Aula, however, is not the most ancient name for the residence of collegiate bodies in the universities; "Domus Scholarium de Merton," and "Peterhouse," being earlier.

The influence of the corporate character has also had much to do with the titles of individual members. The term "Socius," or fellow, being relative to the collective existence, whereas "Scholaris" is the general word in the older statutes.

The distinction, (although by no means strictly observed) between "Collegium" and "Universitas," as a corporate title, is said to consist in the "vita communis," or living together in one house, with a common table, &c., being an incident of the former. Endowment, too, is sometimes mentioned as a feature (although not a distinctive one) of a college.

In another sense, besides that of mere incorporation (in which it is often applied alike to regular and secular bodies, as in Bede, Hist. l. iii., c. 5; Leland, De Rebus Britannicis Collectanea, ii. p. 60; Mon. Angl. vol. iii. p. 39, &c.), the word collegium seems to have distinguished the societies of the secular from those of the monastic clergy (see Tanner's Preface to Notitia Monastica, p. xv); and it is in this general sense that it is used in 37 Hen. 8, c. 4, and others of the Dissolution Acts. In this sense "Collegium," and "Ecclesia Collegiata," are often used indifferently; and, in fact, several of the colleges in Oxford and Cambridge are, properly speaking, "Collegiate Churches," i.e., these colleges are annexed to parochial or other churches.

There is a valuable gloss upon the use of these, and other similar words, in Lindwood, p. 14, verb. "Capitulis Ruralibus."

(whatever merely eleemosynary provisions might before have been made), there seems every reason to believe that Walter de Merton, who was several times chancellor of England, and Bishop of Rochester, was the first founder. But even he, in his first establishment of the body which for six hundred years has perpetuated his name, did not bring it into that mature form which he afterwards gave it. In the year 1264, he organized a body of students, to whom he assigned revenues for their support, and a capitular house for their occasional meeting, and for the residence of certain of their officers; but this mansion was not even in the neighbourhood of any university, and his intention was, that his band of scholars should wander about in search of knowledge wherever it might best be obtained:—" Oxon. vel alibi ubi studium vigere contigerit."

Within ten years after, however, he, by two successive bodies of statutes, organized and settled it within the University of Oxford, reputed to be in those days, after Paris, "the second school of the church." He did not, however, prefer the place of his college to its purpose, but still contemplated and allowed for the possibility of its being removed elsewhere. And this allowance of removal from Oxford is still a portion of his statutes.

By the rules of his institution, careful provision was made for divine worship, for internal discipline, and for the management of its property. He contemplated it as the means of supporting a pious and industrious body of students, from their first instruction in grammar, up to the time of their becoming fitted for the highest offices of the church, unless they should prefer a life spent in contemplation and learning within its walls. For the acquisition of classical knowledge, he provided within the college itself; and for instruction in the higher branches, he relied upon the academical institution within which he had placed it.

This college, which may be rather called a private means for profitably using the university than a constituent portion of it, was the model upon which the earlier colleges, both at Oxford and Cambridge (such as Peterhouse and Oriel), were formed. Those of later date, but before the Reformation (such as New College, Magdalen, and the like), were based upon the same principles, but included more largely the liturgical character of other ecclesiastical foundations, and in their scholastic provisions were more expressly connected with the university system in which they were placed. Those subsequent to the Reformation, again, are in their constitution more strictly academical, and more expressly related to the universities; but all, from the first to the last, are in themselves substantive institutions, having their separate corporate rights, their distinct revenues, and a system of internal discipline, over which the universities have no control.

It is evident, then, that according to the original idea of such colleges as are treated of in this chapter, they have no more necessary relation to the universities in which they stand, than formation.

Relation of

that which arises from the inmates of the former being students and graduates in the latter. A more intricate state of things grew up in the course of time;—the universities consisting, with the exception of those members of it who had collegiate or monastic protection, of an unendowed, and, in many respects, ill-organized body of teachers and hearers, were subject to diminution, sometimes almost to extinction, from the frequent ravages of disease, or the distresses consequent upon the civil and ecclesiastical disorders, till at length the old “hostelries” or “halls” became deserted, and (with some exceptions at Oxford) disappeared; and while the monastic seminaries were swept away, together with their present foundations, the colleges becoming more numerous, and even those which were originally designed only for persons on their foundations having for the most part admitted independent members, gradually absorbed the great body of students, and became by those means co-extensive with the universities themselves. It was natural that under these circumstances the heads of the colleges should acquire corresponding academical authority, and that the new statutes of the universities should be framed with a view to the existing state of things. And thus the systems both at Oxford and Cambridge assumed till the legislation of this reign an appearance calculated to make even well informed men confuse the two classes of institutions, and to account the colleges merely as constituent parts of the universities. Very important distinctions, however, always existed between them.

The laws which govern the corporate existence, the property, and the privileges, incidental to these two classes of institutions, are in many points (particularly in that of visitation) distinct: and it is perfectly conceivable, either that the colleges should be swept away and the universities continue, or that the universities should be suppressed, and the colleges remain as independent seminaries. To state exactly wherein the connection now subsists, would occupy a space inconsistent with the limits of this work. The object of the writer will have been attained, if these brief notices should prove sufficient to obviate a common misapprehension, and to guide others in a more detailed inquiry.

Before the Reformation, colleges in this country were considered, as is evident from the earlier statutes of Elizabeth (s), and some of the cases in the Year Book (t), as corporations of an ecclesiastical character; and even since that period, they appear to be of a mixed lay and spiritual nature: for instance, the archbishops of Canterbury have successfully claimed a qualified right of visitation over them (u), and canons 16, 17, and 58 (x) of 1603 directly relate to their dress and discipline. But, since the epoch of the Reformation, the doctrine of the common law is, that, generally, colleges in the university are lay corporations (y), although the members of the college may be all spiritual.

But since lay corporations.

Christ Church, Oxford.

But the dean and chapter of Christ Church in Oxford is a spiritual, and not a lay body (z). It has, however, been dealt with as a college under modern acts (a).

3 & 4 Vict. c. 113.

By sect. 5 of 3 & 4 Vict. c. 113, the first vacant canonry in Christ Church is to be annexed to the Lady Margaret's professorship of divinity in the university, in lieu of the canonry in Worcester cathedral, now annexed thereunto; and by section 6 of the same statute, two canonries are to be annexed to two new professorships intended to be founded by her majesty in the University of Oxford: namely, those of Pastoral Theology and Ecclesiastical History. Section 7 provides that, otherwise than as above specified, the act shall not apply to Christ Church (b). Christ Church has also been generally excluded from all the other acts relating to cathedrals.

34 & 35 Vict. c. 23.

Visitor.

The rectory of Ewelme was separated from the Regius Professorship of Divinity and Canonry of Christ Church by 34 & 35 Vict. c. 23.

Besides the authority within the college themselves, in all charitable foundations some one must be Visitor (c). If no one be appointed by the founder of the charity, he himself during his life is visitor, and after his death the office devolves upon his heirs (d). Should they become extinct, the crown becomes visitor (e), as the sovereign is mero jure of all royal foundations, and also of those in which the crown and a subject are joint-founders (f), that is to say, contemporaneously joint-founders; for where the crown engrafts a charitable gift on an original foundation by a subject, both fall under the cognizance of the primary visitor (g).

(x) Vide supra, p. 720.

(y) The legal doctrine, that colleges are lay corporations, depends mainly upon the Dr. Patrick's Case. Sir T. Raym. p. 101, and I. Keb. p. 289. It is clear that in regard to colleges founded before the Reformation, this decision rests, to say the least, upon very uncertain grounds; but it would require a full examination of the arguments to point this out in a satisfactory manner; and it will therefore be enough here to direct attention to the question, which is still of importance in points bearing upon the legal incidents of the colleges. (g) Com. Dig. tit. Visitor, and A.-G. v. Master, &c. of Clare Hall and Talbot, 3 Atk. p. 663, at p. 675.

Where the crown is visitor, the functions of the office are exercised by the lord chancellor or by special commissioners (h).

It will be seen that on the principle that a man cannot visit himself, a beneficial interest in the charity disqualifies a person for the office of visitor (i).

It is not proposed to discuss here the office and power of a visitor. The Ecclesiastical process of visitation has been treated of in a separate chapter (k), and the special powers of a visitor over deans, chapters, and cathedrals in those subjects (l). The Editor would, however, wish in this summary to bring out one point which was perhaps not so saliently stated, though it was referred to, in the former edition. The visitor of a charity represents the founder, who could make his own terms and deprive his own creatures of the benefits he had given. Cujus est dare ejus est disponere. So such a visitor, provided he complies with the simple dictates of natural justice, as, for example, hearing the parties before condemning them, and does not act for any possible personal advantage, decides absolutely and without appeal. He can be compelled by mandamus to act, that is to hear and determine, and his sentence would be treated by the Courts as a nullity if he acted outside the limits of his powers. But within those limits he is supreme (m).

Difference between ecclesiastical and charity visitor.

But the ordinary ecclesiastical visitor is an ecclesiastical judge, having perhaps special powers, able to decide with fewer formalities, but as liable to appeal as he could be if sitting in his ordinary forum. Thus in the Exeter Reredos case (n), an appeal was made from the bishop sitting as visitor to the Court of Arches, and from the Court of Arches to the Privy Council; and in the case of The Bishop of Killare v. The Archbishop of Dublin, an appeal was brought from the Archbishop of Dublin to the Delegates (o).

Whether in cathedrals of the New Foundation the visitor sits as representing the crown as founder, and therefore without appeal, or whether he sits as an ecclesiastical judge, subject to appeal in the usual order of the hierarchy, may have some day to be determined (p).

There is much store of learning as to visitation of colleges and of other charitable foundations. But it is not proposed to further treat of the subject in this work.

In the thirteenth year of King Henry the Fourth happened the famous cause between the Archbishop of Canterbury and the chancellor and proctors of the University of Oxford (q); which was

Archbishop Arundel and Oxford.

thus : Archbishop Arundel being in his visitation of the diocese of Lincoln, came in his way to visit the University of Oxford, which was then within the limits of that diocese. The university insisted upon their exemption by papal authority, and refused to submit to his visitation. The archbishop urged a sentence given against them in this same cause by King Richard the Second; but in vain. They stood upon their exemption, and referred themselves (in which the archbishop also agreed with them) to the king's judgment. Their cause was accordingly heard before the said King Henry the Fourth, and sentence given for the archbishop, and his visitatorial power over them. And this old process and sentence, at the archbishop's petition, was ratified and enrolled in Parliament, to prevent any future disputes upon that subject (r).

Upon this, the Archbishop of York put in his claim for the exception of the college called Queen Hall, in the said university; the result of which was this : that the Archbishop of Canterbury, in presence of the king and of the lords in the said parliament, promised, that if the Archbishop of York could sufficiently show any privilege or specialty of record, wherefore the said Archbishop of Canterbury might not use or exercise his visitation of the said college, he would then abstain; saving to him always the visitation of the scholars abiding in the said college, according to the judgments and decrees made and given by the said King Richard the Second and the said King Henry the Fourth (s).

But this claim of the Archbishop of York seems to have been frivolous, seeing the exclusive right which he insisted on was only in respect of his being local visitor of that college; for if the Archbishop of Canterbury had otherwise a power of visiting, the founder of the college could not take it from him by his statutes.

Archbishop Laud and both universities.

Afterwards, in the 12th year of King Charles the First, this matter was again contested by both the universities against Archbishop Laud, who claimed a right of visiting them jure metropolitico, and they pleaded that the power of visiting them was in the king alone as their founder. This cause also came to a hearing before his majesty in council.

Wake, State of the Church, &c., p. 348.

(r) See Strype, Life of Archbishop Parker, vol. i. p. 530, c. 20, where it is said that the Archbishop ordered this decision to be put into his register, with a memorandum, A.D. 1568. The notes of Dr. Yale, in the Cotton Library, confirm the prerogative of the archbishop; according to them the scholars of Oxon submit to the visitation, and "nequeunt se esse exceptos." In the reign of Richard II. a contest arose between the archbishop and chancellor, the latter alleging it belonged to the king alone; but "Declaratio regis per literas suas patentes quod jus visitandi cancellarium et universitatem Oxon. pertinet et pertinere debet, in perpetuum pertinebit ad Archiepiscopum Cantuar. et ecclesiam suam, et non ad ipsum regem." Westminster, 20th year of Rich. II.

(s) Rot. Parl. 13 Hen. 4, num. 15; Wake, State of the Church, &c. p. 348.

For the archbishop it was urged, that his power of visitation within his province is of common right, and as ancient as the archbishopric itself; that it is a general power, and not over certain particular persons, but over clergy and people, in all causes ecclesiastical, and in all places within his province without exception; that if the universities have any exemption, it is incumbent upon them to show it; that the exemptions (if any) which they had by any bulls from the pope, were abolished by the act of parliament of 28 Hen. 8, c. 16, and not pleadable in any court; that this power of the archbishop does no way trench upon the king's power; but that the king by himself or his commissioners may visit as founder, and the archbishop nevertheless as metropolitan; that the archbishop's intention is not to visit the statutes of the university or of any particular college, but to visit metropolitically, that is, to visit the body of the university, and every scholar therein, for his obedience to the doctrine and discipline of the Church of England, but not to meddle with the statutes of colleges or of the university, or the particular visitors of any college.

For the University of Cambridge it was urged, that the power of visiting them of right belongs to the king, which is an exemption from any ordinary jurisdiction; and for other exemptions they had bulls from the pope and charters; that about the beginning of the reign of King Richard the Second, most of their charters were burned by an insurrection in the town; but many of them were confirmed in the time of Henry the Sixth, upon a suit made to the pope to give some confirmation to their privileges in regard their charters were burned; whereupon the pope granted a commission, and witnesses were examined; which examination was a means to produce two ancient bulls, exempting them from metropolitcal visitation, the one bearing date in the year 624, and the other in 699.

For the University of Oxford it was urged, that it was an ancient university, founded long before the Conquest, and had as ancient privileges; and by bulls from the pope was ever exempt from the visitation of any archbishop, as in his metropolitcal right, but that the few visitations which had been made by any of the archbishops were by virtue only of their legatine power; that as none can found an university but the king, so none has power but the king to visit it. That indeed their ancient charters are lost; but although there were no records so old, yet there are divers recitals in Edward the Third's time, which show that they had some original grant of exemption; and in confirmation thereof that there had never been in so many hundred years any visitation made by any archbishop as being within his province.

Upon the hearing of the whole cause it was declared by the king, with the advice of the privy council, that it was granted on all hands that the king had an undoubted right to visit the universities, and that the archbishop, in the right of his metro-political church of Canterbury, had power to visit the whole province in which the universities were situated, and were under the same power, unless they could show privilege and exemption; that the exceptions then alleged were not such as could give satisfaction; that they could be exempted by no papal bull; and that they were exempted by none of their charters; that the long omission of the archbishops to visit, could be no prescription to bar the right of the metropolitical see; that it appeared that both universities had been visited by three archbishops jure metropolitico, and not by a legatine power; that this coming in question upon the resistance of the University of Oxford, it was, upon full hearing of both parties, adjudged for the archbishop by King Richard the Second, and afterwards upon the like hearing and re-examination by King Henry the Fourth; and both of their judgments established by act of parliament, 13 Hen. 4. And the archbishop produced before his majesty an original deed from the University of Cambridge to the archbishop, under the hands of the heads of houses, containing a renunciation of all privileges from any pope, and wherein they bind themselves under the penalty of 1,000*l.* not to oppose the archbishop's jurisdiction; and this was in the 27 Hen. 8, being a year before the said bulls were abolished by act of parliament.

So the king and council adjudged the right of visiting the universities, chancellors, scholars, and all persons enjoying the privileges thereof, to belong to the archbishop and metropolitical church of Canterbury, by himself or his commissary.

Whereupon the archbishop made this motion to the king: first for himself, that his majesty would be graciously pleased that he might have the sentence drawn up by the advice of his majesty's learned counsel, and put under the broad seal, to settle all differences that hereafter might arise: then on the behalf of both the universities, that they should remain free and exempt from the visitation and jurisdiction of the bishop of the diocese or archdeacon.

Universities of Oxford and Cambridge apparently exempt from episcopal visitation.

The grounds of exemption from episcopal visitation, whilst at the same time they are supposed subject to the archiepiscopal, are not set forth: this must be from some clause of exemption in the university charters, or from some restrictive clause in the foundation of the bishoprics, especially of Oxford, where the episcopal see was not erected until the latter end of the reign of King Henry the Eighth; and even with respect to Cambridge this might be the case, if that is true which is intimated above, that the university there is at least as ancient as the year 624, for that was long before the erection of the bishopric of Ely, which was taken out of the diocese of Lincoln about the year 1111. Or else the archbishop here must have meant that the king, from his authority over the church here, and as visitor of the universities in right of foundation, should by his royal authority now establish it.

Furthermore, since it was declared to be the archbishop's right to visit metropolitically, and it was not limited by law how often, therefore the archbishop moved that notwithstanding the last custom of visitation was only once in the archbishop's time, he might by himself or his commissary visit the universities as often as any great emergent cause should move him; provided that neither he nor any of his successors should after the first visitation visit upon such emergent causes, unless it be first made known to his majesty and his successors.

All which was granted by the king and so settled.

Lastly, whereas it was alleged that the chancellors of either university were, and are like to be, persons of great honour and eminence, and therefore it might be inconvenient that they should be called to such visitation, it was declared by his majesty that in the course of law the chancellor would be allowed to appear by his proxy (t).

But Aylyffe (u) is indignant at this decision: he says, "It is allowed that the archbishop has power to visit the two universities metropolitically in matters relating to the doctrine and discipline of the Church of England, as for heresy and schism, but not for other crimes; and if he should attempt the same, he might be opposed. . . . It is to be observed, that between Arundell and Laud there had been thirteen archbishops, among whom there was not any besides Cardinal Pole (who visited the university by his legatine authority) who pretended to revive their title to a metropolitcal visitation or a legatine jurisdiction."

opinion.

The universities and the colleges therein, and the colleges of Westminster, Eton and Winchester, were exempted from the operation of 43 Eliz. c. 4, and are exempted from the jurisdiction of the charity commissioners.

Universities and colleges not under jurisdiction of charity commissioners.

Several founders of colleges have, in their statutes for the government of the said colleges, given a certain degree of preference, in the election of scholars or others, to those of their own blood. Concerning which there has been much dispute. But as the effect of the University Commission Acts and the subsequent legislation of the commissioners has been to abolish this preference in all the then existing cases, the learning on this subject has become almost obsolete (x). It is, however,

Preference

possible that such a preference may be created in a modern benefaction; and this has actually been done in the case of the Fereday Scholarships at St. John's College, Oxford.

Principle derived from canon law.

The same or a closely analogous principle as to the preference of founders' kin is to be found in foreign charitable foundations. This principle may be clearly traced to the canon law as its fountain. "Benefactors to churches," (observes Bishop Gibson (y),) "and much more they who founded and endowed, had a title to maintenance if they or their sons came to poverty. "Quicumque fidelium devotione propria de facultatibus suis Ecclesie aliquid contulerint, si forte ipsi, aut filii eorum redacti fuerint ad inopiam, ab eadem Ecclesia suffragium vite pro temporis usu percipiant" (z). To the same respect for natural feelings may be referred the preference given to inhabitants of the counties and dioceses in which the property of colleges is situated, and which do not benefit by the residence of the proprietors.

Provided nevertheless, that the powers conferred by this clause shall not be exercised to the prejudice of the existing interest of any such head or other member of a college without his consent; and in case of any diminution being occasioned in the income of any such head or other member of a college by any sale, annexation, purchase or investment that may be made under the provisions of the said acts, arrangements may be made under the like authority for giving to such head or other member adequate compensation for such diminution of his income out of the revenues of such college, or out of the proceeds of any such sale or investment, and the said section of the said last-mentioned act shall extend to authorize under the like authority the purchase out of any of the corporate funds or revenues of any such university or college of advowsons of benefices, and also of any rights of perpetual presentation or nomination to benefices, whether such benefices be or be not annexed to or held by or in trust for any of the said universities, or any such college as aforesaid, or the head or other member of any such college, to be added to those in the patronage of such university or college; and the words 'colleges' and 'college' in the said section of the said last-mentioned act, shall include the cathedral or house of Christ Church in Oxford, and the words 'proper securities' in the same section, shall be construed to extend to authorize and shall include the purchase of lands in fee simple; and also an investment on any of the parliamentary stocks or public funds of Great Britain; and all such securities, lands, and stocks or funds shall be settled, held, applied or disposed of in such manner as by the university or college effecting such sale, purchase, or investment, and by the like authority, shall be arranged and determined in that behalf; and every endowment or augmentation which shall be made by any university or college of any benefice with cure of souls under the authority of this section, or by virtue of the provisions of "1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 45 (j), "or any other act or acts of parliament, shall be valid notwithstanding the clear annual value of such benefice shall, at the time of such endowment or augmentation, exceed or be thereby made to exceed the limits prescribed by" sect. 16 of the said act "or any other act or acts of parliament: Provided that no such augmentation or endowment, beyond the clear annual value of five hundred pounds shall be made under the said act, . . . except with the consent of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners for England (to be testified by writing under their common seal) in addition to such other consent as may be otherwise required thereto."

By sect. 8, provision is made as to the right of patronage in the severed benefice; by sect. 9, the provisions of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act (k) are incorporated with sect. 69 of 3 & 4 Vict. c. 113, as extended by the act (31 & 32 Vict. c. 118), and by sect. 10 the ecclesiastical commissioners are constituted "the authority" for the purposes before mentioned.

Since then, by 34 & 35 Vict. c. 23, the benefice of Ewelme has been separated from the Regius Professorship of Divinity at Oxford (l); and by 45 & 46 Vict. c. 81, the benefice of Somerham has been separated from the Regius Professorship of Divinity at Cambridge, and power was given by sect. 25 of 40 & 41 Vict. c. 48, to separate a canonry in Rochester Cathedral from the Provostship of Oriel College, and by sect. 26 of the same act to sever a canonry in Ely Cathedral from the Regius Professorship of Greek at Cambridge.

CHAPTER V.

SCHOOLS.

- SECT. 1.—Origin and kinds of Schools.
 2.—Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction over Grammar Schools.
 3.—Recent Legislation.

SECT. 1.—Origin and kinds of Schools (a).

It has been observed in the last Chapter that the earliest origin of universities is to be traced to the schools which grew up under the shelter of the church. The general establishment of universities throughout Europe overshadowed these humbler seminaries of religious and useful learning, and were occasionally designated by their name. We find after the tenth century the appellations of "schola" and "studium generale" applied by contemporary writers to the universities which were yet in their infancy. But during the earlier centuries of the Christian era, the schools of the church were, in this country particularly, but indeed in all with very few and special exceptions, the sole source of education. The school which obtained the earliest celebrity was that of Alexandria, which numbered among its disciples St. Athanasius, and among its preceptors Origen. Thomassinus says, that in this school "literæ humaniores" were taught as well as the Scriptures. Theodoret bestows great praise on a similar institution at Edessa. During the sixth, seventh and eighth centuries, from the time of Clovis to Charlemagne, there appear to have been four distinct kinds of schools more or less prevalent, not only in Europe, but in such parts of Asia and Africa as had witnessed the establishment of the church. 1. Schools in the parochial districts. 2. Schools in bishops' houses. 3. Schools in monasteries. 4. The school of the archdeacon, which seems to have been peculiar to Africa. In these schools were educated not merely those who were destined to discharge clerical functions, but all those who were to be employed in any civil offices of the state. Charlemagne (b), whose palace was a seminary of all the learning which the age afforded, sent a circular letter to his bishops ordaining the general institution of schools throughout their dioceses, in order that the clergy being imbued (c) with the language of classical literature might the better be able to study the Holy Scriptures.

The capitularies of Louis the Debonnaire (A.D. 823) contain directions that what were subsequently called the four faculties—namely, Theology, Law, Medicine and the Arts—should be taught in these schools, and about this time the Decretals of Gratian began to form a regular branch of study in the schools of monasteries and cathedrals. During the sixth, seventh and eighth centuries, the schools of Rome appear (d) to have served as a model for the rest of Europe, and especially for these islands. Thomassinus cites with approbation the remark of Bede, that the discipline and studies of our schools were borrowed immediately from those of Ireland or France (e), of which the Roman school was the acknowledged archetype. The most flourishing epoch of the Anglican schools was, according to Bede, during the seventh century, while under the superintendence of Theodore, Archbishop of Canterbury (f). Bede enumerates Astronomy, Poetry and Arithmetic, among the elements of ecclesiastical instruction as administered in the age in which he lived, and of whose good effects he himself was the most remarkable example (f).

Anglican
schools.

The history of schools from the close of the eighth to that of the twelfth century is involved in considerable obscurity, but it would appear from the language of the Lateran Councils, enjoining the appointment of schoolmasters to be licensed by the bishop, in all monasteries and cathedrals, that they had fallen into considerable neglect. From the close of the twelfth century the universities became a sort of higher school for those who had derived the rudiments of instruction from the cloister (g). The chief provisions of the Councils of Lateran (h) have been incorporated in the ecclesiastical law of England, and any body consulting the Concilia of Spelman (i) will see that the practice

(h) In the third Council of Lateran (A.D. 1139), holden under Alexander the Third, the following Constitution was made and afterwards inserted in the body of the canon law. X. v. 5. 1. "Quoniam Ecclesia Dei sicut pia mater providere tenetur, ne pauperibus, qui parentum opibus juvarinon possunt, legendi et proficiendi opportunitas subtrahatur per unamquamque Cathedralen Ecclesiam magistro qui clericos ejusdem et scholares pauperes gratis doceat competens aliquod beneficium præbeatur." This constitution was enlarged and confirmed by the fourth Lateran Council under Innocent the Third (A.D. 1215).

of the church in this country was always in accordance with the spirit of the orders respecting schools contained in these Councils. The injunctions issued by Queen Elizabeth at the beginning of her reign, and the canons of 1571 and 1603, as will be seen in the course of this chapter, were to the same effect.

It was doubtless with reference to these considerations, that Lord Keeper Wright said, "I always was and still am of opinion that keeping of schools is by the old law of England of ecclesiastical cognizance" (l). So Bishop Gibson observes, "the truth is, in our records before the Reformation schools are often spoken of as ecclesiastical places, and the possession of them in ecclesiastical terms. So, when archbishops or bishops were patrons, the grant of them is styled collation" (m).

Of ecclesiastical cognizance in England.

In England, the names free school, endowed school and grammar school, are often used without discrimination. But they have distinct significations.

Different kinds of schools in England.
Free schools.

A free school, to speak strictly, is any school in which elementary instruction is gratuitously afforded, or very nearly so, to the children of a particular locality, whether the funds be supplied by private subscriptions, as in many of our parochial schools, or, as in some corporate towns, from the property of the corporation.

Endowed schools are those of which the whole or principal expenses are defrayed out of endowments bequeathed by the munificence of their founder.

Endowed schools.

Grammar schools are also endowed schools, but to which the constitution of their founder has annexed the condition that classical instruction shall form either the whole or a large portion of the education which they impart. These schools are no insignificant characteristic of the genius of this country. It is said that Spain is the only other kingdom in Europe which affords any similar instance of the existence of a large and wealthy class of national institutions, governed entirely by the original laws of their respective founders, with the exception of a few cases in which they have been modified by the tribunals of parliament or of courts of justice. After the Reformation the fortunes of the endowed grammar schools underwent considerable vicissitudes, for this event abolishing the use of Latin in the services of the church, rendered the knowledge of that language an attainment of less necessity and an object of less desire than it had hitherto been. The grammar schools situated in populous and wealthy towns, or those which afterwards became so, retained their importance; and many also were preserved by their connection with the universities, and the great advantages which they offered in the shape of fellowships, scholarships and exhibitions to those whom they educated. Those schools to which their founders had not annexed the condition of instruction in the dead languages have remained for the most part as charity or gratuitous schools of elementary education. The greater part of the schools now existing in this country have indeed been founded during the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, when the liberal charity of individuals in some measure supplied the grievous deficiency of education occasioned by the spoliation of cathedrals and monasteries, and the confiscation of ecclesiastical property. Some, however, of the schools which most flourished in England, and have obtained the general appellation of public schools, are of considerable antiquity; some, like Eton and Westminster, being the fruit of royal, and some, like Winchester and the Charter House, of private munificence.

Some of these schools are colleges, or parts of colleges, as Eton, Westminster, Winchester, Dulwich; some are hospitals, as Christ's Hospital, Sutton's Hospital (the Charter House), Emmanuel Hospital. Winchester was included under the Oxford University Commission Acts and Eton under the Cambridge ones (n). Provisions as to the Westminster studentships at Christ Church, Oxford, are made by 30 & 31 Vict. c. 76, and as to the scholarships of the same school at Trinity College, Cambridge, by 19 & 20 Vict. c. 88, s. 36, and a subsequent order in council.

3 & 4 Vict. c. 60, s. 19, as extended by 4 & 5 Vict. c. 38, s. 19, empowers the church building commissioners to apply land in any parish granted to them for any of the purposes of the Church Building Acts, "for the purpose of any parochial or charitable school."

Several acts have been passed to enable bodies corporate and persons under disability to convey land for sites of schools for the education of poor children (o).

By 15 & 16 Vict. c. 49, reciting these acts, it is enacted that, "All the provisions contained in the said recited acts or any of them in relation to the conveyance and endowment of sites for such schools as are contemplated by the provisions of the said acts respectively, shall apply to and be construed to be applicable to the cases of such schools as hereinafter specified; (that is to say) schools or colleges for the religious or educational training of the sons of yeoman or tradesmen or others, or for the theological training of candidates for holy orders, which are erected or maintained in part by charitable aid, and which in part are self-supporting, in the same or like manner as if such schools or colleges as last aforesaid had been expressly specified in the said act, 4 & 5 Vict. c. 38, and the said subsequent acts, and the same or the like powers had been thereby given for or in relation to the conveyance and endowments of sites for such schools or colleges, and for the residences of schoolmasters, or otherwise in connection therewith, as are by the said acts given for or in reference to the conveyance and endowment of sites for schools falling within the provisions of those acts: Provided always, that no ecclesiastical corporation, sole or aggregate, shall be authorized to grant any site under this act, except for schools or colleges which shall be conducted upon the principles of and be in union with the Church of England and Ireland as by law established; and that no ecclesiastical corporation, aggregate or sole, shall grant by way of gift, and without a valuable consideration, for any of the purposes of this act, any greater quantity of land in the whole than two acres; and that no other person or persons or corporation not coming within the class or description of persons empowered by the second section of the said act of the fourth and fifth years of the reign of her present Majesty to convey land for sites as therein mentioned, shall grant, by way of sale for a valuable consideration for any of the purposes of this act, any greater quantity of land in the whole than two acres, or shall grant any land whatever for any of the purposes of this act by way of gift and without a valuable consideration, anything in the said recited acts or hereinbefore contained to the contrary notwithstanding."

By the old law a grammar school was holden to be so strictly intended for the purpose of teaching the learned languages, that it would be an alteration of the object of the charity to divert part of the funds to teaching modern languages or sciences. This rule was afterwards somewhat relaxed.

Law as to education in grammar schools.

But a great change was effected by 3 & 4 Vict. c. 77, which enabled the Courts of Equity to make schemes extending or altering in such schools the course of education, altering the terms of admission, and the appointment of the masters.

3 & 4 Vict. c. 77.

By sect. 24, however, certain foundations are exempted from the operation of this act, viz., "the Universities of Oxford or Cambridge, or any college or hall within the same, or the University of London, or any colleges connected therewith, or the University of Durham, or the college of Saint David's or Saint Bees or the grammar schools of Westminster, Eton, Winchester, Harrow, Charter House, Rugby, Merchant Taylors, Saint Paul's, Christ's Hospital, Birmingham, Manchester, or Macclesfield, or Louth, or such schools as form part of any cathedral or collegiate church."

Exemptions from this act.

SECT. 2.—Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction over Grammar Schools.

Queen Elizabeth, in an injunction set forth in the first year of her reign, ordains that "no man shall take upon him to teach, but such as shall be allowed by the ordinary, and found meet as well for his learning and dexterity in teaching, as for sober and honest conversation, and also for right understanding of God's true religion" (p).

Canon 77.

By Canon 77 of 1603. No man shall teach either in public school or private house, but such as shall be allowed by the bishop of the diocese, or ordinary of the place, under his hand and seal, being found meet, as well for his learning and dexterity in teaching, as for sober and honest conversation, and also for right understanding of God's true religion; and also, except he shall first subscribe to the first and third articles aforementioned simply, and to the two first clauses of the second article (q).

Cory v. Pepper.

And in Cory v. Pepper, in 30 Car. 2, a consultation was granted in the Court of King's Bench, against one who taught without licence in contempt of the canons; and (says the reporter) the reason given by the court was, that the canons of 1603 are good by the statute 25 Hen. 8, c. 19, so long as they do not impugn the common law, or the prerogative royal (r).

Cox's Case.

The argument in Cox's Case seems to contain the substance of what has been alleged on both sides in this matter, and concludes in favour of the ecclesiastical jurisdiction. The case occurred in the year 1700, in the Court of Chancery. Cox was libelled against in the spiritual court at Exeter, for teaching school without licence from the bishop; and on motion before the lord chancellor, an order was made that cause should be shown why a prohibition should not go, and that in the meantime all things should stay. On showing cause, it was moved to discharge the said order, alleging, that before the Reformation this was certainly of ecclesiastical jurisdiction. Lord Keeper Wright said: "Both courts may have a concurrent jurisdiction; and a crime may be punishable both in the one and in the other. The canons of a convocation do not bind the laity without an act of parliament; but I always was, and still am of opinion, that keeping of school is by the old laws of England of ecclesiastical cognizance: and therefore let the order for a prohibition be discharged." Whereupon it was moved, that this libel was for teaching school generally, without showing what kind of school; and the Court Christian could not have jurisdiction of writing schools, reading schools, dancing schools, or such like. To which the lord keeper assented, and thereupon granted a prohibition as to the teaching of all schools, except grammar schools, which he thought to be of ecclesiastical cognizance (s).

This power of the ordinary was confirmed and strengthened by the following sections of the 3 & 4 Viet. c. 77:—

3 & 4 Viet.
c. 77.

and grammar schoolmasters, and shall continue subject to the jurisdiction of the ordinary as heretofore; and that no person shall be authorized to exercise the office of schoolmaster or undermaster therein without having such licence, or without having made such oath, declaration, or subscription as may be required by law of the schoolmasters or under-masters respectively of other grammar schools."

Sect. 15. "In all cases in which no authority to be exercised by way of visitation in respect of the discipline of any grammar school is now vested in any known person or persons, it shall be lawful for the bishop of the diocese wherein the same is locally situated to apply to the Court of Chancery, stating the same; and the said court shall have power, if it so think fit, to order that the said bishop shall be at liberty to visit and regulate the said school in respect of the discipline thereof, but not further or otherwise."

Sect. 24. "Provided always, that neither this act nor anything therein contained shall be any way prejudicial or hurtful to the jurisdiction or power of the ordinary, but that he may lawfully execute and perform the same as heretofore he might according to the statutes, common law, and canons of this realm, and also as far as he may be further empowered by this act."

Among the Visitation Articles preserved in Strype's Memorials of Archbishops' Visitations, the following is of constant occurrence:—

"Item. Whether your grammar school be well ordered; whether the number of children thereof be furnished; how many wanted, and by whose default? Whether they be diligently and godly brought up in the fear of God and wholesome doctrine; whether any of them have been received for money or rewards, and by whom? Whether the statute foundations, and other ordinances touching the said grammar school, the schoolmaster, or the scholars thereof, or any other having or doing therein, be kept? By whom it is not observed, or by whose fault? And the like in all points you shall require and present of your choristers and their master" (t).

In the last edition of Dr. Burn's Ecclesiastical Law a form of certificate for obtaining a licence to teach, and one of articles against a person for teaching a grammar school, were inserted.

Now, however, by 32 & 33 Vict. c. 56, s. 20, the endowed schools commissioners are to provide in every scheme for a school coming under that act for the abolition of the power of the ordinary as to licensing.

It was holden in Rex v. The Bishop of Lichfield and Coventry (u), that the ordinary might refuse to grant a licence; and in Rex Canon 137. By Can. 137 of 1603, every schoolmaster shall, at the bishop's first visitation, or at the next visitation after his admission, exhibit his licence, to be by the said bishop either allowed, or (if there be just cause) disallowed and rejected (v).

Whether the ordinary may proceed to deprivation. In Bales v. Kendall (x), it was holden, that where the patronage is not in the ordinary, but in feoffees or other patrons, the ordinary cannot put a man out; and a prohibition was granted, the suggestion for which was, that he came in by election, and that it was his freehold.

Canon 78. By Can. 78 of 1603, "In what parish church or chapel soever there is a curate which is a master of arts, or bachelor of arts, or is otherwise well able to teach youth, and will willingly so do, for the better increase of his living, and training up of children in principles of true religion; we will and ordain, That a licence to teach youth of the parish where he serveth, be granted to none by the ordinary of that place, but only to the said curate. Provided always, that this Constitution shall not extend to any parish or chapel in country towns, where there is a public school founded already; in which case, we think it not meet to allow any to teach grammar, but only him that is allowed for the said public school."

Inhibitions to schoolmasters. "In the records of the see of Canterbury" (says Bishop Gibson) "I find two inhibitions to schoolmasters not to teach school in præjudicium liberæ scholæ;—one in the time of Archbishop Bancroft, and the other in the time of Archbishop Laud" (y).

1 & 2 Vict. c. 106. Beneficed clergymen may keep schools. 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106, which inflicts penalties on beneficed clergymen who engage in trade or buy to sell again for profit and trade, provides by sect. 30, "that nothing herein-before contained shall subject to any penalty or forfeiture any spiritual person for keeping a school or seminary, or acting as a schoolmaster or tutor or instructor, or being in any manner concerned or engaged in giving instruction or education for profit or reward, or for buying or selling or doing any other thing in relation to the management of any such school, seminary, or employment."

Canon 79. By Can. 79 of 1603, "All schoolmasters shall teach in English or Latin, as the children are able to bear, the larger or shorter catechism, heretofore by public authority set forth. And as often as any person shall be upon holy and festival days, within the parish where they teach, they shall bring their scholars to the church (z) where such sermon shall be made, and Upon other days, and at other times, they shall train them up with such sentences of Holy Scriptures as shall be most expedient to induce them to all godliness; and they shall teach the grammar set forth by King Henry VIII. and continued in the times of King Edward VI. and Queen Elizabeth of noble memory, and none other. And if any schoolmaster, being licensed, and having subscribed as is aforesaid, shall offend in any of the premises, or either speak, write or teach against any thing whereunto he hath formerly subscribed (if upon admonition by the ordinary he do not amend and reform himself) let him be suspended from teaching school any longer" (a).

By 14 Car. 2, c. 4, s. 13, every governor or head of every college and hall in the said universities, and of the said colleges of Westminster, Winchester and Eton, "within one month next after his election, or collation and admission into the same government or headship, shall openly and publicly in the church, chapel or other public place, of the same college or hall, and in the presence of the fellows and scholars of the same, or the greater part of them then resident subscribe unto the nine and thirty articles of religion mentioned in the statute" of 13 Eliz. c. 12, and unto the Book of Common Prayer, "and declare his unfeigned assent and consent unto and approbation of the said articles and of the same book, and to the use of all the prayers, rites and ceremonies forms and orders in the said book prescribed and contained," according to this form following:—

14 Car. 2, c. 4.
Heads of colleges to subscribe the Thirty-Nine Articles, and the Book of Common Prayer.

"I, A. B., do declare my unfeigned assent and consent to all and everything contained and prescribed in and by the book intituled, The Book of Common Prayer and Administration of the Sacraments and other Rites and Ceremonies of the Church, according to the use of the Church of England; together with the Psalter or Psalms of David, pointed as they are to be sung or said in churches; and the Form and Manner of making, ordaining and consecrating of Bishops, Priests and Deacons."

"And all such governors or heads of the said colleges and halls, or any of them, as shall be in holy orders, shall once at least in every quarter of the year (not having a lawful impediment), openly and publicly read the morning prayer and service in and by the said book appointed to be read in the church, chapel or other public place of the same college or hall upon pain to lose and be suspended of and from all the benefits and profits belonging to the same government or headship, by the space of six months, by the visitor or visitors of the same college or hall. And if any governor or head of any college or hall, suspended for not subscribing unto the said articles and book, or for not reading of the morning prayer and service as aforesaid, shall not at or before the end of six months next after such suspension subscribe unto the said articles and book, and declare his consent thereunto as aforesaid, or read the morning prayer and service as aforesaid, then such government or headship shall be ipso facto void."

How far act still in force.

This act has been repealed as to the universities and the colleges therein (a), but not as to the colleges of Westminster, Winchester and Eton, as to which it still remains in force.

10 Geo. 4, c. 7.
As to Roman Catholics.

It is provided by 10 Geo. 4, c. 7 (commonly called the Roman Catholic Relief Act), s. 16, as follows:—

... Nothing in this act contained shall be construed to enable any persons, otherwise than as they are now by law enabled, "to hold, enjoy or exercise . . . any office or place, whatever, and by whatever name the same may be called, of, in or belonging to the colleges of Eton, Westminster or Winchester, or any college . . . or school within this realm."

Position of Dissenters in grammar
schools.

The question was often discussed before the Court of Chancery how far dissenters might claim to enjoy the educational privileges afforded by grammar schools. This question generally took one of two shapes; (a) Whether regulations for the government of the school shall be made which shall allow children to share in the general teaching while they are exempted from the religious teaching and religious services (which must, in the absence of special provision to the contrary, be those of the church) (b); (b) Whether dissenters may be appointed trustees of the school.

Admission of children of dissenters.

(a) On the first point the decisions seem to have varied a good deal; Lord Romilly having generally leaned to the admission of dissenters (c), and the late Lord Chancellor Hatherley, when vice-chancellor, in a contrary direction (d). In some cases the subject has been left to the discretion of the head-master or of the visitor (e).

In the case of Re Ilminster Grammar School (f), while it was distinctly laid down that all the religious teaching given must be that of the Church of England, a long-standing exemption of dissenters from attendance on that teaching was sanctioned.

School (g), leave was given to promote a bill in parliament for the regulation of the school, in order thereby to provide for the admission of dissenters to the benefits of the school; and it seems to have been considered, in that case at all events, that without legislation this object could not have been accomplished.

By 23 Vict. c. 11, s. 1, "It shall be lawful for the trustees or governors of every endowed school from time to time to make, and they shall be bound to make, such orders as, whilst they shall not interfere with the religious teaching of the other scholars as now fixed by statute or other legal requirement, and shall not authorize any religious teaching other than that previously afforded in the school, shall nevertheless provide for admitting to the benefits of the school the children of parents not in communion with the church, sect, or denomination according to the doctrines or formularies of which religious instruction is to be afforded under the endowment of the said school: Provided that in the will or wills, deed or deeds, or other instrument or instruments regulating such endowment, nothing be contained expressly requiring the children educated under such endowment to learn or to be instructed according to the doctrines or formularies of such church, sect, or denomination."

23 Vict. c. 11.
Power to trustees of endowed schools to make orders for the admission of children of denominations herein stated.

By sect. 2, this act is not to extend to schools exempted from 3 & 4 Vict. c. 77, nor to any school established or to be established by, or in union with, or to be in union with the National Society for Promoting the Education of the Poor in the Principles of the Established Church (h).

Exceptions.

(b) On the second point the law was clearly laid down by the House of Lords and the Court of Appeal in Chancery, in the case of Re Ilminster School (i) already mentioned, that where the school is one in connection with the church, even though dissenters' children are admitted to some of the teaching of the school, the trustees must be members of the church.

Dissenters trustees.

All this law, however, has been considerably modified by the legislation, which will be found mentioned in the next section.

Modification by recent legislation.

SECT. 3.—Recent Legislation.

It has been thought necessary to enter so far into the question of schools, and especially grammar schools, on account of the connection which they still have with ecclesiastical law; but in the last few years a course of legislation has been inaugurated, and in many respects completed, by the Public Schools Act, the Endowed Schools Acts, and the Elementary Education Act, which leaves remaining very little of ecclesiastical jurisdiction over schools.

Public
schools.

By 31 & 32 Vict. c. 118, amended by 32 & 33 Vict. c. 58 (k), power is given to make new governing bodies, either wholly or partially distinct from the existing governing bodies, of the seven public schools comprehended under the act, that is, Eton, Westminster, Winchester, the Charter House, Harrow, Rugby, and Shrewsbury (l); and the governing bodies are given large powers of altering the existing constitution of these schools (m).

31 & 32 Vict.

By sect. 5, sub-s. 6, of 31 & 32 Vict. c. 118, the new governing bodies of the schools to which the act applies, may remove all conditions previously necessary for the tenure of any mastership; by sect. 13, the head-master is to be appointed by them, and to be dismissible at pleasure, and all other masters are to be appointed by and dismissible by the head-master.

By sect. 12, sub-s. 4, the governing bodies may make regulations with respect to attendance at divine service and, where the school has a chapel of its own, with respect to the chapel services and the appointment of preachers; and, by the same section, sub-s. 9, they may make regulations with respect to giving facilities for the education of boys whose parents or guardians wish to withdraw them from the religious instruction given in the school.

Certain special commissioners were appointed with certain powers of legislation on the same subjects: All statutes made by the governing bodies were to be approved by such commissioners, while they remained in office, and by the queen in council. All subsequent statutes have to be approved by the queen in council (sects. 9, 10, 15—19). By sect. 20, provision is made for the transfer by the dean and chapter of Westminster and the ecclesiastical commissioners of lands and money to Westminster School. Sect. 22 provides for the sale of livings belonging to Shrewsbury School; sect. 23, for separating the spiritual cure of the parish of Eton from the provostship of the college.

Provision as to college
chapels.

By sect. 31, "The chapel of every school to which this act applies shall be deemed to be a chapel dedicated and allowed by the ecclesiastical law of this realm for the performance of public worship and the administration of the sacraments according to the liturgy of the Church of England, and to be free from the jurisdiction or control of the incumbent of the parish in which such chapel is situate (n)."

"Any scheme which may be made in pursuance of this act constituting the parish of Eton a separate vicarage shall contain provisions making the existing chapel of ease at Eton the parish church of Eton, and exempting the college chapel from being dealt with as a parish church."

Whether governors must be members of Church.

Nothing is said in the acts as to the members of the governing bodies being members of the Church of England or otherwise. In the two governing bodies which were first created, those of Eton and Westminster, provision has been made in the constituting statutes for all members of the governing bodies being members of the Church of England. In the cases of some of the other schools a similar provision was proposed to be inserted, but objections were raised in parliament and elsewhere, and it is understood that this provision was omitted. Bearing in mind the fact that the religious education in these schools is to be still, as it has been, that of the church, it would seem to follow that the governors should be—as it was decided in Re Ilminster School (n), that the trustees of other grammar schools must be—members of the church. The Editor would also refer to the provisions of 14 Car. 2, c. 4, s. 13 (o).

The Endowed Schools Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 56), seems to apply to all schools and scholastic endowments in England, except those specially excepted by sect. 8. These specially exempted schools and endowments are:—

“(1.) Any school mentioned in sect. 3 of the Public Schools Act, 1868 (p).”

“(2.) Any school which, on January 1st, 1869, was maintained wholly or partly out of annual voluntary subscriptions, and had no endowment except school buildings or teachers’ residences, or play-ground or gardens attached to such buildings or residences.”

“(3.) Any school which, at the commencement of this act, is in receipt of an annual grant out of any sum of money appropriated by parliament to the civil service, intituled ‘For Public Education of Great Britain;’ unless such school is a grammar school, as defined by ‘3 & 4 Vict. c. 77,’ or a school, a department of which only is in receipt of such grant.”

“(4.) Any school (unless it is otherwise subject to this act) which is maintained out of any endowment, the income of which may, in the discretion of the governing body thereof, be wholly applied to other than educational purposes.”

“(5.) Any school (unless it is otherwise subject to this act) which receives assistance out of any endowment, the income of which may, in the discretion of the governing body of such endowment, be applied to some other school.”

“(6.) Any endowment applicable and applied solely for promoting the education of the ministers of any church or religious denomination, or for teaching any particular profession, or any school (unless it is otherwise subject to this act) which receives assistance out of such endowment.”

“(7.) Any school which, during the six months before January 1st, 1869, was used solely for the education of choristers, or the endowment of any such school, if applicable solely for such education.”

As to these schools and endowments it is provided as follows:—

Endowed
schools.

Act not generally to apply to certain schools and endowments herein named.

Not to authorize schemes for interfering with modern endowments, cathedral schools, &c.

Sect. 14. "Nothing in this act shall authorize the making of any scheme interfering—

"(1.) With any endowment or part of an endowment (as the case may be) originally given to charitable uses, or to such uses as are referred to in this act, less than fifty years before the commencement of this act, unless the governing body of such endowment assent to the scheme.

"(2.) With the constitution of the governing body of any school wholly or partly maintained out of the endowment of any cathedral or collegiate church, or forming part of the foundation of any cathedral or collegiate church, unless the dean and chapter of such church assent to the scheme."

"(4.) With the constitution of the governing body of any school or with any exhibition (other than one restricted to any schools or school, or district), forming part of the foundation of any college in Oxford or Cambridge, unless the college assent to the scheme."

As to religious education in day schools.

Sect. 15. "In every scheme (except as hereinafter mentioned) relating to any endowed school or educational endowment, the commissioners"—the endowed school commissioners, to be appointed as in the act is mentioned—"shall provide that the parent or guardian of, or person liable to maintain or having the actual custody of, any scholar attending such school as a day scholar, may claim, by notice in writing addressed to the principal teacher of such school, the exemption of such scholar from attending prayer or religious worship, or from any lesson or series of lessons on a religious subject, and that such scholar shall be exempted accordingly; and that a scholar shall not by reason of any exemption from attending prayer or religious worship, or from any lesson or series of lessons on a religious subject, be deprived of any advantage or emolument in such endowed school, or out of any such endowment to which he would otherwise have been entitled, except such as may by the scheme be expressly made dependent on the scholar learning such lessons.

"They shall further provide, that if any teacher, in the course of other lessons at which any such scholar is in accordance with the ordinary rules of such school present, teaches systematically and persistently any particular religious doctrine, from the teaching of which any exemption has been claimed by such a notice as is in this section before provided, the governing body shall, on complaint made in writing to them by the parent, guardian or person having the actual custody of such scholar, hear the complainant and inquire into the circumstances, and, if the complaint is judged to be reasonable, make all proper provisions for remedying the matter complained of."

As to religious education in boarding schools.

Sect. 16. "In every scheme (except as hereinafter mentioned) relating to an endowed school, the commissioners shall provide, that if the parent or guardian of, or person liable to maintain or having the actual custody of, any scholar who is about to attend such school, and who, but for this section could only be admitted as a boarder, desires the exemption of such scholar from attending prayer or religious worship, or from any lesson or series of lessons on a religious subject, but the persons in charge of the boarding houses of such school are not willing to allow such exemption, then it shall be the duty of the governing body of such school to make proper provisions for enabling the scholar to attend the school and have such exemption as a day scholar, without being deprived of any advantage or emolument to which he would otherwise have been entitled, except such as may by the scheme be expressly made dependent on the scholar learning such lessons; and a like provision shall be made for a complaint by such parent, guardian, or person as in the case of a day school."

Sect. 17. "In every scheme (except as hereinafter mentioned) relating to any educational endowment the commissioners shall provide that the religious opinions of any person, or his attendance or non-attendance at any particular form of religious worship, shall not in any way affect his qualification for being one of the governing body of such endowment" (p). Governing body not to be disqualified on grounds of religious opinions.

Sect. 18. "In every scheme (except as hereinafter mentioned) relating to an endowed school, the commissioners shall provide that a person shall not be disqualified for being a master in such school by reason of his not being or not intending to be in holy orders." Masters not to be required to be in holy orders.

Sect. 19. "A scheme relating to—

"(1.) any school which is maintained out of the endowment of any cathedral or collegiate church, or forms part of the foundation of any cathedral or collegiate church; or Schools excepted from provisions as to religion.

"(2.) any educational endowment, the scholars educated by which are, in the opinion of the commissioners (subject to appeal to her majesty in council as mentioned in this act), required by the express terms of the original instrument of foundation or of the statutes or regulations made by the founder or under his authority in his lifetime or within fifty years after his death (which terms have been observed down to the commencement of this act) to learn or to be instructed according to the doctrines or formularies of any particular church, sect, or denomination, is excepted from the foregoing provisions respecting religious instruction and attendance at religious worship (other than the provisions for the exemption of day scholars from attending prayer or religious worship, or lessons on a religious subject, when such exemption has been claimed on their behalf), and respecting the qualification of the governing body and masters (unless the governing body, constituted as it would have been if no scheme under this act had been made, assents to such scheme) (q).

"And a scheme relating to any such school or endowment shall not, without the consent of the governing body thereof, make any provision respecting the religious instruction or attendance at religious worship of the scholars (except for securing such exemption as aforesaid), or respecting the religious opinions of the governing body or masters" (r).

Abolition of jurisdiction of ordinary as to licensing masters.

Claims of cathedral schools against ecclesiastical commissioners.

Sect. 21. "In every scheme the commissioners shall provide for the abolition of all jurisdiction of the ordinary relating to the licensing of masters in any endowed school or of any jurisdiction arising from such licensing."

Sect. 20 empowers the commissioners to provide by scheme for the transference of the visitatorial power from special visitors to the charity commissioners; and sect. 22 makes all teachers in the schools dismissible at pleasure.

Sect. 27. "Where an educational endowment at the commencement of this act forms or has formed part of the endowment of any cathedral or collegiate church, the commissioners shall inquire into the adequacy of such educational endowment, and may submit to the ecclesiastical commissioners for England proposals for meeting, out of the common fund of the ecclesiastical commissioners, the claim of any school receiving assistance out of the endowment of any such church, to have an increased provision made for it in respect of any estates of such church which may have been transferred to the ecclesiastical commissioners. And the ecclesiastical commissioners, on assenting to any such proposal or any modification of it, may make such provision out of their common fund by such means and in such manner as they think best, and a scheme under this act may, with their consent, be made for carrying such proposal into effect."

School chapels appropriated for religious worship free from parochial jurisdiction.

Sect. 53. "The chapel of an endowed school subject to this act, which either has been before or after the commencement of this act consecrated according to law, or is authorized for the time being by the bishop of the diocese in which the chapel is situate, by writing under his hand to be used as a chapel for such school, shall be deemed to be allowed by law for the performance of public worship and the administration of the sacraments according to the liturgy of the Church of England, and shall be free from the jurisdiction and control of the incumbent of the parish in which such chapel is situate" (s).

Endowed Schools Act, 1873 (36 & 37 Vict. c. 87). The following sections seem to be material:—

Sect. 6. “Where under the express terms of the original instrument of foundation of any endowed school or educational endowment the holder of any particular office is a member of the governing body of the school or endowment, nothing in section seventeen of the principal act shall be deemed to prevent the holder for the time being of such office from being retained as a member of the governing body of such school or endowment.”

Holder of office to be retained on governing body.

Sect. 7. “A scheme relating to any educational endowment, originally given to charitable uses since the passing of the act of the first year of the reign of William and Mary, chapter eighteen (commonly called the Toleration Act), if by the express terms of the original instrument of foundation, or of the statutes or regulations made by the founder, or under his authority in his lifetime, or within fifty years after his death (which terms have been observed down to the commencement of the principal act), it is required that the majority of the members of the governing body, or that the majority of the persons electing the governing body of such endowment, or that the principal teacher employed in the school, or that the scholars educated by the endowment, shall be members of a particular church, sect or denomination, shall be excepted from the provisions of the principal act mentioned in section nineteen of the principal act, in like manner as a scheme mentioned in that section, and that section shall be construed as if a scheme relating to such an educational endowment, as is above in this section mentioned, were a scheme relating to an educational endowment mentioned in sub-section two of the said section.”

Extension of previous act as to schools excepted from provisions as to religion.

Sect. 11. “Where a scheme under the principal act gives the governing body of any endowed school power to make regulations respecting the religious instruction given at such school, the scheme shall also provide for any alteration in such regulations not taking effect until the expiration of not less than one year after notice of the making of the alteration is given.”

Alteration of religious instruction not to be till after one year's notice.

Sub-section 3 of section 4 of the Welsh Intermediate Education Act, 1889 (52 & 53 Vict. c. 40, s. 4), provides as follows:—

52 & 53 Vict. c. 40.

“(3.) Where a scheme under this act does not relate to a school maintained out of the endowment, or forming part of the foundation of any cathedral or collegiate church, or where a scheme under this act does not relate to any other educational endowment which by section nineteen of the Endowed Schools Act, 1869, is excepted from the foregoing provisions of that act therein mentioned, such scheme shall, in addition to the provisions of section fifteen of the said act, provide that no religious catechism or religious formulary which is distinctive of any particular denomination, shall be taught to a scholar attending as a day scholar at the school established or regulated by the scheme, and that the times for prayer or religious worship or for schools.

Elementary

Regulations for conduct of public elementary school.

By the Elementary Education Act, 1870 (33 & 34 Vict. c. 75), the following provisions are made as to the religious nature of primary schools.

Sect. 7. "Every elementary school which is conducted in accordance with the following regulations shall be a public elementary school within the meaning of this act; and every public elementary school shall be conducted in accordance with the following regulations (a copy of which regulations shall be conspicuously put up in every such school); namely:—

"(1.) It shall not be required, as a condition of any child being admitted into or continuing in the school, that he shall attend or abstain from attending any Sunday-school, or any place of religious worship, or that he shall attend any religious observance or any instruction on religious subjects in the school or elsewhere, from which observance or instruction he may be withdrawn by his parent, or that he shall, if withdrawn by his parent, attend the school on any day exclusively set apart for religious observance by the religious body to which his parent belongs.

"(2.) The time or times during which any religious observance is practised or instruction in religious subjects is given at any meeting of the school, shall be either at the beginning or at the end, or at the beginning and the end of such meeting, and shall be inserted in a time table to be approved by the Education Department, and to be kept permanently and conspicuously affixed in every schoolroom; and any scholar may be withdrawn by his parent from such observance or instruction without forfeiting any of the other benefits of the school.

"(3.) The school shall be open at all times to the inspection of any of her majesty's inspectors, so, however, that it shall be no part of the duties of such inspector to inquire into any instruction in religious subjects given at such school, or to examine any scholar therein in religious knowledge, or in any religious subject or book.

"(4.) The school shall be conducted in accordance with the conditions required to be fulfilled by an elementary school in order to obtain an annual parliamentary grant."

Management of board school.

Sect. 14. "Every school provided by a school board (t) shall be conducted under the control and management of such board, in accordance with the following regulations:—

(t) Formed under the provisions of section 6 or 10 of the Act.

“(1.) The school shall be a public elementary school within the meaning of this act :

“(2.) No religious catechism or religious formulary which is distinctive of any particular denomination shall be taught in the school.”

By sect. 23, the managers of any elementary school may transfer their school to the school board, wherever there is one established. Transfer to school board.

Sect. 75 makes provision for schools with small endowments, which are excepted from the Endowed Schools Act. Small endowments.

Sect. 76. “Where the managers of any public elementary school not provided by a school board desire to have their school inspected or the scholars therein examined, as well in respect of religious as of other subjects, by an inspector other than one of her Majesty’s inspectors, such managers may fix a day or days not exceeding two in any one year for such inspection or examination. Inspection of voluntary schools by inspector not one of her Majesty’s inspectors.

“The managers shall, not less than fourteen days before any day so fixed, cause public notice of the day to be given in the school, and notice in writing of such day to be conspicuously affixed in the school.

“On any such day any religious observance may be practised, and any instruction in religious subjects given, at any time during the meeting of the school ; but any scholar who has been withdrawn by his parent from any religious observance or instruction in religious subjects shall not be required to attend the school on any such day.”

Sect. 96. After the 31st of March, 1871, “no parliamentary grant shall be made to any elementary school which is not a public elementary school within the meaning of this act.” Parliamentary grant to public elementary school only.

Sect. 97. “The conditions required to be fulfilled by an elementary school in order to obtain an annual parliamentary grant shall be those contained in the minutes of the education department in force for the time being, and shall, amongst other matters, provide that after ‘March 31, 1871’— Conditions of annual parliamentary grant.

“Such grant shall not be made in respect of any instruction in religious subjects :

“but such conditions shall not require that the school shall be in connection with a religious denomination, or that religious instruction shall be given in the school, and shall not give any preference or advantage to any school on the ground that it is or is not provided by a school board.”

CHAPTER VI.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE church has still some remains of jurisdiction over and legal connection with the learned and scientific professions and learning generally, which require to be noticed.

Notaries
public.

The jurisdiction of the master of the faculties, the officer of the Archbishop of Canterbury, in the creation and government of notaries public, has already been mentioned (a).

As to physicians, the following constitution and statutes are of ecclesiastical interest :—

Physicians.

“Forasmuch as the soul is far more precious than the body, we do prohibit under the pain of anathema, that no physician for the health of the body shall prescribe to a sick person anything which may prove perilous to the soul. But when it happens that he is called to a sick person, he shall first of all effectually persuade him to send for the physicians of the soul ; that after the sick person hath taken care for his spiritual mendicament, he may with better effect proceed to the cure of his body. And the transgressors of this constitution shall not escape the punishment appointed by the council ” (b).

That is, by the council of Lateran, under Innocent III., from the canons of which council this constitution was taken ; which punishment is a prohibition from the entrance of the church until they shall have made competent satisfaction (c).

grievous hurt, damage, and destruction of many of the king's liege people, most especially of them that cannot discern the uncunning from the cunning; be it therefore to the surety and comfort of all manner of people enacted, that no person within the city of London, nor within seven miles of the same, shall take upon him to exercise and occupy as a physician or surgeon, except he be first examined, approved, and admitted by the Bishop of London, or by the Dean of St. Paul's for the time being, calling to him or them four doctors of physick, and for surgery other expert persons in that faculty, and for the first examination such as they shall think convenient, and afterwards always four of them that have been so approved; upon the pain of forfeiture, for every month that they do occupy as physicians or surgeons, not admitted nor examined after the tenor of this act, of 5*l.*, 'half to the king, and half to him that shall sue.' And of this that no person out of the said city, and precinct of seven miles from the same, except he have been, as is aforesaid, approved in the same, take upon him to exercise and occupy as a physician or surgeon, in any diocese within this realm, but if he be first examined and approved by the bishop of the same diocese, or he being out of the diocese by his vicar general, either of them calling to them such expert persons in the said faculties as their discretion shall think convenient, and giving their letters testimonial under their seal to him that they shall so approve, upon like pain to them that occupy the contrary to this act as is above said, to be levied and employed after the form before expressed (d). Provided always, that this act nor anything therein contained be prejudicial to the Universities of Oxford or Cambridge, or either of them, or to any privileges granted to them."

This act still stands unrepealed, though its place has been wholly taken by modern legislation of a purely secular character.

As to surgeons, the old law was, that they should be licensed by the bishop of the diocese, or his vicar general respectively (e). Surgeons.

Heretofore, in cases of necessity, the office of baptizing was frequently performed by the midwife; and it is very probable that this gave occasion first to midwives being licensed by the bishop or his delegated officer (f). Midwives.

And by several constitutions the minister was required frequently to instruct the people, in the form of words to be used in such cases of necessity.

In order for the midwife's obtaining a licence, she must be recommended under the hand of matrons, who have experienced her skill, and also of the parish minister, certifying as to her life and conversation, and that she is a member of the Church of England.

Oath of. A long oath to be administered to a midwife by the bishop or his chancellor, when she is licensed to exercise that office, is given in the Book of Oaths.

Licensing of. The award between the Chancellor of the diocese of Oxford and the Archdeacon of Oxford in 1736 already mentioned (g), declares that the sole right of granting "licences for Surgeons and Midwives" is to be in the Chancellor.

It seems, however, that if there be a suit in the spiritual court against a woman for exercising the trade of a midwife without licence of the ordinary, against the canons, a prohibition lies; for this is not any spiritual function of which they have cognizance (h).

Parochial
libraries.
Establishment of parochial libraries confirmed.

By 7 Ann. c. 14, s. 1: Reciting that in many places in England "the provision for the clergy is so mean that the necessary expense of books for the better prosecution of their studies cannot be defrayed by them;" and that several persons of late years "have by charitable contributions erected libraries within several parishes and districts . . . but some provision is wanting to preserve the same, and such others as shall be provided in the same manner, from embezzlement:" it is enacted, "that in every parish or place where such a library is or shall be erected, the same shall be preserved for such uses as the same is and shall be given; and the orders and rules of the founder or founders of such libraries shall be preserved and kept. . . ."

Ordinary to visit the same.

By sect. 3: The proper ordinary, or his commissary or official, or the archdeacon, or by his direction his official or surrogate, if the archdeacon be not the incumbent of the place where such library is, in their visitation, is enabled to "enquire into the state and condition of the said libraries, and to amend and redress the grievances and defects of and concerning the same, as to him or them shall seem meet; and it shall and may be lawful for the proper ordinary from time to time, as often as shall be thought fit, to appoint such persons as he shall think fit, to view the state and condition of such libraries; and the said ordinaries, archdeacons, or officials respectively, shall have free access to the same, at such times as they shall respectively appoint" (i).

To be locked up during the vacancy of the church.

Sect. 6. "And to prevent any embezzlement of books upon the death or removal of any incumbent," immediately after such death or removal, the library belonging to such parish or place "shall be forthwith shut up and locked, or otherwise secured by the churchwarden," or by such persons as shall be authorized by the proper ordinary or archdeacon respectively, "so that the same shall not be opened again till a new incumbent, rector, vicar, minister, or curate shall be inducted or admitted."

By sect. 7 it is provided, that if the place where such library shall be kept shall be used for the meeting of the vestry, or otherwise for the dispatch of any parish business, or for any other public occasion for which it hath been ordinarily used, it shall be made use of as formerly, and after such business dispatched, shall be again forthwith shut and locked up, or otherwise secured.

Sect. 2. . . . "Every incumbent, rector, vicar, minister, or curate of a parish, before he shall be permitted to use or enjoy such library, shall enter into such security by bond or otherwise for preservation of such library and due observance of the rules and orders belonging to the same, as the proper ordinaries within their respective jurisdictions in their discretion shall think fit."

New incumbent to give security.

Sect. 4. . . . "Where any library is appropriated to the use of the minister of any parish or place, every rector, vicar, minister, or curate of the same, within six months after his institution, induction or admission, shall make or cause to be made a new catalogue of all books remaining in or belonging to such library, and shall sign the said catalogue, thereby acknowledging the custody and possession of the said books; which said catalogue so signed shall be delivered to the proper ordinary within the time aforesaid, to be kept or registered in this court, without any fee . . ."

And to make new catalogues.

By sect. 5 the same provision is made if a new library is given.

By sect. 10: None of the books shall be alienable without the consent of the proper ordinary, and then only when there is a duplicate of such book.

Books not to be alienable.

" in case any book or books be taken or otherwise lost out of the said library, it shall and may be lawful for a justice of the peace to grant his warrant to search for the same; and in case the same be found, such book or books so found shall, immediately, by order of such justice, be restored to the said library"

Remedy in case of books lost or detained.

Also by sect. 2, "in case any book belonging to the library shall be taken away and detained, it shall and may be lawful for the 'incumbent, rector, vicar, minister, or curate for the time being, or any other person or persons, to bring an action of trover and conversion in the name of the proper ordinaries within their respective jurisdictions. . . ."

By sect. 8 a register of benefactions is to be kept.

By sect. 9, the ordinary, with the donor if living, and after his death, the ordinary alone, may make rules and orders "for the better governing of the said libraries and preserving of the same" (k).

(k) The act is not to extend to a public library then "lately erected" in the parish of Reigate in Surrey.

PART IX.

CHURCH EXTENSION.

CHAPTER I.

INTRODUCTORY.

Early ecclesiastical arrangement.

From a very early period of English history ; at the very latest computation many years before Magna Charta, England was, as it has been said, for ecclesiastical purposes, divided into provinces, bishoprics and parishes (a) ; and as every portion of the soil of England, except certain “peculiar” places, was situated within some bishopric and province, so, with the exception of certain “extra-parochial” places, is every portion of such soil within some parish. A parish is the place in which the people belonging to one church dwell (b) ; and, properly, every parish had a church situate therein ; and with this church there was one parson having the cure of souls of the whole parish. The church and the parson had certain lands and endowments vested in them from time immemorial, the freehold whereof is in the parson for the time being, and which are said by Blackstone to be holden in frankalmoign (c).

Besides the parish church there was also a cathedral church for the whole diocese ; and there were certain auxiliary chapels (d).

Its unalterableness.

The ecclesiastical arrangement of England being thus constituted, remained unalterable, even by the highest authorities of the church, without the consent of parliament. For the parish was a division of civil as well as ecclesiastical importance, and, dating from time immemorial, could only be altered by or under the provisions of an act of parliament.

Difficulties as to.

Moreover, as every parish church had to be consecrated and set apart from all profane uses and vested in some corporation aggregate or sole, and as all endowments in land for the benefit of the parson were also vested in a corporate body, no land could be, after the passing of the Statutes of Mortmain (e), conveyed to these uses or consecrated without the consent of the crown, and at one time also of the immediate lords of the fee. Ecclesiastical purposes, being also charities, came under the restrictions of 9 Geo. 2, c. 36 (f).

In this way it had become practically impossible to extend or increase the provisions of church accommodation by the ordinary powers and authorities of the church; and to meet the grave and increasing deficiencies in the ministration of the offices of religion in all large towns, the population of the country ever growing, and, moreover, shifting its centres, it became necessary to procure local or private acts of parliament; such acts were obtained for fifty new churches in the metropolis (g), for Liverpool, Brighton, and many other places.

The statutes 17 Car. 2, c. 3, and 29 Car. 2, c. 8, had enabled certain augmentation to be made of poor livings; and the great gift of Queen Anne's Bounty (carried into effect by 2 & 3 Anne, c. 20, and 1 Geo. 1, stat. 2, c. 10) had also contributed to the same purpose.

Still later, by 43 Geo. 3, cc. 107, 108; 51 Geo. 3, c. 115, and 52 Geo. 3, c. 161 (h), further facilities were given for the building and endowment of churches, and the augmentation of benefices with lands and hereditaments; but none of the statutes provided for any division or alteration of the old parishes, and of the cure of souls belonging to the parson thereof.

The first act providing for the division of parishes was 58 Geo. 3, c. 45. This act has since been followed by 59 Geo. 3, c. 134; 3 Geo. 4, c. 72; 5 Geo. 4, c. 103; 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 72; 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 38; 1 & 2 Vict. c. 107; 2 & 3 Vict. c. 49; 3 & 4 Vict. c. 60; 6 & 7 Vict. c. 37; 7 & 8 Vict. c. 94; 8 & 9 Vict. c. 70; 11 & 12 Vict. c. 37; 14 & 15 Vict. c. 97; 19 & 20 Vict. c. 104; 32 & 33 Vict. c. 94; 47 & 48 Vict. c. 65. These, with some other ancillary acts, contain the complicated and contradictory provisions out of which the law as to the building of churches and the division of parishes is to be gathered.

The source, however, from which the largest funds have been and still are provided for the division of parishes and the formation of new benefices is that supplied by the ecclesiastical commissioners, from the surplus income of the property of the bishops, deans and chapters, and other wealthy spiritual persons. Moreover, to the ecclesiastical commissioners large administrative powers have been given, which take effect in the alteration of dioceses, archdeaconries, rural deaneries, and parishes, the aboli-

It will be best, therefore, to treat first of Queen Anne's Bounty, then of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, and then of the augmentation of benefices by private persons, of the building of churches, of the division of parishes, and, lastly, of the voluntary church societies, some of which have been incorporated and endowed with certain privileges by the state for carrying on the work of extending the influence of the Church both in England and abroad.

CHAPTER II.

QUEEN ANNE'S BOUNTY.

It has been already stated, that by the law of England, previous to the reign of Henry VIII., certain duties called first fruits and tenths were paid by the incumbents of ecclesiastical benefices to the pope, and that these first fruits and tenths were taken from the pope, and were annexed to the crown of England by 26 Hen. 8, c. 3 (a).

These first fruits and tenths continued to form part of the revenues of the crown, till Queen Anne determined to apply them to the augmentation of the livings of the poorer clergy. This she was enabled to do by 2 & 3 Anne, c. 20, which provided as follows:—

Sect. 1. . . . "it shall and may be lawful for the queen . . . by her letters patent under the great seal of England, to incorporate such persons as she shall therein nominate or appoint, to be one body politic and corporate, to have a common seal and perpetual succession. And also at her majesty's will and pleasure, by the same or any other letters patent, to grant, limit or settle to or upon the said corporation and their successors for ever, all the revenue of first fruits and yearly perpetual tenths of all dignities, offices, benefices, and promotions spiritual whatsoever, to be applied and disposed of for the augmentation of the maintenance of such parsons, vicars, curates and ministers officiating in any church or chapel within the kingdom of England, dominion of Wales, and town of Berwick-upon-Tweed, where the liturgy and rites of the Church of England as now by law established shall be used and observed, with such lawful powers, authorities directions limitations and appointments, and under such rules and restrictions, and in such manner and form, as shall be therein expressed." . . .

Sect. 3. But this shall not affect "any grant, exchange, alienation or incumbrance at any time heretofore made of or upon the said revenues of first fruits and tenths, or any part thereof," but the same, during the continuance of such grant, exchange, alienation or incumbrance, shall remain in such force as if this act had not been made.

The first fruits and tenths so granted are called Queen Anne's Bounty.

of incorporation.

In pursuance of this act, the queen, by letters patent, bearing date November 3, in the third year of her reign, incorporated the archbishops, bishops, deans, speaker of the house of commons, master of the rolls, privy councillors, lieutenants and custodes rotulorum of the counties, the judges, the queen's serjeants at law, attorney and solicitor-general, advocate-general, chancellors and vice-chancellors of the two universities, mayor and aldermen of London, and mayors of the respective cities, for the time being, according to the purport of the said statute (unto whom, by a supplemental charter bearing date March 5, in the twelfth year of her majesty's reign, were added, the officers of the Board of Green Cloth, the queen's counsel learned in the law, and the four clerks of the privy council), to be a body corporate, by the name of The Governors of the Bounty of Queen Anne, for the Augmentation of the Maintenance of the Poor Clergy: and thereby granted to them the said revenue of the first fruits and tenths for the purposes aforesaid, under the rules and directions to be established pursuant to the said letters patent, together with these following directions: that is to say, that they shall keep four general courts at least in every year, at some convenient place within London and Westminster (notice being in that behalf first given in the Gazette, or otherwise, fourteen days before); the said courts to be in the months of March, June, September, and December; that the said governors, or so many of them as shall assemble, not less than seven in number at any one meeting (whereof, by the aforesaid supplemental charter, a privy councillor, bishop, judge, or one of the queen's counsel to be one) shall be a general court, and dispatch business by majority of votes, with power to appoint committees for the easier dispatch of business.

And to draw up rules and orders for the better rule and government of the said corporation and members thereof, and receiving, accounting for, and managing the said revenues, and for disposing of the same, and of such other gifts and benevolences as shall be given to them for the purposes aforesaid; which being approved, altered or amended by the crown, and so signified under the great seal, to be the rules whereby the governors shall manage the said revenue, and such other gifts and benevolences whereof the donors shall not particularly direct the application.

And that they shall inform themselves of the true yearly value of the maintenance of every such parson, vicar, curate and minister officiating in any such church or chapel as aforesaid, for whom a maintenance of the yearly value of 80*l*. is not sufficiently provided, and the distances of such churches and chapels from London, and which of them are in towns corporate or market towns, and which not, and how they are supplied with preaching ministers, and where the incumbents have more than one living.

And that they shall have a secretary and treasurer, and such inferior officers, substitutes, and servants as they shall think fit, to be chosen by a majority of votes at a general court, and to continue during the pleasure of the said governors; the secretary and treasurer to be first sworn at a general court, for the due and faithful execution of their offices; and the treasurer to give security for his faithful accounting of the monies he shall receive by virtue of the said office.

And with the power to admit into their said corporation all such persons who shall be piously disposed to contribute towards such augmentation as the said governors in a general court shall think fit.

And that they shall cause to be entered in a book to be kept for that purpose, the names of all the contributors, with their several contributions, to the end a perpetual memorial may be had thereof, and whereby the treasurer may be charged with the more certainty in his account.

And by 1 Geo. 1, st. 2, c. 10, s. 19, the courts and committees of the said governors shall have power to administer an oath to such persons as shall give them information or be examined concerning any thing relating to the execution of their trust. 1 Geo. 1, st. 2, c. 10.

And in pursuance of the said letters patent, the following rules and orders were established: viz.— Rules and orders made in pursuance of the said letters patent.

(1) That the augmentations to be made by the said corporation shall be by the way of purchase, and not by the way of pension.

(2) That the stated sum to be allowed to each cure which shall be augmented be 200*l.* to be invested in a purchase, at the expense of the corporation.

(3) That as soon as all the cures not exceeding 10*l.* per annum, which are fitly qualified, shall have received our bounty of 200*l.*, the governors shall then proceed to augment those cures that do not exceed 20*l.* per annum, and shall augment no other till those have all received our bounty of 200*l.*, except in the cases and according to the limitations hereafter named. And that from and after such time as all the cures not exceeding 10*l.* a year, which are fitly qualified, shall have received our bounty of 200*l.*, the like rules, orders and directions shall be from thenceforth by the governors observed and kept in relation to cures not exceeding 20*l.* a year, as are now in force and ought to be by them observed and kept in relation to cures not exceeding 10*l.* a year.

(4) That in order to encourage benefactions from others, and thereby the sooner to complete the good intended by our bounty, the governors may give the sum of 200*l.* to cures not exceeding 45*l.* a year, where any persons will give the same or a greater sum, or the value thereof in lands, tithes or rent charges.

(5) That the governors shall every year, between Christmas and Easter, cause the account of what money they have to distribute that year to be audited; and when they know the sum, public notice shall be given in the Gazette or such other way as shall be judged proper, that they have such a sum to distribute in so many shares, and that they will be ready to apply those shares to such cures as want the same, and are by the rules of the corporation qualified to receive them, where any persons will add the like or greater sum to it, or the value in land or tithes, for any such particular cure.

(6) That if several benefactors offer themselves, the governors shall first comply with those that offer most.

(7) Where the sums offered by other benefactors are equal, the governors shall always prefer the poorer living.

(8) Where the cures to be augmented are of equal value, and the benefactions offered by others are equal, there they shall be preferred that first offer.

(9) Provided, nevertheless, that the preference shall be so far given to cures not exceeding 20*l.* a year, that the governors shall not apply above one-third part of the money they have to distribute that year to cures exceeding that value.

(10) Where the governors have expected till Michaelmas what benefactors will offer themselves, then no more proposals shall be received for that year; but if any money remain after that to be disposed of, in the first place two or more of the cures in the gift of the crown, not exceeding 10*l.* a year, shall be chosen by lot, to be augmented preferably to all others; the precise number of these to be settled by a general court, when an exact list of them shall be brought in to the governors.

(11) As for what shall remain of the money to be disposed of after that, a list shall be taken of all the cures in the Church of England, not exceeding 10*l.* a year, and so many of them be chosen by lot as there shall remain sums of 200*l.* for their augmentation.

(12) Provided that when all the cures not exceeding 20*l.* a year, which are fitly qualified, shall be so augmented, the governors shall then proceed to augment those of greater value, according to such rules as shall at any time hereafter be proposed by them, and approved by us, our heirs or successors, under our or their sign manual.

(13) That all charitable gifts in real or personal estates, made to the corporation, shall be strictly applied according to the particular direction of the donor or donors thereof, where the donor shall give particular direction for the disposition thereof; and where the gift shall be generally to the corporation, without any such particular direction, the same shall be applied as the rest of the fund or stock of the corporation is to be applied.

(14) That a book shall be kept wherein shall be entered all the subscriptions, contributions, gifts, devises or appointments made or given of any monies, or of any real or personal estate whatsoever, to the charity mentioned in the charter, and the names of the donors thereof, with the particulars of the matters so given; the same book to be kept by the secretary of the corporation.

(15) That a memorial of the benefactions and augmentations made to each cure shall, at the charge of the corporation, be set up in writing on a stone to be fixed in the church of the cure so to be increased, there to remain in perpetual memory thereof.

(16) When the treasurer shall have received any sum of money for the use of the corporation, he shall, at the next general court to be holden after such receipt, lay an account thereof before the governors, who may order and direct the same to be placed out for the improvement thereof, upon some public fund or other security, till they have an opportunity of laying it out in proper purchases for the augmentation of cures.

(17) That the treasurer do account annually before such a committee of the governors as shall be appointed by a general court of the said corporation, who shall audit and state the same; and the said account shall be entered in a book to be kept for that purpose, and shall be laid before the next general court after such stating, the same to be there re-examined and determined.

(18) The persons whose cures shall be augmented shall pay no manner of fee or gratification to any of the officers or servants of this corporation.

By 1 Geo. 1, st. 2, c. 10, s. 3, all such rules and orders as shall from time to time be by the governors agreed upon, prepared, and proposed to the king, according to the true intent of the said letters patent, and by him approved under his sign manual, shall be as good as if they were established under the great seal. 1 Geo. 1, st. 2, c. 10.

By 28 & 29 Vict. c. 69, s. 5, any five of the governors, of whom three at least shall be archbishops and bishops, shall be a quorum, and sufficient at any court for the dispatch by majority of votes of all business (b). 28 & 29 Vict. c. 69. Quorum.

By 1 Geo. 1, st. 2, c. 10, s. 1, the bishops of every diocese, and the guardians of the spiritualties sede vacante, are empowered and required, from time to time as they shall see occasion, as well by the oath of two or more witnesses (which they or others commissioned by them under their hands and seals are empowered to administer) as by all other lawful ways and means, to inform themselves of the clear improved yearly value of every benefice with cure of souls, living, and curacy within their several dioceses, or within any peculiars or places of exempt jurisdiction within the limits of their respective dioceses, or adjoining or contiguous thereunto, although the same be exempt from the jurisdiction of any bishop in other cases, and how such yearly values arise, with the other circumstances thereof; and the same or such of them whereof they shall have fully informed 1 Geo. 1, st. 2, c. 10. Ascertaining the valuation of livings to be augmented.

(b) By 33 & 34 Vict. c. 89, the governors may grant superannuation allowance to their clerks and servants.

themselves from time to time, with all convenient speed, to certify under their hands and seals, or seals of their respective offices, to the governors of the bounty.

By sect. 2, where by certificates returned into the exchequer by 6 Ann. c. 24, and 6 Anne, c. 54, the yearly values of any livings not exceeding the clear yearly value of £50 are particularly and duly expressed and specified, such certificates shall ascertain the yearly value of such livings, in order to their being augmented; and no new or different valuation thereof shall be returned to the said governors by this act (c).

Agreement with benefactors for the nomination.

By sect. 8, all agreements with benefactors, with the consent and approbation of the governors, touching the patronage or right of presentation, or nomination to such augmented cure, made for the benefit of such benefactor, his heirs or successors, by the king under his sign manual, or by any bodies politic or corporate, or by any person of the age of twenty-one years, having an estate of inheritance in fee simple or fee tail in his own right, or in the right of his church, or of his wife, or jointly with his wife made before coverture or after, or having an estate for life or for years determinable upon his own life, with remainder in fee simple or fee tail to any issue of his own body, in such patronage or right of presentation, or nomination in possession, reversion or remainder, shall be good and effectual in the law; and the advowson, patronage, and right of presentation and nomination to such augmented churches and chapels, shall be vested in such benefactors, their heirs and successors, or the said bodies politic and corporate, and their successors, or the said respective persons as aforesaid, as fully as if the same had been granted by the king under his great seal, and if such bodies politic or corporate had been free from any restraint, and as if such other person so agreeing had been sole seised in their own right of such advowson, patronage, right of presentation, and nomination in fee simple, and had granted the same to such benefactors, their heirs and successors respectively, according to such agreements.

By sect. 9, the agreements of guardians on behalf of infants or idiots were to be as effectual as if the said infants or idiots had been of full age and sound mind, and had themselves entered into such agreements. But this has been repealed.

By sect. 10, in case of such agreement by any parson or vicar, the same shall be with the consent and approbation of his patron and ordinary.

By sect. 11, in case of such agreement made by any person seised in right of his wife, the wife shall be a party to the agreement, and seal and execute the same.

By sect. 12, such agreements with benefactors so made as aforesaid, shall be as effectual for the supplying cures vacant at the time of such augmentation made or proposed, as for the advowson or nomination to future vacancies.

(c) Vide infra, 45 Geo. 3, c. 84, s. 1; p. 1649.

Sect. 16. "Where it shall fall to the lot of any donative, curacy, or chapelry to receive an augmentation, according to the rules established or to be established, it shall be lawful for the governors, before they make the augmentation, to treat and agree with the patron of any donative, impropiator of any rectory, impropriated without endowment of any vicarage, or parson, or vicar of any mother church, for a perpetual, yearly, or other payment or allowance to the minister or curate of such augmented donative, curacy, or chapelry, and his successors, and for charging with and subjecting the impropriate rectory or the mother church or vicarage thereunto, in such manner and with such remedies as shall be thought fit; and such agreements made with the king under his sign manual, or with any bodies politic or corporate, or any other person having any estate or interest in possession, reversion or remainder in any such impropriate rectory in his own right or in the right of his church or his wife, or with the guardian of any person having such estate, or interest, or with any parson or vicar of any mother church, shall be as effectual with respect to such charges, as agreements made with the king, or with the same persons or bodies politic or corporate touching the patronage or right of presentation or nomination. And if such impropiator other than the king, and such parson or vicar, will not or shall not make such agreement with the said governors, the said governors may refuse such augmentation, and apply the money arising from the bounty which ought to have been employed therein, for augmenting some other cure, according to the rules then in force."

Agreement with patrons and others for a stipend, in case of augmentation by lot.

By 6 Ann. c. 24, s. 5, "whereas the augmentation is intended for the maintenance, not only of parsons and vicars, but also of curates and other ministers officiating in churches or chapels; therefore, for the preventing of all doubts touching the capacity of such ministers who are to receive the benefit of such augmentation," it is enacted, "that when any part or portion of the first fruits or tenths shall be annually or otherwise applied or disposed of towards the maintenance of any minister officiating in any church or chapel as aforesaid, such part or portion shall from thenceforth for ever be in the like manner continued to the minister from time to time so officiating in the same church or chapel: and every such minister, whether parson, vicar, curate, or other minister for the time being, so officiating in such church or chapel, shall enjoy the same for ever."

6 Ann. c. 24. Capacity of ministers for receiving the augmentation.

By 1 Geo. 1, st. 2, c. 10, s. 21, "to the end that churches and chapels may at all times be capable of receiving augmentations; if the governors shall, by any deed or instrument in writing under their common seal, allot or apply to any church or chapel any lands, tithes, or hereditaments arising from the said bounty, or from private contribution or benefaction, and shall declare that the same shall be for ever annexed to such church or chapel; then such lands, tithes and hereditaments shall from thenceforth be holden and enjoyed, and go in succession with such church and chapel for ever; and such augmentation so made shall be good and effectual to all intents and purposes, whether such church or chapel for which such augmentation is intended, be then full or vacant of an incumbent or minister; provided, such deed or instrument be inrolled in the chancery within six months after the day of the date thereof."

Such benefices made perpetual cures. As to cure of souls.

By 1 Geo. 1, st. 2, c. 10, s. 4, all benefices augmented are to be perpetual cures. This section has been already given (d).

By sect. 5, it is provided that no rector or vicar of a mother church, or any other ecclesiastical person having cure of souls within the parish or place where an augmented church or chapel is situate, should be divested or discharged from the same; but the cure of souls was to remain in the same state as before.

2 & 3 Vict. c. 49.

Now, however, by 2 & 3 Vict. c. 49, s. 2, any chapel having a district assigned to it shall be a perpetual curacy, with cure of souls, though it has been augmented by Queen Anne's Bounty; and the governors of the bounty may augment before or after the assignment of a district (e).

1 Geo. 1, st. 2, c. 10.

Lapse of such augmented benefices.

By 1 Geo. 1, st. 2, c. 10, s. 6, if such augmented cures be suffered to remain void for six months, the same shall lapse according to the course of law used in cases of presentative livings: and the right of nomination to such augmented cure may be granted or recovered, and the incumbency thereof shall cease and be determined, in like manner as in a vicarage presentative (f).

By sect. 7, it is provided that if the person entitled to nominate shall suffer lapse to incur, but shall nominate before advantage taken thereof, such nomination shall be as effectual as if made within six months, although so much time be elapsed that the title be vested in the crown.

Donatives, how affected.

Sects. 14 and 15, referring to donatives, have been already mentioned in the chapter on that subject (g).

Exchanging of lands settled by the augmentation.

By sect. 13, it shall be lawful, with the concurrence of the governors, and the incumbent, patron and ordinary of any augmented living or cure, to exchange all or any part of the estate settled for the augmentation thereof, for any other estate in lands or tithes, of equal or greater value, to be conveyed to the same uses (h).

43 Geo. 3, c. 107.

By 43 Geo. 3, c. 107, s. 2, this power shall be extended to all the messuages, buildings and lands belonging to every such augmented living or cure.

Power to build or purchase house out of augmentation moneys.

Sect. 3. "Where a living shall have been or shall be augmented by the said governors, either by way of lot or benefaction, and there is no parsonage house suitable for the residence of the minister, it shall and may be lawful for the said governors, and they are hereby empowered, from time to time, in order to promote the residence of the clergy on their benefices, to apply and dispose of the money appropriated for such augmentation, and remaining in their hands, or any part thereof, in such manner as they shall deem most advisable, in or towards the building, rebuilding or purchasing a house, and other proper erections within the parish, convenient and suitable for the residence of the minister thereof, which house shall for ever thereafter be deemed the parsonage house appertaining to such living, to all intents and purposes whatsoever; anything in any act or acts or the rules of the said governors contained to the contrary notwithstanding" (i).

By 45 Geo. 3, c. 84, "The respective bishops of every diocese, and the guardians of spiritualities sede vacante, shall be and are hereby empowered from time to time as they shall see occasion, and as may best serve the purposes of the said bounty to the poor clergy, by such ways and means as in" 1 Geo. 1, st. 2, c. 10, "are mentioned in that behalf, to inform themselves of the clear improved yearly value of such benefices with cure of souls, livings and curacies as were returned into the exchequer in pursuance of" 6 Ann. cc. 24, 54, "within their several dioceses, or within any peculiars or places of exempt jurisdiction within the bounds and limits of their respective dioceses, or adjoining or contiguous thereto, although the same be exempt from the jurisdiction of any bishop in other cases, and how such yearly values arise, with the other circumstances thereof; and the same or such of them, whereof they shall have fully informed themselves, from time to time with all convenient speed to certify to the said governors . . . for their better information in the premises; and the said governors are hereby authorized and empowered, with respect to the augmentation of such livings, so formerly certified into the exchequer as aforesaid, to act upon and be guided by such new certificates of the value and other circumstances thereof, made in pursuance of this act, as fully and effectually to all intents and purposes as they are in and by the said first hereinbefore mentioned and in part recited act enabled to do with regard to such livings as were not so certified into the exchequer, and as if the restraint of the said proviso therein had not been made, the same proviso or anything in the said recited act to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding."

Sect. 2. "Provided always, that such certificates as were returned into the exchequer for the purpose of ascertaining what livings were to be discharged from first fruits and tenths, shall not, so far as the same relate to the first fruits and tenths, be affected or altered in any manner whatsoever by anything in this act contained."

By 1 Geo. 1, st. 2, c. 10, s. 20, all the augmentations, certificates, agreements, and exchanges, to be made by virtue of this act, shall be carefully examined and entered in a book to be provided and kept by the governors for that purpose; which said entries being approved at a court of the said governors, and

1 Vict. c. 20.
Abolition of office of first fruits, &c.

By 1 Vict. c. 20, ss. 1, 2, the Offices of First Fruits and Tenths were abolished, and the books, vouchers, etc., belonging to them were delivered up to the treasurer of Queen Anne's Bounty; who by sects. 3, 5, is to be the sole collector of first fruits and tenths (g).

By sect. 4, the governors are to have the same remedies as the old collectors and remembrancer had for collecting the first fruits and tenths. Provision is made for searches of documents in the office by sects. 6, 7. Sects. 8, 9, provide for sending notices to incumbents of their liability to pay either first fruits or tenths (h).

Bishop of Ripon and bishops of any future sees to be governors.

By sect. 16 the Bishop of Ripon shall be a governor, "and in the event of the foundation of any new see or sees in England or Wales the bishop or bishops thereof for the time being shall be a governor or governors of the said bounty."

General meeting of governors to be holden yearly.

Sect. 17. "Between the first day of February and the first day of July in every year, on some convenient day and at some convenient place in the city of London or Westminster, to be respectively appointed for that purpose by the said governors of the bounty of Queen Anne, they the said governors shall hold an extraordinary general court or meeting for the despatch of the business of the said governors, and . . . at least fourteen days' previous notice of the time and place of such general court or meeting shall be yearly given in the London Gazette."

By sect. 18, the governors are, every November, to make out in writing a return of all their receipts and disbursements during the preceding year, and of all sums of money which at the time of making such account or return shall appear to be due or in arrear from any person or persons whomsoever for or in respect of first fruits and tenths respectively, which account is to be annually laid before her Majesty in council in both houses of parliament; and all persons are to have access thereto, and be furnished by the secretary with copies or extracts stamped with the common seal of the said governors, on giving reasonable notice to the secretary, and on payment of two shillings and sixpence for inspection, and threepence for every seventy-two words; "and all copies of or extracts from any of the said duplicates of the said accounts or returns, purporting to be stamped with the common seal of the said governors, shall be received in evidence in all courts and before all judges whatsoever without any further proof thereof."

Governors empowered to make rules
and orders.

Sect. 19. "It shall be lawful for her Majesty and her successors, under her or their royal sign manual, from time to time as there shall be occasion, and at the recommendation of the said governors of the bounty of Queen Anne, to make rules, orders, regulations, and arrangements for the better collecting, receiving, and enforcing the payment of the said first fruits and tenths, and accounting for the same, and for prescribing or regulating the duties of the said treasurer for the time being with respect to the said first fruits and tenths, and his receipt, disposition, and accounting for the same, and the number, duties, and employment of the clerks or other persons to be employed therein under the direction of such treasurer or otherwise, and for the remuneration of the said treasurer, clerks, and other persons respectively, for the duties performed by him and them respectively in the matters aforesaid, either by a fixed salary or salaries, or by the appropriation to him or them respectively, for his or their own benefit, of all or any of the fees hereinbefore directed to be paid to such treasurer for the time being, and for enforcing and carrying into more complete operation the objects and purposes of this act."

Sect. 20, gives a form for conveyances as follows:—

"I, — of —, in consideration of [state the consideration], do hereby grant and convey to the said governors, their successors and assigns, [or to the rector, vicar, curate, or incumbent of the rectory, vicarage, curacy, or chapelry of — (as the case may be), and his successors, by the direction of the said governors, (testified by their affixing their common seal to this deed)], all [describing the premises to be conveyed], together with all ways, rights, and appurtenances thereunto belonging, and all such estate, right, title, and interest in and to the same and every part thereof as I am or shall become seised or possessed of, to hold the said premises to the said governors, their successors, and assigns, for ever, to be by them applied and disposed of [or to hold the said premises to the said rector, &c., as the case may be, and his successors, for ever,] for the augmentation of the maintenance of the said rector, vicar, curate, or incumbent [as the case may be], of the rectory, vicarage, curacy, or chapelry of —. In witness whereof, &c."

Deeds to be made in the following form.

Sect. 21 gives a form of deeds for the purpose of granting stipends, rent-charges, or annuities, as follows:—

"I, — of —, in consideration of [state the consideration], do hereby give and grant unto the governors of the bounty of Queen Anne for the augmentation of the maintenance of the poor clergy, and their successors [or to the rector, vicar, curate, or incumbent of the rectory, vicarage, curacy, &c. of —, and his successors, by the direction of the said governors, testified by their affixing their common seal to this grant], the clear rent-charge or annual sum of — to be issuing out of and charged upon all [describe the premises charged], to hold the said clear rent-charge or annual sum of —, free from all charges and deductions now payable or hereafter to be made payable, unto the said governors, their successors and assigns, to be by them applied to the perpetual augmentation of the maintenance of the rector, vicar, curate, or incumbent (as the case may be), of, &c. [or unto the rector,

(as the case may be), for the perpetual augmentation of the said rectory, vicarage, curacy, or benefice], such clear rent-charge or annual sum to be paid yearly for ever, by four equal quarterly payments, on the days and times following, [specify the days and times and the place at which the payments are to be made], the first payment to be made on such of the said days as shall first happen next after the date hereof. In witness whereof, &c."

"And every such gift and grant shall be valid and effectual in the law for the purpose of securing the payment of such clear rent-charge or annual sum as shall be therein expressed to be granted, as far as the estate or interest of the grantors or grantor in the tenements and hereditaments thereby charged shall extend, and shall be construed and adjudged in all courts of judicature to authorize and empower the grantees or grantee therein named, and their respective successors and assigns, if such clear rent-charge or annual sum, or any part thereof, shall be in arrear for the space of twenty-eight days, to levy the same by distraining any goods upon the premises charged, and selling the distress, as in the case of rent reserved on common leases for years, and to repeat such distress and sale from time to time, whenever necessary, until such clear rent-charge or annual sum, and all arrears thereof, and any costs attending the non-payment thereof, shall be fully discharged."

Provisions as to deeds.

By sect. 22, the word "grant" in all conveyances, etc. made for valuable consideration to the governors, shall imply the usual covenants for title.

By sect. 23, the governors may cause deeds to be enrolled.

By sect. 24, the forms of deeds authorized by former statutes may still be used.

2 & 3 Vict.
c. 49.

Holding endowments under Church Building
Acts.

By 2 & 3 Vict. c. 49, s. 12, the governors of Queen Anne's Bounty may take and hold any endowments which might be taken and holden by private trustees for the use and benefit of any church or chapel built or acquired under the powers of the previous Church Building Acts, or the incumbent of or spiritual person serving such church or chapel; and private trustees may assign these endowments to the governors, but the governors are first to signify their consent to accept the same by an instrument under their common seal.

By sect. 13, the money so given is to be paid to the treasurer of the bounty (i).

3 & 4 Vict.
c. 20.

By 3 & 4 Vict. c. 20, s. 5, money so accepted by the governors is to be holden by them (except in special cases) upon the same trusts as money appropriated by themselves to any benefice.

2 & 3 Vict.
c. 49.

Sale of lands purchased for endowment.

By 2 & 3 Vict. c. 49, ss. 15, 16, 18, 19, 20, where lands have been purchased by the governors for the endowment of a benefice, which are not situate in the parish of the benefice or some adjoining parishes, the incumbent thereof may, with the consent of the governors, sell the same ; and, where the lands so purchased are situate in the parish or adjoining parishes, but for special reasons it would be desirable to sell the same, the incumbent may, with the consent of the governors and the archbishop, sell the same ; the purchase-money is to be paid to the treasurer and to be appropriated and invested for the benefit of the benefice as before (j).

By 3 & 4 Vict. c. 20, reciting the letters patent incorporating Queen Anne's Bounty, certain of the rules made by the governors and 1 Geo. 1, stat. 2, c. 10, and further reciting that, "under the provisions of the hereinbefore recited letters patent and act of parliament, or some or one of them, divers rules, orders, and constitutions have been from time to time made, whereby the power of the said governors to augment cures to the augmentation of which any benefactor or benefactors should also contribute as aforesaid has from time to time been enlarged and extended, both with respect to the amount of the yearly value of the cures which the said governors were empowered to augment, and with respect to the amount which the said governors were empowered to appropriate out of the funds at their disposal towards such augmentation, and such power so enlarged and extended has in many cases been exercised by the said governors, and in some of such cases agreements have been made with the benefactor or benefactors contributing to such augmentations touching the patronage or right of presentation or nomination to such augmented cures, according to the provision of the said recited act : " and that "doubts have arisen whether appropriations made by the said governors for the augmentation of any cure were strictly authorized by the rules, orders, and constitutions for the time being in force, in those cases in which the amount so appropriated to any cure by the said governors has exceeded in any one year the sum of two hundred pounds ; and doubts have also arisen whether the agreements made with such benefactor or benefactors as aforesaid are strictly valid and effectual in those cases in which the yearly value of the augmented cure has previously to such augmentation exceeded the sum of thirty-five pounds, or the amount so appropriated by the said governors as aforesaid has exceeded in any one year the sum of two hundred pounds : " and that "it is expedient to remove and obviate all such doubts as aforesaid, both with respect to appropriations made by the said governors, and with respect to agreement made and to be made with any such benefactor or benefactors as aforesaid : " it is enacted as follows :—

Sect. 1. "All appropriations heretofore made by the said governors of any sum or sums of money out of the monies at their disposal to the augmentation of any cure shall be good, valid, and effectual, to all intents and purposes whatsoever, in all cases in which any benefactor or benefactors has or have, in order to obtain any such appropriation for the augmentation of the same cure, contributed not less than the amount of benefaction which was at the time of any such augmentation required in that behalf by the rules, orders, and constitutions then in force, notwithstanding that the sum or sums so appropriated by the said governors to the augmentation of such cure shall have exceeded in any one year the sum of two hundred pounds."

Certain agreements made by the governors confirmed, and provisions of recited act extended.

Sect. 2. "All agreements already made and hereafter to be made, with such consent and approbation of the patron and ordinary as required by the said recited act, and with the consent and approbation of the said governors, with any benefactor or benefactors contributing to the augmentation of any cure, touching the patronage or right of presentation or nomination to such augmented cure, for the benefit of such benefactor or benefactors, his, her, or their heirs or successors, according to the provisions of the said recited act, and all grants and assurances made and to be made for carrying such agreements into effect, shall be good, valid, and effectual in the law, to all intents and purposes whatsoever, in all cases in which the yearly value of the augmented cure shall have been or shall be within the limits prescribed for the same by the rules, orders, and constitutions which shall have been or shall be in force at the time of making such agreements respectively as aforesaid, notwithstanding that such yearly value shall have exceeded or shall exceed the sum of thirty-five pounds, or that the amount appropriated by the said governors out of the monies at their disposal to the augmentation of such cure shall have exceeded or shall exceed in any one year the sum of two hundred pounds, or that such yearly value and also the amount so appropriated shall both have exceeded or shall both exceed the same several sums respectively: Provided nevertheless, that so far as relates to such agreements as aforesaid the amount of all appropriations hereafter to be made by the said governors to the augmentation of any cure shall be within the limits prescribed for the same by the rules, orders, and constitutions which shall be in force at the time of making such agreements respectively as aforesaid."

Amount of appropriations hereafter to be made shall be within the limit prescribed by rules in force at the time.

Provisions of 1 Geo. 1, st. 2, c. 10, extended to this act in cases where no appropriation shall be made by the governors.

Sect. 3. "All agreements hereafter to be made, with such consent and approbation of the patron and ordinary, as required by the said recited act, and with the consent and approbation of the said governors, with any benefactor or benefactors contributing to or providing for the augmentation of any cure, touching the patronage or right of presentation or nomination to such cure, for the benefit of such benefactor or benefactors, his, her, or their heirs or successors, according to the provisions of the said recited act, and all grants and assurances to be made for carrying such agreements into effect, shall be good, valid, and effectual in the law, to all intents and purposes whatsoever, in all cases in which the yearly value of such cure shall be within the limits prescribed for the same by the rules, orders, and constitutions which at the time of making such agreements respectively as aforesaid shall be in force with respect to cures for the augmentation of which appropriations to meet benefactions may be made by the said governors out of the funds at their disposal, notwithstanding that in any of such cases no appropriation whatsoever shall be made by the said governors out of the funds at their disposal to the augmentation of the cure to which such agreements as aforesaid shall respectively relate."

Sect. 4. "Every cure touching the patronage or right of nomination to which any such agreement as aforesaid with any benefactor or benefactors shall be made for the benefit of such benefactor or benefactors, his, her, or their heirs or successors, though no appropriation whatsoever to the said cure for the augmentation thereof shall be made by the said governors out of the funds at their disposal, shall, from and immediately after the completion of such agreement, be deemed and considered in law, in all respects, and to all intents and purposes whatsoever, as a cure augmented by the said governors, and the same, and the minister or incumbent thereof, and his successors, shall be subject and liable to all the laws, rules, and regulations relating to or concerning cures augmented by them and the ministers or incumbents thereof."

On completion of an agreement for transfer of patronage of a cure to a benefactor, though no appropriation be made by the governors, the cure to be considered as one augmented by them.

By 6 & 7 Vict. c. 37, the governors and the Archbishop of Canterbury are empowered to lend a sum of 600,000*l.* stock, standing in their names, to the ecclesiastical commissioners, in order that the commissioners may thereout make better and more immediate provision for the spiritual cure of populous parishes. The governors are also empowered to lend a further sum of stock. Provision is made for the payment of interest and giving security; and the governors may require at the end of thirty years the replacing of the stock, which is to be done by the commissioners in twelve yearly instalments (k).

6 & 7 Vict. c. 37.

Loans to ecclesiastical commissioners.

By 28 & 29 Vict. c. 69, s. 2, the governors may sell all lands, tithes, and other hereditaments vested in them, for the purpose generally of augmenting the maintenance of the poor clergy.

Sale of lands vested in Queen Anne's Bounty.

By 17 Geo. 3, c. 53, s. 12, the governors of Queen Anne's Bounty were first empowered to use their funds in lending money to incumbents to repair and rebuild their residence houses under that act, to the amount of 100*l.*, on which no interest is to be paid, where the annual value of the living is under 50*l.*, and to the amount of two years' value of the living in other cases, on which interest at four per cent. is to be paid. These provisions were extended by 1 & 2 Vict. c. 23, and 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106, s. 72 (l).

17 Geo. 3, c. 133.

Loans for building residence houses.

By 1 & 2 Vict. c. 23, s. 7, and 1 & 2 Vict. c. 29, incumbents were allowed in certain cases to sell their houses of residence; when they do so, the money is, by sect. 8, to be paid to the treasurer of Queen Anne's Bounty (m).

Powers in cases of sale.

By 2 & 3 Vict. c. 49, s. 14, the money so paid is to be invested, the dividends thereon being accumulated, till it is required; and in case there be any surplus over what is required such surplus is to be applied by the governors for the benefit of the benefice.

By sect. 17, the power of sale given by the 1 & 2 Vict. c. 23, is extended to dwelling-houses other than the house of residence, shops, warehouses and other buildings.

Queen Anne's Bounty how far representative of the Church.

Out of the powers so given other powers have gradually grown; and Queen Anne's Bounty has been made to a certain extent the representative of the Church of England in respect of the property holden by the various ecclesiastical corporations aggregate and sole; a position which since the establishment of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners it has had to share with that body (n).

Under Copy-
hold Acts.

By 21 & 22 Vict. c. 94, s. 17, now repealed, the governors of the Bounty might receive and apply, and, under the substituted Act of 1894 (57 & 58 Vict. c. 46), they may now receive and apply compensation moneys in respect of the enfranchisement of copyholds on any benefice (o).

Under Dilapidation Acts.

By 34 & 35 Vict. c. 43, The Ecclesiastical Dilapidations Act, 1871, and the amending act 35 & 36 Vict. c. 96, very considerable powers and duties are conferred upon the governors of the Bounty. By the first act they may lend money for the execution of the works required (ss. 17, 18); they are to receive money from sequestrators where benefices are under sequestration and employ it in making repairs (ss. 20, 21, 23, 45). They are to receive from the incoming incumbent all the money recovered by him for dilapidations from his predecessor, and they may advance money on the faith of such expected receipt (ss. 37, 38, 39, 40, 43, 44, 46). The buildings in every benefice are to be insured against fire to the satisfaction of the governors, and the money received on such insurance is to be paid over to them (ss. 54, 56). They are to invest all moneys paid over to them; and they may retain such a percentage of the moneys paid over to them, as the lords of the treasury may think proper, for office expenses (s. 65) (p).

By 35 & 36 Vict. c. 96, the governors of the Bounty have powers for the alteration of the length of mortgage terms, and of the conditions of repayment of advances made under the acts, 17 Geo. 3, c. 53; 21 Geo. 3, c. 66; 7 Geo. 4, c. 66; 1 & 2 Vict. c. 23, and 28 & 29 Vict. c. 69. Further, these powers have been extended and amended by 44 & 45 Vict. c. 25; 49 & 50 Vict. c. 34; and 50 & 51 Vict. c. 8, which have been already given in full (q).

Under Extraordinary Tithe Act.

The powers and duties of the governors in cases where the Agricultural Holdings (England) Act is put in force with respect to an incumbent's glebe under the now repealed Act of 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 92), or the existing Act of 1883 (46 & 47 Vict. c. 61), have been already mentioned (s). CHAPTER III.

THE ECCLESIASTICAL COMMISSIONERS.

A corporation. THE Ecclesiastical Commissioners for England are a corporation, with perpetual succession and a common seal, and with power to take, purchase, and hold real estate, notwithstanding the law of mortmain. The corporation is established by 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 77, and 3 & 4 Vict. c. 113. These acts, however, have been amended by several subsequent statutes (a).

To execute reports of commissioners. The professed object of the original acts was to carry into effect the reports of certain commissioners, previously appointed by the crown. The later acts have, however, diverged into many matters not comprehended in the original intentions of the commissions. It may, however, still be well to explain the general nature of the recommendations of these preliminary commissions.

Origin of commission. On the 4th February, 1835, King William the Fourth issued a commission of inquiry into the state of the Established Church in England and Wales, directed to the heads of the church and of the government, and certain other commissioners, containing the following instructions:—

“To consider the state of the several dioceses in England and Wales, with reference to the amount of their revenues and the more equal distribution of episcopal duties, and the prevention of the necessity of attaching by commendam to bishoprics benefices with cure of souls; to consider also the state of the several cathedral and collegiate churches in England and Wales, with a view to the suggestion of such measures as may render them more conducive to the efficiency of the Established Church; and to devise the best mode of providing for the cure of souls, with special reference to the residence of the clergy on their respective benefices.”

Reports. The first report under this commission was made on the 17th March, 1835. A new commission was issued on the 6th June, following, with a change only in those commissioners who were members of the government; and three further reports were made, dated 4th March, 20th May, and 24th June, 1836. The draft of a fifth report was also prepared, but not having been signed before the commission expired by reason of the demise of the crown, that draft was made a parliamentary paper by the secretary of state in the following session.

The first and third of these reports related chiefly to the first or episcopal branch of the inquiry; and the general purpose of their recommendations was to make such a new distribution of the duties and revenues of the bishops, as should diminish the motive for translations, and entirely prevent the necessity for commendams.

Episcopal recommendations.

The second and fourth reports, and the draft of the fifth report, comprehended the two other branches of the inquiry, viz., the cathedral and parochial branches; and the general object of the recommendations contained in these reports was, by means of an appropriation of part of the corporate revenues of the cathedral and collegiate churches, and of the whole endowments of the non-residentiary prebends, dignities, and offices, to establish a Fund, out of which better provision might be made for the Cure of Souls in parishes where such assistance was most required.

Cathedral and parochial recommendations.

The first act (6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 77), whereby the corporation was established, passed in August, 1836. Under that act the number of the commissioners was thirteen; namely, the two archbishops, the Bishop of London, and five of the chief officers of state for the time being, all ex officio; and two other bishops and three other lay commissioners by name (h), removable at the pleasure of the crown, and their vacancies to be supplied from time to time under the royal sign manual, by bishops or laymen, as the case might be (c).

6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 77.

Constitution of corporation.

By the second act (3 & 4 Vict. c. 113) the constitution of the corporation was materially changed: all the members of the episcopal bench, the deans of Canterbury, St. Paul's, and Westminster, the two chief justices, the master of the rolls, the chief baron, and the judges of the Prerogative and Admiralty Courts (d), for the time being, were appointed commissioners ex officio: power was given to the crown to appoint four, and to the Archbishop of Canterbury to appoint two lay commissioners, in addition to the three already appointed (e), and from time to time to fill up vacancies (f), and the power of removal by the crown was repealed (g).

3 & 4 Vict. c. 113.

By 13 & 14 Vict. c. 94, the following further provisions were made:—

13 & 14 Vict. c. 94.

The crown was empowered to appoint two laymen by the title of first and second church estates commissioners, and the Archbishop of Canterbury was also empowered to appoint a church estates commissioner.

Church estates commissioners.

(c) Ibid. s. 2.

(f) Ibid. s. 79.

(d) There is now no Prerogative Court.

(g) Ibid. s. 81.

These commissioners are to hold office during the pleasure of their respective appointors, and are to be as such, ecclesiastical commissioners.

Any ecclesiastical commissioner, not being such by virtue of some office, may be appointed a church estates commissioner; and again may cease to be a church estates commissioner without thereby ceasing to be an ecclesiastical commissioner (g).

The first church estates commissioner is to have a salary not exceeding 1,200*l.* a year, and the commissioner appointed by the Archbishop of Canterbury one not exceeding 1,000*l.* a year (h).

There is a special provision that the first commissioner may sit in the House of Commons (i). The other commissioners require no such provision to enable them to sit.

Every lay commissioner and every church estates commissioner is required to be (j), and to subscribe a declaration that he is (k), a member of the Church of England.

Meetings.

Five commissioners are to be a quorum for the transaction of business, provided two of them are church estates commissioners (l); but no proceeding can be ratified under the common seal, without the presence of two episcopal commissioners; and any proceeding must be postponed, if they, being the only episcopal commissioners present, object (m). The Archbishop of Canterbury is to be chairman when present; when he is not present a chairman is to be chosen by the commissioners assembled (n). The chairman is to have a second or casting vote, in case of equality (o). Meetings may be adjourned; but at an adjourned meeting no proceeding can be ratified under the common seal, unless the intention to consider it finally was notified together with the summons for the original meeting (p). The commissioners may summon and examine witnesses, administer an oath or declaration, and require the production of books, papers, and writings, touching any matter of which they have cognizance (q).

c. 113.

Under the 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 77, the commissioners are to appoint a treasurer, secretary, and other officers; and the lords of the treasury are to assign salaries (r).

By the 3 & 4 Vict. c. 113, the first two appointments were united, and were to form one office, and the commissioners were empowered from time to time to appoint to the office under their common seal (s).

(r) 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 77, s. 7.

(s) 3 & 4 Vict. c. 113, s. 91.

By 13 & 14 Vict. c. 94, the first church estates commissioner and the church estates commissioner appointed by the archbishop are to be joint treasurers, but are not, as such, to have any salary, and the secretary is to be appointed as heretofore (t). And all lands and hereditaments formerly vested or to be vested in the secretary and treasurer are to be vested in the first church estates commissioner (u). 13 & 14 Vict.
c. 94.

By 29 & 30 Vict. c. 111, the three church estates commissioners are to be joint treasurers, and the receipt of any two of them, or one of them, countersigned by the accountant or assistant accountant, is to be a good discharge (x). 29 & 30 Vict.
c. 111.

Sect. 14 of 13 & 14 Vict. c. 94, provides for an audit of the accounts of the ecclesiastical commissioners. Audit.

By this last act the church estates commissioners are to form a committee of the ecclesiastical commission, to be called "the estates committee;" to this committee the ecclesiastical commissioners may add annually two of their number, one to be a layman not sitting as a commissioner in right of any office (y). At the meetings of this committee the first church estates commissioner shall preside, if present; if he is not present the other church estates commissioners shall preside at alternate meetings. The estates committee.

By 22 & 23 Vict. c. 46, any two church estates commissioners may do all acts required by law to be done by the church estates commissioners; and by 29 & 30 Vict. c. 111, s. 2, any two members of the estates committee, being church estates commissioners, may do all acts required by law to be done by the estates committee. 22 & 23 Vict.
c. 46.
29 & 30 Vict.
c. 111.

The ecclesiastical commissioners may make special references for the consideration of the estates committee; and they may even authorize this committee or the church estates commissioners, or any two of them, to do any act within the powers of the whole commission, except affixing the common seal to any scheme which they are not otherwise authorized to seal "without reporting to or requiring further instructions from" the ecclesiastical commissioners (z).

The ecclesiastical commissioners may from time to time make general rules for the estates committee, regulating the transaction of business and declaring the general principles which shall guide the decision of the committee. These rules are to be laid before parliament (a).

By 13 & 14 Vict. c. 94, s. 8, "It shall be the duty of such estates committee, or any three of them, of whom two or more shall be church estates commissioners, to consider all matters in any way relating or incident to the sale, purchase, exchange, letting, or management, by or on behalf of the ecclesiastical 13 & 14 Vict.

28 & 29 Vict.
c. 68.

By 28 & 29 Vict. c. 68, the ecclesiastical commissioners are empowered to give superannuation allowances to their clerks and servants.

Powers given to the commissioners.

The authority which was established to carry into effect the changes intended by the acts 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 77, and 3 & 4 Vict. c. 113, was the joint authority of the commissioners and of the Queen in council.

But by later acts many powers are given to the commissioners alone, as for instance under the Ecclesiastical Leasing Acts (b), and in the cases where aid is given to supply the spiritual want of populous places (c), and in the instances mentioned at the end of the chapter.

Schemes of commissioners.

Where an Order in Council is required, the commissioners are to prepare, and lay before her Majesty in council, such schemes as shall appear best adapted for carrying the various acts into full effect; proposing such modifications or variations as to matters of detail and regulation as shall not be substantially repugnant to any provisions of the acts; notice of every scheme is to be given to any corporation aggregate or sole affected thereby; and the objections, if any, are to be laid before her Majesty in council, together with the scheme (d).

Orders of Queen in council.

The Queen in council may ratify any scheme by order, specifying the time for its taking effect. Every order is to be registered in each diocese whereof the bishop, or within which any cathedral or collegiate church, dignity, chapter, member of chapter, officer, incumbent, or any other person or body corporate, may be in any respect affected thereby (e), or in cases under 29 & 30 Vict. c. 111, in the diocesan registries specified in the order (f); and upon being gazetted, it is to be of the same force and effect as if enacted (g).

Copies of all orders in council are to be laid before parliament in January in every year, or if parliament be not then sitting, within one week after the next meeting (h).

The commissioners are to make an annual report to one of the secretaries of state, before the 1st of March, of their proceedings up to the previous 1st of November, and are to annex to this report copies of all schemes sanctioned by orders in council and an abstract of accounts. This report is to be laid before parliament (i). In cases under 29 & 30 Vict. c. 111, where no order in council is required, copies of all instruments under the seal of the commissioners are to be annexed to the report (k). Proceedings under 14 & 15 Vict. c. 104, and 17 & 18 Vict. c. 116 (l), are similarly to be reported.

In the first act (m), which relates to the first or episcopal branch of the subject, certain propositions appended to the third report of the church inquiry commissioners are recited in the preamble as expedient to be carried into effect, and the authority mentioned was established for that purpose.

This preamble has been already set forth in full in the chapter on Bishops; where also are to be found the subsequent extensions and modifications of the schemes there recited (n).

This preamble not only relates to the alteration of episcopal incomes and the boundaries of dioceses, but has provisions as to the University of Durham, first fruits, tenure of benefices in commendam, houses of residence, the jurisdiction of the ecclesiastical courts, and the foundation of new archdeaconries (o).

The commissioners had power to propose in any of their schemes that all parishes, subject to any other jurisdiction than that of the bishop of the diocese in which they are locally situate, be transferred to the jurisdiction of that bishop (p). Schemes might be framed for this purpose only (q).

By 13 & 14 Vict. c. 94, s. 17, fixed, instead of fluctuating, incomes might be secured by the commissioners to all archbishops and bishops appointed since January 1, 1848. This provision was repealed as to all bishops succeeding to their sees after the passing of 23 & 24 Vict. c. 124; and it is enacted by that last act as follows:—

Sect. 2. "Upon the first avoidance of the see of any archbishop or bishop in England after the passing of this act, all the lands, hereditaments, and emoluments of or belonging to such

Sect. 3. "After the lands of a see have become vested in the commissioners as aforesaid, an arrangement shall be made as soon as conveniently may be, and with all reasonable dispatch, for assigning to the archbishop or bishop of such see and his successors, as an endowment for the see, such of the lands and hereditaments then vested in the ecclesiastical commissioners for England as in the judgment of the estates committee of the said ecclesiastical commissioners, and subject to the approbation of such archbishop or bishop, may be deemed convenient to be held as such endowment, and will secure as nearly as may be, after deducting costs of management, a net annual income equal to that named for the archbishop or bishop of the see by any act of parliament or order in council then in force, and no more; and in the meantime, until such endowment is so assigned, the ecclesiastical commissioners shall pay to the archbishop or bishop of the see the annual income named for him as aforesaid, at the time at which the same would have been payable if this act had not been passed."

Sect. 4. "In case any archbishop or bishop who may have succeeded on an avoidance happening before the passing of this act, and having an income named as aforesaid, signify his willingness to accept an endowment for his see in lands and hereditaments, in lieu of his income, it shall be lawful to make the like arrangement for that purpose as might have been made if the lands of the see had become vested in the commissioners as aforesaid, and upon such arrangement being made all the lands, hereditaments, and emoluments of or belonging to the see, except such as may be assigned under such arrangement, and such rights of patronage or presentation, and residences as aforesaid, shall become vested absolutely in the said ecclesiastical commissioners."

Sect. 5. "On the avoidance from time to time of any see, after the assignment of an endowment for the same, the estates committee of the ecclesiastical commissioners may, if they shall think fit, revise the arrangement in force in relation to such endowment, and for that purpose inquire into the state and productiveness of such endowment, and if such endowment, in the judgment of the committee, will secure a net annual income exceeding that named for the archbishop or bishop as aforesaid, or will not secure the full amount of such annual income, such committee may report thereon to the said ecclesiastical commissioners, and the said commissioners shall, if they think fit, make an arrangement by vesting part of the lands and hereditaments constituting such endowment in the ecclesiastical commissioners, or by assigning lands and hereditaments by way of addition to such endowment, or by means of annual or other payments to or by the ecclesiastical commissioners, as the case may require, which may secure, in the judgment of the said committee, to the archbishop or bishop who may succeed upon that avoidance, the net annual income so named, or as near thereto as circumstances will allow: provided always, that if a difference of opinion as to the value or sufficiency of the estates which such committee may propose to leave or to assign to any see shall arise between the archbishop or bishop thereof and the said committee, such difference shall be settled by arbitration before such arrangement as is last mentioned shall be made."

Sect. 6. "When the arrangement is completed under this act for the endowment of a see the lands and hereditaments thereby assigned shall be the endowment of the see, and shall be taken in lieu of the income intended to be secured thereby." Endowments to be in lieu of the fixed income.

Sect. 7. "All arrangements for the purposes of this act shall be made by the authority and in the manner by and in which arrangements for carrying into effect the recommendations recited in" 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 77, "may now be made." Arrangements how to be made.

By sect. 8, the lands so assigned as an endowment shall only be let from year to year or under provisions similar to those contained in 5 & 6 Vict. c. 27, for incumbents' leases (r); except that with the approval of the estates committee the archbishop or bishop may grant mining or building leases; but then the committee may, if they think fit, require a portion of the rent to be reserved to the ecclesiastical commissioners. Leases.

Sect. 9 of this act, and sects. 12, 13 of 29 & 30 Vict. c. 111, provide for dilapidations on the estate so assigned (s). 29 & 30 Vict. c. 111.

By 38 & 39 Vict. c. 92 (the old Agricultural Holdings Act, now repealed), s. 48, and by 46 & 47 Vict. c. 61 (the Agricultural Holdings (England) Act, 1883), s. 38, where a bishop, being a landlord, proposes to exercise the powers of that act, he must obtain the consent in writing of the Estates Committee of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners (t). 46 & 47 Vict. c. 61.

By sect. 10 of 23 & 24 Vict. c. 124, "It shall be lawful for the estates committee, upon the application of any archbishop or bishop, to undertake or authorize any works of permanent improvement which such committee may think advisable, on any lands assigned by way of endowment to such archbishop or bishop, and the ecclesiastical commissioners may advance out of the common fund the money which may be required for the purpose of such works, and the money so advanced shall be repaid with such interest, and at such times, and until repaid shall be charged on such of the said lands as may be agreed 23 & 24 Vict. c. 124.

upon by the said committee and the said archbishop or bishop, and his or their tenants interested in such improvements."

Estates committee where required to manage the lands assigned.

Sect. 11. "The estates committee shall, when required by any archbishop or bishop to whom lands may have been assigned as an endowment under this act, undertake the management of such lands, and receive the rents and profits thereof during the incumbency of the archbishop or bishop; and in every such case as aforesaid the estates committee, during their management, may grant all such leases as might have been granted by such archbishop or bishop if the lands had continued under his or their management, and may, with the approval of such archbishop or bishop, grant such other leases as might have been granted by him or them, with the approval of the estates committee; and the commissioners shall, during the time such lands are under the management of the said estates committee, pay to such archbishop or bishop the annual income to secure which the lands may have been assigned."

Powers of commissioners under acts for new bishoprics.

Under the Bishopric of St. Albans Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 34), the Bishopric of Truro Act, 1876 (39 & 40 Vict. c. 54), the Bishopric Act, 1878 (41 & 42 Vict. c. 68), and the Bishopric of Bristol Act, 1884 (47 & 48 Vict. c. 66) (u), the ecclesiastical commissioners receive the funds for forming the endowments of these sees, and intervene in bringing the several acts into operation. They had also power under 38 & 39 Vict. c. 34, s. 11, to sell Danbury Palace for the purpose of raising funds for the bishopric of St. Albans.

3 & 4 Vict. c. 113.

Cathedral and parochial arrangements.

The act 3 & 4 Vict. c. 113, which passed in August, 1840, although it purports to carry into effect the fourth report of the commissioners of inquiry, in fact comprehends, with alterations and modifications, the proposals of the second and fourth reports, and of the draft fifth report, and deals with the two remaining branches of the subject, viz., the cathedral and parochial branches; except so far as the latter had been already disposed of by 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106.

This act has been largely extended and amended by 4 & 5 Vict. c. 39, and 31 & 32 Vict. c. 114. A special act, 6 & 7 Vict. c. 77, was passed for Wales.

The provisions of these acts relating to deans and canons have already been set forth in the chapter on deans and chapters and cathedrals (x). It is only necessary to add, that the provisions in sect. 29 of 3 & 4 Vict. c. 113 (y), for the annexation of certain parishes to canonries at Westminster, have been extended by 4 & 5 Vict. c. 39, s. 8, and 29 & 30 Vict. c. 111, s. 17, to afford endowments out of the surplus revenues of these canonries for several parishes in the city of Westminster, with a special proviso securing free seats in the churches of these parishes; and that by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 116, the emoluments of the seventh and eighth canonries at Windsor are to be retained by the dean and chapter, and to be appropriated, one for the benefit of the military knights, and one in augmentation of the livings of certain Windsor clergy (z).

By a series of acts commencing soon after the issuing of the first commission of inquiry in 1835 (a), the appointment to all sinecure rectories in public patronage, to non-residentiary cathedral preferments, and to all canonries above a specified number, had been suspended from session to session, the proceeds being received and holden in trust by the treasurer of Queen Anne's Bounty. All monies so received were directed to be paid over to the commissioners (b).

Temporary Suspension
Acts.

The main object, for which the commissioners are entrusted with all these revenues, is defined to be that of making better provision for the cure of souls in parishes where such assistance is most required. All monies are, in the first instance, directed to be carried over to a common fund; discretion is given as to the mode of making the provision, either by means of money payments out of this fund, or by actual conveyance of lands, tithes, or other hereditaments; provided that due consideration shall be had of the wants and circumstances of the places in which the lands and hereditaments or tithes vested in the commissioners are situate or arise, and in which the lands, hereditaments and tithes belonging to any ecclesiastical corporation which has to pay a portion of its income over to the commissioners are situate or arise (c).

Main object of fund, the cure of souls.

By 6 & 7 Vict. c. 37, the governors of Queen Anne's Bounty Board were empowered to lend to the commissioners for these purposes a sum of 600,000*l.* three per cent. stock, which is to be paid off by the commissioners in twelve instalments, the first to be paid at the end of thirty years from the granting of the loan. The bounty board were also empowered to lend further sums of stock on the same terms (d).

With reference to this part of the subject, certain resolutions were originally made by the commissioners regulating the distribution of the funds coming to their hands, which will be found in a later page (e).

Mode of distribution.

By 23 & 24 Vict. c. 124, the commissioners were empowered to give preference to places where contributions from other sources will be made in aid of the grant (f), and to mining districts (g).

schemes of the commissioners, by which churches have been endowed or augmented.

29 & 30 Vict.
c. 111.

By 29 & 30 Vict. c. 111, ss. 5 and 9, no order in council is any longer necessary for these purposes, publication in the Gazette being sufficient; the commissioners have power to take lands for annexation to benefices without licence in mortmain; and the instrument conveying such lands may, if it be declared that it shall so operate, vest the lands in the incumbent of the benefice at once: such instruments are to be free from stamp duty.

3 & 4 Vict.
c. 113.

Separate estates of deans, &c. vested in commissioners.

By 3 & 4 Vict. c. 113, s. 50, the estate which the holder of any deanery or canonry had in any hereditaments usually holden with such deanery or canonry (except any right of patronage), or in any hereditaments, the rents and profits whereof have been usually taken by such holder separately, and in addition to the corporate revenues of the chapter, are vested in the ecclesiastical commissioners. It has been holden, that the separate estate of a dean in a chapter does not include a rectory previously by statute annexed to the deanery, and such a rectory is not, by force of this enactment, severed from the deanery and vested in the commissioners (h).

The like as to certain prebends.

By sect. 51 of this same act, the estates of non-residentary prebends, with certain exceptions (and the estates of these excepted prebends, with consent of their patron, on an annual income being paid to the prebendary (i)), and the estates of certain deaneries therein mentioned, are to be vested in the commissioners.

27 & 28 Vict.
c. 70.

Estates of minor cathedral corporations.

By 27 & 28 Vict. c. 70, any corporation of vicars choral, priest vicars, senior vicars, custos and vicars, warden and vicars or minor canons, may, with the consent of their visitor, transfer their lands and hereditaments to the commissioners under a scheme sanctioned by an order in council, in consideration of an annual or other money payment.

29 & 30 Vict.
c. 111.

Power to commissioners to make allowances to minor canons, organ-ists, schoolmasters, &c.

By 29 & 30 Vict. c. 111, s. 18, "When the ecclesiastical commissioners are or may be in receipt of any income arising from estates that belong, or have belonged, to any dean or chapter, or any major or minor corporation of any cathedral or collegiate church, they shall be at liberty (whether an order of her Majesty in council has or has not been passed in relation to such income, and notwithstanding any limitation contained in any act of parliament as to the stipends and allowances of any of the persons hereinafter mentioned), out of such income, to make such provision as to them may seem needful for securing adequate stipends and allowances to the minor canons, schoolmasters, organists, vicars choral, lay clerks, officers, choristers, bedesmen, servants and other members of the cathedral or collegiate church, and for securing adequate sums of money for the maintenance of any existing college or school (k), in connection with the cathedral or collegiate church."

By sect. 4, "If, after the commissioners have effected the endowment of any archbishoprick or bishoprick, or of any chapter, with lands or hereditaments, it shall appear to them that it would be beneficial to such archbishoprick or bishoprick, or to such chapter, that any part or parts of such lands or hereditaments should be exchanged for any lands or hereditaments belonging to any other archbishop or bishop, or chapter, or to the commissioners, it shall be lawful to effect such exchange, with the consent in writing of every archbishop or bishop, or chapter thereby affected, and by the authority of a scheme passed by the commissioners, and an order of her Majesty ratifying the same: Provided always, that no such exchange shall be made unless the commissioners shall be satisfied of the reasonable equality in value of the lands and hereditaments so to be exchanged, and shall, in such last-mentioned scheme, make a statement to that effect."

Power to make exchanges between ecclesiastical corporations.

None of these acts appear to authorize the transference by a dean and chapter, or other ecclesiastical corporation, except those specially mentioned in 27 & 28 Vict. c. 70, of their lands and hereditaments to the commissioners, in return for an annual or other money payment, as had been authorized in the case of the special corporations by 27 & 28 Vict. c. 70, thereby, in fact, bringing about a similar arrangement to that provided for bishops by 23 & 24 Vict. c. 124.

As to transfer of estates of deans and chapters.

Nevertheless, several schemes were made, sanctioned by orders in council, and acted upon, at various times from the year 1852, dealing with eighteen cathedral corporations on this footing. The irregularity having been discovered, the arrangements in these cases were, in 1868, validated retrospectively by 31 Vict. c. 19.

And now, by 31 & 32 Vict. c. 114, s. 3, "The ecclesiastical commissioners for England (in this act referred to as the commissioners) may, with the consent in writing of any dean and chapter in England under their common seal, and of the visitor of such dean and chapter, from time to time lay before her Majesty in council schemes for effecting with respect to the consenting dean and chapter all or any of the following things, namely,

31 & 32 Vict. c. 114.
Objects of scheme.

- (1.) For transferring to the commissioners the whole or some specified part of the property of the dean and chapter (except the cathedral or collegiate church and the buildings belonging thereto, and any ecclesiastical, educational or other like patronage), for such consideration, whether consisting of a money payment or other property, or partly one and partly the other, and generally on such terms, as the commissioners think fair and reasonable, including the extinguishment of any right of the commissioners to receive any part of the income or property of the dean and chapter, or of any member thereof :

(2.) For transferring lands to the dean and chapter in lieu of any annual sum payable to them by the commissioners either under this act or otherwise :

(3.) For making such incidental provisions as may be necessary for carrying into effect any of the above-mentioned objects."

Capital sum for fabric.

Sect. 4. "The commissioners on a transfer under this act may set apart as part of the consideration a capital sum to be expended to the satisfaction of the commissioners in substantial repairs, restoration, and improvements of the cathedral or collegiate church and the buildings belonging thereto."

Order in council confirming scheme to be made.

By sect. 5, sections 84 to 89 (both inclusive) of 3 & 4 Vict. c. 113, "which relate to the making, publishing and registering of an order in council for ratifying a scheme, and to the laying the same before parliament, shall apply to any scheme made under this act."

Order to effect transfer without conveyance.

Sect. 6. "After the date of the publication of an order in council ratifying any scheme made in pursuance of this act, and without any further conveyance or act in the law, the property expressed to be thereby transferred shall (so far as the same can be vested by this act) vest in the transferees and their successors, and (so far as the same cannot be so vested) shall be deemed to be held in trust for the transferees and their successors; and the transferees and their successors shall, as far as may be, take the same for the same estate and interest and subject to the same liabilities for and subject to which it was held at the said date by the dean and chapter or the commissioners, as the case may be."

Application of transferred property.

Sect. 8. "All property transferred to the commissioners by an order in council under this act shall be held by them in the same manner, and for the same purposes, and subject to the same provisions as the property of which the rents and profits are to be carried over to their common fund, and the income thereof shall be applied accordingly; and all property transferred to a dean and chapter by an order in council under this act shall be held upon the trusts and for the purposes directed by the order, and subject thereto shall form part of the endowment of such dean and chapter; and any annual sum paid to a dean and chapter in pursuance of an order in council under this act shall be applied in the manner in which it would be applicable if it were the income of property transferred to the dean and chapter."

By sect. 9, similar provisions are made as to the letting of lands assigned by way of endowments to deans and chapters as had been made with respect to lands assigned to bishops (l).

Sect. 10. "In all cases where an agreement has been or shall be entered into, or a treaty has been or shall be commenced, or is or shall be pending, between a dean and chapter and any of their lessees, for any sale and purchase under" 14 & 15 Vict. c. 104, 17 & 18 Vict. c. 116, or 23 & 24 Vict. c. 124 (m), "and the capitular estate is transferred to the commissioners under the provisions of this act, it shall be competent to the church estates commissioners to approve and confirm as heretofore such agreement, and to continue and bring to a conclusion and approve such treaty: Provided always, that in the event of the church estates commissioners declining to approve such agreement or treaty, the ecclesiastical commissioners shall be bound to purchase the lessee's interest, if required by the lessee, with all the benefits, as to arbitration and otherwise, to which lessees are entitled under the above-mentioned acts or any of them; and in every case the costs of such arbitration and award shall be in the discretion of the said arbitrators or umpire, as the case may be."

Settlement of treaty and its terms may be referred to arbitration.

Sect. 13. "The provisions of this act with respect to the property of deans and chapters shall apply in the case of the property of any deanery, canonry, prebend, archdeaconry, or office in any cathedral or collegiate church in England, in the like manner, mutatis mutandis, as they apply to the property of a dean and chapter."

Application of act to deaneries, canonries, &c.

By sect. 7, a special provision is made for saving all trusts imposed on the property in the hands of the deans and chapters when the property is transferred. It had been already holden by the Master of the Rolls, in the case of The Attorney-General v. The Dean and Canons of Windsor, that the commissioners claiming as successors to a dean and chapter under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 113, took their property subject to all trusts (n).

Trusts.

Under the Truro Chapter Act (41 & 42 Vict. c. 44), and the Newcastle Chapter Act (47 & 48 Vict. c. 33), the ecclesiastical commissioners hold the endowment funds of those foundations (o).

As to archdeacons (p), the powers given to the ecclesiastical commissioners have been already given at length (q). Special enactments have been made to vest the estates of the archdeaconries of Rochester (r) and Colchester (s) in the commissioners.

Archdeacons.

By the Parish of Manchester Division Act, 1850 (t), certain special powers are given to the commissioners with reference to the cathedral arrangements, and to the providing for spiritual destitution within the parish and city of Manchester; and by 28 & 29 Vict. c. 117, and 29 & 30 Vict. c. 86, the endowments of the vicarage of Rochdale are vested in the commissioners, and many provisions are made for the spiritual benefit of the population of Rochdale. A special act also, 21 & 22 Vict. c. 58, has been passed for the rectories of Stanhope and Wolsingham (s), and one, 13 & 14 Vict. c. 76, for abolishing the royal peculiar St. Burian. Both these acts were promoted by the commissioners.

Cathedrals.

The acts 23 & 24 Vict. c. 69, and 51 & 52 Vict. c. 11, by which the commissioners have obtained certain special powers as to the fabrics of Manchester Cathedral and Westminster Abbey respectively, have already been referred to (t).

Lambeth.

By 29 & 30 Vict. c. 111, ss. 7, 8, the library and the Lollards and Morton Towers of Lambeth Palace are to be vested in and maintained by the commissioners.

Sundry powers.

The powers of the commissioners to annex sinecures to benefices (u), to suppress other sinecure rectories (x), and to enable the sale of advowsons annexed to the headships of colleges (y), have been already mentioned. They may, also, with consent of the patron, apportion differently the incomes of two benefices in the same patronage (z).

Commissioners to be tithe owners.

With respect to the estates vested in the commissioners, they are to have all the same rights and powers as the original holders possessed, or a successor would have had (a); and they are to be deemed to be owners or joint-owners, as the case may be, for the purposes of the Tithe Commutation Acts, of all tithes vested or liable to be vested in them (b).

Resolutions as to grants in augmentation of livings.

The following resolutions have been passed by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners (c).

The ecclesiastical commissioners for England, having carefully considered how provision may best be made for the cure of souls out of the limited amount of monies at their disposal, in conformity with the intent and meaning of the acts 3 & 4 Vict. c. 113, and 4 & 5 Vict. c. 39, have resolved to recommend to her majesty in council:

That grants should be made, either in augmentation of the incomes of, or towards providing fit houses of residence for, the incumbents of certain benefices and churches, with cure of souls, that is to say, being either parish churches or churches or chapels with districts legally belonging or assigned thereto; in certain classes; subject to such limitations, as are hereinafter mentioned, or as may from time to time be determined on; and subject also to their right to decline recommending a grant, in any case in which from special circumstances they shall be of opinion that such grant is not expedient.

That the first class should consist of grants, made unconditionally, to benefices or churches with cure of souls as aforesaid, being in public patronage, namely, in the patronage of her majesty, either in right of the crown or of the duchy of Lancaster, of the Duke of Cornwall, of any archbishop or bishop, of any dean and chapter, dean, archdeacon, prebendary, or other dignitary or officer in any cathedral or collegiate church, or of any rector, vicar, or perpetual curate, as such; and that this class should at present be limited to benefices and churches having a population of 2,000 at the least, and an average annual net income below 150*l.*; and to the raising of such income, as nearly as may be, to that amount.

That the second class should consist of grants made to benefices or churches with cure of souls as aforesaid, whether in public patronage as aforesaid; or in private patronage, namely, any patronage whatsoever other than as aforesaid; upon condition of such grants being met by benefactions from other sources, either paid to the commissioners, on account of the same benefices or churches, or secured in perpetuity to the incumbents thereof; and that this class should at present be limited to benefices and churches having a like amount of population, and an average annual net income below 200*l.*

That the third class should consist of grants made to benefices or churches with cure of souls as aforesaid, in consideration of their being situate within the places in which any of the tithes vested in the commissioners now arise, or the tithes, in lieu of which any of the lands or other hereditaments vested in them were allotted or assigned, have heretofore arisen; such grants not exceeding the actual value of the tithes or of the lands or other hereditaments in respect of which the same shall be made.

The ecclesiastical commissioners have some other powers given them by various statutes which are not so easily to be classified.

Additional powers of commissioners.

By 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 77, s. 26, they were given powers respecting the sale of livings in the patronage of municipal corporations, which powers have been re-enacted in 45 & 46 Vict. c. 50 (d).

Advowsons in hands of municipal corporations.

By 5 & 6 Vict. c. 26, s. 13, their consent is necessary to enable any incumbent, whose living has been augmented by them, to raise money for improving the parsonage-house of his benefice (e). They, submitting a scheme to the Queen in council, are to be "the authority" under the same act for carrying into execution the provisions as to episcopal and canonical houses therein contained (f).

- Copyholds. Under 21 & 22 Vict. c. 94, s. 19, they were, and under the present act (57 & 58 Vict. c. 46) they are, to have notice of all proceedings to enfranchise copyholds holden under ecclesiastical persons, and to have certain powers of dissenting to such proceedings (i).
- Sales of glebe. They receive and invest the produce of sales of glebe under 51 & 52 Vict. c. 21 (k).
- Exchange of advowsons. They have also powers in respect of the exchange of advowsons and rights of patronage (l), and certain duties under 26 & 27 Vict. c. 120, as to the sale of livings in the gift of the lord chancellor (m).
- Augmentations. They must consent to the augmentation of any benefice which is to be made by any ecclesiastical corporation affected by the acts 3 & 4 Vict. c. 113, and 4 & 5 Vict. c. 39 (n).
- Unions. By 23 & 24 Vict. c. 142, they have power to frame schemes for the union of benefices within the metropolis (o).
- New parishes. It has been already stated that under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 36, certain sums of stock were to be lent by the governors of Queen Anne's Bounty to the commissioners, for the purpose of better providing for spiritual destitution. The powers of the commissioners under this and subsequent acts as to the formation of new parishes, the acceptance of sites for churches, and generally as to the revision of the ecclesiastical arrangements consequent thereon, will be dealt with in later chapters (p).
- Succession to church building commissioners. It should, however, be here stated, that by 19 & 20 Vict. c. 55, the ecclesiastical commissioners have become the church building commissioners, with all the rights, privileges and estates of such commissioners, compensation being made to the officers of the church building commissioners out of the common fund of the ecclesiastical commissioners (q).
- Functions of these latter commissioners. The church building commissioners were originally established for ten years by 58 Geo. 3, c. 45. They were made a body corporate with a common seal by 59 Geo. 3, c. 134. The commission was continued by divers acts of Parliament for periods of years till it was finally incorporated with the ecclesiastical commission. The primary object of the commission was to distribute a sum of 1,000,000*l.* granted in exchequer bills to assist the building of new churches, and increased by 500,000*l.* by 5 Geo. 4, c. 103. For this purpose, and under the three acts already cited and 3 Geo. 4, c. 72, the commissioners had power to build or assist in building churches, to grant sites, to make loans, and especially to make grants or loans to meet contributions or church-rates. They have also numerous powers to exercise as to the division and re-arrangement of parishes, which will be more properly treated of in later chapters (r). They may accept sites for churches, and they may in certain cases put in force compulsory powers, under provisions similar to those contained in the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act (s), for the purpose of acquiring sites for churches.

It has been holden that where these powers are exercised for the purpose of procuring a title from persons under a disability to convey, and the money is paid into the High Court of Justice, the church building commissioners, or now the ecclesiastical commissioners as representing them, will have to pay the costs of a petition for payment of the money out of court to the person entitled to receive it, thereby following the ordinary rule under the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act and other analogous acts (t).

The ecclesiastical commissioners approve of arrangements for the redemption of annuities in favour of spiritual persons charged on the Consolidated Fund, and receive the money (u). So they are made recipients of the Sunk Island Church Fund (x).

They may be grantees of land under the Places of Worship Sites Act (36 & 37 Vict. c. 50) (y).

In The Ecclesiastical Commissioners v. Woodhouse (z) it was decided that the commissioners can maintain an action for an injunction to restrain the working of mines under a glebe, otherwise than under a lease which they have sanctioned. But they are not representatives of all church property, so as to be necessary or even proper parties to an action to enforce the sale of glebe (a).

Nor are they liable, as owners of the site of a church and churchyard conveyed under the Church Building Acts, to be rated under the Metropolis Local Management Acts (b).

Sects. 3, 4, and 5 provide for the registration of these augmentations.

By 2 & 3 Anne, c. 20, s. 1, it was provided, as has been already said (c), that the Queen might by letters patent erect a corporation and grant thereto the first fruits and tenths, to be applied by the corporation for the augmentation of the maintenance of poor parsons.

By sect. 4, "And for the encouragement of such well disposed persons as shall, by her Majesty's royal example, be moved to contribute to so pious and charitable a purpose, and that such their charity may be rightly applied be it enacted . . . that all and every person and persons having in his or their own right any estate or interest in possession, reversion, or contingency of or in any land, tenements or hereditaments or any property of or in any goods or chattels shall have full power, licence and authority, at his, her, and their will and pleasure, by deed enrolled . . . or by his her or their last will, or testament in writing, duly executed according to law to give and grant to and vest in the said corporation and their successors all such his, her, or their estate interest or property in such lands tenements and hereditaments goods and chattels or any part or parts thereof for and towards the augmentation of the maintenance of such ministers as aforesaid officiating in such church or chapel where the liturgy and rites of the said church are or shall be so used or observed as aforesaid and having no settled competent provision belonging to the same and to be for that purpose applied according to the will of the said benefactor in and by such deed enrolled or by such will or testament executed as aforesaid expressed and in default of such direction, limitation or appointment in such manner as by her Majesty's letters patent shall be directed and appointed as aforesaid.

Lands and goods may be given to Queen Anne's Bounty by deed enrolled or will.

By sect. 5, "And such corporation and their successors shall have full capacity and ability to purchase receive take hold and enjoy for the purposes aforesaid as well from such persons as shall be so charitably disposed to give the same as from all other persons as shall be willing to sell or alien to the said corporation any manors, lands, tenements, goods or chattels, without any licence or writ of ad quod damnum; the statute of mortmain, or any other statute or law, to the contrary notwithstanding.

Except by persons under legal disability.

By sect. 6, "... this act or anything therein contained shall not extend to enable any person or persons, being within age, or of non-sane memory, or women covert, without their husbands, to make any such gift, grant or alienation any thing in this act to the contrary in anywise notwithstanding."

43 Geo. 3, c. 107.

By 43 Geo. 3, c. 107, s. 1, the benefactions made under 2 & 3 Anne, c. 20, are exempted from the provisions of 9 Geo. 2, c. 36 (d).

42 Geo. 3, c. 116.

By 42 Geo. 3, c. 116, s. 50, money might be left to redeem the land tax on charities, notwithstanding the mortmain laws (e).

Land tax.

43 Geo. 3, c. 108.

Gifts of land not more than five acres, and goods not more than 500*l*. may be made for building churches and providing manes and glebes.

By 43 Geo. 3, c. 108, s. 1, it is enacted, "that all and every person and persons (f) having in his or their own right any estate or interest in possession, reversion, or contingency, of or in any lands or tenements, or of any property of or in any goods or chattels, shall have full power, licence, and authority, at his and their will and pleasure, by deed enrolled . . . or by his, her, or their last will or testament in writing, duly executed according to law, such deed, or such will or testament, being duly executed three calendar months at least before the death of such grantor or testator, including the days of the execution and death, to give and grant to and vest in any person or persons, or body politic or corporate, and their heirs and successors respectively, all such his, her, or their estate, interest, or property in such lands or tenements, not exceeding five acres, or goods and chattels, or any part or parts thereof, not exceeding in value five hundred pounds, for or towards the erecting, rebuilding, repairing, purchasing, or providing any church or chapel where the liturgy and rites of the said united church are or shall be used or observed, or any mansion house for the residence of any minister of the said united church officiating, or to officiate in any such church or chapel, or of any outbuildings, offices, churchyard (g), or glebe, for the same respectively, and to be for those purposes applied, according to the will of the said benefactor, in and by such deed enrolled, or by such will or testament executed as aforesaid expressed, the consent and approbation of the ordinary being first obtained, and in default of such direction, limitation, or appointment in such manner as shall be directed and appointed by the patron and ordinary, with the consent and approbation of the parson, vicar, or other incumbent; . . ." cellor may reduce it and allot such specific five acres and such specific goods and chattels as in his judgment shall be most convenient (i).

By sect. 3, no glebe upwards of fifty acres shall be augmented with more than one acre. Restriction.

Sect. 4. "And whereas it often happens that small plots of land held in mortmain lie convenient to be annexed to some such church or chapel, or house of residence as aforesaid, or to some churchyard, or curtilage thereto belonging, or convenient to be employed as the site of some such church or chapel or house to be hereafter erected, and for the necessary and commodious use and enjoyment thereof," . . . it is therefore further enacted, "that it shall be lawful for every body politic or corporate, sole or aggregate, by deed enrolled as aforesaid, with or without confirmation, as the law may require, to give and grant, either by way of exchange or benefaction, any such small plot of land not exceeding one acre, to any person or persons, body politic or corporate, his and their heirs and successors respectively, to be held, used and applied for the purposes aforesaid; and such last-mentioned person and persons, bodies politic and corporate, and their heirs and successors respectively, shall have full capacity and ability, with consent of the incumbent, patron, and ordinary, to take, hold, and enjoy such small plot of land for the purposes aforesaid. . . ." Small plots of land may be granted to be holden in mortmain.

By 51 Geo. 3, c. 115, s. 2, any person having the fee simple of a manor may grant five acres of land for a church or churchyard, or parsonage or glebe, if the church for which or the minister whereof the same is given be a parochial church or chapel. 51 Geo. 3, c. 115. Grants of waste.

In Forbes v. The Ecclesiastical Commissioners (k), Vice-Chancellor Wickens held, that this provision did not enable a lord of the manor to grant part of the village green, holden under special conditions, for the site of a church.

By 58 Geo. 3, c. 45, ss. 33, 36, 52, lands not in mortmain, to an extent not exceeding ten acres, may be conveyed by gift or sale to and holden by the church building commissioners (now the ecclesiastical commissioners) for sites for houses of residence and for glebes for the ministers of new churches built under that act (l). 58 Geo. 3, c. 45.

Under the Acts 55 Geo. 3, c. 14, and 28 & 29 Vict. c. 69, already mentioned (m), lands may be voluntarily granted, and by way of benefaction for sites for parsonages and for gardens. Sites for parsonages.

tithes may same to the parsonage or vicarage.

By 13 & 14 Vict. c. 94, s. 23, "The owner or proprietor of any impropriation tithes, portion of tithes or rent-charge in lieu of tithes, shall and may have power to annex the same or any part thereof unto the parsonage, vicarage or curacy of the parish church or chapel where the same lie or arise or to settle the same in trust for the benefit of such parsonage, vicarage or curacy, any statute or law whatsoever to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding."

In Burr v. Miller (o), Vice-Chancellor Wickens appears to have holden that this provision did not pro tanto repeal 9 Geo. 2, c. 36, and that a devise of tithes for those purposes by will was, therefore, still void.

take lands.

By 29 & 30 Vict. c. 111, s. 9, "The commissioners may take and hold, without licence in mortmain, lands which they consider convenient to be annexed to any benefice with cure of souls, and they may appropriate monies in their hands belonging to such benefice towards buying such lands."

3 Geo. 4, c. 72.

Conversion into rectories.

By 3 Geo. 4, c. 72, ss. 13, 14, the church building commissioners are empowered to convert vicarages or divisions of vicarages into rectories, on receiving from the owners entitled in fee simple to the tithes, if it be an impropriate rectory, or the patron and incumbent of any sinecure rectory, the whole or such part as they may think proper of the tithes, glebe and rectorial rights, to be annexed to the vicarage or vicarages; and the commissioners are to execute an instrument declaring such annexation, which is to be enrolled in chancery and registered in the registry of the diocese. And if the arrangement cannot be fully carried out at once, the commissioners are empowered to accept and record the offers of the impropiators, patrons and incumbents, which are to be binding upon their successors in title (p).

The principal act on the augmentation of benefices is 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 45. It recites 29 Car. 2, c. 8 (q), and provides as follows:—

Sect. 2. "... the provisions of the said recited act shall extend to any augmentation to be made out of tithes, although the same may not be a portion of tithes; and further, that it shall be lawful, under the power given by the said recited act, to grant, reserve, or make payable any such augmentation as aforesaid to the incumbent of any church or chapel within the parish or place in which the rectory impropriate shall lie, or in which the tithes or portion of tithes shall arise (as the case may be), whether such incumbent shall be a vicar or curate, or otherwise: Provided also, that no such augmentation shall be made payable to any other person whomsoever."

leges and hospitals.

Sect. 4. "In every case in which any augmentation shall at any time hereafter be granted, reserved, or made payable to the incumbent of any church or chapel being in the patronage of the grantor or grantors, or lessor or lessors, or be reserved by way of increase of rent to the lessor or lessors, but intended to be to or for the use or benefit of any such incumbent, by any archbishop, bishop, dean, dean and chapter, archdeacon, prebendary, or other ecclesiastical corporation, person or persons whatsoever, or the master and fellows of any college (s), or the master or guardian of any hospital so making the said grant or reservation out of any lands, tenements, or other hereditaments belonging to such archbishop, bishop, dean, dean and chapter, archdeacon, prebendary, or other ecclesiastical corporation, person or persons whatsoever, or the master and fellows of such college, or the master or guardian of such hospital, all the provisions hereinbefore recited and set forth (except the provision hereinbefore repealed) shall apply to such case in the same manner as if the same provisions, except as aforesaid (with such alterations therein as the difference between the cases would require), were herein expressly set forth and enacted with reference thereto."

The same statute to extend to augmentations made by spiritual persons, colleges and hospitals, out of any hereditaments, to any church or chapel being in their patronage.

Sect. 5. "... every augmentation which at any time hereafter shall be granted, reserved, or made payable, either under the power given by the said recited act, or under either of the powers hereinbefore contained, shall be in the form of an annual rent, and ... the provisions of the said recited act, and the provisions hereinbefore contained, shall not apply to any other kind of augmentation whatsoever to be made after the passing of this act."

All such augmentations to be in the form of annual rents.

Where hereditaments are subject to a lease not reserving a rack rent, an augmentation may be granted, to take effect on the determination of such lease.

Sect. 7. "Where any such rectory impropriate, or tithes or portion of tithes, lands, tenements, or other hereditaments as aforesaid, shall be subject to any lease for any term not exceeding twenty-one years or three lives, or (in the case of such houses as under the provisions of" 14 Eliz. c. 11, "may lawfully be leased for forty years (t)) not exceeding forty years, on which lease the most improved rent at the time of making the same shall not have been reserved, it shall be lawful at any time during the continuance of such lease to exercise the power given by the said recited act, or either of the powers hereinbefore contained, by granting out of the said premises an augmentation, to take effect in possession after the expiration, surrender, or other determination of such lease, and then and in every such case the said premises shall, from and after the expiration, surrender, or other determination of the said lease, and for ever thereafter, be chargeable with the said augmentation; and the provisions of the said recited act and of this act respectively shall in all respects apply to every augmentation which shall be so granted in the same manner as in other cases of augmentations to be granted under the powers of the said recited act or of this act."

(s) By sect. 28 "benefice" comprehends "rectories, vicarages, donatives, perpetual curacies, parochial and consolidated chapelries, district parishes and district chapelries, and churches and chapels having a district assigned thereto."

(t) Vide supra, p. 1298.

Sect. 8. "And whereas it is apprehended that it may be desirable in many cases to make grants of augmentations in the manner last hereinbefore mentioned, and that such grants would be much discouraged if the augmentation to be granted should necessarily take effect in possession upon a surrender of the lease during which the same had been granted as aforesaid for the purpose of such lease being renewed; be it therefore further enacted, that in any case in which an augmentation shall have been granted to take effect in possession after the expiration, surrender, or other determination of any lease in the manner authorized by the clause last hereinbefore contained, and a renewal of such lease shall take place before the expiration thereof, it shall be lawful in and by the renewed lease to defer the time from which such augmentation is to take effect in possession as aforesaid until any time to be therein specified in that behalf: Provided always, that the time to which the augmentation shall be so deferred shall be some time not exceeding twenty-one years, or (in the case of such houses as by the said act" 14 Eliz. c. 11, "may lawfully be leased for forty years) not exceeding forty years, to be respectively computed from the commencement of the lease during which the augmentation shall have been granted."

Power in such cases to defer the commencement of the augmentation upon a renewal of the lease.

Sect. 9. "... where any such augmentation as aforesaid shall have become chargeable, under or by virtue of the said recited act or of this act, upon any rectory impropriate, tithes, portion of tithes, lands, tenements, or other hereditaments, if any lease shall afterwards be granted of any part of the same premises separately from the rest thereof, then and in every such case, and from time to time as often as the same shall happen, it shall be lawful for the person or persons granting such lease to provide and agree that any part of such augmentation shall during such lease be paid out of such part of the hereditaments previously charged therewith as shall be comprised in the said lease, and then and in such case, and thenceforth during the lease so to be made as aforesaid, no further or other part of the said augmentation shall be charged on the premises comprised in the said lease than such part of the said augmentation as shall be so agreed to be paid out of the same: Provided always, that in every such case the hereditaments which shall be leased in severalty as aforesaid shall be a competent security for such part of the said augmentation as shall be agreed to be paid out of the same, and the remainder of the hereditaments originally charged with the said augmentation shall be a competent security for the residue thereof."

Power to apportion augmentations on future leases.

Restriction on the exercise of the power of apportionment.

Sect. 10 repeals so much of 14 Eliz. c. 11, as required an express continuance of the augmentation in new leases.

Sect. 12. "It shall be lawful for any archbishop, bishop, dean, dean and chapter, archdeacon, prebendary, or other ecclesiastical corporation or person or persons, or the master and fellows of any college, or the master or guardian of any hospital, being, in his or their corporate capacity, the owner or owners of any lands, tenements, or other hereditaments whatsoever, and also being in his or their corporate capacity the patron or patrons of any church or chapel, by a deed duly executed, to annex such lands, tenements, or other hereditaments, with the appurtenances, unto such church or chapel, to the intent and in order that the same premises may be held and enjoyed by the incumbent for the time being thereof; and every such deed shall be effectual to all intents and purposes whatsoever, any law or statute to the contrary notwithstanding."

Sect. 13. "In any case in which any rectory inappropriate, tithes or portion of tithes, lands, tenements, or other hereditaments, shall be annexed to any church or chapel, pursuant to either of the powers hereinbefore in that behalf contained, the annexation thereof shall be subject and without prejudice to any lease or leases which previously to such annexation may have been made or granted of the same premises or any part thereof; provided also, that in every such case any rent or rents which may have been reserved in respect of the said premises in and by such lease or leases, or (in case any other hereditaments shall have been also comprised in such lease or leases) some proportional part of such rent or rents, such proportional part to be fixed and determined in and by the instrument by which the annexation shall be made, shall during the continuance of the said lease or leases be payable to the incumbent for the time being of the church or chapel to which the premises shall be annexed as aforesaid; and accordingly such incumbent for the time being shall, during the continuance of such lease or leases, have all the same powers for enforcing payment of the same rent or rents, or of such proportional part thereof as aforesaid, as the person or persons or body politic by whom the annexation shall have been made might have had in that behalf in case the said premises had not been annexed."

Sect. 14. "Where any rectory impropriate, tithes or portion of tithes, lands, tenements, or other hereditaments, which shall be annexed to any church or chapel under either of the powers hereinbefore in that behalf contained, or any part thereof, shall have been anciently or accustomedly demised with other hereditaments in one lease, under one rent, or divers rents issuing out of the whole, and after such annexation such other hereditaments as aforesaid, or any part thereof, shall be demised by a separate lease or leases, all the provisions of" 39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 41 (u), "shall apply and take effect in the same manner as if the premises which shall be so annexed as aforesaid had been retained in the possession or occupation of the person or persons by whom such lease or leases as aforesaid shall be made."

Provisions of 39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 41, to extend to such annexations, in certain cases.

Sect. 15. "Such of the powers hereinbefore contained as are restricted to cases in which the corporation or persons by whom the same may be exercised shall be the patron of the benefice which it shall be intended or desired to augment, shall apply to and may be exercised in cases in which such corporation or person shall be entitled only to the alternate right of presentation to such benefice."

Certain powers to apply to persons entitled to alternate presentations.

Sect. 16. "... the power given by the said recited act shall not at any time hereafter, nor shall any of the powers hereinbefore contained, in any case, be exercised so as to augment in value any benefice whatsoever, which at the time of the exercise of the power shall exceed in clear annual value the sum of three hundred pounds, or so as to raise the clear annual value of any benefice to any greater amount than such sum of three hundred and fifty pounds, or three hundred pounds, not taking account of surplice fees."

Benefices exceeding in yearly value 300*l.* exclusive of surplice fees, not to be raised, and all others to be limited.

Sect. 17. "In every case in which it shall be desired, upon the exercise of any of the said powers, to ascertain, for the purposes of this act, the clear yearly value of any benefice, or of any rectory impropriate, tithes or portion of tithes, lands, tenements, or other hereditaments, it shall be lawful for the archbishop or bishop of the diocese within which the benefice to be augmented shall be situate, or where the same shall be situate within a peculiar jurisdiction belonging to any archbishop or bishop, then for the archbishop or bishop to whom such peculiar jurisdiction shall belong, to cause such clear yearly value to be determined and ascertained by any two persons whom he shall appoint for that purpose, by writing under his hand (which writing is hereby directed to be afterwards annexed to the instrument by which the power shall be exercised), and a certificate of such clear yearly value, written or endorsed on the instrument by which the power shall be exercised, and signed by such persons as aforesaid, shall for all the purposes of this act be conclusive evidence of such clear yearly value as aforesaid."

Power to determine the yearly value of any hereditaments for the purposes of the act.

By whom the above-mentioned powers may be exercised, and with whose consent.

Sect. 18. “. . . . in every case in which the power given by the said recited act, or any of the powers hereinbefore contained (other than and except the aforesaid power of deferring the time at which an augmentation is to take effect in possession), shall be exercised by any bishop, dean, archdeacon, or prebendary, or by the master or guardian of any hospital, the same shall be so exercised, in the case of a bishop, with the consent of the archbishop of the province, or in the case of a dean, with the consent of the dean and chapter, or in the case of an archdeacon or prebendary, with the consent of the archbishop or bishop to whose jurisdiction or control they shall be respectively subject, or in the case of the master or guardian of a hospital, with the consent of the patron or patrons, visitor or visitors (if any) of such hospital, such consent as aforesaid to be testified by the said archbishop, dean and chapter, bishop, or patron or patrons, visitor or visitors (as the case may require), executing the instrument by which the power shall be exercised.”

Incumbents not to exercise them.

Sect. 19. “. . . . the incumbent of any benefice or living shall not be authorized to exercise any of the powers aforesaid with respect to any hereditaments to which he may be entitled in right of his benefice.”

Incumbent may annex tithes, &c. to which he is entitled, arising out of the limits of his benefice, to the church or chapel of the parish where they arise.

Sect. 20. “. . . . where the incumbent of any benefice shall in right of the same be entitled to any tithes or portion of tithes arising in any parish or place not being within the limits of such benefice, it shall be lawful for the incumbent for the time being of such benefice, by a deed duly executed by him, to annex such tithes or portion of tithes as aforesaid, or any part thereof, to any church or chapel within the parish or place in which such tithes or portion of tithes shall arise, to the intent that the same may be enjoyed by the incumbent for the time being of such church or chapel; and every such deed shall be effectual to all intents and purposes whatsoever, any law or statute to the contrary notwithstanding: Provided always, that every such annexation as aforesaid shall be made with the consent of the archbishop or bishop of the diocese within which the said benefice shall be situate (or if the said benefice shall be situate within a peculiar jurisdiction belonging to any archbishop or bishop, then with the consent of the archbishop or bishop to whom such peculiar jurisdiction shall belong), and also with the consent of the patron or patrons of the said benefice, such consent to be testified by the said archbishop or bishop and the said patron or patrons respectively executing the instrument by which the annexation shall be made” (x).

Power to rectors or vicars to charge their rectories and vicarages for the benefit of chapels of ease, &c.

In the case of Hughes v. Denton (y), the church of St. Bartholomew, Moorfields, was built and endowed within the limits of the parish of St. Giles, Cripplegate. By an order in council in 1850, a particular district was assigned to the church, and authority given to publish banns and solemnize marriages and pay the fees to its incumbent. Then it became a separate and distinct parish for ecclesiastical purposes (z). By a local act, 7 Geo. 4, c. liv, the ordinary tithes due in the City of London (a), were abolished in the parish of St. Giles, and an annuity of 1,800*l.* was secured to the vicar instead. In 1857 the vicar, by a deed under this last section, purported to annex one-sixth of this sum to the incumbency of St. Bartholomew. It was holden (1) that it was possible under the last act to annex a portion of an annuity granted in lieu of tithes; (2) that though St. Bartholomew had become a separate parish, it still remained a church to which a district had been assigned, locally situate within the limits of St. Giles, and therefore capable of augmentation out of the funds thereof.

Exception to the preceding power.

Sect. 22. "And whereas by" 58 Geo. 3, c. 45, "provision was made, under certain restrictions, for enabling any parish to be divided into two or more distinct parishes, and for apportioning in such cases the glebe lands, tithes, moduses, or other endowments between the respective divisions; and it was thereby provided with respect to every such case, that during the incumbency of the existing incumbent of the parish every new church intended as the parish church of any division intended to become a distinct parish should remain a chapel of ease: Be it further enacted, that the power last hereinbefore contained shall not be exercised for the purpose of making an annexation or grant to any chapel of ease situate within any division which under the provisions of the said last recited act shall be intended to become a distinct parish."

How consents of patrons testified.

Sects. 23, 24, and 25 provide for the manner in which the consent of the patron shall be testified in cases where the patronage is in the crown; where the patron is a minor, idiot, lunatic, or feme covert; and where the advowson and right of patronage of such benefice shall be part of the possessions of the duchy of Cornwall. These provisions are the same as those contained in 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106, and are set out at length in an earlier part of this book (b).

Instruments to be deposited in registry of diocese.

By sect. 26, in every case in which the power given by 29 Car. 2, c. 8 (c), or this act, shall be exercised, the instrument by which the same shall be so exercised shall within two months be deposited in the registry of the diocese within which the benefice augmented or otherwise benefited shall be locally situate, or where the benefice is within a peculiar jurisdiction belonging to any archbishop or bishop, then in the registry of such peculiar jurisdiction.

By 1 & 2 Vict. c. 107, s. 14, reciting 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 21, it is further enacted, that "in all cases in which any contiguous parts of several parishes may have been or shall hereafter be united into a separate and distinct district for all ecclesiastical purposes, and such district shall have been or shall hereafter be duly constituted a consolidated chapelry, it shall be lawful for the rectors or vicars for the time being of the several parishes, parts of which shall have been so united, to have, use and exercise respectively all the same powers and authorities for annexing to any such consolidated chapelry any part or parts of the tithes or other annual revenues belonging to their rectories or vicarages respectively, and for granting to the incumbent for the time being of any such consolidated chapelry and his successors any annual sum of money, to be payable by equal quarterly or half-yearly payments, and for charging the same on all or any part of such tithes or other revenues as aforesaid, or on any land or other hereditaments belonging to the said rectories or vicarages respectively, as are by the said last-recited act given to rectors and vicars for the augmentation of chapels of ease, and such other chapels and churches as are therein and hereinbefore specified: Provided always, that the exercise of such powers shall be subject to the like consents (to be signified in the same manner) as is required by the said act with regard to the exercise of the powers of the said act for the augmentation of chapels of ease, and the other chapels and churches therein specified; and in every case in which any such tithes or other revenues shall be annexed by virtue of this act to any consolidated chapelry, the incumbent for the time being thereof shall thenceforth have all the same remedies for recovering and enforcing payment of the premises which shall be so annexed as the rectors or vicars for the time being of the said rectories or vicarages respectively might have had if such annexation had not been made; and in every case in which any annual sum of money shall be granted by virtue of this act to the incumbent of a consolidated chapelry, such incumbent and his successors shall have all such remedies for recovery and enforcing payment thereof by action of debt against the incumbent of the rectory or vicarage by whom any such annual sum shall have been granted, or the incumbent thereof for the time being, or by distress upon the hereditaments to be charged therewith, or otherwise as shall in that behalf be specified and given by the deed by which the grant shall be made."

funds of some other benefice, when this latter is to be united to a third, and the two last have revenues more than sufficient for the duties thereof, are contained in 1 & 2 Vict. c. 106, ss. 17, 18, 19 (b); and further provisions to the same effect were contained in the act 18 & 19 Vict. c. 127, ss. 3—7, now expired.

17 & 18 Vict.
c. 84.

The provisions of those acts are further extended by 17 & 18 Vict. c. 84, which enacts as follows:—

Powers given by earlier acts may be exercised by all incumbents,
&c.

Sect. 1. "The powers which by" 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 21, and 1 & 2 Vict. c. 107, s. 14, "are given to rectors or vicars of making annexations or grants in aid of churches and chapels may be exercised by the incumbent of any benefice whatsoever within the meaning of the said act" 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 45, "and may be so exercised although part only of the district chapelry or place to which the church or chapel belongs may be within the limits of such benefice, and whether such church or chapel may be within the limits of such benefice or not."

Sect. 2. "Where the incumbent of any benefice shall, in right of the same, be entitled to any glebe land or other land, it shall be lawful for the incumbent for the time being of such benefice, with such consents as hereinafter mentioned, by a deed duly executed by him, to annex such glebe land or other land as aforesaid, or any part thereof, with the appurtenances, to any church or chapel within the parish, district or place in which such glebe land or other land as aforesaid shall be situate, to the intent that the same may be held and enjoyed by the incumbent for the time being of such church or chapel; and every such deed shall be effectual to all intents and purposes whatsoever, any law or statute to the contrary notwithstanding."

Consents of archbishop or bishop and patron to annexation and grant.

Sect. 3. "Every annexation and grant which shall be made by the incumbent of any benefice in pursuance of any power hereinbefore contained shall be made with the consent of the archbishop or bishop of the diocese within which such benefice shall be situate, and also with the consent of the patron or patrons of such benefice, such consent to be signified by the said archbishop or bishop and the said patron or patrons respectively executing the instrument by which the annexation or grant shall be made."

Section 13 of 1 & 2 Will. 4,
c. 45, to extend to annexations
under this act.

Sect. 4. "In every case in which any land subject to any lease shall be annexed to any church or chapel, in pursuance of the power hereinbefore in that behalf contained, the provisions of" 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 13, "shall apply to such land in the same manner as if such provisions were herein expressly set forth, and in every case in which any rectory impropriate, tithes or portion of tithes, lands, tenements, or other hereditaments, have been or shall be annexed to any church or chapel, in pursuance of any power contained in the said act" 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 45, "or in this act, and the premises so annexed shall be comprised together with other hereditaments in any lease, the incumbent for the time being of the said church or chapel shall as to the premises so annexed, and the person, corporation, or body politic by whom such annexation shall have been made, and his or their successors and assigns shall as to the said other hereditaments, have the same rights and remedies for enforcing payment of the proportion of rent payable to them respectively, and otherwise have the same rights and remedies under and by virtue of the covenants, provisoes and agreements contained in the said lease, as if the said premises so annexed or the said other hereditaments, as the case may be, were the only hereditaments comprised in the said lease."

Sect. 5. "Where any rent or annual sum of money granted, reserved, or made payable, or to be granted, reserved, or made payable, under any of the powers of the said hereinbefore mentioned acts or of this act, to the incumbent of any church or chapel, is or shall be granted, reserved or made payable out of or charged upon any rectory impropriate, tithes, annual revenues, lands, tenements, or other hereditaments, it shall be lawful for the incumbent for the time being of the said church or chapel by a deed duly executed by him, to release any such rectory impropriate, or any of the said tithes or annual revenues, lands, tenements, or other hereditaments respectively, or any part thereof respectively, from the said rent or annual sum, and the premises so released shall be thenceforth wholly discharged from the said rent or annual sum, and from all remedies for recovering and compelling payment thereof, but without in anywise discharging therefrom respectively any rectory impropriate, tithes and revenues, lands, tenements, or hereditaments, theretofore charged with the said rent or annual sum, and not by the said deed expressed to be released, or the person or persons, corporation or body politic, for the time being liable for the payment of the said rent or annual sum: Provided always, that every such release shall be made with the consent of the archbishop or bishop of the diocese within which the said church or chapel shall be situate, and also with the consent of the patron or patrons of the said church or chapel, such consents to be signified by the archbishop or bishop and the said patron or patrons respectively executing the instrument by which the release shall be made: Provided also, that no consent of any archbishop or bishop shall be given to any such release as aforesaid unless some rectory impropriate, tithes or other revenues, lands, tenements, or other hereditaments theretofore charged with the said rent or annual sum shall remain unreleased, and be proved to the satisfaction of the said archbishop or bishop to be a competent security for the same, and be expressed to be so proved in the instrument by which such consent shall be signified."

Rectories impropriate, tithes, &c. may be released from rent-charges, with the consent of archbishop, &c.

Sect. 6. "In every case in which the consent of the patron or patrons of the benefice or of any church or chapel is required by any of the hereinbefore mentioned acts or by this act to the exchanged.

By sect. 73, with an especial view to the better care of populous parishes, arrangements may be made for improving the value or making a better provision for the spiritual duties of ill-endowed parishes or districts, by means of exchange of advowsons, or other alterations in the exercise of patronage (d).

Income of benefices belonging to one patron may be apportioned in certain cases.

Sect. 74. "Arrangements may be made by the like authority for the apportionment of the income of two benefices belonging to the same patron between the incumbents or ministers of such benefices, or the churches or chapels connected therewith: Provided that no such arrangement shall be made with respect to benefices in lay patronage without the consents of the respective patrons, nor in any case so as to prejudice the interests of any existing incumbent, nor without the consent of the bishop of the diocese, nor, in the case of benefices lying in more than one diocese, without the consent of the bishop of each diocese, nor where a bishop is himself one of the patrons, without the consent of the archbishop also."

Extended by 17 & 18 Vict.

By 17 & 18 Vict. c. 84, s. 8, the provisions of this last section "shall apply to any lands, tithes, tithe rent-charges, or other hereditaments or sources of income of what nature or kind soever belonging to such benefices, and shall apply to any number of benefices belonging to the same patron, including any united benefice;" and "every church or chapel possessed of any endowment or capable of receiving the same, and also any sinecure rectory, so far as regards the transfer of its endowment or any portion thereof to any benefice, shall be deemed a benefice for the purpose of such arrangements or any of them."

canon, prebendary or other dignitary or officer whose revenues are or may be affected by any of the provisions of the said two first recited acts or either of them, or of this act." The section continues: "and if for the purpose of more fully carrying into effect the provisions of the said act relative to augmentations it shall appear to the said commissioners and to any bishop or chapter to be expedient that any land belonging to such bishop or chapter adjacent to or situate within the distance of twenty miles from any city or town should be let or sold for purposes of building or other improvement, it shall be lawful for such bishop or chapter, as the case may be, with the consent of the said commissioners under their common seal, to grant any lease or leases of such land for such period or periods and upon such conditions as the said commissioners, having regard to the circumstances of the case, shall deem just and equitable, or, with the like consent, to convey the said land in fee simple for such price as shall appear to the said commissioners to be the full value thereof: provided that the rent in the former case, or the purchase-money in the latter case, after reserving to the bishop or chapter, as the case may be, an annual payment equal to the amount theretofore enjoyed in respect of the land so let or sold, shall be wholly applied to the purposes of the said last-mentioned act, the consent of the said commissioners being in all cases necessary to the particular application thereof: Provided also, that if it be deemed expedient with a view to the better effecting of such purposes, such rent or purchase-money, or any part thereof, may, with the like consent, be at any time re-invested in the purchase of land."

Augmentations under 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 45, may be made by all corporations sole; and building land may be let or sold for that purpose.

By 2 & 3 Vict. c. 49, s. 2, it is provided, "that in the case of any church or chapel which has already been or hereafter may be augmented by the said governors of the bounty of Queen Anne, and for or to which any district chapelry has already been or hereafter may be assigned, whether before or after such augmentation under the provisions of the said recited acts or some of them, such church or chapel, from and after such augmentation, and the assignment of such district chapelry, shall be and is hereby declared to be a perpetual curacy and benefice, and the minister duly nominated and licensed thereto, and his successors, shall not be a stipendiary curate, but shall be and esteemed in law to be a perpetual curate, and a body politic and corporate, with perpetual succession, and may receive and take to himself and his successors all such lands, tenements, tithes, rent-charges, and hereditaments as shall be granted unto or purchased for him or them by the said governors of the bounty of Queen Anne, or otherwise; and such perpetual curate shall thenceforth have within the district chapelry so assigned as aforesaid sole and exclusive cure of souls, and shall not be in anywise subject to the control or interference of the rector, vicar, or minister of the parish or place from which

Order in Council for augmentation of benefices.

An Order in Council, dated October 21, 1842, confirmed a scheme, recommended by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, for raising to the sum of 150*l*. (as nearly as may be) the average annual net income of the several benefices and churches enumerated and described in the schedule, out of the common fund of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners.

There followed a schedule of the benefices augmented, under the following divisions: 1st, name of benefice; 2nd, quality; 3rd, diocese; 4th, county; 5th, annual payment of each benefice.

or endowments, in any one case to more than the clear yearly value of " 300*l*.

By 6 & 7 Vict. c. 37, s. 22, as amended and extended by 7 & 8 Vict. c. 94, s. 7, and 28 Vict. c. 42, s. 7, it is enacted, that "all and every person or persons, or body corporate, having in his or their own right any estate or interest in possession, reversion, or contingency of or in any lands, tithes, tenements, or other hereditaments, or any personal estate or property whatsoever, shall have full power, licence and authority, at his and their will and pleasure, by deed enrolled . . . in the case of any lands, tithes, tenements, or other hereditaments (but without any deed in the case of any goods or chattels [personal estate or property]), or by his or their testament in writing" [including therein any testamentary paper or testamentary appointment under a power] "duly executed according to law, to give and grant to and vest in the ecclesiastical commissioners and their successors all such his or their estate, interest, or property in such lands, tithes, tenements or other hereditaments" [goods and chattels], "personal estate and property whatsoever, or any part or parts thereof, for and towards the endowment or augmentation of the income of such ministers or perpetual curates as aforesaid, or for or towards providing any church or chapel for the purposes and subject to the provisions of this act" [or for the purposes of purchasing any tithes, or to give any tithes with a view to the annexation of such tithes to a district church], "and to be for such purposes respectively applied, according, to the will of such benefactors respectively, as in and by such deed enrolled, or such testament executed as aforesaid, may be expressed, or in the case of no deed or testament, as may in some other manner be directed, and in default of such expression or direction, then in such manner as shall be directed by the authority hereinbefore mentioned; and such commissioners and their successors shall have full capacity and ability to purchase, receive, take, hold, and enjoy, for the purposes aforesaid, as well from such persons as shall be so charitably disposed to give the same, as from all other persons who shall be willing to sell or alien to the said commissioners any lands, tithes, tenements, or other hereditaments, goods or chattels" [personal estate and property], "without any licence or writ of ad quod damnum" (g).

A bequest of money, contingent upon the object being legally attained at the testator's death or within twenty-one years after, for providing a site for a church at B., in the parish of W., with proper schools, and for endowing the church, is good under this last section, and will pass to the ecclesiastical commissioners, if within the time a district is constituted under the statute (h).

(i) 6 & 7 Vict. c. 37, and 7 & 8 Vict. c. 94.

By 28 & 29 Vict. c. 42, The District Church Tithes Act, 1865, it is enacted as follows:—

Sect. 2. "For the purposes of this act 'district church' shall include any chapel of ease or parochial chapel, or any district church or chapel or any church or chapel having a district assigned thereto, whether already built or hereafter to be built, and the church of any parish formed or to be formed under the new Parishes Acts, 1843, 1844, and 1856, or any of such acts (k); and 'district' shall include any such parish as last aforesaid, or any ancient or consolidated chapelry, or any parish or district formed under any of the Church Building Acts, or any other general or local act; and 'tithes' shall include 'commutation rent-charges, and all moduses, compositions, prescriptive and other payments, or redemption money in lieu of tithes,' or any part or parts thereof respectively, and any land for which such tithes, or other payments in lieu thereof, may have been commuted."

28 & 29 Vict.
c. 42.

What are intended by words "district church," "district," "tithes," under this act.

Sect. 3. "The rector or vicar for the time being of any rectory or vicarage may agree with the incumbent of any district church either wholly or in part situate within the limits or original limits of the said rectory or vicarage, to annex to such district church the tithes or part of the tithes belonging to such rectory or vicarage, and arising in respect of property situate within the district belonging to such district church, in consideration of a sufficient compensation being made to the said rector or vicar and his successors for the loss of the said tithes out of the endowments of the said district church or by some other means."

Any rector may annex tithes arising within the district to a district church.

Sect. 4. "No agreement shall be valid on the part of a rector or vicar under this act unless it be assented to, firstly, by the archbishop or bishop of the diocese within which his rectory or vicarage is situate, or if it be situate within a peculiar jurisdiction belonging to an archbishop or bishop by such last-mentioned archbishop or bishop, and secondly, by the patron of the rectory or vicarage; and no agreement shall be valid on the part of the incumbent of a district church, except with the consent of the patron of such church, and with the approval of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners for England, where the compensation to be made to the rector or vicar is payable out of funds in the hands of the said Commissioners, and of the Governors of the Bounty of Queen Anne for the augmentation of the maintenance of poor clergy, where the compensation to be made is payable out of funds in the lands or subject to the control of the said Governors."

Consents required to such annexation.

Sect. 5. "Any agreement under this act between a rector and vicar on the one part, and an incumbent of a district church on the other, shall be in writing under their respective hands."

Agreements to be in writing.

Sect. 6. "Any assents required by this act may be testified by the assenting party executing the agreement between the rector or vicar and the incumbent of the district church, and the provisions of the above-mentioned act (i), and of the act "17 & 18 Vict. c. 84 (k), "as to patrons of benefices, shall apply to the assent of patrons under this act."

Ecclesiastical commissioners to carry agreement into execution.

And by sect. 8 of 28 & 29 Vict. c. 42, modified by 29 & 30 Vict. c. 111, s. 22, it is provided, that "any agreement made in pursuance of this act shall be carried into effect by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners for England," and any instrument under the corporate seal of the said commissioners made in pursuance of such agreement, "and transferring on the one side the tithes proposed to be transferred to the incumbent of the district church, and on the other securing to the rector or vicar the compensation agreed upon, shall be valid to vest in the said incumbent and his successors such tithes, and to secure to the said rector or vicar such compensation."

Augmentation on exchange.

Former owners of advowsons, who have exchanged them for others under the provisions of 16 & 17 Vict. c. 50, may nevertheless, by sect. 5 of that act, have the same powers of augmenting them as if they had not passed from them (l).

By municipal corporations.

By 1 & 2 Vict. c. 31, s. 3 (now repealed), municipal corporations might, and by 45 & 46 Vict. c. 50, they still may, continue to augment priestships, preacherships, &c., in their gift as before (m).

By parishioners.

Where advowsons are sold by parishioners and others under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 50 (n), or by the lord chancellor under 26 & 27 Vict. c. 120 (o), the proceeds of the sale may be applied in augmenting the benefice, or in some cases, other benefices in the gift of the lord chancellor.

Alterations in cases of extraordinary tithes.

By the Extraordinary Tithe Redemption Act, 1886 (49 & 50 Vict. c. 54), s. 13, where incumbents in receipt of extraordinary tithes have fixed charges on their benefices in favour of other churches, the ecclesiastical commissioners may make such alterations in view of the altered state of things as they deem equitable (p).

36 & 37 Vict. c. 50.

New powers of granting land for religious purposes have been given by the Places of Worship Sites Act, 1873 (36 & 37 Vict. c. 50), which provides as follows:—

Power to grant land to be used as sites for places of worship and residences of minister.

Sect. 1. "Any person or persons being seised or entitled in fee simple, fee tail, or for life or lives of or to any manor or lands of freehold tenure, and having the beneficial interest therein, and being in possession for the time being, may grant, convey, or enfranchise by way of gift, sale, or exchange in fee simple, or for any term of years, any quantity not exceeding one acre of such land, not being part of a demesne or pleasure ground attached to any mansion house, as a site for a church, chapel, meeting house, or other place of divine worship, or for the residence of a minister officiating in such place of worship or in any place of worship within one mile of such site, or for a burial place, or any number of such sites, provided that each such site does not exceed the extent of one acre: Provided also, that no such grant, conveyance or enfranchisement made by any person seised or entitled only for life or lives of or to any such manor or lands shall be valid unless the person next entitled to the same for a beneficial interest in remainder in fee simple or fee tail (if legally competent) shall be a party to and join in the same, or if such person be a minor, or married woman, or lunatic, unless the guardian (q), husband, or committee of such person respectively shall in like manner concur: Provided also, that in case the said land so granted, conveyed or enfranchised as aforesaid, or any part thereof, shall at any time be used for any purpose other than as a site for such place of worship or residence, or burial place, or, in the case of a place of worship or residence, shall cease for a year at one time to be used as such place of worship or residence, the same shall thereupon revert to and become a portion of the lands from which the same was severed, as fully to all intents and purposes as if this act had not been passed, anything herein contained to the contrary notwithstanding. The provisions hereinbefore contained with respect to any manor or lands of freehold tenure shall apply to lands of copyhold or customary tenure, but so, nevertheless, that the provisions of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (r), with respect to copyhold lands (being sections 95, 96, 97, and 98 of such act), shall for the purposes of this enactment be incorporated with this act."

If land cease to be used for purposes of act, then to revert.

SECT. 2. "The purchase money or enfranchisement money or money to be received for equality of exchange on any such sale, enfranchisement, or exchange shall, if such sale, enfranchisement, or exchange be made by any person or persons seised or entitled in fee simple or fee tail, be paid to the person or persons making such sale, enfranchisement, or exchange, but if such sale, enfranchisement, or exchange be made by any person or persons seised or entitled for life or lives only, then such purchase money, or enfranchisement money, or money to be received for equality of exchange, shall be paid to the existing trustees or trustee (if any) of the instrument under which such person or persons is or are so seised or entitled, to be held by them upon the trusts upon which the land conveyed for such site was held, or if there be no such existing trustees or trustee to two or more trustees to be nominated in writing by the person or persons making such sale, enfranchisement, or exchange; and the receipt of any person or persons to whom such money is hereby directed to be paid shall effectually discharge the person or persons paying such purchase or enfranchisement money or money for equality of exchange therefrom, and from all liability in respect of the application thereof”

Persons under disability empowered to grant for purposes of act.

Sect. 3. “Where any person or persons is or are equitably entitled to any manor or lands, but the legal estate therein shall be in some trustee or trustees, it shall be sufficient for such person or persons to convey or otherwise assure the same for the purposes of this act without the trustee or trustees being party or parties to the conveyance or other assurance thereof, and where any married woman shall be seised or possessed of or entitled to any estate or interest, manorial or otherwise, in land proposed to be conveyed or otherwise assured for the purposes of this act, she and her husband may convey, or otherwise assure the same, for such purposes by deed without any acknowledgment thereof; and where it is deemed expedient to purchase any land for the purposes aforesaid belonging to or vested in any infant or lunatic, such land may be conveyed or otherwise assured by the guardian of such infant or the committee of such lunatic respectively, who may receive the purchase money for the same, and give valid and sufficient discharges to the party paying such purchase money, who shall not be required to see to the application thereof; and in every such case respectively the legal estate shall, by such conveyance or other assurance, vest in the trustees of such place of worship or residence; and if any land taken under this act be subject to any rent, and part only of the land subject to any such rent be required to be taken for the purposes of this act, the apportionment of such rent may be settled by agreement between the owner of such rent and the person or persons to whom the land is conveyed; and if such apportionment be not so settled by agreement, then the same shall be settled by two justices as provided in the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845 (s), sect. 119: Provided nevertheless, that nothing herein contained shall prejudice or affect the right of any person or persons entitled to any charge or incumbrance on such land.”

Form of grants, &c.

Sect. 4 gives the following form of grant:—

“I [or we] under the authority of an act passed in the thirty-sixth and thirty-seventh years of her Majesty Queen Victoria, intituled, An Act to afford further Facilities for the Conveyance of Land for Sites for Places of Religious Worship and for Burial Places, do hereby freely and voluntarily, and without any valuable consideration [or, do, in the consideration of the sum of pounds to me or the said paid], grant [alienate] and convey

"in the presence of _____ of _____."

And proceeds: "One witness to the execution of the document by each party shall be sufficient, and any assurance under this act shall be and continue valid if otherwise lawful, although the donor or grantor shall die within twelve calendar months from the execution thereof."

Sect. 5. "The persons hereinbefore specified may convey, by way of gift, sale, or exchange, any site or sites, not exceeding in the case of any one site the quantity aforesaid, for any of the purposes of the Church Building Acts, to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners for England, or as such commissioners may direct, and such commissioners may also act as trustees for the purpose of taking and holding any sites granted under this act; and all conveyances made under this present enactment shall be deemed to be made under the Church Buildings Acts, and the land conveyed shall vest in conformity with such conveyances and the Church Building Acts."

Ecclesiastical commissioners may accept trusts.

By 45 & 46 Vict. c. 21, s. 1, "The Places of Worship Sites Act, 1873" (36 & 37 Vict. c. 50), "shall be construed as extending to authorize any corporation, ecclesiastical or lay, whether sole or aggregate, and any officers, justices of the peace, trustees, or commissioners holding land for public, ecclesiastical, parochial, charitable, or other purposes or objects, to grant, convey, or enfranchise for the purposes of the act such quantity of land as therein mentioned: Provided as follows:

45 & 46 Vict. c. 21.

Conveyance of lands by ecclesiastical and other corporations and other public bodies.

- (a) An ecclesiastical corporation sole, being below the dignity of a bishop, shall not make any such grant without the consent in writing of the bishop of the diocese to whose jurisdiction he is subject:
- (b) A municipal corporation shall not make any such grant without the consent in writing of the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury:
- (c) Parochial property shall not be so granted without the consent of a majority of the ratepayers and owners of property in the parish to which the property belongs, assembled at a meeting to be convened according to the mode pointed out in the act of the session held in the fifth and sixth years of the reign of King William the Fourth, chapter 69, intituled 'An Act to facilitate the conveyance of workhouses and other property of parishes, and of incorporations or unions of parishes in England and Wales,' and of the Local Government Board and of the guardians of the poor of the parish or of the union comprising the parish, testified by their being parties to the conveyance :

- (d) Property held on trust for charitable purposes shall not be so granted without the consent of the charity commissioners for England and Wales."

Power for limited owner in case of unborn or unascertained remainder-man to convey, &c.

Sect. 2. "The said act shall be construed as extending to authorize any person seised or entitled only for life or lives of or to any manor or lands of freehold tenure to make such grant, conveyance, or enfranchisement as is mentioned in the said act in cases where the person next entitled to the same for a beneficial interest in remainder in fee simple or fee tail is unborn or unascertained : Provided that no such grant, conveyance, or enfranchisement made by any such person seised only for a life or lives shall be valid unless the person seised or entitled for a beneficial interest for life or lives, or for an estate in fee simple or fee tail (as the case may be) in remainder immediately expectant on the estate of such unborn or unascertained person of or to such manor or lands (if any, and if legally competent) shall be a party to and shall join in the same ; and if there be no such person, or if such person be not legally competent, unless the trustees or trustee (if any) of such manor or lands during the suspense or contingency of the then immediate or expectant estate in fee simple or fee tail in such manor or lands shall in like manner concur."

CHAPTER V.

THE BUILDING OF CHURCHES.

THE various acts with reference to this purpose have had for their immediate object the best method of disposing of certain sums of 1,000,000*l.* and 500,000*l.* voted by parliament, and of the benefactions which private individuals have been authorized to make, in order to increase the number of churches in the kingdom. The sum of 1,000,000*l.* in exchequer bills was granted by 58 Geo. 3, c. 45; and the further sum of 500,000*l.* by 5 Geo. 4, c. 103. Object of acts.

Previously, however, to these acts had been passed 43 Geo. 3, c. 108, which is set out in the previous chapter, with the cases decided on its construction (a). 43 Geo. 3, c. 108.

The statute 51 Geo. 3, c. 115, and the case of Forbes v. The Ecclesiastical Commissioners (b), decided on the construction of this section, have also been already mentioned (c). 51 Geo. 3, c. 115.

And by 52 Geo. 3, c. 161, s. 27 (which, however, is repealed by 10 Geo. 4, c. 50, s. 1, except as to the Duchy of Lancaster), the lords of the treasury may by warrant appropriate small portions of crown lands for curtilages or accessions to churches. 52 Geo. 3, c. 161.

The important act, 36 & 37 Vict. c. 50, enabling any person seised in fee simple, fee tail, or for life or lives, and having the beneficial interest therein, to give, sell, or exchange an acre of land for a site for a church or chapel, or the residence house of a minister, or for a burial place, and to give any number of such sites, subject to the conditions and in the manner provided by the act, has been given at length in the preceding chapter (d). 36 & 37 Vict. c. 50.

So has the act 45 & 46 Vict. c. 21, which gives further extensions to its provisions (e). 45 & 46 Vict. c. 21.

By the aforesaid act, 58 Geo. 3, c. 45, certain commissioners, commonly called "The Church Building Commissioners," were appointed for ten years, who were to examine and inquire into the spiritual condition of parishes in order to ascertain where new churches were most required, and to employ the sum of 1,000,000*l.* above mentioned in building the churches requisite, 58 Geo. 3, c. 45.

Provisions as to church rates.

and otherwise to carry into execution the provisions of the act. The commissioners were afterwards made a body corporate, and the term of their commission was continued by divers acts, till at last by 19 & 20 Vict. c. 55, their powers were, from January 1, 1857, transferred to the ecclesiastical commissioners (e).

One of the means by which the church building commissioners were authorized to assist the building of new churches was by making loans to parishes on security of the church rates, or meeting funds raised by church rates by contributions to an equal amount out of their own fund. Since the Compulsory Church Rate Abolition Act, 1868, 31 & 32 Vict. c. 109, these provisions have become obsolete, except in so far as they relate to past transactions in which the loans on the security of the church rates have not yet been paid off (f). The provisions which appear to have no application, except to this purpose, are contained in 58 Geo. 3, c. 45, ss. 35, 54—61; 59 Geo. 3, c. 134, ss. 14, 23—25, 36, 40; 3 Geo. 4, c. 72, ss. 5—7, 11; 5 Geo. 4, c. 103, s. 13.

On the construction of some of these now obsolete sections were decided the cases of Warner v. Gater (g) and Piggott v. Bearblock (h).

Distribution of parliamentary grant.

Certain rules were laid down for the guidance of the church building commissioners in the distribution of the sums voted by parliament, as to the amount of population and the existing church accommodation, the prospect of subscriptions in aid, &c., in the parishes to be benefited; but as the sums voted by parliament have been long since practically expended, these provisions are not now of much practical importance. They were contained in 58 Geo. 3, c. 45, ss. 13, 14, 15; 59 Geo. 3, c. 134, ss. 4, 5, 6, 7, 22; 3 Geo. 4, c. 72, s. 32; 8 & 9 Vict. c. 70, s. 12.

Acceptance of sites for churches.

By 58 Geo. 3, c. 45, s. 33, the commissioners are empowered to accept sites for churches and chapels with churchyards; and every such site when it is conveyed to the commissioners and the church is erected thereupon, and notice thereof is given to the bishop of the diocese, shall become for ever thereafter devoted to ecclesiastical purposes only, in order that the same may be consecrated by the bishop.

Grants by persons under disability.

By various sections (i) in this and the following acts, powers, similar to those given to so many public undertakings by virtue of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act (j), are given to the crown, to public bodies, corporations, and generally to persons under disability, enabling them to convey sites for churches and chapels to the commissioners. Provision was made for appor-

Vict. c. 107, s. 6; 8 & 9 Vict. c. 70, ss. 19, 20, 21, 24; 19 & 20 Vict. c. 104, s. 28. By 59 Geo. 3, c. 134, s. 20, corporations and persons under disability might grant stone, timber, &c. for building churches.

tioning quit or other rents in cases where the lands so conveyed were, with other lands, subject to quit rents or comprised in a lease, by 3 Geo. 4, c. 72, s. 9, for cases under that act; and generally by 14 & 15 Vict. c. 97, s. 27, and 17 & 18 Vict. c. 22.

The commissioners may also, under certain restrictions (k), put in force compulsory powers for taking sites which they may require; and where a parish does not require their aid in other respects, they may be invoked for the purpose alone of procuring a safe conveyance of a site through their instrumentality (l). Provision is made for the ascertainment and payment of the purchase-money, and for the re-sale of lands not required.

Compulsory purchase.

The title to a site is not to be questioned after five years (m). This provision, it has been decided, in the case of The Attorney-General v. The Bishop of Manchester, must be construed most strictly, so as to extend only to sites transferred to the commissioners for building churches or chapels thereon, and not to chapels actually built which are transferred to them in violation of some trust (n). In the same case it was held that the words in 3 Geo. 4, c. 72, s. 1, which are the largest in any of the church building acts, empowering the master general of the ordnance, the principal officers of any public department, and "any and every body politic, corporate and collegiate and corporation aggregate or sole," and "any trustees, guardians, commissioners, or other persons having the control, care, or management of any hospital, schools, charitable foundations, or other public institutions, to give, grant and convey any messuages, buildings, lands, grounds, tenements or hereditaments respectively," do not authorize the conveyance of a private chapel belonging to a charity in violation of the rights of the charity by the trustees thereof, not for valuable consideration, but in order that the chapel might be consecrated and made a parish church. In this case the chapel had been actually consecrated, and an order in council assigning a district to it had been obtained; but on an information and bill filed, the Court of Chancery held the conveyance to the commissioners to be a breach of trust and ordered them to reconvey the chapel to the trustees of the charity (m).

When titles unquestionable.

Provision was made by 59 Geo. 3, c. 134, s. 34, in the acts for the case of lands being in the possession of the commissioners and not yet consecrated at the expiration of the term of years to which the commission was limited. And by 3 & 4 Vict. c. 60, s. 19, in cases where land has been conveyed to the commissioners under 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 38, to be hereafter referred to, or 1 & 2 Vict. c. 107, and a part only of the land is required for the purposes for which it was originally conveyed to them, the ing and endowing under that act, provided they pay the original value of the lands (s. 18).

commissioners may, with the consent of the grantor or donor, appropriate the rest to other ecclesiastical purposes or to any charitable or public purpose relating to the parish or place in which the land is situate.

Remission of duties.

It should be here noted that for the purposes of these acts, and for facilitating the erection of churches under them, various duties on brick, stone and timber (then payable), and stamp duties on instruments, were remitted (o).

3 Geo. 4, c. 72.

Cases under special acts or trusts.

By 3 Geo. 4, c. 72, all powers and provisions in local acts are to remain good, and may be put in force for the objects of this act (p). And, by sect. 33, the commissioners may make grants to churches or chapels already subject to special trusts, and may at the same time, by special resolution, confirm the trusts already existing.

In whom sites to be vested.

By the earlier acts, 58 Geo. 3, c. 45; 59 Geo. 3, c. 134, and 3 Geo. 4, c. 72, the sites were to be conveyed to the commissioners for the purpose of consecration. But by 5 Geo. 4, c. 103, s. 14, lands conveyed under the provisions of that act are to be vested in the persons specified in the sentence of consecration; and some similar vesting seems to be contemplated by 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 38, in cases under that act. Now by the joint effect of 8 & 9 Vict. c. 70, s. 13, and 19 & 20 Vict. c. 104, s. 10, it would appear that, in all cases arising under the church building acts, the freehold of the church, churchyard and all lands, tithes and hereditaments belonging to the church, and the house of residence, are to vest in the incumbent; except that, where by local act of parliament the same are vested in any vestry, they shall not be vested in the incumbent without the consent of the vestry.

Champneys v. Arrowsmith.

In the case of Champneys v. Arrowsmith (q), the facts were these:—In 1816, under a local act, a new church was built in St. Pancras, which was to be “the parish church,” the old church being thereby converted into a “parish chapel.” In 1853, by an order in council, the original burial place for the parish, which surrounded the old church, and also an additional ground provided under an earlier local act, were closed, and a cemetery was provided for the whole parish. In 1863, that part of the parish in which the old church stood was turned into a new district, and the “parish chapel” was declared to be the church of that district. It was holden by the Exchequer Chamber, affirming the judgment of the Court of Common Pleas (r), that the 10th section of 19 & 20 Vict. c. 104, did not operate to vest the old churchyard in the incumbent of the new district church, but that the freehold thereof still remained in the vicar of the parish.

Regina v. Lee.

In Regina v. Lee (s), it was attempted to make the incumbent of a new church responsible as owner for the expenses of removing a part of the church which was a dangerous structure, but this contention failed.

In The Board of Works for the Plumstead District v. The Ecclesiastical Commissioners (f), it was attempted to make the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, as owners of the land on which a church was built, and of an additional piece of land, all of which had been conveyed to the commissioners, liable to contribute towards the cost of paving a new street. But it was holden that the freehold of the whole piece of land was in the incumbent, and that the commissioners were not owners.

As to the patronage of the churches built or endowed under the provisions of these acts, it was provided, in the case of chapels built by church rates, that the patronage should be in the incumbent of the parish (u). With this exception the patronage of all churches to which districts or district parishes are attached is vested in the patron of the parish out of which the district or district parish is taken (v). But where such a district or district parish is again subdivided, the patronage is in the incumbent of such district or district parish (w).

Where a consolidated chapelry is formed out of several parishes or extra-parochial places, the patronage is in such persons as the several patrons of such parishes and extra-parochial places, or the majority of them, subject to the approval of the commissioners, agree to nominate (x).

By 3 Geo. 4, c. 72, s. 31, in any case where the commissioners build or assist in building a church or chapel "in any parish or place in which the patronage of or nomination or appointment of the ecclesiastical person to serve such church or chapel shall not belong to anyone, the commissioners may, by instrument under seal, declare the patronage to be in the bishop of the diocese, or if the place be exempt from the jurisdiction of a bishop, then in the bishop within whose diocese the place is locally situate.

By 14 & 15 Vict. c. 97, s. 26 (except where the commissioners with the consent of the bishop otherwise determine), the patronage of all new churches built in extra-parochial places if not vested elsewhere is to be in the bishop of the diocese.

It should here be mentioned that, by virtue of 59 Geo. 3, c. 134, s. 15, 3 Geo. 4, c. 72, s. 15, and 1 & 2 Vict. c. 107, s. 15, corporations, trustees, persons with only a limited interest or under disability, are empowered to surrender or agree to surrender to the commissioners, or the bishop, or any other persons, with the sanction of the commissioners and bishop, all rights of patronage that they may possess for facilitating any of the purposes of any of these acts.

By 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 38, ss. 24, 26, 8 & 9 Vict. c. 70, s. 23, and 11 & 12 Vict. c. 37, s. 4, the patron and incumbent of the parish in which a new church is being built may, before its consecration, enter into any agreement in writing as to the future patronage thereof, and such agreement is to be binding upon them.

Building by private persons.

By a series of acts beginning with 5 Geo. 4, c. 103, a power of building and endowing churches and chapels was conferred in certain circumstances upon private persons, without the intervention of the commissioners in any way.

Under
5 Geo. 4,
c. 103.

By 5 Geo. 4, c. 103, s. 5, where there is not spiritual accommodation for more than one-fourth of the inhabitants of any parish, township or place, and twelve householders shall certify to the bishop that they are willing to raise by subscription money to build or buy a church or chapel, and to provide out of the pew rents for the maintenance and repair of the church or chapel, and the stipend of a minister and clerk, the bishop may consent to the building or buying of such church or chapel. By the same act the money necessary might have been raised, to the extent of one moiety, out of the church rates (sect. 9). By sect. 10, every application to the bishop shall offer to set apart such number and proportion of free seats as is required by the previous acts, in cases in which churches or chapels are built or purchased under the provisions of the said acts (y), with any money advanced by the commissioners under the said acts; and no pew rents are to be taken nor service performed in such church or chapel till it has been consecrated.

By sect. 6, certain life-trustees are to be appointed "for the general regulation of the temporal affairs of such church and chapel;" and by sect. 15, these life-trustees may sell the vaults and burial places under the church or chapel, and out of the proceeds of such sale they are to pay the incumbent the ordinary dues receivable by an incumbent on the opening of vaults in a parish church, and the residue of the proceeds is to be invested, and the income applied in aid of the payment of stipends and general expenses of the church or chapel. The provisions of the former Church Building Acts for enforcing payment of pew rents, and for the recovery by the incumbent of his salary, are applied to this act (z).

7 & 8 Geo. 4,
c. 72.

The next provision made on this subject was 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 72, s. 3; but this section, after having given rise to a most elaborate discussion in the case of Bliss v. Woods (a), was repealed by 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 38, s. 1.

1 & 2 Will. 4,
c. 38.

By sect. 2 of this last act (as amended and extended by 1 & 2 Vict. c. 107, ss. 1, 3, and 3 & 4 Vict. c. 60, ss. 13, 14), in all parishes and extra-parochial places, the population of which according to the last census shall amount to 2,000, and in which

(y) This probably refers to 58 Geo. 3, c. 45, s. 75, requiring one-fifth of the seats to be free in any case where the church or chapel is built wholly or partially out of rates.

the existing churches or chapels do not afford accommodation for more than one-third of the inhabitants for attendance upon divine service, and also in all parishes and extra-parochial places in which 300 persons, whatever be the amount of the whole population, are resident more than two miles from any existing church or chapel, and within one mile of the site of the proposed church or chapel, and where any persons are ready to build a church or chapel, or to purchase a building fit in the opinion of the bishop to be used as a church or chapel, or where a church or chapel has been built on the faith of the repealed act of 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 72, s. 3, in such a situation as shall in the opinion of the bishop be adapted for the inhabitants for whom more spiritual accommodation is necessary, and where such persons are ready to provide a sum of 1,000*l.* or an annuity of 40*l.* charged on lands, tithes or other hereditaments, at least, by way of endowment for such church or chapel in addition to the pew-rents and other profits, if any, and further to provide a repair fund after a certain ratio therein mentioned, and to set apart one-third at least of the sittings as free seats if the bishop shall so require, it seems that such church or chapel may be consecrated, and certain privileges as to the patronage thereof, which will be referred to hereafter, are given to the subscribers thereto; provided always, that no such church or chapel shall be built for the accommodation of 300 persons as above mentioned within two miles of the existing parochial church or chapel.

It is provided that nothing in the act shall extend to repeal or alter any local acts, unless with the sanction of the incumbent, patron and vestry (b).

It was decided in Williams v. Brown (c) that the conditions specified in this act are conditions precedent, which must be strictly complied with before the benefits given by it can be claimed, and that the existence of a proper repair fund is one of these conditions.

Decision on this section.

But before the powers given by this act can be put in force, notice of the intention to build, or purchase and endow such a church or chapel, must be served upon the patron and incumbent of the parish (d) with certain particulars; and if the patron shall within two months bind himself to build and endow an additional church or chapel to the satisfaction of the bishop, then the patron shall be preferred; or where there is a population of 1,000 within two miles of an existing church, and any persons shall, with the consent of the vestry, bind themselves to enlarge the existing church to a certain specified extent, they shall be preferred; that is, their scheme shall be taken instead of the scheme of building a new church or chapel (e).

Endowment

fund.

By 3 & 4 Vict. c. 60, s. 12, the endowment required by 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 38, s. 2, may be in lands or houses worth 1,000*l.*, or partly in them and partly in the funds; and by sect. 15, for the purposes of the repair fund required a perpetual rent-charge on lands or hereditaments equal in value to the endowment may be given, and the incumbent instead of the trustees provided by the original act may hold such rent-charge, and in cases where the rent-charge comes into the hands of trustees they may assign it to the incumbent.

23 & 24 Vict.
c. 124.

By 23 & 24 Vict. c. 124, s. 30, the commissioners may release a rent-charge granted to them by way of endowment only, in consideration of a sum of Consolidated Bank Annuities to be transferred into their names.

5 Geo. 4,
c. 103.
Life trustees.

The trustees just mentioned were first established by 5 Geo. 4, c. 103, s. 6. That section provides for the appointment of three life trustees by the subscribers of 50*l.* and upwards from among themselves "for the management and general regulation of the temporal affairs of such church and chapel." They are to continue trustees as long as the church shall be served by any presentee of theirs as hereinafter mentioned.

By sect. 7, if any trustee dies or resigns, a meeting is to be called, and the majority of the subscribers of 50*l.* and upwards, being owners or renters of pews, may appoint a new trustee from among themselves.

It appears from the case of Fowler and Allen v. The Bishop of Gloucester (g) that this meeting must be called by one of the surviving trustees.

By sect. 8, if the number of persons subscribing does not exceed three, the subscribers are the life trustees, and any one of them dying or resigning may by his will, or any instrument signed by him, appoint a trustee in his place.

This last provision, it was holden in the case just mentioned, applies only where the original subscribers did not exceed three, and not where they have been reduced to that number in course of time.

By sect. 12, if all the subscribers die, so that no election of trustees can be made, the incumbent of the parish becomes a trustee. By the same section the trustees have the patronage of the living for the first two turns, or any number of turns occurring within forty years; but if they all die, the incumbent of the parish has the nomination for the residue of that period. At the expiration of that period the patronage vests in the incumbent of the parish, unless the chapel is made into a district church, in which case it vests in the patron of the original parish.

By sect. 13, in cases where chapels were built by rates, the incumbent of the parish had the patronage, unless the chapel were made into a district church.

By sect. 15 of the same act, the trustees may sell the vaults under the church or in the churchyard, and after paying a portion of the purchase-money to the incumbent of the parish in lieu of fees, shall invest the residue and employ the income in paying the stipend of the minister, the salary of the clerk, and other expenses.

By sect. 18, the powers and provisions of the previous acts as to the recovery and payment of stipends and salaries, and the recovery of pew rents, are to apply to chapels built under this act.

The provisions of 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 38, s. 2 (amended by 1 & 2 Vict. c. 107, s. 1, and 3 & 4 Vict. c. 60, s. 13), as to the patronage of churches or chapels built under it, or 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 72, were these:—The bishop may, by writing under his hand and seal, declare that the patronage of such church or chapel, when all the conditions have been complied with (h), shall be in the persons building, or purchasing and endowing, their heirs and assigns, or in such trustees, being members of the church, as they shall appoint, and in such future trustees as may be appointed, or in some ecclesiastical person or body corporate; provided that the number of trustees, except in some particular specified cases, shall not exceed five. By 14 & 15 Vict. c. 97, s. 14, however, this power is taken away from the bishop, and it would now appear to be vested, if at all, in the commissioners.

By sect. 5 of 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 38, in all cases not therein-before provided for, where any persons declare their intention of endowing any chapel already built or intended to be built by them with some permanent endowment to the satisfaction of the commissioners, they may, by instrument under their seal (sect. 19), declare the patronage to be in such persons, their heirs and assigns, or such persons, ecclesiastical person or body corporate as they shall appoint; or if the chapel is built by subscription, then in such persons, &c. as the major part in value of such subscribers (being subscribers of 50*l.* at least (i)) shall at any time appoint (k): provided that, except in certain particular cases, the number of patrons does not exceed five. But before the commissioners can so declare, an application in writing must be made to them setting forth certain particulars, copies of which are to be sent to the patron and incumbent of the parish. By sect. 9, the patronage shall, upon consecration, immediately vest in the patron already mentioned by the name and style specified in the sentence of consecration. By sect. 15, provision is made for cases where the crown is the patron of the original parish.

By 14 & 15 Vict. c. 97, s. 7, all restrictions as to population contained in 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 38, are removed, and the commissioners (with the bishop) may, in all cases where a church or chapel is built and endowed to their satisfaction and a com-

Previous, however, to any such declaration being made by the commissioners, an application in writing must be made to them setting out certain particulars; and copies of such application must be sent to the patron and incumbent of the parish and of any other parish affected (l).

The 14 & 15 Vict. c. 97 makes the following provision for the establishment of an endowment or repair fund:—

Commissioners may accept, for the purpose of an endowment and a repair fund, lands, &c. and money.

Sect. 8. "The exemption from the provisions of the Mortmain Acts, and the restrictions applicable to such exemption contained in" 3 & 4 Vict. c. 60, "shall be applicable to any endowment or grant or conveyance for the purpose of a repair fund of any such church or building; and, subject as aforesaid, the said commissioners may accept, by way of endowment and for the purpose of a repair fund for such church or building, such permanent provision as they may consider satisfactory, consisting of all or any of the following descriptions of property, namely, land, tithes, rent-charges and other tenements or hereditaments, money charged on land or invested in the funds; and such endowment and repair fund shall be exclusive of and in addition to the pew rents (if any) of such church or building; and as regards any endowments to be made for the purpose of obtaining the patronage as aforesaid, the same may be vested in such trustees, not exceeding five, as the said commissioners direct; and such trusts thereof, and for the sale or conversion thereof, and reinvestment of the produce either in land or in government securities, with powers of granting building or other leases, and all other powers for the due administration of such endowments and repair fund, and appointment of new trustees, may be declared as the said commissioners think fit" (m).

6 & 7 Vict. c. 37.

The act 6 & 7 Vict. c. 37, is directed rather to the formation of new parishes, and to the endowment of the ministers thereof, than to the building of churches; but by sect. 24 it is expressly provided that the church building commissioners may make grants in aid of the erection of the church of any district formed under the act; and by sect. 22, power is given to private persons to give benefactions "for or towards providing any church or chapel for the purposes and subject to the provisions of this act" (n).

Patronage under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 37.

By sect. 20, the patronage of any new parish or district formed under the act may be assigned to any ecclesiastical corporation, the universities of Oxford, Cambridge, or Durham, or any college therein, or any persons or their nominees, on the condition of contributing to an endowment for the minister or a church. Unless or until such an assignment of patronage is made, the patronage is to vest in the crown and the bishop alternately, the bishop first (o).

By 19 & 20 Vict. c. 104, s. 16, the provisions of the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 37, s. 20, shall be extended so as to apply "to the case of the patronage of any church or chapel to which a district shall belong," and the patronage of which is ex officio vested in the incumbent of the original parish, and to any new parish made under this act, or any parish having neither incumbent nor patron, or to any benefice in the patronage of the Crown, the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster or Duke of Cornwall, or any corporation; provided that the permanent endowment does not exceed 100*l.* a year, or the income from all sources 250*l.* a year. This patronage may not, however, be assigned for any less consideration than the building of a church and endowing it with 45*l.* a year, or an endowment alone of 150*l.*; and the assignments may only be made with the consent of the patron, where the crown or any corporation is such patron, of the bishop in parishes where there is neither incumbent nor patron, and, where the patronage is in the incumbent of a benefice itself in private patronage, with the consent of the bishop and after one month's notice to such patron, who may if he pleases require compensation for the diminished value of his advowson (p). Until any such provision is made the patronage may, if the commissioners think fit, be vested in the incumbent of the old parish during his incumbency (q). Where the commissioners under the last act, or 6 & 7 Vict. c. 37, vest the patronage in the nominees of any body or person, such nominees shall not exceed five, and shall be named in the deed, and shall sign declarations that they are members of the church; and provision is made for the appointment of new trustees (r).

Extended by 19 & 20 Vict.
c. 104.

Inasmuch as the sale or assignment of ecclesiastical patronage holden by any spiritual person in virtue of his dignity or spiritual office was made illegal by 3 & 4 Vict. c. 113, s. 42 (s), it is specially provided by 9 & 10 Vict. c. 88, that this provision shall not extend to make assignments or agreements to assign patronage under 1 Geo. 1, st. 2, c. 10, or 8 & 9 Vict. c. 70, or any act recited therein, illegal (s).

the annual income of such benefice from all sources shall, when calculated upon an average of the three years immediately preceding such augmentation, amount to one hundred and fifty pounds, no subsequent sale or assignment or other disposition of such patronage by any body or persons whatsoever, for any valuable consideration whatever, shall be made until thirty years next after such transfer, unless the entire proceeds be legally secured to the further permanent augmentation of such benefice, but every such sale, assignment, or other disposition of such patronage shall be illegal, and every presentation, collation, admission, institution or induction thereupon shall be void, and the right of patronage of such benefice shall thereupon for that turn lapse to the bishop: provided also, that when the patronage of any church or chapel to which a district shall have been assigned is vested in the incumbent of the original parish, district, or place out of which such district has been taken, the person holding the incumbency of such original parish, district or place at the time of the passing this act shall not be deprived of the patronage of such church or chapel by any assignment of the same during his incumbency without his consent."

By 32 & 33 Vict. c. 94, s. 12, "No contract, agreement, or arrangement under any of the provisions of the Church Building Acts or New Parishes Acts relative to the exercise by, or the vesting in, or the assignment to any body or person of the right of patronage or of presentation to any church or chapel, in consideration of such body or person erecting or enlarging or contributing towards or procuring or agreeing to procure the erecting or the enlarging of such church, or permanently endowing or contributing towards, or procuring or agreeing to procure the permanent endowment of such church, or of its incumbent or minister, shall be deemed corrupt or simoniacal."

Sect. 13. "Every instrument whereby any declaration or assignment, or other disposition of any right of patronage or of presentation to any church or chapel has already been made, or shall hereafter be made under any of the provisions of the said acts, or in pursuance of any such contract or agreement as aforesaid, shall be deemed to have been and shall be good; and every presentation, institution, or induction which has already taken place, or shall hereafter take place in pursuance thereof, or of any such contract, agreement, or arrangement as aforesaid, shall be deemed to have been and shall be good, and no penalty or disability under either the canon law or the common or statute law, shall be deemed to have been or shall be thereby incurred."

With respect to the churches built under any of the acts which have been mentioned, provision was made by 3 Geo. 4, c. 72, s. 30 (t), for the substitution of the new church thus built as the parish church in the place of the old parish church, in certain cases and under certain conditions.

(t) Repealed by 36 & 37 Vict. c. 91.

By 1 & 2 Vict. c. 107, ss. 16, 17, the commissioners, with the consent of the bishop, the patron of the parish church, and the vestry, may direct that any church or chapel in the parish shall become the parish church, and the old parish church a chapel of ease, so that the new church shall have all the rights and privileges of the old one, and be the church of the incumbent of the parish, and in the gift of the patrons of the old parish church.

By 2 & 3 Vict. c. 49, s. 9, however, these powers shall not extend to enable the commissioners to make any chapel, built under 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 38, or any church or chapel, the patronage of which is in other hands than that of the old parish church, into the parish church without the consent of the patron and incumbent of such church or chapel.

By 8 & 9 Vict. c. 70, it is enacted as follows :—

SECT. 1. “Notwithstanding any limitation or restriction or other thing contained in” 3 Geo. 4, c. 72, “where a new church has been already built or shall hereafter be built in any parish or district parish, or ancient or parochial chapelry, and where the bishop of the diocese and the patron and incumbent of such parish, district parish, or ancient or parochial chapelry shall at any time certify to her majesty’s commissioners for building new churches that it will be for the convenience of such parish, district parish, or ancient or parochial chapelry that such new church, being duly consecrated, should be substituted for the old or existing church situate therein, it shall be lawful for the said commissioners, by an instrument under their common seal, with the consent of such bishop, patron, and incumbent, under their hands and seals, to declare that such new church, being duly consecrated, shall be substituted for such old or existing church, and to transfer the endowments, emoluments, or rights belonging to such old or existing church, or to the incumbent or minister thereof, to such new church, and to the incumbent or minister thereof, and his successors; and it shall be lawful in every such case for the trustees (if any) of such old or existing church, or of any rights, emoluments, or endowment belonging thereto, or to the incumbent or minister thereof, and they are hereby required, and indemnified for so doing, to transfer the same according to the direction of the said commissioners; and immediately from and after such transfer all glebe lands, tithes, and other endowments, emoluments, fees, and profits, and every matter or thing, whether real or personal, and all rights and privileges wherewith any such old or existing church is or was, at the time of such substitution, endowed, or to which the incumbent or minister thereof was or is entitled, shall be vested in and belong to the incumbent or minister for the time being of such new church, and his successors, in as ample a manner as the incumbent or minister of the old or existing church might have enjoyed the same if such transfer had not taken place, and the incumbent or minister of such old or existing church shall thereupon be, to all intents and purposes, the rector, vicar, perpetual curate, or minister, as the case may be, of such new church, instead of rector, vicar, perpetual curate, or minister of such old or existing church, without any presentation, institution, induction, collation, or other form of law being had, observed, or required; and such new church shall thereupon have the same rights and privileges as such old or existing church, and such offices of the church as were performed and celebrated in such old or existing church shall be performed and celebrated in such new church, and such new church shall be to all intents and purposes in lieu of the old or existing church; and at any time within six months after the substitution of such new church for the old or existing church the bishop of the diocese may of his own mere motion issue, or, if thereunto required by any person claiming to hold a pew or seat free of rent in such old or existing church by faculty or prescription, shall issue, a commission under his hand and seal, directed to the archdeacon of the archdeaconry in which such old or existing church shall be situate, and to any two incumbents of parishes situate within such archdeaconry, and to any two laymen nominated by the churchwardens of such old or existing church, who are hereby required to nominate for such purpose two fit persons not claiming any such pew or seat as aforesaid; and such commission shall direct the commissioners thereby appointed to inquire into the rights of persons, if any, who claim to hold any such pews or seats as aforesaid; and the said commissioners, or any three or more of them, of whom the said archdeacon shall be one, shall, as soon as conveniently may be, proceed to examine into such claims, after giving fourteen days' previous notice thereof, by affixing a copy of such commission on the church door of such new church; and such notice, signed by such archdeacon, shall specify the day and time and place on which such examination is to be made; and after making an examination into such claims the commissioners so appointed, or the majority of them, shall under their hands transmit in writing to the said bishop the names and residences of the persons who have substantiated their claims to such pews or seats, and if the said bishop is satisfied therewith he shall assign, under his hand and seal, to such parties respectively, convenient pews or seats in such new church, and such seats so assigned shall be held and enjoyed by the parties entitled to the same in as free and ample a manner as the pews or seats to which they had or would have been entitled in such old or existing church; and if any party shall find himself aggrieved by the finding of such commission the bishop of the diocese shall have power to afford redress, by allotting to such party seats in such new church, if the justice of the case shall in his judgment require it (u); and the old or existing church, if such bishop shall think fit, may thereupon be wholly or partly pulled down, under a faculty to be granted for that purpose; and the said bishop shall in that case take care that all tombstones, monuments, and monumental inscriptions in such church so pulled down are as far as may be preserved by the churchwardens, at the expense of the parish, or if it shall seem fit to the said bishop the same shall be transferred to the church so substituted as aforesaid, at the expense of the said parish or district parish, or ancient or parochial chapelry, as the case may be; provided that in case such new church shall have been built wholly or in part out of the funds placed at the disposal of her Majesty's said commissioners under the provisions of the hereinbefore recited acts (x) or any of them, and such transfer shall have been made, rents for the pews or seats in such new church shall only be fixed by her Majesty's said commissioners under the provisions of such acts for that number of seats therein which shall exceed the number of seats provided in such old or existing church: provided always, that nothing herein contained shall authorize the substitution of any new church in lieu of the old or existing church as aforesaid, when the advowson of or right of nomination to such new church shall belong to any other body or person than to the patron of such old or existing church, without the consents in writing of the patron and incumbent or minister of such new church."

By sect. 2, the incumbent of the old church and his successors shall be incumbents of the new church, and the patronage shall be in the patrons of the old church.

Sect. 4. "Where any part of the cathedral church has been accustomed to be used as a parochial church, it shall be lawful for her Majesty's said church building commissioners, with consent of the ecclesiastical commissioners for England, and with the consents of the bishop of the diocese and of the dean and chapter of such cathedral church, and with the consents also of the patron and of the incumbent or minister of such church, to transfer the rights, emoluments, tithes, and other endowments (if any) as hereinbefore particularly specified, belonging to the incumbent of such church, to any new church which has been or hereafter may be built, and which is situate in the parish where such part of such cathedral is, or is deemed to be, the parish church; and in case of such transfer the same provisions hereinbefore contained, touching the rights and privileges, succession and appointment of the incumbent or minister of such new church, and the performance of the offices therein, and the examination into the claims of parties claiming to hold pews or seats by faculty or prescription in the old parish church, and the assignment of pews or seats to those who have substantiated such claims as hereinbefore mentioned, shall apply to such new church, which after such transfer shall become the parish church in lieu of the former parish church so belonging to such cathedral; and such new church, and the incumbent or minister thereof, shall, from and immediately after such transfer, be and remain subject in all respects to the same ordinary and other

Incumbent and patronage.

Where any part of a cathedral church has been accustomed to be used as a parochial church, a transfer of the rights, endowments, &c. belonging to such parochial church may, with certain consents, be made by the church building commissioners to a new church; and the parochial church shall thenceforth be under the same control and subject to the same laws as to repairs as exist with respect to the cathedral church.

ecclesiastical jurisdiction and superintendence as the old parochial church and the incumbent or minister thereof respectively were or otherwise would have been subject to; and the part of the cathedral church so vacated shall thenceforth remain and be deemed to be part of the cathedral church itself, in the same manner and as fully as if it had never been used as a parochial church, and shall thenceforth be subject to the same control and superintendence, and to the same laws as to repairs, as exist and are in force with respect to the cathedral church itself; and the parish shall thenceforth be exempt from all further liability (if any) to keep the same in repair: provided always, that the party or parties liable to the repair of the said part of the said cathedral church, whilst it was so used as a parochial church, shall continue to be liable to the repairs of such new church."

By 32 & 33 Vict. c. 94, s. 8, the bishop in granting a faculty for wholly pulling down a church under sect. 1 of this last act may make provision for the use or preservation of the site of the church.

Churchyards. Attached to the churches and chapels, for building which so much provision has been made by the legislature, are churchyards and chapelyards. Provision for purchasing land for the purposes of churchyards and chapelyards was made by 58 Geo. 3, c. 45, s. 33, 59 Geo. 3, c. 134, s. 22, and 3 Geo. 4, c. 72, ss. 1—4, already cited; also by sects. 37 and 38 of 59 Geo. 3, c. 134, and sect. 26 of 3 Geo. 4, c. 72.

Outside parish bounds. Under the act of 59 Geo. 3, c. 134, s. 22, the commissioners might grant money for purchasing cemeteries outside the bounds of the parish; and by 8 & 9 Vict. c. 70, s. 14, the commissioners were empowered to declare that any such cemeteries, whether purchased under grants from them or not, if conveyed to them, were part of the parish for the use of which they were bought. This act was extended by 9 & 10 Vict. c. 68, s. 1, to all parishes and districts.

Cemetery chapel. It was by this last act further provided that, where a cemetery was bought for more than one parish, the commissioners might order any chapel built thereon to be used for each of the parishes to which the cemetery belonged (s). The freehold of a chapel so built is by 14 & 15 Vict. c. 97, s. 28, to be in the bishop.

Transfer of cemeteries to burial boards. The provisions in 20 & 21 Vict. c. 81, s. 7, enabling cemeteries made under the Church Building Acts, to be transferred to burial boards in certain cases, have been already mentioned (t).

Relation to Burial Acts. It appears that burial grounds purchased and consecrated under the Church Building Acts are not "cemeteries established under the authority of any act of parliament" within the meaning of sect. 5 of 16 & 17 Vict. c. 134, which exempts such cemeteries from the usual provisions for closing burial grounds in towns by order in council (u).

It may be here mentioned that by 58 Geo. 3, c. 45, s. 80, no grave is allowed under or within twenty feet of any church built under that act; but this provision does not extend to vaults.

By 5 Geo. 4, c. 103, s. 15, the trustees or churchwardens may sell the vaults under chapels built in virtue of the provisions of this act.

As to the officers of new churches, parish clerks, and sextons, and the rights of these and of the parish clerks and sextons of the mother parish, the law will be found already stated (x).

The law as to churchwardens of new parishes will be found already treated of in the chapter on churchwardens, and further in the next chapter (y).

The subject of seats or pews and pew rents in newly-built churches or chapels still remains.

By 19 & 20 Vict. c. 104, s. 5 (z), residents in new parishes or districts who claim seats in the church of such new parish do thereby surrender rights to an equal number of sittings in the old church.

Pew rents were authorized to be taken by the older Building Acts, 58 Geo. 3, c. 45, s. 62 (a), and 59 Geo. 3, c. 134, ss. 26, 27 (b).

They were also authorized by the acts for enabling private persons to build churches and chapels (5 Geo. 4, c. 103, and 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 38), and by 1 & 2 Vict. c. 107, s. 18, and 19 & 20 Vict. c. 104, s. 6. But later acts (14 & 15 Vict. c. 97, and 32 & 33 Vict. c. 94) have made provisions for the cesser of pew rents. And by 35 & 36 Vict. c. 49, the ecclesiastical commissioners may accept sites for churches where pew rents are prohibited.

The whole matter will be found treated of with the general law as to church seats (b).

Note. The earliest division of the parish of Bishopwearmouth was in 1719 when the parish of Sunderland near the sea was created by a special (local) Act of Parliament. The next division was in 1844, when boundaries were assigned to the parishes of St Thomas (Bp's) & St Andrew Southend.

CHAPTER VI.

THE DIVISION OF PARISHES.

General law
as to this division.

^{30 May, 1818} BEFORE 58 Geo. 3, c. 45, there was no legal machinery by which a parish could be divided. The 1 Geo. 1, stat. 2, c. 10, provided, it is true, for making curacies augmented by Queen Anne's Bounty into perpetual curacies (sect. 4) (a); but it was especially provided (sect. 5) that this should not affect the cure of souls in the parish. Local or private acts for dividing parishes were occasionally passed. At one time fifty new churches with parishes were erected in the metropolis, by 9 Anne, c. 17; 10 Anne, c. 20, and 1 Geo. 1, c. 23.

Provided for in Church Building
Acts.

It was, however, a part of the scheme of church extension which occasioned the Church Building Acts to divide the old parishes where necessary into new and more manageable ecclesiastical divisions. Hence it happens that generally, though not universally, the same statutes treat of building churches and of new parishes, though the subjects are in reality very distinct, and much of the difficulty in which the old law of church extension is involved has arisen from confusing them.

Classification of acts.

There are three distinct groups of acts under which parishes may be divided:—

(A.) The early Church Building Acts, ^{Dated 30 May, 1818} 58 Geo. 3, c. 45, 59 Geo. 3, c. 134, and 3 Geo. 4, c. 72.

(B.) The acts enabling private persons to build churches or chapels, 5 Geo. 4, c. 103; 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 38; and 14 & 15 Vict. c. 97.

(C.) The acts for making new parishes through the agency of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, 6 & 7 Vict. c. 37; and 7 & 8 Vict. c. 94.

Many of these acts received amendment or extension from other subsidiary acts, which have already been cited in the previous chapter, and will be again cited in this.

(D.) 19 & 20 Vict. c. 104, and 32 & 33 Vict. c. 94; by which two acts alone the three groups were in any way brought into unity.

Annexation of districts.

With reference to this subject, the provisions as to the annexation of districts, hamlets, &c. to benefices, which have been already set forth, should be also referred to (b).

Ways of division under earlier acts.

(A.) The early Church Building Acts contemplated five ways in which the pastoral superintendence of the inhabitants in overgrown parishes might be increased: (1) by division of a parish into distinct parishes; (2) by division into district parishes; (3) by division into district chapelries; (4) by the creation of consolidated chapelries; (5) by the support of chapels without districts.

(b) Vide supra, pp. 416—418.

(1.) As to this class, by 58 Geo. 3, c. 45, s. 16, 'the commissioners' may 'with the consent of the bishop' apply to the patron 'for his consent to a division of the parish into distinct parishes, and, on the consent of the patron being granted, may represent the whole matter to the Queen in Council, setting forth the bounds by which it is proposed to divide the parish; and the Queen in Council may make an order effecting such division, which shall not however take place till after the avoidance of his living by the existing incumbent of the parish. By sects. 17, 19, each distinct parish shall be a rectory, vicarage, donative or perpetual curacy like the old parish, and the incumbent of each distinct parish shall have the same power of recovering the fruits of his benefice as the incumbent of the old parish had; but by sect. 20 any donative or perpetual curacy shall be subject to the law of lapse, and the incumbent thereof shall not be removable at the pleasure of the patron (c).

Distinct parishes.

58 Geo. 3, c. 45.

30 May 1818

By sect. 22, the boundaries of such distinct parishes are to be marked out; by sect. 23, and 3 & 4 Vict. c. 60, s. 6 (d), these boundaries may be altered from time to time by order in council.

Boundaries of.

By 59 Geo. 3, c. 134, ss. 8, 9, the commissioners may, with the consent of the bishop and patron, apportion the glebe, tithes and other endowments between the distinct parishes, without regard to the fact of such glebe, tithes and endowments being locally situate or arising within or without any of the new parishes; and they may at the same time apportion, with the consent of the bishop, the charges on the old parishes or the incumbents thereof.

59 Geo. 3, c. 134.

By 58 Geo. 3, c. 45, s. 26, the church of any such distinct parish shall not be holden with the church of the parish out of which such distinct parish has been taken; and by 59 Geo. 3, c. 134, s. 12, the churches of such distinct parishes shall after consecration be distinct benefices and churches, but during the incumbency of the existing incumbent they shall be served by licensed stipendiary curates.

58 Geo. 3, c. 45; 59 Geo. 3, c. 134. Tenure of benefice.

By 3 Geo. 4, c. 72, s. 16, the commissioners may, with the consent of the ordinary and patron and incumbent, or in case of the refusal of the incumbent, upon the next avoidance, convert a "district chapelry" into a distinct parish, where a house of residence and competent maintenance is provided for the incumbent of such new distinct parish, and compensation is made for all fees, offerings and dues which by such conversion are lost to the incumbent of the old parish. Such conversion is to be under 3 Geo. 4, c. 72. District chapelry made distinct parish.

(c) Sect. 20 is repealed, subject to savings, by 36 & 37 Vict. c. 91.

By 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 38, s. 23, where there are chapels of ease having chapelries, townships or districts supposed to belong thereto, if an endowment be provided for the minister of such chapel, the bishop may, with consent of patron and incumbent, declare such chapel separate from the parish church, and the chapelry, township or district a distinct parish. By 1 & 2 Vict. c. 107, s. 7, this extends as well to chapels hereafter to be built as to chapels in existence before the act.

By 8 & 9 Vict. c. 70, s. 5, "Where at the passing of this act there is not any consecrated church in one of two parishes which may have been for thirty years next before the passing of this act united, or reputed to have been united for ecclesiastical purposes, and where a new church has been or shall hereafter be built wholly or in part out of any funds at the disposal of the commissioners in the said parish in which there is not any such church as aforesaid, the whole of such parish may after the consecration of such new church be disunited for ecclesiastical purposes from the other parish, and may be formed into a separate and distinct parish, for such purposes, with the same consents, in the same manner, and under and subject to the same provisions and consequences, as are mentioned and contained in the hereinbefore recited acts (c) or any of them or in this act, relative to the formation of a distinct and separate parish, when the same is formed out of one parish not united with another parish."

District parishes.
58 Geo. 3,
c. 45.

(2.) As to "district parishes." By 58 Geo. 3, c. 45, s. 21, the commissioners may, where they think it more expedient to divide a parish into ecclesiastical districts, with consent of the bishop, represent the matter to the Queen in Council, and the Queen in Council may order such division.

The provisions in 58 Geo. 3, c. 45, ss. 22, 23, and 3 & 4 Vict. c. 60, s. 6, as to boundaries of distinct parishes, apply equally to these districts.

By 58 Geo. 3, c. 45, s. 24, on the boundaries being marked out such districts become "district parishes," and the churches thereof "district parish churches," "for all purposes of ecclesiastical worship and performance of ecclesiastical duties." By sect. 25, these churches are perpetual curacies.

59 Geo. 3,
c. 134.

By 59 Geo. 3, c. 134, s. 19, no chapel situate in a district parish which shall not be made the church of such district parish shall be a perpetual curacy.

58 Geo. 3,
c. 45.

By 58 Geo. 3, c. 45, s. 30, the division of a parish into district parishes shall not affect any glebe, tithes or other endowments, which shall continue to belong to the incumbent of the old parish, and for all these purposes the old parish shall remain as if undivided.

s. 12, as to the separation of the benefices, apply as well to district parish churches as to distinct parish churches.

By 8 & 9 Vict. c. 70, s. 15, "Where any district parish has been or shall hereafter be formed, under the provisions of" 58 Geo. 3, c. 45, "it shall be lawful for the incumbent of the parish out of which such district parish shall have been formed to resign voluntarily, with the consent of the bishop of the diocese, the church of such district parish, and such resignation shall have the same effect as the avoidance or resignation of the parish church, with respect to the performance of the offices of the church in the church of such district parish; and thereupon such district parish, and the church thereof, shall be a perpetual curacy and benefice, and shall be subject to the same laws as are in force with respect to district parishes where an avoidance or resignation of the church of the original parish shall have taken place."

8 & 9 Vict.
c. 70.

Church of district parish may be resigned by incumbent of original parish; such resignation to operate in same manner as avoidance of church of original parish.

By 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 72, s. 2, till a burial ground is provided for the district parish, persons dying within it may be interred in the burial ground of the old parish.

By 1 & 2 Vict. c. 107, s. 10, whenever an endowed church or chapel has been augmented under Queen Anne's Bounty and the patronage thereof acquired in accordance with the acts relating thereto, the commissioners may, with consent of bishop, patron and incumbent, make it a district parish (d).

c. 107.

Queen Anne's Bounty.

(3.) As to "district chapelries." These were originally created under 59 Geo. 3, c. 134, s. 16; but the provisions contained in this section have been much altered by 2 & 3 Vict. c. 49, ss. 1—4, 3 & 4 Vict. c. 60, s. 1, and 8 & 9 Vict. c. 70, s. 17. The joint effect of these acts is that the commissioners may, in like manner and with the same consents as in the case of "district parishes," assign a district to any chapel built or to be built; and such district is to be under the care of the curate appointed to serve such chapel, who is to be nominated by the incumbent, except in cases where the patronage is otherwise vested (e). Such chapels may be augmented by the governors of Queen Anne's Bounty; district chapelries may be formed out of former district chapelries, or out of such district chapelries and other parts of the original parish or any extra-parochial place. The curate is now to be a perpetual curate, with perpetual succession and capacity to hold lands and tithes, with exclusive cure of souls, and not subject to the incumbent of the old parish; but the commissioners may, with consent of the bishop, determine what proportion of the fees for marriages, baptisms, churchings and burials shall be assigned to the curate; and it seems that the incumbent of the old parish receives the Easter offerings.

the patron and incumbent of any parish to be affected, may recommend the Queen in Council to alter, and the Queen in Council may alter, the bounds of such chapelry by adding to it portions of any adjacent parishes.

Fees.

District chapelries are not "districts or divisions" of parishes within the 10th section of 59 Geo. 3, c. 134, which gives the fees in such districts or divisions to the clerk and sexton thereof; and, on the contrary, the clerk of the old parish is entitled to the fees in a district chapelry (f).

Tuckness v. Alexander.
(Parochial chapels.)

In the case of Tuckness v. Alexander, it was holden that, under these provisions, an ancient parochial chapelry might be divided into district chapelries, and one of such chapelries assigned to the ancient parochial chapel itself, though the effect of such an assignment was to take away the vested rights of the incumbent of the parochial chapel throughout the old chapelry (g).

Fitzgerald v. Fitzpatrick.

In the case of Fitzgerald v. Fitzpatrick (h), the circumstances were these:—

By a deed of 1840 a certain chapel was vested in trustees, upon trust to permit the same to be used as a chapel-of-ease, dependent upon the parish church, and to permit the vicar for the time being or his curates to officiate as ministers thereof, and to allow the vicar and churchwardens to let the pews, and to permit the churchwardens to receive the pew rents and other emoluments for the benefit of the vicar, after paying the necessary expenses; and the vicar and churchwardens were authorized to appoint the clerk, pew-openers and other officers of the chapel. By an Order in Council, dated October, 1860, the chapel was constituted a district chapelry, and it was ordered that marriages, baptisms, &c. should be solemnized and performed in the chapel, and that the fees should belong to the minister of such chapel for the time being, subject to a proviso that so long as the existing vicar remained vicar the fees should be paid to him, but the order did not mention or affect to deal with the pew rents. It was holden, that the effect of the order in council was to withdraw the chapel from all the purposes included in the trust deed; to constitute the district chapelry a benefice; and to deprive the vicar and churchwardens of the parish church of all right to receive the pew rents, or to nominate the officers of the church. Whether after the creation of the district chapelry the pews of the chapel could lawfully be let, and the pew rents received for the benefit of the minister of the chapel, was said to be doubtful.

Consolidated chapelries.

(4.) As to "consolidated chapelries." The only difference between these chapelries and district chapelries in their origin is, that these chapelries are formed out of portions of many parishes, "where a population is collected together at the extremities of and locally situate in parishes or extra-parochial places contiguous to each other. . . .”

The manner in which these consolidated chapelries are to be formed is regulated by 59 Geo. 3, c. 134, s. 6, and 8 & 9 Vict. c. 70, s. 9. The commissioners, with the consent of the bishop or bishops and the patrons of the various parishes or extra-parochial places (i), make a representation to the Queen in Council setting forth the proposed boundaries of the consolidated chapelry, and that there is or is about to be a church therein (j), and the Queen in Council orders such consolidated chapelry to be formed. Either a chapel may be built for the consolidated chapelry, or a consecrated church already built within the limits of the district may be made the chapel thereof. Unless such church or chapel be already a rectory or vicarage, the benefice is to be a perpetual curacy—with exclusive cure of souls and a right to all fees and offerings—and subject to the jurisdiction of the bishop and archdeacon within whose diocese and archdeaconry the altar or communion table of the chapel (k) is situate (l).

The patrons of the various parishes and extra-parochial places out of which the chapelry is taken are to agree as to the future patronage of the chapel and benefice.

By 14 & 15 Vict. c. 97, s. 19, consolidated chapelries may be formed out of new parishes or districts as they may be out of old ones.

59 Geo. 3, c. 134, s. 6, required the enrolment of the boundaries in chancery; but it was holden by the Court of Queen’s Bench, in the case of Regina v. The Overseers of South Weald (m), that this clause was substantially repealed by 8 & 9 Vict. c. 70, s. 9. It is now formally repealed by 36 & 37 Vict. c. 91.

It should here be observed, that by 1 & 2 Vict. c. 107, s. 12, a “distinct parish” or “district parish” may be afterwards divided into other distinct or district parishes or into district chapelries.

(5.) As to chapels without districts: by 58 Geo. 3, c. 45, s. 21, the Church Building Commissioners might, if they thought fit, make grants to chapels to be served by curates to the incumbent of the parish; by 59 Geo. 3, c. 134, s. 19, these chapels are not to become perpetual curacies; but by 3 Geo. 4, c. 72, s. 22, the commissioners, with the consent of the bishop and patron, may apportion glebe, tithes and other emoluments “for the benefit of the incumbent of or person serving any such chapel.” By 8 &

(i) Or the major part, 14 & 15 Vict. c. 97, s. 20.

(j) It used to be necessary also to set forth the proposed patrons of the consolidated chapelry; but this is not so now; see 34 & 35 Vict. c. 82.

(m) 5 B. & S. p. 391; 10 Jur., N. S. p. 1099.

9 Vict. c. 70, s. 18, the licence of the curate serving such chapel is not to be made void by the avoidance of the parish church.

Ways of division under 5 Geo. 4, c. 103, and 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 38.

(B.) As to divisions of parishes formed under 5 Geo. 4, c. 103, and 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 38, churches built under the former act may, by sects. 16, 17, be made into district churches at once by the commissioners with consent of the majority of the subscribers, bishop, patron and incumbent; and become so in any case after forty years, if a district is assigned to them by order in council.

Assignment of district.

Sects. 10, 11 of the latter act, as amended by 14 & 15 Vict. c. 97, ss. 14, 15, provide that the commissioners, with consent of the bishop, "and also with the consent of the patron and incumbent" (or patrons and incumbents, if more than one parish is affected) "in all other cases in which additional churches or chapels shall have been already built and endowed," shall proceed to assign, except in special circumstances, a district to every such church, and such district shall be under the care of the minister of the church "so far only as regards the visitation of the sick and other pastoral duties, and shall not be deemed a district for any other purpose whatsoever." Provision may, however, be made, if they think fit, for solemnizing baptisms, churchings, and burials. The boundaries of such district shall be registered in the registry of the diocese, and may, by 11 & 12 Vict. c. 37, s. 2, from time to time be altered.

1 & 2 Vict. c. 107.

By 1 & 2 Vict. c. 107, s. 10, such a district may be assigned and the same may be made a district parish, in all cases where a church has been built by subscription and has been subsequently augmented by Queen Anne's Bounty (m); and by 2 & 3 Vict. c. 49, s. 10, the minister of any chapel with a district has exclusive cure of souls within the district.

2 & 3 Vict. c. 49.

1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 38.

By 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 38, ss. 12, 13, such a church is a perpetual curacy, and may not be holden with the original church of the parish, or with any other benefice.

11 & 12 Vict. c. 37.

By 11 & 12 Vict. c. 37, s. 1, a district formed under the preceding act may be considered as an original parish for the purpose of forming out of it a district parish, district chapelry or consolidated chapelry.

8 & 9 Vict. c. 70.
As to stipendiary curate.

By 1 & 2 Vict. c. 107, s. 13, the licence of the curate appointed to serve a district church or chapel is not to be rendered void by the avoidance of the parish church: and this is extended by 2 & 3 Vict. c. 49, s. 11, and 8 & 9 Vict. c. 70, s. 18, to all stipendiary curates of district chapelries, district parish churches, and new churches built or assisted out of funds belonging to the commissioners.

New parishes formed by ecclesiastical commissioners.

6 & 7 Vict. c. 37; 19 & 20 Vict. c. 104.

(C.) As to the acts for making new parishes through the agency of the ecclesiastical commissioners. By 6 & 7 Vict. c. 37, s. 9, amended by 19 & 20 Vict. c. 104, s. 1, the ecclesiastical commissioners may frame a scheme, and the Queen in Council upon such scheme may, with consent of the bishop, set apart any part or parts of any parishes, chapelries, district or extra-parochial places, properly marked out, and constitute them a separate district.

Before, however, the scheme is laid before the Queen in Council a draft of it must be sent to the incumbents and patrons affected, in order that they may have an opportunity of making objections to it. Provision is made by 7 & 8 Vict. c. 94, ss. 4, 5, 6, and 32 & 33 Vict. c. 94, s. 11, for the service of the scheme on the incumbents and patrons in peculiar cases. Such district need not contain within it any church or chapel at the time; or if it does contain one, it may, by 19 & 20 Vict. c. 104, s. 2, be constituted in the scheme the church of such district.

Service on parties interested.

Church.

The commissioners must provide an endowment for the minister, or, by 19 & 20 Vict. c. 104, s. 3, there must be reason to expect one from other sources, to the amount of 150*l.* a year.

Endowment or expected endowment.

By 6 & 7 Vict. c. 37, s. 10, and 7 & 8 Vict. c. 94, s. 8, there must be a map of the district annexed to the scheme and registered.

Map.

By 6 & 7 Vict. c. 37, ss. 11, 12, upon such district being constituted, a minister is to be licensed (n) for the district, who shall have power to perform "all such pastoral duties appertaining to the office of a minister, according to the rights and usages of the Church of England, . . . as shall be specified and set forth in his licence," and where a building has been licensed for divine worship, "such services and offices as shall be specified and set forth in the same or any further licence . . . ;" and he shall so far have the cure of souls (o). The minister is to be styled "The minister of the district of ———," and shall have a perpetual succession (p).

6 & 7 Vict. c. 37.
Ministers.

By sects. 13, 14, the bishop may license a temporary place of worship (q): but otherwise the old parish shall not be affected, until a church is consecrated for the district.

Place of worship till church built.

Upon consecration of a church, however, by sects. 15, 16, the district becomes a new parish, and all the offices of the church may be celebrated in the church thereof, and the minister becomes a perpetual curate, with a right to all fees, dues and Easter offerings within his district.

New parish formed, when.

By 47 & 48 Vict. c. 65, s. 2, if a church has not been provided or allotted for a district formed under these acts, the district may be dissolved by an order in council made upon a scheme of the ecclesiastical commissioners with the consent of the bishop; and the scheme may provide for the return or reverting of the endowment and for other incidental matters.

47 & 48 Vict. c. 65.

By 6 & 7 Vict. c. 37, s. 19, the ecclesiastical commissioners may, out of their endowment funds, not only provide the endowments for the ministers of these new parishes, but also make com-

Boundaries.

By the joint effect of 7 & 8 Vict. c. 94, s. 9, 13 & 14 Vict. c. 94, s. 27, 32 & 33 Vict. c. 94, s. 1, and of 47 & 48 Vict. c. 65, the boundaries of these new parishes or districts may be altered from time to time.

14 & 15 Vict. c. 97.

Subdivision.

By 14 & 15 Vict. c. 97, s. 16, a new parish created under the foregoing provisions may be treated as an original parish for the purpose of any of the Church Building Acts or of the act itself. By sect. 21 of the same act, where parishes cannot be brought under the provisions of any of the acts for dividing parishes by reason of local acts affecting the parish, the commissioners may override the local act, upon an application by the patron, incumbent and vestry.

35 & 36 Vict. c. 14.

New cures to form part of one diocese only.

By 35 & 36 Vict. c. 14, s. 3, "It shall be lawful for the Ecclesiastical Commissioners for England in recommending to Her Majesty in Council the formation of any new cure to be taken partly out of one diocese and partly out of another or others, to recommend also that such new cure shall form part of some one (to be specified by the said commissioners) of such dioceses; and such new cure shall, upon its formation, become and be a part of the diocese so specified, and of no other diocese."

Attempt to bring previous acts into one system.

19 & 20 Vict. c. 104.

Districts may become separate and distinct parishes for ecclesiastical purposes.

(E.) An attempt has been made to bring the various divisions of parishes into one system by the following sections of 19 & 20 Vict. c. 104.

Sect. 14. "Wheresoever or as soon as banns of matrimony and the solemnization of marriages, churchings, and baptisms according to the laws and canons in force in this realm are authorized to be published and performed in any consecrated church or chapel to which a district shall belong (r), such district not being at the time of the passing of this act a separate and distinct parish for ecclesiastical purposes, and the incumbent of which is by such authority entitled for his own benefit to the entire fees arising from the performance of such offices without any reservation thereof, such district or place shall become and be a separate and distinct parish for ecclesiastical purposes, such as is contemplated in the fifteenth section of" 6 & 7 Vict. c. 37, "and the church or chapel of such district shall be the church of such parish, and all and singular the provisions of" 6 & 7 Vict. c. 37, and 7 & 8 Vict. c. 94 "(as amended by this act), relative to new parishes, upon their becoming such, and to the matters and things consequent thereon, shall extend and apply to the said parish and church as fully and effectually as if the same had become a new parish under the provisions of the said last-mentioned acts."

Including marriages and burials.

The ecclesiastical purposes within this section include marriages (s) and burials (t).

(r) Vide infra, p. 1735.

(t) Hughes v. Lloyd, 22 Q. B. D.

(s) Fuller v. Alford, 10 Q. B. D. p. 157.

Sect. 15. "The incumbent of every new parish created or hereafter to be created pursuant to the provisions of" 6 & 7 Vict. c. 37, and 7 & 8 Vict. c. 94, "or of this act, shall, saving the rights of the bishop of the diocese, have sole and exclusive cure of souls and the exclusive right of performing all ecclesiastical offices within the limits of the same, for the resident inhabitants therein, who shall for all ecclesiastical purposes be parishioners thereof, and of no other parish, and such new parish shall, for the like purposes, have and possess all and the same rights and privileges, and be affected with such and the same liabilities, as are incident or belong to a distinct and separate parish, and to no other liabilities: Provided always, that nothing herein contained shall be taken to affect the legal liabilities of any parish regulated by a local act of parliament, or the security for any loan of money legally borrowed under any act of parliament or otherwise."

Incumbents of new parishes to have exclusive cure of souls therein.

By 31 & 32 Vict. c. 117, s. 2, the incumbent of any such parish is a vicar. 31 & 32 Vict. c. 117.

The words "who shall for all ecclesiastical purposes be parishioners thereof and of no other parish," do not take away from the parishioners of the new parish the right of voting for the election of churchwardens in the old parish (u).

Election of churchwardens.

In the case of Reg. v. Perry (x), a new church was built and endowed and had a district assigned to it and a fund provided for its repairs under 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 38, and the bishop under 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 85 (y), gave his licence for banns and marriages and for the fees being taken by the incumbent. It was holden that the district did not become a separate and distinct parish under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 104, s. 14, because the "authority" contemplated by that statute is not a licence by the bishop, which (by 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 32) is revocable; but an authority under an order of the commissioners under 19 & 20 Vict. c. 104, s. 11, and that therefore the election of a churchwarden was in the renters of pews and not in the parishioners. Reg. v. Perry.

By 19 & 20 Vict. c. 104, s. 25, "it shall be lawful for the commissioners, by the authority aforesaid" (that is, by an Order in Council), "and subject to such consents as are hereinafter mentioned, to divide any parish into two or more distinct and separate parishes for all ecclesiastical purposes whatsoever, and to fix and settle the respective proportion of tithes, glebe lands, and other endowments which shall arise, accrue, remain, and be within each of such respective divisions, according as by the like authority shall be deemed advisable; and the Order made by Her Majesty in Council, ratifying the scheme for such division, shall be good and valid in law for the purpose of effecting the same; and such scheme shall set forth the particular expediency of such division, and how far it may be necessary in consequence thereof to make any alteration in ecclesiastical jurisdiction, and how the changes consequent upon such division in respect of patronage, rights of pew holders, and other rights and privileges, glebe lands, tithes, rentcharges, and other ecclesiastical dues, oblations, offerings, rates, and payments, may be made with justice to all parties interested; and such scheme shall also contain such directions and regulations relative to the duties and character of the incumbents of the respective divisions of such parish, and to the performance of the offices and services of the church in the respective churches thereof, and to the fees to be taken for the same respectively, and to any other matter or thing which may be necessary or expedient by reason or in consequence of such change: Provided always, that such division shall be made in the following cases with the following consents only; that is to say, in the case of a benefice in the patronage of the Crown, or in the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster for the time being, or of the Duke of Cornwall, or of any archbishop or bishop, or of any lay or ecclesiastical corporation aggregate, or of a benefice in private patronage, with the consent of the patrons thereof respectively, with the consent of the bishop of the diocese, such consents to be testified as aforesaid: And provided also, that no such provision shall take effect until after the first avoidance then next ensuing of the church of the parish to be so divided, unless with the consent in writing of the actual incumbent thereof."

In new parishes and parishes already divided, a division and re-settlement of endowments may be made.

Sect. 26. "In cases where any parish shall have been divided into two or more distinct and separate parishes, or where any district or new parish shall have been constituted or formed out of any parish, district, or place, it shall be lawful, by the authority aforesaid, and with the consent of each of the respective patrons and incumbents of such distinct and separate parishes, or of such parish, district, or place, as the case may be, to make a separation and division of the glebe lands, tithes, rentcharges, and other endowments belonging to such distinct and separate parishes, or to such parish, district or place, and to annex and re-settle the same to and for the benefit of such distinct and separate parishes, or of such parish, district, or place, and the district or new parish constituted or taken thereout, as the case may be, in such manner and proportions as by the authority aforesaid may be deemed expedient, and to make such regulations and arrangements as may be requisite for effectually completing such division and settlement as aforesaid; and upon every such re-settlement of endowments, whenever the whole of the ecclesiastical dues arising within the limits of any parish, district, or place, consisting of any prædial or rectorial tithe shall become and be made payable to the incumbent of such parish, district, or place, such parish, district, or place, shall thereupon become and be a rectory, and such incumbent the rector thereof, anything hereinbefore contained to the contrary notwithstanding."

By 32 & 33 Vict. c. 94, s. 11, "In the case of any parish or place wherein there is no parish church nor any person known to be or claiming to be patron of the ancient church or advowson, if any, of such parish or place, then for all purposes of forming an ecclesiastical district or ecclesiastical districts, either wholly or partly out of such parish or place under the powers of the Church Building Acts or New Parishes Acts, or any other act or acts of parliament now or hereafter in force, such parish or place shall be deemed to be and shall be treated for such purposes as an extra-parochial place, and in any case in which notice shall be required to be sent or given to a patron under the provisions of such acts or any of them it shall be sufficient with respect to such parish or place so to be treated as an extra-parochial place as aforesaid to send or give such notice to the bishop of the diocese alone, and such notice, when so sent or given, shall be held to be a full compliance with the requirements of the said acts or act in respect of such notice: Provided always, that nothing herein contained shall affect the rights of the Crown, if any, with regard to any such parish or place."

32 & 33 Vict.
c. 94.

As to parish where there is no church and no patron.

The division of parishes affects several of the ecclesiastical duties and privileges of the parishioners, more especially as to (1) church rates; (2) the appointment and powers of churchwardens; (3) the offices of the church; (4) the apportionment of the ecclesiastical and charitable endowments arising therein.

Effect of division on

(1.) The power of recovering church rates having been now abolished (y), it is enough here to say that under 58 Geo. 3, c. 45, ss. 31, 70, 71, district and distinct parishes were to bear their own church rates, but were also for twenty years to contribute to the repair of the original parish church; and that by 3 Geo. 4, c. 72, ss. 20, 21, chapels, not being churches of distinct or district parishes, were, unless specially excepted, to be repaired by the parish at large.

church rates,

The following cases have been decided upon the construction of these sections:—Varty v. Nunn (z), Reg. v. The Official Principal of The Consistory Court of London (a), Jones v. Gough (b).

(2.) As to the appointment and power of churchwardens. The sections of the various statutes, 58 Geo. 3, c. 45, s. 73; 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 38, ss. 16, 25; 6 & 7 Vict. c. 37, s. 17; 8 & 9 Vict. c. 70, ss. 6, 7, 8, and the cases upon their construction have been set out at length in the chapter on churchwardens (c).

church-
wardens.

(3.) As to the offices of the church. By 58 Geo. 3, c. 45, ss. 27, 28, 29 (d), marriages, christenings, churchings, and burials are to be performed in the churches of distinct and district parishes, upon the first avoidance of the old parish by the incumbent thereof, as if they had been old parish churches, but not before.

At the same time provision is made in sect. 32 for compensating the incumbent of the old parish church for any loss of fees, oblations and offerings which he may sustain by the division of his parish. The fees for performing the offices of the church enumerated above after the avoidance of the old parish, go to the incumbents of the distinct or district parishes (e).

59 Geo. 3,
c. 134.

By 59 Geo. 3, c. 134, s. 6, consolidated chapelries were to be treated as old parishes for these purposes from the time of their creation.

8 & 9 Vict.
c. 70.

But by 8 & 9 Vict. c. 70, s. 10, the fees arising from marriages performed in the churches of district chapelries, unless voluntarily relinquished, are to belong to the incumbent and clerk of the old parish as long as each continues in office. After the first avoidance the fees are to go to the incumbent and clerk of the new parish.

By 14 & 15 Vict. c. 97, s. 17, the commissioners, with the bishop, may determine whether the offices enumerated above shall be solemnized in the churches of district chapelries or not; if they determine that they or any of them shall be celebrated, they are to determine what portion of fees shall be paid to the curate of the chapel, and what to the incumbent of the old parish.

King v. Alston.

In King v. Alston (f), by an order in council, a district, with a district church, was parted off from the parish of St. Matthew, Bethnal Green, and the order in council directed that during the incumbency of the then rector of St. Matthew, two-thirds of the fees to be received for marriages, churchings and burials at the district church "should belong and be paid to the rector, and one-third to the district minister." It was holden that, where the minister had actually received the entire fees for marriages, &c., the rector might recover from him the two-thirds in an action for money had and received. But that the act and order in council did not oblige the minister to receive the fees or any part of them: and that the rector could not maintain assumpsit against him on a supposed duty to take the fees and pay the rector his two-thirds.

7 & 8 Vict.
c. 56, and
14 & 15 Vict.
c. 97.

By 7 & 8 Vict. c. 56, s. 4 (g), and 14 & 15 Vict. c. 97, s. 17, above cited, when the commissioners do not originally order the performance of all or any of these offices, they may do so afterwards by a supplemental order in council.

3 Geo. 4,
c. 72.

the commissioners may reserve the whole of the fees, or any portion of them, to the incumbent of the old parish church, and may alter or rescind this reservation within five years from the first making thereof.

By sect. 18, the provisions of the above-mentioned acts apply to cases of the division of extra-parochial places.

By sect. 19 (h), the bishop is to certify when the office of matrimony may be performed in any church under the provisions already set forth, and his certificate is to be conclusive evidence that marriages celebrated after the date thereof were lawfully celebrated therein.

By 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 38, s. 10, the commissioners, with consent of the bishop, or the bishop alone in certain cases, may determine whether baptisms, churchings and burials may be celebrated in churches or chapels built or appropriated under that act. 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 38.

By sect. 14, all the fees and dues for these offices, except such as may, with the consent of patron and incumbent, be assigned to the minister of the church or chapel, shall belong to the incumbent or clerk of the "parish, chapelry or place in which such church or chapel shall have been or shall be erected."

In Carr v. Mostyn (i), it was holden that the word "chapelry" here meant an ancient parochial chapelry only.

Carr v. Mostyn.

By 7 & 8 Vict. c. 56, provision was made for celebrating marriages, which had been omitted from the list of offices authorized by the last act, in churches or chapels built under it (k).

Marriages under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 56.

By sects. 1, 2, the commissioners and bishops are given the same powers of authorizing marriages and of allotting the fees thereon, as they had in regard to the other offices (l). By sect. 2, the bishop's certificate that marriages are authorized is conclusive.

By sect. 3, certain marriages already celebrated in such chapels are rendered valid.

3 & 4 Vict. c. 60.

By 3 & 4 Vict. c. 60, s. 18, the necessity of the consent of the incumbent and patron of the old parish to the assignment of any portion of the fees under 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 38, s. 14, to the minister of the chapel, is abrogated, and the commissioners and bishop, or the bishop alone in certain cases, may assign the whole or any portion of such fees to the minister.

Consents not necessary as to fees.

It should be mentioned that 7 & 8 Vict. c. 56, s. 6, takes away the necessity of enrolling the boundaries in chancery, and requires the registration of a map in the diocesan registry, in all cases where the offices of the church are to be performed in any church or chapel built under the previous acts; and that 14 & 15 Vict. c. 97, s. 25, validates all marriages performed by error in

Compensation for fees.

By the provisions of 58 Geo. 3, c. 45, s. 32, 59 Geo. 3, c. 134, s. 6, 6 & 7 Vict. c. 37, s. 19 (extended by 19 & 20 Vict. c. 104, s. 13, to that act), 14 & 15 Vict. c. 97, ss. 2, 3, 4 (o), compensation may be made to the incumbent of the original parish for the loss of fees which is sustained by him on account of the division of his parish.

14 & 15 Vict.
c. 97.

By 14 & 15 Vict. c. 97, s. 5, where such compensation is made, all the fees and dues, in the cases of consolidated chapelries, district chapelries, or particular districts (i. e., districts assigned under 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 38), shall belong to the incumbent of such chapelry or district, even though originally reserved to the incumbent of the original parish by order in council. By sect. 6, where no express reservation has been made, the fees and dues in the same cases belong to the incumbent of the chapelry or district, even though no compensation has been made to the incumbent of the old parish.

Vaughan v.
The South
Metropolitan Cemetery
Company.

In Vaughan v. The South Metropolitan Cemetery Company (p), the Cemetery Act provided that certain fees should be paid by the company to the incumbent of the parish or other ecclesiastical district or division from which any body should be removed for interment in the cemetery, and also directed that a portion of such fees should be paid over to the churchwardens or chapelwardens, to be by them applied among the persons entitled by law or custom to share in the burial fees receivable in such parishes or districts by the churchwardens or chapelwardens. It was holden by Vice-Chancellor Wood that the fees in respect of interments from a district which had been created since the passing of the Cemetery Act, under an order in council, conferring powers of marrying, churching and baptizing, but silent as to burials, were payable to the incumbent of such district, and not to the incumbent of the mother parish.

Bowyer v.
Stantial.

In metropolis.

In Bowyer v. Stantial (q), the Exchequer Division and the Court of Appeal came to the same conclusion upon the same act.

15 & 16 Vict. c. 85, s. 36, contains special provisions as to the division of burial fees between the incumbents of old and new parishes in the metropolis (r). This, by 16 & 17 Vict. c. 134, is extended to all cases where burial boards are formed, and have burial grounds. Where this is the case, the incumbent of each separate and distinct parish has a right to perform the service of burial over his own parishioners (s).

Now by 19 & 20 Vict. c. 104, it is provided as follows:—

Sect. 11, "The commissioners may, if they shall think fit, upon application of the incumbent of any church or chapel to which a district shall belong, with the consent in writing of the bishop of the diocese, make an order under their common seal, authorizing the publication of banns of matrimony and the solemnization therein of marriages, baptisms, churchings and burials, according to the laws and canons now in force in this realm; and all the fees payable for the performance of such offices, as well as all the mortuary and other ecclesiastical fees, dues, oblations or offerings, arising within the limits of such district, shall be payable and be paid to the incumbent of such district."

19 & 20 Vict.
c. 104.

Offices of the church to be performed in all churches or chapels on application of the incumbent.

In Fuller v. Alford (t), it was contended (strangely enough) that where a new parish had been formed under this act and an order made under this section, the old parish still remained for the purpose of marriage and that parishioners of the new parish were still entitled to be married at the old parish church, and the vicar of the old parish church was entitled to marry them and to receive fees. The Queen's Bench Division, however, decided the contrary (u).

Fuller v. Alford.

Sect. 12. "In every case in which all or any part of the fees or other ecclesiastical dues arising within the limits of any district, or payable in respect of marriages, baptisms, churchings, and burials in the church or chapel thereof, or of such fees as are hereby made payable to the incumbent of any district, shall have been reserved, or if such last-mentioned order had not been made, would of right belong to the incumbent of the original parish, district or place out of which the district of such church or chapel shall have been taken or to the clerk thereof, an account of such fees shall be kept by the incumbent of such church or chapel, who is hereby required to receive and every three months pay over the same to the incumbent and clerk respectively who would have been entitled to them in case such districts had not been formed; and from and after the next avoidance of such incumbency, or the relinquishment of such fees by such incumbent, and after the situation of such clerk shall have become vacant, or after a compensation in lieu of fees has been awarded to such clerk by the bishop of the diocese, which he is hereby empowered to do, such reservation shall altogether cease and determine, and all such fees and dues shall belong to the incumbent of the district within which the same shall arise or to the clerk of the church thereof."

19 & 20 Vict.
c. 104.

Reserved fees to belong to original incumbent until first avoidance, then to the incumbent of new parish.

siastical purposes by virtue of sect. 14 of 19 & 20 Vict. c. 104 (x); and it was holden, this being the case, that the incumbent of this new parish had a right to perform the burials of his parishioners within the burial ground provided by the burial board for the whole of the old parish, and to receive the fees.

Hughes v. Lloyd.

In Hughes v. Lloyd (y), it was decided that the inhabitant of a separate and distinct parish for ecclesiastical purposes has not a right to be buried in the churchyard of the old mother church. In that case a parishioner of the new parish desired to bury his daughter in the churchyard of the old mother church, and the rector of the old mother church denied the right and required of the parishioners of the new parish a special fee of 10s. for the privilege; and it was decided that the rector should recover the fees so demanded.

Result of enactments and decisions as to the offices of the church.

The result of all these enactments and decisions is that where a new district or parish becomes a separate and distinct parish for ecclesiastical purposes, the parishioners of such separate and distinct parish lose all ecclesiastical rights in the mother parish, such rights including those of marriage and sepulture, and must resort for them to their new church and to its churchyard or to the appropriate civil burial ground; and that the incumbent, parish clerk, and sexton (z) of the old parish have no claim for fees in respect of the performance of marriage or burial by the incumbent of the new parish in his own church or churchyard, or in the appropriate civil burial ground.

Apportionment of endowments.

(4.) As to the apportionment of endowments between divisions of old parishes. It has been already pointed out that the tithes, glebe and other ecclesiastical endowments may be, in many and now in all cases (a), apportioned by the commissioners among the divisions of the parishes. The ecclesiastical burdens on parishes may also be apportioned in many cases (b).

3 Geo. 4, c. 72.

Parochial charities.

As to other charitable endowments, by 3 Geo. 4, c. 72, s. 11, the commissioners might, on a division of a parish or place made by them under the provisions of that and the previous acts, apportion "any charitable bequests or gifts which shall have been made or given to any such parish or place, or the produce thereof, between the divisions of the parish or place." Provision was to be made for the distribution of such apportioned part, and every apportionment was to be registered in the registry of the diocese.

8 & 9 Vict. c. 70.

Apportionment of bequests, &c. and also of

Now, however, a new provision is made by 8 & 9 Vict. c. 70, which enacts, by sect. 22, that where the commissioners "shall have already formed or shall hereafter form any distinct and separate parish, district parish, or district chapelry, under the " (d).

In re West Ham Charities (c), it was holden that under this section the court is bound to act if called upon, although no complaint is made of the mode in which the distribution of the gifts has been made since the division of the districts; and that the court has jurisdiction to apportion gifts made specifically to a particular division of a parish, part of which has been formed into a chapelry district.

Does not apply to new parishes.

Re Church Estate Charity, Wandsworth.

It has been decided that this provision does not apply to "new parishes" formed by the ecclesiastical commissioners under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 37 (e).

The principles on which the court will act are best laid down in Re Church Estate Charity, Wandsworth (f). In that case the churchwardens and overseers of the poor of a parish had from time immemorial been seised of certain plots of land, one of which was known as the Clock Acre, producing a small annual income, for the use and repairs of the parish church, known as the Church Estate. In 1820 a second church was erected, to which a district was assigned in 1846 under the provisions of the Church Building Acts, and other district churches had also been erected. Out of the income of the church estate ten shillings was annually paid to the minister for a sermon on St. Matthew's Day, and the rent of the Clock Acre was paid to the curate in augmentation of his stipend, subject to which the income had been constantly applied to the support of the fabric of the parish church, except from 1820 to 1846, when the income was applied to the support of both churches. On an application by the parishioners of the district parish, claiming a right to participate in the income of the above funds, it was holden by the Master of the Rolls that the inference to be drawn from the facts relating to the charity, so far as they were known, established that the estate was devoted to the repair of the particular parish church, and must be decided, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, to have been specifically given for that purpose; and, consequently, that the district church was not entitled to participate. And this decision was affirmed on appeal (f).

CHAPTER VII.

CHURCH SOCIETIES.

THE societies which have been formed from time to time for the purpose of evangelizing, on the principles of the church, the people at home and abroad, must be distinguished for legal purposes into societies confirmed by royal charter or recognized by statute, and those which are without the recognition of the state.

Some formally constituted.
Some voluntary.

It is almost exclusively with the former category that this chapter is concerned.

The Church Building Society is incorporated by the 9 Geo. 4, c. 42.

The Church Building Society.
9 Geo. 4, c. 42.

The constitution and government of the society are thus settled by it:—

“I. After reciting ‘that it is expedient to provide for the better collection and application of voluntary contributions for enlarging, building, rebuilding, and repairing churches and chapels in England and Wales,’ it is enacted by the second section, that ‘The Society for Promoting the Enlargement and Building of Churches and Chapels’ (which is therein mentioned to have been instituted in the year 1818), is, both as to its then and future members, declared to be a body corporate by the name of ‘The Incorporated Society for Promoting the Enlargement, Building, and Repairing of Churches and Chapels’ (a).

Account of the society.

“II. The Archbishop of Canterbury, for the time being, is declared to be the president of the society, and the Archbishop of York, for the time being, and the bishops of the two provinces, for the time being, together with twenty-five lay peers and commoners, the vice-presidents thereof. All vacancies which may from time to time occur in the number of the lay vice-presidents are to be filled up from the lay members of the society by the committee.

The committee.

“III. The society is to be governed by a committee, consisting of the president, vice-presidents and treasurer, and of thirty-six members elected from the society, one-half at least of whom are to be laymen. The treasurer, and one-fourth of the thirty-six elected members of the committee (in rotation) are to vacate

(a) The statements in this and the following eight paragraphs are taken from the publications of the society.

their offices at the annual general court, but are to be capable of immediate re-election.

Qualification of members.

“IV. All persons who contribute ten guineas in one donation, or one guinea annually, are declared to be members of the society, and to have a right to vote at general courts, and to be eligible to the committee, provided their annual subscriptions be not in arrear.

General court.

“V. A general court is to be holden annually in May, and oftener if the committee shall think it expedient. At the annual general court three auditors are to be appointed for the year ensuing, a treasurer elected, and the vacancies in the committee filled up. All such elections are to be by ballot, from a double list prepared by the president and vice-presidents.

Orders, acts, powers, and duties of the committee.

“VI. Every order made and act done by the committee, for the time being, of the society, is to be made and done with the consent of the majority of the members present at any meeting of the committee, such meeting to consist of not less than five; and the committee, or the major part of them at any such meeting, are to have full power and authority to make all such laws and regulations, not being repugnant to the laws of the kingdom or the express provisions of the act (9 Geo. 4, c. 42), as to them shall from time to time seem expedient, for the management and government of the society, and for carrying its designs into effect. The committee are to have the sole management, control and disposal of the estates, funds, revenues and other property belonging to the society; and also the power of affixing the common seal of the society, or directing it to be affixed, to such instruments as the committee, or such major part of them, shall think fit. The committee are to have also the sole control over, and appointment of, all officers, agents, or servants whom it may be thought expedient to employ in the service of the society, or in any of the concerns relating thereto. But it is provided that no laws or regulations made by the committee shall be of any force or effect, unless the same shall be confirmed by the members of the committee, or the major part of them, who shall be present at the next meeting of the said committee after the same shall have been first made, such next meeting to consist of not less than five.

The enlargement or building of churches and chapels.

Rules to be observed in selecting parishes.

“VII. In the selection of parishes, or extra-parochial places to which the committee shall grant any part of the society's funds towards the enlarging or building of any churches or chapels, they are to have regard to the amount of the population, and also to the disproportion between the number of inhabitants and accommodation for attendance upon divine service according to the rites of the . . . Church of England . . . and, in giving preference among such parishes and extra-parochial places, are also to have regard to the proportion of the expense which shall be offered to be contributed or raised by such respective parishes or places towards the enlargement or building of churches or chapels therein, and to the pecuniary ability of the inhabitants thereof.

"VIII. The committee are at liberty to grant aid towards the repairs of churches and chapels which have fallen into a state of great dilapidation without neglect or fault of the existing parishioners, and the entire expense of repairing which the parishioners shall be proved, to the satisfaction of the committee, to be unable to defray; but in all such cases reference is to be had to the amount of money raised by the parishioners by rates or subscription, and to the improvement which it may be proposed to effect in the accommodation for the poor.

The repairs of churches and chapels. Rules to be observed in selecting parishes.

"IX. The committee are annually to present to Her Majesty an account of the progress made by the society in the execution of its designs, stating the number of churches or chapels enlarged, built, rebuilt, or repaired, or in the course of being so; the money expended, and for what purposes; and such other particulars as shall be necessary for explaining the progress made by the society, together with a list of all officers, agents and servants employed by the society, and a statement of their respective salaries."

Annual report to her Majesty.

By sect. 1 of 9 Geo. 4, c. 42, the act "for the better collecting charity money on briefs by letters patent," &c. (4 Ann. c. 14), is repealed. But by sect. 10, if the crown is at any time pleased to issue royal letters authorizing contributions, the same when received shall be paid to the treasurer of the above society.

9 Geo. 4, c. 42. Abolition of briefs.

In Incorporated Church Building Society v. Barrow (b), it was holden, that the society having no power to purchase land, but only to build churches or chapels on land already purchased, could take a bequest of pure personalty by will, without being obnoxious to 9 Geo. 2, c. 36.

Incorporated Church Building Society v. Barrow.

The Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts was incorporated by royal charter on the 10th of June, 1701, "for the receiving, managing and disposing of funds contributed for the religious instruction of the Queen's subjects beyond the seas; for the maintenance of clergymen in the plantations, colonies and factories of Great Britain, and for the Propagation of the Gospel in those parts (c)."

Society for the Propagation of the Gospel.

The following was the constitution of the society as contained in the material extracts from the original charter:—

"That the said Society for the Propagation of the Gospell in Forreigne Parts, and their successors for ever, shall . . . yearly, meet at some convenient place to be appointed by the said society, or the major part of them, who shall be present at any generall meeting, betweene the houres of eight and twelve in the morning; and that they, or the major part of such of them that shall then be present shall choose one president, one or more vice-president or vice-presidents, one or more treasurer or treasurers, two or more audittors, one secretary, and such other officers, ministers and servants, as shall be thought convenient to serve in the said offices for the yeare ensueing”

“That if it shall happen, that any of the persons at any time chosen into any of the said offices shall dye, or on any account be removed from such office at any time between the said yearly dayes of election, that in such case it shall be lawfull for the surviving and continueing president, or any one of the vice-presidents, to issue summons to the severall members of the body corporate, to meet at the usuall place of the annuall meeting of the said society, at such time as shall be specified in the said summons; and that such members of the said body corporate, who shall meet upon such summons, or the major part of them, shall and may choose an officer or officers into the roome or place of such person or persons, soe dead or removed, as to them shall seem meet.”

Meetings.

This charter provided for an annual, quarterly and monthly meetings on certain Fridays; but the necessity of meeting on these or on any particular days has been taken away by a supplemental charter (b).

“That noe act done in any assembly of the said society shall be effectuall and valid, unlesse the president or some one of the vice-presidents, and seaven other members of the said company at the least, be present, and the major part of them consenting thereunto.”

Members ex officio.

“The Lords Archbishops of Canterbury and York; the Bishops of London and Ely; the Lord Almoner and Dean of Westminster; the Dean of St. Paul’s, and Archdeacon of London; and the two Regius and two Margaret Professors of Divinity of both our Universities for the time being, are members of the corporation ex officio.”

Election of members.

“That the said society and their successors shall and may at any meeting on such third Friday in the month, elect such persons to be members of the said corporation, as they, or the major part of them then present, shall think beneficiall to the charitable designes of the said corporation.”

Subscriptions.

“That the said Society for Propagation of the Gospell in Forreigne Parts, and their successors, or the major part of such of them as shall be present at any meeting of the said society, shall have power from time to time, and all times hereafter, to depute such persons as they shall think fitt to take subscriptions, and to gather and collect such moneys as shall be by any person or persons contributed for the purposes aforesaid. And shall and may remove and displace such deputies as often as they shall see cause soe to doe.”

Accounts.

“That the said society shall yearely, and every yeare, give an account in writing to our Lord Chancellor, or Lord Keeper of the Great Seale of England for the time being, the Lord Cheife Justice of the King’s Bench, and the Lord Cheife Justice of the Common Pleas (c), or any two of them, of the severall summe or summes of money by them received and laid out by vertue of these presents, or any authority hereby given, and of the management and disposicon of the revenues and charityes aforesaid."

In 1881 the society determined to apply to the crown for a supplemental charter, which was issued that same year. After reciting the previous charter, her Majesty was graciously pleased to ordain, declare and grant as follows, viz.:

1. "Henceforth, the Most Reverend the Lord Archbishop of Canterbury for the time being, shall be the president of the said society."

2. "The Most Reverend the Lord Archbishop of York for the time being, and the Right Reverend the Bishops of the Church of England respectively, for the time being holding sees in England or Wales, shall henceforth be vice-presidents of the said society."

3. Removed the oath prescribed by the original charter.

4. "The management of the affairs of the society shall be entrusted to a committee or other select body of members, whether the same shall be the standing committee of the said society appointed and elected under the existing bye-laws, or any committee or body to be hereafter elected or appointed under the same or any other bye-law or resolution of the society, and the said committee or body shall have, exercise, and enjoy all rights, powers, and privileges of the said society by the said charter of King William III., or hereby granted, except powers of granting leases, altering or affixing or using the seal, choosing officers, and electing members of the corporation, and except the power of transacting any business which from time to time by any bye-law or resolution hereafter to be made or passed shall be specially reserved for the society. The said committee or body shall also have, exercise, and enjoy all such further or other powers of the said society (including those hereinbefore excepted) as the society shall from time to time, by any bye-law or resolution ordain and appoint. But such committee or body shall not at any time have the power of making, varying, or repealing any bye-law or resolution of the society."

5. "It shall be lawful for the said society from time to time, by resolution to make any bye-laws whereby provision shall be made for holding upon any day in the year, one yearly meeting of the society, and such bye-laws may also provide for holding other or special meetings of the said society, and for the convening thereof by such officers or officer or members of the said society, and upon or without requisition and at such times, on such occasions, or for such causes as the said society shall see fit"

6. "For the several purposes of the elections authorized by the said charter of King William III., and by these presents (except the election of the president and ex-officio vice-presidents), and for the purpose of electing any members or member of the said standing committee or other select body of members to which the management of the affairs of the society may from time to time be entrusted as hereinbefore provided, and for the purpose of any poll or other occasion for taking the votes of the said society, it shall, in addition to the powers of voting conferred by the aforesaid charter of King William III., henceforth be lawful, subject to any bye-law of the society, for members of the society not personally present at any meeting to vote by means of a voting-list or paper signed by the member voting. And the said society may make, and from time to time add to, repeal, or vary as it may seem fit, any bye-laws regulating the manner in which such voting papers shall be used, and generally prescribing the method of conducting any election or poll."

7. "If at any meeting a poll of the society in respect of any resolution, motion, matter, or question which may have been submitted to and voted upon by such meeting be demanded by two members of the society present at such meeting, such demand shall be put to the votes of the members present at such meeting for their approval or disapproval, and if such demand be supported by the votes of one-third of the members present at such meeting, and shall at some time after the close of such meeting receive the consent of the president of the society, then, the vote of such meeting in respect of such resolution, motion, matter, or question as aforesaid, shall be of no force or validity until after such poll shall have been taken, and such poll of the whole society shall then be taken by means of such voting-lists or papers as aforesaid within such time and in such manner and with such conditions and otherwise as the bye-laws of the society shall direct, and the result of such poll shall be the resolution of the said society."

8. "Henceforth it shall be lawful for the said society, by bye-law or resolution, from time to time, to lay down and prescribe the conditions and manner upon and in which the resignation of any member of the said corporation desirous of resigning his membership may be made and accepted. And it shall be lawful for the said society to declare any member of the said corporation, who for the time being shall not fulfil such conditions as to subscribing to the society or as to payment or collection of subscriptions as may from time to time be laid down by the said society, disqualified, and thereupon the person so declared disqualified shall cease to be a member of the said corporation."

9. "It shall be lawful for the said society and their successors to receive and hold all such moneys as have been, or shall be, given or bequeathed to the said society, whether the same shall be charged upon or payable out of or constitute an interest in land or not, and also to advance any of their surplus or unemployed moneys upon mortgage of, and as such mortgagees to hold, any freehold, copyhold or leasehold lands, messuages or hereditaments, and also to purchase, have, hold, take and enjoy any manors, messuages, lands, tenements, rents, advowsons, liberties, privileges, jurisdictions, franchises, and other hereditaments of any nature, tenure or value, wheresoever situate, for any estate, term or interest therein respectively, and whether or not the same or any of them shall exceed the clear yearly value of 2,000*l.* without incurring any of the penalties or forfeitures of the Statutes of Mortmain. But so nevertheless that such of the said hereditaments (other than land and hereditaments in mortgage to the society) as shall be held for an estate in fee simple, together with such of the said hereditaments other than as aforesaid as shall be held for any term exceeding 500 years shall not at any time exceed in clear yearly value the sum of 10,000*l.*”

Clause 10 gives the society power to let, sell, exchange, enfranchise, mortgage, and otherwise deal with their landed property.

The society is further governed by bye-laws made under the Bye-laws. charters.

In Chester v. Chester it was holden, that the purposes of the society were “charitable” within the meaning of 9 Geo. 2, Chester v. Chester. c. 36 (d).

“The National Society for Promoting the Education of the Poor in the Principles of the Established Church” was originally founded in 1811, and was incorporated by royal charter in May 23, 1817. The following is a summary of its constitution as fixed by the charter, taken from the society’s publications. National Society. Charter.

“That there shall and may be a society to be called ‘The National Society for Promoting the Education of the Poor in the Principles of the Established Church throughout England and Wales,’ and that the presidents and vice-presidents of the said society, and their successors for ever, and every person paying one guinea annually to the funds of the society, or ten guineas in one donation, shall be a corporation with perpetual succession, common seal, power to hold property to the value of 10,000*l.* per annum, and any other property and effects.

“That the Archbishop of Canterbury be president; that the Archbishop of York and all the bishops and ten other persons, being either temporal peers or privy councillors, be vice-presidents.

“That any vacancies in the number of such last-mentioned vice-presidents be filled up by the nomination of the president and the remaining vice-presidents, or the major part of them, at a meeting to be holden for that purpose as soon as conveniently may be after the occurrence of such vacancy, or by the nomination of the major part of such of them as shall be present at the said meeting.

“That for the managing and conducting the affairs of the said incorporated society there shall be a standing committee, and that such committee shall consist of the president and of the vice-presidents, and of sixteen other members of the society, together with such one other member of the society as shall, for the time being, be appointed to fill the office of treasurer of the said society.

“That one-fourth part in number of the said sixteen committee-men shall annually vacate their offices in regular rotation, unless by death, or voluntary resignations, any other vacancies shall have been occasioned since the last general annual meeting; in which case so many only of the four persons next in rotation shall be required to resign, or vacate their said offices, as shall be sufficient, with the vacancies occasioned by death or voluntary resignation, to create or make four vacancies in the whole in the said committee of sixteen; and that any of the said committee-men so vacating their offices by rotation shall be capable of being immediately re-elected as committee-men by the society at large, in manner hereinafter mentioned; and accordingly, for the purpose of such election, that lists shall be formed by the president and vice-presidents for the time being, or the major part of them, of persons in their opinions fit to be elected members of such committee; which last-mentioned lists shall contain twice as many names as shall be then vacancies to be filled, whether such vacancies shall be occasioned by members of the committee vacating their offices in the manner hereinbefore mentioned, or by deaths, or voluntary resignations, since the last election; and that out of such lists so many persons as shall be necessary to supply the vacancies then existing in the said committee shall be elected and chosen by the members of the said society, present at their annual general meeting, or the major part of them, by such mode of voting or ballot as the said committee for the time being, or the major part of them, shall prescribe.

“That for the purpose of such election, and for the election of auditors of the accounts, and for receiving the reports, and for other the affairs of the said society, a general meeting of the said society shall be holden at such place as the committee, or the major part of them, shall appoint in the month of May or June in every year, and that due notice shall be given of the time and place of such meeting, at least fourteen days previous to the day of meeting, by advertising in some or one of the public newspapers published daily in the cities of London and Westminster.

“That the treasurer of the said society shall be chosen and appointed by such of the members of the committee for the time being as shall be present at a meeting to be holden for that purpose, or the major part of them; and that such treasurer for the time being shall, by virtue of his office, be a member of the said committee.

“That the said committee for the time being, or the major part of them, shall have full power and authority to frame, appoint, order, and make all such laws, rules, regulations, constitutions and ordinances, not being repugnant to the laws of this kingdom, or to the express provisions of this charter, as to the said committee, or the major part of them, shall from time to time seem expedient for the management and government of the said society, and for carrying into effect the designs thereof; and shall have the sole management, control, and disposition of the estates, funds, revenues, and other property belonging to the said society; and shall have the power of affixing the common seal of the said society, or directing it to be affixed, to such instruments as the said committee, or the major part of them, shall think fit; and shall have the sole control over and appointment of all officers, agents, or servants whom it may be thought expedient to employ in the service of the said society, or in any of the concerns relating thereto: provided, that such laws, rules, regulations, constitutions, and ordinances so to be made by the said committee, or the major part of them, shall not be of any force or effect unless the same shall be approved, ratified and confirmed by the members of the said committee, or the major part of them, who shall be present at the next meeting of the said committee after the same shall have first been made.”

Laws and regulations have been framed under the charter.

Regulations.

In all schools united to the society the following clause is required to be inserted in the trust deed thereof.

Trust deed.

“And it is hereby declared that the said school shall always be in union with and conducted accordingly to the principles and in furtherance of the ends and designs of the incorporated national society for promoting the education of the poor in the principles of the established church throughout England and Wales” (e).

The Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge has never been incorporated. It is, however, one of the oldest church societies, having been founded in A.D. 1698; and the members thereof contributed largely to the foundation and incorporation of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel and of the National Society.

Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge.

The original preamble to which all members subscribed their names was as follows:—“Whereas the growth of vice and immorality is greatly owing to gross ignorance of the principles of the Christian religion, we, whose names are under written, do agree to meet together as often as we can conveniently, to consult (under the conduct of divine providence and assistance) how we may be able, by due and lawful methods, to promote Christian knowledge.

year 1887 as a memorial of the Jubilee of her Majesty's reign. The scheme of a Church House was first suggested by Sir Robert Phillimore, the writer of this work, in letters written to The Guardian in 1865.

Charter.

The Church House was incorporated by Royal Charter on Feb. 23, 1888. It is governed by a council consisting of the following ex-officio members: the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Lord Chancellor, the Archbishop of York, the Bishop of London, the Dean of Westminster, and the Prolocutors of the Lower Houses of the Convocations of Canterbury and York respectively, and of nine members elected from among the members of the corporation by the members of the corporation.

PART X.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND IN RELATION TO OTHER CHURCHES.

CHAPTER I.

CHURCH IN IRELAND.

THE fifth article of the Act for the Union of Ireland with Great Britain (39 & 40 Geo. 3, c. 67) enacts, "That it be the fifth article of union, That the churches of England and Ireland, as now by law established, be united into one protestant episcopal church, to be called, The United Church of England and Ireland; and that the doctrine, worship, discipline, and government of the said united church shall be, and shall remain in full force for ever, as the same are now by law established for the church of England; and that the continuance and preservation of the said united church, as the established church of England and Ireland, shall be deemed and taken to be an essential and fundamental part of the union; and that in like manner the doctrine, worship, discipline, and government of the church of Scotland, shall remain and be preserved as the same are now established by law, and by the acts for the union of the two kingdoms of England and Scotland."

39 & 40 Geo. 3,
c. 67.

and Ireland to be united into one church.

In the first year of George II., an act was passed to enable archbishops, bishops, and other ecclesiastical persons, to grant their patronage or right of presentation to small livings to such persons as shall augment the same.

In 1836, an act was passed to amend the last foregoing statute and to encourage the building of chapels of ease in Ireland (a).

In 1812, an act was passed to enable coadjutors to archbishops and bishops in Ireland to execute the powers of archbishops and bishops respectively, for all purposes but that of presenting and collating to benefices, and in all cases except such as concerned royal privileges or prerogatives (b).

amend the laws for enforcing the residence of spiritual persons on their benefices; to restrain spiritual persons from carrying on trade or merchandise; and for the support and maintenance of stipendiary curates in Ireland (c).

3 & 4 Will. 4,
c. 37.

On the 14th August, 1833, an act—The Irish Church Temporalities Act (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 37), was passed, effecting a very extensive alteration in the temporalities of the Irish Church. This act was subsequently amended by one (4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 90) which passed on the 15th August in the ensuing year.

Organization of the church
in Ireland before Irish Church
Temporalities Act.

The Church of Ireland was, until the passing of the Irish Church Temporalities Act, under the control of four archbishops, one for each of the four provinces of Ireland, and named from the cities of Armagh, Dublin, Cashel, and Tuam, in which the archiepiscopal sees are situated. The Archbishop of Armagh, now universally recognized as first in rank, though his right to that station was long disputed by the Archbishop of Dublin, is styled Primate and Metropolitan of all Ireland; the Archbishop of Cashel, Primate and Metropolitan of Munster; and the Archbishop of Tuam, Primate and Metropolitan of Connaught. The four archiepiscopal provinces were subdivided into thirty-two dioceses, which were consolidated and united under eighteen bishops. The dioceses in Armagh province were those of Armagh (holden by the archbishop), Clogher, Meath, Down and Connor united, Derry, Raphoe, Kilmore, Dromore, and Ardagh united to Tuam. There were, therefore, seven bishops in this province, suffragan to the Archbishop of Armagh. The province of Dublin was subdivided into the dioceses of Dublin and Glendelagh united, Kildare, Ossory, and Leighlin and Ferns united. The Archbishop of Dublin had, therefore, three suffragan bishops under him. The province of Cashel contained the dioceses of Cashel and Emly united, Limerick united with Ardfert and Aghadoe, Waterford united with Lismore, Cork united with Ross, Cloyne, and Killaloe united with Kilfenora. The number of suffragan bishops in this province was five. The province of Tuam comprehended the dioceses of Tuam, Elphin, Confert united with Kilmacduagh, and Killala united with Achonry. There were, therefore, three bishops in this province suffragan to the Archbishop of Tuam.

3 & 4 Will. 4,
c. 37, and
4 & 5 Will. 4,
c. 90.

This arrangement was considerably altered by the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 37, and 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 90, cited above; according to the provisions of which, the hierarchy was to consist of two archbishops only, those of Armagh and Dublin; the two others being reduced to the rank of bishops. The eighteen suffragan bishops were to be reduced by the consolidation of the dioceses to ten, five under each archbishop. The new arrangement was to be effected gradually on the demise of the several bishops whose sees were to be united to others. When completed, the ecclesiastical division of Ireland was to be as follows:—The province of Armagh, containing the bishoprics of Meath, Derry united with Raphoe, Down united with Connor and Dromore, Kilmore united with Ardagh and Elphin, and Tuam united with Killala and Achonry: the province of Dublin, containing the bishoprics of Ossory united with Leighlin and Ferns; Cashel united with Emly, Waterford and Lismore; Cloyne united with Cork and Ross; Killaloe united with Kilfenora, Clonfert, and Kilmaeduaugh; and Limerick united with Ardferf and Aghadoe.

The income of the archbishops and bishops was derived chiefly from lands let upon leases of twenty-one years, and renewed from time to time, at the original rent, on payment of a fine on renewal, fluctuating according to the altered value of land, and the period to which the renewal was to extend.

According to 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 37, s. 51, the archiepiscopal sees of Cashel and Tuam having become void, the Archbishops of Armagh and Dublin were to succeed each other, in future, in parliament, from session to session; and arrangements were made for episcopal rotation as to seats in parliament.

The ecclesiastical dignitaries subordinate to the bishops were the deans, thirty-three in number; all were presentative by the crown, except those of St. Patrick's, Dublin, and of Kildare,—who were elective by their respective chapters,—and of Clonmacnois, collative by the Bishop of Meath. Twenty-six deans had cure of souls, and seven had not. The deans of St. Patrick's, Dublin, Christ Church, Dublin, St. Canice, Kilkenny, and Lismore, exercised peculiar jurisdictions, varying in each, within their respective deaneries. Three dioceses—Meath, Kilmore, and Ardagh—were without chapters; in lieu of which there was a synod, consisting of all the beneficed clergymen, in which the archdeacon presided. The chapters and synods were corporate bodies, and used a common seal. The chapters were thirty in number; and though all had a general similarity of constitution, each was marked by some special peculiarity. Their component members were as follows—the precentors or chanters: their number was twenty-six—seventeen with cure of souls, and nine without cure; they were all appointed by their respective bishops, except the precentor of Christ Church, Dublin, who was nominated by the crown. The next members were the chancellors; they were twenty-two—fifteen having cure of souls, and seven being without cure; all appointed by the bishops, except that of Christ Church, Dublin, who was nominated by the crown. The treasurers were also twenty-two—sixteen with cure of souls, and six without cure; the right of appointment was the same as that of the precentors and chancellors. The archdeacons were thirty-four in number—all appointed by the bishops. There were two provosts (d), belonging to cathedral churches; but they were said to have had no official duties, cure of souls, or spiritual jurisdiction. Besides the subordinate dignitaries now recited, the chapters had prebendaries, 180 in number. There were also in twelve of the cathedral churches certain subordinate bodies; consisting of five canons, fifty-nine vicars choral, and fifteen choristers.

One peculiar.

There was but one instance of a territorial exemption from episcopal jurisdiction,—the lordship of Newry; the proprietor of which held his spiritual court, and granted marriage licences and probates of wills, under the seal of the religious house to which the lordship belonged before the Reformation.

Parochial clergy.

The dioceses were divided into parishes, which were in the spiritual charge of clergymen in full orders, called rectors and vicars, and perpetual curates. They derived their incomes chiefly from tithe, of which there were two kinds,—great and small; the former derived from corn of every kind, hay and wool; the latter from flax, hemp, garden produce, and in some cases potatoes; but by another and more general explanation of these terms, two-thirds of the tithe of corn, hay and wool constituted the great tithe, and the remaining third the small tithe of a parish: the former was considered the property of the rector, the latter of the vicar. Latterly, a new order of parochial clergy had been introduced into the church, under the name of perpetual curates, who had charge of a portion of a parish specially allotted to them, the tithe of which they received, and and were not subject to the incumbent of the remaining portion of the parish, but held their situations for life.

The parochial clergy derived part of their income from glebe land attached to their respective benefices. The total quantity of glebe land amounted to 91,137 acres, from which, if a twentieth part be deducted as unprofitable, there remained 86,581 acres of profitable land; it is said that if equally apportioned among the benefices, it would have given an average of 62 acres to each incumbent. It was, however, very unequally distributed, by much the greater quantity of it lying in the northern province of Armagh. Most of the glebes were furnished with manses or glebe houses, built partly by a donation of money from the board of first fruits, partly by loan from the same source, and partly at the cost of the incumbent, repayable by instalments from his successors. In cities and towns the parochial clergy were paid, in lieu of tithe, by minister's money, which was an assessment on every house of a certain value, estimated according to the amount of rent paid.

The incomes of the parochial clergy were subject to certain deductions. These were, first fruits, payments towards diocesan and parochial schools, repairs of certain parts of the churches, and repairs of glebe houses. The first fruits were designed to be the amount of the first year's income of every benefice, payable by the new incumbent in four annual instalments, and intended to be applied to ecclesiastical purposes, especially the building and repairing of churches and glebe houses, and the purchase of glebe land. But as the amount on each parish was rated according to assessments made in the time of Henry VIII., Elizabeth, and James I., which had never since been altered, notwithstanding the extraordinary increase in the value of agricultural produce, the impost was little more than nominal, and was suppressed by the last acts for regulating church property. The diocesan schools were to be maintained by annual contributions from the bishop and the beneficed clergy; but the levy drawn from this source was little more than nominal. The parochial schools were supposed to be maintained by an annual stipend from the incumbent, estimated by custom at two pounds per annum. In many cases this was not paid. Every incumbent was bound to keep his glebe house in tenantable order; to enforce which regulation, the bishop appointed a certain number of rural deans, whose duty it was to visit the several parishes within their respective districts, and to report to him upon the state of the churches and of the glebe houses. The churches were at one time kept in repair at the expense of the inhabitants of the parish. But afterwards this duty was transferred to the ecclesiastical commissioners for Ireland, who were authorized to appropriate to this purpose a sufficient portion of the incomes of the extinguished sees, and other revenues in their hands.

The Irish Church had a body of one hundred canons, passed in a synod holden in 1634 (e). Five further canons were passed in a synod holden in 1711. There is much interesting matter in these canons (f). But they have been superseded by a new set of canons passed in 1871 since the disestablishment (g).

In 1869, The Irish Church Act, 1869 (32 & 33 Vict. c. 42), was passed; it was entitled "An Act to put an end to the Establishment of the Church of Ireland, and to make provision in respect of the Temporalities thereof, and in respect of the Royal College of Maynooth." It recited:

"Whereas it is expedient that the union created by act of parliament between the Churches of England and Ireland, as by law established, should be dissolved, and that the Church of Ireland, as so separated, should cease to be established by law, and that after satisfying, so far as possible, upon principles of equality as between the several religious denominations in Ireland, all just and equitable claims, the property of the said Church of Ireland, or the proceeds thereof, should be applied in such manner as Parliament shall hereafter direct:

"And whereas Her Majesty has been graciously pleased to signify that she has placed at the disposal of Parliament her interest in the several archbishoprics, bishoprics, benefices, cathedral preferments, and other ecclesiastical dignities and offices in Ireland."

And it enacted as follows:—

said union created by Act of Parliament between the Churches of England and Ireland shall be dissolved, and the said Church of Ireland, hereinafter referred to as 'the said Church,' shall cease to be established by law."

It proceeded to appoint commissioners to execute the provisions of the act; they were styled "The Commissioners of Church Temporalities in Ireland."

It dealt with the transfer of property and dissolution of ecclesiastical corporations as follows:—

Prohibition of future appointments.

Sect. 10. "Save as hereinafter mentioned, no person shall, after the passing of this act, be appointed by Her Majesty or any other person or corporation by virtue of any right of patronage or power of appointment now existing to any archbishopric, bishopric, benefice, or cathedral preferment in or connected with the said church."

sioners under
this act.

Sect. 11. "From and after the passing of this act all property, real and personal, at the date of such passing vested in or belonging to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners for Ireland, is transferred to and vested in the Commissioners appointed under this act, subject to all tenancies, charges, incumbrances, rights (including tenants' rights of renewal), or liabilities affecting the same, and the corporation of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners for Ireland is hereby dissolved."

Church property vested sioners under

this act.

Sect. 12. "On the first of January, 1871, save as hereinafter provided, all property, real and personal, belonging or in anywise appertaining to or appropriated to the use of any archbishopric, bishopric, benefice, or cathedral preferment in or connected with the said Church, or belonging or in anywise appertaining to or appropriated to the use of any person as holding any such archbishopric, bishopric, benefice, or cathedral preferment, or belonging or in anywise appertaining to or appropriated to the use of any cathedral corporation in Ireland, as defined by this act, shall vest in the Commissioners, subject as hereinafter mentioned."

The section then provides, that (1) and (3) the property so to be vested shall remain subject to the same rents, charges, leases, and rights of renewal of leases as before; and also (2) "In the case of any houses, buildings, farms, lands, churches, burial grounds, or other corporeal hereditaments to which, or to the rent and profits of which, any archbishop, bishop, or person holding any such benefice or cathedral preferment as aforesaid may be entitled, subject to the life interests of such archbishop, bishop, or person respectively; and such last-mentioned corporeal hereditaments shall, subject to the provision for commutation hereinafter contained, continue in such archbishop, bishop, or person respectively for their respective lives, with the same powers, rights, and authorities and in the same manner as if this act had not passed."

Sect. 13. "On the said first of January, 1871, every ecclesiastial corporation in Ireland, whether sole or aggregate (g), and every cathedral corporation in Ireland, as defined by this act, shall be dissolved, and on and after that day no archbishop or bishop of the said Church shall be summoned to or be qualified to sit in the House of Lords as such; provided that every present archbishop, bishop, dean, and archdeacon of the said church shall during his life enjoy the same title and precedence as if this act had not passed."

corporations, and cessation of right of bishops to sit in House of Lords.

The act provided compensation to persons deprived of income and to lay patrons.

And it enacted, with respect to the powers of the church after passing of the act, as follows:—

Sect. 19. "From and after the passing of this act there shall be repealed and determined any act of parliament, law, or custom whereby the archbishops, bishops, clergy, or laity of the said Church are prohibited from holding assemblies, synods, or conventions, or electing representatives thereto, for the purpose of making rules for the well-being and ordering of the said Church; and nothing in any act, law, or custom shall prevent the bishops, the clergy, and laity of the said church, by such representatives, lay and clerical, and to be elected as they the said bishops, clergy, and laity shall appoint, from meeting in general synod or convention, and in such synod or convention framing constitutions and regulations for the general management and good government of the said church, and property and affairs thereof, and the future representation of the members thereof in diocesan synods, general convention, or otherwise."

Repeal of laws prohibiting holding of synods, &c.

Sect. 20. "The present ecclesiastical law of Ireland, and the present articles, doctrines, rites, rules, discipline, and ordinances of the said Church, with and subject to such (if any) modification or alteration as after the first day of January, 1871, may be duly made therein according to the constitution of the said Church for the time being, shall be deemed to be binding on the members for the time being thereof in the same manner as if such members had mutually contracted and agreed to abide by and observe the same, and shall be capable of being enforced in the temporal courts in relation to any property which under and by virtue of this act is reserved or given to or taken and enjoyed by the said church or any members thereof, in the same manner and to the same extent as if such property had been expressly given, granted, or conveyed upon trust to be held, occupied, and enjoyed by persons who should observe and keep and be in all respects bound by the said ecclesiastical law, and the said articles, doctrines, rites, rules, discipline, and ordinances of the said church, subject as aforesaid; but nothing herein contained shall be construed to confer on any archbishop, bishop, or other ecclesiastical person any coercive jurisdiction whatsoever: Provided always, that no alteration in the articles, doctrines, rites, or, save in so far as may be rendered necessary by the passing of this act, in the formularies of the said Church, shall be binding on any ecclesiastical person now licensed as a curate or holding any archbishopric, bishopric, benefice, or cathedral preferment in Ireland, being an annuitant or person entitled to compensation under this act, who shall within one month after the making of such alteration signify in writing to the Church body hereafter mentioned his dissent therefrom, so as to deprive such person of any annuity or other compensation to which under this act he may be entitled."

ecclesiastical courts and ecclesiastical law.

Sect. 21. "On and after the first day of January, 1871, all jurisdiction, whether contentious or otherwise, of all the ecclesiastical, peculiar, exempt, and other courts and persons in Ireland at the time of the passing of this act having any jurisdiction whatsoever exerciseable in any cause, suit, or matter, matrimonial, spiritual, or ecclesiastical, or in any way connected with or arising out of the ecclesiastical law of Ireland, shall cease; and on and after the said first day of January, 1871, the act" 27 & 28 Vict. c. 54, "shall be repealed, and on and after the last-mentioned day the ecclesiastical law of Ireland, except in so far as relates to matrimonial causes and matters, shall cease to exist as law."

Incorporation of church
body.

Sect. 22. "If at any time it be shown to the satisfaction of her Majesty that the bishops, clergy, and laity of the said Church in Ireland, or the persons who, for the time being, may succeed to the exercise and discharge of the episcopal functions of such bishops, and the clergy and laity in communion with such persons, have appointed any persons or body to represent the said Church, and to hold property for any of the uses or purposes thereof, it shall be lawful for her Majesty by charter to incorporate such body, with power, notwithstanding the statutes of mortmain, to hold lands to such extent as is in this act provided, but not further or otherwise."

Commutation.

The act provided for dealings between the commissioners and the representative church body, with respect to redemption of annuities and life interest of ecclesiastical persons, by a process of commutation where the parties interested desired it.

Provisions with respect to churches.

By sect. 25, provisions are made for the churches of the Church of Ireland as follows:—

(1.) Churches not used for divine worship, but deserving preservation as national monuments, are to be vested in and preserved by the commissioners of public works.

(2.) Churches in actual use, for which the representative body apply, stating that they mean to use the same or to build another in lieu of the present fabric, are, subject to the life interest of the incumbent, to be vested in the representative body.

(3.) Churches in actual use, for which no application is made, may, when erected by a private founder, be vested in him or his representatives if he have died since the year 1800.

(4.) Any other churches may be disposed of as the commissioners think fit.

Rights to vaults and of sepulture are to remain as before.

Where churches are vested in the representative body, school-houses belonging to such churches may be so vested also.

Sect. 26 contains provisions as to burial grounds to the following effect:—

Provisions with respect to burial grounds.

(1.) Where a church vested in the representative body has a burial ground that is annexed to it and not separated by any carriage highway, or “that has been granted by a private donor to or exclusively used by the parishioners attending the said church,” the commissioners, at the option of the representative body, shall (a) either vest it in the body, subject to any life interest and without prejudice to any such right of burial “as may be subsisting therein or may be thereafter declared to subsist therein by act of parliament,” or (b) vest it in the guardians of the poor, subject to a right of way to the church, in which case the guardians are to take care that funerals do not take place during the time of ordinary church service and generally for the freedom of the clergy and congregation of the church from interference by those attending funerals, and shall preserve the burial ground in good order.

(2.) In other cases the burial ground is simply to be vested in the guardians of the poor, to be by them holden as a ground purchased by a burial board, with an exception for burial grounds situate in private parks or grounds.

Sects. 27, 28, contain provisions as to residence houses and glebes as follows:—

Residence houses and glebes.

Any residence house used by a clergyman performing or aiding in the services of any church vested in the representative body or in any building temporarily used for a church or any see house used by an archbishop or bishop shall, on application of the representative body, be, with the garden and curtilage thereto, vested in the body, subject to any life interest, upon payment by the body “of a sum equal to ten times the amount of the annual value of the site of such ecclesiastical residence estimated as land and of the said garden and curtilage;” or, where there is a building charge on the residence, of the smaller of these two sums, the amount of the ten years’ annual value or the amount of such building charge. The payments are to be made either upon the vesting order, or, where there is a life interest, on the determination of the life interest.

Where these residences are so vested, the commissioners may further on the application of the representative body vest in the body, on payment of the price thereof to be fixed by arbitration, land not exceeding thirty acres with every see house, and not exceeding ten acres with any other residence, or more if the commissioners shall think it necessary for the convenient enjoyment of the see house or residence.

By sect. 29, a lump sum of 500,000*l.* was to be paid to the representative body in lieu of all claims in respect of private benefactions or the produce thereof: and any particular private endowment might within twelve months substantiate its claim to a share in this lump sum.

By sect. 30. "All plate, furniture, and other moveable chattels belonging to any church or chapel, or used in connection with the celebration of Divine worship therein, shall vest in the representative Church body when incorporated; and, subject to the life enjoyment of same by the existing incumbents, all moveable chattels held and enjoyed by the incumbent for the time being of any see, cathedral preferment, and benefice in his corporate right, together with or as incident to the occupation of any ecclesiastical residence, shall also vest in the same body when incorporated; and where any property is vested in any ecclesiastical or cathedral corporation in Ireland in trust for the poor or any other charitable purpose, the dissolution of such corporation shall not affect the continuance of the trust, but such property shall immediately upon such dissolution vest in the representative body of the said church, or, in default of and until the same shall be constituted, in the commissioners for the execution of this act, but subject always to the trusts affecting the same, and under the same supervision, local or otherwise, as theretofore, or as near thereto as the circumstances of the case will admit; and in all cases where ecclesiastical persons are at present in right of their dignities or offices entitled to be members of any lay corporations constituted for the management of any private endowment, or are trustees for the management of property belonging to institutions of private foundation for purposes not ecclesiastical, then the persons (if any) who shall hereafter at any time discharge duties similar or analogous to those now discharged by such ecclesiastical persons shall be entitled to succeed in their room, and be members of such lay corporations, and to act as such trustees."

Ultimate trust of surplus.

The act disposed of the surplus of church property to the following imperfect extent:—

Sect. 68. "And whereas it is further expedient that the proceeds of the said property should be appropriated mainly to the relief of unavoidable calamity and suffering, yet not so as to cancel or impair the obligations now attached to property under the acts for the relief of the poor: be it further enacted, that the said proceeds shall be so applied accordingly in the manner Parliament shall hereafter direct" (h).

The act contains these saving clauses.

Church of Ireland, but, as to the last-mentioned church, subject to the provisions of this act."

Sect. 70. "Nothing in this act contained shall affect the patronage or right of presentation to any proprietary or district parochial church or endowed chapel of ease which has been endowed out of private funds, or affect the property in any such church or chapel, or the property held for the purposes of or appropriated to the use of the same, or affect the continuance of the trust relating thereto as originally constituted."

Saving rights as to proprietary chapels and chapels of ease.

Sect. 72 contains a series of definitions of words used in the act, amongst which the following definition is to be noted:—"Jurisdiction shall mean legal and coercive power and shall not extend to or include any power or authority which may be exercised in a voluntary religious association upon the footing of mutual contract or agreement."

Notwithstanding the disestablishment of the Irish Church, the clergy of that church are recognized by the "Matrimonial Causes and Marriage Law (Ireland) Amendment Act, 1870," 33 & 34 Vict. c. 110, ss. 32—35, 38, and 40, as having authority to celebrate marriage (i), and the bishops as having authority to license any church or chapel within their "episcopal superintendence" for the celebration of marriage, and to depute persons to grant licences and themselves to grant special licences for marriage, when both parties are members of that church or of the Church of England or the Episcopal Church of Scotland: and provision is made for the terms on which such licences are to be granted and for an appeal from a refusal to grant one; and marriages in churches are directed to be preceded by banns, licence, special licence, or registrar's certificate.

CHAPTER II.

CHURCH IN SCOTLAND.

6 Anne, c. 11. IN 1706 the act 6 Anne, c. 11, passed for the union of England and Scotland (a).

By sect. 2, her Majesty, with advice and consent of the Estates of Parliament, "ratifies, approves, and for ever confirms the fifth act of the first parliament of King William and Queen Mary, intituled 'Act ratifying the confession of faith, and settling Presbyterian Church government,' with all other acts of Parliament relating thereto, in prosecution of the declaration of the estates of this kingdom, containing the claim of right, bearing date the eleventh of April, one thousand six hundred and eighty-nine. And her Majesty with advice and consent aforesaid expressly provides and declares, that the foresaid true protestant religion, contained in the above-mentioned confession of faith, with the form and purity of worship presently in use within this Church, and its Presbyterian Church government and discipline, (that is to say), the government of the Church by kirk sessions, presbyteries, provincial synods, and general assemblies, all established by the foresaid acts of Parliament, pursuant to the claim of right, shall remain and continue unalterable, and that the said Presbyterian government shall be the only government of the Church within the kingdom of Scotland."

In 1711 an act was passed (10 Anne, c. 10), intituled "An Act to prevent the disturbing those of the Episcopal Communion in Scotland in the exercise of their religious worship, and in the use of the liturgy of the Church of England, and for repealing an act passed in the parliament of Scotland, intituled, 'Act against irregular baptisms and marriages.'" This last-mentioned statute of the Scotch parliament was made in 1695, and framed in a spirit of persecution, similar to that which inflamed the most bigoted period of the Roman church, inasmuch as it inflicted perpetual imprisonment or exile on all members of the Episcopalian Church, who, being expelled from their churches, should presume to baptise a child or solemnize a marriage.

Statutes affecting the Episcopal Church in Scotland.

The next act affecting the Episcopal Communion in Scotland (1 Geo. 1, c. 29) was passed in 1718; its object was to secure the House of Brunswick against the Pretender; it therefore prescribed an oath of allegiance to King George and of abjuration of the Pretender, to be taken by all ministers of the Episcopal Church, and it required every episcopal congregation "to pray in express words" for the king and the royal family.

1 Geo. 1,
c. 29.

This act was followed by 19 Geo. 2, c. 38, and 21 Geo. 2, c. 34. These statutes had the same purpose as that of the above act of George the First, namely, of securing the reigning family against political disaffection. But 21 Geo. 2, c. 34, contained a clause (s. 13), which, in order to remove any doubt as to the qualification required by the former act for episcopal ministers, expressly enacted that any other letters of orders than those granted by some bishop of the Church of England or Ireland should be an insufficient qualification.

19 Geo. 2,
c. 38, and 21
Geo. 2, c. 34.

The next act (32 Geo. 3, c. 63), relieved the members of the episcopal communion from many of the penalties and restrictions imposed upon them by former statutes, but it rendered ministers

c. 63.

of that communion in Scotland incapable of taking any benefice in England unless ordained by an English or Irish bishop.

3 & 4 Vict.
c. 33.

In 1840 an act, 3 & 4 Vict. c. 33, very important in its bearing upon the civil status of the Episcopal Church of Scotland, was passed.

This act was repealed as to Scotland by 27 & 28 Vict. c. 94, hereafter cited, and has since been repealed altogether by 37 & 38 Vict. c. 77.

The material provisions of 27 & 28 Vict. c. 94 are as follows:—

27 & 28 Vict.
c. 94.

Persons admitted into holy orders by bishops in Scotland not to be admitted to benefices, &c. in England or Ireland without consent of bishop of the diocese.

Sect. 5. "No person admitted into holy orders by any bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church in Scotland shall be entitled to be admitted or instituted to any benefice or other ecclesiastical preferment in England or Ireland, without the consent and approbation of the bishop of the diocese in which such benefice or other ecclesiastical preferment may be situated; and any such bishop shall be entitled to refuse such consent and approbation without assigning reason for such refusal, any law or practice to the contrary notwithstanding; and every such person seeking to be admitted or instituted to such benefice or other ecclesiastical preferment, or to be licensed to any curacy, shall, before being admitted, instituted, or licensed, make and subscribe before such bishop every such declaration and subscription as he would by law have been required to make and subscribe at his ordination if he had been ordained by a bishop of the united Church of England and Ireland: Provided always, that the provisions of this section shall not apply to any such person who shall hold or shall have held any benefice or ecclesiastical preferment in England or Ireland."

Penalty on such persons officiating in certain cases without consent of bishop.

Sect. 6. "Any person admitted into holy orders by any bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church in Scotland, and who does not hold or who has not held any benefice or ecclesiastical preferment in England or Ireland, who shall knowingly officiate on more than one day within three months in any church or chapel in any diocese in England or Ireland, without notifying the same to the bishop of the diocese in which such church or chapel is situate, or who shall officiate contrary to any injunction of the bishop of the diocese under his hand and seal, shall for every such offence forfeit and pay the sum of ten pounds to the Governor (sic) of Queen Anne's Bounty, to be recovered by action of debt, brought in the name of the treasurer of the said bounty, in any of her Majesty's Courts of Record at Westminster, or in the Court of Session in Scotland, at the suit of the public prosecutor, or in Ireland in any court of common law in the name of the Ecclesiastical commissioners."

Discipline of the Episcopalian Church.

The history of the external discipline and government of the Church in Scotland is very concisely and perspicuously stated in the preface to the revision of their canons in 1838 (b).

After a brief exposition of the doctrine of apostolical succession, the preface to the revision in question proceeds as follows:—

“Such is the form, in which has been regularly handed down the ecclesiastical authority of the Episcopal Church in Scotland; a Church in itself completely constituted and organized, in respect of spiritual power and sacred ministrations, by its own bishops, priests, and deacons. In this character, being in full communion with the United Church of England and Ireland, and adopting as the standard of her faith the thirty-nine articles of religion, as received in that Church, she claims the authority which, according to the thirty-fourth of those articles, belongs to ‘every particular or national church, to ordain, change, or abolish ceremonies or rites of the Church ordained only by man’s authority, so that all things be done to edifying.’

“The doctrine of the Church, as founded on the authority of the Scripture, being fixed and immutable, ought to be uniformly received and adhered to, at all times and in all places. The same is to be said of its government, in all those essential parts of its constitution, which were prescribed by its adorable Head. But in the discipline, which may be adopted for furthering the purposes of ecclesiastical government, regulating the solemnities of public worship, as to time, place, and form, and restraining and rectifying the evils, occasioned by human depravity, this character of immutability is not to be looked for. The discipline of the Church is to be determined by Christian wisdom, prudence, and charity; and when any particular Church has drawn up a body of canons for its own use, regard has always been had to its peculiar situation at the time when its discipline was thus regulated. In one country, a pure Apostolic Church is found to be legally established, amply endowed, and closely incorporated with the State; while in another, forming a part of the same empire, it is only tolerated by the State, and as to all matters of spiritual concern, derives no support from the civil government.

“Such is precisely the difference of situation between the Established Church of England and Ireland (c), and the unestablished, the merely tolerated Episcopal Church in Scotland. In things of a purely ecclesiastical nature, embracing the doctrine and government of the Church, the faith peculiar to Christianity, and the mode of transmitting an apostolic episcopacy—in these respects the Reformed Episcopal Church is the same in every part of the British empire. That system of religious faith and ecclesiastical order, by which it is distinguished in every district of England and Ireland, is also its mark of distinction to the remotest corner of Scotland; and although in this country it is wholly unconnected with the State in the exercise of its spiritual authority, yet does it still depend, under God, on the civil power for peace and protection, in the enjoyment of all its rights and privileges, as a society purely spiritual, and constituted for the purpose of affording the means of grace and salvation to the members of Christ's mystical body.

(c) This was before the Irish Church was disestablished in 1869. Vide supra, pp. 1754—1759.

"Viewing it in this light, the clergy of the Episcopal Church in Scotland declare, in the most sincere and unequivocal manner, that the ecclesiastical commission handed down to them has no relation to such secular powers and privileges as are peculiar to a national establishment; nor does it in the least interfere with the rights of the temporal estate, or the jurisdiction of the supreme civil magistrate. On the contrary, the clergy of this Church, of every rank and order, feel no hesitation in asserting and maintaining that the king's majesty, to whom they sincerely promise to bear true allegiance, is the only 'supreme governor within his dominions, whose prerogative it is to rule all estates and degrees committed to his charge by God; and to restrain, with the civil sword, the stubborn and evil doers of every denomination, clergymen as well as laymen.' They further 'declare, that no foreign prince, person, prelate, state, or potentate, hath, or ought to have, any jurisdiction, power, superiority, pre-eminence, or authority, ecclesiastical or spiritual, within this realm;' and they do, from their hearts, 'abhor, detest, and abjure, as impious and heretical, that damnable doctrine and position, that princes ex-communicated or deprived by the Pope, or any authority of the see of Rome, may be deposed or murdered by their subjects, or any other whatsoever.'

"Such are the solemn acknowledgments of the king's sovereignty required from candidates for holy orders in the United Church of England and Ireland. A similar obligation, as extended to all ecclesiastical persons, was enforced in a code of canons intended for the Established Church of Scotland in the reign of Charles the First. But the attempt to introduce a proper system of discipline, conjoined to the uniform use of a Liturgy, was completely frustrated by the events of that disastrous period; and the troublesome state of affairs in the two succeeding reigns was equally unfavourable to the establishment of order and unity in the Church. The Revolution in 1688 set aside the legally established episcopacy of Scotland; and for several years after the shock which our Church received by the termination of that national struggle, the bishops had enough to do in keeping up a pure episcopal succession, till it should be seen what, in the course of Providence, might be further effected towards the preservation, though not of an Established, yet of a purely primitive Episcopal Church, in this part of the kingdom. For this purpose a few canons were drawn up, and sanctioned by the bishops, in the year 1743, which, though very well calculated to answer the purposes intended by them, while the Church was under legal restraint and threatened with persecution, have yet left room for considerable enlargement, and require to have embodied with them, or added to them, several regulations suited to the now happily tolerated and protected state of the Episcopal Church in this country.

“In accomplishing this good work, some aid might be expected from the canons appointed for the Church of England in the year 1603, for the Church of Ireland in 1634, and for the Church of Scotland in 1636. For the purpose of collecting from these and other sources a system of ecclesiastical discipline proper for the Church under their episcopal charge, the Protestant bishops in Scotland came to the resolution of holding a general ecclesiastical synod; and being duly convoked by the primus, did accordingly meet at Aberdeen, on Wednesday, the 19th day of June, in the year of our Lord 1811, together with the deans of their several dioceses, and a representative of the clergy from each diocese containing more than four presbyters, when a code of canons for preserving and regulating order and discipline in the Protestant Episcopal Church in Scotland was adopted and sanctioned. A second general synod met at Laurencekirk, in the county of Kincardine, on Wednesday, the 18th day of June, 1828, when the canons of 1811 were revised and altered. A third was held in Edinburgh, on Wednesday, 17th of June, 1829, when some enactments in the sixteenth canon of 1828 were repealed. A very general desire being expressed throughout the Church, especially in the year 1837, that a further revision of the whole code should be made, another general synod was in consequence duly summoned, and met accordingly in Edinburgh, on Wednesday, the 29th August, 1838, and being then and there duly and solemnly constituted with prayer, after full deliberation and discussion during several successive days, the synod so assembled and constituted did, and hereby do, adopt and sanction the following revised and amended code of canons, and declare them to be in future the stated rules and regulations for preserving order and discipline in the said Church in Scotland. In testimony whereof, we, the members of the said synod, have hereunto annexed our names and designations in the register-book of the Episcopal College, and we have, moreover, entrusted to a committee in Edinburgh the duty of causing the revised and amended canons now approved and sanctioned to be faithfully inserted in the foresaid register, and together with this introduction, to be carefully printed for the general use of the Church. For these purposes, an authentic copy, verified by the primus, the clerk of the Episcopal College, and by the prolocutor of the second chamber, in the presence of the synod, has been given to the committee, which they are required to preserve when these purposes are attained, along with the register-book aforesaid; committing the custody thereof to the clerk of the Episcopal College, whose duty it is to preserve the said register, and the general records of the Church.”

The legal effect of the canons of the Church in Scotland, which were again revised in 1863, came under consideration in the

Primus of the Episcopalian
Church.

Before the distinction of archbishop was introduced into Scotland, one of the bishops had a precedence under the title of Primus Scotorum Episcopus; and the Synod of 1838, in compliance with the practice of the Episcopal College for the last century, decreed that the bishops should choose a primus without respect to seniority of consecration or precedence of diocese, who should enjoy no other privilege among the bishops but the right, under particular restrictions, "of convocating" and presiding. But he is empowered, with the advice and consent of his colleagues, to determine any case relating to discipline in a vacant diocese, and to provide for the performance of any episcopal office that may be necessary. To the primus also the decease of every bishop must be notified by the dean of the diocese. This dean is chosen from the presbyters, and his appointment is imperative on every bishop.

Synod.

The synod consists of two chambers: the first, of the bishops only; the second, of the deans and a representative of the clergy elected by each diocese. There are seven sees:—1. Edinburgh. 2. St. Andrews, Dunkeld and Dunblane. 3. Aberdeen. 4. Argyle and The Isles. 5. Brechin. 6. Glasgow and Galloway. 7. Moray and Ross.

tive church council.

Besides the synod there is now a representative church council consisting of bishops, clergy and lay representatives, established in 1876.

Bishopric of Gibraltar conferred on Scotch bishop.

In the year 1863, Dr. Trower, a priest by ordination of an English bishop, a bishop by consecration of the Scotch bishops, was appointed by the crown to the episcopal see of Gibraltar. In this case the Archbishop of Canterbury, to whose metropolitan see the bishopric of Gibraltar is subject, gave "due and canonical mission" to the Bishop of Gibraltar so appointed by letters patent.

The letters patent were as follows:—

patent.

"Victoria by the grace of God of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland queen, defender of the faith, To all to whom these presents shall come greeting: Whereas, by our letters patent under the great seal of our United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, bearing date the 21st day of August in the year of our Lord 1842, we did found and create a bishop's see within our town and territory of Gibraltar, and did constitute the church of the 'Holy Trinity' within our said town of Gibraltar to be the cathedral church of the said see, and did ordain that the whole town of Gibraltar should henceforth be a city and be called the 'city of Gibraltar,' and did ordain, make, constitute and declare the said city and all the territory comprised in our said possession of Gibraltar and its dependencies to be the diocese of the Bishop of Gibraltar and of his successors, and did likewise place under the spiritual and ecclesiastical jurisdiction of the said bishop and his successors and of his officers named in the said letters patent all churches, chapels and other places within our island of Malta and its dependencies which then were or might thereafter be founded, set apart or used for the service of Almighty God according to the ritual of the united Church of England and Ireland, and more especially the church founded by the pious munificence of our dearly-beloved aunt Adelaide, the queen dowager, in the city of Valetta, and did name and appoint our well-beloved George Tomlinson, doctor in divinity, to be ordained and consecrated bishop of the said see : and whereas the said George Tomlinson was duly ordained and consecrated bishop of the said see : and whereas the said George Tomlinson is now dead and the said see of Gibraltar has thereby become and now is vacant ; now we, having great confidence in the learning, morals and probity of our well-beloved The Right Reverend Walter John Trower, doctor in divinity and bishop, do name and appoint him to be bishop of the said see of Gibraltar for the term of his natural life, subject nevertheless to the right of resignation in the aforesaid letters patent expressed : and do hereby signify to The Most Reverend Father in God Charles Thomas by Divine Providence Archbishop of Canterbury, Primate of all England and Metropolitan, our nomination of the said Walter John Trower to be the bishop of the said see and diocese : and whereas the said Right Reverend Walter John Trower has been already duly canonically ordained and consecrated a bishop, and cannot therefore be ordained and consecrated by the Archbishop of Canterbury, we do hereby expressly declare that so much of our said letters patent as require the Bishop of Gibraltar to be consecrated and ordained by the said Archbishop of Canterbury shall be and are hereby revoked, abrogated and of none effect so far as they would or might otherwise in any way affect the appointment of the said Right Reverend Walter John Trower to the bishopric of Gibraltar : and we do require and by the faith and love whereby he is bound to us command the said Most Reverend Father in God the Lord Archbishop of Canterbury to administer to the said Right Reverend Walter John Trower the usual oaths of allegiance and supremacy and the oath of due and canonical obedience to the Archbishop of Canterbury for the time being as his metropolitan : and we do direct that after the said oaths shall have been so administered and taken the same shall be recorded in the Registry of the Court of the Vicar General together with the due and canonical mission from the said archbishop to the said Right Reverend Walter John Trower to be the bishop of the said see and diocese, and diligently to do and perform all other things appertaining to his office in this behalf with effect : and we do ordain and declare that the said Right Reverend Walter John Trower, so by us nominated and appointed, may by virtue of such nomination, appointment and mission enter into and possess the said bishop's see as bishop thereof without let or impediment from us, our heirs or successors, and in as full and ample a manner in every respect, and with the same rights, titles, powers, privileges and obligations as his predecessor enjoyed and was subject to, as upon reference to our said letters patent founding the see of Gibraltar (dated the 21st day of August, 1842) will more particularly appear: and we do by these presents give and grant to the said Right Reverend Walter John Trower, aforesaid, full power and authority to perform all the functions peculiar and appropriate to the office of bishop within the said diocese of Gibraltar. Now we do declare our pleasure to be, that all provisions whatever contained in the before-recited letters patent, so far as they relate to the said George Tomlinson and his successors, bishops of Gibraltar, shall (except so far as they are aforesaid revoked) apply to the said Walter John Trower so long as he shall be and remain bishop of the said diocese: And to the end that all things aforesaid may be firmly holden and done, we will and grant to the aforesaid Walter John Trower that he shall have our letters patent under our great seal of our united kingdom duly made and sealed. In witness whereof we have caused these our letters to be made patent. Witness ourself, at Westminster, the 12th day of September in the 27th year of our reign.

“By warrant under the queen’s sign manual.

“C. ROMILLY.”

The form of giving due and canonical mission by the archbishop was as follows:—

“We, Charles Thomas, by divine providence Archbishop of Canterbury, primate of all England and metropolitan, in obedience to the command contained in certain letters-patent of her most gracious Majesty Victoria by the grace of God of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland queen, defender of the faith, bearing date the 12th day of September in the 27th year of her reign, appointing you the Right Reverend Walter John Trower, doctor in divinity and bishop, to be bishop of the see and diocese of Gibraltar, having duly administered to you the usual oaths of allegiance and supremacy, and also the oath of due and canonical obedience to the Archbishop of Canterbury, for the time being, as your metropolitan, and you the said right reverend the bishop having taken the oaths so as aforesaid prescribed: Now we, the archbishop aforesaid, as your metropolitan, do give you the Right Reverend Walter John Trower the bishop aforesaid due and canonical mission to be bishop of the said see and diocese of Gibraltar; and do direct the said oaths, together with the due and canonical mission from us as aforesaid, to be recorded in the registry of the court of our vicar-general.

SECT. 1.—History of the Establishment and Organization of the Church in the Colonies (a).

THE extension of the Church of England beyond the seas began in the early age of English colonization. Virginia was the first land which it reached; and Thomas Hariot, a graduate of Oxford, who, as a mathematician and astronomer, accompanied Sir W. Raleigh, in 1584, has been called the first English missionary to the New World. The charters granted by James the First to the Virginia Company were accompanied by orders for preaching the word of God according to the rites and doctrines of the Church of England, both "in the colonies and among the savages bordering upon them." At Jamestown, in Virginia, the first English church was built by the Rev. R. Hunt about 1607. Tithes, glebes and other provision for the clergy were made in Virginia by the local legislature. There it was that King William and Queen Mary erected the college which was called after them, and thither an ecclesiastical commissary, the Rev. J. Blair, was sent in their reign.

In North America.

In Maryland, in 1692, the local assembly provided a legal maintenance for parochial clergymen, and the Rev. T. Bray was sent thither as Bishop Compton's commissary at that time.

These two colonies were not, however, the only places in which clergymen of the Church of England went to minister to congregations of their fellow-countrymen in foreign parts: but there only and in some of the West Indian Islands they were found in sufficient numbers to lead to any local attempt at organization.

Early organization.

All British subjects in foreign parts were declared by an order in council in the time of Charles I. to be under the jurisdiction of the Bishop of London as their diocesan.

When the office for the ministry of baptism to adults was inserted in the Prayer Book in 1662, one of the reasons assigned in the preface for it was that it may be always useful for the baptising of natives in our plantations (b). The credit of the first attempt to organize effectually the Church abroad is due to Archbishop Laud, who proposed, in 1638, to send a bishop to New England; and the next to Lord Clarendon, who obtained the sanction of Charles II. to a proposal for a bishop of Virginia. These and many subsequent efforts to supply the first necessity for church organization were frustrated by the opposition of parties acting upon mixed political and religious grounds. The multiplication of ministers went on in the colonies. The merely casual supply from home was unequal to the demand. The "New England Company," as it is now called, was founded by an Act of the Long Parliament in 1649 for the propagation of the gospel in New England: an endowment was provided for it by parochial collections in England and Wales. After the Restoration it was incorporated by charter 14 Charles II. 1662-3, when Clarendon and R. Boyle were appointed among its governors. Its endowments, which are very considerable, are regulated by three decrees in Chancery (in the years 1792, 1808 and 1836), and are now applicable to two objects: to promoting and propagating the Gospel of Christ among the heathen nations in what was formerly called New England (between 40° and 48° north latitude) and parts adjacent in America, and to advancing the Christian religion among Indians, Blacks and Pagans in some or one of the British plantations and colonies. The ministers supported by this Company have always been chiefly though not exclusively selected from other denominations than the Church of England.

Gospel.

After some discussion in the Convocation of Canterbury, and without parliamentary sanction, the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts (c) was founded by charter from

(b) "Together with an office for the baptism of such as are of riper years; which, although not so necessary when the former book was compiled, yet by the growth of anabaptism, through the licentiousness of the late times crept in amongst us, is now become necessary, and may be always useful for the baptizing of natives in our plantations and others converted to the faith."—Preface to the Book of Common Prayer.

(c) Vide supra, pp. 1741—1745. In 1840, the Act 3 & 4 Vict. c. 78, to provide for the sale and distribution of the clergy reserves in Canada, ordered, by s. 5, that the share of the Church of England should be expended under the authority of this society.

William III. in 1701. The charter constituted some ninety persons, chiefly bishops and clergymen, a body corporate, as already stated; and the object for which they were appointed is thus stated in the charter :

“Wee are credibly informed, that in many of our plantacons, colonies and factories beyond the seas, belonging to our kingdome of England, the provision for ministers is very mean; and many others of our said plantacons, colonies and factories are wholly destitute, and unprovided of a mainteynance for ministers, and the publick worshipp of God; and for lack of support and mainteynance for such, many of our loveing subjects doe want the administration of God’s Word and Sacraments, and seem to be abandoned to atheism and infidelity; and alsoe for want of learned and orthodox ministers to instruct our said loveing subjects, to popish superstition and idolatry.

“And wee think it our duty, as much as in us lyes, to promote the glory of God, by the instrucon of our people in the Christian religion; and that it will be highly conducive to accomplishing those ends, that a sufficient mainteynance be provided for an orthodox clergy to live amongst them, and that such other provision be made, as may be necessary for the propagation of the gospell in those parts.

“And wee have been well assured, that if wee would be graciously pleased to erect and settle a corporacon for the receiving, manageing and disposing of the charity of our loveing subjects, divers persons would be induced to extend their charity to the uses and purposes aforesaid” (d).

Besides supplying an increasing number of clergy to all the British colonies, &c., the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel continued for the first eighty years of its existence, in conjunction with clergy and laity abroad and persons of distinction at home, to represent to the British government the necessity of establishing the episcopate in foreign parts. All efforts were in vain. The statute and common law of England were supposed to forbid English bishops to communicate the power and authority of their order to any person without the sanction of the crown, and that sanction was constantly withheld.

At length, after the United States had severed their political connection with England, and after Bishop Seabury of Connecticut had been consecrated in 1784 by Scotch bishops, the consecration of Bishops White of Pennsylvania and Provost of New York by the Archbishop of Canterbury in 1787 was permitted by an act (now repealed), 26 Geo. 3, c. 84 (e). From these three bishops has come the great Church of the United States, which had, in 1894, sixty-six bishops.

In the year 1787 letters patent were also issued for the erection of the see of Nova Scotia, and Dr. Charles Inglis, the first colonial bishop, was consecrated for that diocese. The second colonial diocese, Quebec, was founded in 1793. In 1836 a diocese of Australia; in 1839, one of Newfoundland, with Bermuda, and one of Toronto, were founded.

The Indies.

The episcopate obtained in America was extended in 1814 to the East Indies under the severe restrictions of the act 53 Geo. 3, c. 155, and 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 85, s. 93; and in 1824 to the West Indies, by act 6 Geo. 4, c. 88.

Colonial Bishoprics'
Council.

The further extension of the colonial episcopate was due mainly to the Colonial Bishoprics' Council, a voluntary association constituted in 1841.

The erection and endowment by subscription of new bishoprics in the colonies, had been for some time in contemplation; when a meeting of archbishops and bishops was holden at Lambeth on the Tuesday in Whitsun week, 1841, and the following declaration was agreed to by all present:—

First declaration of archbishops and bishops.

“We, the undersigned archbishops and bishops of the united Church of England and Ireland, contemplate with deep concern the insufficient provision which has been hitherto made for the spiritual care of the members of our national church residing in the British colonies and in distant parts of the world, especially as it regards the want of a systematic superintendence of the clergy, and the absence of those ordinances, the administration of which is committed to the episcopal order. We therefore hold it to be our duty, in compliance with the resolutions of a meeting convened by the Archbishop of Canterbury on the 27th of April last, to undertake the charge of the fund for the endowment of additional bishoprics in the colonies and to become responsible for its application.

“On due consideration of the relative claims of those dependencies of the empire which require our assistance, we are of opinion that the immediate erection of bishoprics is much to be desired in the following places:—New Zealand, the British possessions in the Mediterranean, New Brunswick, Cape of Good Hope, Van Diemen's Land, and Ceylon.

“When competent provision shall have been made for the endowment of these bishoprics, regard must be had to the claims of Sierra Leone, British Guiana, South Australia, Port Phillip, Western Australia, Northern India, and Southern India.

“In the first instance, we propose that an episcopal see be established at the seat of government in New Zealand, offers having been already made which appear to obviate all difficulty as to endowment.

“Our next object will be to make a similar provision for the congregations of our own communion established in the islands of the Mediterranean, and in the countries bordering upon that sea; and it is evident that the position of Malta is such as will render it the most convenient point of communication with them, as well as with the bishops of the ancient churches of the East, to whom our church has been for centuries known only by name (e).

(e) Gibraltar was ultimately fixed upon for this See.

"We propose, therefore, that a see be fixed at Valetta, the residence of the English government, and that its jurisdiction extend to all the clergy of our church residing within the limits above specified. In this city, through the munificence of her Majesty the Queen Dowager, a church is in course of erection, which, when completed, will form a suitable cathedral.

"Our attention will then be directed to the countries named in the foregoing lists, without binding ourselves to the exact order therein followed, or precluding ourselves from granting assistance to any place where means may be found for the earlier endowment of a bishopric.

"In no case shall we proceed without the concurrence of her Majesty's government (f); and we think it expedient to appoint a standing committee, consisting of the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Archbishop of York, the Archbishop of Armagh, the Archbishop of Dublin, the Bishop of London, the Bishop of Durham, the Bishop of Winchester, the Bishop of Lincoln, and the Bishop of Rochester, with full powers to confer with the ministers of the crown, and to arrange measures, in concert with them, for the erection of bishoprics in the places above enumerated."

The second declaration of the council was issued from Lambeth Palace in July, 1872. It was as follows:—

"The first declaration of the archbishops and bishops to whose management the Colonial Bishoprics' Fund is committed was set forth in 1841. It was subscribed with the names of four archbishops and thirty-nine bishops; and it proposed the erection of bishoprics in New Zealand, the British possessions in the Mediterranean, New Brunswick, Cape of Good Hope, Van Diemen's Land, Ceylon, Sierra Leone, Guiana, South Australia, Port Phillip, West Australia, North India, and South India. In thirty-one years which have elapsed since then, the council have received and administered a capital sum of 237,893*l.*, which, with the liberality it has stirred up in others, has provided for the endowment or expenses of the bishops of thirty new sees. All the places above-mentioned, with the great exception of North and South India, became, within sixteen years from the date of the declaration, the seats of new bishoprics.

Second declaration.

"In again appealing to the liberality of the church, we point to the work already done, and to the manifest blessing from Almighty God which has rested upon it. Mainly through the aid of the fund, struggling missions have grown into fully-organized branches of the church, breaking forth from the English stem, and promising to spread throughout the heathen

(f) This provision, however proper at the time when it was made, and while the practice of issuing letters patent by the crown, now discontinued, was still in force, has been rendered unnecessary by the unforeseen decision of the world the primitive doctrine and discipline maintained by the Mother Church.

“Still the vast needs of the unconverted countries which God’s providence has connected with Great Britain call for fresh efforts. To name the most pressing—

North America.

“North America.—The enormous diocese of Rupertsland, stretching from Labrador to the Rocky Mountains, over a surface of 2,700,000 square miles, urgently requires division. The Pacific Railway is now attracting multitudes of emigrants into the fertile south-west of Rupertsland, and a new diocese of (1) Saskatchewan should be established for their spiritual benefit. The missions among the Indians have now become so extensive and remote, that they ought to be superintended by two new bishops, to whom the districts of (2) Moose and (3) Athabasca, or Mackenzie River, could be assigned; the Church Missionary Society is willing to have two of its missionaries consecrated, and to allow them, for the present, suitable stipends.

“The Bishop of Columbia long ago proposed a division of his diocese, which now includes a part of the continent as well as Vancouver’s and Queen Charlotte’s Islands; and a small fund has been collected towards an endowment for a diocese of (4) New Westminster.

West Indies.

“West Indies.—The disendowment of the West Indian Church renders it desirable in the lifetime of the present bishops to collect an endowment fund for each diocese, excepting any which may perhaps be endowed by the local legislatures. The old dioceses are (5) Jamaica, (6) Barbados, (7) Antigua, (8) Nassau, and (9) Guiana, and to these must be added the new diocese of (10) Trinidad, and possibly (11) Honduras. Some grants in aid, in proportion to the need of each case, should be given to encourage these dioceses to provide endowments for their bishops. The case of the diocese of Jamaica is distinguished by the fact that the bishop of Kingston, by whom it is now administered, has lost his episcopal income of 1,200*l.* since the death of the Bishop of Jamaica.

Africa.

“Africa.—The missionary bishopric of the (12) Niger Territory has no endowment. The Church Missionary Society has hitherto supported Bishop Crowther, whose ministrations are carried on in the region adjoining the colony of Lagos, including the Niger and its tributary the Bonny.

“A bishopric in connection with the West Indian Mission to West Africa was long ago projected. If this is to be effected, the (13) Isle de Los, now a station of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel, would form a healthy and convenient site for a bishopric.

“A small endowment has already been provided for the archdeaconry of (14) George, in the hope that it will be separated at no distant time from the diocese of Capetown and constituted a separate bishopric. This is indeed an urgent claim. The Bishop of Capetown has expressed, to those to whom he has spoken in confidence, his conviction that, unless some such effectual aid is afforded him, he must ere long sink under his labours.

“The extensive missionary diocese of (15) Bloemfontein, which is now burdened with the additional care of the African Diamond Fields, requires help to complete its endowment. The bishop is at present entirely supported by an annual grant from the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel, and the people of the Orange River Territory are trying to collect part of an endowment.

“In the (16) Transvaal Republic, there are not only multitudes of unconverted Baralongs and Matabele, but also a large number of English residents in the towns and settlements for whom a bishop is required.

“The large district of (17) Kaffraria and (18) Alfredia, between the dioceses of Grahamstown and Natal, will at no distant time afford a field for two bishops: the support of one would be undertaken by the Scottish Episcopal Church.

“An endowment for at least one missionary bishop in (19) Madagascar should be at once provided.

“Asia.—The diocese of Calcutta (72,000,000 population) still remains under one bishop. (20) Lahore or Agra, (21) Burmah, British or Independent, and (22) Singapore in the Straits, now a separate colony, have been suggested by local authorities as the sees of future bishops. (23) Tinnevely, with its 40,000 native christians, 18,000 catechumens, and 80 native clergy, distant 330 miles from Madras, was long ago pointed out as needing a resident bishop. These, and other cases in India which are most urgent, might be the object of a general collection for Indian bishoprics, to be applied by the Colonial Bishoprics' Council as opportunities are afforded in that vast heathen dependency and the missionary districts near it.

“The Church Missionary Society has expressed its readiness to pay, for the present, the salary of an additional bishop in (24) China, and steps have been taken with a view to an appointment. Ultimately his salary should be provided for by a permanent endowment.

“Australasia.—The endowment of a new bishopric in (25) North Australia has already been commenced. A division of the large diocese of Melbourne by making (26) Ballarat the site of a new bishopric has been proposed, and it seems to be called for both for the relief of the over-burdened bishop and by the increasing population of the colony. The diocese of (27) Honolulu is without endowment, and it is desirable that some assistance towards it should be given from this country, which has supplied Hawaii with its first two bishops.

“Of the above twenty-seven bishoprics, eight are already in existence and nineteen are new. It is not proposed by the council that the entire endowment of these sees should be raised in England, but that the christians in each country (specially those which are already under a colonial bishop), and the merchants who derive wealth from thence, should unite according to their ability with the Colonial Bishops' Council, with the Church Societies, and others in England, in providing the necessary funds.

"Such is but a portion of the work now before us. Will the Church of England, in the sight of these needs, and in gratitude to God for the unequalled mercies it has itself received, enable us to undertake the discharge of so urgent and so blessed a duty as to plant the church in its integrity in those wide districts? We appeal to it earnestly to grant us the funds we require. Never was it more true, never perhaps was it more needful to repeat the truth: 'The Harvest truly is plenteous, but the labourers are few.'"

Jubilee Report.

In 1891 the Council for Colonial Bishops put forth a Jubilee Report. In that it is shown that the following bishoprics mentioned in the Report of 1872 have since been established:—(2) Moosonee, (24) Mid China (10) Trinidad, (17) St. John's, Kaffraria, in that same year; (3) Mackenzie River, (1) Saskatchewan, (26) Ballarat, (19) Madagascar in 1874; (20) Lahore, (21) Rangoon in Burmah in 1877; and (16) Pretoria in the Transvaal, (25) North Queensland, and (4) New Westminster in 1880. Moreover, bishoprics not mentioned in the Report of 1872 had been established under the rapid development of English colonization and church work in the following places:—Algoma in 1873, Niagara in 1874, Caledonia in 1877, Travancore and Cochin in the same year, North China in 1880, Japan in 1883, Assiniboia and Qu'Appelle in 1881, Riverina in 1884, and Chota Nagpur in 1889.

Organization
and synods.

The establishment of bishops in the colonies was not the only step required for the organization of a Church whose members, scattered over forty colonies, were already, in 1872, ministered to by more than 2,000 clergymen. Diocesan and provincial synods became a matter of necessity to insure harmonious action, and these were constituted in the course of a few years by independent and almost simultaneous efforts in America, Australia, New Zealand and Africa. Only the most important of these efforts can be recorded here.

In America.

The clergy and laity present at the triennial visitation of the diocese of Toronto in 1851, determined that it was expedient and desirable to apply to the crown for the establishment of a diocesan synod or convocation, consisting of the laity as well as the clergy. And at the next triennial visitation, in 1853, it was resolved that this meeting, composed of the bishop, clergy and lay representatives, are the diocesan synod of this diocese. On their petition an act (19 & 20 Vict. c. 141 (Canadian)) was passed in Canada in June, 1856, and assented to by her Majesty in May, 1857, to enable members of the united Church of England and Ireland in Canada to meet in synod, both in their several dioceses, and in general assembly. This act was afterwards explained by 22 Vict. sess. 1, c. 139 (Canadian).

The Church Society of the diocese of Toronto is, by virtue of a statute of the Province of Ontario (f), now incorporated with the Synod of the diocese of Toronto under the name of the Incorporated Synod of the Diocese of Toronto.

The synod of the united Church of England and Ireland in the diocese of Toronto consists of the bishop, the priests and deacons licensed by the bishop, or holding office in any college or school under his jurisdiction, and not under ecclesiastical censure; and lay representatives, not more than three from each parish. The representatives must be male communicants of at least one year's standing, elected annually by the laymen of twenty-one years of age and upwards within the parish, who have declared themselves in writing in a book to be members of the united Church of England and Ireland, and to belong to no other religious denomination. The synod meets annually. No act is valid without the concurrence of the bishop and of the majority both of the clergy and the laity present; and when a division takes place, the lay representatives vote by parishes, the majority being considered as the vote of the parish.

The provincial synod of the united Church of England and Ireland in Canada held its first meeting on 10th September, 1861. It consists of the bishops having sees or assisting within the province, and of delegates chosen from the clergy and laity, twelve of each order from each diocese. The bishops deliberate in one house, the delegates in another. The second Wednesday of September in every third year is the ordinary time of meeting; and a majority of the bishops, with one-fourth of the clerical and one-fourth of the lay delegates, constitutes a quorum. The metropolitan presides in the upper house, and an elected prolocutor in the lower. No proposition is valid until it has received the separate sanction of both houses, which must be declared by the president in writing. Among its canons are some on the nomination and election of a metropolitan, on his powers, on the constitution of his court of appeal, on the trial of a bishop, on the submission of clergy to the canons of the provincial and diocesan synods, &c.

On October 1st, 1850, Bishop Broughton of Sydney, with In Australia. his suffragan bishops of New Zealand, Tasmania, Adelaide, Melbourne, and Newcastle, held a memorable conference at Sydney, and published their decisions and opinions on various doctrinal and ecclesiastical matters in a report. They stated the necessity for duly constituted provincial and diocesan synods composed of bishops and clergy, and meeting simultaneously with provincial and diocesan conventions composed of elected laymen; and they organized the Australian Board of Missions.

In April, 1866, at a conference holden in Sydney, certain constitutions were agreed to for the management of the united Church of England and Ireland in the colony of New South Wales. Synods are to be holden annually in each diocese of the diocese of Toronto, and to under the presidency of its bishop, who does not vote. The number of lay representatives must not exceed in Sydney and Goulburn thrice, and in Newcastle twice, the number of clergy summoned. One-fourth of the members of each order constitute a quorum. Votes are not taken by orders unless desired in Sydney and Goulburn by five members, or in Newcastle by the bishop or five members. If the bishop withholds his assent to any ordinance, it may be referred for determination to a provincial synod. In Sydney and Goulburn all clergymen licensed to a separate cure of souls, and in Newcastle all licensed clergymen, are summoned to the diocesan synod. Representatives are elected in each separate cure of souls by the male occupiers of seats who are twenty-one years old or more, and declare themselves in writing to be members of the united Church of England and Ireland. The representatives in Sydney and Goulburn must be male communicants of full age; two from each cure, unless more than fifty qualified electors meet, when there may be three; and in Sydney a clergyman not licensed to a separate cure may be chosen a representative; in Newcastle, the representatives must be lay communicants of full age, one from each cure, unless more than thirty qualified electors meet, when they may choose two. A colonial or provincial synod of the united Church of England and Ireland within the colony shall be holden once in every three years under the presidency of the metropolitan bishop of Sydney; there shall be two houses, viz. of bishops and diocesan representatives; in the latter house the voting is by dioceses, three clerical and three lay representatives being a quorum for each diocese. The colonial synod by its decisions binds all members of the Church within the colony. No synod shall make any alteration in the articles, liturgy, or formularies of the Church, except in conformity with any alteration made by competent authority of the Church in the United Kingdom. All ordinances passed by any synod are to be sent to the Archbishop of Canterbury.

An act afterwards passed the colonial legislature giving binding force to the synodal constitutions in connexion with the holding of property (g).

The first diocesan conference in Melbourne was holden in 1851; and some unsuccessful attempts were made to carry a bill through the local legislature. After a second diocesan conference in 1854, the legislature, in November, 1854, passed an act to enable the bishops, clergy and laity of the united Church of

No. 3, "An Act to provide for the creation of corporate bodies of trustees in which property belonging to the Church of England may be vested, and to make further provisions in reference thereto." See also 8 Will. 4. No. 5, 21 Vict. No. 4, 51 Vict. No. 1 (The Sydney Bishopric and Church Property Act), 52 Vict. No. 2 (The Church of England Property Act), and 56 Vict. England and Ireland in Victoria to provide for the regulation of the affairs of the said Church. The royal assent was given to this act in 1856. It enacts that it shall be lawful for any bishop of the united Church of England and Ireland in Victoria to convene an assembly of the licensed clergy and the laity of the Church in his diocese (h). Their regulations bind only the bishop, clergy and laity of the Church, and are not valid without the concurrence of the three orders voting separately. The assembly may establish a commission for the trial of ecclesiastical offences. The right of appeal to the Queen in Council, to the Archbishop of Canterbury, and to the metropolitan, is preserved. One or more (not exceeding four) lay representatives are elected in each cure of souls by the laymen therein, who are of the age of twenty-one years, and have declared in writing that they are members of the united Church of England and Ireland, and belong to no other religious denomination. The representatives (one for every fifty electors) must be communicants of at least a year's standing. Regulations passed by the assembly must be sent to the Archbishop of Canterbury, to the metropolitan, and to the Queen, and may be disallowed by her Majesty. So soon as a province shall have been constituted in Victoria, it may convene the bishops thereof, and require them to convene representatives of their diocesan assemblies to meet in provincial assembly.

On October 9th, 1855, the bishop, clergy and lay representatives of the diocese of Adelaide in synod assembled, signed and sealed certain fundamental provisions and regulations for the government of that diocesan church, which were declared to be a consensual compact between the subscribing parties. The diocese is declared to be a part of the united Church of England and Ireland, and to maintain the doctrine and sacraments of Christ as that Church receives them, together with the Book of Common Prayer. The synod consists of the bishop, licensed clergy (deacons having no vote), and synodsmen (four for each city church, and two for each country church) being in full communion, and elected annually, in the respective congregations, by the stated attendants at the church who have signed a declaration that they are members of the united Church of England and Ireland, and belong to no other religious denomination. The synod meets annually in Adelaide under the presidency of the bishop. Clergy and synodsmen speak and vote on equal terms. A fourth of the whole body is a quorum. All questions respecting the appropriation of the funds are decided by a majority of the synod not voting by orders. No fundamental provisions can be altered without the consent of the bishop, and at least two-thirds of the clergy and synodsmen present, respectively voting by orders.

On June 15th, 1857, the bishops and certain clergy and laity representing a numerous body of the members of the united Church of England and Ireland in New Zealand met at Auckland and agreed to a constitution, associating themselves together by voluntary compact as a branch of the said Church. The fundamental provisions declare entire agreement in doctrine with the Church of England, and ordain a general synod of the branch of the united Church of England and Ireland in the colony of New Zealand, which shall consist of three orders, bishops, clergy and laity, the consent of all which orders is necessary to all binding acts. The general synod meets every third year, each diocese being entitled to an equal number of clerical representatives and an equal number of lay representatives (communicants of full age). This synod is entrusted with power to declare persons incompetent to take part in a general or diocesan synod, power to determine how and by whom patronage shall be exercised, to frame regulations for the management of the property holden in trust for the synod, and to depose from his appointment any person receiving income out of such trust property, power to establish tribunals for doctrine and discipline, and to associate with itself missionary dioceses in the islands of the Pacific. The diocesan synods must be similar in constitution to the general synod, and persons aggrieved by them may appeal to it, and it may alter or supersede any regulation of a diocesan synod. The nomination of a bishop is made by a diocesan synod, and sanctioned by the general synod, subject to his declaring in writing his assent to this constitution. Every clergyman, trustee and catechist under the authority of the general synod, must sign a declaration of his submission to its authority, and consent to resign his appointments and emoluments whenever called upon by the general synod to do so. The Trusts Act passed the New Zealand parliament in 1858 (g).

The first provincial synod of New Zealand was holden at Wellington in March, 1859; the first diocesan synod of New Zealand at Auckland in 1860.

In South Africa.

In 1857, on January 21st and following days, the Church of the diocese of Capetown in synod assembled agreed upon certain constitutions and acts. In a preliminary declaration of principles they declared themselves in union and full communion with the united Church of England and Ireland,—an integral portion of that Church; also that they received the authorized version of the Bible and the Book of Common Prayer, and maintained the doctrine and sacraments of Christ as the Church of England receives them. They disclaimed the right to alter the standards of faith and doctrine, the formularies in use in the Church. The synod consists of the bishop, the clergy inducted or licensed by the bishop (deacons having no vote), and lay delegates, one (except in the case of the cathedral church, which may send two) from each parish, chapelry or separate congregation, elected after notice has been given of the meeting of the synod; the delegates must be of the full age of twenty-one years, and on the list of communicants for the twelve months preceding the election. Every adult male parishioner is entitled to vote at that election if he be on the list of communicants or have signed a declaration that he is a member of the church of the diocese of Capetown in union and full communion with the united Church of England and Ireland, and belongs to no other religious body. The clergy and delegates ordinarily sit and vote as one body; but any member may demand a vote by orders. A quorum consists of not less than one-fourth of the qualified presbyters of the diocese, and one-fourth of the elected delegates. The synod meets at intervals of not less than two and not more than four years.

In the event of a provincial assembly being convened, the diocese of Capetown was to be represented by four clergy and four lay delegates of the synod, elected by the synod; a deacon-representative may be elected by the deacons. A conference of the bishops of the province was holden on 26th December, 1860, at Capetown.

In February, 1870, the Church of the province of South Africa, otherwise known as the Church of England in those parts, met by representation as a provincial synod in Capetown. They agreed upon a constitution in twenty-four articles and upon twenty-seven canons, and passed twenty resolutions. The synod consists of the bishops of five dioceses, one clerical representative for every ten (or fraction of ten) clergymen in each diocese, and the same number of lay representatives as clerical. Lay representatives must be communicants of at least twenty-one years old (h).

The present organization of the Church in foreign parts consists of six provinces, viz., Canada, Rupertsland, New South Wales, New Zealand, South Africa, and India and Ceylon, under metropolitans; and eighty-five dioceses, viz., Montreal, Quebec, Toronto, Huron, Ontario, Fredericton, Algoma, Niagara, Nova Scotia, Newfoundland, Rupertsland, Athabasca (now Mackenzie River), Selkirk, Moosonee, Qu'Appelle (late Assiniboia), Saskatchewan, Calgary, Caledonia, Columbia*, New Westminster, Jamaica+, Nassau+, Barbados*+, Trinidad+, Antigua*+, Guiana+, Falkland Islands*+, Sierra Leone+, Capetown, Grahamstown, Natal (now Maritzburg), Zululand*, Pretoria, Zanzibar, Nyassa Land, Eastern Equatorial Africa, Western Equatorial Africa (formerly Niger Territory+), Madagascar, St. Helena, Mashonaland, Lebombo, St. John's, Kaffraria, Bloemfontein*, Mauritius+, Jerusalem*+, Calcutta*+, Madras*+, Bombay*+, Colombo+, Lahore, Rangoon, Travancore and Cochin, Chota Nagpur, Singapore Labuan+ and legislatures.

In this chapter, the principal acts which have been noticed are statutes of the imperial legislature.

There are, however, as matter of fact, many statutes framed by the local legislature in the colonies on ecclesiastical matters; some of which have been noticed, not only in colonies where the Church is or has been formally established by the imperial legislature, but also in colonies where the Church has never been so established.

Norfolk Island.

It should be noticed here, that Norfolk Island was, by an imperial act, 6 & 7 Vict. c. 35, and letters patent pursuant thereto, at one time made part of the diocese of Tasmania; this act being afterwards formally repealed by another act, 32 & 33 Vict. c. 16.

SECT. 2.—General Status of the Church in the Colonies.

The question as to the legal status of the Church in the colonies has undergone much discussion during the last quarter of a century. It is unnecessary here to consider whether the different steps of legal reasoning which have led to the conclusions which I am about to state were consistently and wisely taken or not.

Classification of colonies.

The colonies of the crown admit relatively to the present purpose of this classification, viz. :—

1. Colonies which have a parliamentary representation.
2. Colonies which have not, usually called crown colonies.

Decisions as to the status of the Church in the Colonies.

A series of comparatively recent judgments, chiefly those of the privy council, must be consulted upon this subject; from them the following extracts are taken (i) :—

Re The Bishop of Natal.

The privy council, in the case of Re The Bishop of Natal, in 1864, said:—"We therefore arrive at the conclusion, that although in a Crown Colony, properly so called, or in cases where the letters patent are made in pursuance of the authority of an act of parliament (such, for example, as the act of the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 13), a bishopric may be constituted and ecclesiastical jurisdiction conferred by the sole authority of the Crown, yet that the letters patent of the Crown will not have any such effect or operation in a colony or settlement which is possessed of an independent legislature" . . . "Let it be granted or assumed that the letters patent are sufficient in law to confer on Dr. Gray the ecclesiastical status of Metropolitan, and to create between him and the Bishops of Natal and Graham's Town the personal relation of Metropolitan and Suffragan as ecclesiastics, yet it is quite clear that the crown had no power to confer any jurisdiction or coercive legal authority upon the Metropolitan over the Suffragan bishops, or over any other person" (j).

(i) See Bernard, Remarks on some late Decisions respecting the Colonial Church, 1866.

In an earlier case, Long v. The Bishop of Capetown, in 1863 (k), the same tribunal expressed itself as follows:—

Long v. The Bishop of Capetown.

"The Church of England, in places where there is no Church established by law, is in the same situation with any other religious body,—in no better, but in no worse position; and the members may adopt, as the members of any other communion may adopt, rules for enforcing discipline within their body which will be binding on those who expressly or by implication have assented to them.

"It may be further laid down that where any religious or other lawful association has not only agreed on the terms of its union, but has also constituted a tribunal to determine whether the rules of the association have been violated by any of its members or not, and what shall be the consequence of such violation, the decision of such tribunal will be binding when it has acted within the scope of its authority, has observed such forms as the rules require, if any forms be prescribed, and, if not, has proceeded in a manner consonant with the principles of justice.

"In such cases the tribunals so constituted are not in any sense courts; they derive no authority from the Crown; they have no power of their own to enforce their sentences; they must apply for that purpose to the courts established by law, and such courts will give effect to their decision, as they give effect to the decisions of arbitrators, whose jurisdiction rests entirely upon the agreement of the parties.

"These are the principles upon which the courts in this country have always acted in the disputes which have arisen between members of the same religious body, not being members of the Church of England. They were laid down most distinctly and acted upon by Vice-Chancellor Shadwell and Lord Lyndhurst in the case of Dr. Warren, so much relied on at the bar, and the report of which in Mr. Grindwood's book seems to bear every mark of accuracy.

"To these principles, which are founded in good sense and justice, and established by the highest authority, we desire strictly to adhere" . . . (l).

In Regina v. Eton College (m), the Court of Queen's Bench, in 1857, then presided over by Lord Campbell, had said—

Regina v. Eton College.

"We do not question the power of the Queen to create a bishopric in any part of her dominions except where, as in Scotland, such an exercise of prerogative is forbidden. In a newly settled colony such an exercise of prerogative is lawful; but we must bear in mind that in such a colony there is no established church, and that the ministers of religion in communion with the Church of England, with the Church of Scotland, and with the Church of Rome, in the absence of any imperial or colonial legislation on the subject, are all upon an equal footing. If, by legislative enactment, there were a fund created for the support of 'the Protestant clergy in New Zealand,' according to the opinion given by the judges in the house of lords upon the Canada Reserves (n), the Episcopalian and Presbyterian clergy in the colony would be entitled to share it in equal proportions. It has likewise been held that the Crown may create an ecclesiastical Roman Catholic corporation in an English colony, as well as a Protestant bishopric."

The actual decision in the case was that the Crown had no right of nomination to a benefice vacated by the appointment of the holder of it to a bishopric in the colonies (o). "There can be no doubt," the judges said, "that, on the promotion of the incumbent of a benefice in England to a bishopric in England, the benefice is avoided, and it belongs to the Queen to present to the benefice so avoided. This is clearly a prerogative of the Crown, whatever may have been the reason for it, and however it may have been acquired. It rests upon uniform usage, and is supported by so many dicta of our text writers, and decisions of our courts of justice, that it cannot now for a moment be questioned. The prerogative is stated likewise to extend to the bishopric of Sodor and Man, not within the realm of England, although held under the crown of England, that see having been immemorially a see of the Church of England, anciently attached to the province of Canterbury, and more recently to the province of York. Whether the prerogative likewise extends to the case of an English incumbent promoted to a bishopric in Ireland has been considered a question of grave doubt."

The privy council having decided that the metropolitan Bishop of Capetown had no coercive jurisdiction over the Bishop of Natal, and, therefore, that deprivation of that prelate by him was civilly null and void, another form of the question came in the case of The Bishop of Natal v. Gladstone, in 1866, before the Master of the Rolls. The facts of this last case may be stated as follows:—

*The Bishop of Natal v.
Gladstone.*

Funds were subscribed and vested in trustees in England for the creation and endowment of a bishop of the united Church of England and Ireland in Natal—a colony having an independent legislature,—and the crown, on the application of the trustees, appointed the plaintiff bishop of the see or diocese of Natal by letters patent, purporting to give him coercive jurisdiction over his clergy, and to make him subject to the Bishop of Capetown as his metropolitan. The plaintiff was consecrated in 1853. A suit was instituted by the plaintiff to obtain payment of the income of the endowment. The trustees alleged by their answer that the effect of the judgment of the judicial committee in Re Bishop of Natal (p) was that, inasmuch as no coercive jurisdiction could be given to a bishop in a colony possessed of an independent legislature, the letters patent had failed to create a legal see or diocese, and thus the objects of the subscribers had failed. Upon this state of facts it was, in substance, decided: That the plaintiff retained his legal status as Bishop of Natal, notwithstanding the said judgment; that though the letters patent had failed to confer upon him any effective coercive jurisdiction over his clergy, he could still enforce obedience by having recourse to the civil courts; and that, as no allegation was raised in the pleadings against the plaintiff's character or doctrine, he was entitled to the income of the endowment (q).

In The Bishop of Capetown v. The Bishop of Natal another phase of the same question came before the privy council on the following facts:—

*The Bishop of Capetown v.
The Bishop of Natal.*

In 1850 a grant was made in the name and on behalf of her Majesty of a piece of land in the town of Pietermaritzburg and district of Natal in the colony to the appellant, the Bishop of Cape Town, and his successors, in trust for the English Church. In October, 1853, the appellant, in pursuance of the power given him in his letters patent, resigned the office and dignity of Bishop of Cape Town. In November, 1853, letters patent were issued for erecting the district of Natal into a separate see or diocese, subject and subordinate with the see of Graham's Town, thereby also created a separate see, to the metropolitan see of Cape Town; and the respondent was appointed Bishop of Natal. The respondent was, as in the original letters patent creating the appellant Bishop of Cape Town, constituted a corporation sole, with the like power to hold and enjoy lands; and the church then building on the ground granted in 1850 was declared to be thenceforth the cathedral church and see of the respondent as such Bishop of Natal. Soon after the respondent's consecration, the appellant appointed him by power of attorney to act as trustee of certain lands and churches in the colony and see of Natal, including the land and cathedral church thereon in the city of Pietermaritzburg, granted in 1850, and which had then been entered on the colonial register in the name of the appellant. In 1864 the appellant revoked this power of attorney. In consequence of this and other proceedings taken at the instance of the appellant to prevent the respondent from having the free use of the cathedral church at Pietermaritzburg, the respondent brought an action of ejectment against the appellant for possession of the land and church, claiming nominal damages, and for the substitution of his own for the appellant's

name as trustee thereof. The supreme court gave judgment in favour of the respondent, and decreed the land and the buildings thereon to stand vested in the respondent and his successors as bishops of Natal.

On appeal, the judicial committee held, first, that though the suit was not properly framed so as to allow the substitution of the respondent as trustee in the place of the appellant, yet that, having regard to the terms of the grant and the successive letters patent appointing the appellant and respondent respectively Bishops of Cape Town and Natal, and that the respondent's patent was subsequent to the appellant's resignation, but prior to his second patent as metropolitan, the appellant had ceased on such resignation to be a trustee of the land and the cathedral church, or to have any estate or right to interfere with the respondent's free access to and use of such church; and, secondly, that it was competent to the Crown at the date of the letters patent to the respondent, to "ordain and declare that the church in the city of Pietermaritzburg shall thenceforth be the cathedral church and see of the respondent and his successors, Bishops of Natal."

And the decree of the court below was varied by its being declared, that the respondent, as Bishop of Natal, should have free and uninterrupted access to the land and premises in the grant of 1850, for the purpose of enjoying and exercising all rights, privileges and immunities which had hitherto been enjoyed and exercised, or ought to be enjoyed and exercised, by the Bishop of Natal, as such bishop or otherwise, in reference to or within the cathedral thereon, and its appurtenances; and that the appellant, the Bishop of Cape Town, and his agents, be restrained from in any manner interfering with such access, enjoyment, or exercise; saving, however, to any, except the appellant, any rights in reference to the cathedral church which they also enjoyed (o).

patent.

Since the decisions in the above cases of Long v. The Bishop of Capetown and Re Bishop of Natal, the government has discontinued the issue of letters patent to bishops in colonies possessing an independent legislation.

Merriman v.
Williams.

In the case of Merriman v. Williams (p), the Bishop of Grahamstown had brought a suit in the civil court of the colony against Dr. Williams, who had accepted the office of dean under and from him, but who was also officiating minister in possession of the Church of St. George, in Grahamstown, which had been made the cathedral, to enforce sentences of the Diocesan Court of Grahamstown, whereby the defendant, as member of the Church of the Province of South Africa, had been found guilty of contumacious disobedience, suspended from his ministerial functions, and finally excommunicated. It appeared in the discussion of the case before the Privy Council that the only civil remedy which could be asked for was in respect of the possession and user of the Church of St. George, which had been originally granted by the Crown for ecclesiastical purposes in connection with the Church of England. The Privy Council, confirming the decision of the Supreme Court of Cape Colony, held that the Church of the Province of South Africa, of which both parties were members, was not a church in connection with the Church of England as by law established, and that in consequence the Church of South Africa had not, and Bishop Merriman had not, any rights to the Church of St. George, and that it was not his cathedral. They founded this decision upon the canons passed in the provincial synod of 1870 (q), and especially upon an article in the constitution, which was as follows:—

“Provided also that in the interpretation of the aforesaid standards and formularies the church of this province be not held to be bound by decisions in questions of faith and doctrine, or in questions of discipline relating to faith and doctrine, other than those of its own ecclesiastical tribunals, or of such other tribunal as may be accepted by the provincial synod as a tribunal of appeal.”

The Privy Council held that this proviso created a “present and actual divergence” between the two churches, with only a “potential agreement”: because, though the ecclesiastical tribunals of South Africa might possibly decide on all important points as the Privy Council had done, the standards of the two churches were different.

If it be respectful to criticise this decision, the editor would point out two things: first, that the creeds, articles and liturgies of a church are its standards; and that, if the judicial interpretation of these formularies be the standard, divergence from which makes a different church, then, as the Privy Council may (for so it has itself declared) come to different interpretations at different times, the Church of England is or may be different from itself:

Examination of the reasoning of this decision.

Secondly, that the Church of Ireland has not now, and had not even when it was in union with the Church of England, the same final tribunal, and therefore, though in union, was not, according to this decision, and still less is now, in connection with the Church of England.

The decision of the Supreme Court of the Cape was in part rested, and might have been wholly supported and the same conclusions might have been reached, upon quite different grounds; and, indeed, as will be seen by the report of the argument, the ground upon which the Privy Council based its judgment was by no means the most prominent in the arguments urged by counsel for the successful party before its bar.

But still it must be taken that where trusts of land or buildings for religious purposes have been declared to be for such of general

*Ex parte

purposes "in connection with the Church of England," that particular form of words will be holden by the Courts to exclude any colonial church which does not formally accept the decisions of the Privy Council sitting as a court of final appeal in ecclesiastical cases. But it is hardly likely that the decision would be extended or applied to any form of words except the particular one.

In Ex parte Jenkins (q), it appeared that in 1867, the court of chancery of the Bermuda Islands made certain orders, the effect of which was to refuse an application by a clerk in holy orders for a writ de vi laicâ removendâ, to remove an opposition to his being inducted into a parish church in the island under a mandate from the commissary of the Bishop of Newfoundland. In explaining the reasons for refusing the writ, de vi laicâ removendâ, the chief justice, after stating that it was not competent to the crown to alter the constitution of the church in the colony by conferring by patent upon a bishop any coercive or judicial powers not granted by the imperial parliament or the local legislature, added, "That although the institution of a clergyman to a benefice is not an act of coercive or contentious jurisdiction, yet it is not a mere ministerial act, but is of a judicial nature. . . ."

There was an appeal from this sentence to the Privy Council in 1868. The judgment of that tribunal, referring to this language of the chief justice, observed, "Strictly speaking, however, it is not so much the institution which is judicial, as the previous examination of the fitness of the clerk presented; for if the clerk be really idonea persona, the bishop would be bound to institute him. But whether institution is to be regarded as a judicial or a ministerial act is wholly immaterial. The question is, whether the Crown has conferred an authority which was not within its competency.

"Now, it is a fact, which cannot be disputed, that for more than a century the Crown possessed the power of collating to all the vacant benefices in the Bermudas by direct nomination, a power which it exercised by delegation to the successive governors, who were usually described as Ordinaries in their patents, and who, to a certain extent, exercised the powers of that ecclesiastical officer. But when a Bishop or Ecclesiastical Ordinary was duly appointed, with spiritual oversight of the Church in the Bermudas, the Crown, as patron, thought proper to leave to the Governor the power of nominating the clerk, but recognized, by the letters patent granted to the Bishop, the power of institution belonging to his office. The Bishop, as has been said, is bound, if the clerk be idonea persona, to institute him.

"It cannot be supposed that when the Crown gave a clergyman a title to a living by one act of collation, the appointment was made without previous inquiry as to his qualifications. The whole effect of the alteration of the system of conferring benefices in the Bermudas is to transfer this inquiry from the Governor to the Bishop.

"It seems to have been supposed, however, that the cases of Long v. The Bishop of Cape Town (r) and In re The Lord Bishop of Natal (s), are authorities for the proposition that the Bishop of Newfoundland has no legal status, and cannot lawfully exercise any episcopal function, within the Bermudas. The first case certainly does not go the length of that proposition, for it decided only that the Crown cannot confer coercive authority on a bishop, in a colony possessing a constitutional form of government, without the consent of the legislature. The judicial committee, in deciding the case of the Bishop of Natal, has certainly used expressions which would restrain the power of the Crown in the creation of bishops within even narrower limits.

"It has been argued that the Master of the Rolls, in his judgment in The Bishop of Natal v. Gladstone (t) has greatly qualified the effect of the former judgment of the Privy Council.

"Their lordships think that in the present case they are not called upon to express an opinion, whether these two decisions can be reconciled. For they are clearly of opinion that the question, whether the Bishop of Newfoundland has any lawful status, or can exercise any Episcopal function, and particularly that of institution, in the Bermudas, has been set at rest conclusively by the repeated recognition of his status and functions by the colonial legislature. The Acts of 1843, of 1864, of 1865 and 1866, mentioned in the memorandum of the Attorney-General of the Bermudas, all recognize the legal status of the bishop of the diocese (u)."

The status of the Church in the colonies being thus placed for the most part on the footing of voluntary religious societies (x), it is important to record the careful language of the House of Lords on this subject in the case of Forbes v. Eden (y). In this case, which was a suit instituted in a civil court by a clergyman of the Scotch Episcopal Church, to set aside canons passed in 1863, for the purpose of cementing the union between the Scotch Episcopal Church and the Church of England and Ireland, the suit was dismissed with costs.

Lord Cranworth in that case said, "Save for the due disposal and administration of property, there is no authority in the Courts either of England or of Scotland to take cognizance of the rules of a voluntary society entered into merely for the regulation of its own affairs. If funds are settled to be disposed of amongst members of a voluntary association, according to their rules and regulations, the Court must necessarily take cognizance of those rules and regulations, for the purpose of satisfying itself as to who is entitled to the funds."

And Lord Colonsay said, "A court of law will not interfere

SECT. 3.—Church in the West Indies.

Jamaica had belonged to Great Britain ever since its conquest and acquisition by Oliver Cromwell, and many of our possessions in the West Indies since the Treaty of Utrecht: it was not, however, till the 5th of July, 1825, that any provision was made by the government of this country for the proper discipline of the church then established in those colonies. 6 Geo. 4, c. 88, enacted the first provisions. Its preamble is as follows:—

6 Geo. 4, c. 88.

Letters patent appointing bishops, archdeacons and ministers for the dioceses of Jamaica;

"Whereas His Majesty, by His several royal letters patent, has been graciously pleased to direct and appoint that the island of Jamaica, the Bahama Islands, and the settlements in the bay of Honduras, and their respective dependencies, should be and become a bishopric, and the diocese and see of a bishop of the united Church of England and Ireland as established by law, to be called 'The Bishopric of Jamaica;' and that there should be one bishop of the said diocese, and that there should also be one archdeacon and seven ministers of the Gospel in and for the said diocese; and in like manner that the islands of Barbadoes, Grenada, St. Vincent's, Dominica, Antigua and Mountserrat, St. Christopher's, Nevis and the Virgin Islands, Trinidad, Tobago and St. Lucie, and their respective dependencies, should be and become a bishopric, and the diocese and see of a bishop, to be called 'The Bishopric of Barbadoes and the Leeward Islands,' and that there shall be one bishop of the said last-mentioned diocese, and that there should also be one archdeacon in and for the island of Barbadoes, and one archdeacon in and for the island of Antigua, and that there should be thirteen ministers of the Gospel and three catechists within the said last-mentioned diocese; and it is expedient that provision should be made for the payment of yearly salaries to such bishops, archdeacons, ministers and catechists respectively, and also to enable His Majesty to grant to such bishops respectively yearly pensions or annuities on their retiring from their dioceses."

and of Barbadoes and the Leeward Islands.

Extensions.

This act was amended and extended by 7 Geo. 4, c. 4, and 5 Vict. sess. 2, c. 4.

Disestablishment.

31 & 32 Vict. c. 120.

But the Church in the West Indies has since, like the Church in Ireland, been disestablished, as far at least as the imperial legislature is concerned. This was in 1868 by virtue of 31 & 32 Vict. c. 120, entitled "An Act to relieve the Consolidated Fund from the Charge of the Salaries of future Bishops, Archdeacons, Ministers and other Persons in the West Indies." This statute, after reciting the acts above mentioned, proceeds as follows:—

No person hereafter appointed bishop, archany such diocese, shall receive under the provisions of said acts (z), in respect of any such appointment, any salary or other sum whatsoever out of the growing produce of the Consolidated Fund of the United Kingdom. . . .

“Provided always, that nothing herein contained shall authorize any diminution during the life and incumbency of any bishop or archdeacon of any salary of which he is now in the receipt; and that every minister, catechist and schoolmaster in the said dioceses to whom at the time of the passing of this act any sum has been appropriated and made payable as aforesaid under the said act of the fifth year of the reign of her present Majesty shall continue to receive the same, but no larger sum thereunder, so long as he shall hold the appointment, and, subject to any leave of absence which may be granted to him by the officer administering the government of the colony, perform the duties in respect of which such sum was so appropriated and made payable to him, or, subject as aforesaid, so long as he shall perform within the said colony such other duties as may be imposed on him by the bishop of the diocese in addition to, or in lieu of, the duties attached to the appointment which he now holds.”

Sect. 2. “In the event of a vacancy of the said see or diocese of Jamaica the present coadjutor bishop shall, so long as he administers the said diocese as such coadjutor, continue to act in the same manner as at present as archdeacon of Middlesex” (a).

The third section provides for an annual return to parliament of money paid out of the consolidated fund for ecclesiastical purposes in the West Indies.

deacon, minister, or catechist under recited acts, or under any letters patent granted in pursuance thereof, to receive salary out of consolidated fund.

Coadjutor bishop to act as at present in case of vacancy of see of Jamaica.

SECT. 4.—Church in Canada.

The conquest of the province of Quebec was completed in the year 1759. The rights, privileges, lands or seignories holden by the Roman Church previous to the conquest were secured by the articles of capitulation, and subsequently guaranteed by an act of the British parliament in 1774 (b). This act must be holden to recognize the Church of Rome as an, if not the, Established Church of Lower Canada; but in this legislative measure the Church of England was not altogether neglected, it being therein expressly provided (sect. 6), “That it should be lawful for his Majesty, his heirs or successors, to make such provision out of the rest of the said accustomed dues and rights, for the encouragement of the Protestant religion, and for the maintenance and support of a Protestant clergy, within the said province, as should, from time to time, be thought necessary and expedient.”

to the parliament, the 31 Geo. 3, c. 31, commonly called the Constitutional Act of the Canadas, was passed. This statute contained provisions for the maintenance of "a protestant clergy." It has since been repealed.

Certain king's instructions were sent to the Governor of the Canadas in 1818; but they have ceased to be legally binding on the Church. A doubt having arisen whether rectors and parsons duly instituted did not become possessed of rights in all respects similar to those enjoyed by incumbents in England, and were entitled to tithes, etc., was set at rest by an act passed in 1823 by the colonial legislature.

Claim by Presbyterians.

About thirty years after the passing of the 31 Geo. 3, c. 31, a claim was preferred by the Scotch Presbyterian clergy to a share in the provision made for the protestant clergy under the 36th and 42nd sections of that act. Various denominations of dissenters afterwards asserted a similar right; their claims, as well as the state of the church in Canada in 1827, were set forth in a Report of the Committee of the House of Commons.

Opinion of the judges as to the clergy reserves.

In 1840 the subject of the clergy reserves underwent frequent and vehement discussion in both houses of parliament. The House of Lords finally resolved that certain questions should be put to the judges upon this subject, as well as upon an act of the colonial legislature with respect to them; and on the 4th of May, Chief Justice Tindal stated, "that, on the part of her Majesty's judges, he had the honour to represent to their lordships that all the judges of England, with the exception of Lord Denman and Lord Abinger, had met together in Serjeants' Inn, for the purpose of taking into consideration the several questions which their lordships had been pleased to propose to them; and that, after due discussion and consideration of the several subjects involved in these questions, they had agreed unanimously to the answers to be returned to them. Their lordships' questions were as follow:—

"1. Whether the words "a protestant clergy" in the 31 Geo. 3, c. 31, (ss. 35—42,) include any other than clergy of the Church of England, and protestant bishops and priests and deacons, who have received episcopal ordination? And if any other, what other? 2. Whether the effect of the 41st section of the 31 Geo. 3, c. 31, be not entirely prospective, giving power to the legislative council and assembly of either of the provinces of Upper or Lower Canada as to future allotments and appropriations; or whether it can be extended to affect lands which have been already allotted and appropriated under former grants? 3. Whether the Legislative Council and Assembly of the province of Upper Canada, having in an act "to provide for the sale of the clergy reserves, and for the distribution of the proceeds thereof," enacted that it should be lawful for the governor, by and with the advice of the Executive Council, to sell, alienate, and convey in fee simple, all or any of the said clergy reserves; and having further enacted, in the same act, that the proceeds of all past sales of such reserves which have been or may be invested under the authority of the act of the imperial parliament passed in the seventh and eighth years of the reign of his late Majesty king George 4th, intituled "An Act to authorize the Sale of part of the Clergy Reserves in the Provinces of Upper and Lower Canada" (y), shall be subject to such orders and directions as the governor in council shall make and establish for investing in any securities within the province of Upper Canada the amount now funded in England, together with the proceeds hereafter to be received from the sales of all or any of the said reserves, or any part thereof, did, in making such enactments, or either of them, exceed their lawful authority?"

"To the first question, the judges answered,—

"'We are all of opinion that the words "a protestant clergy" in the 31 Geo. 3, c. 31, are large enough to include, and that they do include, other clergy than the clergy of the Church of England.'

"And when their lordships asked, 'If any other, what other?' the judges answered, 'The clergy of the Church of Scotland.'

"To the second question, the judges said,—

"'We are all of opinion, that the effect of the 41st section of the statute is prospective only; and that the power thereby given to the Legislative Council and Assembly of either province cannot be extended to affect lands which have been already allotted and appropriated under former grants.'

"In answer to the last question, the judges said,—

"'We all agree in opinion that the Legislative Council and Assembly in Upper Canada have exceeded their authority in passing an act "to provide for the sale of the clergy reserves, and for the distribution of the proceeds thereof," in respect of both the enactments specified in your Lordships' question; and that the sales which have been, or may be, effected in consequence, are contrary to the provisions of the statute of Geo. IV., and are therefore void'" (z).

This opinion of the judges was followed by the imperial statute 3 & 4 Vict. c. 78. It was intituled "An Act to provide for the Sale of the Clergy Reserves in the Province of Canada, and for the Distribution of the Proceeds thereof." By it the reserves were sold and the Scotch Presbyterians were admitted to a share in them. The 5th section enacts thus:—

"... the share allotted and appropriated to each of the said churches shall be expended for the support and maintenance of public worship and the propagation of religious knowledge, the share of the said Church of England being so expended under the authority of the 'Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts'" (a).

CHAPTER IV.

CHURCH IN THE EAST INDIES.

THE first bishopric in the immense and increasing possessions of the East Indies was created by letters patent in 1814; and by 53 Geo. 3, c. 155, its revenues and jurisdiction were settled as follows:—

53 Geo. 3,
c. 155.

If a bishop and three archdeacons shall be established in India by his Majesty's letters patent, their salaries to be paid by the East India Company.

Sect. 49. "And whereas no sufficient provision hath hitherto been made for the maintenance and support of a church establishment in the British territories in the East Indies and other parts within the limits of the said company's charter (a), be it therefore enacted, That in case it shall please his Majesty, by his royal letters patent under the great seal of the said United Kingdom, to erect, found and constitute, one bishoprick for the whole of the said British territories in the East Indies, and parts aforesaid; one archdeaconry for the presidency of Fort William in Bengal; one archdeaconry for the presidency of Fort St. George on the coast of Coromandel; and one archdeaconry for the presidency and island of Bombay, on the coast of Malabar; and from time to time to nominate and appoint a bishop and archdeacons to such bishopric and archdeaconries respectively; the court of directors of the said company, during such time as the said territorial acquisitions shall remain in the possession of the said company, shall, and they are hereby required to direct and cause to be paid, certain established salaries to such bishop and archdeacons respectively; that is to say, from and out of the revenues of the said presidency of Fort William in Bengal to the said bishop, five thousand pounds by the year, at an exchange of two shillings for the Bengal current rupee; and to the said archdeacon of the said presidency of Fort William, two thousand pounds by the year, at the like exchange; and from and out of the revenues of the presidency of Fort St. George, on the coast of Coromandel, to the archdeacon of the said presidency of Fort St. George, two thousand pounds by the year, at an exchange of eight shillings for the pagoda at Madras; and from and out of the revenues of the presidency and island of Bombay, on the coast of Malabar, to the archdeacon of the said presidency and island of Bombay, two thousand pounds by the year, at an exchange of two shillings and threepence for the Bombay rupee."

(a) The East India Company's charter.

Sect. 50. " . . . the said salaries shall take place and commence from and after the time at which such persons as shall be appointed to the said offices respectively, shall take upon them the execution of their respective offices: and . . . all such salaries shall be in lieu of all fees of office, perquisites, emoluments and advantages whatsoever; and . . . no fees of office, perquisites, emoluments or advantages whatsoever, shall be accepted, received or taken, in any manner or on any account or pretence whatsoever, other than the salaries aforesaid, and . . . such bishop and archdeacons respectively shall be entitled to such salaries so long as they shall respectively exercise the functions of their several offices in the East Indies, or parts aforesaid, and no longer."

Salaries to commence on taking office, and to cease when functions cease.

Sect. 51. " . . . such bishop shall not have or use any jurisdiction, or exercise any episcopal functions whatsoever, either in the East Indies or elsewhere, but only such jurisdiction and functions as shall or may from time to time be limited to him by his Majesty by letters patent under the great seal of the United Kingdom" (b).

Bishop to have no jurisdiction or functions, except those limited by letters patent.

These provisions forbidding any exercise of episcopal functions outside the East Indies have since been modified by 15 & 16 Vict. c. 52, 16 & 17 Vict. c. 49, and 37 & 38 Vict. c. 77, s. 13 (c).

Sect. 52. " . . . it shall and may be lawful for his Majesty, from time to time, if he shall think fit, by his letters patent under the great seal of the said United Kingdom, to grant to such bishop so to be nominated and appointed as aforesaid, such ecclesiastical jurisdiction, and the exercise of such episcopal functions, within the East Indies and parts aforesaid, as his Majesty shall think necessary for the administering holy ceremonies, and for the superintendence and good government of the ministers of the church establishment within the East Indies and parts aforesaid; any law, charter or other matter or thing to the contrary notwithstanding."

Modifications.

His Majesty may grant to bishop by letters patent such ecclesiastical jurisdiction as he may think necessary.

Sect. 53. "That when and as often it shall please His Majesty to issue any letters patent respecting any such bishopric or archdeaconry as aforesaid, or for the nomination or appointment of any person thereto, the warrant for the bill in every such case shall be countersigned by the president of the board of commissioners for the affairs of India."

Warrant for letters patent countersigned by president of board.

The 89th section allows for outfit to the bishop the sum of 1,200*l.*, and to each of the archdeacons 500*l.*

Sect. 2 of 4 Geo. 4, c. 71, repealed so much of the former act as related to pensions.

4 Geo. 4, c. 71.

By sect. 3 of the last act, "It shall and may be lawful for His Majesty, his heirs and successors, in manner in the said act mentioned, to grant to any such bishop who shall have exercised Pensions to bishops.

(b) By the patent of the Bishop of Calcutta, an appeal is given from any sentence he may pronounce, by virtue of his ecclesiastical authority, to the Archbishop of Canterbury.

(c) Vide infra, pp. 1812, 1813, 1816.

in the East Indies or parts aforesaid, for ten years, the office of bishop or archdeacon . . . pensions not exceeding such sums respectively as His Majesty, by the said act" 53 Geo. 3, c. 155, "is empowered to grant to any such bishop . . ."

Chaplains appointed archdeacons to be entitled to pension in a certain proportion. Further provisions as to chaplains.

Sect. 4. ". . . if any person residing any time in the East Indies or parts aforesaid, as one of the chaplains of the said united company (d), shall have been or shall be appointed to the office of such archdeacon as aforesaid, and shall have resided in the East Indies or parts aforesaid as such archdeacon seven years, the period of residence of such person as chaplain shall be accounted and taken as and for a residence as such archdeacon, in the proportion of three years' residence as such chaplain to two years' residence as such archdeacon: Provided also, that nothing herein contained shall extend or be construed to extend to prejudice the right of any person being or having been a chaplain of the said united company, to any benefit he may be entitled to as under or by virtue of any regulation now in force or hereafter to be made by the said united company or their court of directors, nor to prejudice or affect the right of the said united company or their court of directors, to make, repeal, vary, or alter any regulation or regulations respecting the chaplains of the said united company, or the pay or allowances, pensions or retirements of such chaplains which the said united company or their court of directors may now lawfully make, repeal, vary, or alter."

Residence and expense of visitations of bishop to be defrayed by company.

Sect. 5. ". . . it shall and may be lawful for the said company, and they are hereby required to provide a suitable house at Calcutta for the residence of the said bishop, and . . . the expense of the visitations to be made by the said bishop from time to time shall be defrayed by the said company, out of the revenues of the British territories in India: Provided always, that no greater sum on account of providing such house, or of such visitations, be at any time issued, than shall from time to time be defined and settled by the court of directors of the said company with the approbation of the commissioners for the affairs of India, any law or statute to the contrary notwithstanding."

Bishop of Calcutta may admit persons to holy orders without the qualifications required in England.

Sect. 6. "'And whereas doubts have arisen whether the Bishop of Calcutta, in conferring holy orders, is subject to the several provisions and limitations established by the laws of this realm or canons ecclesiastical, as to the titles of the persons to be ordained, and as to the oaths and subscriptions to be by such persons taken and made;' Be it further declared and enacted, That it shall and may be lawful for the Bishop of Calcutta for the time being, to admit into the holy orders of deacon and priest respectively any person whom he shall, upon examination, deem duly qualified specially for the purpose of taking upon himself the cure of souls or officiating in any spiritual capacity within the limits of the said diocese of Calcutta and residing therein; and that a declaration of such purpose, and a written engagement to perform the same, under the hand of such person, being deposited in the hands of such bishop, shall be held to be a sufficient title with a view to such ordination; and that in every such case, it shall be distinctly stated in the letters of ordination of every person so admitted to holy orders, that he has been ordained for the cure of souls within the limits of the said diocese of Calcutta only; and that unless such person shall be a British subject of or belonging to the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, he shall not be required to take and make the oaths and subscriptions which persons ordained in England are required to take and make: Provided always, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to repeal or affect the provisions of "53 Geo. 3, c. 155, "or any letters patent issued by His late Majesty, or by His present Majesty, their heirs and successors, in virtue of the said act or of their lawful prerogative."

By 6 Geo. 4, c. 85, s. 5, when any Bishop of Calcutta dies on his voyage out to India, or within six months after his arrival, his representatives shall have a whole year's salary; and if he dies after having been six months in India, they shall have six months' salary over and above what was then due to him.

After a lapse of twenty-two years since the erection of this see, two new bishoprics were created, that of Madras in 1836, and of Bombay in 1837; and fresh provisions were enacted relative to the discipline of the Church in India, as will be seen by the following extracts from 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 85:—

Sect. 89. "And whereas the present diocese of the bishopric of Calcutta is of too great an extent for the incumbent thereof to perform efficiently all the duties of the office without endangering his health and life, and it is therefore expedient to diminish the labours of the bishop of the said diocese, and for that purpose to make provision for assigning new limits to the diocese of the said bishop, and for founding and constituting two separate and distinct bishoprics, but nevertheless the bishops thereof to be subordinate and subject to the Bishop of Calcutta for the time being, and his successors, as their Metropolitan; be it therefore enacted, That in case it shall please His Majesty to erect, found and constitute two bishoprics, one to be styled the bishopric of Madras and the other the bishopric of Bombay, and from time to time to nominate and appoint bishops to such bishoprics under the style and title of Bishops of Madras and Bombay respectively, there shall be paid from and out of the revenues of the said territories to such bishops respectively the sum of 24,000 Sicca rupees by the year."

Sect. 90. "... the said salaries shall commence from the time at which such persons as shall be appointed to the said office of bishop shall take upon them the execution of their respective offices; and ... such salaries shall be in lieu of all fees of office, perquisites, emoluments or advantages whatsoever, and ... no fees of office, perquisites, emoluments or advantages whatsoever shall be accepted, received or taken by such bishop or either of them, in any manner or on any account or pretence whatsoever, other than the salaries aforesaid; and . . . such bishops respectively shall be entitled to such salaries so long as they shall respectively exercise the functions of their several offices in the British territories aforesaid."

As to jurisdiction of such bishops.

Sect. 92. ". . . such bishops shall not have or use any jurisdiction, or exercise any episcopal functions whatsoever, either in the said territories or elsewhere, but only such jurisdiction and functions as shall or may from time to time be limited to them respectively by His Majesty by His royal letters patent under the great seal of the said United Kingdom."

Modifications.

The provisions forbidding any exercise of episcopal functions outside the territories of Madras and Bombay have since been modified by 15 & 16 Vict. c. 52, 16 & 17 Vict. c. 49, and 37 & 38 Vict. c. 77, s. 13 (c).

The king empowered by letters patent to limit jurisdiction and functions.

Sect. 93. ". . . it shall and may be lawful for His Majesty from time to time, if he shall think fit, by His royal letters-patent under the great seal of the said United Kingdom, to assign limits to the diocese of the bishopric of Calcutta and to the dioceses of the said bishoprics of Madras and Bombay respectively, and from time to time to alter and vary the same limits respectively, as to His Majesty shall seem fit, and to grant to such bishops respectively within the limits of their respective dioceses the exercise of episcopal functions, and of such ecclesiastical jurisdiction as His Majesty shall think necessary for the superintendence and good government of the ministers of the United Church of England and Ireland therein."

The Bishop of Calcutta to be metropolitan in India.

Sect. 94. ". . . the bishop of Calcutta for the time being shall be deemed and taken to be the Metropolitan Bishop in India, and as such shall have, enjoy, and exercise all such ecclesiastical jurisdiction and episcopal functions, for the purposes aforesaid, as His Majesty shall by His royal letters patent under the great seal of the said United Kingdom think necessary to direct, subject nevertheless to the general superintendence and revision of the Archbishop of Canterbury for the time being; and . . . the bishops of Madras and Bombay for the time being respectively shall be subject to the bishop of Calcutta for the time being as such Metropolitan, and shall, at the time of their respective appointments to such bishoprics, or at the time of their respective consecrations as bishop, take an oath of obedience to the said bishop of Calcutta in such manner as His Majesty by His said royal letters patent shall be pleased to direct."

Warrants for bills on letters patent appointing bishops.

Sect. 95. "That when and as often as it shall please His Majesty to issue any letters patent respecting the bishopric of Calcutta, Madras or Bombay, or for the nomination or appointment of any person thereto respectively, the warrant for the bill in every such case shall be countersigned by the president of the board of commissioners for the affairs of India, and by no other person."

Sect. 96. "It shall and may be lawful for His Majesty, His heirs and successors, by warrant under His royal sign manual, countersigned by the chancellor of the exchequer for the time being, to grant to any such bishop of Madras or Bombay respectively who shall have exercised in the British territories aforesaid for fifteen years the office of such bishop a pension not exceeding 800*l.* per annum, to be paid quarterly by the said company."

The king may grant pensions to bishops of Madras or Bombay.

Sect. 97 makes similar provisions as to the bishops of Madras and Bombay to those made for the bishop of Calcutta by 6 Geo. 4, c. 85, s. 5 (d).

Sect. 98. "If it shall happen that either of the bishops of Madras or Bombay shall be translated to the bishopric of Calcutta, the period of residence of such person as bishop of Madras or Bombay shall be accounted for and taken as a residence as bishop of Calcutta; and if any person now an archdeacon in the said territories shall be appointed bishop of Madras or Bombay, the period of his residence in India as such archdeacon shall, for all the purposes of this act, be accounted for and taken as a residence as such bishop."

As to residence of bishop of Madras or Bombay if translated to Calcutta.

Sect. 99. "If any person under the degree of a bishop shall be appointed to either of the bishoprics of Calcutta, Madras or Bombay, who at the time of such appointment shall be resident in India, then and in such case it shall and may be lawful for the Archbishop of Canterbury, when and as he shall be required so to do by His Majesty by His royal letters patent under the great seal of the said United Kingdom, to issue a commission under his hand and seal, to be directed to the two remaining bishops, authorizing and charging them to perform all such requisite ceremonies for the consecration of the person so to be appointed to the degree and office of a bishop."

As to consecration of any person under the degree of a bishop, if resident in India, appointed to a bishopric.

Sect. 100. "The expenses of visitations to be made from time to time by the said bishops of Madras and Bombay respectively shall be paid by the said company out of the revenues of the said territories; provided that no greater sum on account of such visitations be at any time issued than shall from time to time be defined and settled by the court of directors of the said company, with the approbation of the commissioners for the affairs of India."

Provision for expenses of visitations.

Sect. 101. "No archdeacon hereafter to be appointed for the archdeaconry of the presidency of Fort William in Bengal, or the archdeaconry of the presidency of Fort Saint George, or the archdeaconry of the presidency and island of Bombay, shall receive in respect of his archdeaconry any salary exceeding 3,000 sicca rupees per annum. Provided always, that the whole expense incurred in respect of the said bishops and archdeacons shall not exceed 120,000 sicca rupees per annum."

No archdeacon in India to have a salary exceeding 3,000 sicca rupees.

5 & 6 Vict.
c. 119.
Furlough allowances.

By 5 & 6 Vict. c. 119, the following provisions are made as to furlough allowances.

By sect. 1, in case the crown shall grant permission to any bishop of Calcutta who has resided in India ten years, or any bishop of Madras or Bombay who has so resided fifteen years, to return to Europe for not more than eighteen months, reckoning from the departure from India, a furlough allowance not exceeding the amount which might be granted for a pension may, in the same manner in which a pension may be granted to the bishop of Calcutta under "53 Geo. 3, c. 155," be granted to such bishop.

By sects. 2 and 3 a second furlough allowance may be granted after five years; but not more than one bishop is to have a furlough allowance at any one time.

By sect. 4, if the crown enable the bishop of Madras or Bombay to perform the duties of the bishop of Calcutta during his absence on furlough, such bishop so performing the duties shall have an additional allowance of 10,000 company's rupees.

34 & 35
Vict. c. 62.
Power to make rules for leave of absence for bishops, and as to expenses.

By 34 & 35 Vict. c. 62, s. 1, "It shall be lawful for her Majesty to make such rules as to the leave of absence of Indian bishops on furlough or medical certificate as may seem to her expedient: Provided that no farther expenditure of the revenues of India be incurred thereby than is already authorized under existing acts of parliament."

This act did not at first affect the bishopric of Calcutta, but was extended to that bishopric by 37 & 38 Vict. c. 13.

37 & 38 Vict.
c. 13.
Development of Indian episcopate.

These three bishoprics only are, as has been seen, the subject of parliamentary enactment,—an episcopate lamentably inadequate to the wants of India. The stipends and status of these bishops are indeed secured by statute; but if the peculiar legal status of these bishoprics had been holden to prevent (whether by the appointment of suffragans or coadjutors or otherwise) the extension in India of the episcopate on the voluntary principle, now generally prevalent in the foreign dependencies of the crown, the advantage would have been very dearly bought. But, as has been stated, bishoprics at Lahore, Rangoon, Travancore and Cochin, and Chota Nagpur, have since been erected (d).

32 & 33 Vict.
c. 88.
Straits Settlements.
Ceylon.

An imperial act (32 & 33 Vict. c. 88) was passed to separate the Straits Settlements (now formed into the diocese of Singapore, Labuan, and Sarawak) from the diocese of Calcutta.

The bishopric of Colombo is in the province of India and Ceylon.

43 & 44 Vict.
c. 3.

By 43 & 44 Vict. c. 3, s. 2, "It shall be lawful for the Secretary of State in Council of India, from time to time to fix, alter, or abolish the allowances for equipment and voyage of the several officers specified in the first schedule to this act or any of them," among those officers being "the bishops and archdeacons of Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay."

Sect. 3. "It shall be lawful for the Secretary of State in Council of India from time to time to fix and alter the salaries, and to fix, alter, or abolish the allowances of the bishops and archdeacons of Calcutta, Madras, and Bombay, or any of them : Provided that nothing in this section shall affect the salary or allowances of any person who is such bishop or archdeacon at the passing of this Act."

CHAPTER V.

CHURCHES ATTACHED TO CONSULSHIPS.

6 Geo. 4,
c. 87.

6 GEO. 4, c. 87, an act which regulates the payments of salaries and allowances to British consuls at foreign ports, and the disbursements at such ports for certain public purposes, contains various provisions relating to churches and chaplains attached to consulships. For by that act the whole management of the funds and the regulation of the expenditure is under the control of the consul-general or consul, and not of the ambassador; and, by a strange anomaly, if there should be any foreign court where there is an ambassador and not a consul-general or consul, there is no legislative provision for any chaplain at all.

Provision for support of churches, &c., in foreign places where

Sect. 10 recites, "And whereas churches and chapels for the performance of divine service, according to the rites and ceremonies of the united church of England and Ireland, . . . have been erected, and proper grounds have been appropriated and set apart for the interment of the dead, in divers foreign ports and places, and chaplains have been appointed for the performance of divine service in the said churches and chapels, and are now resident in such foreign ports and places;" and enacts "that at any foreign port or place in which a chaplain is now, or shall at any future time be, resident and regularly employed in the celebration of divine service, according to the rites and ceremonies of the united church of England and Ireland, . . . and maintained by any voluntary subscription or rate, levied among or upon his majesty's subjects resorting to or residing at such foreign port or place, or by any rate or duty levied under the authority of any of the acts hereinafter repealed, it shall and may be lawful for any consul-general or consul, in obedience to any order for that purpose issued by his Majesty through one of his principal secretaries of state, to advance and pay from time to time, for and towards the maintenance and support of any such chaplain as aforesaid, or for and towards defraying the expenses incident to the due celebration of divine service in any such churches and chapels, or for and towards the maintaining any such burial grounds as aforesaid, or for and towards the interment of any of his Majesty's subjects in any such burial grounds, any sum or sums of money, not exceeding in any one year the amount of the sum or sums of money, which during that year may have been raised at such port or place for the said several purposes or any of them, by any such voluntary subscription or rate as aforesaid; and every such consul-general or consul shall, once in each year, transmit to one of his Majesty's principal secretaries of state an account, made up to the thirty-first day of December in the year next preceding, of all the sums of money actually raised at any such port or place as aforesaid, for the several purposes aforesaid, or any of them, by any such voluntary subscription or rate as aforesaid, and of all sums of money by him actually paid and expended for such purposes, or any of them, in obedience to any such orders as aforesaid, and which accounts shall by such principal secretary of state be transmitted to the lord high treasurer, or the commissioners of his Majesty's Treasury of the united kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, for the time being, who shall give to any such consul-general or consul as aforesaid credit for all sums of money not exceeding the amount aforesaid, by them disbursed and expended in pursuance of any such order as aforesaid, for the purposes before mentioned, or any of them."

Sect. 11. "In case any of his majesty's subjects shall by voluntary subscriptions among themselves raise and contribute such a sum of money as shall be requisite for defraying one-half part of the expense of erecting, purchasing or hiring any church or chapel or building, to be appropriated for the celebration of divine service according to the rites and ceremonies of the united church of England and Ireland, . . . or for defraying one-half part of the expense of erecting, purchasing or hiring any building to be used as a hospital for the reception of his Majesty's subjects, or for defraying one-half of the expense of purchasing or hiring any ground to be used as a place of interment for his majesty's subjects at any foreign port or place wherein any consul-general or consul appointed by his Majesty shall be resident, then and in any such case it shall and may be lawful for such consul-general or consul, in obedience to any order to be for that purpose issued by his Majesty through one of his principal secretaries of state, to advance and pay, for and towards the purposes aforesaid, or any of them, any sum or sums of money not exceeding in the whole in any one year the amount of the money raised in that year by any such voluntary contribution as aforesaid; and every such consul-general or consul as aforesaid shall in like manner once in every year transmit to one of his Majesty's principal secretaries of state an account, made up to the thirty-first day of December in the year next preceding, of all the sums of money actually raised at any such port or place as aforesaid, for the several purposes aforesaid, or any of them, by any such voluntary subscription as aforesaid, and of all sums of money by him actually paid and expended for such purposes or any of them, in obedience to any such orders as aforesaid, and which accounts shall by such principal secretary of state be transmitted to the lord high treasurer, or to the lords commissioners of his Majesty's Treasury, for the time being, who

Sect. 12. "... no such order shall be issued as aforesaid through any of his Majesty's principal secretaries of state, authorizing the expenditure of money for the erection, purchase or hiring of any such new church or chapel or hospital as aforesaid, or for the purchase or hiring of any such new burial ground as aforesaid, unless and until such consul-general or consul shall first have transmitted to his Majesty, through one of his Majesty's principal secretaries of state, the plan of such intended church or chapel, hospital or burial ground, with an estimate, upon the oath of some one or more competent person or persons, stating the probable expense of and incident to the erection, purchase or hiring of any such church, chapel, hospital or burying ground as aforesaid, and unless and until his Majesty shall have signified, through one of his said principal secretaries of state, his approbation of the said plan and estimate: Provided also, that no money shall actually be disbursed by any such consul-general or consul as aforesaid, for any of the purposes aforesaid, unless and until the money to be raised by any such voluntary subscription as aforesaid be actually paid up and invested in some public or other sufficient security, in the joint names of such consul-general or consuls and two trustees appointed for that purpose by the persons subscribing the same, or unless and until two or more of such subscribers shall enter into good and sufficient security to his Majesty, by bond or otherwise, that the amount of such subscriptions shall actually be paid for the purposes aforesaid, by a certain day to be specified in every such bond or security, and which bond or security shall be preserved in the office of such consul-general or consul, and shall by him be cancelled and delivered back to the parties entering into the same, their heirs, executors or administrators, when and so soon as the condition thereof shall be fully performed and satisfied."

subscription or rates collected by or imposed upon his Majesty's subjects, or some person or persons for that purpose duly authorized by any writing under the hand and seal of any such consul-general or consul, shall, once at the least in every year, and more frequently if occasion shall require, by public advertisement, or in such other manner as may be best adapted for insuring publicity, convene and summon a meeting of all his Majesty's subjects residing at such foreign port or place as aforesaid, to be holden at the public office of such consul-general or consul, at some time, not more than fourteen days nor less than seven days next after the publication of any such summons; and it shall and may be lawful for all his Majesty's subjects residing or being at any such foreign port or place as aforesaid, at the time of any such meeting, and who shall have subscribed any sum or sums of money not less than twenty pounds in the whole, nor less than three pounds by the year, for or towards the purposes before mentioned, or any of them, and have paid up the amount of such their subscriptions, to be present and vote at any such meetings; and such consuls-general or consuls shall preside at all such meetings; and in the event of the absence of any such consuls-general or consuls, the subscribers present at any such meeting shall, before proceeding to the despatch of business, nominate one of their number to preside at such meeting; and all questions proposed by the consul-general, consul or person so nominated as aforesaid to preside in his absence, to any such meeting, shall be decided by the votes of the majority in number of the persons attending and being present thereat: and in the event of the number of such votes being equally divided, the consul-general, consul or person so presiding in his absence, shall give a casting vote."

Sect. 15. "It shall and may be lawful for any such general meeting as aforesaid to make and establish, and from time to time, as occasion may require, to revoke, alter and render such general rules, orders and regulations, as may appear to them to be necessary for the due and proper use and management of such churches, chapels, hospitals and burial grounds as aforesaid, or for the proper control over and expenditure of the money raised by any such subscription as aforesaid, or otherwise in relation to the matters aforesaid, as may be necessary for carrying into execution the objects of this act, so far as relates to those matters, or any of them: Provided always, that no such rule, order or regulation as aforesaid shall be of any force or effect, unless or until the same shall be sanctioned and approved by the consul-general or consul for the time being, appointed by his Majesty to reside and actually resident at such foreign port or place; and provided also, that the same shall, by such consul-general or consul, be transmitted by the first convenient opportunity for his Majesty's approbation; and . . . it shall and may be lawful for his Majesty, by any order to be by him issued through one of his principal secretaries of state, either to confirm

CHAPTER VI.

COLONIAL AND FOREIGN ORDERS.

THE statute law respecting the effect of the ordination of ministers by Scotch bishops has been already inquired into (a).

In this chapter are considered—

First: The statutable restrictions on the exercise within these dominions of the power of consecration by English bishops and ordination by them of foreign subjects. Divisions of subject.

Secondly: The statutable restrictions as to officiating in the Church of England in this country on persons so consecrated and ordained, and on persons consecrated or ordained by bishops in our Colonies, in the United States, or elsewhere in the Western or in the Eastern Church (b).

1A. With regard to the consecration of bishops.

Two propositions of law were enunciated in the preamble of 26 Geo. 3, c. 84: Consecration of bishops for foreign parts.

1. That the consecration of a bishop required the licence and mandate of the crown.

2. That every person consecrated must take the oath of allegiance.

Whether in reality this statute recited propositions of constitutional law, or whether the law relating to bishops of the church established in England was not erroneously applied, on a new and sudden emergency, to bishops destined to exercise their functions beyond seas, it is perhaps not worth while now to inquire. The statute which originally contained the recital has been since repealed. But the English bishop is still supposed to be subject to civil penalties if he exercise his purely spiritual function of consecration without licence from the crown. It always was and is quite clear, without the recital in the recent statute (34 & 35 Vict. c. 53) (c), that no “ecclesiastical title of honour or dignity” taken from any place within this realm, and no “pre-eminence or coercive power” can be validly conferred “otherwise than under the authority and by the favour of her Majesty;” but these propositions do not concern the exercise of purely spiritual functions.

34 & 35 Vict.
c. 53.

In the year 1784, not long after the establishment of the independence of the North American Republics, the citizens of this newly-erected state, who had been, while it was subject to this country, members of the Church of England, were anxious to obtain ordination for their clergymen at the hands of the English bishops; but whereas (to borrow the words of the preamble of 24 Geo. 3, c. 35) "by the laws of this realm, every person who shall be admitted to holy orders is to take the oath of allegiance in manner thereby provided," an application was made to the legislature of Great Britain to remove this obstacle, which produced the statute of 24 Geo. 3, sess. 2, c. 35, wherein there is the following recital: "whereas there are divers persons, subjects or citizens of countries out of his majesty's dominions, inhabiting and residing within the said countries, who profess the public worship of Almighty God according to the liturgy of the Church of England, and are desirous that the word of God and the sacraments should continue to be administered unto them according to the said liturgy, by subjects or citizens of the said countries, ordained according to the form of ordination in the Church of England;" the statute then proceeds to enact as follows:—

"... it shall and may be lawful to and for the Bishop of London for the time being, or any other bishop by him to be appointed, to admit to the order of deacon or priest, for the purposes aforesaid, persons being subjects or citizens of countries out of his majesty's dominions, without requiring them to take the oath of allegiance" (b).

Sect. 3. "In the letters testimonial of such orders there shall be inserted the name of the person so ordained, with the addition of the country whereof he is a subject or citizen, and the further description of his not having taken the said oath of allegiance, being exempted from the obligation of so doing by virtue of this act."

Those subjects of the North American Republics who adhered to the doctrine and discipline of the Anglican Church were further desirous of procuring the due consecration of their bishops, and for some time resorted to the Scotch bishops for this purpose. But in 1786 they had again recourse to the parliament of Great Britain, and obtained the 26 Geo. 3, c. 84 (c), which has been since superseded, and is now repealed.

The following account is taken from "A Statement of Proceedings relating to the Establishment of a Bishopric of the United Church of England and Ireland in Jerusalem; published by authority":—

In the year 1841, the appointment of a bishop for Jerusalem was proposed by his majesty the King of Prussia, by a special mission to the Queen of England, and a particular communication to the Archbishop of Canterbury. His majesty had in view the conversion of the Jews, and also the spiritual care of such of his own subjects in Palestine, who might wish to join themselves to the church so formed in Jerusalem. His majesty undertook to give fifteen thousand pounds towards that object, the annual interest of which, amounting to six hundred pounds, is to be paid yearly in advance, till the capital sum (together with that which is to be raised by subscription for the purpose of completing the bishop's annual income of twelve hundred pounds) can be advantageously invested in land situate in Palestine (d).

Funds for bishopric.

The bishop of the United Church of England and Ireland at Jerusalem is to be nominated alternately by the Crowns of England and Prussia, the Archbishop having the absolute right of veto with respect to those nominated by the Prussian Crown.

Nomination,
title and authority of bishop at Jerusalem.

The bishop will be subject to the Archbishop of Canterbury as his metropolitan, until the local circumstances of his bishopric shall be such as to make it expedient, in the opinion of the bishops of that United Church, to establish some other relation.

His spiritual jurisdiction will extend over the English clergy and congregations, and over those who may join his church and place themselves under his episcopal authority in Palestine, and for the present in the rest of Syria, in Chaldea, Egypt, and Abyssinia; such jurisdiction being exercised, as nearly as may be, according to the laws, canons, and customs of the Church of England; the bishop having power to frame, with the consent of the metropolitan, particular rules and orders for the peculiar wants of his people.

A college was to be established at Jerusalem, under the bishop, whose chaplain will be its first principal. Its primary object will be the education of Jewish converts; but the bishop will be authorized to receive into it Druses and other Gentile converts; and if the funds of the college should be sufficient, Oriental Christians may be admitted; but clerical members of the orthodox Greek Church will be received into the college, only with the express consent of their spiritual superiors, and for a subsidiary purpose. The religious instruction given in the college will be in strict conformity with the doctrines of the United Church of England and Ireland, and under the superintendence and direction of the bishop.

Jerusalem.

Congregations, consisting of Protestants of the German tongue, residing within the limits of the bishop's jurisdiction, and willing to submit to it, will be under the care of German clergymen ordained by him for that purpose, who will officiate in the German language, according to the forms of their national liturgy, compiled from the ancient liturgies, agreeing in all points of doctrine with the liturgy of the English Church, and sanctioned by the bishop with consent of the metropolitan, for the special use of those congregations; such liturgy to be used

Germans intended for the charge of such congregations are to be ordained according to the ritual of the English Church, and to sign the articles of that church: and in order that they may not be disqualified by the laws of Germany from officiating to German congregations, they are, before ordination, to exhibit to the bishop a certificate of their having subscribed, before some competent authority, the Confession of Augsburg (d).

5 Vict. c. 6.

The statute passed to forward the object of this statement is 5 Vict. c. 6. It recited part of the provisions of 26 Geo. 3, c. 84, and enacted as follows:—

The reader should further consult, on the subject of the bishopric at Jerusalem, a pamphlet by Dr. Hook, Rector of Leeds; and a very learned and able letter by Mr. James Hope Scott, then Chancellor of Salisbury. The Archbishop of Canterbury wrote a letter commendatory, which was translated into Greek, to the Bishops of the Ancient and Apostolic Churches in Syria; and the King of Prussia published a statement to his subjects in Germany. The disastrous effects upon the Church of England which the establishment of this bishopric produced have been very plainly brought out in the recent histories of the Tractarian revival.

1B. With regard to ordination (f).

In July, 1819, was passed 59 Geo. 3, c. 60. It recites that "it is expedient that the archbishops and bishops of this realm should from time to time admit into holy orders persons specially destined for the cure of souls in his Majesty's foreign possessions, although such persons may not be provided with the title required by the canon of the Church of England, of such as are to be made ministers:" And that "it will greatly tend to the advancement of religion within the same, that due provision shall be regularly made for a supply of persons properly qualified to serve as parsons, vicars, curates, or chaplains;" and enacts as follows:—

59 Geo. 3, c. 60.

Ordination of foreign subjects.

Sect. 1. ". . . it shall be lawful for the archbishop of Canterbury, the archbishop of York, or the bishop of London, for the time being, or any bishop specially authorized and empowered by any or either of them, to admit into the holy orders of deacon or priest any person whom he shall upon examination deem duly qualified specially for the purpose of taking upon himself the cure of souls, or officiating in any spiritual capacity in his majesty's colonies or foreign possessions and residing therein, and that a declaration of such purpose and a written engagement to perform the same under the hand of such person, being deposited in the hands of such archbishop or bishop, shall be held to be a sufficient title with a view to such ordination; and . . . in every such case it shall be distinctly stated in the letters of ordination of every person so admitted to holy orders, that he has been ordained for the cure of souls in his Majesty's foreign possessions" (g).

Archbishop of Canterbury or York, or Bishop of London, or any bishop specially authorized by any of them, may ordain specially for the colonies.

The fact to be stated in the letters of ordination.

In July, 1840, was passed 3 & 4 Vict. c. 33, which came under the censure of Sir Robert Phillimore in the first edition of this work, and probably contributed largely to his describing the legislation on this subject as illiberal and due to jealousy. This act, however, having been first repealed as far

(f) As to foreign ordination gene-as the church in Scotland was concerned, has now been wholly repealed by 37 & 38 Vict. c. 77 (g).

15 & 16 Vict.
c. 52.

In 1852, was passed 15 & 16 Vict. c. 52, entitled "An Act to enable Colonial and other Bishops to perform certain Episcopal Functions, under Commission from Bishops of England and Ireland." It recites 53 Geo. 3, c. 155 (h), and 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 85 (i), and enacts as follows:—

East Indian bishops, under commission from bishops in England and Ireland, to perform all episcopal functions.

Sect. 1. "Notwithstanding anything in the said acts or in any letters patent as aforesaid contained, it shall be lawful for any bishop who by virtue of such royal letters patent under the Great Seal of the said United Kingdom shall exercise or have exercised in the British territories aforesaid the office of bishop of Calcutta, or Madras, or Bombay respectively, upon the request and by the commission in writing under the hand and seal of the bishop of any diocese in England or Ireland, and with the consent and licence in writing of the archbishop of the province within which such diocese shall be situated, to ordain any persons, provided such persons shall be presented to him under the direction and authority of the bishop of such diocese, and to perform all other functions peculiar and appropriate to the order of bishops within the limits of such diocese."

The statute proceeded to repeal certain provisions in 59 Geo. 3, c. 60, and 3 & 4 Vict. c. 33, so far as they relate to persons admitted into holy orders specially for the colonies, or ordained by colonial bishops, as follows:—" . . . nothing in the said recited acts contained shall extend or be held to extend to any person who, in pursuance of such request and commission as aforesaid from the bishop of any diocese in England or Ireland, shall have been or may hereafter be ordained a deacon or priest within the limits of such diocese by any bishop who by virtue of her Majesty's royal letters patent (k) under the great seal of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, shall exercise or have exercised the office of bishop within the British territories in India, or in any of her Majesty's colonies or foreign possessions, and . . . all admissions, institutions, and inductions to benefices in the United Church of England and Ireland, and all appointments to act as curates and chaplains therein, of persons so admitted into holy orders by any such bishop, shall, notwithstanding anything in the said recited acts contained, be to all intents and purposes good and valid in law."

" . . . all and every of such bishops, who, in accordance with the provisions of this act, shall officiate in behalf of the bishop of any diocese in England or Ireland, in conferring holy orders, shall be subject to the several provisions and limitations established by the laws of this realm, or canons ecclesiastical, as

Sect. 4. "... all letters of orders of persons ordained by any such bishop, in accordance with the provisions of this act, shall be issued in the name and be subscribed with the signature of such bishop, as commissary of the bishop of the diocese at whose request and by whose commission he shall officiate in conferring such orders, and shall be sealed with the seal of the bishop of such diocese; and all such acts of ordination by any such bishop shall be recorded and registered in like manner as if they had been performed by the bishop of such diocese."

Sect. 5. "... nothing in this act contained shall be construed to authorize any such bishop to use or exercise any jurisdiction whatsoever within the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland."

This statute was followed in 1853, by 16 & 17 Vict. c. 49. That statute recites 15 & 16 Vict. c. 52, and enacts as follows: "Notwithstanding anything in the said recited acts (l) or either of them contained to the contrary, all persons who have been or hereafter shall be ordained deacon or priest by any of the said bishops in or for the diocese of the bishop of any other of her Majesty's foreign or colonial possessions, upon his request in writing, shall be entitled to all the same rights, privileges, and advantages, as if he had been ordained by such bishop within the limits of a diocese over which he was at the time himself actually exercising jurisdiction, and residing therein."

Secondly: As to the status of persons in colonial and foreign orders. The law has since the first edition of this work been consolidated and rendered less illiberal (m) by the Colonial Clergy Act, 1874 (37 & 38 Vict. c. 77), which enacts as follows:—

Sect. 2. "The enactments enumerated in Schedule A. annexed to this act (n) are repealed, but not so as to render invalid anything lawfully done in conformity with any of them."

Sect. 3. "Except as herein-after mentioned, no person who has been or shall be ordained priest or deacon, as the case may be, by any bishop other than a bishop of a diocese in one of the churches aforesaid (o) shall, unless he shall hold or have previously held preferment or a curacy in England, officiate as such priest or deacon in any church or chapel in England, without written permission from the archbishop of the province in which he proposes to officiate, and without also making and subscribing so much of the declaration contained in the Clerical Subscription Act, 1865 (p), as follows; (that is to say,)

Sect. 14. "In this act the word 'bishop' shall, when not inconsistent with the context, include archbishop; the words 'bishop' and 'archbishop,' in the matters of 'permission' and 'consent,' and of 'consent and licence,' shall include the lawful commissary of a bishop or an archbishop; the word 'England' shall include the Isle of Man and the Channel Islands; and the term 'church or chapel' shall mean church or chapel subject to the ecclesiastical law of the Church of England."

Greek church.

The relations of the church of England with the orthodox Greek Church, formerly injured by the rash conduct of the non-jurors (o), have of late years been much strengthened (p).

It has been seen, that when the bishopric of Jerusalem was founded it was carefully expressed by the authorities of the church that there was no intention of encroaching upon the rights, or injuring the position of the Greek church (q). A letter from the Archbishop of Canterbury was sent to the patriarch explanatory of the limited powers conferred on the English bishop.

Letter commendatory of Bishop of Gibraltar.

In 1868, the Archbishop of Canterbury furnished the Bishop of Gibraltar with a letter commendatory or systatical, written in Greek, to the Greek patriarch, who received it and the bishop with courtesy. The letter is rightly translated as follows:—

"In the name of the Father, and the Son, and the Holy Ghost. Amen.

"To the most holy and blessed patriarch of Constantinople, new Rome, and to the most holy metropolitans, archbishops and bishops of the Orthodox Eastern Church, and to the holy synod of Greece, Charles Thomas, by divine providence Archbishop of Canterbury, primate of all England and metropolitan, sendeth greeting in the Lord:

"We make known unto you, brethren beloved in Christ, by these letters, that we have elected, confirmed and consecrated as bishop of the holy catholic and apostolic church, planted in England, Charles Amyand Harris, our honoured and well-beloved brother, approved in orthodoxy of faith and gravity of life; whom also we have sent to the East, that he being established in the episcopal seat of the ancient Calpe, now Gibraltar,

"Given in our palace at Lambeth, and sealed with an archiepiscopal seal, the 21st day of the month of July, in the year of our redemption 1868."

In 1870, the Archbishop of Syra and Tenos, who came to England for the purpose of consecrating a Greek church, was very cordially received by the authorities of the English church, and attended the consecration of some English bishops (^(r)). Archbishop of Syra and Tenos.

Some difficulties, however, still prevent a perfect union of the English with the Greek or Eastern church.

The position of the church of Rome, on the other hand, towards the English Church was, when the first edition of this work was written, extremely hostile. Sir Robert Phillimore wrote that the revived extravagances of the Ultramontanist and Jesuit party, their present influence over the councils of the papacy, and the novel doctrines which they have promulgated, had naturally widened the distance which separates the Roman from the Greek and Anglican churches (^(s)); and that the curia of Rome in fact still continued the disunion of Christendom which it first created. In the year 1895, however, there are hopes of a better state of things. Church of Rome.

In connection with this subject should be mentioned the statute 34 & 35 Vict. c. 53, passed in 1871, and entitled "An Act to repeal an Act for preventing the Assumption of certain Ecclesiastical Titles in respect of Places in the United Kingdom." 34 & 35 Vict. c. 53.

The preamble, enunciating as it does a principle of constitutional law, and at the same time tempering the practical application of it by a wise and liberal policy, is very important. It recites as follows: "Whereas by an act passed in the session of parliament held in the fourteenth and fifteenth year of the reign of her Majesty, chapter sixty, intituled 'An Act to prevent the Assumption of certain Ecclesiastical Titles in respect of Places in the United Kingdom,' certain enactments were made prohibiting under penalties the assumption of the title of archbishop or bishop of a pretended province or diocese, or archbishop or bishop of a city, place, or territory, or dean of any pretended deanery in England or Ireland, not being the see, province, or diocese of an archbishop or bishop or deanery of any dean recognized by law :

“ And whereas no ecclesiastical title of honour or dignity derived from any see, province, diocese, or deanery recognized by law, or from any city, town, place, or territory within this realm, can be validly created, nor can any such see, province, diocese, or deanery be validly created, nor can any pre-eminence or coercive power be conferred otherwise than under the authority and by the favour of Her Majesty, her heirs and successors, and according to the laws of this realm ; but it is not expedient to impose penalties upon those ministers of religion who may, as among the members of the several religious bodies to which they respectively belong, be designated by distinctions regarded as titles of office, although such designation may be connected with the name of some town or place within the realm.”

After this preamble, the statute proceeds to enact that,

14 & 15 Vict.
c. 60,
repealed.

Sect. 1. “ The said act of the session of parliament held in the fourteenth and fifteenth years of the reign of her Majesty, chapter sixty, shall be and the same is hereby repealed : Provided that such repeal shall not nor shall anything in this act contained be deemed in any way to authorize or sanction the conferring or attempting to confer any rank, title, or precedence, authority, or jurisdiction on or over any subject of this realm by any person or persons in or out of this realm, other than the Sovereign thereof.”

Admission of converts.

Among the documents prepared by convocation, but never formally promulgated, was a form for admitting converts from the Roman church or from “ the separation ” to the English church. It is a document of weight and interest. It appears to have been drawn up by Archbishop Wake in 1714 (r). It is to be found at length in Wilkins’ Concilia (s).

The Irish Prayer Book (referred to at p. 467, note (y), supra), has “ a form for receiving lapsed protestants or reconciling converted papists to our church ” (t).

nounce their errors.”

(t) A form of penance and reconciliation of a renegado or apostate from the Christian church to “ Turcism ” (Reg. Laud. fol. 240 a) will be found in Wilkins, Concilia, vol. iv. at pp. 522—524.
